5
I would sooner see your nose cheese, and my selfe the first bite. A disdainful rejection of an unworthy proposal.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 224. (1721)
I'll see your nose cheese first, and the dogs eating it.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
He proposes that they shall have the copyright for ever. I will see their noses cheese first.

WALTER SCOTT, Letters, 29 April, 1816.

6
His nose on the sodaine bled, which made him coniecture it was some friend of his.

THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde (Hunt Cl.), p. 38
(1590)

Then it was not for nothing that my nose fell a-bleeding on Black-Monday last.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 5, 24.
(1597)

If a man's nose bleeds one drop at the left nostril
it is a sign of good luck, and vice versa.

SIR JOHN MELTON, Astrologaster. (1620)

7
An epicurean morsel—a parson's nose.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Hyperion. Ch. 7. (1839)

Parson's nose, the hind part of a goose—a savoury mouthful. Sometimes called the Pope's nose.

J. C. HOTTEN, Slang Dictionary: Parson. (1873) The piece that went over the fence last.

1 I am sure their noses can abide no iest.

MARTIN MARPRELATE, Epistle to the Terrible Priests of the Confection House, p.9.(1588) My nose loues no jesting.

THOMAS LODGE, Euphues Shadow, sig.H3. (1592) We are . . . disposed to be pleasant with thee a little; but I perceive, friar, thy nose will abide no jest.

GEORGE PEELE, The Famous Chronicle of King Edward the First, p. 382. (1593)

His nose will abide no jests.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6/1. (1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 77. (1678)

2 It is not given to everyone to have a nose, i. e., skill in investigating matters. (Non cui-cumque datum est habere nasum.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, ep. 41, l. 18. (A. D. 85) Now Bill . . . did not like to turn nose.

R. H. BARHAM, Patty Morgan. (a. 1845) To turn informer.

3 Have our sight shortened to the length of our nose. (Avons la vue raccourcie à la longueur de nostre nez.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25. (1580) He sees no farther than his nose. (Celui-ci ne voyoit pas plus loin que son nez.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Renard et le Bouc. Bk. iii, fab. 5. (1668)

Onward still he goes, Yet ne'er looks forward further than his nose.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 224. (1734) Seeing clearly to the length of its own nose.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. iii, bk. ii, ch. 1. (1837)

Take my advice and seek no further than the end of your nose.

BERNARD SHAW, The Adventures of the Black Girl in Her Search for God. (1933)

4 Shee was a shrewish snappish bawd, that wold bite off a man's nose with an answer.

THOMAS NASHE, Lenten Stuffe, p. 47. (1599) I . . . asked him if he was at leisure for his Chocolate, . . . but he snap'd my nose off.

SUSANNA CENTLIVRE, The Busie Bodie. Act i, sc. 1. (1709)

5 Give me a man with a good allowance of nose.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. Sayings. (c. 1810) See Notes on Noses, p. 43.

6 You are but a meane obseruer of the course of things passing dayly under your nose.

JOHN NORDEN, The Surveyors Dialogue, i, 7. (1607)

They continue to sin under my very nose.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act iii, sc. 6. (1775)

7 He hath a good nose to be a poor man's sow.

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoyse, p. 580(1530)

He has a good nose to make a poor man's sow.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 239. (1639) Cited by Ray and Swift.

8 If Cleopatra's nose had been shorter, the whole face of the earth would have been changed. (Si le nez de Cléopâtre eût été plus court, toute la face de la terre aurait changé.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. 9, No. 46. (c. 1660)

Ah, who could have foretold that that little retroussé nose would change the laws of an empire? (Ah, qui jamais auroit pu dire Que ce petit nez retroussé Changerait les lois d'un empire?)

CHARLES SIMON FAVART, Les Trois Sultanes. (c. 1760) Referring to Soleiman's favorite Sultana, Roxelane. The French still refer to a retroussé nose as a nose à la Roxelane.

9 She sees better with her nose than with her eyes. (Naso pol iam haec quidem plus videt quam oculis.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 1259. (c. 200 B. C.)

10 To thrust his nose into every corner. (Mettre le nez par tout.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Nez. (1611)

To have his nose in everything.

HENRY HEXHAM, Dutch Dictionary: Besnoffen. (1648)

To thrust one's Nose into the affairs of others, to be meddling with other people's matters.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary: Nose. (1755) In those days nobody . . . thrust his nose into other people's affairs.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Knickerbocker's History of New York. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1809)

He had finished what he called his nose-y-parker-ing.

NGATO MARSH, A Man Lay Dead, p. 103.(1942) An inveterate "nosey Parker."

R. A. FREEMAN, The Unconscious Witness, p. 146. (1942)

A Parker so notoriously nose-y.

P. G. WODEHOUSE, Money in the Bank, p. 204. (1942)

Noses are used for other things than breathing, but breathing's much healthier.

D. B. OLSEN, Cat's Claw, p. 138. (1943)

11 It is stupid to seek vengeance on another by punishing oneself. (Stultum est ulcisci velle alium poena sua.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 662. (c. 43 B. C.)

It is stupid to seek vengeance on a neighbor by setting one's house on fire. (Stultum est vicinum velle ulcisci incendio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 670.

Why burn thine own corn in thy passion? (Quid messes uris acerba tuas?)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. ii, l. 98. (19 B. C.) Let me hack at my own vines. (Ut vineta egomet caedam mea.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. i, l. 220. (c. 15 B. C.) Proverbial for doing oneself an injury.

I have stuck the axe into my own leg. (Ipse mihi asciam in crus impegi.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 74. (c. A. D. 60)
Those women in my mynde pull out one of their owne eyes, in order to pull two from other women.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 33. (1574) Pettie, tr. BAILEY, Dictionary: Solace (1730), has, "He puts out one of his own eyes, to put out both of his adversary's."

To befool the panier, and then put it on your head. (Chier dans le panier, pour aprez le mettre sur sa teste.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595) Montaigne is speaking of men who are intimate with women before they marry them.

Henry IV understood well that to destroy Paris would be, as they say, to cut off his nose to spite his face. (Henri IV conçut fort bien que détruire Paris, c'étoit, comme on dit, se couper le nez pour faire dépit à son visage.)

TALLEMANT DES RÉAUX, Historiettes, i, 17. (c. 1657) Quoting an old French proverb.

He cut off his nose to be revenged of his face. Said of one who, to be revenged of his neighbor, has materially injured himself.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue. (1796)

At first I thought of going home, taking the hounds away too . . . then I thought that would be only like cutting off my nose to spite my face.

R. S. SURTEES, Mr. Sponge's Sporting Tour. Ch. 27. (1853)

Don't thrust your fingers through your own paper lantern. (Chih 'hu têng lung ts'u ch üan pu tê.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2261. (1875)

He was in that humour when a man—in the words of the old adage—will cut off his nose to spite his face.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Master of Ballantrae. Ch. 10. (1889)

Do not burn down your house even to annoy your chief wife's mother.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 382. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

1 Does your nose swell (or eek, i. e. itch) at that?

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 77. (1678)
My nose itch'd, and I knew I should drink wine or kiss a fool.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

My wife has got a son, which will make my brother's nose swell.

JAMES HOWELL, State Trials, xvii, 1187. (1743)

2 To make a bridge of one's nose, i. e. to intercept one's trencher, cup, or the like; or to offer or pretend to do kindnesses to one, and then pass him by, and do it to another; to lay hold of and serve himself of that which was intended for another.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 180. (1678)
You make a Bridge of his Nose, when you pass your next Neighbour in Drinking, or one is preffer'd over another's head.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew. Bridge. (a. 1700)

Pray, my lord, don't make a bridge of my nose. SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

3 It could bee no other then his owne manne. that had thrust his nose so farre out of ioynte.

BARNABY RICH, His Farewell to Militarie Profession, sig. K4. (1581) To put one's nose out of joint is to displace or supplant one.

Fearing now lest this wench . . . should put your nose out of joyn't

RICHARD BERNARD, tr., The Eunuch. Act i, sc 2. (1598)

The King is pleased enough with her: which, I fear, will put Madam Castlemaine's nose out of joyn't.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 31 May, 1662. The phrase is repeated 22 July, 1663.

Your lovely eyes Out of joint have put your nose.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, iii, 247. (1848)
The new bloke has put your nose out of joint.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act ii. (1905)
Repeated in Heartbreak House. Act ii.

Every baby puts some one's nose out of joint.

E. V. LUCAS, London Lavender. Ch. 36. (1912)

4 Flush on the boko napped your footman's left.

SHAW, Admirable Bashville. Act ii. (1926)
I'm likely to . . . let loose with a punch in the snoot.

SINCLAIR LEWIS, Main Street, p. 320. (1920)

5 A man is but a man though he have a nose on his head.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. i, bk iii, ch. 11. (1612)

A man's a man, if he has but a nose on his face. SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

6 His nose is lyke a shoynge horne.

JOHN STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria, sig. B5. (1510)

Full well wot you, that Corinth shoeing horns May not be made, like every noddys nose.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, A Griefe of Joye, i, 518 (1576)

Every one cannot have a nose like a shooring-horn.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)

Every man's nose will not make a shoeing horn.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 125. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1434. (1732)

Every man's nose will not be a shoeing horn. Spoken to them who have found the man with whom they were dealing, more sagacious and cunning than they expected.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 91. (1721)

7 Ryght forthe on thy nose. Recta via incede

JOHN STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria, sig. C2. (1510)

[He] foloweth his nose alwaies straight forward.

ROBERT GREENE, Art of Conny Catching. (1591) Works (Grosart), x, 35.

All that follow their noses are led by their eyes, but blind men.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 4, 68. (1605)

Give him leave to follow his nose, madam.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Lady of Pleasure. Act ii, sc. 2. (1637)

Follow thy nose [go straight on], and thou wilt be there presently.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Royall King and the Loyall Subject. Act i. (1637)

There lies your way, follow your nose.

CHARLES COTTON, Scarronides, p. 60. (1664)

The main Maxim of his [Epicurus's] Philosophy was to trust to his Senses, and follow his Nose.

BENTLEY, Boyle Lectures. Lect. ii. (1692)

Adams asked if he could direct him to an ale-house. The fellow . . . bade him follow his nose and be d—n'd.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. ii, ch. 2. (1742)

To pay through his nose just for following it.

OWEN MEREDITH (LORD LYTTON), Lucile, ii, i, sec. 1, l. 40. (1860)

PAYING THROUGH THE NOSE, see under PAYMENT.

<sup>1</sup> If the Scripture be contrary, then make it a nose of wax and wrest it this way and that till it agree.

WILLIAM TINDALE, Exposition of Matthew, vi, 23. (1532) A nose of wax means a person or thing easily moulded or influenced.

The text to turn and glose, like a welshe manes hose, or lyke a waxen nose.

UNKNOWN. In Ballads in MSS, i, 206. (1533)

The Scriptures are darke, . . . because they may bee wrested every way, like a nose of waxe, or like a leaden Rule.

THOMAS COOPER, An Admonition to the People of England (Arber), p. 58. (1589)

Where-through iustice is made a nose of wax warmed.

LODGE, A Margarite of America, p. 40. (1596)

To make a nose of wax of; to wrest, wrie, manage, turne at pleasure.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Tordre. (1611)

A nose of wax, To be turned every way.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Unnatural Combat. Act v, sc. 2. (1639)

Oral Tradition, that nose of wax, which you may turn and set, which way you list.

ANTHONY HORNECK, The Crucified Jesus. Ch. 9. (1686)

To treat plain words and expressions as a nose of wax to bend one way or other to gratify parties.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 366. (1740)

He turned his test into a nose-of-wax, in order to make it fit my face.

HUNTINGTON, Bank of Faith, p. 139. (1801)

I let . . . the constable draw the warrants, and manage the business his ain gate, as if I had been a nose of wax.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 5. (1815)

Nose of wax, a proverbial phrase for anything very pliable.

J. O. HALLIWELL, A Dictionary of Archaic Words: Nose. (1847)

<sup>2</sup> Let women holde vppe their noses no more: for all their presumption is sufficiently beaten down.

LAURENCE TOMSON, tr., Calvin's Sermons on the Epistles to Timothie and Titus, 228/1. (1579) To hold up the nose: to be proud or haughty.

<sup>3</sup> The prouerbe is true in you, I suppose,—
He cannot tell where to turne his nose.

UNKNOWN, A Balade of a Preist. (c. 1570) See HUTH, Ancient Ballads and Broad-sides, p. 211.

<sup>4</sup> Your king . . . reft him from hir in spyte of his nois.

UNKNOWN. Satirical Poems of the Time of the Reformation, x, 183. (1570) In spite of one's nose: in spite of one's opposition or objection.

In spite of his nose, he must confess al this speach to be figuratiue.

WILLIAM FULKE, Heskins Parleament Re-pealed, p. 286. (1579)

Our English usual expression, in spite of the nose of mine enemies.

HENRY HAMMOND, A Paraphrase upon the Books of the Psalms, cxxxviii, 7. (1659)

PEPPER IN THE NOSE, see under PEPPER.

NOTCH

<sup>5</sup> Traveling takes my young nobleman four notches lower in his self-conceit.

RICHARD LASSELS, The Voyage of Italy: Preface. (1670)

<sup>6</sup> We cut out doctrines, and from notch to notch,
We fit our holy Stuffle.

QUARLES, The Shepherds Oracles, viii. (1644)

<sup>7</sup> The old man was even with her; up to the last notch.

ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast. Act v, sc. 1. (1787)

This stranger's acted up, clean up, to the last notch.

ROBERT CARLTON (B. R. HALL), The New Purchase, i, 135. (1843)

You ain't up to your notch.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE, The Great Bank Robbery. Ch. 16. (1887)

NOTE

<sup>8</sup> Over a Bottle we'll compare notes.

SUSANNA CENTLIVRE, Busie Body. Act i. (1708)

They meet and compare Notes upon your Carriage.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 423. (1712)

<sup>9</sup> Sit up and take notice—a dispossess notice if there's no other kind.

O. HENRY, The Enchanted Profile. (1909)

[That] really made Judson sit up and take notice.

R. D. PAINE, Comrades of the Rolling Ocean, p. 104. (1921)

I suppose we've got to sit up and take notice.

E. R. PUNSHON, Conqueror Inn, p. 171. (1944)

<sup>10</sup> Sorrow hath changed its note.

HERBERT, The Temple: Joseph's Coat. (1633)

High time to change Note and Coat.

UNKNOWN, Observations on Curse ye Meroz, p. 7. (1680)

Now you'll change your note.

SHERIDAN, The Camp. Act i, sc. 1. (1778)

<sup>1</sup> There's not a note of mine that's worth the noting.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, ii, 3, 56. (1598)

When found, make a note of.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Bk. i, ch. 15. (1848) Adopted as the motto of Notes and Queries.

NOTHING

See also Something

<sup>2</sup> Nothing will come of nothing. (οὐδὲν ἐκ δένος γένοίτο.)

ALCAEUS, Fragments. Frag. 173. (c. 595 B.C.) See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 427. The Latin form is, "Ex nihilo nihil fit" (Out of nothing nothing is made). There is another form, "Non hoc de nihilo est" (This does not spring out of nothing).

Nothing comes out of nothing. (οὐδὲν γίγνεται ἐκ τοῦ μὴ ὄντος.)

EPICURUS, Maxim. (c. 300 B.C.) The fundamental principle of the Epicurean philosophy. Nothing can be created from nothing. (Nil posse creari de nilo.)

LUCRETIVUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 155. (c. 45 B.C.)

Things cannot severally return to nothing. (Haut igitur possunt ad nilum quacque reverti.)

LUCRETIVUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 237.

Nothing can be born of nothing, nothing can be resolved into nothing. (Gigni | de nihilo nihilum, in nihilum nil posse reverti.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 83. (c. A.D. 58) Persius is quoting Epicurus.

Nothing arises out of nothing. (μηδὲν ἐκ τοῦ μὴ ὄντος γιγνέσθαι.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Borrowing. Sec. 829C. (A.D. 97) Plutarch is saying that usurers make a laughing-stock of the scientists who say nothing can come from nothing, for with them interest arises out of that which has as yet no existence.

Nothing comes from nothing, any more than it disappears into nothingness. (οὐδὲν γὰρ ἐκ τοῦ μηδενὸς ἔρχεται, ὥσπερ μηδ' εἰς τὸ οὐκ ὄν ἀπέρχεται.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 4. (c. A.D. 174)

It is a true sentence that of nothing cometh nothing. (Nihil ex nihilo existere vera sententia est.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. v, ch. i, l. 25. (A.D. 524) Chaucer renders it. "For this sentence is verray and sooth, that 'nothing ne hath his beyng of naught.'"

Nothing can be made of nothing. (Rien de rien n'estre fait.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1545) Quoted as the opinion of all philosophers. The Germans say, "Aus nichts wird Nichts."

Nothing can be made of nothing. (Rien ne se fait de rien.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

Of nought is nothing made.

MARLOWE, Jew of Malta. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1592)

Of nothing growes nothing, but nothing.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works (Grosart), ii, C23. (1599)

Nothing will come of nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 1, 92. (1605)

Nothing can be made out of nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 146. (1605)

Out of nothing nothing is made.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World: Preface. (1614)

Nothing can come of nothing.

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, Discourses. No.6. (1774)

There is nothing falsar than that old proverb which . . . is in every one's mouth: Ex nihilo nihil fit. Thus translated by Shakespeare in Lear is 'Nothing can come of nothing.'

FIELDING, Essay on Nothing. Sec. 1. (c. 1750)

<sup>3</sup> Thou know'st the proverb: Nothing due for naught.

THOMAS BROWN, Works (1760), i, 131. (c. 1700) She must refuse all presents offered her; for now-a-days nothing is given for nothing. (Rien n'arrive pour rien.)

JOHN OZELL, tr., Molière, ii, 129. (1714) The French also say, "On n'a rien pour rien" (One gets nothing for nothing), and "La fortune vend ce qu'on croit qu'elle donne" (Fortune sells what we think she gives).

Nothing for nothing, or I'm under a mistake.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Castle Rackrent (Everyman), p. 61. (1800)

[He] recollected the old-established principle of himself and his clique, "Nothing for nothing, and very little for a halfpenny."

G. J. WHYTE-MELVILLE, The Interpreter. Ch. 25. (1858)

I might have knowed a lawyer wouldn't give nothing for nothing.

MRS. HENRY WOOD, Trevelyn Hold. Ch.22. (1864)

I forgot that nothing is to be had for nothing.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Christowell. Ch. 9. (1882)

The Scots say, "Naething is got without pains, except dirt and lang nails."

Is not "nothing for nothing" an approved maxim to-day?

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, Exposition of Amos, p. 172. (1904)

<sup>4</sup> To his gay nothings, nothing was replied.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xv, st. 78. (1824)

Airy nothings: to whisper airy nothings. Trivial or superficial remarks, empty compliments.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Airy. (1941)

<sup>5</sup> He who has nothing in this world is nothing. (Chi non ha niente nel mondo non è niente.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 200. (1856) An Italian proverb. The Italians also say, "Chi non ha, non è," for which the French is, "Qui n'a rien, n'est rien."

<sup>1</sup> Everything is emptiness, and emptiness is everything.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 358 (1938)
A Chinese proverb, used in exhorting men not to worry.

<sup>2</sup> Perhaps this is much ado about nothing. (Haec fortasse κενόσπουδα sunt.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ix, epis. 1 (49 B.C.)
Much Ado about Nothing.

SHAKESPEARE. Title of play. (1598)

<sup>3</sup> Much matter of a wooden platter.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, 133. (1639) Also RAY, 185; FULLER, No. 6159. Ray adds, "δεινὰ περὶ φακῆς" [Terrible talk about a lentil.] Mira de lente, A great stir about a thing of nothing. For DISPUTE ABOUT AN ASS'S SHADOW, see under ASS.

Make much of nought.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 314. (1639)
You love to make much of naught (your self).

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 347. (1678)
Come, come, Miss, make much of nought; good folks are scarce.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>4</sup> I hear nothings, I speak nothings, I take interest in nothing, and from nothing to nothing I travel gently down the dull way which leads to becoming nothing.

MADAME DU DEFFAND, Letter. (c. 1750) As quoted by GAMALIEL BRADFORD, Portraits of Women, p. 139.

A life of nothings, nothing worth,
From that first nothing ere his birth
To that last nothing under earth.

TENNYSON, The Two Voices, l. 331. (1842)

Nothing to do but work,
Nothing to eat but food,
Nothing to wear but clothes

To keep one from going nude.

BEN KING, The Pessimist. (1894)

<sup>5</sup> Blessed be nothing.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Circles. (1841) Emerson calls this a proverb which "expresses the transcendentalism of common life."

<sup>6</sup> It's nothing to Bacchus. (οὐδὲν πρὸς Βάκχου.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. iv, No. 57. (1523) The Latin is, "Nihil ad Bacchum." Tertullian has, "Nihil enim ad Andromachen" (It's nothing to Andromache).

The flowers that bloom in the spring, tra, la,
Have nothing to do with the case.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii. (1885)

<sup>7</sup> A worthless vessel does not get broken. (Malum vas non frangitur.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, ii, 99. (1523)

They that have nothing need fear to lose nothing.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 41. (1639)
Naught is never in danger.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 126. (1639)
Cited by Dykes, Fuller, Swift and others.

He that has Nothing is frightened at Nothing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2150. (1732)

The French say, "Qui n'a ne peut" (He that has naught can do naught).

To him who has nothing, nothing is frightening. (A quien no tiene nada, nada le espanta.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 264.

He who has little, fears little. (Quien poco tiene, poco teme.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 282. A Spanish proverb. Another is, "El que no tiene, el rey lo hace libre" (He who has nothing, the king leaves in peace).

<sup>8</sup> It began of nothing and in nothing it ends. (Et redit in nihilum quod fuit ante nihil.)

CORNELIUS GALLUS, Fragment. (c. 35 B.C.)

Quoted by BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy. That erst was no-thing, in-to nought it torneth.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 798. (c. 1380)

<sup>9</sup> This voyage . . . came to nothing.

RICHARD GRAFTON, Chronicle of England, ii, 233. (1568)

Her promises came to nothing.

KINGSMILL LONG, tr., Argenis, v, 10. (1625)

All my schemes came to nothing.

DANIEL DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe, i, 203. (1719)

It may all come to nothing.

JANE AUSTEN, Pride and Prejudice. Ch. 5. (1796)

<sup>10</sup> Nothing hath no savour.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

Naught hath no savour.

THOMAS BECON, Godly Prayers, p. 365. (1559)

<sup>11</sup> Where nothing is, a little thyng dooth ease
Where al thyng is, nothyng can fully please.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Where nothing is a little doth ease.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 335. (1605)

Where nothing is, a little goes a great way.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. i, act ii, sc. 1. (1694)

<sup>12</sup> Whereas nothing is, the kynge must lose his right.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. xii. (1562)

Where nothing is to be had, the King looseth his right, they say.

UNKNOWN, The True Tragedie of Richard III. (1594)

Where nought is, the king doth lose his due.

UNKNOWN, The London Prodigal. Act iii, sc. 3. (1605) Shakespeare Apocrypha.

Where nothing is the king loseth his right. And so must the subject but with this difference, that the king loseth his right in no other case.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 358. (1721)

You know, where there is nothing, your own law allows that the king himself must lose his rights.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 9. (1818)

<sup>13</sup> He that hath nought is nought set by.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 132. (a. 1500)

He that hath nought shall have nought.

UNKNOWN, Parlament of Byrdes, l.221. (c.1550)

1 Brynge somethynge to nothyng, as the vulgare speache is, to brynge pynnock to pan-nock.

RICHARD HULOET, Abcedarium Anglico Lat-inum, sig. D3. (1552)

2 As I have sought for nothing, so I have taken nothing. (Je n'ay rien cherché, et n'ay aussi rien prins.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1580)

3 No one is satisfied with nothing. (Nemini tamen nihil satis est.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 76. (c. A. D. 60)

He that hath nothing is not contented.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1670)

4 Here lies one who was nothing. (Ci-git qui ne fut rien.)

ALEXIS PIRON, Epitaph. (1773) Quoted approvingly by VOLTAIRE, in La Vanité.

5 Oh, the nothingness of one who loves nothing! (Certo is quidem nihilist. | qui nil amat.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 179. (c. 200 B. C.)

6 A fine new nothing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 159. (1678) Sometimes extended to, "A nice new nothing to hang on my sleeve."

Fair fall nothing once by the year. It may sometimes be better to have nothing than something.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 182. SOMETHING BETTER THAN NOTHING, see BREAD: HALF A LOAF.

Nichils in nine pokes, or nooks, i. e. nothing at all.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 188. (1670) Nichil or Nihil [nothing] is "a word which the Sheriff answers" when there is nothing with which to pay debts. See MANLEY, Cowell's Interpreter.

Nichills in nine holes. Nothing at all. Absolutely empty.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 97. (1917)

7 What is most shameful for us to possess? Nothing! (Quid habere nobis turpe sit quaeris? Nihil.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxv, sec. 14. (c. 64 A. D.) Quoting a Greek fragment.

To say nothing, to do nothing, to know nothing, and to have nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 4, 25. (1602)

I ain't never done nothin' to nobody;
I ain't never got nothin' from nobody;
And until I get somethin' from somebody, some-time,

I don't intend to do nothin' for nobody, no time.
ALEX ROGERS, Nobody. (1905)

Wot's the good of hanyfink? Why, nuffink!

ALBERT CHEVALIER, Cockney Complaint. (1910)

8 Thou art an O without a figure.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, i, 4, 212. (1605)

All the ciphers of arithmetic are no better than a single nothing.

JOSEPH GLANVILLE, The Vanity of Dogmatizing. Ch. 15. (1661)

An old nought will never be ought.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 184. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6342. (1732)

9 Things which are above us are nothing to us. (Quae super nos nihil ad nos.)

PHILIP STUBBES, The Anatomie of Abuses, ii, 1. (1583) A variation of the Latin proverb, "Quae infra nos nihil ad nos" (Things which are below us are nothing to us).

10 Where nought is, there's nothing to be got.

JOHN TAYLOR, Works, p. 38. (1630)

He who hath nothing, nothing can he pay.

Poor Robin's Almanack, Sept., 1675.

If you put nothing into your purse, you can take nothing out.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2781. (1732)

Where nothing is, nothing can be had.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5653.

Where nothing is, nothing can come on't.

HENRY FIELDING, Don Quixote in England. Bk. i, ch. 3. (1734)

To whom nothing is given of him nothing can be required.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1742)

When nothing's in, nothing can come out.

GEORGE COLMAN THE ELDER, The Man of Business: Epilogue. (1774)

11 I have everything, although I have nothing. (Omnia habeo neque quicquam habeo.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 243. (161 B. C.)

As having nothing, and yet possessing all things. (ὡς μηδὲν ἔχοντες καὶ πάντα κατέχοντες.)

New Testament: II Corinthians, vi, 10. (A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Tamquam nihil habentes, et omnia possidentes."

12 I have nothing and I crave for nothing. (Nil quom est, | nil deficit tamen.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 243. (161 B. C.)

Nothing have, nothing crave.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6242. (1732)

13 This Proverbe experience long ago gave, that nothing who practiseth nothing shall have.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Concerning Tillage (1573) NOTHING VENTURE, NOTHING HAVE. see under VENTURE.

As rod little mendeth where maners be spilt. so naught will be naught say and do what thou wilt.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Huswifely Admonitions.

14 Nothing exists. (Nihil esse.)

ZENO OF ELEA, Maxim. (c. 460 B. C.) See SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxviii, sec. 44

NOVEL, see Fiction

NOVELTY

See also Newness

- <sup>1</sup> 'Tis Novelty, that sets the People a gaping.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5109. (1732)
- <sup>2</sup> The novelty of noon is out of date By night.
ROBERT HILLYER, Platitude. (1923)
- <sup>3</sup> Novelty is of all things the best loved. (Est quoque cunctarum novitas carissima rerum.)
OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 4, l. 51. (A. D. 13)
It is the nature of man to yearn for novelty (Est natura hominum novitatis avida.)
PLINY THE ELDER, Naturalis Historia. Bk. xii, sec. 5. (A. D. 77)
- Novelty always appears handsome.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 465. (1855)
- <sup>4</sup> I will capture your minds with sweet novelty. (Dulcique animos novitate tenebo.)
OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. iv, l. 284. (A. D. 7)
- <sup>5</sup> Well, aunt, anything for novelty.
J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act i, sc. 2. (1815)

NOW

See also Present

- <sup>6</sup> Now or never. (νῦν ἢ, εἰ μὴ νῦν.)
ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 402. (422 B. C.)
Then or never. (Aut tunc aut nunquam.)
PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 44. (c. A. D. 60)
"Now or never" is "Nunc aut nunquam."
Never er now? what sey ye, no?
CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 277. (c. 1380)
- Now, York, or never, steel thy fearful thoughts.
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iii, 1, 331. (1590)
- Now or never.
JOHN DAY, Humour Out of Breath. Act iv. (1608) STEELE, The Tatler. No. 38. (1709)
ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 403. (1712)
THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 6. (1847) etc.
- Better now than never.
SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 17 March, 1667.
- There's no dallying with Now or Never.
OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 183. (1709)
- <sup>7</sup> Nothing is there To come, and nothing Past.
But an Eternal Now does always last.
ABRAHAM COWLEY,  Davideis. Bk. i, l. 360. (1656) In a note to these lines Cowley points out that St. Thomas Aquinas called eternity "Nunc stans," a standing now.
- The time will come when every change shall cease, . . .
Nothing shall be to come, and nothing past,
But an eternal now shall ever last.
HUGH BOYD, tr., The Triumph of Eternity, l. 119. (c. 1780)
- Time is not here, nor days, nor months, nor years,
An everlasting NOW of solitude!
ROBERT SOUTHEY, Thalaba, i, xxviii. (1801)

One of our poets—which is it?—speaks of an everlasting now.

- ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 25. (1834)
What alone is ours, the living Now.
WORDSWORTH, Memorials of a Tour in Italy. No. 10. (1837)
- An everlasting Now reigns in nature, which hangs the same roses on our bushes which charmed the Roman and the Chaldean in their hanging gardens.
R. W. EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Works and Days. (1870)
- In the fix'd Eternal shall we seize
At last the fleeting Now?
OWEN MEREDITH, The First Violets. (a. 1891)
- <sup>8</sup> To peise now with that befrom,
The chaf is take for the corn.
GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. i, l. 32. (1390)
Now's a time.
SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, ii, 2, 152. (1608)
Now is an atome, it will puzzle the skill of an angell to divide.
THOMAS FULLER, Sermons, p. 29. (1655)
- <sup>9</sup> If not now, when?
RABBI HILLEL, Mishnah: Pirke Aboth, i, 15. (c. 50 B. C.)
- <sup>10</sup> The tyme is tourned: then was then and now is now.
JOHN STRYPE, Ecclesiastical Memorials, p. 431 (1549)
"Now" is the watchword of the wise. An expansion of the modern "Do it now."
C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)
Now is now; and then is then.
JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina (T.T.), p. 144 (1631)
- Now's now, but Yule's in winter.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 268. (1721)
- Now, is the constant syllable ticking from the clock of time.
M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of To-day. (1839)

NUMBER

- <sup>11</sup> In number as sand and dust. (ὅσα ψάμαθος τε κόρις τε.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 385. (c. 850 B. C.)
The sand outran number. (ψάμμος ἀριθμὸν περὶ πέφενγεν.)
PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode ii, l. 178. (476 B. C.)
Numberless as the sand. (ψαμμοκοσιογάργαρα.)
ARISTOPHANES, The Acharnians, l. 3. (425 B. C.)
Number the dust of Africa and the glittering stars. (Pulveris Africi | siderumque micantium subducat numerum.)
CATULLUS, Odes. No. lxi, l. 202. (c. 57 B. C.)
- <sup>12</sup> Some of us will lose the number of our mess
MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 33. (1834)
Losing the number of the mess is a phrase for dying suddenly, being killed or drowned.
W. H. SMYTH, The Sailor's Word-Book, 501 (1867)

<sup>1</sup> Others too numerous to mention. (Ceteros quorum numerus iniri non potuit.)

SENECA (?), Ludus de Morte Claudii. Sec. 11. (C. A. D. 55)

<sup>2</sup> Of small number, but their valor quick for war. (Exigui numero, sed bello vivida virtus) VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 754. (19 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> I've got your number now, Laura.
EUGENE WALTER, The Easiest Way. Act ii. (1909)

LUCK IN ODD NUMBERS, see LUCK: OMENS.

NUMBER ONE, see under SELF.

NUMBERS

<sup>4</sup> These numbers will I tear and write in prose.
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 57. (1595)

Add to golden numbers golden numbers.
DEKKER AND CHETTLE, Patient Grissil. Act. i, sc. 1. (1603)

By magic numbers and persuasive sound.
WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride. Act i, sc. 1. (1697)

As yet a child, nor yet a fool to fame.
I lisp'd in numbers, for the numbers came.
ALEXANDER POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 127. (1733)

In numbers purely warm and sweetly strong.
WILLIAM COLLINS, Ode to Simplicity, l. 3. (a. 1759)

NURSE

<sup>5</sup> Nurses put one bit in the child's mouth and two in their own.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 39. (1639)

<sup>6</sup> The nurse's legends are for truths receiv'd.
DRYDEN, The Cock and the Fox, l. 335. (1700)

<sup>7</sup> The Nurse is valued till the Child is done sucking.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4688. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> A nurse spoils a good huswife.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)

A nurse's tongue is privileged to talk.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1670)

<sup>9</sup> The nurse's pangs are second to the mother's. (Secundus est a matre nutricis dolor.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 658. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> One year a nurse, and seven years the worse. Because feeding well and doing little she becomes liquorish and gets a habit of idleness.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 182. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6377. (1732)

One year a nurse, and seven years a daw [slut]. Because that year will give her a habit of idleness.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 270. (1721)

It will be noted that Kelly agrees with Ray as to the meaning of the proverb, but other authorities hold that it alludes to the arduous work of a nurse, which breaks her health.

<sup>11</sup> To be nursed in cotton. To be brought up very tenderly.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 209. (1678)

NUT

<sup>12</sup> Give nuts to the slaves, boy; your time is past: you have played with nuts long enough. (Da nuces pueris, iners | concubine: satis diu | lusisti nucibus.)

CATULLUS, Carmen Nuptialis, l. 127. ODES, No. lxi, l. 128. (c. 57 B. C.) To a bridegroom.

To throw away your nuts. (Nuces relinquere.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 10. (c. A. D. 58) To throw away your rattles, to put away childish things. A proverb cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 35. It is said to have originated from the custom of the bridegroom scattering nuts as he led his bride to the temple, indicating that he was giving up boyish sports, among which playing with nuts was popular. Those who did not do so were said to return to their playthings (Redire ad nuces).

"Nuces" is sometimes translated "marbles."

The boy, sad to desert his nuts. (Tristis nucibus puer relictis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 84. (c. A. D. 90)

I don't want to lose my nuts. (Perdere nolo nuces.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiv, epig. 1.

O bridegroom, scatter nuts! (Sparge, marite, nuces.)

AUSONIUS, Cento Nuptialis, vi, 73. (c. A. D. 370)

'Tis time that you these childish sports forsake. Hymen for you has other Nuts to crack.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Of Plants. (1662)

To leave boys-play, and fall to blow point. Relinquere nuces.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 997. (1681)

They, who are not, or but lately, past their nuts, cannot be supposed to have any extent of knowledge.

WILLIAM WOLLASTON, The Religion of Nature Delineated, viii, 161. (1722)

<sup>13</sup> They are needful mischiefs, And such are nuts to me.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Mad Lover. Act v, sc. 4 (1617) A source of pleasure or delight.

It was nuts to him to tell the guests.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, The English Rogue. Pt. iii, p. 102. (1671)

This story would have been Nuts to Mother Midnight.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Rehearsal Transposed, i, 56. (1672)

Lord Keeper and Treasurer teased me for a week. It was nuts to them.

SWIFT, Journal to Stella, 8 Jan., 1711.

It is like Nuts to an Ape.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2970. (1732)

Mischief is said to be nuts to some folks.

ABRAHAM TUCKER, The Light of Nature, ii, 484. (1768)

His disgrace or ruin will be nuts to me.

BENJAMIN H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk.vi, ch.1. (1809)

This was nuts to us, for we liked to have a Spaniard wet with salt water.

RICHARD H. DANA, Two Years before the Mast. Ch. 25. (1840)

To edge his way along . . . warning all human sympathy to keep its distance, was . . . 'nuts' to Scrooge.

DICKENS, A Christmas Carol. Stave i. (1843)

Fortified towns are hard nuts to crack; and your teeth have not been accustomed to it.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Letters. Works. (1887), ii, 16. (1745)

You will find Robert Morris a hard nut to crack.

JAMES PAYN, The Mystery of Mirbridge. Ch. 21. (1888)

Your Nut is ready crackt for you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.6058.(1732)

The blowen was nutts upon the Kiddey because he is well hung.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Well-hung. (1785) Devoted to, fond of, or delighted with a person or thing.

My aunt is awful nuts on Marcus Aurelius.

WILLIAM BLACK, A Princess of Thule. Ch. 11. (1873)

He wasn't dead nuts on meeting with them.

SIR JOHN ASTLEY, Fifty Years of My Life, i, 152. (1894)

We're nuts on William just now.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Corpse with the Eerie Eye, p. 31. (1942)

Knak me that nut.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

How cracke you this nutte?

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence, p. 62. (1564)

Crack me that nut, quoth Bumsted.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 214. (1670)

Crack me this nut, and do it handsomely.

WALTER SCOTT, The Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 16. (1828)

You are a swete nut, the deuill cracke you.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. X3. (1583)

You are a sweet nut, if you were well crack'd.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 389. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5844. (1732)

He who wishes to get the kernel out of the nut, cracks the nut. (Qui e nuce nuculeum esse volt, frangit nucem.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 55. (c. 200 B.C.) The English form is, "Nuts are given us, but we must crack them ourselves."

I live upon no deaf nuts, as we use to speak.

SAMUEL RUTHERFORD, Letters, i, 331. (1637)

Nuts without kernels.

'Twould vex a man to the very guts,
To sit seven year cracking deaf nuts.

GEORGE STUART, A Joco-Serious Discourse, p. 42. (1686)

You are not fed on deaf nuts. Spoken to those who are plump and in good liking.

JAMES KELLEY, Scottish Proverbs, p.395.(1721)

He does not look as if he lived upon deaf nuts.

J. C. ATKINSON, Cleveland Glossary, p. 138. (1868)

You're nuttier than a fruit cake.

RICHARD SALE, Passing Strange, p. 174. (1942)

"Off one's nut," not right in the head, queer, mildly insane. "There are men who go off their nuts by the time they're worth a million."—MISS BRADDON, Strangers and Pilgrims. Vol. ii, Ch. 3. (1873)

Gilbert, the Filbert,

The Colonel of the Knuts.

ARTHUR WIMPERIS, Gilbert the Filbert.

Many nits [nuts] many pits [graves]. A common saying . . . meaning that if hazel nuts, haws, hips, etc., are plentiful, many deaths will occur.

Notes and Queries. Ser. i, vol. ii, p.510.(1850)

NUTSHELL

The whole worlde is drawn in a mappe;
Homers Iliades in a nutte shel.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse (Arber), p. 16. (1579) The allusion is to the copy of the Iliad mentioned by PLINY, Naturalis Historia, bk. vii, sec. 21, which was small enough to be enclosed in the shell of a nut. The Latin proverb is, "In nuce Ilias" (An Iliad in a nutshell).

I have sometimes heard of an Iliad in a Nut-shell.

SWIFT, A Tale of a Tub. Ch. 8. (1704)

It is an Iliad in a nut-shell.

CARLYLE, Past and Present, p. 137. (1843)

There, sir, is political economy in a nutshell.

T. L. PEACOCK, Crochet Castle. Ch. 2. (1831)

It all lies in a nutshell, my dear; in a nutshell.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 18. (1838)

The simplest thing in the world. It lies in a nutshell.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 29. (1840)

The difference was said to lie in a nutshell.

CHARLOTTE M. YONGE, Cameos. Vol. i, ch. 21. (1852)

That's putting the matter in a nutshell.

THOMAS JOB, Uncle Harry. Act ii. (1942)

I could be bounded in a nutshell.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet ii, 2, 260. (1600)

The earth is but a nutshell.

THOMAS TRAHERNE, Christian Ethics, p. 442. (1675)

O.K.

<sup>1</sup>
The Democratic O.K. Club.

JOHN H. LOW, Notice of Meeting, published in New York New Era, 23 March, 1840. First known appearance of "O.K." in print. Low was secretary of the club, and "O.K." stood for Old Kinderhook, birthplace of Martin Van Buren, whom the club was supporting for a second term as President. See Saturday Review of Literature, 19 July, 1941. For many years it was believed that "O.K." was used by Andrew Jackson in endorsing a bill of sale for a negro, entered in the archives of Sumner County, Tenn., 6 Oct., 1790, meaning "Oll korrekt," Jackson's supposed way of spelling "All correct." But in 1859, James Parton, who had evidently gone to the trouble of examining the entry, suggested that "O.K." was a misreading of "O.R.," order recorded. Recent investigation has shown him to be correct, and also that the letters were not written by Jackson, but by Daniel Smith, clerk of the court. See MENCKEN, The American Language: Supplement I, p. 269. The real derivation of the phrase in its present meaning, which dates back to 1840 (see below), is uncertain. The popular explanation is that it derives from Jackson's "Oll korrekt" (see The Atlas, 19 Aug., 1840, p. 2-4). Woodrow Wilson maintained that it came from a Choctaw word, "Okeh," meaning "It is so," and wrote it in that form on papers which had his approval. He is supported by BYINGTON, Dictionary of the Choctaw Language, who lists "Hoke" as "an affirmative participle." It is now usually written "Okay," and is the one bit of American slang which has swept the world.

The Locos translate O.K. oll korrekt.

National Intelligencer, 2 April, 1840, p. 1/2.

O.K.—These initials, which are understood to mean All is correct—viz. "Oll Korrekt."

New Orleans Picayune, 30 Sept., 1840., p. 2/4.

OAK

<sup>2</sup>
No man at the first stroke

Ne may nat felle down an oke.

CHAUCER (?), The Romaunt of the Rose, l. 3687. (c. 1365)

Ookis grete be nat dounihewe First at a strok.

LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. i, l. 96. (c. 1430)

It is but a sympill oke

That [is] cut down at the first stroke.

UNKNOWN, The Paston Letters, iii, 169. (1477)

Hit is a febill tre that fallith at the first strok.

HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 128. (a. 1530)

Though a little man can fell a great oke, yet fals it not at the first blow.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Arbre. (1611)

An old oak is not felled at a blow.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. iv, subs. 7. (1621)

One stroke fells not an oak.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 183. (1640)

An Oak is not felled at one Chop.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 639. (1732)

With one stroke one doesn't fell an oak. (De un solo golpe ne se derriba un roble.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 250. (1856)

<sup>3</sup>

Reed that boweth down for every blast

Ful lightly, cesse wind, it wol aryse;

But so nil not an ook whan it is cast.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1387. (c. 1380) See also under BENDING.

Like as in tempest great, where wind doth beare the stroke,

Much safer stands the bowing reede then doth the stubborne oke.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Fiue Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: To Light a Candell before the Devill. (1577)

Though I live obscure, yet I live clean and honest; and when as the lofty oke is blown down, the silly reed may stand.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 3. (1621)

Oaks may fall, when Reeds stand the Storm.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3692. (1732)

<sup>4</sup>

The oak, when living, monarch of the wood; The English oak, which, dead, commands the flood.

CHURCHILL, Gotham. Bk. i, l. 303. (1764)

Lord of the woods, the long-surviving oak.

WILLIAM COWPER, The Task, i, 313. (1784)

The majestic Oak, the Monarch of the forest.

W. S. COLEMAN, Woodlands, p. 5. (1859)

<sup>5</sup>

The stout oak needs many a stroke to conquer it. (πολλαῖσι πληγαῖς ὄνυς σερὰ δαμάσεται.)

DIAGENIANUS, Adagia. Sec. vii, 77. (c. A. D. 125)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 94, with the Latin, "Multis ictibus deiicitur quercus."

Many strokes ouerthrow the tallest Oke.

JOHN LYL, Euphuus (Arber), p. 81. (1579)

Many strokes, though with a little axe,

Hew down, and fell the hardest-timber'd oak.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, ii, 1, 54. (1591)

In time small wedges cleave the hardest oak.

THOMAS KYD, The Spanish Tragedie. Act ii, sc. 1. (1592)

By many strokes the tallest okes are shaken.

JOHN DAY, Travels of Three English Brothers, p. 69. (1607)

Multis ictibus deiicitur quercus. Many strokes fell great oaks. Assiduity overcometh all difficulty.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 115. (1670)

Little strokes fell great oaks.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750

By little strokes Men fell great oaks.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 22. (1869) The French say, "Petit homme abat grand chêne," the Dutch, "Kleine houwten vellen groote eiken."

1 Every oak must be an acorn.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius, p. 6. (1852)

TALL OAKS FROM LITTLE ACORNS GROW, see under GREATNESS: GREAT AND SMALL.

2 To sport oak; to shut the outward door of a student's room at college.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Oak. (1785)

Whenever I "sported oak" there was positively "no admittance."

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 29. (1850)

Mr. Verdant Green had, for the first time, sported his oak.

CUTHBERT BEDE (EDWARD BRADLEY), The Adventures of Mr. Verdant Green. Bk. i, ch. 8. (1853)

A great . . . outer door, my oak, which I sport when I go out or want to be quiet.

HUGHES, Tom Brown at Oxford. Ch. 1. (1861)

Your oak was sported and you were not at home to anybody.

WALTER BESANT, The Demoniac, i, 18. (1890)

HEARTS OF OAK, see under HEART.

OAR

3 I will govern my own house without your putting in an oar.

CHARLES COFFEY, The Devil to Pay. Act i, sc. 2. (1731)

While I have such a friend to act for me, why should I put in my oar?

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, in Letters of Eminent Literary Men, p. 412. (c. 1779)

I . . . put in my oar whenever I thought I could say a good thing.

MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. i, ch. 7. (1809)

Now, don't put your oar in, young woman.

WALTER BESANT, Children of Gibeon. Bk. ii, ch. 30. (1886)

A pretty fool you were to put your oar in!

S. J. WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank. Ch. 35. (1922)

4 They lay upon their oars for some time.

GEORGE SHELVOCKE, A Voyage Round the World, p. 271. (1726)

Many of them are unable to lie on their oars, waiting the decision of Congress.

RUFUS PUTNAM, in CUTLER, Life, i, 175. (1784)

We shall be able . . . to rest on our oars.

LADY GRANVILLE, Letters, Oct., 1836.

5 In Cocke's bote eche man had an ore.

UNKNOWN, Cocke Lorelles Bote (Percy Soc.), p. 11. (c. 1500)

In eche mans bote would he haue an ore,

But no woordes, to good purpose, lesse or more.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, ii, 180. (1543)

She must haue an ore in euery mans barge.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

She must haue a hand in every one's affairs. [He] would nedes haue an Ower in the Erle of Warwikes boate.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 279. (1548)

To haue an Oare stirring in every beautifull boate.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace; p. 38. (1576)

The pope must haue his ore in everie mans bote, his spoone in everie mans dish.

RAPHAEL HOLINSHED, Chronicles, ii, 173. (1577)

He loves to fish in troubled waters, haue an oar in every mans boat.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Whimsies, p. 89. (1631)

Medlers . . . that will haue an Oar in every boat.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., The Visions of Villegas, p. 30. (1668)

He has an oar in every man's boat, and a finger in every pye.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 22. (1712)

OATH

See also Curse, Swearing, Vow

6 Oaths are not surety for a man, but the man for the oaths. (οὐκ ἀνδρὸς ὅρκοι πιστὸς, ἀλλ' ὅρκων ἀνὴρ.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. No. 222, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) STOBÆUS, Florilegium, iii, 27, 2.

7 William the kyng . . . suore a grete oath

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Langtoft's Chronicle, p. 75. (c. 1330)

He hath constrayned me . . . by a boke othe. (Par mon serment sur ung liure.)

PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, 495. (1530)

I'll take my corporal oath on it.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1605)

I'm ready to take my bible oath on't.

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, ii, 204. (1771)

8 A liar is always prodigal with oaths. (Un menteur est toujours prodigue de serments.)

CORNEILLE, Le Menteur. Act iii, sc. 5. (1642)

The more oath-taking, the more lying.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 25 May, 1830.

Oaths and lies are two brothers. (Der Meiner und der Lügner sind zwei Brüder.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 336. (1856)

9 By all the waves and all the race of fishes. (μὰ θ' ἐπὰ κύματ' ἰχθύων τε πᾶν γένος.)

EURIPIDES, Cyclops, l. 265. (c. 440 B.C.)

By earth, by springs, by rivers, and by streams. (μὰ γῆν, μὰ κρήνας, μὰ ποταμούς, μὰ νάματα.)

DEMOSTHENES, his famous metrical oath. (c. 340 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes. Sec. 9.

Let my right hand forget her cunning. . . . Let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth. (Oblivioni detur dextera mea. Adhaereat lingua mea faucibus meis.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxvii, 5-6. (c. 350 B.C.) A favorite form of oath with politicians.

Daniel Webster used it in the supposed speech of John Adams, which he delivered on the floor of the Senate in 1826, and James G. Blaine used it in a speech in the Senate, 8 March, 1877, in referring to his defence of the Southern Unionists. See Congressional Record, 45th Congress, special sess., p. 21.

Honest injun, I will.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 8. (1884)

Repeated in ch. 26 and elsewhere.

I swore to myself that come hell or highwater, I would be there.

A. MERRITT, Creep, Shadow, p. 169. (1934)

1 Between lions and men there are no oaths of faith. (οὐκ ἔστι λέονσι καὶ ἀνδράσιν ὄρκια πιστά.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 261. (c. 850 B.C.)

Homer is coining a phrase which became a proverb, or perhaps repeating a proverb already in common use, indicating that man and the lion are enemies, and that between enemies there can be no oaths or pledges.

2 What is an oath? A plaster for a debt. (Quid est ius iurandum? emplastrum aeris alieni.)

LABERIUS, Alexandrea. (c. 60 B.C.)

False othes, which afterwards the windes, disperse amid the ayre.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i. p. 95. (1574) Pettie, tr.

For oaths are straws, men's faiths are wafer-cakes.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 3, 52. (1599)

The strongest oaths are straw

To the fire i' the blood.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iv, 1, 52. (1611)

Oathes are Crutches, vpon which Lyes . . . go, and neede no other pasport. . . . Oathes are wounds that a man stabs into himself.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Seuen Deadly Sinnes of London (Arber), ii, 21. (1606)

Their oaths are like empty vessels under sail.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 31. (1633)

Oaths are but words, and words but wind.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto ii, l. 107. (1664) The Danes say, "Eed og Aeg ere snart brudte" (Eggs and oaths are easily broken).

Oaths are the children of fashion.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation: Intro. (1738)

Oaths are the flash-notes of speech.

D. C. MURRAY, Tales, p. 209. (1898)

Oaths are the fossils of piety.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Interpretations of Poetry, p. 148. (c. 1935)

3 My tongue has sworn, but my mind is unsworn. (ἡ γλῶσσ' ὀμῶμοχ', ἡ δὲ φρήν ἀνώματος.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 612. (c. 428 B.C.) This famous line is parodied three times in ARISTOPHANES (Thesmophoriazusae, 275; Frogs, 101, 1471). In the first, the sense is reversed, for when Euripides takes an oath, Mnesilochus says to him, "Remember it was your mind that swore, and not your tongue." When Euripides was engaged in a lawsuit, his adversary quoted the line, implying that Euripides could not be believed even on oath. Aristotle tells the story of the lawsuit in his Rhetoric, iii, 15, 8. Quoted by CICERO, De Officiis, iii, 29, who gives the oft-quoted Latin, "Iuravi lingua, mentem iniuratum gero."

The Euripidean spirit: our tongue will be unconvinced, but not our mind. (ἡ μὲν γὰρ γλῶττα ἀνέλεγκτος ἡμῖν ἔσται, ἡ δὲ φρήν οὐκ ἀνέλεγκτος.)

PLATO, Theaetetus. Sec. 154D. (c. 390 B.C.)

An oath of the tongue. (ἡ γλῶσσ' ὤμοσεν.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. v, No. 41.

(1523) With the Latin, "Lingua iuravit."

I take the official oath today with no mental reservations.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1861.

4 Whether innocent or guilty, take no oath.

Palestinian Talmud: Shebuoth, vi, 5. (c. 400)

SIMEON ASHKENAZI (?), Yalkut Mishpatim, 346. (c. 1250)

5 Write oaths on ashes. (ὄρκους ἐπὶ τέφρῳ γράφειν.)

PHILONIDES, Fragments. Frag. 1. (c. 450 B.C.)

6 I know that he will rather believe me unsworn than you upon oath. (Iniurato scio plus credet mihi quam iurato tibi.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 437. (c. 200 B.C.)

7 He who keeps his oath reaches any goal. (Qui ius iurandum servat quovis pervenit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 565. (c. 43 B.C.)

8 It is great sin to swear unto a sin, But greater sin to keep a sinful oath.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, v, 1, 182. (1590)

Perhaps thou wilt object my holy oath:

To keep that oath were more impiety

Than Jephthah's, when he sacrificed his daughter.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, i, 89. (1591)

What fool is not so wise

To lose an oath, to win a paradise?

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 72.

Also Passionate Pilgrim, l. 41.

An oath that is not to be made, is not to be kept.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1015. (1640)

An unlawful oath is better broken than kept.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 126. (1670)

OATS

9 Oats,—a grain which is generally given to horses, but in Scotland supports the people.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary of the English Language: Oats. (1755) To which Lord Eli-bank retorted "Very true, and where else will you find such horses and such men?"

The motto I proposed for the [Edinburgh] Review was, "Tenui musam meditatur avena" [We cultivate literature on a little oatmeal]; but this was too near the truth to be admitted, so we took our present grave motto from Publius [sic] Syrus.

of whom none of us, I am sure, had read a single line.

SYDNEY SMITH. (1802) See LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, vol. i. The motto adopted was "Iudex damnatur cum nocens absolvitur" (The judge is condemned when a guilty person is acquitted), and is No. 288 of the Sententiae of PUBLILIUS SYRUS.

<sup>1</sup> We both 'feel our oats' and our youth.

AMOS LAWRENCE, Extracts from Diary and Correspondence, p. 126. (1833)

You feel your oats, too, as well as any one.

T. C. HALIBURTON, The Attaché. Ser. i, vol. ii, p. 157. (1843)

My father installed me as clerk in this country store. Of course I felt my oats.

P. T. BARNUM, Struggles and Triumphs, p. 33. (1869)

Rosy's beginning to feel her oats.

NORAH DAVIS, The Northerner, p. 120. (1905)

<sup>2</sup> Stasimus: When every one else has a whopping harvest, that farm yields three times less than you sow.

Philo: Precisely the sort of place to sow wild oats, if they can be killed in the sowing. (Em istic oportet opseri mores malos, | si in opserendo possint interfieri.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 531. (c. 194 B. C.)

That they may satisfy the foolish desires of certain light brains and wild oats, which are altogether given to new fangleness.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works (P.S.), p. 204.

(1542) The reference is to the folly of sowing wild oats instead of good grain.

That willfull and vnrlry age, which lacketh rype-nes and discretion, and (as wee saye) hath not sowed all theyr wyeld Oates.

THOMAS NEWTON, tr., Touchstone of Complexions, ii, 99. (1565)

He hath not yet sowne all his wilde otes.

UNKNOWN, Misogonus. Act ii, sc. 3. (1577)

I find that all my wildest Oates are sowne.

THOMAS WATSON, The Passionate Centurie of Loue, 87. (1582)

Youth ne'er aspires to vertues perfect growth,

Till his wild oates be sowne.

THOMAS NASH, Works (Grosart), vi, 152. (1600)

Will these wild oats never be sown?

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Wise-Woman of Hogsdon. Act ii, sc. 1. (1638)

Happy is he, who hath sow'd his wild Oats be-times.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1789. (1732)

The vices of youth are varnished over by the saying, that there must be time for "sowing of wild oats."

WILLIAM COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. (1829)

Wild rye and wild wheat grow in some regions spontaneously, but wild oats are always sown.

GEORGE D. PRENTICE, Prenticeana, p. 148. (1860)

"A young fellow must sow his wild oats." . . . You can make nothing but a devil's maxim of it.

THOMAS HUGHES, Tom Brown at Oxford. Ch. 6. (1861)

I'm seven-and-twenty; I'm an old woman; I've sown my wild oats now.

A. W. PINERO, The Benefit of the Doubt. Act i. (1895) The French say, "Faire ses farces," or "Jeter sa gourme."

I'm reaping my wild oats, no longer sowing.

GELETT BURGESS, Lament. (c. 1930)

OBEDIENCE

See also Command

<sup>3</sup> We ought to obey God rather than men. (πειθαρχεῖν δεῖ θεῷ μᾶλλον ἢ ἀνθρώποις.)

New Testament: Acts, v, 29. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Obedire oportet Deo magis, quam hominibus."

<sup>4</sup> Obedience is the mother of Success, so runs the proverb. (πειθαρχία γὰρ ἐστὶ τῆς εὐπραξίας | μήτηρ, ὥδ' ἔχει λόγος.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 224. (467 B. C.) The proverbial form is εὐπραξίαν ἐφύσεν ἡ πειθαρχία (Obedience produces success)

Obedience is the key to every door.

MACDONALD, Marquis of Lossie. Ch. 53. (1877)

<sup>5</sup> Let men obey the laws, and women their husbands.

NATHANIEL AMES, Almanac, 1734.

<sup>6</sup> Woe to him that claims obedience when it is not due; woe to him that refuses when it is!

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero Worship. Ch. 6. (1840)

<sup>7</sup> Those who know the least obey the best.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Recruiting Officer. Act iv. (1706)

<sup>8</sup> Obedience is much more seen in little Things. than in great.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3693. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> He that obeyeth becometh one obeyed.

KEGMENT, Instructions. (c. 4000 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> Heo mot nede beien, the mon the ibunden bith. [He must needs bow, the man that is bound.]

LAYAMON, Brut, l. 1051. (1205)

Who is bounden, he mot bowe.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. ii, l. 540. (c. 1390)

Wo is hym that is bun, ffor he must abyde.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Plays, p. 118. (c. 1410)

The bounde must euer obeye.

UNKNOWN, The Boke of Mayd Emlyn, l. 286. (c. 1520) HAZLITT, Early Pop. Poetry, iv, 92.

They that are bound must obaie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 181. (1576) CAMDEN, Remains, p. 313. (1605) BROME, The Mad Couple. Act ii. (1653) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4972. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> To obey well, is as great a thing as to governe. SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from the Church. (1613)

You cannot be a true man until you learn to obey.
ROBERT E. LEE, Address, to the students at Washington College, 1867.

<sup>1</sup> Even though a god, I have learnt to obey the times. (καὶρῳ δουλεῖν καὶ θεὸς ὦν ἔμαθον.)

PALLADAS, On a Statue of Heracles. (c. A.D. 425) See Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, epig. 441.

<sup>2</sup> I am your most obedient. (Tibi sum oboediens.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 1129. (c. 200 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> I'll be just what you want me to be. (Ut voles me esse ita ero.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 239. (c. 195 B.C.)

I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord, . . . I'll be what you want me to be.

MARY ELIZABETH BROWN, I'll Go Where You Want Me to Go. (c. 1892) The favorite hymn of William Jennings Bryan.

<sup>4</sup> Do as you're bidden and you'll never bear blame.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 101. (1678)

<sup>5</sup> Stranger, bear this message to the Spartans, that we lie here obedient to their laws. (ὦ ξείν', ἀγγεῖλον Λακεδαιμονίοις ὅτι τῇδε | κείμεθα, τοῖς κείνων ῥήμασι πειθόμενοι.)

SIMONIDES, Epitaph, on the monument of the Spartans who fell at Thermopylae. (c. 480 B.C.) See Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 249. Ruskin called this epitaph, "The noblest group of words ever uttered by man."

<sup>6</sup> Obedience is the courtesy due to kings.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 713. (1870)

<sup>7</sup> He who is born to obey will obey even on a throne. (Celui qui serait né pour obéir, obéirait jusque sur le trône.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 182. (1746)

<sup>8</sup> I do not like the mere servile merit of obedience.

WALPOLE, Letter to Hannah More, June, 1787.

<sup>9</sup> Disobedience in the eyes of any one who has read history is man's original virtue.

OSCAR WILDE, The Soul of Man Under Socialism. (1891)

Disobedience, the rarest and most courageous of virtues.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

Disobedience. The silver lining to the cloud of servitude.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

OBLIVION

<sup>10</sup> Buried in the poke of oblivion.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle: Preface. (a. 1548)

The swallowing gulf Of . . . dark oblivion.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iii, 7, 129. (1592)

The dust of old oblivion.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 4, 87. (1599)

Blind oblivion swallow'd cities up.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 2, 194. (1601)

What's past and what's to come is strew'd with husks

And formless ruin of oblivion.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iv, 5, 166.

Let him pass into the garret of oblivion.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, French and Italian Journals, ii, 38. (1858)

<sup>11</sup> Unrespited, unpitied, unreprieved, Ages of hopeless end.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 185. (1667)

Unwept, unhonour'd, uninterr'd he lies.

POPE, tr., The Iliad. Bk. xxii, l. 484. (1720)

Unwept, unnoted, and for ever dead.

POPE, tr., The Odyssey. Bk. v, l. 402. (1725)

Into the grave, unpitied and unknown.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel. Bk. i, l. 9. (1771)

Unwept, unhonoured, and unsung.

WALTER SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel.

Canto vi, st. 1. (1805)

Unknell'd, uncoffin'd, and unknown.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto vi, st. 179. (1812)

Unwept, unshrouded, and unsepulchred.

ROBERT SOUTHBY, A Tale of Paraguay. Canto i, st. 11. (1825)

We softly sink to dark oblivion's shade,

Unwept, unblest, unhonored, and unpaid.

O. W. HOLMES, The Tail-Piece. (1830)

<sup>12</sup> The sweet physic of oblivion. (τὸ φάρμακον ἔνθα τὸ λάθος.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xxiii, l. 25. (c. 270 B.C.)

<sup>13</sup> Our name shall be forgotten in time, . . . and our life shall pass away as the trace of a cloud. (Nomen nostrum oblivionem accipiet per tempus. . . . Umbrae enim transitus est tempus nostrum.)

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, ii, 4. (c. 100 B.C.)

The Sultan asked Solomon for a Signet motto, that should hold good for Adversity or Prosperity. Solomon gave him, "This too shall pass away."

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius: Solomon's Seal. (1852)

Solemn words, and these are they:

Even this shall pass away."

THEODORE TILTON, The King's Ring. (1867)

OBSCURITY

<sup>14</sup> Content thyself to be obscurely good.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4. (1713)

<sup>15</sup> Who is Oweyshe in the market of the cotton-yarn?

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 641. (1817) Oweyshe, the pet name for a favorite, is lost in the crowd when she goes to the market to sell the cotton-yarn which she has spun at home. A person famous in his own neighborhood drops out of sight when he goes out into the world.

1 I envy any man whose life has passed
Free from danger, unknown and unrenowned.
(Ἐγὼ δ' ἀνδρῶν ἐς ἀνίθουν βίον ἐξεπέρασ' ἀγνώσ ἀκλήτ.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigeneia at Aulis, l. 16. (c. 410 B.C.) Agamemnon to his old servant, but he was, of course, just talking. Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 471C.

He has not lived amiss who from birth to death has passed unknown. (Nec vixit male, qui natus moriensque fefellit.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. xvii, l. 10. (20 B.C.) In Epistle xviii, l. 103, Horace says that unruffled calm may be achieved by "a secluded journey along the pathway of life unnoticed" (An secretum iter et fallentis semita vitae).

Obscurity keeps men in peace, and a cottage bestows untroubled age. (Servat placidos obscura quies | praebebetque senes casa securos.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 1126. (c. A.D. 60)

He is happiest of whom the world says least, good or bad.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams. (1786)

2 There is many a rich stone laid up in the bowels of the earth, many a fair pearl laid up in the bosom of the sea, that never was seen, nor never shall be.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations: The Veil of Moses. Bk. iv. (1612)

Roses, that in deserts bloom and die.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock, iv, 158. (1714)

Full many flower is born to blush unseen,
And waste its sweetness on the desert air.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-Yard, l. 55. (1750)

3 The lothe stake standeth longe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

BACON, Promus. No. 485. (c. 1594)

An ill stake standeth longest.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 313. (1605)

The low stakes stand long.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4637. (1832)

4 Striving to be brief, I become obscure. (Brevis esse laboro, obscurus fio.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 25. (c. 20 B.C.)

Wrapping truth in obscurity. (Obscuris vera involvens.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 100. (19 B.C.) There is a Latin proverb, "Obscurum per obscurius" (Something obscure [explained] by something more obscure).

Obscurity is the realm of error. (L'obscurité est le royaume de l'erreur.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 5. (1746)

5 He who, conscious of his own light, is content to be obscure, shall be the whole world's model.

LAO-TSEZ, Tao-tek-king (The Way of Virtue). Ch. 28. (c. 550 B.C.) Giles, tr.

6 He who hides his life well lives well. (Bene qui latuit bene vixit.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 25. (c. A.D. 10)

Hide thy life. (Cache ta vie.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 16. (1580) Cited as one of the principal dogmas of Epicurus, forbidding his followers to meddle with public affairs, and encouraging them to despise glory.

To be Anonymous is better than to be Alexander. Cowley said it engagingly, in his little essay on Obscurity: "Bene qui latuit, bene vixit: he lives well that has lain well hidden."

LOUISE IMOGEN GUINEY, Patrins. (1897)

Quoted also by VAN WYCK BROOKS, New England: Indian Summer, p. 482. The Germans say, "Unter der Bank neidet man Niemand" (Under the bank you envy no man).

7 Ignoble nobodies. (Nescioques ignobiles.)

PACUVIUS, Medus. Frag. 237. (c. 160 B.C.)

If you know not me, you know no bodie.

THOMAS HEYWOOD. Title of play. (1605)

Not to know me argues your selves unknown.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 830. (1667)

8 Little people easily find safety in obscurity. (Minuta plebes facili praesidio latet.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fable 6. (c. 25 B.C.)

If the bridge fall, it won't crush the minnows.

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 327. (1872)

9 How often the highest talents are wrapped in obscurity. (Ut saepe summa ingenia in occulto latent.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 165. (c. 200 B.C.)

Full many a starving wight has died unknown;
Full many a spirit fled that none bemoan.

SADI, Gulistan, i, 16. (c. 1258) Eastwick, tr.

Some mute, inglorious Milton here may rest,
Some Cromwell guiltless of his country's blood.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 57. (1750)

10 How happy is the blameless vestal's lot!

The world forgetting, by the world forgot.

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 207. (1717)

11 Lowly sit, richly warm. A mean condition is both more safe and more comfortable, than a high estate.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 117. (1670)

12 It is a true saying, better to live in lowe degree then high disdaine.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, p. 17. (1589)

It is better for him to live in low content then in high infamy.

UNKNOWN, The Country-mans New Commonwealth, p. 25. (1647)

Be obscure and innocent, rather than conspicuous and gully.

RICHARD STEELE, The Englishman. No. 10, p. 69. (1713)

OBSERVATION

<sup>1</sup> The bearings of this observation lays in the application on it.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 23. (1848)

<sup>2</sup> Seeing many things, but thou observest not; opening the ears, but he heareth not. (Qui vides multa, nonne custodies? qui apertas habes aures, nonne audies?)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xlii, 20. (c. 725 B. C.)

The kingdom of God cometh not with observation. (οὐκ ἔρχεται ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ μετὰ παρατήρησιν.)

New Testament: Luke, xvii, 20. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Non venit regnum Dei cum observatione."

<sup>3</sup> He is the observed of all observers. (ὥπται καὶ πάντῃ πᾶς τις ἐπιστρέφεται.)

PLATO, Inscription for the Tomb of Alexis. (c. 375 B. C.) See EDMONDS, Elegy and Iambus, p. 5.

The observed of all observers.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 162. (1600)

<sup>4</sup> Observation, not old age, brings wisdom. (Sensus, non aetas, invenit sapientiam.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 649. (c. 43 B. C.)

Armado: How hast thou purchased this experience?

Moth: By my penny of observation.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iii, 1, 23. (1595)

OBSTINACY

See also Stubbornness

<sup>5</sup> You take the bit in your teeth like a new-harnessed colt. (δακὼν δὲ στόμιον ὡς νεοῖγις.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 1009. (c. 470 B. C.) The phrase was probably already a proverb.

To take the bit in one's teeth. (Mordere frenum.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares, xi, xxiii, 2. (c. 50 B. C.)

Attributed to Brutus. Cicero uses the proverb again in xi, xxiv, 1, and ERASMUS cites it, Adagia, i, iv, 14.

<sup>6</sup> Obstnacy in a bad Cause is but constancy in a good.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 25. (1643)

The obstinate Man does not hold Opinions, but they hold him.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, ii, 422. (a. 1680)

<sup>7</sup> A stiff-necked people. (Populus duræ cervicis.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xxxiii, 3. (c. 550 B. C.)

Also Deuteronomy, ix, 6, 13.

She hath (they say) bene styffe necked cuermore.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)

<sup>8</sup> A Fool is better than an obstinate Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 101. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> You have a stalk of carle hemp in you. Spoken to sturdy and stubborn boys.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 373. (1721)

Carl-hemp is male hemp, i. e. strength of mind.

Ye hae a streak o' carl hemp in you.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 329. (1862)

<sup>10</sup> I see thee head stronge.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 270. (1580)

As headstrong as an allegory on the banks of the Nile.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iii, sc. 3. (1775)

<sup>11</sup> Nothing shall alter my minde, neither penny nor Pater noster.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 243. (1580)

Nor blows from pitchfork nor from ash

Can make him change his ways.

(Coups de fourche ni d'étrivières Ne lui font changer de manières.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 18. (1664)

The motto of the family of Sir Walter Raleigh was an old Latin phrase, "Mallem mori quam mutare" (Rather die than change).

<sup>12</sup> I dare not say obstinate least you gentlewomen shoulde take pepper in the nose, when I put but salt to your mouthes.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 375. (1580)

<sup>13</sup> Obstnacy and heat of opinion are the surest proof of stupidity. Is there anything so assured, resolved, disdainful, contemplative, solemn, and serious, as an ass? (L'obstination et ardeur d'opinion est la plus seure preuve de bestise: est il rien certain, resolu, desdaigneux, contemplatif, grave, serieux, comme l'asne?)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1595) The modern French proverb is, "C'est une tête de mulet," or "Être têtue comme un mulet." The he-mule, not the she-mule!

<sup>14</sup> I am naturally as obstinate as a Pig.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1865)

Obstinate as a mule, stubborn as a bull-dog. (Têtue comme une mule, tenace comme une pieuvre.)

MAX O'RELL, John Bull et Son Ile, l. 11. (1890)
O'Rell uses the feminine.

She's as obstinate as a mule.

MARGERY ALLINGHAM, Black Plumes, p. 26 (1940) On p. 138, "Obstinate as a pig."

NGAIO MARSH, Colour Scheme, p. 263. (1943)

You can be as obstinate as a mule.

H. G. WELLS, You Can't Be too Careful, p. 263. (1942)

STUBBORN AS A MULE, see under STUBBORNNESS.

<sup>15</sup> Swine, women, and bees cannot be turned.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 138. (1673)

<sup>1</sup> Obstinate oxen waste their strength. (Niu yao sun li.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2671. (1875)

<sup>2</sup> He that will to Cupar, maun to Cupar.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 42. (1816)
Of an obstinate person.

<sup>3</sup> They will be neither to haud nor to bind now.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 15. (1824)

The old lady was neither to hold nor bind.

D. M. MOIR, Mansie Wauch. Ch. 22. (1824)

<sup>4</sup> He can never be good that is not obstinate.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 126. (c. 1570)

OCCASION, see Opportunity

OCCUPATION

See also Business, Profession, Trade

<sup>5</sup> Absence of occupation is not rest.

COWPER, Retirement, l. 623. (1781)

<sup>6</sup> "Let thine occupations be few," saith the sage, "if thou wouldst lead a tranquil life." ("ὀλίγα πρήσας," φησὶν, "εἰ μέλλεις εὐθυμήσειν.")

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 24. (c. A. D. 174) Referring to Democritus.

See STOBAEUS, i, 100.

If a man shall wish to live tranquilly let him not engage in many affairs. (Qui tranquille volet vivere, nec agat multa.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate. Ch. xiii, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 60) Quoting Democritus.

<sup>7</sup> Farewell! Othello's occupation's gone!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 357. (1605)

OCEAN, see Sea

ODDS

<sup>8</sup> The cheapest and by odds the most convenient mode.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Writings, xiv, 234. (1809)

By all odds . . . the most interesting.

W. D. HOWELLS, Venetian Life, p. 50. (1866)

By all odds the best of our troops.

G. W. BAGBY, The Old Virginia Gentleman, p. 152. (1883)

<sup>9</sup> It makes no odds.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 13. (1844)

There, it's no odds.

T. A. GUTHRIE, The Tinted Venus. Ch. 8. (1885)

What's the odds?

BESANT, Children of Gibeon, i, ix. (1886)

<sup>10</sup> In euill there is ods.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 55. (1633)

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 197. (1639)

"There's odds in Gossips," says an old adage.

JOHN WOLCOT, Works (1801), v, 44. (1797)

There are odds in all things.

Notes and Queries, iii, vi, 494. (1864)

<sup>11</sup> Implore, adore, thow indeflore,
To mak our oddis evyne.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, Poems, lxxxv, 56. (c. 1510)
Death . . . makes these odds all even.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 1, 41. (1604)

Death . . . makes the odds all even.

W. M. PRAED, Poems (1864), ii, 171. (a. 1839)

<sup>12</sup> Two is to meyne, the prouerbe douth tell.

JOHN PICKERING, The Historye of Horestes, l. 78. (1567)

Twoe to one is odds.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, i, t24. (1616)

Three to one is odds.

EDMUND GAYTON, Don Quixot, p. 220. (1654)

Two to one be odds at football.

FRANCK; Northern Memoirs, p. 80. (1658)

Two to one is ods. Noli pugnare duobus [Nobody can fight two people], Catull. & Ne Hercules quidem adversus duos [Not even Hercules against two]. It's no uncomely thing to give place to multitude. . . . Hercules was too little for the Hydra and Cancer together.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 151. (1670)

[He] concluded that one at a time was sufficient, that two to one were odds.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. iii, ch.12. (1742)

OFFENCE

<sup>13</sup> The Multitude of Offenders is their Protection.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.4680. (1732)

<sup>14</sup> The offender never pardons.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 563. (1640)

Who offends, ne'er forgives. (Chi offende non perdona mai.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 176. (1666)

Forgiveness to the injur'd does belong,

But they ne'er pardon who have done the wrong.

DRYDEN, The Conquest of Granada. Pt. ii, act i, sc. 2. (1672)

He that does you a very ill Turn, will never forgive you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2085. (1732)

He who is the Offender, is never the Forgiver.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2393.

Since you wrong'd me, you never had a good Thought of me.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4176.

Offenders never pardon.

MRS. BANKS, Manchester Man. Ch. 45. (1876)

See also under INJURY.

<sup>15</sup> None is offended but by himself.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 658. (1640) From the Latin, "Nemo laeditur nisi a seipso" (No man is hurt but by himself).

<sup>16</sup> Sanctify the Lord of hosts himself; . . . And he shall be for a sanctuary; but for a stone of stumbling and for a rock of offence to both the houses of Israel. (In lapidem autem offensionis, et in petram scandali.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, viii, 14. (c. 725 B. C.)

A stumbling-stone and rock of offence. (τῷ λίθῳ τοῦ προσκόμματος.)

New Testament: Romans, ix, 33. (c. A. D. 57)

Also I Peter, ii, 8.

The Scripture calleth Christ himselfe the stone of offence.

JOHN DAUS, tr., Sleidanus Commentaries, p. 31. (1560)

<sup>1</sup> To spare the person, but to denounce the offence. (Parcere personis, dicere de vitiis.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 33. (A. D. 93)

In publick reproving of sinne, he [the faithful minister] ever whips the vice, and spares the person.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. ii, ch. 9. (1642)

She hugg'd the offender and forgave th' offence.

DRYDEN, Cymon and Iphigenia, l. 367. (1700)

How shall I lose the sin, yet keep the sense,

And love th' offender, yet detest th' offence?

POPE, Eloisa to Abelard, l. 191. (1717)

He lashed the vice, but spared the name.

SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 523. (1731)

I hate the sinner. But what a warming sin.

OGDEN NASH, Nevertheless. (1938)

<sup>2</sup> What dire offence from am'rous causes springs.

POPE, The Rape of the Lock. Canto i,l.1.(1712)

<sup>3</sup> You may safely offend against him who offends first. (Impune pecces in eum qui peccat prior.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 281. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> That is well spoken that is well taken.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 134. (1678)

There were no ill Language, if it were not ill taken.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4945. (1732)

The best known form is, "No offence taken where none is meant."

Offence is usually taken where offence is meant.

A. W. WARD, Life of Dickens. Ch. 3. (1882)

<sup>5</sup> Let many causes of offence pass by us unnoticed. (Multae nos injuriae transeant.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, sec. 11. (c. A. D. 55)

Neither give offence to others, nor take offence from them.

ST. AMBROSE, Letter to St. Augustine. (c. A. D. 390) See TAYLOR, Ductor Dubitantium, i,l. 5.

A wise man avoideth offence, as sugar melteth in water.

SADI, Pand Namah (Scroll of Wisdom). Sec. 16. (c. 1260) Wollaston, tr.

<sup>6</sup> O, my offence is rank, it smells to heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 3, 36. (1600)

Where the offence is, let the great axe fall.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 5, 218. (1600)

<sup>7</sup> Heaven send thou hast not got the Hypps

SWIFT, Cassinus and Peter, l. 35. (1731)

No offence, I hope.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>8</sup> There are offences given; and offences taken, but not given.

ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler: To the Reader. (1650)

<sup>9</sup> He thereupon took pet, and so did die.

UNKNOWN, New Help to Discourse, p. 252. (1669)

But at his naming of the net,

Venus had certainly took pet.

THOMAS D'URFHEY, Stories Moral and Comical, p. 57. (1709)

OFFER

<sup>10</sup> Fair offer no cause of feud.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 109. (1721)

A fair offer, Jeanie, is nae cause of feud.

SCOTT, Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 26. (1818)

<sup>11</sup> It is a common saying, To offer much to him that asketh but a little, is a kinde of deniall.

MABBE, tr., Celestina (T.T.), p. 116. (1631)

To proffer much is a kind of deniall.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 176. (1666)

<sup>12</sup> Never refuse a good offer.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 136. (1670)

I shall never refuse a fair offer.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 21. (1824)

OFFICE

See also Place

<sup>13</sup> Each office has its burden. (ἀπαντ' ἐπαχθή.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus, l. 49. (c. 470 B. C.)

Office shows the man. (ἀρχὴ ἄνδρα δεικνυσιν.)

BIAS, Aphorism. (c. 700 B. C.) Quoted by

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. v, ch. 1,

sec. 16. DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus, bk. i, sec. 77, attributes the saying to Pittacus. (c.

675 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 76, with the Latin, "Magistratus virum indicat."

and the comment that it derives from the lines of Sophocles given below, but of course it is much older.

It is no easy matter to discern

The temper of a man, his mind and will,

Till he be proved by exercise of power.

(ἀμύχανον δὲ παντός ἀνδρός ἐκμαθεῖν ψυχὴν τε καὶ φρόνημα καὶ γνώμην, πρὶν ἂν ἀρχαῖς τε καὶ νόμοις ἐντριβῆς φανῇ.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 175. (c. 441 B. C.)

Not only does the office distinguish the man, but also the man the office. (οὐ μόνον ἀρχὴ ἄνδρα δεικνυσιν ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀρχὴν ἀνὴρ.)

EPAMINONDAS, when the Thebans thought to insult him by appointing him telmarch, or collector of garbage. (c. 375 B. C.) Plutarch tells the story, Moralia, 811B.

Virtues are not honored by dignities, but dignities by virtue. (Non virtutibus ex dignitate sed ex virtute dignitatibus honor accedat.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. ii,

ch. 6. (A. D. 524)

The magistrate and the office discover the man.
(Le magistrat et l'office decouvrent l'homme.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. (1533)

THE PLACE SHOWS THE MAN, see under PLACE.

<sup>1</sup> An honest official has no fat subordinates.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. xli. (1938)

A Chinese proverb.

If you wish to eat the food of an official, you must be born with the teeth of an official.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 371.

<sup>2</sup> If you are capable of displaying energy, hold office; if not, resign.

CHOU JÊN, an ancient Chinese historiographer.

Cited by CONFUCIUS, Analecfs, xvi, i, 6. (c. 500 B. C.) Giles, tr.

<sup>3</sup> The administration of the government, like the office of a trustee, must be conducted for the benefit of those entrusted to one's care, not of those to whom it is entrusted. (Ut enim tutela, sic procuratio rei publicae ad eorum utilitatem, qui commissi sunt, non ad eorum, quibus commissa est, gerenda est.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 25, sec. 85. (c. 45 B. C.)

All political power is a trust.

CHARLES JAMES FOX, Speech, 1788.

The very essence of a free government consists in considering offices as public trusts, bestowed for the good of the country, and not for the benefit of an individual or a party.

JOHN C. CALHOUN, Speech, 13 Feb., 1835.

The phrase, "public office is a public trust," has of late become common property.

CHARLES SUMNER, Speech, U.S. Senate, 31 May, 1872. The phrase was adopted as the slogan for Grover Cleveland's presidential campaign in 1884.

Public officials are the trustees of the people.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Letter Accepting Nomination for Mayor of Buffalo, 1881.

<sup>4</sup> A most wretched custom is our electioneering and scrambling for office. (Misserima omnino est ambitio honorumque contentio.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 25, sec. 87. (c. 45 B. C.)

This office-seeking is a disease. It is even catching.

GROVER CLEVELAND, Interview, in 1885. See NEVINS, Grover Cleveland, p. 235.

The trouble is there are too many pigs for the teats.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, referring to the rush of would-be office-holders to Washington after his inauguration in 1861.

He will remember me, because I was the person who did not ask for an office.

MARK TWAIN, when sending greeting to ex-President Grant. (c. 1880)

What are we here for, except the offices?

WEBSTER FLANAGAN, Remark, at the national Republican convention, in 1880. Flanagan headed the delegation from Texas. See Dict. Amer. Biog., vi, 453; also The Nation, 10 June, 1880.

<sup>5</sup> Offices are given, but not discretion.

JOHN FLORIO, First Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Offices may well be given, but not discretion.

Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 116. (1629)

<sup>6</sup> I shall never ask, never refuse, nor ever resign an office.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. (1798)
Few die and none resign.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to a Committee of Merchants of New Haven, 12 July, 1801.
What Jefferson really wrote was, "If a due participation of office is a matter of right, how are vacancies to be obtained? Those by death are few: by resignation, none."

<sup>7</sup> Jack in an Office is a great Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3050. (1732)
See under JACK.

<sup>8</sup> They that buy an Office, must sell something.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4975. (1732)

The Germans say, "Aunt ohne Gold macht Diebe" (Unpaid offices make thieves).

<sup>9</sup> Every time I bestow a vacant office I make a hundred discontented persons and one ingrate. (Toutes les fois que je donne une place vacante, je fais cent mécontents et un ingrat.)

LOUIS XIV. (c. 1680) See VOLTAIRE, Siècle de Louis XIV.

No man who ever held the office of President would congratulate a friend on obtaining it. He will make one man ungrateful, and a hundred his enemies, for every office he bestows.

JOHN ADAMS, Remark, in 1824, when his son, John Quincy Adams, was elected to the Presidency. (1824) See QUINCY, Figures of the Past, p. 74

Befriend: To make an ingrate.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

<sup>10</sup> In being out of office I am out of danger.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A New Way to Pay Old Debts. Act ii, sc. 1. (1633)

<sup>11</sup> The insolence of office.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 73. (1600)

Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar? . . . And the creature run from the cur? There thou might'st behold the great image of authority: a dog's obeyed in office.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 6, 159. (1605)

<sup>12</sup> I would I could do a good office between you.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 1, 102 (1601)

He suspects Father Talbot hath donne him some ill office.

SIR MARMADUKE LANGDALE, in Nicholas Papers, iii, 128. (1655)

<sup>13</sup> It is a life that I have desired: I will thrive.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 3, 22. (1601) Drawer of liquor at an inn.

He hath a good office, he must needs thrive.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 263. (1678)

1 Speake to them; of mine office he shall haue a cast.

NICOLAS UDALL, Ralph Roister Doister. Act i, sc. 4. (a. 1553)

Boreas with his swelling cheekes shewed a caste of his office.

GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, sig. N1. (1577)

The Devil gives him a cast of his Office.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 79. (1666)

A cast of your office, or a touch of your employment.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. H8. (1690)

OIL

2 Pour vinegar and oil into the same cruse and thou wilt say that, as foes, they keep asunder. (ὄξος τ' ἀλειφά τ' ἐγχεῖας ταύτῃ κύτει | διχοστατοῦντ' ἄν, οὐ φιλῶ, προσενέποις.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 322. (458 B.C.)

3 He wasted both toil and oil. (Et operam et oleum perdidisse.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. vii, epis. i, sec. 3. (55 B.C.) Cicero is speaking of Pompey and of gladiators, and the wasted oil was not only midnight oil, but the rubbing oil used in the training schools.

They were like to lese bothe worke and oyle.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, sig. 35b. (a. 1548)

None . . . shall thinke his oyle & labour lost.

THOMAS NEWTON, tr., Touchstone of Complexions: Epistle. (1576)

4 He that measureth oil besmeares his fingers. (Qui mesure l'huile il s'en oingt les mains.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Huile. (1611)

He that measureth oil shall anoint his fingers

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 126. (1670)

5 Worth our Braines, and Midnight Oyle.

GEORGE DANIEL, Trinarchodia, p. 16. (1650)

Whence is thy learning? Hath thy toil

O'er books consumed the midnight oil?

JOHN GAY, Fables: Intro., l. 16. (1727)

I trimm'd my lamp, consum'd the midnight oil.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Elegies. Eleg. xi, st. 7. (1758)

6 Oyle, yron, and Salt, be royall marchandise. (Oglio, ferro, e sale, mercantia regale.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

7 I forget the punishment for compassing the death of the Heir Apparent. . . . Something lingering, with boiling oil in it I fancy.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii. (1885)

Something lingering, with boiling oil in it.

J. J. CONNINGTON, The Four Defences, p. 216. (1940)

A turn or two of the thumbscrew and a spot of boiling oil to top off with.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Corpse with the Eerie Eye, p. 188. (1942)

8 Now throw in your verses, that is, throw oil on the fire. (Adde poemata nunc, hoc est, oleum adde camino.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. iii, l. 321. (30 B.C.)

A play upon the midnight oil which was consumed while the verses were being written.

For wyn and youthe doon Venus encrece,

As men in fyr wol casten oile or grece.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Phisiciens Tale, l. 60. (1386)

You quench fire with oil. (Oleo incendium resingere.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 10. (1523)

There were also certaine other malicious and busye persones who added Oyle . . . to the Furnace.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, 820. (a. 1548)

And, after the proverb, we put oil to the fire.

THOMAS INCELAND, The Disobedient Child. (c. 1550) See HAZLITT, Old English Plays, ii. 280.

As the common saying is, powred oyle vpon the fyre.

JOHN DAUS, tr., Sleidanus Commentaries, p. 229. (1560)

Have oyle to coale their furious flames.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 240. (1576)

To my flaming wrath be oil and flax.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, v, 2, 55. (1590)

Oil and fire, too strong for reason's force.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, v, 3, 7. (1602)

Bring oil to fire, snow to their colder moods.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 2, 82. (1605)

This is the way to kindle, not to quench.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iii, 1, 196. (1607)

That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, i, 4, 4. (1609)

To cast oil in the fire is not the way to quench it.

JOHN CLARKE, Paraemiologia, p. 167. (1639)

Cited by RAY, p. 126, and FULLER, No. 5142

Serving only like oil to the flame.

WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 4. (1822)

A dear method of quenching fire by pouring oil on it.

CARLYLE, The Early Kings of Norway. (1875)

TO ADD FUEL TO THE FIRE, see under FIRE.

9 You carry oil in your ear. (Ferre oleum in auricula.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, No. 77. (c. A. D. 90)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 63. You incline your ear to great men as though you carried oil in it.

10 All seas are made smooth by oil. (Omne oleo tranquillari.)

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. ii, ch. 107, sec. 234. (c. A. D. 77)

Why does pouring oil on the sea make it still and calm? Is it because the winds, slipping over the smooth oil, have no force, nor cause any waves?

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Quaestiones Naturales. Sec. 12. (c. A. D. 95)

Remember to throw into the sea the oil which I give to you, when straightway the winds will abate, and a calm and smiling sea will accompany you throughout your voyage.

VENERABLE BEDE, Ecclesiastical History. Bk. iii, ch. 15. Hence the expression, "To throw oil on troubled waters," i. e. to smooth matters over.

D'Israeli poured oil and calmed the waters.

W. B. BARING, in Croker Papers, iii, xxv, 103. (1847)

Campion . . . trying to pour oil on the troubled waters.

KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 4. (1855)

His wife . . . would throw oil on the waters.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend, Bk. iii, ch. 12. (1864)

Mrs. Grantly . . . strove to change the subject, and threw oil upon the waters.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Last Chronicle of Barset. Bk. ii, ch. 13. (1867)

Striving to oil the troubled waters.

O. HENRY, The Friendly Call. (1910)

He makes helpless and pathetic attempts at pouring oil on all the troubled waters.

ANTHONY BOUCHER, The Case of the Seven Sneezes, p. 105. (1942)

1 God hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness. (Unxit te Deus tuus oleo laetitiae.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xlv, 7. (c. 350 B. C.)

Enoynt with oyl of charite.

RICHARD ROLLE OF HAMPOLE, Psalter, cxxvii. (a. 1430)

The sweet oyle of remembraunce.

SIR THOMAS ELYOT, The Governour, Bk. iii, ch. 25. (1531)

A little oyle of favour will scour thee agen.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Martial Soldier Act iii, sc. 3. (1638)

He had so furbished the sword of Justice with the Oyle of Mercy.

JOHN TRAPP, Commentary on Job, xxix, 25. (1657)

His wants are supplied by the oil of his tongue.

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book. Vol. ii, col. 835. (1781)

2 His verses smelled more of wine than oil. (Ses carmes sentoyent plus le vin que l'huile.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua: Prologe de l'Auteur. (1534)

I will glory as much when it is said of me that I have spent more on wine than oil, as did Demosthenes, when it was told him that his expense on oil was greater than on wine. (Et prendray autant à gloire qu'on die de moy, que plus en vin aye despendu que en huyle, que fist Demosthenes, quand de luy on disoit, que plus en huyle que en vin despendoit.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua: Prologe de l'Auteur.

3 To SMELL OF THE OIL, see under LAMP.

When the oil is exhausted the lamp goes out (Yu kan têng hsi.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 928. (1875)

Without oil a lamp can give no light.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2579.

4 A greet deal of hem . . . hilde up the kynges oyl.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Polychronicon, iii, 447. (1387) To hold up oil: to use flattering speech.

Prophetes false manye mo To bere up oil.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis, iii, 172. (1390)

OMEN

See also Superstition

5 You call an ass a bird. (ὄνον ὀρνιθ.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 721. (414 B. C.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vii, 23, gives the Latin as "Asinus avis." Aristophanes is ridiculing the diviners, who call everything—a sneeze, a rumor, a servant—a bird, that is, an omen.

6 Certain signs precede certain events, and these are given sometimes by entrails and by birds, sometimes by lightnings, by stars, and by dreams. (Certis rebus certa signa praecurrerent.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. i, ch. 52. (44 B. C.)

Claudius has "In coelo nunquam spectatam impune cometam" (A comet is never seen in heaven without implying disaster).

There is something in omens. (Omina sunt aliquid.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 12, l. 3. (c. 13 B. C.)

The proverbial phrase is, "Absit omen" (May the omen be averted).

Nay I have had some Omens: I got out of Bed backwards too this Morning, . . . then I stumbled coming down Stairs, and met a Weasel; bad Omens those.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 2. (1695)

The salt is spilt, to me it fell.

Then to contribute to my loss,

My knife and fork were laid across,

On Friday too! the day I dread!

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Farmer's Wife and the Raven. Ser. i, fab. 37. (1727)

7 You rose on your right side.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Thou rose not on thy right side.

JOHN STILL (?), Gammer Gurton's Needle Act ii, sc. 1. (c. 1565)

We rose on the wrong side.

BEN JONSON, A Tale of a Tub. Act iv, sc. 3. (1633)

You rose o' the wrong side today it seemes.

BROME, The Court Beggar. Act ii. (1653)

Certain I rise with the right end upward today, I have had such good luck!

JOHN WILSON, The Projectors. Act i. (1665)

Sure I rose the wrong way today. I have such damned ill luck.

APHRA BEHN, Town-Fop. Act v, sc. 1. (1676)

Thou art angry this morning . . . hast risen from thy wrong side, I think.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 20. (1824)

Thou's gotten out at wrang side o' the bed, i. e. thou art peevish and ill-tempered.

WILLIAM CARR, Dialect of Craven, i, 29. (1828)

<sup>1</sup> Do not be a bird of ill-omen in my halls. (μηδέ μοι αὐτῇ | ὄρνις ἐν μεγάροισι κακὸς πέλει.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 218. (c. 850 B.C.)
See under RAVEN.

<sup>2</sup> Under evil omens. (Mala avi.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, Ode 15, l. 5. (23 B.C.)

"With good omens; with bad omens" (Bonis avibus; malis avibus), were proverbs, which ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 75, noted. Literally the phrase means "With good birds, with bad birds," because the Romans took many omens or auguries from birds.

Among the Romans, not a bird
Without a prophecy, was heard;
Fortunes of empires often hung
On the magician magpie's tongue,
And every crow was to the state
A sure interpreter of fate.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. i, l. 73. (1761)

<sup>3</sup> The twitching of my eyebrow tells me. (Ita supercilium salit.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 107. (c. 195 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> Who luik to freits [omens], my master deir, Freits will ay follow them.

UNKNOWN, Adam o' Gordon. (c. 1700) See PINKERTON, Select Scottish Ballads, i, 49.

He that follows freits, freits will follow him. He that notices superstitious observations (such as spilling of salt) it will fall to him accordingly.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 128. (1721)

Freits follow those who look to them.

MUNGO PARK, in LOCKHART, Scott. Ch. 13.

ONCE

<sup>5</sup> Once is enough. (Semel satis est.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum Bk. xiii, epis. 52. (45 B.C.)

Once: Enough

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

<sup>6</sup> The finished man of the world must eat of every apple once.

R. W. EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Culture (1860) Compare "Try anything once."

I am willing to taste any drink once.

JAMES BRANCH CABELL, Jurgen. Ch. 1. (1919)

<sup>7</sup> Once Aboard the Luggar.

A. S. M. HUTCHINSON. Title of novel. (1908)

"This book," the author explained, "has its title from that dashing sentiment, 'Once aboard the luggar and the girl is mine.'"

"Once aboard the luggar," or once alone in the drawing-room.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 48. (1940)

<sup>8</sup> Once out and always out.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 57. (1678)

Once, and use it not.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 263.

<sup>9</sup> Never but once at a wedding.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 263. (1678)

Once at a coronation.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 263.

Never.: Did you ever see the like?

Miss: Never, but once at a wedding.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>10</sup>

I the forsake and from the go,

For onys, evyr, and ay.

UNKNOWN, Coventry Mysteries, xii, 118. (c. 1450)

We oughte to ask it of hym ones for all.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of Aymon, xix, 403. (c. 1489)

Ones for alwayes I defende thee.

BERNERS, tr., Froissart, Bk. ii, ch. 36. (1525)

Once for altogether.

UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, fo. 275b. (1542)

[They] have cleared the question once for ever.

EARL OF MONMOUTH, tr., Advertisements from Parnassus, p. 100. (1656)

ONE

<sup>11</sup>

To make one out of many. (Ex pluribus unum facere.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. iv, ch. 8, last words. (A. D. 397) "E pluribus unum" (From many one) is the motto of the United States. adopted 1777.

<sup>12</sup>

By one consider all. (Ex uno omnia spectat.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 78. (1508)

TAVERNER, tr., fo. 12. (1550) Taverner adds "That is to say, of the profe of one thyng. conjecture the reste. Of a pece of mennes procedynges, gesse the resydue." Erasmus gives the Greek as ἐξ ἑνὸς τὰ πάντα θ' ὄρα.

<sup>13</sup>

One in heart as we are one in name. (ἴσον θυμὸν ἔχοντες ὁμόνομοι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 720. (c. 850 B.C.)

One for all, or all for one we gage.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 144. (1594)

All for one, one for all. (Tous pour un, un pour tous.)

ALEXANDRE DUMAS, Les Trois Mousquetaires Ch. 9. Dictated by D'Artagnan and repeated by his three friends.

All for Each, and each for All.

EDMUND VANCE COOK, Each for All. (1917)

Remember the motto of the Three Musketeers

MARY LASSWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p. 120 (1942)

<sup>14</sup>

One is more than a multitude.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act v. (1601)

<sup>15</sup>

One no number is.

MARLOWE, Hero and Leander. Sest. v. (1598)

Number can ne're consist of less than two.

RICHARD BRATEWAIT, Natures Embassie, p. 268 (1621)

One body is no body.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 44. (1639)

One and none is all one.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1670)

One's as good as none.

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 953. (1681)
One is none, two is some, three is a sort, four is a mort.

EDWARD MOOR, Suffolk Words, p. 236. (1823)

ONE MAN, NO MAN, see under MAN.

'Tis very careful of number one, and looks no further.

THOMAS PITT, in HEDGES, Diary, iii, 99. (1704)

Number one, one's self, one's own interests.

We always take care of number one.

MARRYAT, Frank Mildmay. Ch. 19. (1829)

He had an eye awake to number one.

JOHN GALT, Lawrie Todd. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1830)

I do not see my way clearly, beyond humbly trying to reform Number one.

CHARLES DARWIN, Life and Letters, i, 369. (1849)

Almost every person . . . is occupied about Number One.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 56. (1850)

Number 1 is the first house in the row.

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 151. (1869)

One, two, three four, are just half a score.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 86. (1678)

One's too few, three too many.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 342.

We are one people and will act as one. (Wir sind ein Volk, und einig wollen wir handeln.)

SCHILLER, Wilhelm Tell. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 258.

ONION

He certainly knew his onions.

GEORGETTE HEYER, No Wind of Blame, p. 245. (1939)

They flock to him because he knows his onions.

ETHEL L. WHITE, The Man Who Was Not There, p. 79. (1943)

It may serve with an onion.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 1. (1659)

It will do with an onion

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 214. (1670)

Whenever you have eaten the strong-smelling shoots of Tarentine leeks, give kisses with shut mouth. (Fila Tarentini graviter redolentia porri | edisti quotiens, oscula clusa dato.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xiii, epig. 18. (A. D. 93)

Well loved he garleek, oynons, and eek lekes.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 634 (c. 1386)

Let onion atoms lurk within the bowl,
And, half-suspected, animate the whole.

SYDNEY SMITH. (a. 1845) See LADY HOLLAND, Memoir.

The [Egyptian] priests keep themselves clear of the onion, because it is the only plant that thrives in the waning of the moon. It is suitable neither for fasting nor festival, hecause in the one case it causes thirst, and in the other tears for those who partake of it.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Isis and Osiris. Sec. 353F. (C. A. D. 95) See also AULUS GELLIUS. Bk. xx, ch. 8.

An onion will do well for such a shift [to produce tears].

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew: Induction, i, 126. (1594) See under TEARS: CROCODILE TEARS.

If thou hast not a capon, feed on an onion.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1678)

OPINION

My sister gives it as a horseback opinion.

ANDY ADAMS, Log of a Cowboy, p. 72. (1903)

First learn, then form opinions.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 63a. (c. 450) Also Berachoth, fo. 63b.

Winnowed opinions.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 201. (1600)

You all spit the same spittle.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 99b. (c. 450) Also Niddah, fo. 42a. You all have the same opinions.

He adopts the opinion of others like a monk in the Sorbonne. (Il opine du bonnet comme un moine en Sorbonne.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Lettres Provinciales. No. 2 (1656)

Opinion! which on crutches walks,
And sounds the words another talks.

DAVID LLOYD, The Poet, l. 55. (c. 1792)

An illogical opinion only requires rope enough to hang itself.

AUGUSTINE BIRRELL, Obiter Dicta: The Via Media. (1884)

No well-informed person has declared a change of opinion to be inconstancy. (Nemo doctus unquam mutationem consilii inconstantiam dixit esse.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xvi, epis. 7. (44 B. C.)
Reminiscent of the Latin proverb, "Prudentis est mutare consilium" (It is natural for a wise man to change his opinion).

The man who never alters his opinion is like standing water, and breeds reptiles of the mind.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

Those who never retract their opinions love themselves more than they love truth. (Ceux qui ne se rétractent jamais s'aiment plus que la vérité.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 161. (1810)

The deep slumber of a decided opinion.

JOHN MILL, On Liberty. (1859) Quoting from Thoughts for the Cloister and the Crowd, p. 21.

The foolish and dead alone never change their opinion.

LOWELL, My Study Windows: Lincoln. (1871)

Loyalty to petrified opinion never yet broke a chain or freed a human soul.

MARK TWAIN, Inscribed beneath his bust in the Hall of Fame. (a. 1910)

Ah, snug lie those who slumber
Beneath Conviction's roof.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Lament for a Wavering Viewpoint. (1940)

Convictions are opinions which circumstances have temporarily backed.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 143. (1940)

1
Opinion says hot and cold, but the reality is atoms and empty space. (νόμος ψυχρόν, νόμος θερμόν, ἑτεῖν δὲ ἄτομα καὶ κενόν.)

DEMOCRITUS, Apothegm. (c. 400 B.C.) See
DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pyrrho. Bk. ix, sec. 72.
Democritus was declared a sceptic because of this apothegm

2
The opinion of one man is not as good as that of a thousand.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 682. (1872)

3
Every opinion reacts on him who utters it.
EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. (1841)

4
If all men judged alike of honor and of wisdom, there would be no differences of opinion among them. (εἰ πᾶσι ταῦτὸ καλὸν ἔφν σοφόν θ' ἄμα, οὐκ ἦν ἂν ἀμφίλεκτος ἀνθρώποις ἔρις.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenician Maidens, l. 499. (c. 420 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 7.

A difference of opinion, though in the merest trifles, alienates little minds

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

The only sin which we never forgive in each other is difference of opinion.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Clubs. (1870)
When opinions agree, the most distant unite in friendship; when they disagree, the nearest relations will be enemies.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 283. (1872)
It were not best that we should all think alike; it is difference of opinion that makes horse-races.

TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar. (1893)
I see we have a difference of opinion. That's what makes a horse-race.

FRANK GRUBER, The Navy Colt, p. 23. (1941)
We have a difference of opinion, it seems. That's what makes a lawsuit.

FRANK GRUBER, The Gift Horse, p. 77. (1942)
Differences of opinion make horse races and lawsuits.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Drowsy Mosquito, p. 157. (1943)

5
Our own Opinion is never wrong.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3824. (1732)

6
Men will die for an opinion as soon as for anything else.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 118. (1823)
The mind revolts against certain opinions as the stomach rejects certain foods.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 136.

7
Weening is not measure.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 812. (1640)
Some men plant an opinion they seem to eradicate.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1155.

8
That man is best who considers everything for himself. (οὗτος μὲν πανάριστος, δὲ αὐτὸς πάντα νοήσῃ φρασσάμενος.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 293. (c. 800 B.C.)
Stay at home in your mind. Don't recite other people's opinions.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Social Aims (1875)

9
A man's opinions, look you, are generally of much more value than his arguments.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 5. (1860)

10
Consenting against his will. (ἐκὼν ἀκούει γὰρ θυμῷ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iv, l. 43. (c. 850 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vii, 82, with the Latin, "Volens nolente animo." Hence, "Nolens volens."

Unwilling and yet willing. (ὁ δ' οὐ θέλων τε καὶ θέλων.)

EURIPIDES, Hecuba, l. 566. (c. 425 B.C.)
Persuade me you may, but I won't be persuaded. (οὐ γὰρ πείσεις, οὐδ' ἦν πείσῃς.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 600. (388 B.C.)

Hold a man back against his will, and you incite him to go. (Invitum cum retineas, exire incites.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 271. (c. 43 B.C.)

He that complies against his will,
Is of his own opinion still.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto iii, l. 547. (1678) Often misquoted, "A man convinced against his will."

One may be confuted and yet not convinced.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3771. (1732)
Men may be convinced, but they cannot be pleased, against their will.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, iii, 159. (c. 1776)
In spite of facts and logic, you're of the same opinion still.

O. R. COHEN, Sound of Revelry, p. 69. (1943)

11
Error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1801.

12
He that speers [asks] all opinions comes ill speed. Because their different advices will confuse and distract him.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 167. (1721)
That's but one doctor's opinion.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 335.

13
How long halt ye between two opinions?
(Usquequo claudicatis in duas partes?)

Old Testament: 1 Kings, xviii, 21. (c. 600 B.C.)

<sup>1</sup> Often from chance opinion springs; and opinion always makes the fashion. (C'est souvent du hasard que naît l'opinion; | Et c'est l'opinion qui fait toujours la vogue.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vii, fab. 15. (1678)

Theodore Jouffroy is credited with the epigram, "Opinions are like fashions, beautiful when new, ugly when discarded."

New opinions are always suspected, and usually opposed, without any other reason, but because they are not already common.

JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding: Dedictory Epistle. (1690)

<sup>2</sup> Be not lyght to follow every mans opinion, nor obstinate to stande in thine owne conceipt.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 40. (1579)

<sup>3</sup> I see thee as often change thy Head as others do their Hats.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 323. (1580)

Some praise at morning what they blame at night, But always think the last opinion right.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 230. (1709)

His opinions were as pliant as his bows.

<sup>4</sup> Men are never so good or so bad as their opinions.

SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH, Ethical Philosophy. Sec. 6. (1830)

<sup>5</sup> Men, says an ancient Greek sentence, are tormented by the opinions they have of things, and not by the things themselves. (Les hommes, dict une sentence grecque ancienne, sont tormentez par les opinions qu'ils ont des choses, non par les choses mesmes.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 40. (1580)

<sup>6</sup> Opinion is something wherein I go about to give Reason why all the World should think as I think.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Opinion. (1689)

<sup>7</sup> His own opinion was his law.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iv, 2, 37. (1612)

<sup>8</sup> I have bought Golden opinions from all sorts of people

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 7, 33. (1606)

To win golden opinions; to be very well received. Originally with a reminiscence of [Macbeth].

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clickés: Win. (1941)

<sup>9</sup> Opinion's but a fool, that makes us scan The outward habit by the inward man.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, ii, 2, 56. (1609)

Opinion is the genius, and, as it were, the foundation of all temporal happiness.

OWEN FELTHAM, Resolves: Of Opinion. (1623)

Opinion in good men is but knowledge in the making.

JOHN MILTON, Areopagitica, p. 69. (1644)

Opinion is the great pillar which upholds the commonwealth.

BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 471. (1855)

<sup>10</sup> A plague of opinion! a man may wear it on both sides, like a leather jerkin.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 3, 265. (1601)

<sup>11</sup> The position may be a matter of opinion.

H. B. STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch.15. (1852)

<sup>12</sup> I'm not a rich man, but I never use an opinion twice, if I can help it.

EDITH WHARTON, The Mission of Jane. (1904)

II—Opinion: Public Opinion

<sup>13</sup> The public buys its opinions as it buys its meat, or takes in its milk, on the principle that it is cheaper to do this than to keep a cow. So it is, but the milk is more likely to be watered.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note-Books. (c. 1890)

<sup>14</sup> Popular Opinion is the greatest Lie in the World.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.3899. (1732)

Public opinion is the mixed result of the intellect of the community acting upon general feeling.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 86. (1823)

Public opinion is no more than this.

What people think that other people think.

ALFRED AUSTEN, Prince Lucifer. Act vi, sc. 2.

(c. 1887)

<sup>15</sup> Happy those who are convinced so as to be of the general opinions.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. Works, p. 227. (1693)

<sup>16</sup> When public opinion changes, it is with the rapidity of thought.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Charles Yancey. (1816)

Public opinion . . . works by contagion, and swiftly seizes a great number of men.

TOLSTOY, The Kingdom of God Is Within You (1893)

<sup>17</sup> When the people have no other tyrant, their own public opinion becomes one.

LYTTON, Ernest Maltravers. Bk. vi, ch. 5. (1837)

<sup>18</sup> It is but opinion, and that must be the worlds master alwayes.

GERVASE MARKHAM, The English Hus-wife, p. 70. (1615)

It is not now onely that opinion governs the world.

SIR RICHARD BAKER, tr., Letters of Monsieur Balzac, ii, 96. (1638)

Opinion can do much, and indeed she is that great lady which rules the world.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. ii, let. 39. (2 Jan., 1646)

Opinion is the queen of the world. (L'opinion est la reine du monde.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. v, No. 311. (c.

1660) Referred to by Pascal as the title of an Italian piece, "Della opinione regina del mondo."

Opinion governs all mankind,
Like the blind's leading of the blind.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 267. (1670) The first line repeated in Remains, i, 241. (a. 1680)

The good opinion of mankind, like the lever of Archimedes, with the given fulcrum, moves the world.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xiv, p. 222. (c. 1801)

Public opinion is stronger than the Legislature, and nearly as strong as the Ten Commandments.

WARNER, My Summer in a Garden. Gh. 16. (1870)
There is, and always has been, one tremendous ruler of the human race—and that ruler is the combination of the opinions of all . . . which is called public sentiment.

THOMAS B. REED, Speech, Waterville, Maine, 30 July, 1885.

1
The most feare the worlds opinion, more than Gods displeasure.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes of My Morning Worke (1613)

2
There is more safety in men's good opinion than in money. (Bona opinio hominum tutior pecunia est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 75. (c. 43 B. C.)

3
That is true which all men say.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 137. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4363. (1732)
Sometimes varied to "What everyone says must be true."

Where an opinion is general, it is usually correct.

JANE AUSTEN, Mansfield Park. Ch. 11. (1811)
Truth is in the mouth of the people.

HENRYK IBSEN, Lady Inger. Act i. (1854)

4
It is always easy to infringe the law, but the Bedouin of the desert finds it impossible to resist public opinion.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 11 Oct., 1840.

Public opinion is a weak tyrant compared with our own private opinion. What a man thinks of himself, that it is which determines, or rather indicates, his fate.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. (1854)

5
Opinion onely governs fools.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act iii, sc. 4. (1663) "Opinion is the mistress of fools."

III—So Many Men, So Many Opinions

6
For-ty men seyn, ech contree hath his lawes.

CHAUCEUR (?), Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 42. (c. 1380)

Every country has a way of its own. (En cada tierra su uso.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1615)

Every country has its own thought. (Chaque pays a sa pensée.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. ix, fab. 7. (1678)

7
The crooked quirkes of these divers opinyons.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 24. (1574) Pettie, tr.

8
Different men joy in different works. (ἄλλος γὰρ τ' ἄλλοισιν ἀνὴρ ἐπιτέρπεται ἔργοις.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xiv, l. 228. (c. 850 B. C.)

Of gods and men, one chooses this, one that (ἄλλοισιν ἄλλος θεῶν τε καὶ ἀνθρώπων μέλει.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 104. (c. 428 B. C.)

What I want you don't want, what I don't want you hanker after. (Ego volo ea tu non vis; quae nolo ea cupis.)

NAEVIUS, Agilatoria. Frag. 9, Loeb. (c. 220 B. C.)

Not everything is the same to everybody. (Non omnia eadem aequè omnibus.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 641. (c. 200 B. C.)

Men like different things. (Diversos diversa iuvant.)

GALLUS, Elegies, i, 104. (c. 35 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 28, with the French, "Les hommes aiment des choses diverses."

All things are not suited to all men. (Omnia non pariter rerum sunt omnibus apta.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. ix, l. 7. (c. 22 B. C.)

Men are swayed by different aims and hobbies (Aliis alios rebus studiisque teneri.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. i, l. 81. (20 B. C.)

The Latin proverbial form is, "Alia aliis placent" (Different things please different men).

All do not admire and love the same things. (Non omnes eadem mirantur amantque.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 58.

Men are of a thousand kinds, and diverse are the colors of their lives. Each has his own desires; no two men offer the same prayers. (Mille hominum species et rerum discolor usus; | velle suum cuique est, nec voto vivitur uno.)

PERSIUS, Satires Sat. v, l. 52. (C. A. D. 58) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 7.

Every man is not of like minde in like matters

GEORGE PETTIE, Pettie Pallace, p. 196. (1576)

See also under TASTE.

9
So many vaines so many vanities.

GEORGE PETTIE, Pettie Pallace, p. 248. (1576)

So many houses, so many styles. (Autant de maisons, autant de divers styles.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595)

A thousand artisans, a thousand plans. (Ch'ien ko shih fu ch'ien ko fa.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 117. (1875)

Many men, many tongues. (Jên to shê t'ou to.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1019.

Ten men, ten colors.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 439.

(1938) A Japanese proverb.

10
Every one is full of his own opinion. (Chascun abonde en son sens.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 28. (1552)

<sup>1</sup> So many men, so many opinions. (Quot homines, tot sententiae.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 454. (161 B.C.) Terence was perhaps quoting a saying already well established, but this is its first known appearance in the exact form which is still so familiar, and which is usually Englished, "So many men, so many minds." CICERO quotes it, De Finibus, i, 5, 15. ERASMUS cites it, Adagia, i, iii, 7, and it is included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 13, with the rendering, "So many men, so many wyttes. So many heades, so many judgements," the latter phrase recalling the similar Latin proverb, "Quot capita, tot sententiae" (So many heads, so many opinions).

For so many thousand living heads, as many thousand tastes. (Quot capitum vivunt, totidem studiorum milia.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. i, l. 27. (35 B.C.)

As many hedes, as many wyttes ther been.

CHAUCE, The Squieres Tale, l. 195. (c. 1388)

So many heds so many wits.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

Quoted by QUEEN ELIZABETH, Godly Meditation of the Christian Soul. (1548) The French say, "Autant de têtes, autant d'avis," or "Autant de têtes, autant de sentiments"; the Italians, "Tante teste, tanti cervelli"; the Germans, "Viele Köpfe, viele Sinne," or "Tausend Köpfe, tausend Sinne" (A thousand heads, a thousand minds).

So many men, so many mindes.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Glasse of Government.

Act ii, sc. 2. (1575) LYL, Euphues, p. 40. (1579) ROWLANDS, Martin Mark-All, p. 6. (1610) BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus. (1621) L'ESTRANGE, Fables, p. 374. (1692) SALA, Twice Round the Clock, 3 P.M. (1859) etc., etc.

So many men, so many censures.

RICHARD TARTLTON, News Out of Purgatorie, p. 73. (1590) ROBERT GREENE, Mourning Garment. (1616)

So many heads, so many wits, fie, fie,

Is't not a shame for Proverbs thus to lie?

My self, though my acquaintance be but small,

Know many heads that have no wit at all.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remaines Concerning Britaine: On the Proverb, Quot Capita, Tot Sententiae (1870), p. 440. (1605)

So many men so many tastes, all different. (Tantos son los gustos como los rostros, y tan varios.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 101. (1647)

So many persons, so many minds.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, iii, 477. (1753)

As many heads, so many opinions. (Quot capita, tot sensus.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 182. (1778)

Quot homines, tot sententiae, as my old friend Terence remarked.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 24. (1940)

OPPORTUNITY

<sup>2</sup> The opportunity having passed, one may seek [in vain] to seize another.

ANI, Teaching. No. 4. (c. 2000 B.C.) Budge, tr. Opportunity is hard to recover. (Occasio receptus difficiliter habet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 493. (c. 43 B.C.) Opportunity is seldom presented, easily lost. (Occasio aegre offertur, facile amittitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 496.

Once lost, Jupiter himself cannot bring back opportunity. (Elapsum semel non ipse possit Iupiter reprehendere.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 8, l. 4. (c. 25 B.C.) An occasion lost cannot be redeemed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 144. (1678)

There's no catching the fox twice. (ἀλλ' οὐκ αὖθις δλωπήξ.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, ii, 15. (c. A.D. 130)

Opportunities should never be lost, because they can hardly be regained.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 303. (1693)

I knock unbidden once at every gate!

If sleeping, wake—if feasting, rise before

I turn away . . . [for] I return no more!

JOHN JAMES INGALLS, Opportunity. First published in Truth, New York, Feb., 1891.

They do me wrong who say I come no more

For every day I stand outside your door.

WALTER MALONE, Opportunity. First published in Munsey's Magazine, March, 1905, p. 876.

The French say, "Il n'est pas chance qui ne retourne."

It was an opportunity with a capital O, and if she threw it away it would never come back again. Opportunity never knocks twice at any man's door.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, Weekend with Death, p. 200 (1941)

Opportunity knocks but once, and he had allowed it to knock in vain.

P. G. WODEHOUSE, Money in the Bank, p. 157 (1942)

<sup>3</sup> A wise man will make more opportunities than he finds.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Ceremonies and Respects. (1597) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 479. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Fish when near the water, drink when near the spring. (Fische wenn du bei Wasser, trinke wenn du bei Brunnen bist.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 312. (1856)

<sup>5</sup> Make not a balke of good ground.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 328 (1605) A balk is a ridge or piece of ground left unploughed by accident or carelessness. Don't waste a good opportunity. RAY, English Proverbs, p. 58. (1670) DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 6. (1846)

The rich Corinthians, in not inviting the poor, made balks of good ground.

THOMAS FULLER, Joseph's Coat, p. 35. (1640)

Make no baulks in good bearland.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 247. (1721)
Make no Baulks in good Ground.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3316. (1732)

1 Opportunity is whoredom's Bawd.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 329. (1605)

Win Opportunity, She's the best bawd.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Fair Maid of the West. Act i, sc. 3. (1617)

Let him shun Opportunity as his Bawd and Occasion as his Pandar.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, p. 463. (c. 1620)

Time's ancient bawd, Opportunity.

ROWLEY, All's Lost by Lust. Act i. (1633)

Thou strong seducer, Opportunity.

DRYDEN, The Conquest of Granada. Pt. ii, act iv, sc. 3. (1672)

Opportunity is the great bawd.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

2 Hairy in front, Opportunity is bald behind.
(Fronte capillata, post est Occasio calva.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 26. (c.175 B.C.)

I am a goddess seldom found and known to few,
Opportunity my name. I am ever flying. I am bald behind that none may catch me as I flee.
Remorse bears me company. When I have flown away, she is retained by those who did not grasp me as I passed. (Sum dea quae rara et paucis Occasio nota . . . volucris sum . . . ne teneat fugiens . . . Quandoque volavi, haec, Metanoea, manet; hanc retinent, quos ego praeterii.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. Epig. xxxiii. (C. A. D. 370)

Occasion hath all her hair on her forehead; when she is past, you may not recall her; for she is bald in the hind part of her head, and never returneth again. (L'occasion a tous ses cheveux au front, quand elle est oultre passée, vous ne la pouez plus reuocquer, elle est chauue par le der-rière de la teste, & iamaïs plus ne retourne.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 37. (1534)

The goddesse occasyon . . . behinde hathe not one heare.

UNKNOWN, Respublica. Act iii, sc. 6. (1553)

Occasion . . . being balde can not easily be gotten againe if she be once let slip.

PAINTER, Palace of Pleasure, i, 266. (1566)

Take time in time, let no occasion slip, for it is baulde behynde, it cannot be pulled backe agayne by the heare.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 184. (1576)

Occasion . . . turneth a bald Noddle, after she hath presented her locks in front, and no hold taken.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Delays. (1597)

Who lets slip Fortune, her shall never find;

Occasion, once passed by, is bald behind,

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Pyramus and Thisbe. St.
15. (1663)

On Occasion's forelock watchful wait.

MILTON, Paradise Regain'd. Bk. iii. l. 173. (1671)

Occasion is bald behind and is to be grasped by the forelock.

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, Exposition of Ephesians, v, 33. (1909)

TAKE TIME BY THE FORELOCK, see under TIME.

3 If Heaven drops a date, open your mouth.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 355
(1938) A Chinese proverb.

4 Good aventure, O bele nece, have ye
Full lightly founden, and ye conne it take.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 288.
(c. 1380) The first use, perhaps, of "You can take it."

5 A year's opportunities depend on the spring, a day's on the dawn, a family's on harmony, a life's on industry.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B.C.) See TEHYI
HSIEH, Confucius Said It First, p. 85.

6 Though sun and moon be bright, their rays cannot reach under the inverted bowl.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 285. (1872)

7 Observe the opportunity. (Conserua tempus.)
Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, iv, 20. (c. 190 B.C.)
Knowe tyme. (Nosce tempus.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vii, No. 69.
(1508) TAVERNER, tr., fo. 24.

8 Wise men take occasion by the hand,
And let not fortune slip for pleasure's lure.
(σοφῶν γὰρ ἀνδρῶν ταῦτα, μὴ ῥεῖν τῆς τύχης. καὶρὸν λαβόντας, ἥδονὰς ἄλλας λαβεῖν.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigeneia in Taurica, l. 907. (c.
414 B.C.) Way, tr.

Wisdom commands to follow tide and wind.
And catch the front of swift Occasion.

ROBERT GREENE, Selimus. (1594) Works, xiv, 202.

No great man ever complains of want of opportunity.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, v, 534. (c. 1860)

9 Man's extremity is God's opportunity.

JOHN FLAVEL, A Faithful and Ancient Account of Some Late and Wonderful Sea Deliverances. (c. 1680)

WHEN THE TALE OF BRICKS IS DOUBLED, MOSES
COMES, see under MOSES.

10 Keep thou from the Opportunity, and God will keep thee from the sin.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

11 Than catche and holde while I may.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

12 There lepte a whityng (quothe she).

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
A man may . . . leape a whiting, whilst he is looking on a codshead.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, b8. (1597)

To let leap a whiting. i. e. To let slip an opportunity.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 199. (1670)

13 Opportunity is the best moment in the whole extension of time.

JAMES HOWELL, Parley of Beasts, p. 72. (1660)

Opportunity is the cream of time.

W C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 311. (1869)

1 Seek ye the Lord, while he may be found.
(Quaerite Dominum, dum inveniri potest.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lv. 6. (c. 725 B. C.)
Don't let slip the opportunity which the gods provide. (δὲλλὰ μὴ παρῆς | ἃ σοι δίδας' ἐν τοῖς λογίοισιν οἱ θεοί.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 193. (424 B. C.)
Seize the opportunity. (Chien chi êrh tso.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 753. (1875)

2 He who will not when he may, may not when he will. (Quia qui non vult cum potest. non utique poterit cum volet.)

JOHN OF SALISBURY, Policraticus. Bk. viii, cent. 17. (c. 1170) Referred to as a proverb.

Hwo ne deth hwon he mei, he ne schal nout hwon he wolde.

UNKNOWN, Ancren Riwe, p. 296. (a. 1225)

He that wyl nat whan he may,

He shal nat whan he wyl.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 4799. (1303)

That is to say, "Who so will not whan he may, he shal not whan he wille."

JAMES YONGE, tr., The Gouvernauce of Prynces, p. 161. (1422)

I have known many who could not when they would, for they had not done it when they could. (I'en ay veu l'experience en plusieurs: qui ne l'ont peu quand ilz vouloient: car ne l'auoient fait quand le pouoient.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 27. (1545)

The French proverbial form is, "Qui ne fait pas quand il peut, il ne fait pas quand il veut." The Italians say, "Chi non vuol quando e' puote, Non può quando e' vuole."

He that will not whan he may,

Whan he would, he shall haue nay.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, iii, ii, vi, 5. (1621) STEVENSON, Catrina. Ch. 19. (1893)

Who that maie not as they wolde, will as they maie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

No, damsel, he that will not when he may,

When he desires, shall surely purchase nay.

GREENE, Alphonsus. Act v, sc. 3. (c. 1590)

He who would not when he could, is not able when he would.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

3 A man may have wisdom and discernment, but that is not like embracing the favorable opportunity.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (c. 300 B. C.)
Quoted as a proverb.

Oh, what a furious advantage is opportunity!
(Oh! le furieux avantage que l'opportunité.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595)

4 Well didst thou say it, right well, Menander, that Opportunity is a god. (τὸν καιρὸν θεόν.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (C. A. D. 425) See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 52.

5 To seize on high adventure brooks no timid hand. (ὁ μέγας δὲ κίνδυνος ἀναλκιν οὐ φῶτα λαμβάνει.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. Ode i, l. 81. (476 B. C.)

6 Know your opportunity. (καιρὸν γνῶθι.)

PITTACUS, Maxim. (c. 675 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pittacus. Bk. i, sec. 79. The phrase is said to have been inscribed on the temple of Apollo at Delphi. AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 203, also ascribes the saying to Pittacus in the form, γίνωσκε καιρὸν. He cites TERENCE, Andria, l. 758, "Veni in tempore" (I am come in time) as the equivalent of Pittacus' axiom. The Latin is, "Occasionem cognosce."

Opportunity fleets swiftly by. (καιρὸς . . . βραχὺ μέτρον ἔχει.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. Ode iv, l. 286. (462 B. C.)

Time, or opportunity (καιρός) as distinguished from "κρόνος," length of years, was also, like "Occasio," represented as bald behind.

7 Opportunity could not be more opportune. (Opportunitas non potuit opportunius.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 669. (c. 195 B. C.)

8 When fair occasion calls, 'tis fatal to delay.

NICHOLAS ROWE, tr., De Bello Civili. Bk. i. l. 513. (1718)

9 He who neglects an opportunity must not complain afterwards. (Tang ch'ü pu ch'ü, kuou hou mo 'hui.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 737. (1875)

10 You must be not only present in the body but watchful in mind, if you would avail yourself of the fleeting opportunity. (Non tantum praesentis, sed vigilantis est occasionem observare properantem.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxii, sec. 3. (C. A. D. 64)

We must take the current when it serves.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iv, 3, 223. (1599)

The French say, "Il faut prendre la balle au bond" (One must catch the ball on the bounce).

11 Opportunities are seldom labeled.

JOHN A. SHEDD, Salt From My Attic, p. 14. (1928)

12 Opportunity is the best captain of all endeavor. (καιρὸς γάρ, ὅσπερ ἀνδράσιν | μέγιστος ἔργου παντός ἐστ' ἐπιστάτης.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 75. (c. 409 B. C.)

Better far is Opportunity, seized at the lucky hour,

Than all the counsels inspired by wisdom or by craft.

(καιρὸς τοι πάντων γνώμων ἰσχυρὸν πολὺ τι πολὺ παρὰ πῶδα κράτος ἀρνυται.)

SOPHOCLES, Philoctetes, l. 837. (c. 409 B. C.)

An opportunity well taken is the only weapon of advantage.

JOHN UDALL, To the Earl of Essex, 15 May, 1588.

To improve the golden moment of opportunity, and catch the good that is within our reach, is the great art of life.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works. Vol. vi, p. 214. (c. 1776)

II—Opportunity Makes the Thief

<sup>1</sup> The breach in the wall invites the thief.

Babylonian Talmud: Sukkah, fo. 26a. (c. 450)

A similar maxim, "Not the mouse but the hole is the thief" occurs three times: Gittin, 45a; Kiddushin, 56b; Erach., 30a.

The hole calls the thief.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 206. (1640) From the Spanish, "El agujero llama al ladron."

<sup>2</sup> When opportunity fails the thief, he behaves like an honest man.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 22a. (c. 450) The Japanese say, "The heron's a saint when there are no fish about."

<sup>3</sup> Ill hinds make fat wolffs.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (c. 1595) Cited by JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 220, with the comment, "It signifies that careless keepers give thieves occasion to steal."

Ill herds make fat foxes.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

<sup>4</sup> A bad Padlock invites a Picklock.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2. (1732)

A fair Booty makes many a Thief.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 86.

<sup>5</sup> Many a deed like this is wrought . . . when Opportunity gets the upper hand. (δραν λάβη καίρον.)

MENANDER, Girl from Samos, l. 129. (c. 300 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> A pleasaunte praye soone intiseth a simple theife.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 216. (1576) Meller mush-million hollers at you fum over de fence.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

<sup>7</sup> Opportunity often influences even an honest man. (Hominem etiam frugi flectit saepe occasio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 265. (c. 43 B. C.) Opportunitate maketh a thefe.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Polychronicon, vii, 379. (c. 1387)

Opportunity makes a man committ larcenie.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 169. (1591)

Opportunity makes a thief.

FRANCIS BACON, Letter to the Earl of Essex. (1598) CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 329. (1605) etc., etc.

An open strong-box makes the saint wicked. (Coffre ouvert, rend le saint pervers.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Coffre. (1611)

The Italians say, "Ad arca aperta il giusto pecca" (At an open chest a saint may sin); the Spaniards, "Puerta abierta, al santo tienta" (The open door tempts the saint) which is usually quoted as a warning to husbands. Another Spanish form is, "El casa abierta, el justo peca" (An open house makes a thief of an honest man).

An open gate tempts a saint.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)

An open Door may tempt a saint.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 655. (1732)

Opportunity makes the thief. Occasio facit furem.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 129. (1670)

Ray is giving the Latin proverb which is cited by Bland, Henderson, and many others. A proverb in many languages. The Spaniards say, "La ocasion hace el ladron"; the Germans, "Gelegenheit macht den Dieb"; while the Dutch turn it around and say, "Een dief maakt gelegenheid" (The thief makes the opportunity). The Italians also say, "Guardati dall' occasione, e ti guardera Dio da' peccati" (Keep yourself from opportunities, and God will keep you from sin).

"Propinquity does it"—as Mrs. Thornbrugh is always reminding us.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1888)

Opportunity, which makes thieves, makes lovers also.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 105. (1837)

Opportunity, which is the thief of virtue.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 130. (1920)

<sup>8</sup> O Opportunity, thy guilt is great!

'Tis thou that execut'st the traitor's treason: Thou set'st the wolf where he the lamb may get;

Whoever plots the sin, thou 'point'st the sea-son.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 876. (1594)

How oft the sight of means to do ill deeds Makes deeds ill done!

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iv, ii, 219. (1596)

OPPRESSION

See also Tyranny

<sup>9</sup> Grant us . . . to make no peace with oppression.

Book of Common Prayer: A Prayer for Social Justice. (1548)

<sup>10</sup> Oppression hideth in every heart: power revealeth it and weakness concealet it.

RICHARD BURTON, tr., The Thousand Nights and a Night. Nt. 4. (1885)

<sup>11</sup> He who allows oppression shares the crime.

ERASMUS DARWIN, The Botanic Garden. Pt. ii, canto 3, l. 458. (1789)

<sup>1</sup> Oppression maketh a wise man mad. (Calumnia conturbat sapientem.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 7. (c. 250 B. C.)

BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)

Persecution maketh wise men mad.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 35. (1818)

OPTIMISM

See also Pessimism

<sup>2</sup> Keeping to the snug side of the ship. (πρὸς τὸν εὖ πράττοντα τοῖχον.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 537. (405 B. C.)

Of the Greek who "has sailed round many seas" and who, in stormy weather, knows how to shift to "the good side of the boat." In other words, "The sunny side of the wall."

<sup>3</sup> All will yet be well, God willing. (καλῶς ἔσται γάρ, ἢν θεὸς θέλῃ.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 1188. (388 B. C.) The same sentiment is repeated in l. 1200: "Everything is right" (πάντα σοι πεπράξεται).

"It will all come right in time"—the true American gospel.

W. D. HOWELLS, Indian Summer. (1886)

In the end Things will mend.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 489. (1940)

I am sure that at the end all will be well for us in our island home.

WINSTON CHURCHILL, Speech, at Hull, 7 Nov., 1941.

ALL IS FOR THE BEST, see under BEST.

<sup>4</sup> I gather the rose from the thorn, the gold from the earth, the pearl from the oyster. (Lego de spinis rosas, de terra aurum, de concha margaritum.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. No. xxii, sec. 20. (A. D. 384) This is the famous letter to Eustochium, on "The Virgin's Profession."

To look up and not down,

To look forward and not back,

To look out and not in,— and

To lend a hand.

EDWARD EVERETT HALE, Ten Times One Is Ten.

Adopted as the motto of the Lend-a-Hand Society, founded by Dr. Hale in 1871.

It is not raining rain to me,

It's raining daffodils.

ROBERT LOVEMAN, April Rain. (1901)

<sup>5</sup> Many of the optimists in the world don't own a hundred dollars, and because of their optimism never will.

E. W. HOWE, The Blessing of Business. (1918)

<sup>6</sup> Two men look out through the same bars:

One sees the mud, and one the stars.

FREDERICK LANGBRIDGE (?), Pessimist and Optimist. (c. 1870) Credited to Langbridge in A Cluster of Quiet Thoughts, published by the Religious Tract Society.

A pessimist is a man who thinks all women are bad. An optimist is a man who hopes they are.

CHAUNCEY M. DEFEW (?), After-Dinner Speech. (c. 1900)

The optimist proclaims that we live in the best of all possible worlds; and the pessimist fears this is true.

BRANCH CABELL, The Silver Stallion, p. 112. (1926)

<sup>7</sup> I am a bit of an optimist, I always look to the bright side of things.

W. F. HOOK, in STEPHENS, Life. Ch. 4. (1833)

His disposition to look at the bright side of everything.

SIR FREDERICK WRAXALL, tr., Memoirs of Robert Houdin. Ch. 19. (1859)

We should always look on the bright side of things.

PAYN, Lost Sir Massingberd. Ch. 20. (1864)

Look on the bright side.

WENTWORTH, Pursuit of a Parcel, p. 72. (1942)

<sup>8</sup> God is still ruler of heaven. (ἐτι μέγας οὐρανὸς Ζεὺς.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 174. (c. 409 B. C.)

God's in his Heaven—

All's right with the world!

ROBERT BROWNING, Pippa Passes. Pt. i. (1841)

We felt the universe wuz safe, an' God wuz on his throne.

SAM WALTER FOSS, The Volunteer Organist (1897)

Cook's in her kitchen, all's right with the world

CHARLOTTE ARMSTRONG, Lay On MacDuff, p. 228. (1942)

WHATEVER IS IS RIGHT, see under RIGHT.

<sup>9</sup> Light will shine. (Lux effulsit.)

VARRO, De Lingua Latina. Bk. ii. (c. 50 B. C.)

As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vii, 77, with citations from Euripides, Cicero, and others.

There's a gude time coming.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 32. (1818)

"There's a good time coming, boys," but, asked one of the audience in good faith, "Can you fix the date?"

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Monday. (1849)

Your very costermonger trolls out his belief that "there's a good time coming."

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Yeast. Ch. 17. (1851) The French say, "Le bon temps viendra," or "Mieux sera" (Better will come).

<sup>10</sup> Optimism, said Candide, is a mania for declaring when things are going badly that all is well. (Optimisme, c'est la rage de soutenir que tout est bien quand on est mal.)

VOLTAIRE, Candide ou l'Optimisme. Ch. 19. (1759)

It was the attack on optimism in Candide which called the world's attention to the doctrine which Leibnitz had promulgated in his Théodicée (1710) that the actual world is "the best of all possible worlds," being chosen by the Creator out of all the possible worlds which were present in his thoughts as that in which the most good could be obtained at the cost of the least evil.—O.E.D.

Optimism is the state of mind which believes matrimony will be cheaper than the engagement.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr.'s Almanack, p. 80. (1906)

Optimism: The doctrine or belief that everything is beautiful, including what is ugly.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

An optimist is a neurotic person with gooseflesh and teeth a-chatter, trying hard to be brave.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Roycroft Dictionary and Book of Epigrams.

An optimist is a guy that has never had much experience.

DON MARQUIS, Certain maxims of archy. (1927)

ORACLE

See also Prophet

1 A Delphic sword. (Δελφική μάχα.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. i, ch. 1, sec. 1252b. (c. 330 B.C.) A two-edged sword, in reference to the ambiguities of the Delphic oracles, which could almost always be taken in two ways. For example, "Ibis redibis non morieris in bello" (Thou shalt go thou shalt return never in battle shalt thou perish), where the meaning depends upon the position of a single comma, which the oracle did not indicate, the comma, that is, which should be placed either after "return" or after "never."

He only now-a-days speaks like an oracle, who speaks tricks and ambiguities.

ROBERT SOUTH, Sermons Preached Upon Several Occasions (1715), p. 341. (1679)

He speaks like the Oracles to puzzle the World. DRYDEN, tr., St.-Evremond's Essays, p. 284. (1692)

2 Speaking from the tripod. (ἐκ τρίποδος λέγειν.) ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistai. Ch. 37. (c. A.D. 200) Referring to the oracle at Delphi, where the priestess seated herself on a tripod to deliver the oracles. ZENOBIOUS, Adagia, vi, 3, has τὰ ἀπο τρίποδος (According to the tripod).

Colonel, you spoke like an oracle.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

He is ready to take his seat on the tripod.

ARCHIBALD SAYCE, Comparative Philology. Ch. 1. (1874) Referring to the philologist.

3 Oracles, like dreams, can only be judged after the event. (χρησμοὶ γὰρ καὶ ὄνειροι τὰ πολλὰ τοῖς τέλεσι κρίνονται.)

HELIODORUS, Aethiopia. Bk. ii, ch. 36. (c. A.D. 350)

4 The Oracles are dumm.

JOHN MILTON, On the Morning of Christ's Nativity, l. 173. (1629)

I am Sir Oracle,

And when I ope my lips let no dog bark!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 1, 93. (1597)

ORANGE

5 When the oranges are golden, doctors' faces grow pale.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 443 (1938) A Japanese proverb.

6 The Orange, that is too hard squeeze'd, yields a bitter Juice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4696. (1732)

7 So soon as the Orange is squeezed, it's thrown upon the ground.

BALTASAR GRACIAN, The Courtier's Oracle, tr., p. 4. (1685)

We squeeze an orange and throw away the rind. FREDERICK THE GREAT, to La Mettraie, Sept., 1751, saying that he should want Voltaire only a year longer.

[He] was a sucked orange; his brain was dry.

JAMES M. DIXON, Dictionary of Idiomatic English Phrases. (1891)

ORATOR

8 He is a good orator who convinces himself he is.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 374. (1855)

Love, knavery, and necessity make men good orators.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 446 Reminiscent of the Latin proverb, "Bonus orator, pessimus vir."

9 Little other than a red-tape talking-machine. CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 1. (1850) The two-legged gab-machine.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 11. (1866)

10 Slow in speech and an almost chilling orator (Lentus in dicendo, et pene frigidus orator) CICERO, Brutus. Ch. 48, sec. 178. (46 B.C.) Referring to Titus Juventius.

11 Loud bawling orators are driven by their weakness to noise, as lame men to take horse (ὡς χωλοὺς ἀναβαλεῖν ἐφ' ἵππων.)

CICERO, Apothegm. (c. 55 B.C.) See PLUTARCH Sayings of Romans, sec. 204F.

He mouths a sentence as curs mouth a bone.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Rosciad, l. 322. (1761)

12 Consider these fine Oratours what glavering speeches they use, and howe they teach men to insinuate, and by coloured wordes to creepe into mens boosomes.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation Bk. i. p. 79. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Here comes the orator, with his flood of words and his drop of reason.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

A man niver becomes an orator if he has anything to say.

F. P. DUNNE, The Gift of Oratory. (1901)

<sup>1</sup> When his words fell soft as snowflakes on a winter's day, then could no mortal man beside vie with Odysseus. (καὶ ἤνεα νιφάδεςσιν εὐκότα χειμέριον.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. iii, l. 222. (c. 850 B.C.)

A man very skilled in moving to tears. (Vir movendarum lacrimarum peritissimus.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 11. (C. A. D. 98)

Aged ears play truant at his tales
And younger hearings are quite ravished;
So sweet and voluble is his discourse.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, ii, 1, 74. (1595)

Whose words all ears took captive.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, v, 3, 17. (1602)

Charm us, orator, till the lion look no larger than the cat.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall Sixty Years After, l. 112. (1886)

Ye could waltz to it.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, referring to Senator Beveridge's oratory.

<sup>2</sup> What orators lack in depth they make up to you in length. (Ce qui manque aux orateurs en profondeur ils vous le donnent en longueur.)

MONTESQUIEU, Lettres Persanes. (1721)

<sup>3</sup> An orator's virtue is to speak the truth. (ῥήτορος δὲ τἀληθὴ λέγειν.)

PLATO, Apologia of Socrates, sec. 18A. (399 B.C.)

Where Judgment has Wit to express it, there's the best Orator.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 173. (1693)

<sup>4</sup> Until some one points out to an orator his defects, his discourse will never be amended.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 29. (c. 1258)

<sup>5</sup> Very good orators, when they are out, they will spit.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iv, 1, 75. (1600)

If a man should be out and forget his last sentence . . . then his last refuge is to begin with an Uticunque [howsoever].

SAMUEL PEPPYS, Diary, 22 Jan., 1661.

Adepts in the speaking trade
Keep a cough by them ready made.

CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. ii, l. 545. (1762)

<sup>6</sup> I am no orator, as Brutus is; . . .
I only speak right on.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 2, 221. (1599)

Fear not, my lord, I'll play the orator.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iii, 5, 95. (1592)

<sup>7</sup> Our orators speak voluptuously and dance elegantly. (Oratores nostri tenere dicere, histriones diserte saltare.)

TACITUS, Dialogus de Oratoribus. Sec. 26. (C. A. D. 85) Referred to as "the epigram so shameful, but yet so common."

ORATORY

See also Eloquence, Speeches

<sup>8</sup> Without preparation. (Ex tempore.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. i, sec. 50. (55 B.C.)

Though always extempore, his speeches sound as though he had written at them for days. (Dicit semper ex tempore, sed tamquam diu scripserit.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 3. (C. A. D. 98)

<sup>9</sup> Delivery, delivery, delivery. (ὑπόκρισις, ὑπόκρισις, ὑπόκρισις.)

DEMOSTHENES, when asked what were the first, second and third most important things in oratory. (c. 345 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives of the Ten Orators: Demosthenes, sec. 845B. The Greek phrase may be translated in various ways. Literally it means playing a part on the stage, acting, declamation, and is sometimes rendered, "Action, action, action." As applied to an orator, it means elocution, delivery. It has often been imitated. In 1499, when Louis XII of France asked Marshal Trivulce what he needed to wage a successful war against the Milanese, the Marshal replied, "Three things—money, more money, and always more money" (De l'argent, encore de l'argent, et toujours de l'argent), having in mind, of course, the old proverb that money is the sinews of war. In August, 1792, Danton, while speaking before the French National Assembly, declared that three things were needed to save France, "Boldness, more boldness, and always boldness" (De l'audace, encore de l'audace, et toujours de l'audace). On 24 June, 1872, Leon Gambetta, campaigning against Thiers, declared that three things were necessary to win success, "Work, more work, and always work" (De travail, encore de travail, et toujours de travail). In 1835, Daniel O'Connell, speaking to his Dublin constituency, declared that there was only one way to free Ireland, "Agitate, agitate, agitate!" and followed this precept so successfully that he became known as "The Great Agitator."

With a round mouth, i. e. a good delivery. (Ore rotundo.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 323. (c. 20 B.C.)

The Chadband style of oratory is widely received and much admired.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 19. (1852) In the Chadband style of oratory the speaker asks rhetorical questions, and then answers them himself.

<sup>10</sup> Oratory is the power of beating down your adversary's arguments, and putting better in their place.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 8 May, 1781
The object of oratory alone is not truth, but persuasion.

MACAULAY, Essays: The Athenian Orators. (1824)

ORDER

1 Good order is the foundation of all good things.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. (1790)

Order is light, peace, inward liberty, free command over oneself; it is power. . . . It is aesthetic and moral beauty, it is well-being, it is man's greatest need. (L'ordre, c'est la lumière, la paix, la liberté intérieure, la disponibilité de soi-même; c'est la puissance; . . . c'est la beauté esthétique et morale, c'est le bien-être, c'est ce qu'il faut.)

HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 27 Jan., 1860.

Order is a lovely thing.

ANNA HEMPSTEAD BRANCH, The Monk in the Kitchen. (c. 1910)

2 "Apple-pie order!" said Mr. Boffin.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. i, ch. 15. (1865)

The bed . . . was in apple-pie order.

NGAIO MARSH, Vintage Murder, p. 240. (1940)

All was in the well-known apple-pie order.

MARY COLLINS, Sister of Cain, p. 98. (1943)

3 Let us follow the order which we laid down for our undertaking. (Exsequamur coeptum propositi ordinem.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. vi, fab. 20. (c. 25 B.C.)

4 The letters which I receive from Poland announce that order reigns in Warsaw. (Des lettres que je reçois de Pologne m'annoncent que la tranquillité règne à Varsovie.)

GENERAL FRANÇOIS SEBASTIANI, in Chamber of Deputies, 16 Sept., 1831, while Minister of Foreign Affairs, announcing the end of the insurrection at Warsaw and the fall of Poland. See DUMAS, Mémoires. Ser. ii, vol. iv, ch. 3.

He has no word of censure for the more settled form of anarchy which announced, "Order reigns at Warsaw."

J. NICOL, Thomas Carlyle, p. 202. (1892)

5 The chief aid to memory is order. (Ordinem esse maxime qui memoriae lumen afferret.)

SIMONIDES. (c. 475 B.C.) As quoted by CICERO, De Oratore, ii, 86. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 307.

6 Order governs the world. The Devil is the author of confusion.

SWIFT, Letter to Stella, 26 Oct., 1710.

7 As order is heavenly where quiet is had, so error is hell, or a mischief as bad.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Huswifely Admonitions. (1573)

Order is Heav'n's first law.

POPE, Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 49. (1734)

"Order is Heaven's first law," and a mind without order can by no possibility be either a healthy or a happy mind.

MRS. D. M. M. CRAIK, A Woman's Thoughts, p. 247. (1858)

In the home more than anywhere else order is heaven's first law.

E. J. HARDY, How to Be Happy though Married. Ch. 24. (1886)

8 See what harmony gut and sinew, wood and bone, send forth, when they are combined in proportion and order.

ZENO, Fragments. (c. 460 B.C.) Referring to the lyre. Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 443A, 1029E.

9 After the old order.

UNKNOWN, Rolls of Parliament, v, 494. (1461)

It is harde . . . to lerne a new order.

SERJEANT FLEETWOOD, in ELLIS, Original Letters. Ser. ii. vol. iii, p. 29. (1575)

The old order changeth, yielding place to new

TENNYSON, Morte d'Arthur, l. 291. (1842)

The old ardor changeth.

JEAN WEBB, No Match for Murder, p. 155. (1942)

ORIGIN, see Beginning

ORIGINALITY

10

Since Eden's freshness and man's fall

No rose has been original.

THOMAS BAILEY ALDRICH, Originality. (c.1890)

THE MAN WHO PLANTS CABBAGES IMITATES TOO, see under IMITATION.

11

A thought is often original, though you have uttered it a hundred times.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1 (1858)

What is originality? It is being one's self.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Quotation and Originality. (1875)

Originality does not consist in saying what no one has ever said before, but in saying exactly what you think yourself.

J. F. STEPHEN, Horae Sabbaticae. (1892)

12

All good things which exist are the fruits of originality.

JOHN STUART MILL, On Liberty. Ch. 3. (1859)

13

It is easy to repeat, but hard to originate.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 2 Feb., 1842.

You would think there was a tariff on thinking and originality.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 25 Nov., 1858.

14

It is easier to say original things than to reconcile with one another things already said.

(Il est plus aisé de dire des choses nouvelles que de concilier celles qui ont été dites.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 1. (1746)

Originality is the supreme evidence of genius. (L'invention est l'unique preuve du génie.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 542. (1746)

ORNAMENT

<sup>1</sup> The ornament of a meek and quiet spirit.
(τοῦ ἡσυχίου καὶ πραέως πνεύματος.)

New Testament: 1 Peter, iii, 4. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Quieti et modesti spiritus."

<sup>2</sup> The especial condition of true ornament is, that it be beautiful in its place, and nowhere else.

RUSKIN, The Stones of Venice. Ch. 1. (1851)

<sup>3</sup> The world is still deceived with ornament. . . The seeming truth which cunning time puts on To entrap the wisest.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice. Act iii, sc. 2, l. 73. (1597)

ORPHEUS

<sup>4</sup> Men say that he [Orpheus] by the music of his songs charmed the stubborn rocks upon the mountains and the course of rivers. (αὐτὰρ τόγ' ἐνέποιουσιν ἀτειρέας οὐρεσι πέτρας | θέλξει αἰοδῶν ἐνοπῇ ποταμῶν τε ῥέεθρα.)

APOLLONIUS RHODIUS, Argonautica. Bk. i, l. 26. (c. 225 B. C.)

They say that Orpheus with his Thracian lyre tamed wild beasts and stayed rushing rivers. (Orphea delenisse feras et concita dicunt flumina Threicia sustinuisse lyra.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 2, l. 3. (c. 22 B. C.)

With his lyre did Orpheus of Rhodope move rocks and hearts. (Saxa ferasque lyra movit Rhodopeius Orpheus.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 321. (c. 1 B. C.)

Therefore the poet

Did feign that Orpheus drew trees, stones and floods;

Since nought so stockish, hard and full of rage,
But music for the time doth change his nature.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, v, 1, 79. (1597)

Orpheus with his lute made trees,
And the mountain tops that freeze,
Bow themselves when he did sing.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 1, 3. (1612)

When Orpheus strook th' inspired Lute,
The trees danc'd round.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Garden. Pt. iv. (1663)

Orpheus cou'd lead the savage race;
And trees uprooted left their place,
Sequacious of the lyre.

DRYDEN, Song for St. Cecilia's Day. (1687)

OSSA

<sup>5</sup> They were fain to pile Ossa on Olympus, and Pelion, with its waving forests, on Ossa, that so heaven might be scaled. ("Ὄσσαν ἐπ' Ὀλύμπῳ μέμασαν θέμεν, αὐτὰρ ἐπ' Ὀσση | Πήλιον εἰσοσίφυλλον, ἐν οὐρανὸς ἀμβατὸς εἶη.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 315. (c. 850 B. C.)

An allusion to the myth of the Titans, who piled Mount Ossa on Mount Pelion in an effort to reach the dwelling of the gods. The phrase, "To pile Ossa on Pelion," has become proverbial for adding difficulty to difficulty, embarrassment to embarrassment. A similar Greek proverbial phrase is κάμηλος ἐπὶ καμήλῳ (To pile a camel upon a camel).

Thrice did they attempt to pile Ossa on Pelion, and over Ossa to roll leafy Olympus. (Ter sunt conati imponere Pelio Ossam | scilicet, atque Ossae frondosum involvere Olympum.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. i, l. 281. (29 B. C.)

Typhon, who aforetime, when mounting into heaven on the rocks of Ossa, essayed to double the height of Olympus by piling thereon the Emathian mount [Pelion].

VERGIL, Ciris, l. 32. (c. 25 B. C.)

To pile Pelion upon Olympus. (Pelion imposuisse Olympo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 4, l. 52. (23 B. C.)

Where Pelion stood on Ossa set beneath, and pine-bearing Olympus weighed on both. (Stetit imposita | Pelion Ossa, pinifer ambos | pressit Olympus.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 345. (c. A. D. 60)

Ossa weighs down Pelion; Olympus, topmost of the three, lies heavy on Ossa. (Pelion Ossa gravat, summus premit Ossan Olympus.)

UNKNOWN, Aetna, l. 49. (c. A. D. 60)

The high hill Pelion set on lofty Ossa. (Le mons Pelion posé dessus le mons Osse.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel Bk. iii, ch. 12. (1545)

Also Bk. iv, ch. 38

Heap Ossa upon Pelion.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The English Traveller. Act iv, sc. 3. (1633)

It's a fine old mess, Pelion piled on Ossa.

ALLINGHAM, Black Plumes, p. 118. (1940)

OSTRICH

<sup>6</sup> The hostryche by his nature eateth well yron.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Mirrour of the World. Bk. ii, ch. 16. (1481) The ostrich actually does swallow hard substances to assist the gizzard in its functions.

The Estrich disgesteth hard yron to preserve his health.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 124. (1579) Rusticks, who have stomachs like Ostriges, that can digest hard yron.

THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health. Ch. 9. (1584)

I'll make thee eat iron like an ostrich.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iv, 10, 30. (1590)

Estridge Consciences, that can digest Iron but not straw.

THOMAS WALL, A Comment on the Times, p. 63. (1658)

<sup>7</sup> That's what an ostrich does at the circus. (Istuc marinus passer per circum solet.)

PLAUTUS, Persa, l. 199. (c. 200 B. C.) "Passer marinus," because brought from a distance.

Toxilus has fled into his house.

She put me in mind of the woodcock, that strives to hide his long bill, and then thinks nobody sees him.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Louis XV . . . would not suffer death to be spoken of; avoided the sight of churchyards, funereal monuments, and whatsoever could bring it to mind. It is the resource of the Ostrich; who, hard hunted, sticks his foolish head in the ground, and would fain forget that his foolish unseeing body is not unseen too.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. i, bk i, ch. 4. (1837)

The ostrich-habit of burying their heads in the ground before anything they don't like.

F. L. OLMSTEAD, A Journey through the Seaboard Slave States, p. 167. (1856)

He hides his head and leaves his rump exposed. (T'sian chin t'ou pu ku p'i ku.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs No. 2073. (1875)

He should grow like an onion, with his head in the ground forever.

CLARE BOOTHE, Margin for Error. Act ii. (1939)

Guess there's no use burying my head in the sand.

JONATHAN STAGG, Turn of the Table, p. 48. (1940)

You're just like an ostrich that buries its head in the sand.

CHRISTIE, Murder in Retrospect, p. 40. (1942)

As the ostrich observed, "where is everybody?"

ANTHONY BOUCHER, The Case of the Seven Sneezes, p. 45. (1942)

OVEN

<sup>1</sup> To gape against an oven, to blow against the wind, to kick against the pricks.

ISAAC BARROW, Sermons, iii, 394. (a. 1677)

Like stopping an oven with butter.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 91. (1917)

<sup>2</sup> Heat the oven twice for a custard.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 53. (1678)

Set not your Loaf in, till the Oven's hot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4110. (1732)

"Old ovens are soon hot" is another proverb.

<sup>3</sup> It's time to set in when the oven comes to the dough, i. e. Time to marry when the maid woos the man.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 186. (1678)

There is a Cheshire variation, "It is time to yoke when the cart comes to the caple" [horse].

It is Time to set in, when the Oven comes to the Bread.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3020. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> It appereth by a comyn prouerbe, he yt is defectyve or culpable hymself in a synne, he iugeth euery man to be in the same, or elles yr fader soughte neuer his sone in ye ouen.

WYNKYN DE WORDE, tr., Seven Wise Masters (Gomme), p. 40. (1520)

No man will an other in the ouen seeke, Except that him selfe haue beene there before.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

They seeke others, where they have been hidde them selues.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), ii, 16. (1583)

Na man can seek his marrow in the kirne, sa weill as he that hes been in it himself.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (c. 1595)

The Good-wife . . . finding her daughter in the ouen, where she would neuer have sought her, if she had not been there first her selfe (a hackney prouerb in mens mouths euer since K. Lud was a little boy).

THOMAS NASHE, Have with You to Saffron-Walden, Works (Grosart), iii, 191. (1596)

This very common sixteenth and seventeenth century saying was most frequently said of mother and daughter.

No woman seeks another in the oven which hath not before been there.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Brittain (1870), p. 329. (1605)

If the mother had not been in the oven, she had never sought her daughter there.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 698. (1640)

For he, they say, had been in the oven himself, and knew where to look for the pasty.

ROGER NORTH, Lives of the Norths, i, 146. (1740)

It is no use now I've been and gone into the same oven like a fool.

CHARLES READE, It is Never too Late to Mend. Ch. 14. (1856)

OWL

<sup>5</sup> Who brought an owl to Athens? (τίς γλαῦκ' Ἀθηναί' ἤγαγεν;)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 301. (414 B. C.)

Owls were numerous in Athens. As the emblem of Pallas Athene, the patron saint of the city, an owl was stamped on all Athenian coins, and since owls were protected, the Acropolis was infested with them. So "To bring owls to Athens" was "To carry coals to Newcastle." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, with the Latin, "Ululas Athenas portas." Erasmus gives a similar Greek proverb, ἵππους δ' εἰς Ἰθάκην οὐκ ἄξουαι (I'll not take horses to Ithaca). Ithaca was so hilly that horses were of no use there. "Serving drinks to frogs" is another Greek proverb of useless activity, as is the Spanish proverb, "Vender miel al colmenaro" (To offer honey to a bee-keeper), of which there are many variants.

I am but "sending an owl to Athens." (γλαῦκ' εἰς Ἀθήνας.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. vi, Epis. 3. (45 B. C.) Thy exhortation . . . is as if thou shouldst bring owles to Athens.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. L3. (1583)

I may be thought . . . to carrie owles to Athens, and to trouble the reader with a matter altogether needlesse and superfluous.

HENRY SWINBURNE, A Briefe Treatise of Testaments and Last Willes: Preface. (1590)

To beare pots (as they say) to Samos Ile, . . . Or owls to Athens, crocodils to Nyle.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xl, st. 1. (1591)

Therefore in vaine for mee to bring owles to Athens, or add water to the large sea of your rare learning.

FRANCIS THYNNE, Emblemes and Epigrames, p. 3. (1600)

You bring Owls to Athens.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.5866.(1732)
Expressing well the absurdity of sending to a place that which already abounds there, the Greeks said: Owls to Athens.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 3. (1852)

1 When the owl sings, the nightingale will hold her peace.

NICHOLAS BRETON, A Packet of Mad Letters. Works (1879), ii, 12. (1603)

2 And al day after hidde him as an oule.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Wyf of Bath, l. 225 (c. 1388)

3 The oule
That prophete is of wo & of myschaunce.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women, l. 2249. (c. 1385)

The owl shriek'd at my birth, an evil sign.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, 6, 44. (1591)
Whatever wise people may say of them, I at least myself have found the owl's cry always prophetic of mischief to me.

JOHN RUSKIN, Praeterita, ii, 363. (1887)

4 An owl is the king of the night.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 69. (1633)
CLARKE, Paraemiologia, p. 1. (1639)

5 The owl flies. (Noctua volat.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 76.(1523)
The usual meaning of this proverbial phrase was that for an owl to fly was a fortunate omen; but since the figure of an owl was impressed on Athenian coins, it also became a slang phrase for bribery. When anyone gained an advantage, it was explained by "Noctua volabit" (The owl has flown). Erasmus cites the phrase again in his Praise of Folly, "There is also another favorable proverb, The owl flies, an omen of success."

There is a Custome that no Officer may arrest after Sun set; such therefore as goe abroad at those times, are said to Fly with the Owle, by a common prouerbe.

GERARD DE MALYNES, The Ancient Low-Merchant, p. 426. (1622)

6 The oule thought her owne birdes fairest.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Ars Adulandi, sig. D3. (c. 1580)

The Owl thinks all her young ones Beauties.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.4698.(1732)
See also under POSSESSIONS.

7 Can grave and formal pass for wise
When men the solemn owl despise?

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Shepherd and the Philosopher, l. 55. (1727) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1740.

The Owl is not accounted the wiser, for living retiredly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.4697.(1732)
The gravest bird's an owl.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

8 One of these Owles who stande in feare of other byrds.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i. p. 33. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Constrained by necessitie to live like owles in the darke.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 188.

9 Your day Owl . . . hath brought such a lot of wondering birds about your ears, as . . . will chatter you out of your ivy bush.

THOMAS LODGE, A Defence of Poetry, p. 8 (1579)

How say you, my lady? What oule sings out of that ivy bush?

JOHN DAY, Ile of Guls. Act v. (1606)
Could not you be content to be an owl in such an ivy-bush?

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Four Plays in One: Induction. (a. 1611)

Man was made for business, and not to sit amusing himself like an owl in an ivy bush.

THOMAS BROWN, Works (1760), iii, 2. (1700)
He look'd for all the world like an owl in an ivy-bush.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

10 He's in great want of a bird that will give a groat for an owl.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 72. (1678)
They have need of a bird, that will give a groat for an owl.

Roxburghe Ballads, iv, 72. (c. 1685)

11 They say the owl was a baker's daughter.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 5, 41. (1600) The baker's daughter was transformed into an owl, according to the old legend, for begrudging bread to Christ.

Nightly sings the staring owl, Tu-whit, tu-who
SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 927 (1595)

When cats run home and light is come, . . .

Alone and warming his five wits,

The white owl in the belfry sits.

TENNYSON, The Owl. (1830)

12 O you virtuous owl,

The wise Minerva's only fowl.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, A Remedy for Love, l. 77 (a. 1586)

13 Do you think I was born in a wood to be afraid of an owl?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
I have lived too near a wood to be frightened by owls.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 411. (1855)
He lives too close to the wood to be frightened by owls.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 589. (1883)

OX

See also Bull

<sup>1</sup> He by and by (being made a very ox) lighted a candle.

WILLIAM ADLINGTON, tr., The Golden Ass, p. 90. (1566) Being made a very fool.

Falstaff: I do begin to perceive that I am made an ass.

Ford: Ay, and an ox too.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, v, 5, 126. (1601)

He is both ass and ox.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, v, 1, 65. (1601)

At last he finds she made an Oxe of him.

HUMPHREY MILL, A Night's Search, p. 126. (1640)

<sup>2</sup> The young ox learns to plow from the elder. (A bove majore discit arare minor.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, Vol. i, p. 20. (1814) An Italian proverb.

<sup>3</sup> The ox that's loose licks himself best. (El buey suelto bien se lame.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 22. (1615) An Ox, when he is loose, licks himself at Pleasure.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 659. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> The hand that feeds the ox grasps the knife when it is fattened.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 371. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>5</sup> Packsaddles are put upon the ox. (Clitellae bovi sunt impositae.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. v, epis. 15. (51 B. C.)

Cicero is quoting a proverb, "Bovi clitellas imponere" (To put a packsaddle upon an ox), to assign one a task for which he is not qualified.

The burden is not mine to carry; the ox is carrying packsaddles. (Non nostrum inquit onus; bos clitellas.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae, v, 11, 21. (c. A. D. 80) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ix, 84.

<sup>6</sup> The strange ox looks often to the door. (Bos alienus subinde foras prospectat.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. x, No. 62. (1500)

<sup>7</sup> It is an olde sayinge, The oxe is neuer wo, tyll he to the harowe goo.

JOHN FITZHERBERT, The Boke of Husbandry. Sec. 15. (1523)

<sup>8</sup> A lazy Ox is little better for the Goad.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 236. (1732)

A long Ox, and a short Horse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 257.

<sup>9</sup> An old Ox will find a Shelter for himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 651. (1732) There is a Latin form, "Bos senior caute consulit ipse sibi."

"Do not seek a shelter for an old ox," alluding to old persons who know from experience what they require.

JOHN COLLINS, Spanish Proverbs, p. 4. (1823)

<sup>10</sup> Auld stots [oxen] hae stiff horns.

ANDREW HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 102.

(1832) The Germans say, "Alte Schweine haben harte Mäuler" (Old pigs have hard snouts).

<sup>11</sup> Abide! (quoth I), it was yet but hony moone; The blacke oxe hath not trode on his nor hir foote.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 7. (1546) Care had not come near them. Also used as a symbol of old age, adversity, and death.

The blacke Oxe treade on their foote.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 55. (1579)

Till the blacke oxe tread vpon his toes, and neede make him trie what mettle he is made of.

RICHARD MULCASTER, Positions. Ch. 36. (1581)

Now crows foote is on her eye, and the black oxe hath trod on her foot.

JOHN LYL, Sapho and Phao, i, 199. (1584)

Time, care, rivels [wrinkles] her; . . . after the black oxe hath trodden on her toe, she will wax out of favour.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. v, subs. 3. (1621)

Well, young squire, the black ox never trod yet on your foot.

BEN JONSON, Tale of a Tub. Act iv, sc. 5. (1633)

Lady A.: I hear she's grown a mere otomy [skeleton].

Lady S.: Poor creature! The black ox has set his foot upon her already.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial i. (1738)

The black ox has not trod on your foot yet.

WALTER SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 2. (1822)

The "black ox" trod on the fairy foot of my light-hearted cousin Fan.

LEIGH HUNT, Autobiography. Bk. i, ch. 4. (1850)

Black Oxen.

GERTRUDE ATHERTON. Title of novel. (1923)

<sup>12</sup> Seldom dieth the ox that weepeth for the cock.

HILLS, Common-Place Book, p. 133. (c. 1530)

<sup>13</sup> To swallow an ox and be choked with the tail.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659) Cited by RAY, p. 194; FULLER, No. 5238.

TO STRAIN OUT A GNAT AND SWALLOW A CAMEL, see under GNAT.

<sup>14</sup> The old ox makes the straightest furrow.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 9. (1659) The Spanish is, "Buey viejo. sulco derecho."

An old Ox makes a straight Furrow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 650. (1732)

"An old ox makes a straight furrow" . . . applicable to those persons who, guided by their judgment and experience, conduct their affairs . . . with success.

JOHN COLLINS, Spanish Proverbs, p. 69. (1823)

<sup>1</sup> The ox knoweth his owner, and the ass his master's crib. (Cognovit bos possessorem suum, et asinus praesepe Domini sui.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, i, 3. (c. 725 B. C.)

The horse knows his owner. (Ma nēng shih chu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 144. (1875)

<sup>2</sup> The weary ox fastens his foot the firmer. (Bos lassus fortius figit pedem.)

SAINT JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letter to St. Augustine. (c. A. D. 400) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 47.

An olde beaten oxe fastenethe his fote the stronger.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Translation of Erasmus, fo. 3. (1550) Taverner adds: "Hierome [St. Jerome] used this prouerbe writynge to S. Austyne to feare hym that he a yonge man shulde not prouoke S. Hierome at that tyme olde. Forasmuch as though sage and aunciente persons be nat sone sturred to reuenge them selues, sythe they be nowe as it were wery for age, yet yf there be no remedye but they muste nedes meddel, they will giue much tougher and more earnest strokes. The englyshe prouerbe sayth thus, An olde dog byteth sore."

<sup>3</sup> The weary oxe goes slowly.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Bœuf. (1611)

The ox, when he is weary, treads surest.

TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. ii, sec. 6. (1650)

The ox when weariest treads surest.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 186. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4699. (1732) The Spanish form is, "El buey quando se cansa, firme sienta la pata" (The ox, when he is tired, plants his foot firmly); the French, "Le bœuf soif marche" (The thirsty ox walks).

<sup>4</sup> Fling at the brod [goad] was ne'er a good ox.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 107. (1721)

<sup>5</sup> Thou shalt not smite the face of a walking ox with a lash.

LANGDON, Babylonian Proverbs: Tablet K. 4347. (c. 2300 B. C.)

Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn. (Non ligabis os bovis terentis in area fruges tuas.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxv, 4. (c. 650 B. C.) A precept of old Jewish law, meaning that those whom one employs in business must be trusted. Since the fields in Egypt were not enclosed, oxen, camels, and other animals were muzzled in order to prevent them from grazing as they passed along the roads.

It is written in the law of Moses, Thou shalt not muzzle the mouth of the ox that treadeth out the corn. (ὃ φιδόμενος βοῦν ἀλώμενα.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, ix, 9. (A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Non alligabis os bovi trituranti."

The ox that ploughs is not to be muzzled.

JOHN LEWIS BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 172. (1817)

Isn't there a proverb about not muzzling the ox that treads out the corn?

ETHEL WHITE, Fear Stalks the Village, p. 258. (1942)

That is a gracious commandment, do not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn.

H. C. BAILEY, Nobody's Vineyard, p. 65. (1942)

<sup>6</sup> I wouldn't have known him from Adam's off ox.

RING LARDNER, Anniversary. (1926)

People he didn't know from Adam's off ox were bowing to him.

CLIVE F. ADAMS, And Sudden Death, p. 127. (1940)

<sup>7</sup> Which way shall the oxe goe, but he must needs plough?

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina (T.T.), p. 78. (1631)

Whither shall the Ox go where he shall not labour?

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 103. (1640)

Where shall the ox go but he must labour?

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1670)

Cited by FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5657.

Where wilt thou go, ox, that thou wilt not have to plough? (Adonde irá el buey, que no are?)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 5. (1853) Trench adds that this "is the Catalan remonstrance addressed to one who imagines by any outward change of condition to evade the inevitable task and toil of existence."

<sup>8</sup> Unequal Oxen draw not wel together in one yoke.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Minos and Pasiphae, p. 211 (1576)

<sup>9</sup> He goeth after her straightway, as an ox goeth to the slaughter, or as a fool to the correction of the stocks. (Quasi bos ductus ad victimam.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, vii, 22. (c. 350 B. C.) Bois ἐπὶ σφαγήν (As an ox to the slaughter) is one of the most famous of Greek proverbs, picturing the ox as a patient and somewhat stupid creature, frequently linked in this respect with the lamb, as in Jeremiah, xi, 19. See under LAMB. A related proverb is Bois ὑπὸ ζυγόν (As an ox under the yoke), and there are a number of other variants

<sup>10</sup> The ox has spoken. (Bos locutus est.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin proverb. There was a legend among the Romans that an ox had once saved the city from an approaching enemy by crying to them to be on guard.

An ox spoke once at Rome, and so did an ass in Judea.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act ii, sc. 2. (1815)

IT DEPENDS UPON WHOSE OX IS GORED, see CASE IS ALTERED.

OXFORD

<sup>1</sup> Home of lost causes, and forsaken beliefs, and unpopular names, and impossible loyalties!

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Preface. (1879) Referring to Oxford University, "That sweet city with her dreaming spires," as he called it in Thyrsis, l. 19.

The Oxford man . . . lives in a "home," not, as was said in a famous passage, "of lost causes," but of causes which have again and again emerged victorious.

G. W. E. RUSSELL, Half-Lengths. Ch. 8. (1913) Oxford has often been called "the home of lost causes," or, as Mr. Cram puts it, "of causes not lost but gone before."

Times (London) Literary Supplement, 7 Aug., 1914, p. 378.

<sup>2</sup> You know all roads lead to Rome, and they say that Oxford is half way to Rome.

WILLIAM BLACK, The Strange Adventures of a Phaeton. Ch. 6. (1872)

<sup>3</sup> Mark the chronicles aright,
When Oxford scholars fall to fight,
Before many months expir'd,
England will with war be fir'd.
(Chronica si penses, cum pugnent Oxonienses Post aliquot menses volat ira per Anglinenses.)

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 8. (1662)
When Oxford draws knife, England's soon at strife.

J. R. GREEN, Short History of England (1892).
Bk. i, ch. 3, p. 225. (1874)

<sup>4</sup> Oxford knives, and London wives.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1659)
Oxford for learning, London for wit,
Hull for women, and York for a tit.
W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 312. (1869)

OYSTER

<sup>5</sup> The Oyster . . . is vnseasonable and vnholsome in all the monethes, that have not the letter R in their name.

HENRY BUTTES, Dyets Drie Dinner, sig. N1.
(1599) That is, from May to August, though some excuse indulgence in the latter month by pronouncing it 'Orgust.' They are not really unwholesome, but merely insipid because they are spawning. WILLIAM HARRISON mentions the saying in his Description of England. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1577)

Oysters . . . must not bee eaten in those monethes, which wante the letter R.

VAUGHAN, Directions for Health, p. 22. (1600)
Oysters in all months in whose name an R is found.

MOUFET, Healths Improvement, p. 46. (1658)
Oysters are not good in a moneth that hath not an R in it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 349. (1678)

Here is no domestic news of changes and chances in the political world, which like oysters, are only in season in the R months, when the Parliament sits.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters. Let. 346. (1764)
A month without an R in it has nae richt being in the year.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. No. 16.
(1822)

<sup>6</sup> He's undone like an oyster.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 166. (1639)
Undone as you would undo an oyster; Ne salus quidem ipsa servare potest.

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis. (1681)

<sup>7</sup> The oysters are a gentle kin,
They winna talk unless you sing.

DAVID HERD, ed., *Ancient and Modern Scottish
Songs: The Dreg Song*. (1776)

The oyster loves the dredging sang,
For they come of a gentle kind.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 40. (1816)
The oyster is a gentle thing,
And will not come unless you sing.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 381. (1869)

<sup>8</sup> I have gaped as the oyster for the tide.

JONSON, Bartholomew Fayre. Act v, sc. 3. (1614)
Thou want'st drink. Did I not find thee gaping like an oyster For a new tide?

FLETCHER, Bonduca. Act i, sc. 2. (1618)

<sup>9</sup> No more like than an apple to an oyster.

SIR THOMAS MORE, The Confutation of Tin-dale. (1532)

Why do you bring him in speaking of apples when you speake of oysters?

WILLIAM JENKYN, Blind Guide, p. 71. (1648)

<sup>10</sup> Only oyesters of all fish are good raw, yet he was no coward that first ventured on them

THOMAS MOUFET, Healths Improvement, p. 47
(c. 1600)

He was a valiant man that durst first eat oysters.

REV. JOHN WARD, Diary. (c. 1660) Ward attributes the saying to King James I of England, but without real authority.

King James was wont to say, "he was a very valiant man who first adventured on eating of oysters."

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, i, 493. (1662)

That man had sure a palate cover'd o'er
With brass or steel, that on the rocky shore
First broke the oozy oyster's pearly coat,
And risq'd the living morsel down his throat.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. iii, l. 195. (1716) Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1751.

He was a bold man that first ate an oyster.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Who first an oyster eat was a bold dog.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Tristia: Elegy
(1806)

Think of the man who first tried German sausage.

JEROME, Three Men in a Boat. Ch. 14. (1889)

<sup>11</sup> The gravest fish is an oyster.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737) An unidentified wag contributes, "An oyster is a fish built like a nut."

1
How do you after your oysters?

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 78. (1678)

2
Not every oyster contains a pearl.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. v, Apologue 8. (c. 1257)

The oyster with much pain produces its pearl. I take the pearl.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp. Ch. 11. (1863)

It is the sick oyster which possesses the pearl.

J. A. SHEDD, Salt from My Attic, p. 30. (1928)

3
An oyster may be crossed in love!

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act iii, sc. 1. (1779)

4
I have a stoppynge oyster in my poke.

JOHN SKELTON, The Bowge of Courte, l. 477.

(a. 1529) A retort which puts a person to silence.

To a feloe laying to his rebuke, . . . he did with this reason giue a stopping oistre.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, p. 61. (1542)

His wife . . . deuseth to cast in my teeth,

Checks and chokyng oysters.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 36. (1546)

5
To open as you would an oyster. (Tanquam conchylium discerpere.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon. (c. 950) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, viii, 42.

Why then, the world's mine oyster,
Which I with sword will open.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 2, 2. (1601)

He opens an Oyster with a Dagger.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2001. (1732)

6
Oysters . . . be ungodly meate, uncharitable meate, and unprofitable meate. They are ungodly because they are eaten without grace; uncharitable, because they leave nought but shells; and unprofitable, because they must swim in wine.

RICHARD TARTLTON, Tartlton's Jestes, p. 6. (1611)

They say oysters are a cruel meat because we eat them alive: then they are an uncharitable meat, for we leave nothing to the poor; and they are an ungodly meat, because we never say grace.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

7
Let not the oyster grieve that he has lost the race; he has gained as an oyster.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 8 Dec., 1838

P

P'S AND Q'S

8
Now thou art in thy Pee and Kue.

THOMAS DEKKER, Satiro-mastix. (1602)

Bring in a quart of Maligo right true:

And looke, you rogue, that it be Pee and Kew.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, The Knave of Hearts. (1612)

You must mind your P's and Q's with him, I can tell you.

HANNAH COWLEY, Who's the Dupe? Act i, sc.

1. (1779) You must be very particular as to your words and behavior.

My sword I can well use,

So mind your P's and Q's.

RHODES, Bombastes Furioso, iv, 30. (c. 1800)

I used to tell the borough folks who kept our books, that they must mind their p's and q's.

HESTER LYNCH PIOZZI, in HAYWARD, Autobiography of Mrs. Piozzi, ii, 253. (1801)

I must be on my P's and Q's here, or I shall get my neck into a halter.

UNKNOWN, Apollo's Choice. In Modern British Drama, iv, 208. (a. 1814)

And I full five-and-twenty year

Have always been school-master here;

And almost all you know and see

Have learned their P's and Q's from me.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax's Tour in Search of Consolation. (1820)

P's and Q's, . . . perhaps from a French injunction to make proper obeisances, "Soyez attentifs à vos pies et vos cues."

JOHN T. BROCKETT, A Glossary of North Country Words, p. 167. (1825)

The Chinese are a prudent people—they mind their peas and cues.

GEORGE D. PRENTICE, Prenticeana, p. 28. (1860)

The most useful crop raised by the Chinese is peas, or, more specifically, soy beans.

He was rather on his p's and q's. [On his good behavior.]

BLATHERWICK, Uncle Pierce. Ch. 1. (1888)

And then the rector had to mind his p's and q's.

WILLIAM DE MORGAN, It Never Can Happen Again. Ch. 32. (1909)

Perhaps to mind your P's and Q's refers to the innkeeper's account of Pints and Quarts, although some have maintained that it is an idiom of the dancing school where attention was constantly being called to "pieds" and "queues." An explanation which is more probable than either of these finds the origin in the difficulty which the typesetter has in keeping his p's and q's from getting mixed.

ARCHER TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 194. (1931)

PACE

9
You can't keep up the pace . . . it will kill you.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 19. (1850)

There is an old proverb about the pace that kills.

LANE-POOLE, Sir Henry Parkes, p. 365. (1901)

This is the pace that kills.

NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 215. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> The hounds went the pace over the heath.

UNKNOWN, Sporting Magazine, xxiv, 47. (1829)

Each man will say you made them go the pace.

UNKNOWN, Brasenose Ale. (1854)

He went the pace, . . . as other young men do.

MRS. HENRY WOOD, St. Martin's Eve. Ch. 21. (1866)

PAGE

<sup>2</sup> The next bootes Ile make a page of my own age, and carry home myselfe.

ROBERT ARMIN, A Nest of Ninnies, 53. (1608)

"I'll do it myself."

Let him make a page of his age.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 30. (1633)

Make a page of your own age, and do it yourself.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Folk may just mak a page o' their ain age, and . . . gang their ain errands.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 32. (1818)

PAIN

<sup>3</sup> Fear not; great stress of pain is not for long. (θάρασει πόνου γὰρ τὰ κράνη οὐκ ἔχει χρόνον.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 352. (c. 475 B.C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 36B.

Great pains shortly spend their force, and long continued pains are not severe. (οἱ μεγάλοι πόνοι συντόμως ἐξάγουσιν, οἱ δὲ χρόνιοι μέγας οὐκ ἔχουσιν.)

EPICURUS. (c. 300 B.C.) According to DIOGENES LAERTIUS, (x, 140) one of the "leading principles" of Epicurus. Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 36B, who calls it "the oft repeated and much admired statement originating with Epicurus."

Pain is generally light if long, and short if severe. (Dolor in longinquitate levis, in gravitate brevis.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. i, ch. 12, sec. 40. (c. 45 B.C.)

If they want an antidote to pain, out comes from their medicine-chest the great Epicurean panacea, "If strong, short; if long, light." (Si gravis, brevis: si longus, levis.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. 7, sec. 22. Thou art naught but Pain. . . . Slight thou art, if I can bear thee; short thou art if I cannot bear thee! (Nempe dolor es. . . . Levis es, si ferre possum, brevis es, si ferre non possum.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxiv, sec. 14. (c. A.D. 64)

Remember that pain has this most excellent quality: if prolonged it cannot be severe, and if severe it cannot be prolonged. (Optimam doloris esse naturam, quod non potest nec qui extenditur magnus esse nec qui est magnus extendi.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xciv, sec. 7. Of Pain. When unbearable it destroys us; when lasting, it is bearable. (περὶ πόνου. τὸ μὲν ἀφόρητον ἐξάγει· τὸ δὲ χρόνιον, φορητόν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, No. 33. (c. A.D. 174) The saying is quoted, a paraphrase probably of Aeschylus or Epicurus.

This medicine thus ministred is sharpe and colde, But all thing that is sharpe is short, folk haue tolde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546) If pain be violent, it is short; if it is long, it is moderate. (Si la douleur est violente, elle est courte; si elle est longue, elle est legiere.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 40. (1580) Quoting Epicurus.

Great pains quickly find ease.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 536. (1640)

The fiercest agonies have shortest reign.

W. C. BRYANT, Mutation, l. 4. (a. 1844)

Long pains are light ones, Cruel ones are brief! J. G. SAXE, Compensation. (c. 1850)

The sharper the blast, the shorter 'twill last.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 19. (1875)

<sup>4</sup> Any pain, but not a heart-pain; any wicked ness, but not the wickedness of a woman. (πάσαν πληγήν, καὶ μὴ πληγήν καρδίας· καὶ πᾶσαν πονηρίαν, καὶ μὴ πονηρίαν γυναικός.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxv, 13. (c. 190 B.C.) In the Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 11a, this is quoted thus: "Any sickness, but not sickness of the bowels; any pain, but not pain of the heart; any ache, but not aching of the head; any evil, but not an evil woman."

Better is death than a life of vanity and eternal rest than continual pain.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxx, 17.

<sup>5</sup> Real pain can alone cure us of imaginary ills S. T. COLERIDGE, Notebooks. (1797)

<sup>6</sup> Resolved, When I feel pain, to think of the pains of martyrdom, and of Hell.

JONATHAN EDWARDS, Resolutions. (1722)

<sup>7</sup> He has seen but half the universe who never has been shown the house of Pain.

EMERSON, Natural History of Intellect: The Tragic. (c. 1870)

<sup>8</sup> The gods have so spun the thread for wretched mortals that they must live in pain. (ὥς γὰρ ἐπεκλώσαντο θεοὶ δειλοῖσι βροτοῖσι. | ζῶειν ἀχρυσμένους.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 525. (c. 850 B.C.) Suffering pain is common to mankind. (τὸ δ' ὀδυνᾶσθ' ἀνθρώπων.)

MENANDER, The Arbitrants. Frag. 176K. (c. 300 B.C.)

Pain is the price that God putteth upon all things.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1659)

The most universal fact in life is pain.

BISHOP BROOKE F. WESTCOTT, The Gospel of Life, p. 162. (1892)

<sup>9</sup> Pain is life—the sharper, the more evidence of life.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Bernard Barton, 9 Jan., 1824.

Hearts, like apples, are hard and sour,
Till crushed by Pain's resistless power.

J. G. HOLLAND, Bitter-Sweet.

1 Pain is perfect misery, the worst.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. vi, l. 462. (1667)

Pain is in itself an evil, and, indeed without exception, the only evil.

JEREMY BENTHAM, Principles of Morals. Ch. 10. (1789)

Pain is no evil, Unless it conquer us.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, St. Maura. (c. 1860)

2 Where one feels pain, there will he keep his hand. (ὅπου τις ἀλγεῖ, κειθὶ καὶ τὴν χεῖρ ἔχει.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Garrulity. Sec. 513E.

(c. A. D. 95) Quoting a proverb. There are two Latin forms, "Ubi dolor, ibi manus," and "Ubi dolor, ibi digitus" (finger) ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 44, after citing Plutarch, gives still another, "Ubi quis dolor, ibidem et manum habet."

The hand will be frequently and spontaneously moved to the part that is grieved. "Alla va la lengua, do duele la muela," the tongue goes to the tooth that is in pain.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 262. (1814)

3 Pain lessens when it has no means of growth. (Dolor decrescit ubi quo crescat non habet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 152. (c. 43 B. C.)

Pain of mind is worse than pain of body. (Dolor animi gravior est quam corporis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 166.

'Tis hard for pain to agree with patience. (Difficile est dolori convenire cum patientia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 168.

How pitiful the pain which has no voice amid torture. (Heu dolor quam miser est qui in tormento vocem non habet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 248.

The pain that kills pain acts as medicine. (Pro medicina est dolor dolorem qui necat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 511.

4 Pain forces even the innocent to lie. (Etiam innocentes cogit mentiri dolor.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 174. (c. 43 B. C.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, ii, 5. Ay, but I fear you speak upon the rack, Where men enforced do speak anything.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 32. (1597)

5 It is gain to be able to get rid of pain at the cost of a loss. (Lucrum est dolorem posse damno extinguere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 349. (c. 43 B. C.)

Pain is forgotten where gain follows.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 330. (1605)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 129. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3836. (1732)

No pain, no palm.

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. (1669)

When pain ends, gain ends too.

BROWNING, A Death in the Desert. (1864)

We are reminded of the Greek axiom, παθεῖν, μαθεῖν (Pain is gain).

DEAN PLUMPTRE, Ecclesiastes, vii, 3. (1881)

6 One fire burns out another's burning;

One pain is lessen'd by another's anguish.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 2, 46. (1595)

See also MISERY LOVES COMPANY.

7 It really gives me a pain in my stomach.

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act iii. (1904)

Harcourt without money was just a pain in the neck.

PETER CHENEY, A Trap for Bellamy, l. 112. (1941)

Just a pain in the neck.

LEE THAYER, Murder Is Out, p. 1. (1942)

To me he's just a pain in the neck.

D. H. FINK, Release from Nervous Tension, p. 39. (1943)

II—Pain and Pleasure

See also Compensation; Pleasure: Its Sting

8 Our pains are real things, but all
Our pleasures but fantastical.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Satire on the Weakness of Man, l. 81. (a. 1680)

Hard fate of man, on whom the heavens bestow
A drop of pleasure for a sea of woe.

SIR WILLIAM JONES, Laura. (a. 1790)

9 Sweet is pleasure after pain.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 58. (1697)

Pain past is Pleasure.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3838. (1732)

Pain past is pleasure, and experience comes by it.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 5. (1869) See also MEMORY: ITS SWEETNESS.

10 The magnitude of pleasure reaches its limit in the removal of all pain. (ὅρος τοῦ μεγέθους τῶν ἡδονῶν ἡ παντὸς τοῦ ἀλγοῦντος ὑπεξαίρεσις.)

EPICURUS, Souvan Maxims. No. 3. (c. 300 B. C.)

See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 139. In his Letter to Menoeceus, Epicurus defines pleasure as "the absence of pain in the body and trouble in the soul" (ἀλλὰ τὸ μὴτε ἀλγεῖν κατὰ σῶμα μὴτε ταραττεσθαι κατὰ ψυχὴν). The Maxim is cited also by AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, ii, 6.

Pleasure is nothing else but the intermission of pain.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Pleasure. (1689)

11 Pain wastes the body, pleasures the under-standing.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

The honest man takes pains, and then enjoys pleasures; the knave takes pleasure, and then suffers pain.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.

12 An Hour of Pain is as long as a Day of Pleasure.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 614. (1732)

I do not agree that an age of pleasure is no compensation for a moment of pain.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams, 1816.

1 Take a peyne for a pleasure all wyse men can.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

2 Scorn pleasure; pleasure bought by pain is harmful. (Sperne voluptates; nocet empta dolore voluptas.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2. l. 55. (20 B. C.)
Surrendering to pleasure means also surrendering to pain. (Si voluptati cessaro, cedendum est dolori.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. li, sec. 8. (c. A. D. 64)
Nothing tickles that doesn't pinch. (Rien ne chatouille qui ne pince.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 12. (1595)
Nothing gives pleasure but that which gives pain.

Pains are the Wages of ill Pleasures.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3839. (1732)
If pleasure was not followed by pain, who would forbear it?

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 89. (1758)

Men may scoff, and men may pray,

But they pay

Every pleasure with a pain.

W. E. HENLEY, Ballade of Truisims. (1893)

3 There is a certain pleasure which is akin to pain. (ἔστιν γὰρ τις ἡδονὴ λύπη συγγενής.)

METRODORUS, Apothegm. (c. 168 B. C.) See

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcix, sec. 26.

4 Pleasure itself is painful in its depth. (La volupté mesme est douloureuse en sa profondeur.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1595)
Nothing brings more pain than too much pleasure.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

Gorge yourself with sweets and you grow ill;

Pleasure that is past is changed to pain.

(Shuang k'ou shih to p'ien tso ping;

K'uai hsin shih kuo k'ung shêng yang.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 850. (1875)

The most intolerable pain is produced by prolonging the keenest pleasure.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

5 In all the tragedy and comedy of life, pain is mixed with pleasure. (τῇ τοῦ βίου ἐμπόσῃ τραγῳδίᾳ, καὶ κωμῳδίᾳ, λύπας ἡδοναῖς ἀμα κεράνυσθαι.)

PLATO, Philebus. Sec. 50B. (c. 350 B. C.)

After pleasur commethe payne.

UNKNOWN, Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 323. (c. 1450)

No pleasure without some paine.

RICHARD EDWARDS, The Paradyse of Dainty Devises, p. 64. (1576)

No blisse without bale.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, lii, 101. (1587)

No pleasure without pain. (Aulcun bien sans peine.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1595) The French also say, "Après la peine le plaisir."

Pleasure must bee purchased with the price of paine.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 107. (1576)
No state so plentifull in pleasure, but that it is mixed with paine.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 143.
Doe floudes drowne fieldes before they find a brack? can one be exalted without anothers wracke? Can I be preferred to pleasure without some others paine?

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 163.
His store of pleasure must be sauced with pain.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE, Dr. Faustus. Act v, sc. 4. (c. 1590)

Every pleasure hath a payne they say.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Blind Beggar of Alexandria. (1598) Works (1873), i, 29.

'Tis said the Gods try'd all their Art,

How, Pain they might from Pleasure part:

But, little could their Strength avail,

Both still are fast'ned by the Tayl.

SWIFT, To Doctor Delany, l. 31. (1730)

6 Men lay hold on pleasures and then again on pains. (Capiunt voluptates. capiunt rursum miserias.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitryon, l. 939. (c. 200 B. C.)

7 Surely with calamity comes rejoicing.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Apologue 28. (c. 1258)

8 No lot endures long; pain and pleasure in turn give place; more quickly pleasure. (Nulla sors longa est; dolor ac voluptas i invicem cedunt; brevior voluptas.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 596. (c. A. D. 60)

Painefull pleasure turnes to pleasing paine.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iii, canto x, st. 60. (1596)

PAINS

9 You might . . . have been a beggar for your pains.

FRANCES BURNEY, Evelina. Bk. i, ch. 21. (1778)

10 If little labour, little are our gains:

Man's fortunes are according to his pains.

ROBERT HERRICK, No Paines, No Gains. (1648)

No pains, no gains.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 462. (1855) See also under GAIN. Variants are, "Without pains no gains," "Nothing but poverty is to be got without pains," and "Forgotten pains when follow gains."

11 Pains is the price that God putteth upon all things.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs. (1659)

12 Particular pains particular thanks do ask.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act v. (1601)

13 They haue nought but . . . their paines for their sweate.

THOMAS NASHE, Preface to Green's Menaphon. (1589)

Lord, how we lose our pains.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, v, l. 24. (1602)

1 Give my sweet Nan this ring: there's for thy pains.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, iii, 4, 103. (1601)

Yet much he praised the pains he took,
And well those pains did pay.

WALTER SCOTT, Marmion. Canto i, st. 13. (1808)

PAINTER

2 I'll cut your painter for ye, I'll prevent ye doing me any mischief.

B.E., Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Painter. (a. 1700) The painter is the rope at the bow of a boat by which it is attached to a ship.

I'll cut your painter for you, I'll send you off.
FRANCIS GROSE, Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Painter. (1785)

"Cut your painter," make off.

SMYTH, Sailor's Word-Book: Painter. (1867)

The sooner we "cut the painter" . . . the better.

T. W. REID, Life of W. F. Forster, ii, 99. (1888)

The idea of "cutting the painter" is not popular.
EDWARD KINGLAKE, The Australian at Home, p. 4. (1891)

PAINTING

See also Art, Pictures

3 A good painter can draw a devil as well as an angel.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 311. (1639)

4 I, too, am a painter! (Anch' io sono pittore!)

ANTONIO CORREGGIO, on seeing Raphael's St. Cecilia at Bologna. (c. 1525)

There is nothing of the colouring of Titian the corregiescity of Correggio.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iii, ch. 12. (1760)
The corregioscity of Correggio.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk: On the Ignorance of the Learned. (1821)

5 There is Craft in Daubing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4892. (1732)

I have seen, and heard, much of cockney impudence before now; but never expected to hear a coxcomb ask two hundred guineas for flinging a pot of paint in the public's face.

JOHN RUSKIN, in Fors Clavigera, 2 July, 1877.

Ruskin was referring to Whistler's "Nocturne in Black and Gold," representing the fireworks at Cremorne. Whistler, enraged by the criticism, sued Ruskin for libel, asking £1000 damages, and won the verdict, with damages of a farthing.

6 They think themselves made bewtiful by the force of those artificial colours: not knowing as a Poet sayth, That painting could not Hecube Helene make.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 12. (1574) Pettie, tr. See also under FACE.

7 On painting and fighting look aloof.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

On painting and fighting look afar off.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1678)

On painting and fighting look abigh [at a distance]. It is dangerous to be near the one, and if we look near the other it loseth much of its advantage.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 273. (1721)

8 I am able to paint you in your proper colors.
(Possem ego te tuis coloribus pingere.)

SAINT JEROME. In Rufinum. (c. A. D. 400) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, Chil. i, cent. iv, No. 6.

Paint me as I am. If you leave out the scars and wrinkles, I will not pay you a shilling.

OLIVER CROMWELL, Remark, to Peter Lely, who was about to paint his portrait. (c. 1650) What Cromwell really said, as quoted by WALPOLE, Anecdotes of Painting, p. 444, was, "I desire you would use all your skill to paint my picture truly like me; but remark all these roughnesses, pimples, warts, and everything as you see me, otherwise I will never pay a farthing for it." See also the life of Cromwell in The Dictionary of National Biography.

9 Painting can illustrate, but cannot inform.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. See BOSWELL, Life, 1784.

10 Only God Almighty makes painters.

GODFREY KNELLER, to his tailor who asked him to make a painter out of his son. (c. 1710)

11 It does not matter how badly you paint, so long as you don't paint badly like other people.

GEORGE MOORE, Confessions of a Young Man. Ch. 7. (1888)

12 What vanity is painting, which attracts admiration to things which in the original we do not admire. (Quelle vanité que la peinture, qui attire l'admiration par la ressemblance des chose dont on n'admire pas les originaux!)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. x, No. 31. (c. 1660)

How weak is painting to describe a man.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Wordsworth, 22 Jan., 1830.

According to that old verse, . . . Astronomers, painters, and poets may lye by authority.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, A Briefe Apologie of Poetrie. Par. 3. (1591) See under POETRY.

13 A mere copier of nature can never produce anything great.

SIR JOSHUA REYNOLDS, Discourses on Painting No. 3. (1769)

A flattering painter who made it his care
To draw men as they ought to be, not as they are.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 63. (1774)
Of Sir Joshua Reynolds.

There are only two styles of portrait painting, the serious and the smirk.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 10. (1839)

1 Painting is silent poetry, poetry painting that speaks. (ζωγραφίαν ποίησιν σιωπῶσαν προσαγορεύει, τὴν δὲ ποίησιν ζωγραφίαν λαλοῦσαν.)

SIMONIDES. (c. 475 B.C.) According to PLUTARCH, The Glory of Athens, iii, 346.

Painting has been called mute poetry.

JOHN OPIE, Lectures on Painting, ii, 237. (1807)

Painting is the intermediate somewhat between a thought and a thing.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table-Talk, 30 Aug., 1827.

Good painting is like good cooking: it can be tasted, but not explained. (La bonne peinture, c'est comme le bonne cuisine: ça se goute mais ça ne s'explique pas.)

MAURICE DE VLAMINCK, On Painting. (c. 1910)

PALE

2 Pale as box sche was.

CHAUCER, Legend of Good Women, l. 866. (c. 1385)

3 Deed was her hew, and lyk an ash to seen.

CHAUCER, Legend of Good Women, l. 2649. (c. 1385)

His hew salow, and pale as asshen cold.

CHAUCER, The Knight's Tale, l. 506. (c. 1386)

With a face deed as asshen colde.

CHAUCER, The Phisicians Tale, l. 209.

He becam pale and dede as ashes.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Jason, p. 156. (c. 1477)

Pale, pale as ashes, all bedaubb'd in blood.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 2, 54. (1595)

The man grew pale as ashes.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tattler. No. 23. (1709)

Seeing her turn as pale as ashes.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. ii, ch. 19. (1758)

He was still as pale as gentlemanly ashes at what had taken place.

DICKENS, Edwin Drood. Ch. 10. (1870)

4 Then pale as privet, took she heart to drink.

MORRIS, The Earthly Paradise, i, i, 436. (1870)

5 The colour whereof is more pale than death.

WILLIAM PAINTER, The Palace of Pleasure, iii, 9. (1567)

Desert looks pale as death.

HENRY CHETTEL, Hoffman. Act i, sc. 1. (1602)

Lucy . . . turned as pale as death.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 35. (1815)

"'Tis me!" she said, with a face pale as death.

HARDY, Mayor of Casterbridge. Ch. 39. (1886)

6 Ay me, poor man, how pale and wan he looks.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iv, 4, 111, (1593)

Why so pale and wan, fond lover?

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Encouragements to a Lover. (1638)

7 Pale as his shirt, his knees knocking each other.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 1, 81. (1600)

Look pale as primrose.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iii, 2, 63. (1590)

As pale as milk.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v, 1, 345. (1596)

O ill-starred wench! Pale as thy smock!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, v, 2, 273. (1605)

She looks as pale as any clout.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 4, 218. (1595)

Unwieldy, slow, heavy and pale as lead.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 5, 17.

8 Thy paleness moves me more than eloquence.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 106. (1597)

9 Pale as yonder wan and hornèd moon.

SHELLEY, The Daemon of the World. Pt. i, l. 3. (a. 1822)

10 At a pale man draw thy knife.

ROBERT TOFTE, tr., Blason of Jealousie. (1615)

There is a Scottish proverb, "A pale man is envious," and a French one, "A pale face is worse than the itch."

11 She was as pale as paper.

PHILIP WYLIE, Corpses at Indian Stones, p. 158. (1943)

12 His face was pale as any clay.

UNKNOWN, in Roxburghe Ballads, p. 348.

He looks pale as clay.

WALTER SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto v, st. 27. (1813)

He was . . . as pale as clay.

R. L. STEVENSON, Letters, v, 11. (1893)

PALM

13 Nay, if an oily palm be not a fruitful prognostication, I cannot scratch mine ear.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 2, 52. (1606)

Do not dull thy palm with entertainment.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 64. (1600)

You yourself

Are much condemned to have an itching palm.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iv, 3, 9. (1599)

See under BRIBERY.

Palm to palm is holy palmer's kiss.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 5, 102. (1595)

14 Let all be present and expect the palm, the prize of victory. (Cuncti adsint, meritaque expectent præmia palmae.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 70. (19 B.C.)

To bear the palm. (Palmarum ferre.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iii, No. 4. (1523)

"It is a well-known fact," says XENOPHON, Cyropaedia, vii, v, 11, "that date-palms, when under heavy pressure, bend upwards like the backs of pack-asses." Aristotle, Pliny and Theophrastus make the same assertion, and this supposed quality of the palm to resist and bend upward against hard trial is alleged to be the reason it was chosen as the symbol of victory. See AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, iii, 6.

Let him who merits, bear the palm. (Palmarum qui meruit, ferat.)

JOHN JORTIN, Lusus Poetici: Ad Ventos. St. 4. (1722)

He who follows where he's led'll
Gain the palm and win the medal.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Message from Mars. (1940)

PAN

<sup>1</sup>
They immediately prospect it, which is accomplished by panning out a few basinfuls of the soil.

LOUISE CLAPPE (DAME SHIRLEY), The Shirley Letters from California Mines in 1851-52, p. 212. (1852)

I don't pan out on the prophets.

JOHN HAY, Pike County Ballads, p. 13. (1871)

That depends pretty much on how things pan out.
BRET HARTE, Drift from Two Shores, p. 116. (1879)

<sup>2</sup>
Great Pan is dead. (Πάν ὁ μέγας τέθνηκε.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: De Defectu Oraculorum. Ch. 17, sec. 419C. (c. A. D. 95) Plutarch is repeating a story told him by his teacher in grammar, Epitherses, of how once, when he was making a voyage to Italy, the ship had drifted close to the island of Paxi, and suddenly a voice came across the water from the island crying, "Great Pan is dead." A later legend placed this at the hour of the Saviour's agony on the cross. See SCHILLER, Götter Griechenlands, and HEINE, Reisebilder: City of Lucca. Ch. 6. Mrs. Browning, in her introduction to The Dead Pan, makes the mistake of asserting that Plutarch mentions this legend. HERODOTUS, History, ii, 145, says that among the Greeks, Pan was held to be the youngest of the gods, the son of Penelope and Hermes.

The great God Pan is dead. (Pan le grand dieu estoit mort.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 28. (1548)

PANDORA

<sup>3</sup>
I cannot lyken our affection better than to . . . Pandora's box, lift vppe the lidde, out flies the Deuill.

STEPHEN GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse (Arber), p. 44. (1579) The legend is that Jupiter gave Pandora a box containing all human ills, and when she opened it, they all flew forth to afflict mankind, but at the bottom Hope remained.

The sin of our first parent Adam . . . shadowed unto us in the tale of Pandora's box, which, being opened through her curiosity, filled the world full of all manner of diseases.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. i, mem. i, subs. 1. (1621)

There may be some hope left in the bottom of Pandora's box of calamities.

JOHN GOODMAN, The Penitent Pardoned. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1659)

The Eighteenth was a Sceptical Century; in which little word there is a whole Pandora's Box of miseries.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero Worship. Ch. 5. (1840)

Pandora's box was opened for him, and all the pains and griefs his imagination had ever figured were abroad.

MRS. LYNN LINTON, Paston Carew. Ch. 42. (1886)

The favours of Government are like the box of Pandora, with this important difference, that they rarely leave hope at the bottom.

J. E. T. ROGERS, The Economic Interpretation of History. Ch. 17. (1888)

PANJANDRUM

<sup>4</sup>
So she went into the garden to cut a cabbage-leaf to make an apple-pie; and at the same time a great she-bear, coming up the street, pops its head into the shop. "What! no soap?" So he died, and she very imprudently married the Barber: and there were present the Picninnies, and the Joblillies, and the Garyulies, and the Grand Panjandrum himself, with the little round button at top; and they all fell to playing the game of catch-as-catch-can, till the gunpowder ran out at the heels of their boots.

SAMUEL FOOTE, An Incoherent Story. (1755) See Quarterly Review, xcv, 516, Sept., 1854

The first use of Panjandrum, a nonsense word, occurring in a farrago produced by Foote at a lecture to test the memory of Charles Macklin, who had boasted that he could repeat anything after once reading it. The Memoirs of Foote do not mention the incident, and the attribution to him has been questioned. A correspondent of Notes and Queries, 16 Nov., 1850, asserts that the sentence was written by James Quin, the actor, to test Foote's memory.

He [the gardener] began to praise his carnations . . . One he called . . . "The envy of the world, or the great panjandrum."

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Harry and Lucy Concluded, ii, 46. (1825)

The little wide-awake, like the Panjandrum "with the little round button at the top."

F. H. LUDLOW, Little Brother, p. 39. (1867)

Panjandrum (The Grand), any village potentate or Brummagem magnate.

BREWER, Reader's Hand-Book: Panjandrum. (1880) Brummagem, imitation, cheap and showy, with reference to the plated ware made at Birmingham, England.

A sudden quacksalver, a Panjandrum of philanthropy.

ARTHUR MORRISON, A Child of the Jago, p. 148. (1896)

Put that question to the Great Panjandrum.

RICHARD LAKIN, The Body Fell on Berlin, p. 153. (1943)

PANTOUFLES

<sup>1</sup> He was not altogether set on his merri pinnes and walked on his stateli pantofles.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book (Camden), p. 14. (1573)

For the most part they stand so on their pantouffles.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 47. (1579)

On their dignity. "Pantoufle" is French for slipper

To stand upon his pantofles, or in high tearmes.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Bout. (1611)

He standeth too much on his pantofles.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 214. (1616)

The villain stands upon his pantofles, and begins to looke big.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina (T.T.), p. 255. (1631)

He is grown very proud; he stands on his pantofles.

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 1031. (1681)

I could not possibly today step out of my high historical pantouffles to tell it you.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letters, iii, 156. (1755)

PAP

<sup>2</sup> Pappe with an Hatchet.

JOHN LYLY. Title of pamphlet. (c. 1589)

I neither name Martin-mar-prelate: nor shame Papp wyth a hatchet.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Four Letters (Grosart), i, 164. (1592)

They give us pap with a spoone before we can speake, and when we speake for that we love, pap with a hatchet.

JOHN LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act i, sc. 3. (1594)

He that so olde seekes for a nurse so yong, shall have pappe with a Hatchet for his comfort.

ALEXANDER NICCHOLES, A Discourse of Marriage and Wiving. Ch. 9. (1615)

A custard was to him pap with a hatchet.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Pills to Purge Melancholy, iv, 329. (1719)

"To give pap with a hatchet," a proverbial phrase, meaning to do any kind action in an unkind manner.

J. P. HALLIWELL, A Dictionary of Archuic Words: Pap. (1847)

PAPER

<sup>3</sup> Let papers speak and beards be silent. (Haben cartas y callen barbas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1615)

When there is documentary evidence there is no need of any other.

<sup>4</sup> "Paper bleeds little," Robert Jordan quoted the proverb.

ERNEST HEMINGWAY, For Whom the Bell Tolls, p. 152. (1940) The French say, "Le papier souffre tout" (Paper endures everything); the Germans, "Papier ist geduldig" (Paper is patient).

<sup>5</sup> All this looks very well on paper.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter. (1795) Works, xiii, 64.

I'd rather see that done on paper.

LEWIS CARROLL (C. L. DODGSON), Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 6. (1865)

<sup>6</sup> I will do my duty as I see it, without regard to scraps of paper called constitutions.

KING WILHELM I OF GERMANY, Speech, to the Prussian Diet, which had refused to grant appropriations. (c. 1864) See Harper's Weekly, 26 March, 1887.

Just for a word, "neutrality," a word which in wartime has so often been disregarded—just for a scrap of paper, Great Britain is going to make war on a kindred nation, who desires nothing better than to be friends with her.

THEOBALD VON BETHMANN-HOLLWEG, German Foreign Minister, to Sir Edwin Goschen, British Ambassador, 4 Aug., 1914, as quoted by Goschen in a dispatch to the British Foreign Office. See War Encyclopedia, Govt Ptg. Office, Wash., 1918

PARABLE

<sup>7</sup> He spake many things unto them in parables. (καὶ ἐλάλησεν αὐτοῖς πολλὰ ἐν παραβολαῖς λέγων.)

New Testament: Matthew, xiii, 3. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Locutus est eis multa in parabolis."

Sound words, I know, Timothy is to use.

And old wives' fables he is to refuse;

But yet grave Paul him nowhere did forbid

The use of parables; in which lay hid

That gold, those pearls, and precious stones that were Worth digging for, and that with greatest care.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology for His Book (1678)

<sup>8</sup> The legs of the lame are not equal: so is a parable in the mouth of fools. (Sic indicens est in ore stultorum parabola.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 7. (c. 350 B. C.)

I will open my mouth in a parable: I will utter dark sayings of old. (Aperiam in parabolis os meum: loquar propositiones ab initio.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxviii, 2. (c. 250 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> Parables are not lies because they describe events which never happened.

BERNARD SHAW, St. Joan. Sc. 2. (1924)

PARADISE

See also Heaven

<sup>10</sup> He that will enter into Paradise, must have a good key.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 894.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1670)

He that will enter Paradise, must come with a right Key.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2347. (1732)

Thou hast the keys of Paradise, O just, subtle, and mighty opium!

THOMAS DE QUINCEY, Confessions of an Opium Eater. Pt. ii. (1822)

<sup>1</sup> Ase he dede to euen and to Adam in paradys terestre.

DAN MICHEL, Ayenbile of Inwytt, p. 50. (1340)
Bytwene the grete Inde & erthly paradise.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart the Foxe. Ch. 32. (1481) As developed by Christian fancy, the earthly paradise (as distinguished from the celestial paradise) is the old garden of Eden, which lay in the far East beyond the stream of Ocean.

The true Garden of Eden, or Earthly Paradise. (Le vray iardin & Paradis terrestre.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 57. (1548)

<sup>2</sup> The Paradise of Fools, to few unknown.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iii, l. 496. (1667)
See also FOOL: FOOL'S PARADISE.

<sup>3</sup> Paradise is a dwelling promised the faithful.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, iii, 132. (c. 622)

The Koran allots at least a third of Paradise to well-behaved women.

LORD BYRON, The Giaour, l. 498, note. (1813)

PARDON

See also Forgiveness

<sup>4</sup> You may pardon much to others, nothing to yourself. (Ignoscas aliis multa, nil tibi.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams. (c. A. D. 370)

Cato, who sayd, he pardoned every one but hymselfe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 102. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Pardon all but thyself.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Pardonner. (1611) HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 679. (1640)

<sup>5</sup> Never ask pardon before you are accused.

BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 458. (1855)

<sup>6</sup> Who offendeth not, lightly is pardoned, begin where you list. (A chi non ofende, legiermente si perdona cominciate pure.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 35. (1578)

<sup>7</sup> He that sharply chides, is the most ready to pardon.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2298. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> We pardon in proportion as we love. (On pardonne tant que l'on aime.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 330. (1665)

<sup>9</sup> It is for men to pardon, unless the pardoned puts one to shame. (Ignoscere hominum est nisi pudet cui ignoscitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 297. (c. 43 B. C.) The Arabs say, "Pardon is the choicest flower of victory."

PARENT

He who is pardoned in wrong-doing is condemned more shamefully by far. (Multo turpius damnatur cui in delicto ignoscitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 420.

A too feeble and dissolute facility in pardoning evil-doers, giveth them occasion to commit wickedness afterwards more readily, because of this pernicious confidence of receiving grace. (Facilité trop eneruee & dissolue de pardonner es malfaisans leur est occasion de plus legierement de rechief mal faire par ceste pernicieuse confiance de grace.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 50. (1534)

Pardon makes offenders.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 182. (1639)

Pardoning the Bad, is injuring the Good.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3842. (1732)

See also JUSTICE AND MERCY.

<sup>10</sup> I pardon him, as God shall pardon me.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, v, 3, 131. (1595)

God will pardon me; that's what he's for. (Dieu me pardonnera: c'est son métier.)

HEINRICH HEINE, on his death-bed. (1856)

PARENT

See also Father, Mother

<sup>11</sup> Whoso honoureth his father maketh an atonement for his sins. And he that honoureth his mother is as one that layeth up treasure.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iii, 3. (c. 190 B. C.)

A father's goodness is higher than the mountain; a mother's goodness is deeper than the sea.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 440. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

<sup>12</sup> There are three degrees of filial piety. The highest is being a credit to our parents, the second is not disgracing them; the lowest is being able simply to support them.

CONFUCIUS, The Book of Rites. Ch. 21. (c. 500 B. C.)

<sup>13</sup> No man can select his own parents.

HENRY DRUMMOND, Natural Law in the Spiritual World, p. 257. (1883)

<sup>14</sup> Parents are Patterns.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3843. (1732)

The hen who, from the chilly air,
With pious wing protects her care,
And ev'ry fowl that flies at large,
Instructs me in a parent's charge.

JOHN GAY, Fables, Introduction. (1727)

<sup>15</sup> Conduct thyself towards thy parents as thou wouldst wish thy children to conduct themselves towards thee. (τοιούτως γίγνου περί τοὺς γονεῖς, ὡς αὐ εὖ βαιο περί σεαυτὸν γενέσθαι τοὺς σεαυτοῦ παῖδας.)

ISOCRATES, Ad Demonicum. Sec. 14. (c. 365 B. C.) An anticipation of the Golden Rule.

See RULE: GOLDEN.

<sup>1</sup> The bequest was not made by a parent or person standing in loco parentis.

THOMAS JARMAN, ed., Powell's Essay on Devises, ii, 335. (1827) In loco parentis: in the place of a parent, a proverbial law phrase.

<sup>2</sup> My son, hear the instruction of thy father, and forsake not the law of thy mother. (Fili mi, disciplinam patris tui, et ne demittas legem matris tuae.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, i, 8. (c. 350 B. C.)

Hearken unto thy father that begat thee, and despise not thy mother when she is old. (Audi patrem tuum, qui genuit te: et ne contemnas cum senuerit mater tua.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 22.

<sup>3</sup> Love your parent, if he is just: if not, bear with him. (Ames parentem si aequus est: si aliter, feras.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 8. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> Honor the gods, reverence parents. (θεοὺς τιμα, γονέας ἀδοῦ.)

SOLON, Maxim. (c. 575 B. C.) See DIOGENES

LAERTIUS, Solon. Bk. i, sec. 60.

Honour thy father and thy mother: that thy days may be long upon the land which the Lord thy God giveth thee. (Honora patrem tuum et matrem tuam, ut sis longaevis super terram, quam Dominus Deus tuus dabit tibi.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xx, 12. (c. 550 B. C.)

The fifth Commandment.

Reverence for parents—this standeth written third among the statutes of Justice, to whom honor supreme is due. (τὸ γὰρ τεκόντων σέβας | τρίτον τόδ' ἐν θεσμοῖς | Δίκας γέγραπται μεγιστο-τιμον.)

AESCHYLUS, The Suppliant Maidens, l. 707. (c. 485 B. C.) Aeschylus is referring to the three supreme laws which Plutarch ascribes to Triptolemus: to worship the gods with the fruit of the earth, to hurt no living creature, and to honor parents.

To love our parents is the first law of nature. (Diligere parentes prima naturae lex est.)

VALERIUS MAXIMUS, Facta et Dicta Memorabilia. Bk. v, ch. 4, sec. 7. (c. A. D. 15)

The first law of nature, is to honour the father and the mother.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 72. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Honour thy father and mother, i. e. Live so as to be an honour to them tho' they are dead.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

<sup>5</sup> Everything is dear to its parent. (τὸ τεκόντι πᾶν φίλον.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 1108. (c. 408 B. C.) See under POSSESSIONS.

<sup>6</sup> Him on whom his parents have not smiled, no god honors with a table, no goddess with her bed. (Cui non risere parentes, | nec deus hunc mensa, dea nec dignita cubili est.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. No. iv, l. 62. (37 B. C.)

PARIS

<sup>7</sup> The Last Time I Saw Paris.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN II. Title of song. (1940)

Also title of book by Elliot Paul. (1942)

<sup>8</sup> Paris is well worth a Mass. (Paris vaut bien une Messe.)

HENRI IV, Remark (1593), when he became a convert to the Roman Catholic Church as a step toward winning Paris and the crown of France. It has been questioned whether Henri ever said it.

<sup>9</sup> All Paris goes to see it. (Tout Paris va voir.)

MOLIÈRE, L'Impromptu de Versailles. Sc. 5, l. 75. (c. 1662)

<sup>10</sup> The newspapers have given the rage of going to Paris a good name; they call it the French disease.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Horace Mann, 17 Oct., 1763.

Good Americans, when they die, go to Paris.

THOMAS GOLD APPLETON, Epigram. (a. 1858)

Quoted by Oliver Wendell Holmes. The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table, ch. 6, as a saying of one of the "Seven Wise Men of Boston." Used without credit by OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance, Act i.

PARSLEY

<sup>11</sup> Parsley must be sown nine times, for the devil takes all but the last.

CHARLOTTE BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 248. (1883) Probably originating from the fact that parsley remains some time in the earth before it begins to germinate <sup>12</sup> That phrase which we vse to little children, when we tell them they were borne in their mothers Parsly-bed.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Guzman d'Alfarache, i, 25. (1622)

For I am past a child

My selfe to thinke they are found in parsley beds.

RICHARD BROME, The Antipodes. Act i, sc. 4. (1640)

My mother indeed used to say that I was born to be a gardener's wife, as soon as ever I was taken out of her parsley bed.

UNKNOWN, The London Chaunticlères. Sc. 2. (1659)

Some sprigs of that bed Where children are bred.

SWIFT, Receipt for Stewing Veal. (c. 1730)

The child, when new-born, comes out of the persley bed, they will say in the North.

SAMUEL PEGGE, Anonymousiana. Bk. i, sec. 91. (1796)

We have the common English saying that the baby comes out of the parsley-bed.

CHARLOTTE BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 249. (1883) The saying no doubt stems from the alleged aphrodisiac quality of parsley.

<sup>13</sup> He needs parsley. (τοῦ σελίνου δεῖται.)

PLUTARCH, Symposium. Bk. v, sec. 676D. (c.

A.D. 95) There are two explanations of this proverb: (1) parsley is supposed to be an aphrodisiac, and the phrase was applied to a childless man; (2) parsley was hung on tombs, and when a person needed parsley he was very ill indeed.

<sup>1</sup> Parsley fried will bring a man to his saddle and a woman to her grave.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 345. (1678)

PARSON

<sup>2</sup> And there's a proverb, as they say,
That for the clerks the parsons pay.

WILLIAM COMBE, Doctor Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto iv. (1812)

<sup>3</sup> The parson knows enough who knows a Duke.

WILLIAM COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 403. (1784)

<sup>4</sup> Never spare the parson's wine, nor the baker's pudding.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733. Repeated in 1738.

<sup>5</sup> Parsons are souls' wagoners.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 937. (1640)

<sup>6</sup> Men saie (said he) long standyng and small offering

Maketh poore persons.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
Lang Standing, and little offering makes a poore prist.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 72. (c. 1595)
Long standing and poor offering maketh poor priests.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)
'Tis good enough for the Parson unless the parish were better. It is here supposed that if the Parish be very bad the Parson must be in some fault, and therefore that anything is good enough for that Parson whose parishioners are bad.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 187. (1678)

<sup>7</sup> The parson gets the children.

THOMAS KILLIGREW, The Parson's Wedding. Act ii, sc. 3. (1663) Quoted as a proverb.

<sup>8</sup> I could drag her past the parson's house, as they say.

HENRY MILLER, The Cosmological Eye, p. 314. (1939)

<sup>9</sup> The parson always christens his own child first.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
This would make a parson swear.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.

<sup>10</sup> A house-going parson makes a church-going people.

UNKNOWN, British Weekly, 2 Jan., 1913, p. 445. That is, a parson who visits his parishioners in their homes gets them to church.

<sup>11</sup> Let him ones begynne to pynche,
Or withdrawe their tithinge an ynche,
For an heretike they will him ascite.

UNKNOWN, Proper Dyaloge betwene a Gentillman and a Husbandman. (1530)

Lucilla perceiuing the drift of the olde foxe hir father . . . shaped him an answere which . . . pinched Philautus on the persons side.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 87. (1579)
Pinch on the parsons side, my lorde, the whorsons haue to much.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Ars Adulandi, sig. H1. (c. 1580)

This is a common slander when the hell-hound (the covetous wretch) pincheth on the priest's side: "No matter, let him talk for his living."

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 466. (1629)
To pinch on the parson's side, or sharp him of his tithes.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew. (1690)

PARTHIAN

<sup>12</sup> The best way to conquer sin is by Parthian war, to run away.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 222. (1629)
To look upon this Parthian fight of love.

EDMUND WALLER, Phillis. (c. 1640)
You wound, like parthians, while you fly,
And kill, with a Retreating Eye.

BUTLER, Hudibras to His Lady. l. 173. (1678)

<sup>13</sup> A "Parthian shot" was very literal to Crassus [a Roman general who was defeated by the Parthians at Carrhae in 53 B.C.]; to us it is only an elegant and pointed synonym for our method of "having the last word."

GREENOUGH AND KITTREDGE, Words, p. 380 (1902) The Parthians discharged their arrows over their shoulders while pretending to retreat.

Casting back Parthian glances of scornful hostility.

LISLE CARR, Judith Gwynne. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1874)

PARTING

See also Meeting and Parting

<sup>14</sup> Since there's no help, come let us kiss and part.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Idea. Sonnet lxi. (1593)

The day breaks not: it is my heart,
Because that you and I must part.

JOHN DONNE, Daybreak. St. 1. (a. 1631)

<sup>15</sup> The king of Babylon stood at the parting of the way. (Stetit enim rex Babylonis in bivio.)

Old Testament: Ezekiel, xxi, 21. (c. 600 B.C.)
Who hath not . . .

Stood doubtful at the Parting of the Ways?

J. R. LOWELL, The Parting of the Ways. (1849)

I was really able to bear up when we reached the parting of the ways.

RING LARDNER, Rhythm. (1926)

The parting of the ways, to reach a point (in one's life or in an enterprise) at which one is compelled . . . to choose between two courses of action or behaviour.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Parting. (1941) He attributes the beginning of the banal use to Lowell.

1

It is a pitie to part three things—the lawyer and his client, the physician and his patient, and a pot of good ale and toast.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1659)

2

A careless parting, between the old mare and the broken cart. Spoken when a husband or wife dies who did not love each other.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 54. (1721) There's sma' sorrow at our parting, as the auld mear said to the broken cart.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 27. (1818)

3

Say "au revoir" but not "good-bye."

HARRY KENNEDY, Say "Au Revoir" but Not "Good-bye." (1893) A cliché of the 90's.

4

Every parting gives a foretaste of death.

ARTHUR SCHOPENHAUER, Further Psychological Observations. (1851)

In every parting there is an image of death.

GEORGE ELIOT, Amos Barton. Ch. 10. (1859)

A phrase came into his head, "to part is to die a little."

ERIC AMBLER, Journey into Fear, p. 237. (1940)

A French proverb, "Partir c'est mourir un peu."

"To go away," the French say shrewdly, "is to die a little." But why has nobody ever made the parallel observation: "To return is to know what it is to be a ghost."

JAN STRUTHER, Mrs. Miniver. (1940)

5

Good night, good night! parting is such sweet sorrow.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 2, 185. (1595) And often took leave, but was loth to depart.

PRIOR, The Thief and the Cord. (c. 1721)

Many good nights is loth away.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 251. (1721)

PARTRIDGE

6

If the partridge had the woodcock's thigh, it would be the best bird that ever did fly.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 44. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6400. (1732)

If the partridge had the woodcock's thigh.

'Twould be the best bird that ever did fly;

If the woodcock had but the partridge's breast.

'Twould be the best bird that ever was dress'd.

JOHN DORAN, Table Traits, p. 176. (1854)

PARTY

7

Canst thou bring me to the party?

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iii, 2, 67. (1611)

Although it has usually been considered an Americanism, the older English writers frequently used "party" in the sense of "person."

'Tis the party, madame. What party? Has he no name?

BEN JONSON, Catiline. Act ii, sc. 2. (1611)

8

She . . . was the life and soul of the party

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairlegh. Ch. 41. (1850)

He was determined to be the life and soul of the party.

CHRISTIE, Evil Under the Sun, p. 223. (1941)

To be the life and soul of the party. To be so lively as to make a party a success. . . . Often an objectionable person.

PARTRIDGE, Dict. of Clichés: Life (1941)

II—Political Parties

9

He belonged to the third party, the quiddists or quids, being the tertium quid, . . . which had no name, but was really an anti-Madison movement.

HENRY ADAMS, John Randolph, p. 182. (1882)

"Tertium quid," a Latin proverbial phrase, meaning some third thing related to two other matters or causes.

10

All political parties die at last of swallowing their own lies.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, Epigram. (a. 1735) See

GARNETT, Life of Emerson, p. 165.

Sooner or later all politicians die of swallowing their own lies.

CLARE BOOTHE, Europe in the Spring, p. 140 (1940)

11

Recollect you were not made for the party, but the party for you.

H. H. BRACKENRIDGE, Modern Chivalry. (1792)

12

Ignorance leads Men into a Party, and Shame keeps them from getting out again.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753

13

A red Ribband in his hat signified that he was a Tory, . . . an Irish rebel. . . . Instead of Cavalier and Roundhead, they are now called Tories and Whigs.

OLIVER HEYWOOD, Diary, 24 Oct., 1681.

Tory. A cant term, derived, I suppose, from an Irish word signifying a savage. One who adheres to the ancient constitution of the state. Opposed to a Whig.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary: Tory. (1755)

The Irish word was tóraidhe, signifying a pursued person, hence an outlaw. See O.E.D. Since practically all Irishmen were Roman Catholics, it was applied as a nickname in 1679 to those who opposed the exclusion of James, Duke of York, from succession to the throne, because of his Catholicism; and finally, from 1689, to the Parliamentary party committed to upholding constituted order and authority in Church and State. Now the Conservative party. See under CONSERVATISM. During the American Revolution, the term was applied to those Americans who supported the forces of the King of England.

Whig: the name of a faction.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary: Whig. (1755)

Probably a shortening of "whiggamer," a member of the so-called Whiggamore raid in Scotland, in 1648, composed of Covenanters or Presbyterians who wrested the government from the Royalists and were generally considered rebels; from 1689 applied to the party now called Liberal. See O.E.D.

Where you see a Whig you see a rascal. . . . The first Whig was the devil.

JOHNSON. See BOSWELL, Life, 28 April, 1778.

A Whig may be a fool, a Tory must be so.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to William Mason, 4 July, 1778.

Toryism is an innate principle o' human nature—Whiggism but an evil habit.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. No. 4. (1822)

Tory and Whig in turn shall be my host;

I taste no politics in boiled and roast.

SYDNEY SMITH, Letter to John Murray, 1834.

<sup>1</sup> His Majesty's Opposition.

JOHN CAM HOBHOUSE, referring to the Opposition in the British House of Commons, 10 April, 1826.

The duty of an Opposition is to oppose.

GEORGE TIERNEY, Epigram. (c. 1821) Quoted by LORD STANLEY, Hansard's Parliamentary Debates, 4 June, 1841.

<sup>2</sup> There is always some basic principle that will ultimately get the Republican party together. If my observations are worth anything, that basic principle is the cohesive power of public plunder.

A. J. McLaurin, Speech, U.S. Senate, May, 1906.

We are Republicans, and we don't propose to leave our party and identify ourselves with the party whose antecedents have been rum, Romanism, and rebellion.

REV. SAMUEL DICKINSON BURCHARD, Address of Congratulation, to James G. Blaine, Republican candidate for President, at the Fifth Avenue Hotel, New York City, 29 October, 1884. A party of clergymen had come to the hotel to assure Blaine of their support, and Burchard, a Presbyterian preacher, acted as their spokesman. Blaine responded briefly, but apparently did not notice the phrase, "rum, Romanism, and rebellion," or did not realize its significance. At any rate he failed to repudiate it promptly, and it is supposed to have lost him the Presidency by throwing some of the New York Catholic vote to his opponent, Grover Cleveland. Cleveland carried the state by a plurality of 1149, and its electoral vote gave him the election. After the result was known, Blaine is said to have remarked, "I have been beaten by an ass in the shape of a preacher." Burchard's comment was, "If I have been an instrument in the hands of Providence against my own will, I am contented to abide by the consequences."

<sup>3</sup> Party-spirit at best is but the madness of many for the gain of a few.

POPE, Letter to Martha Blount, 27 Aug., 1714. A nation without parties is soon a nation without curiosity. . . . The extinction of party is the origin of faction.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to George Montague, 11 Dec., 1760.

All free governments are party-governments.

JAMES A. GARFIELD, Speech, House of Representatives, 18 Jan., 1878.

The best system is to have one party govern and the other party watch.

THOMAS B. REED, Speech, House of Representatives, 22 April, 1880.

<sup>4</sup> Now is the time for all good men to come to the aid of the party.

CHARLES E. WELLER. In the autumn of 1867, Christopher Latham Sholes constructed the first typewriter, at Milwaukee, Wis. Weller was a court reporter and friend of Sholes, and agreed to test the practicability of the machine. In his Early History of the Typewriter he says: "We were then in the midst of an exciting political campaign and it was then for the first time that the sentence was inaugurated . . . and repeated many times to test the speed of the machine." It is still used for that purpose by typewriter salesmen and repairmen.

PASSION

<sup>5</sup> We also are men of like passions with you. (ἡμεῖς ὁμοιοπαθεῖς ἐσμέν ὑμῖν ἄνθρωποι.)

New Testament: Acts, xiv, 15. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Nos mortales sumus, similis vobis homines."

Shepherds and ministers are both men; their nature and passions the same.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 10 May, 1748.

The Colonel's Lady and Judy O'Grady
Are sisters under their skins!

RUDYARD KIPLING, The Ladies. (1892)

<sup>6</sup> Do not associate to thyself the passionate man, nor approach him for conversation, . . . his lips are sweet, his tongue cold(?), (but) flame burns in his belly.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xi. l. 13. (c. 700 B. C.)

Make no friendship with an angry man, and with a furious man thou shalt not go. (Noli esse amicus homini iracundo, neque ambules cum viro furioso.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 24. (c. 350 B. C.) 'Twas the usual saying of a very ingenious person that passionate men, like Yorkshire hounds, are apt to overrun the scent.

SIR T. P. BLOUNT, Essays, p. 141. (1692)

A Man in Passion rides a Horse that runs away with him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 283. (1732)
A man in a Passion rides a mad horse.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

1 As sails are to a ship, so are the passions to the spirits.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Spirit. (1736)

2 No man can guess in cold blood what he may do in a passion.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 461. (1855)

3 Knowledge of mankind is a knowledge of the passions.

DISRAELI, The Young Duke. Ch. 2. (1831)

Man is only truly great when he acts from the passions.

DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. iv, ch. 13. (1844)

4 Passion overcometh sober thought;
And this is cause of direst ills to men.

(θυμός δὲ κρείσσων τῶν ἐμῶν βουλευμάτων, ὅσπερ μεγίστων αἰτίος κακῶν βροτοῖς.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 1079. (c. 431 B.C.)

As Reason is a Rebel unto Faith, so Passion unto Reason.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 19. (1643)

When Passion entereth at the Fore-gate, Wisdom goeth out of the Postern.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5564. (1732)

On life's vast ocean diversely we sail,
Reason the card, but Passion is the gale.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 107. (1732)

What Reason weaves, by Passion is undone.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. ii, l. 42.

5 The spirit yields and can resist no more,
Like anchor-hook in sand amid the surge.

(εἰκεῖ γὰρ ἤδη θυμός οὐδ' ἔρ' ἀντέχει, θιῶδες ὡς ἀγκίστρον ἀγκίρας σάλῳ.)

EURIPIDES (?) Fragments. Frag. 911, Nauck. (c. 420 B.C.) Helmbold, tr. Quoted by PLUTARCH.

TARCH, Moralia, 446A.

I, like a ship, am tied by ropes to shore,
But, when winds blow, the cables do not hold.
(ναὺς ὡς τις ἐκ μὲν γῆς ἀνήρτηται βρόχοις, πνέει δ' οἶρος, ἡμῖν δ' οὐ κρατεῖ τὰ πείσματα.)

EURIPIDES (?), Fragments. Frag. 911. Nauck.

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 446B, as "those famous lines." He says that the poet calls "cables" the judgments which resist shameful conduct, and are broken by passion, as by a great gust of wind.

6 It often falls out, that the end of passion is the beginning of repentance.

OWEN FELTHAM, Resolves. Ch. 8. (1628)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1749.

7 He that cannot bear with other People's Passions, cannot govern his own.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

If Passion drives, let Reason hold the Reins.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

He is a Governor that governs his Passions, and he is a Servant that serves them.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

Who is powerful? He that governs his Passions.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.

Passion will master you, if you do not master your passion.

WILLIAM HONE, Year-Book, col. 1417. (1831)

The Hindus say, "Conquer your passions and you conquer the whole world."

Strong as our passions are, they may be starved into submission, and conquered without being killed.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 347. (1820)

8 Passion is the twin sister of blindness.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninin (Choice of Pearls). No. 202. (c. 1050) Also MISHLEI SHUHALIM, Fable 102, quoting from The Art of Memory.

Passions unguided are for the most part madness.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1651)

Passion is the drunkenness of the mind.

ROBERT SOUTH, Sermons. Vol. ii, ch. 10. (1678)

Passion is a sort of fever in the mind, which ever leaves us weaker than it found us.

PENN, Fruits of Solitude. No. 279. (1693)

9 The passions are the gates of the soul. (Son las pasiones los portillos del ánimo.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 98. (1647)

10 Place a curb and drag on your passion. (Pone irae frena modumque.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 88. (c. A. D. 120)

11 The passions are the only orators which always persuade. (Les passions sont les seuls orateurs qui persuadent toujours.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 8. (1665)

We fail to realize how much our actions are influenced by passion. (Il s'en faut bien que nous connaissions tout ce que nos passions nous font faire.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 460.

The passions are merely different kinds of self-love. (Les passions ne sont que les divers goûts de l'amour-propre.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Posth. No. 531.

All the passions are nothing but different degrees of heat and cold of the blood. (Toutes les passions ne sont autre chose que les divers degrés de la chaleur et de la froideur du sang.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supp. No. 564

12 It is with our passions, as it is with fire and water, they are good servants but bad masters.

L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables, p. 38. (1692)

13 Passions spin the plot:

We are betrayed by what is false within.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 43. (1862)

Passions Spin the Plot.

VARDIS FISHER. Title of novel. (1933)

14 The natural man has only two primal passions. to get and to beget.

WILLIAM OSLER, Science and Immortality. Ch. 2. (1904)

15 A slave of passion. (πάθους δοῦλος.)

PHILO, De Vita Mosis. Bk. i, sec. 299. (c. A. D. 40)

Give me that man

That is not passion's slave, and I will wear him
In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 76. (1600)

Serving one's own Passions is the greatest Slavery.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4103. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> 'Tis lightning when passion dwells with power.
(Fulmen est ubi cum potestate habitat iracundia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 214. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> A learned man who is ruled by his passions is like a blind man holding a torch: he guides others but not himself.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 5. (c. 1258)

<sup>3</sup> No mortal man has ever served at the same time his passions and his best interests.
(Neque quisquam omnium lubricini simul et usui paruit.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 51. (c. 41 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> The seas's my mind, which calm would be
Were it from winds (my passions) free.

SIR JOHN SUCKLING, Love's World. (a. 1642)

The seas are quiet when the winds give o'er;
So calm are we when passions are no more.

EDMUND WALLER, On the Last Verses in the Book. (1687)

All the passions are extinguished with age.
(Toutes les passions s'éteignant avec l'âge.)

VOLTAIRE, Stances ou Quatrains. (c. 1750)

From Hate, Fear, Hope, Anger, and Envy free,
And all the Passions else that be.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, The Passions. (1647)

Calm of mind, all passion spent.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 1758. (1671)

<sup>5</sup> The worst passions have their root in the best.
H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 12 Dec., 1837.

<sup>6</sup> Few passions are constant, but many are sincere. (Il y a peu de passions constantes; il y en a beaucoup de sincères.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 40. (1746)

The passions have taught mankind to reason.
(Les passions ont appris aux hommes la raison.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 154. (1746)

Various other French moralists have said almost the same thing: "C'est le chemin des passions qui m'a conduit à la philosophie" (It is the path of the passions which has led me to philosophy), ROUSSEAU; "La passion déprave, mais elle élève aussi" (Passion de-bases, but it also elevates), LAMARTINE; "Ce sont les passions qui font et qui défont tout" (It is the passions which make and unmake everything), FONTANELLE.

<sup>7</sup> Does his own fatal passion become to each man his God? (Sua cuique deus fit dira cupido?)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ix, l. 185. (19 B. C.)

Search then the Ruling Passion: there alone,
The wild are constant, and the cunning known.

POPE, Moral Essays, Ep. i, l. 174. (1732)

The ruling Passion, be it what it will,
The ruling Passion conquers Reason still.

POPE, Moral Essays. Ep. iii, l. 153.

One Master-passion in the breast,
Like Aaron's serpent, swallows up the rest.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Ep. ii, l. 131. (1732)

Seek for their predominant passion, . . . and you will then know what to bait your hook with to catch them.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Sept., 1748.

In the human breast

Two master-passions cannot co-exist.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, Theodric, l. 488. (1824)

When you find out a man's ruling passion, beware of crossing him in it!

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 116. (1824)

<sup>8</sup> Passion and prejudice govern the world; only under the name of reason.

JOHN WESLEY, Letter to Joseph Benson, 5 Oct., 1770.

Philosophy is a feeble antagonist before passion.

HUGH BLACK, Culture and Restraint. Ch. 4.

(1901)

<sup>9</sup> There is always something ridiculous about the passions of people whom one has ceased to love.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray
(1891)

PAST

See also Antiquity, Time, Yesterday

<sup>10</sup> Think only of the past as its remembrance gives you pleasure.

JANE AUSTEN, Pride and Prejudice. Ch. 58
(1813)

<sup>11</sup> What has been has been. (Érase que se era.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 20. (1605)

Conversely, in Italian, "Che sara, sara"

(What will be, will be). See under DESTINY

LET BYGONES BE BYGONES, see under BYGONES

<sup>12</sup> We cannot alter the past. (Praeterita mutare non possumus.)

CICERO, In Pisonem. Ch. xxv, sec. 59. (55 B. C.)

Nor does past time ever return. (Nec praeteritum tempus umquam revertitur.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xix, sec. 69. (44 B. C.)

Neither will the wave that has passed be called back, nor can the hour which has gone return (Nec quae praeteriit, iterum revocabitur unda, nec quae praeteriit hora redire potest.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 63. (c. 1 B. C.)

Things past my handis, I can not call again.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Things past, are past calling againe.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 37. (1579)

Things past cannot be recalled.

LYLY, Mother Bombe. Act iv, sc. 1. (1594)

That that is past, cannot be recalled or helped

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 151. (1616)

Not Heav'n it self upon the past has pow'r.

DRYDEN, Imitation of Horace, iii, 29, 71. (1685)

No repentance on earth can undo the past.

BISHOP B. F. WESTCOTT, The Gospel of Life, p. 18. (1892)

1
Th' past always looks better thin it was.
It's only pleasant because it isn't here.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, A Family Union. (1898)

THE GOOD OLD TIMES, see under ANTIQUITY.

2
We all live in the past and perish by the past.
(Wir alle leben vom Vergangenen und gehen am Vergangenen zugrunde.)

GOETHE, Sprüche in Prosa. (1819)

3
What is past even the fool knows. (πεχθὲν δέ τε νῆπιος ἔγνων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 32. (c. 850 B. C.) See also WISDOM AFTER THE EVENT.

4
Whatsoever of our age is past death holds it.
(Quicquid aetatis retro est, mors tenet.)

SIR WALTER RALFEH, History of the World: Preface. (1614) Quoted.

Let the dead Past bury its dead!

HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life. (1838)

Oh! leave the past to bury its own dead.

W. S. BLUNT, To One Who Would Make a Confession. (c. 1922)

The Past is a bucket of ashes.

CARL SANDBURG, Prairie. (1922)

5
Nothing is certain except the past. (Nihil nisi quod praeteriit certum est.)

SENECA, De Consolatione ad Marciam. Sec. 22. (c. A. D. 60)

6
The dark backward and abysm of time.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act i, sc. 2, l. 50. (1611)

The misty black and bottomless pit of time.

THOMAS DUFFET, The Mock-Tempest. Act i. (1675)

7
What's past is prologue.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 253. (1611)

8
O that Jupiter would give back to me the years that are past! (O mihi praeteritos referat si Iuppiter annos.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 560. (19 B. C.)

But the tender grace of a day that is dead
Will never come back to me.

TENNYSON, Break, Break, Break. (1842)

So sad, so strange, the days that are no more

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. iv, l. 35. (1847)

O Death in Life, the days that are no more!

TENNYSON, The Princess: Pt. iv, l. 40.

9
The past at least is secure.

DANIEL WEBSTER, Speech, on Foote's Resolution, Senate, 26 Jan., 1830.

Our past has gone into history.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY, Speech, at Memphis, 30 April, 1901.

II—Past and Present

10
The Present is the living sum-total of the whole Past.

CARLYLE, Essays: Characteristics. (1840)

11
The dogmas of the quiet past are inadequate to the stormy present.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Second Annual Message to Congress, 1862.

12
Past and to come, seems best; things present, worst.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 3, 108. (1598)

13
A sensible man judges of present by past events. (Ἐννοῦς τὰ καιρὰ τοῖς πάλαι τεκμαίρεται.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus Tyrannus, l. 916. (c. 409 B. C.)

By things passed, things present are judged.
(Dalle cose passate, si giudicano le presente.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

We read the past by the light of the present.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies: Society in Italy (c. 1860)

From the past we judge the present. (Ex praeteritis praesentia aestimantur.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 110. (1869)

Most people admit that past events lead up to the present.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 283. (1940)

14
The things which are, which have been, and which may happen in time to come. (Quae sint, quae fuerint, quae mox ventura trahantur.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. iv, l. 393. (29 B. C.)

The stupid speak of the past, the wise of the present, fools of the future. (Les sots parlent du passé, les sages du présent, les fous de l'avenir.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Epigram. (c. 1810) See GUILLON, Napoléon, p. 293.

The present is dry and dreary; the future is hidden. All the richness, all the splendour, all the grace of the world is in the past. (Le présent est aride et troublé, l'avenir est caché. Tout la richesse, toute la splendeur, toute la grâce du monde est dans le passé.)

ANATOLE FRANCE, La Vie en Fleur. Ch. 3. (c. 1900)

III—Past and Future

15
Others fear what the morrow may bring, but I am afraid of what happened yesterday.

ABDULLAH ANSARI, Invocations. (c. 1075)

16
You can never plan the future by the past.

EDMUND BURKE, Letter, to a member of the National Assembly. (1791)

That is doon is not to come!

CHAUCER (?), The Book of the Duchesse, l. 708. (c. 1369)

17
Study the past, if you would divine the future

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xii. (c. 500 B. C.)

The past observe, what is to come foresee,
Like Janus, facing both ways equally.
(Quod sequitur spectat quodque imminet ante videto: illum imitare deum, partem qui spectat utramque.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 27. (c. 175 B.C.)
By the needle you shall draw the thread, and by that which is past, see how that which is to come will be drawn on.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 331. (1640)
He that would know what shall be, must consider what hath been.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2367. (1732)
What has been, may be.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5491.
She knew the future, for the past she knew.

LANGHORNE, The Country Justice, l. 214. (1774)
I know no way of judging the future but by the past.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, in Virginia Convention, March, 1775.

I watch the wheels of Nature's mazy plan,
And learn the future by the past of man.

CAMPBELL, Pleasures of Hope. Pt. i, l. 319. (1799)
The best prophet of the future is the past.

LORD BYRON, Letter, 28 Jan., 1821. Quoted by JOHN SHERMAN, Speech, U.S. Senate. 5 June, 1890.

From what has happened we infer what is about to happen. (Ab actu ad posse valet illatio.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 2. (1869)
From the past you may foresee the future.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
2453. (1875)

1
The past is clear as a mirror, the future as hard as lacquer. (Kuo ch'ü shih ming ju ching; wei lai shih an ju ch'i.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 279. (1872)

2
The Time to come is no more ours than the
Time past.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4794. (1732)

3
I like the dreams of the future better than the history of the past.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to John Adams,
1816. "Hats off to the past; coats off to the future" is of American origin.

4
As good comes behind as goes before.

GEORGE MERITON, Yorkshire Ale, p. 83. (1683)
The future is only the past again, entered through another gate.

PINERO, Second Mrs. Tanqueray. Act iv. (1893)

PATCH

5
Ragged sooner than patched. (Antes roto que remendado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1615)
Though I have patches on me pantaloons, I've ne'er a wan on me intestines.

FINLEY P. DUNNE, Thanksgiving. (1901)

6
Works with noble beginnings and grand promises often have one or two purple patches so stitched on as to glitter far and wide. (Inceptis gravibus plerumque et magna professis | purpureus, late qui splendeat, unus at alter | adsuitur pannus.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 14. (c. 20 B.C.)
His morality is not in purple patches, . . . but woven in through the very texture of the stuff.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Helen. Vol. i, ch. 2. (1834)
Referring to Sir Walter Scott.

7
The hole and the patch should be commen-surate.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to James Madison.
(1787)

8
No man ever stood lower in my estimation for having a patch in his clothes.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1. (1854)

9
Patch by patch is yeomanly; but patch upon patch is beggarly.

UNKNOWN, in Berkeley MSS., iii, 33. (1639)

Patch by patch is good housewifery, but patch upon patch is plain beggary.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 129. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6181. (1732)

PATERNOSTER

10
Common profane persons . . . that make the profession of the gospel have an evil name;
hence that proverb, Paternoster set up churches; 'Our Father' pulls them down.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 311. (1629)
Shall Pater noster build churches, and Our Father pull them down (as the proverb is)?

THOMAS FULLER, Selected Sermons (1891), i,
426. (1644)

There is a generation of people who, to prevent the verifying of the old proverb, 'Pater noster built churches, and Our Father plucks them down,' endeavour to pluck down both churches and our Father together.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies (1840), i, 44. (1662)
Pater-noster built churches, and Our Father pulls them down. I do not look upon the building of churches as an argument for the goodness of the Roman religion, for . . . it's easier to part with one's goods than one's sins.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 70. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3851. (1732)

11
Yet wol they seyn harm and grucche and murmure priuely for verray despyt, whiche wordes men clepen the deueles Pater noster.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Persones
Tale*, Sec. 30. (c. 1386) A grumbling to oneself, or a muttered imprecation.

I murmure, I make a noyse, I bydde the dyuels
Pater noster.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, p.
642/1. (1530)

And streight as she saw me, she swelde lyke a tode,
Pattryng the dyuels Pater noster to hir selfe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

<sup>1</sup> A Man may say even his Pater-noster out of time.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 299. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> Some men saie, no peny no Pater noster.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
See under PENNY.

No Pater Noster, no Penny; now—No Sermons, not a Penny, not a farthing.

EDMUND HICKERINGILL, Priest-Craft. Bk. ii, ch. 2. (1707) No work, no pay.

<sup>3</sup> He maie be in my Pater noster in deede, But be sure, he shall neuer come in my Creede.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
He may be in my Pater-noster, but never in my Creed.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 270. (c. 1594)

HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1659)

[Flatterers] are the commonwealth's wolves. Put them in your Paternoster, let them never come in your creed: pray for them, but trust them no more than thieves.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 247. (1629)

<sup>4</sup> In a paternoster-while.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text A, passus v, l. 192. (1362) A little while, a time in which one might say a Paternoster.

Though it be but a Pater-noster while.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons (P.S.), p. 37. (1536)

Let it so abyde the space of halfe a Pater-noster.

JOHN HOLLYBUSH, tr., Homish Apothecarye, p. 3. (1561)

The Worm will die within the space of a Pater Noster.

NEHEMIAH GREW, Musaeum Regalis Societatis, i, 175. (1681)

And think ever a pater-noster-while in Bennet Hatch.

STEVENSON, The Black Arrow: Prologue. (1888)

<sup>5</sup> When we be disposed to despise a man . . . we say, 'He cannot say his Paternoster.'

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons (P.S.), p. 389. (1552)

<sup>6</sup> Say the monkey's Paternoster. (Disoit la patenostre du cinge.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534)

To chatter, or didder for cold; to say an apes Paternoster.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Barboter. (1611)
You're saying the ape's Paternoster [said to one whose teeth are chattering with cold].

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 4. (1846)

PATH

<sup>7</sup> From the lowest depth there is a path to the loftiest height.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (1833)

<sup>8</sup> In all one's life one ought not to stray a nail's breadth from the straight path of conscience. (In omni vita sua quemque a recte conscientia traversum unguem non oportet discedere.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xiii, epis. 20. (45 B.C.)

He was up once for larceny, but he's kept to the straight and narrow since.

J. S. STRANGE, Look Your Last, p. 17. (1943)

<sup>9</sup> The beaten path grows no grass. (Batus ne croist point d'erge.)

JEAN DE CONDÉ, Le Sentier Batu, l. 107. (c.1250)
See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, iii, 249

<sup>10</sup> It's not my fault if the public insists on beating a path to your door.

HULBERT FOOTNER, Murderer's Vanity, p. 17. (1940) See also MOUSETRAP.

<sup>11</sup> Every path hath a puddle.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 217 (1640) FITZGERALD, Polonius, p. 153. (1852)

Ilke bean has its black, and ilka path has its puddle.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 38. (1817)

So I say, "every path has its puddle," and try to play gayly with the tadpoles in my puddle.

LOUISA M. ALCOTT, Letter to Her Sister. (1861)

<sup>12</sup> What was only a path is now a highroad (Modo quae fuerat semita, facta via est.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vii, epig. 60. (c. A. D. 90)

<sup>13</sup> No one forbids anyone to go by the public path (i. e. the ordinary and beaten path).

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 35. (c. 200 B.C.)

THE BEATEN PATH IS SAFEST, see CONVENTION.

<sup>14</sup> Paths can't be made without feet.

MRS. ANN RADCLIFFE, The Romance of the Forest. Ch. 2. (1791)

<sup>15</sup> The primrose path of dalliance.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 50. (1600) See PREACHING AND PRACTICE. The French call it "Le chemin de velours."

Jonathan shuns the primrose path, And starts the day with an icy bath.

OGDEN NASH, Tell It to the Eskimos. (1940)

<sup>16</sup> The path of iniquity is broad and smooth: you just let go and slide.

THORNE SMITH, Passionate Witch, p. 209. (1941)

PATIENCE

<sup>17</sup> If a man has patience, what need has he of armor?

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 21. (c. A. D. 625)
Regnaud translates it, "La patience est une cuirasse."

Patience is the invulnerable shield of the defenseless.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim (Choice of Pearls). No. 147. (c. 1050)

Patience is the best Buckler against Affronts.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3857. (1732)

<sup>18</sup> Patience is so like fortitude that she seems either her sister or her daughter.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 472 (1855) Paraphrasing Aristotle.

1 Our patience will achieve more than our force.
EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. (1790)

2 Greatest of human virtues is always patience.
(Maxima enim est hominum semper patientia virtus.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 38. (c. 175 B.C.)
Suffraunce is a souereyne vertue.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus xi, l. 370. (1377) The C text, xiv, 376, has "Bele vertue est soffraunce."

Pacience is an heigh vertu certeyn;
For it venquisseth, as thise clerkes seyn,
Thinges that rigour sholde never attene.

CHAUCER, Frankleyns Tale, l. 45. (c. 1388)
Therefore seith seint Jame in his epistle: that "pa-cience is a greet vertu of perfeccioun.

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 46. (c. 1387)
Patience, as Poets say, and Philosophers, is a great vertue: Pacience is the best medicine that is,
for a sicke man, the most precious plaister that is,
for any wounde: pacience comforteth the sadde, gladdeth the mournful, contenteth the poore, healeth the sicke, it easeth the afflicted, content-eth thy friendes, annoyeth thyne enemies, helpeth all men, hurteth no man, it is a great thyng to fynde one man that is pacient.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 44. (1578)
Patience is a virtue, but pinching is worse than any vice!

LYLY, Mother Bombie. Act v, sc. 3. (1594)
Patience is a virtue.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works (Grosart), ii, C7.
(1599) VANBRUGH, The Confederacy. Act iii, sc. 2. (1706) RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandi-son, ii, 17. (1753) etc., etc.

Patience is a rare virtue. The greatest virtue is patience. (Patientia rara virtus. Maxima virtus patientia.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 153. (1778)
Patience, which alike to the Pagan and the Christian world, to the Oriental and the Occidental mind, is the greatest virtue of man.

GEORGE EDWARD WOODBERRY, Virgil. (a. 1930)

3 Griselde is deed, and eek hire pacience.

CHAUCER, The Clerk's Tale, l. 1177. (c. 1386)
For patience she will prove a second Grissel.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, ii, 1,
297. (1594)

Your patient Grizzles make nothing of it.

SUSAN FERRIER, Marriage. Ch. 46. (1818)

The part she had to play in life is known to have been the "patient Grizel" business.

SIR H. MAXWELL, Meridiana, p. 155. (1892)
The story of patient Griselda is from Boccaccio, Decameron, x, 10. (c. 1350), where Griselda endures uncomplainingly all the trials and humiliations to which her husband subjects her.

4 Patience and shuffle [the cards]. (Paciencia y barajar.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 23. (1615)
Frequently quoted, recently by VIRGINIA
RATH, Posted for Murder, p. 247. (1942)

O Cousin, I say, Patience and Shuffle.

JOHN SHELTON, tr. Quixote, iii, 33. (1620)
But, as Durandarte says, . . . "Patience, cousin, and shuffle the cards."

WALTER SCOTT, Letter, to Joanna Bailey, 23
Nov., 1810.

And cut the fiercest quarrels short
With—"Patience, gentlemen—and shuffle!"

W. M. PRAED, Poems (1864) ii, 141. (c. 1830)

5 Dame Pacience sitting ther I fond

With face pale, upon an hille of sond.

CHAUCER, The Parlement of Foules, l. 242. (c.
1382)

She sat like patience on a monument,
Smiling at grief.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 4, 117. (1599)
That Patience-on-a-Monument kind of look.

HENLEY AND STEVENSON, Beau Austin. Act i, sc.
2. (1892)

6 Salomon seith: that "the doctrine and the wit of a man is known by pacience."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 46. (c. 1387)
Salomon seith: that "he that is nat pacient shal have greet harm."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 48.

7 Patience is a good nag, but she'll bolt.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 121.
(1875) There is a variant, "Patience is a stout horse, but it tires at last."

8 How far then, Catiline, will you abuse our patience? (Quo usque tandem abutere, Cati-lina, patientia nostra?)

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. i, ch. 1, sec. 1. (63 B.C.)
My patience is worn out by your faults. (Vitiis patientia victa est.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 1. (c. 13 B.C.)

9 Want of patience [or forbearance] in small matters confounds great plans.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xv, ch. 26. (c. 500 B.C.)

10 When our hopes break, let our patience hold.
THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Expecting Preferment. (1642)

In doubtful Matters, Courage may do more than Patience.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2817. (1732)
Patience is good for abundance of Things besides the Gout.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3856.

What is the Use of Patience, if we cannot find it when we want it?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5499.

What signifies your Patience, if you can't find it when you want it?

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

11 By patience one avoids still greater trouble.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim
(Choice of Pearls). No. 104. (c. 1050)

Patience reaps peace, and rashness regret; the former riches, the latter poverty.

IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim. No. 145.

1 Patience Perforce.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE. Title of poem. (1575)
He must have patience perforce, seeing there is no remedy.

UNKNOWN, Three Ladies of London. (1584) In HAZLITT, Old English Plays, iv, 303.

But patience perforce; he must abide
What fortune and his fate on him will lay.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iii.
canto x, st. 3. (1590)

Here's patience perforce,
He needs must trot afoot that tires his horse.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, A Woman Kill'd with Kindness. Act iv, sc. 6. (1607)

Patience perforce is medicine for a mad horse.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

Patience perforce is medicine for a mad dog.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 130. (1670)

According to the proverb, Patience per force, and
Thank you for nothing.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. Pt. ii.
No. 188. (1702)

"Patience perforce" was what I heard of every day in Portugal,— . . . it must be practised at last, whether you like it or not.

ROBERT SOUTHHEY, Letter, to Mrs. Hughes, 7
Dec., 1837.

Patience perforce, a phrase when some evil must be endured which cannot by any means be remedied.

J. O. HALLIWELL, *Dictionary of Archaic Words:
Perforce*. (1847)

2 Pacience, Which is the leche of all offence.

As tellen us these olde wise.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii, l. 614.
(c. 1390)

Be plastered with pacience.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text
C, passus xx, l. 89. (c. 1393)

Pacience, . . . the most precious plaister that is,
for any wounde.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 44. (1578)
The French say, "Patience est un onguent bon pour toutes les plaies."

Patience is a plaister for all paine.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, m 4. (1605)

Patience is a plaister for all sores.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 15. (1639)

Patience is sorrow's salve.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Prophecy of Famine,
l. 363. (1763)

Drugging pain by patience.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, To a Gypsy-Child by the Seashore, l. 13. (1849)

3 Patience. time. and money accommodate all things.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 500.
(1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3858.
(1732) "Patience wears out stones."

Patience and time accomplish more than strength or anger. (Patience et longueur de temps Font plus que force ni que rage.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Lion et le Rat. Bk. ii, fab. 11. (1668)

Patience and Diligence, like Faith, remove mountains.

PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 234. (1693)
Patience and Application will carry us through

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3852. (1732)
By diligence and patience the mouse bit in two the cable.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

Nothing is so full of victory as patience.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 372
(1938) A Chinese proverb. The Hindus say,

"Patience is the greatest prayer," one of the sayings attributed to Buddha; Mahomet said, "Patience is the key of content," and the Turks go even farther, "Patience is the key of Paradise." The French say, "Patience passe science," and the Dutch, "Geduld gaat boven geelerdheid" (Patience surpasses learning) and also, "An ounce of patience is worth a pound of brains."

4 Though God take the sun out of the heaven. yet we must have patience.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 978.
(1640) There is a variant. "Though we lose fortune, we should not lose patience"

5 He that hath patience, hath fat thrushes tor a farthing.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 432 (1640)

He that can have patience can have what he will

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736

Patience in Market, is worth Pounds in a year

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753

He who can have patience gets what he wishes
(Chi aspettar puole, | Viene a ciò che vuole.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 179.
(1856) An Italian proverb, for which the French also have a jingle, "Qui peut patienter, | Finira par arriver" (He who has patience will finish by arriving). Cahier cites a similar German proverb. "Der Geduldige treibt den Ungeduldigen aus dem Lande"

(The patient drives the impatient out).

6 Let patience growe in your gardein alwaie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Patience is a species of dock, Rumex Patientia.

Let patience still in your garden appeare.

DAVIES, Scourge of Folly: Proverbs, p. 374
(1611)

Patience is a flower that grows not in every garden.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. i, No. 58
(1623) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1678)

Patience grows not in every Garden.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3854. (1732)
It is not every garden that grows the herbs to make it [patience] with.

SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 5. (1869)

7 What cannot be removed, becomes lighter through patience. (Leuius fit patientia | quic- quid corrigere est nefas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 24, l. 19. (23 B.C.)

WHAT CAN'T BE CURED MUST BE ENDURED, see under ENDURANCE.

1 With Time and Art, the Mulberry leafs grow to be sattin.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs: New Sayings, p. 3. (1659)

By little and little the mulberry leaf becomes satin.

M. A. KELLIE, Reminiscences, p. 36. (1852)

What will not time and toil—by these a worm Will into silk a mulberry leaf transform.

R. C. TRENCH, Poems: Proverbs, Turkish and Persian. (1865)

With patience the mulberry leaf becomes a silk gown.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 371. (1938)

A Chinese proverb. On p. 372, Champion cites another, "Patience—in time the grass becomes milk."

2 Ye have heard of the patience of Job.

New Testament: James, v, 11. (c. A. D. 60) See under JOB.

3 Patience is the strongest of strong drinks, for it kills the giant Despair.

JERROLD, Jerrold's Wit: Patience. (c. 1850)

4 Patience is the gate of the crowd of goodness.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts). Bk.

i. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr. Quoted as an old saying.

5 Quath Peers the Plowman, "pacientes vincunt" (The patient conquer).

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text C, passus xiv, l. 138. (1393)

Men seyn, "the suffraunt overcometh," pardee

CHAUCER, Troilus. Bk. iv, l. 1584. (c. 1380)

Patience conquers all things. (Patientia vincit omnia.)

PALINGENTIUS, Zodiacus Vitae. Bk. iv, l. 40. (1537)

Patient men win the day. Vincit qui patitur.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 242. (1639)

The world is for him who has patience. (Il mondo è, di chi ha pazienza.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 99. (1853) An Italian proverb.

A patient person has all the wealth that there is in the world.

GEORGE HERZOG, Jabo Proverbs, p. 199. (1936)

6 In your patience possess ye your souls. (ἐν τῇ ὑπομονῇ ὑμῶν κτήσεσθε τὰς ψυχὰς ὑμῶν.)

New Testament: Luke, xxi, 19. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "In patientia vestra possidebitis animas vestras."

Possess your soul with patience.

JOHN DRYDEN, Hind and Panther. Pt. iii. (1687)

To possess one's soul in patience. To be patient: A misapprehension of Luke, . . . 'in your steadfast endurance, win your souls.'

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

7 There is a point when patience ceases to be a virtue.

THOMAS MORTON, Speed the Plough Act iv, sc. 3. (1798)

8 He invites a new injury who bears the old patiently.

FYNES MORYSON, An Itinerary. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (1617) Sometimes stated proverbially, "Patience under old injuries invites new ones." See under INJURY.

9 Patience is the lard of the leane meat of adversity.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from the Lower End of the Table. (1613)

10 Have patience and endure. (Perfer et obdura.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 7. (c. 13 B. C.) See also under ENDURANCE.

11 Patience is the best remedy for every trouble. (Animus aequus optimum est aerumnae condimentum.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 402. (c. 200 B. C.)

Patience is the cure for any pain. (Cuius dolori remedium est patientia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 111. (c. 43 B. C.)

Patience is the remedy of every grief. (Patientia est remedium cuius dolori.)

VERGIL. (c. 35 B. C.) As quoted by PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 153.

Patience is the remedy for every disease.

THOMAS WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 206. (1560)

There is no remedie but patience. (Ma non cie rimedio, se non patientia.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 12. (1578)

DRAKE, Paroemiologia, p. 131. (1633) RAY, p. 190. (1670) SCOTT, Redgauntlet, ch. 15. (1824) etc., etc.

Pacience is the best medicine that is, for a sicke man.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 44. (1578)

COLMAN, Jealous Wife. Act iv, sc. 1. (1761)

The Germans say, "Geduld ist oft besser, als Arzenei" (Patience is often better than medicine).

The silly ass stood preaching to himself upon the text of No remedy but patience.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables, xciii, 209. (1692)

Patience and posset-drink cures all maladies.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 312. (1721)

I had no remedy but the old insignificant thing called patience.

DANIEL DEFOE, Colonel Jacque. Ch. 18. (1723)

Patience, sov'reign o'er transmuted ill.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 362. (1748)

12 Patience provoked too often turns to fury. (Furor fit laesa saepius patientia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 208. (c. 43 B. C.) Or "Patientia laesa fit furor" (Patience abused becomes madness).

I do oppose my patience to his fury.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iv, 1 10. (1597)

Beware the fury of a patient man.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 1005. (1681)

Patience provok'd turns to Fury.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3859. (1732)

1 Patience of mind possesses wealth. (Patientia animi occultas divitias habet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 504. (c.43 B.C.)
The man who unites patience and courage secures his own happiness. (Patiens et fortis se ipsum felicem facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 512.

2 Patience say the lepers. (Pacience disent les iadres.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 1. (1552) Mot-teux renders it, "Patience is a remedy for a mad dog."

3 Be patient and you will have patient children.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 346. (1678)

4 Pacience is a castell imprenable.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 107. (1477) Quoting Democrates.

Patience carries with it half a release.

DANIEL ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 196. (1642)

5 Patience is a bitter tree, yet beareth sweet fruit.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 16. (c. 1258)

Patience is bitter, but its fruit is sweet. (La patience est amère, mais son fruit est doux.)

JEAN-JACQUES ROUSSEAU, Émile. (1762)

6 They never attain wisdom who have not patience.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. iii, Apologue 1. (c. 1258)

How poor are they that have not patience!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 376. (1605)

7 By the wisest, I have oft been told,

The poor man's patience better is than gold.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii, Maxim 28. (c. 1258)

Patience with poverty is all a poor man's remedy.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 15. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 130. (1670)

Patience, the beggar's virtue.

PHILIP MASSINGER, A New Way to Pay Old Debts. Act v, sc. 1. (1625)

Patience, virtue of the poor.

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Diarium, p. 6. (1656)

He who is patient in poverty may become rich. (Nai tê p in, shou tê fu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No 2690. (1875)

8 Affairs succeed by patience, and he that is hasty falleth headlong.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 35. (c. 1258)

With patience as a helper, thou wilt attain everlasting happiness.

SADI, Pand Namah. Sec. 20. (c. 1260)

9 Patience is sottish.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iv, 15, 79. (1606)

Patience is the virtue of an ass,

That trots beneath his burden, and is quiet.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, Heroic Love. Act i. (a.1732)

Patience is a virtue of the underlings.

L. K. ANSPACHER, The Unchastened Woman. Act ii. (1915)

10 That which in mean men we intitle patience
Is pale cold cowardice in noble breasts.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 2, 33. (1595)

Patience and Pusillanimity are two Things.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3853. (1732)

BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 472. (1855)

11 Be patient toward all men. (μακροθυμεῖτε πρὸς πάντας.)

New Testament: I Thessalonians, v, 14. (c. A. D. 52) The Vulgate is, "Patientes estote ad omnes."

Have patience with all things, but chiefly with yourself.

ST. FRANCIS DE SALES, Apothegm. (c. 1610)

See CAMUS, L'Esprit de St. François de Sales

12 All men commend patience, although few be willing to practise it. (Patientiam omnes recommendant, quamvis pauci tamen pati velint.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk iii, ch. 12, sec. 13. (c. 1420)

He preacheth patience that never knew pain

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, 381. (1855)

See also MISFORTUNE: MISFORTUNES OF OTHERS

13 Patience is the art of hoping. (La patience est l'art d'espérer.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 251. (1746)

PATRIOTISM

14 No man can be a patriot on an empty stomach
W. C. BRANN, Old Glory. See Brann's Iconoclast, 4 July, 1893.

15 I realize that patriotism is not enough. I must have no hatred or bitterness towards anyone.

EDITH CAVELL, Remark, to the Rev. Mr. Gahan, with whom she talked the night before her execution by the Germans at Brussels, 11 Oct., 1915. See Times (London), 23 Oct., 1915 16 Patriotism is the last refuge of a scoundrel.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Apothegm. See BOSWELL, 7 April, 1775. "Johnson," says Boswell, "suddenly uttered an apothegm at which many will start."

Treason is in the air around us everywhere. It goes by the name of patriotism.

THOMAS CORWIN, Letter, Washington, D.C., 16 Jan., 1861.

Patriotism is the egg from which wars are hatched
GUY DE MAUPASSANT, My Uncle Sosthenes. (c. 1885)

Patriotism is easy to understand in America. It means looking out for yourself by looking out for your country.

CALVIN COOLIDGE, Speech, Northampton, Mass., 30 May, 1923.

1 When a nation is filled with strife then do patriots flourish. (Kwo chia hwun lwan' 'yiu tsung hsin.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-tek-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 18. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr. There is a Japanese proverb. "Even in a village of eight there is one patriot."

Never was patriot yet, but was a fool.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 968. (1681)

A patriot is a fool in ev'ry age.

ALEXANDER POPE, Epilogue to the Satires. Dial. i, l. 41. (1735)

2 You'll never have a quiet world till you knock patriotism out of the human race.

BERNARD SHAW, O'Flaherty V.C. (1915)

3 True patriotism is of no party.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, The Adventures of Sir Launcelot Greaves. Ch. 9. (1762)

There are no points of the compass on the chart of true patriotism.

ROBERT C. WINTHROP, Letter to Boston Commercial Club. 12 June, 1879.

Patriotism knows neither latitude nor longitude. It is not climatic.

E. A. STORRS, Political Oratory. Ch. 2.

4 Patriotism was below Par—and Mar too.

ARTEMUS WARD, The Draft in Baldinsville. (1862)

II—Patriotism: Love of Country

5 The more I saw of foreign lands, the more I loved my own. (Plus je vis l'étranger, plus j'aimais ma patrie.)

LAURENT DE BELLOY, Le Siège de Calais. (c. 1767) Quoted by MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. (1807)

Such is the patriot's boast, where'er he roam. His first, best country ever is at home.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Traveller. St. 7. (1764)

6 EVERY BIRD PREFERS ITS OWN NEST, see under BIRD

Next to the love of God, the love of country is the best preventative of crime.

GEORGE BORROW, Bible in Spain. Ch. 4. (1843)

7 Whatever insults my state insults me.

PRESTON S. BROOKS, Speech, House of Representatives, 14 July, 1856.

8 To make us love our country, our country ought to be lovely.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. (1790)

9 Sweet is the love of one's country. (Es dulce el amor de la patria.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 54. (1615)

10 Who loves his country cannot hate mankind.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Farewell, 301. (1764)

He who loves not his country, can love nothing.

LORD BYRON, Two Foscari. Act iii, sc. 1. (1822)

11 Our country is the common parent of all. (Patria communis est parens omnium.)

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. i, sec. 7. (63 B. C.)

12 Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong!

STEPHEN DECATUR, Toast, at a dinner in his honor at Norfolk, Va., April, 1816. See MACKENZIE, Life of Decatur. Ch. 14.

I hope to find my country in the right: however, I will stand by her, right or wrong.

JOHN J. CRITTENDEN, of Kentucky, Speech, in Congress, May, 1846, referring to President Polk's Mexican War message.

And say not thou "My country right or wrong," Nor shed thy blood for an unhallowed cause.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, Congress, Slavery, and an Unjust War. (1847)

That pernicious sentiment, "Our country, right or wrong."

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 3 Note. (1848)

Our country, right or wrong! When right, to be kept right; when wrong, to be put right!

CARL SCHURZ, Speech, U.S. Senate, 1872.

"Our country, right or wrong" is not patriotism, . . . but a pestilential economical heresy.

J. E. T. ROGERS, Industrial and Commercial History, p. 1. (1891)

I would much prefer to enroll myself among those whose motto is "My country right or wrong" than among those whose motto is "My country always wrong."

UNKNOWN, Times (London), 5 Feb., 1927, p. 11. Rich or not, it is my country's wine. (Mei pu mei hsiang chung chiu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1011. (1875)

My patriotism stops short of my stomach.

OTTO VON BISMARCK, to William II, when offered a glass of German champagne. (c. 1889)

13 All men needs must love their native land (ἀλλ' ἀναγκάλως ἔχει | πατρίδος ἐρᾶν πάντας.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 358. (c. 420 B. C.)

Their fatherland, it seems, is dearest of all to men. (ἡ πατρίς, ὡς δοίκε, φίλτατον βροτοῖς.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 406. (c. 420 B. C.)

I love my children, but I love my country more (φιλῶ τέκν', ἀλλὰ πατρίδ' ἐμὴν μάλλον φιλῶ.)

EURIPIDES, Erechtheus. Frag. 411, Nauck. (c. 400 B. C.) Cited by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 809D.

To good men there is no limit of devotion to their country. (Nullus sit patriae consulendi modus aut finis bonis.)

CICERO, De Re Publica. (c. 54 B. C.) Quoted as a maxim by ST. AUGUSTINE, Epistles, xci, 1.

Who is here so vile that will not love his country?

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 2, 35. (1599)

What bosom beats not in his country's cause?

POPE, Prologue to Addison's Cato, l. 24. (1712)

Love of country is the ruling religion of the civilized man. (L'amour de la patrie est la première religion de l'homme civilisé.)

NAPOLÉON BONAPARTE, Epigram (c. 1810) See GUILLON, Napoléon, p. 294.

You belong to your country as you belong to your own mother.

E.E.HALE, The Man Without a Country. (1863)

1 Whoever is useful to his country is the nation's slave. (Populi est mancipium quisquis patriae est utilis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 519. (c. 43 B. C.)

2 My country, 'tis of thee,

Sweet land of liberty,

Of thee I sing.

SAMUEL FRANCIS SMITH, America. First printed on a broadside in connection with an Independence Day celebration by the Boston Sabbath School Union, 4 July, 1831.

3 There is my love, there my fatherland. (Hic amor, haec patria est.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 347. (19 B. C.)

For country, children, hearth, and home. (Pro patria, pro liberis, pro aris atque focis.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 29, sec. 5.

III—Pro Patria Mori

What pity is it.

4 That we can die but once to serve our country!

JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act iv, sc. 4, l. 91. (1713)

I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country.

NATHAN HALE, Speech, upon the gallows, just before being hanged as a spy by the British in New York City, 22 Sept., 1776. See STEWART, Life of Nathan Hale. Ch. 7.

5 There is a victory in dying well For Freedom.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, To the Spanish Patriots, l. 3. (1823)

The patriot's blood's the seed of Freedom's tree.

CAMPBELL, To the Spanish Patriots, l. 13.

And how can man die better

Than facing fearful odds,

For the ashes of his fathers

And the temples of his gods?

MACAULAY, Horatius. St. 27. (1842)

She died for her country—no one can do better than that.

VAN WYCK MASON, The Bucharest Ballerina Murders, p. 255. (1940)

6 They thought to die for their country; they died for the industrialists. (On croyait mourir pour la patrie; on mourrait pour les industriels.)

ANATOLE FRANCE, in 1914. See PIERRE VAN PAASEN, Days of Our Years, p. 76.

Dying, even for our country, is once too often.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 136 (1940)

7 No unseemly thing it is to die while fighting for one's country. (ὅς οἱ δαίκες ἀμυνόμενός περὶ πατρὸς | τεθνήσκων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xv, l. 496. (c. 850 B. C.)

The one best omen is to fight for one's country. (εἰς οὐδὸς ἀριστερὸς ἀμύνεσθαι περὶ πατρὸς.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xii, l. 243. (c. 850 B. C.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, i, 57, gives the Latin, "Unum augurium optimum tueri patriam," and cites not only Homer but also CICERO, Ad Atticum, PLINY, Letters, and ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric.

It is sweet and glorious to die for one's country. (Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 2, l. 13. (23 B. C.)

"Tempt not death!" cried his friends; but he bade them good-bye,

Saying, "Oh! it is sweet for our country to die!"

EPES SARGENT, The Death of Warren. (1847)

General Joseph Warren had hastened to the battlefield of Bunker Hill in the early morning of June 17, 1775, replying to the remonstrance of a friend with Horace's famous line, and was killed in the last charge of the British, as he lingered on the field, reluctant to join in the American retreat.

8 He feared not to die for fatherland. (Pro patria non timendus mori.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 19, l. 2. (23 B. C.)

Not afraid to die for cherished friends or fatherland. (Non ille pro caris amicis | aut patria timidus perire.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 51.

9 To be in the trench. (ἐνὶ σκάμματος εἶναι.)

POLYBIUS, History. Bk. xl, ch. 5, sec. 5. (c. 140 B. C.) At bay, back to the wall.

There is one certain means by which I can be sure never to see my country's ruin: I will die in the last ditch.

WILLIAM III, PRINCE OF ORANGE. (c. 1677) See GREEN, Short History of the English People. Ch. 9.

There was a sure way never to see it lost, and that was to die in the last ditch.

BISHOP GILBERT BURNET, History of His Own Time, i, 457. (c. 1710)

PATRON

10 Maecenas, sprung from royal stock, my bulwark and my glory dearly cherished. (Maecenas atavis edite regibus, | o et praesidium et dulce decus meum.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 1, l. 1. (23 B. C.) It was fitting that the first line of Horace's first ode should be devoted to his great patron.

Let there be Maecenases, Flaccus, and there will not be wanting Vergils. (Sint Maecenates non derunt, Flacce, Marones.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, epig. 56. (A. D. 93) May some choice patron bless each grey goose quill!

POPE, Prologue to the Satires, l. 249. (1735)

Great trees are good to shelter under. (Ta shu hsia 'hao hsieh yin.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 432. (1875)

<sup>1</sup> There mark what ills the scholar's life assail,
Toil, envy, want, the patron, and the jail.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 159. (1749)

Is not a Patron, my Lord, one who looks with unconcern on a man struggling for life in the water, and, when he has reached ground, encum-bers him with help?

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to the Earl of Chesterfield, 7 Feb., 1755. Johnson had addressed the "Plan" of his dictionary to Chesterfield, who took no notice of it, but when the work appeared in 1755, Chesterfield wrote two papers to the World highly commending it, and Johnson retorted with his famous letter, bitterly rejecting a notice which "had it been early had been kind."

Patron: Commonly a wretch who supports with insolence, and is paid with flattery.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary of the English Language. (1755)

<sup>2</sup> We should seek support from merit, not from patrons; he has sufficient patrons who does rightly. (Virtute ambire oportet, non favoribus; | sat habet favorum semper, qui recte facit.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitruo: Prologue, l. 78. (c. 200 B. C.)

Books (such as are worthy the name of books) ought to have no patrons but truth and reason.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 9. (1605)

<sup>3</sup> To endure haughty insolence. (Superba pati fastidia.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. ii, l. 15. (37 B. C.) The source of the proverb, "Mitte superba pati fastidia" (Refuse to endure the haughty insolence [of patrons]).

PATTERN

<sup>4</sup> She is, to turne loue to hate, or joye to greefe,
A paterne as meete as a rope for a theefe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Christ! What are patterns for?

AMY LOWELL, Patterns (1912)

<sup>5</sup> In hewing an axe-handle, the pattern is not far off.

UNKNOWN, Book of Songs (Shiking). (c. 450 B. C.) Quoted by TSE-TZU, The Doctrine of the Mean. Ch. 13, sec. 2.

When a woodman makes hafts of hatchets, he uses his own hatchet as the pattern.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts). Bk. ii. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr.

PAWN

<sup>6</sup> A good pawn never sham'd his master.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Whimsies: A Wine-Souker. (1631) Cited by CLAPHORNE, Wit in a Constable, Act v. (1639), and by HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

A fair pawn never sham'd his master.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 109. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 130. (1670)

A good pawn never sham'd his master. It is no shame for a man to borrow on a good pawn.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 7. (1721)

PAYMENT

<sup>7</sup> Pay as you go and keep from small score.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 473. (1855)

<sup>8</sup> He who has nothing in his purse must pay with his hide. (Wer nichts in Beutel hat, muss mit der Haut bezahlen.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 305. (1856) A German proverb, a rendering of the Latin law proverb, "Luat in corpore, qui non habet in aere" (He must pay with his body who cannot pay with money). The English version is, "He that cannot pay in purse must pay in person."

<sup>9</sup> The righteous sometimes pay for the sinners (Pagan a las veces justos por pecadores.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 7. (1605)

He who does not intend to pay is not troubled in making his bargain. (El que no piense pagar que al concertar de la barata no repara en inconvenientes.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 28.

<sup>10</sup> But wo is him that payen moot for al.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Shipman's Tale, l. 10. (c. 1386)

There my dear! Nunky pays for all.

UNKNOWN, Zeluca, iii, 232. (1815)

<sup>11</sup> He pays him with pen-powder.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 58. (1639)

Once paid and never craved.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 182. (1639) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 270, with the comment, "Pay your debts, and prevent dunning."

<sup>12</sup> He that cannot pay let him pray.

RANDIE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Argent. (1611)

Cited by RAY, p. 130; FULLER, No. 6362.

It is a pain both to pay and pray.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (c. 1595)

Now I adde, pray for it, pay and pray too.

ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 53. (1642)

To pray and pay too is the devil.

DANIEL DEFOE, Everybody's Business. (1725)

It is hard to pay and pray too.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2951. (1732)

<sup>13</sup> What you will have, quoth God, pay for it and take it.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation (1641) Quoted as a proverb.

Always pay; for first or last you must pay your entire debt.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation.

Wilt thou seal up the avenue of ill?

Pay every debt as if God wrote the bill!

EMERSON, Suum Cuique. (c. 1867)

1 He that paieth afore hand, hath neuer his worke well done.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 39. (1591)
Pay before hand is never well serv'd.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 278. (1721)
[He] is the bad paymaster who pays before it is done.

SCOTT, Bride of Lammermoor. Ch. 3. (1819)
He that payeth beforehand, shall have his Work ill done.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2245. (1732)
There is a variant, "Pay beforehand and your work will be behindhand."

He that pays for work before it 's done, has but a pennyworth for two pence.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.
He who wants the work badly done has only to pay in advance. (Chi vuol il lavoro mal fatto, paghi innanzi tratto.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 201. (1856) A characteristic Italian proverb. The Spanish form is, "Paga adelantada, paga viciosa" (Payment in advance is evil payment).

2 Receive before you write, but write before you pay.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.
'Tis against some Men's Principle to pay Interest, and seems against others' Interest to pay the Principal.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

3 He that payeth another remembereth himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2247. (1732)
Pay what you owe;

And what you're worth you'll know.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6352. (1732)
The Spanish form is the same, "Paga lo que debes, sabras lo que tienes," and also "Paga lo que debes, sanaras del mal que tienes" (Pay what you owe and you'll be cured of your complaint).

4 I'll pay you on the nail.

JOHN GAY, Polly. Act i. See under NAIL.

5 Do not take payment in politeness. (No pargarse de la mucha cortesía.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 191. (1647)

Only a thank-you job; a County Clare payment, "God spare you the health."

LADY GREGORY, New Comedies, p. 96. (1913)

6 A good payer is master of another's purse.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 597. (1640)
The good paymaster is lord of another man's purse.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Advice to a Young Tradesman. (1748)

7 Making an equal return. (τὸ ὁμοῖον ἀνταποδίδωσθαι.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. i, ch. 18. (c. 445 B. C.)
I pay you your due. (Tuom tibi reddo.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 743. (163 B. C.)

Pay me that thou owest. (ἀπόδος ἔτι τι ὀφείλεις.)
New Testament: Matthew, xviii, 28. (c. A. D. 50) The Vulgate is, "Redde quod debes."

8 Misrecknyng is no paiment.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)
The Germans say, "Missrechnung ist keine Zahlung"; the French, "De deniers mécontés ne grace ni gré."

9 This paith me home.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

If I can't pay, why I can owe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Be Merry, Friends. (c. 1562)

10 Who payeth last, payeth but once.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)

He that pays last never pays twice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 130. (1670)
Cited by KELLY, p. 150; FULLER, No. 2246.

11 Solomon was a wise man, and Sampson was a strong man, yet neither of them could pay money before he had it.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1659)
Samson was a strong man, yet could he not pay money before he had it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 76. (1678)

12 Sweet appears sour when we pay.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1659)
The Germans say, "Süss getrunken, sauer bezahlt" (Sweet to drink, sour to pay for).

13 I don't pay five cents on the dollar.

HENRY JAMES, A Passionate Pilgrim. (1875)

14 The best payment is on the peck bottom. That is, when you have measured out your grain, to receive your payment on the peck that measured it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 95. (1721)
Sore cravers are ay ill payers. This proverb, and the reverse, viz. Ill payers are sore cravers, I have never yet seen fail.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 286.

Ill payers are ay guid cravers.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

15 Made them pay for it most unconsonably and through the nose.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Rehearsal Transpos'd, i, 270. (1672) The origin of this phrase, meaning to pay exorbitantly, is unknown. It has been suggested that it may have some connection with the slang word "rhino" and the Greek ῥίνας (rhines), the nostrils.

She knows nothing of business, and is made to pay for everything through the nose.

FANNY BURNEY, Cecilia, x, vi. (1782)

You have been paying through the nose.

JAMES PAYN, By Proxy. Ch. 17. (1878)

16 Till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing. (ἐκείθεν ὥς ἂν ἀποδῇς τὸν ἑσχατον κοδράντην.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 26. (c. A. D. 50)
The Vulgate is, "Donec reddas novissimum quadrantem."

1 He who lays the cloth pays the charges.
(Celuy qui met la nappe, tumbé tousjours des despens.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 47. (1580) The French also say, "Qui casse les verres les paie" (Who breaks the glasses pays for them).

2 I'll pay you back in your own coin. (Tibi gratiam referam parem.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 999. (c. 200 B.C.)

I'm paying you back in your own coin. (Tibi rursum refero gratiam.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1222. (c. 200 B.C.)

We are paid in our own coin. (Dedi malum, et accipi.)

PLINY, Epistles. Bk. iii, epis. 9. (c. A.D. 98)

Glad that he had given her a soppe of the same sauce, and paid her his debt in his own coin.

ROBERT GREENE, Tullies Loue. (1589) Works (Grosart), vii, 133.

I did but pay him in's own coin.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, The Widdowes Teares. Act ii, sc. 3. (1612)

Pay with the same dish you borrow.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 14. (1639)

Now when he [Joseph] might have paid them in their own coin, . . . this holy man is lift above all thoughts of revenge.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour (1865), i, 391. (1655)

Why don't you pay her in her own coin, according to the old proverb.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Erasmus' Colloquia: A Lover and Maiden. (1725)

I'll give you as good as you bring.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

She pays him in his own coin.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

They had best take care he did not pay them in their own coin.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa (1785), i, 71. (1748)

I am accustomed to pay them back in their own coin. (Ich bin gewohnt in der Münze wiederzu zahlen in der man mich bezahlt.)

BISMARCK, Speech, to the Ultramontanes. (1870) The German proverbial phrase is, "Mit gleicher Münze zahlen," the equivalent of the English form, which the Italian and Spanish forms also follow, "Pagar uno della sua moneta," and "Pagar à uno en la misma moneda." The French say, "Rendre la monnaie de sa pièce" (To give him back the change from his piece of money).

3 Light is the dance, and doubly sweet the lays,
When, for the dear delight, another pays.

POPE, tr. Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 205. (1725)

To pay the piper, see under PIPER.

4 Merry is the feast-making till we come to the reckoning.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 115. (1678) The French say, "Le coût en ôte le goût" (The cost takes away the relish), or, in the usual English form, "The reckoning spoils the relish."

At the bottom of the sack one finds the reckoning. (Onder in den zak vindt men de rekening.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 298. (1856) A Flemish proverb.

5 'Tis best to take half in hand and the rest by and by.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 354. (1678)

It is better to take half in Hand, and the rest presently.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2921. (1732)

6 He that pays the lawing [reckoning] maun choose the lodging.

WALTER SCOTT, Chronicles of the Canongate. Ch. 5. (1827)

7 He is well paid that is well satisfied.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iv, 1, 415. (1597) There is an English proverb about paying well, "Pay well when you are served well."

8 Take all, pay all, . . . all is as she will.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 2, 124. (1601)

Rule all, take all, pay all.

JOHN MARSTON, Jack Drum. Act i. (1601)

Your heirs must be fain to take all, and pay all, and so fleece the rest.

ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 92. (1642)

Take all and pay the baker.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 93. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4303. (1732)

Take it all, pay the Maltman.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 331. (1721)

9 A good paymaster needs no surety.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr. Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch.

14. (1620) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1726.

(1732) In No. 1727, Fuller expresses the same thought in a slightly different way, "Good paymasters need not bring a pawn."

A good paymaster starts not at assurances.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 118. (1640)

A good payer is master of another's purse.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 597. FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

A good paymaster may build Paul's.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 167. (1732)

A good Paymaster never wants Workmen.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 168.

An ill Paymaster never wants Excuse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 627.

There are two bad paymasters; those who pay before, and those who never pay.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Nabob. Act ii. (1773)

SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 39. (1821)

10 But England may well say,
"Fie on this winning away!"

Now nothing but pay, pay!"

JOHN SKELTON, Why Come Ye not to Court, l. 926. (1520)

Pass the hat for your credit's sake, and pay, pay, pay.

KIPLING, The Absent-Minded Beggar. (1899)

<sup>1</sup> He paid his shot and dined there. (Symbolum dedit, cenavit.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 88. (166 B. C.)

He louth well to be at good fare but he wyll pay no scotte.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 165. (1519)

I wyll pay for my shotte.

JOHN BOURCHIER, LORD BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux, p. 704. (a. 1533)

The recknyng reckned, he needs would pay the shot.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
Every one to pay his own shot.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionarie of the French and English Tongues: Escortier. (1611)

Cobbler's law: he that takes money must pay the shot.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 65. (1678)

Using shot for money was a good thing for the government; the metal cost nothing, and the money couldn't be counterfeited, for I was the only person in the kingdom who knew how to manage a shot-tower. "Paying the shot" soon came to be a common phrase. Yes, and I knew it would still be passing men's lips, away down in the nineteenth century, yet none would suspect how and when it originated.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court, p. 339. (1889)

<sup>2</sup> It is characteristic of our present manners that if anyone repays a debt, it must be regarded as an immense favor. (Praesertim ut nunc sunt mores, . . . Si quis quid reddit, magna habendast gratia.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 55. (161 B. C.)

Base is the slave that pays.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 1, 100. (1599)

<sup>3</sup> I shalbe redy at scotte and lotte, and all my duties truly pay and doo.

UNKNOWN, English Gilds (E.E.T.S.), p. 189.

(a. 1400) "Scot" was the tavern score. To pay scot and lot means to pay thoroughly, to settle with once for all. To go scot-free means to get off without paying the "scot," and, fig., to be exempt from injury or punishment.

The poore synner shulde go Skot fre.

TINDALE, Exposition I John, 22. (1531)

They payed no money, but were set scot free.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 233. (a. 1548)

'Twas time to counterfeit, or that hot termagant Scot had paid me scot and lot too.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, v, 4, 115. (1597)

We are free from Scot and lot—observe no law, pay no taxes.

JAMES K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act v, sc. 3. (1815)

I'll pay you off scot and lot by and by.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 24. (1844)

Every man must pay his scot.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth. (1860)

<sup>4</sup> Yt ys full hard bothe to pyche and paye.

UNKNOWN, Piers of Fulham, l. 206. (c. 1450)

In HAZLITT, Early Popular Poetry, ii, 9.

Euery man did pitch and pay.

Roxburghe Ballads (B.S.), i, 6. (1584)

The word is Pitch and pay: trust none.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 3, 51. (1599)

Give me your hand, that you will pitch and pay.

HENOCH CLAPHAM, Error on the Left Hand through a Frozen Security, l. 103. (1608)

Pitch and pay, throw down your money at once, pay ready money.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Archaic Words: Pitch. (1847)

TO PAY THE DEBT TO NATURE, see under DEATH.

PEACE

See also War and Peace

<sup>5</sup> We make a conquest of peace, as the byword says our fathers won Boulogne, who never came within sound of a cannon.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 313. (1629)

<sup>6</sup> Thou hast touched me, and I have been translated into thy peace. (Tetigisti me, et exarsi in pacem tuam.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. x, ch. 27. (A. D. 397)

<sup>7</sup> He that would live at Peace and Rest, Must hear and see and say the Best.

NATHAN BAILEY, Divers Proverbs, p. 29. (1721)

<sup>8</sup> Peace is better than a place in history.

JUSTO PASTOR BENITEZ, FOREIGN MINISTER OF PARAGUAY, Speech, in Asunción, 1935.

<sup>9</sup> Give peace in our time, O Lord.

Book of Common Prayer: Evening Prayer: The Lord Be with You. (1548)

The woman prayed in church every Sunday for peace in our time.

H. H. MUNRO (SAKI), Reginald on Besetting Sins. (1904).

Peace in our time.

NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN, PRIME MINISTER OF ENGLAND, announcing the result of the Munich agreement with Hitler and Mussolini, Sept., 1938.

Peace in our time. First principle of the official mind.

H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 16. (1941)

Peace in our time. Appeasement. All a lot of blah.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, N or M, p. 92. (1941)

<sup>10</sup> Let us have peace and we can die old. (Aya-mos paz, y moriremos viejos.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 271. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

Let us have peace.

U. S. GRANT, Speech, accepting the Republican nomination to the Presidency, 29 May, 1868.

<sup>11</sup> To plunder, to slaughter, to steal, these things they misname empire; and where they make a desert, they call it peace. (Atqui ubi solitudinem faciunt, pacem appellant.)

CALGACUS, addressing the Britons at the battle of the Grampians, referring to the Romans. (c. A. D. 84) See TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 30.

He makes a solitude, and calls it—peace!

BYRON, Bride of Abydos. Canto ii, l. 431. (1813)

<sup>1</sup> He [Falkland] was so much enamoured on peace, that he would have been glad the King should have bought it at any price.

CLARENDON, History of the Rebellion. Vol. iv, bk. vii (1839), p. 241. (a. 1674)

The ministry of peace at any price. (Le Ministère de la Paix à tout prix.)

ARMAND CARREL, referring to the Perier ministry. (1831) See Le Nationale, 13 March, 1831. ARTHUR HUGH CLOUGH, Letters and Remains, p. 105, attributes the phrase to Lamartine.

Palmerston sneered at him [John Bright] as a peace-at-any-price man.

G. W. SMALLEY, London Letters, i, 153. (1887) Though not a "peace-at-any-price" man, I am not ashamed to say that I am a peace-at-almost-any-price man.

LUBBOCK, The Use of Life. Ch. 11. (1894)

<sup>2</sup> The duty of this country . . . is to establish . . . Pax Britannica, and force these people to keep the peace among themselves.

JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN, Speech. (c. 1900) See BADEN-POWELL, Downfall of Prempeh, p. 17. The phrase was, of course, derived from the famous Pax Romana, the peace imposed by Rome.

<sup>3</sup> He held his pees, non other bote him gayned.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. i, l. 352. (c. 1380)

I wol holde my pees.

CHAUCER, Marchantes Tale, l. 732. (c. 1388)

It is no lesse admirable, to knowe howe to holde ones peace, then to know how to speake.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 120. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Hee who knoweth not how to holde his peace, knoweth not how to speake.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 121. Heare, see, and hold thy peace, if thou wylt liue in peace. (Odi, vedi, e taci, se in vuoi viuere in pace.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

<sup>4</sup> The prophete seith: "seke pees and folwe it."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 56. (c. 1387)

<sup>5</sup> Peace with dishonor. (Turpi pace.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. vii, epis. 18. (49 B. C.)

Peace with honor.

THEOBALD, COUNT OF CHAMPAGNE, Letter to Louis the Great. (c. 1125) See WALTER MAP, De Nugis Curialium, 220. SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, iii, 2, 49. (1607) SIR KENELM DIGBY, Letter to Lord Bristol, 27 May, 1625. BURKE, Conciliation with America. (1775) etc., etc.

If peace cannot be maintained with honour, it is no longer peace.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL, Speech, at Greenock, Sept., 1853.

Lord Salisbury and myself have brought you back peace—but a peace, I hope, with honour.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, after Berlin Congress, 16 July, 1878.

<sup>6</sup> The name of peace is sweet, and the thing itself wholesome, but between peace and servitude the difference is great. (Nomen pacis dulce est et ipsa res salutaris, sed inter pacem et servitutem plurimum interest.)

CICERO, Philippicae. No. ii, ch. 44, sec. 113. (44 B. C.)

There is a price which is too great to pay for peace, and that price can be put in one word. One cannot pay the price of self-respect.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Des Moines, Iowa, 1 Feb., 1916.

<sup>7</sup> Peace rules the day, where reason rules the mind.

WILLIAM COLLINS, Hassan, l. 68. (a. 1759)

<sup>8</sup> Though peace be made, yet it is interest that keeps peace.

OLIVER CROMWELL, Speech, in Parliament, 4 Sept., 1654. He calls it "a maxim not to be despised."

<sup>9</sup> Go in peace. (Vade in pace.)

Old Testament: Exodus, iv, 18. (c. 550 B. C.)

Go in peace. (εἰπε χαίρων.)

CALLIMACHUS, Epitaph for a Priestess. (c. 250 B. C.) See Greek Anthology, vii, 728.

<sup>10</sup> 'Tis safest making peace with sword in hand.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle. Act v, sc. 3. (1699)

<sup>11</sup> Peace be to you. (Pax vobiscum.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xliii, 23. (c. 550 B. C.)

Peace be within thy walls. (Fiat pax in virtute tua.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxii, 7. (c. 350 B. C.) On earth peace, good will toward men. (ἐν τῇ γῆ εἰρήνη ἐν ἀνθρώποις εὐδοκία.)

New Testament: Luke, ii, 14. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "In terra pax hominibus bonae voluntatis."

Into whatsoever house you enter, first say, Peace be to this house. (εἰρήνη τῷ οἴκῳ τούτῳ.)

New Testament: Luke, x, 5. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Pax huic domui."

The peace of God which passeth all understanding. (ἡ εἰρήνη τοῦ θεοῦ ἡ ὑπερέχουσα πάντα νοῦν.)

New Testament: Philippians, iv, 7. (c. A. D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Pax Dei, quae exuperat omnem sensum." PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Peace (1941), translates the Greek as "The undisturbedness [tranquillity] of [given by] God, surpassing [being beyond] the reasoning faculty." He adds, "A wit described the Munich agreement between Hitler and Chamberlain as 'the peace that passeth all understanding.'"

That peace which the world cannot give.

Book of Common Prayer: 2nd Collect, Evening Prayer. (1541)

Ther[e] can be nothing giuen of God to man more notable then peace.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 456. (1580)

God gave his blessing to peace, and his curse to quarrels. (Dios bendijo la paz y maldijo las riñas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 14. (1615)
Where there is peace, God is.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 735. (1640)

1
A disarmed peace is weak.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 630. (1640)
To live peaceably with all breeds good blood

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 961.

2
Peace, the nurse of children, is abroad in their land. (εἰρήνη δ' ἀνὰ γῆν κοινοτρόφος.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 228. (c. 800 B.C.)
Peace is the nurse of Ceres; Ceres is the foster-child of peace. (Pax Cererem nutrit; pacis alumna Ceres.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 704. (c. A.D. 8)

Peace is tranquil liberty. (Pax est tranquilla libertas.)

CICERO, Philippicae. No. ii, ch. 44, sec. 113
(44 B.C.)

Peace and quiet bring out the good qualities of men. (Pax et quies bonis artibus indigent.)

TACITUS, Historiae. Bk. iv, sec. 1. (c. A.D. 109)
Peas makith Plente.

UNKNOWN, Reliquiae Antiquae, i. 315. (c. 1425)
Peace,

Dear nurse of arts, plenties and joyful births
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, v, 1, 34. (1599)

Flourish in peace and plenty.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, v, iv, 145. (1609)
Shakespeare's only use of this phrase.

Through peace cometh plenty.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 19/1.
(1659)

Peace, creator of men, peace is the protector of everything. Peace binds kingdoms together, peace assembles the city. (Pax hominum genetrix, pax est custodia rerum Pax regna ligat. pax congregat urbem.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 155. (1778)

3
That he may always be at peace with himself. (εὖρον εἶναι αὐτῷ διὰ χρόνον ἐς τὸν ἀπάρτα.)

HOMER, when Hesiod asked him what is the best thing of all to pray for. ALCIDAMUS (?), Contest of Homer and Hesiod. Sec. 320. (c. 400 B.C.)

For certainly, the firste poynt is this

Of noble corage and wel ordeyne,
A man to have pees with him-self, y-wis.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. i, l. 891. (c. 1380)
When a man finds no peace within himself it is useless to seek it elsewhere. (Quand on ne trouve pas son repos en soi-même, il est inutile de le chercher ailleurs.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes Supprimées, 571
(1665)

Nothing can bring you peace but yourself.

EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841)

4
Peace, which cannot be bought with gems, with purple, or with gold. (Otium . . . non gemmis neque purpura venale neque auro.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode xvi, l. 7. (23 B.C.)

5
His name shall be called . . . The Prince of Peace. (Vocabitur nomen eius . . . princeps pacis.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, ix, 6. (725 B.C.)

6
Saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace. (Pax, pax: et non erat pax.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, vi, 14. (c. 600 B.C.)

7
Now we suffer the ills of a long peace. (Nunc patimur longae pacis mala.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 292. (c. A.D. 120)
This weak piping time of peace.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 1, 24. (1592)

Quoted by EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Courage. (1870) PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Piping, explains that it refers to the fact that in peacetime people amuse themselves with pastoral pipes instead of martial drums and fifes.

The cankers of a calm world and a long peace.
SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iv, 2, 33 (1597)

The nurse of drones and cowards.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Maid of Honour Act i. (1632)

It is mutual cowardice that keeps us in peace.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 28 April, 1778.

8
Better a certain peace than a hoped for victory. (Melior est certa pax, quam sperata victoria.)

LIVY, Ab Urbe Condita. Bk. xxx, ch. 30. (c. 25 B.C.)

9
Blessed are the peacemakers. (μακάριοι οἱ εἰρηνοποιοί.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 9. (c. A.D. 50)
The Vulgate is, "Beati pacifici."

Blessed are the peacemakers on earth.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, ii, 1, 34. (1590)

Blessed are the happiness-makers.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 113. (1887)

10
Fair peace is becoming to men; fierce anger belongs to beasts. (Candida pax homines, trux decet ira feras.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 502. (c. 1 B.C.)

11
Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace. (Viae eius viae pulchrae, et omnes semitae illius pacificae.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, iii, 17. (c. 350 B.C.)

12
The peace of a cemetery. (Die Ruhe eines Kirchhofs.)

J. C. F. SCHILLER, Don Carlos. Act iii. (1787)

13
Peace is best of all things. (Pax optima rerum.)

SILIUS ITALICUS, Punica. Bk. xi, l. 592. (c. A.D. 75)
When will the world know that peace and propagation are the two most delightful things in it?

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Horace Mann. 7 July, 1778

1
It must be a peace without victory.
WOODROW WILSON, Address, to U.S. Senate, 22 Jan., 1917.

2
Pees makith Plente, Plente makith Pride,
Pride makith Plee [extravagance], Plee makith Pouert, Pouert makith Pees.

UNKNOWN, in Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 315. (c. 1425)

Peace makes plentie, plentie makes pride,
Pride breeds quarrell, and quarrell brings warre:
Warre brings spoile, and spoile pouertie,
Pouertie pacience, and pacience peace:

So peace brings warre and warre brings peace.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM, The Arte of English Poesie (Arber), p. 217. (1589) Puttenham attributes the lines to the French poet, Jean de Meung. (c. 1120)

An old observation, Peace brings plenty, Plenty brings Pride, and Pride in the end is it that brings in penury.

BARNABY RICH, Irish Hubbub, p. 49. (1619)

3
He who keeps silent, reposes. (Ki se taist, il se repose.)

UNKNOWN, Du Prestre Qu'on Porte, l. 302. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, iv, 10.

Hear, see and be silent, if you wish to live in peace. (Audi, vide, tace, si vis vivere in pace.)

UNKNOWN, Gesta Romanorum: Folliculus. (c. 1446) An old monkish jingle. The French have a similar one, "Oi, voye, et te taise, Si tu veux vivre en pais."

Who heares, sees, and holds his peace, may always live in peace.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 10. (1578)

4
Flies look for ulcers, kings for war, wicked men for quarrels, but good men look only for peace.

UNKNOWN, Niti Sastras. (c. 1250)

PEACH

5
I've got a peach of a head.

GEORGE ADE, Artie, p. 9. (1896)

I've got a peach of a temper.

LONDON, Valley of the Moon, p. 65. (1913)

6
Rather one bite of a peach than eat a basketful of apricots.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 372. (1938) A Chinese proverb. Rather a little of the best than a great deal of the second best.

7
An apple is an excellent thing until you have tried a peach.

GEORGE DU MAURIER, Trilby, p. 256. (1894)

There is nothing peachier than a peach.

OGDEN NASH, Ocean, Keep Right on Rolling. (1935)

8
Give me women as soft, and as delicate, and as velvet as my peaches!

OUIDA (LOUISE DE LA RAMÉE), Strathmore. (1865)

A swell girl—you know—a regular peach.

GEORGE ADE, Artie, p. 5. (1896)

Anybody could see she was a peach and of the cling variety.

O. HENRY, A Tempered Wind. (1908)

The staff . . . was a peach. It was a whole crate of Georgia peaches.

O. HENRY, The Rose of Dixie. (1909)

Your girl? . . . Why she's a peach.

MARY S. WATTS, Luther Nichols, p. 72. (1923)

Rosie always said you were an old peach.

ANNE NASH, Said With Flowers, p. 156. (1943)

9
The ripest peach is highest on the tree.

JAMES WHITCOMB RILEY, The Ripest Peach (c. 1892)

PEACOCK

10
The pride of the peacock is the glory of God.
WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808) See also under PRIDE.

11
The pecok, with his aungels fethres brighte.

CHAUCER (?), The Parlement of Foules, l. 356. (c. 1382)

12
Proudly playing the Peacocks.

HENRY CAREY, Earl of Monmouth, tr., Adventisements from Parnassus, p. 84. (1656)

Play not the Peacock, looking everywhere about you, to see if you be well deck't.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Rules of Civility. (1745)

13
The self-applauding bird, the peacock, see—
Mark what a sumptuous Pharisee is he.

WILLIAM COWPER, Truth, l. 58. (1781)

14
He who is of bad nature sees nothing in the peacock but its ugly feet.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. vii, Apologue 17. (c. 1257)

The peacock, lauded for his brilliant hue,

Is by his ugly feet discomfited.

SADI, Gulistan, ii, 8. (c. 1258)

Take heed of ouer-weening, and compare

Thy peacock's feet with thy gay peacock's traine.

JOHN DAVIES, The Immortality of the Soul, xxxiv, viii. (1592)

It is the foulness of the peacock's feet which doth abate his pride, and stoop his gloating-eyed tail

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595)

The peacock hath fair feathers but foul feet.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 10. (1633)

Peacock, look at your legs.

D. E. MARVIN, The Antiquity of Proverbs, p. 230. (1922)

"According to an East Indian tradition," writes Marvin, "the peacock originally had beautiful legs and feet, but having been cheated out of them, he continually mourned his loss, . . . and if by chance he happened to see them, he was sure to weep. From this tradition there arose the Kumuan and Garhwal proverb, 'The peacock looking at his feet wept.'" The legend is that the peacock was cheated out of his legs by a partridge, who persuaded the peacock to change with him during a dancing contest, and then flew away.

PEAR

<sup>1</sup> That saying which is commonly used, that peares without wine are poyson.

THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health, p. 89. (1588)
Peares wanting wine, are poyson from the tree.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, School of Salerno, sig. B3. (1608)

After a peare wine, or the priest.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Poire. (1611)

A pear must have wine after it, and a fig water.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 201. (1666)

<sup>2</sup> He that eats peares with his lord picks none of the best.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Poire. (1611)

Share not Pears with your Master, either in jest or in earnest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4117. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> Plant pears for your heirs.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 330.

(1869) Hazlitt points out that this proverb no longer holds true, "since pears are now made to yield well after a few years."

PEARL

<sup>4</sup> 'Twas he that ranged the words at random flung,

Pierced the fair pearls and them together strung.

BIDPAI, Anvar-i-Suhaili. (c. 300 B. C.)

Go boldly forth, my simple lay,
Whose accents flow with artless ease,
Like orient pearls at random strung.

HAFIZ, Song. (c. 1375) Sir Wm. Jones, tr.

Jewels five-words-long

That on the stretch'd forefinger of all Time
Sparkle forever.

TENNYSON, The Princess. Pt. ii, l. 355. (1847)

<sup>5</sup> Like an orient pearl did she look,
Poised between wish and trembling.

(Qual pare in vista perla orientale, Temendo e disiando.)

BOCCACCIO, Il Filostrato. Canto ii, st. 108. (c. 1350) Cummings, tr.

<sup>6</sup> A margerye perle aftyr the phylosophyr,
Growyth on a shelle of lytyl pryhs.

OSBORN BOKENHAM, Lyvys of Seyntys. (1447)

The treasure of an oyster.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 5, 44. (1606)

<sup>7</sup> There is no Pearle so hard but Vineger breaketh it.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 312. (1580)

Dissolve [the pearls] and drink them.

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act iii, sc. 6. (1605)

Pearles are restorative.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)

<sup>8</sup> The kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking goodly pearls: Who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it. (πολύτιμον μαργαρίτην.)

New Testament: Matthew, xiii, 45-46. (c. A. D. 50) The Vulgate is, "Una pretiosa margarita."

<sup>9</sup> One whose hand
Like the base Indian, threw a pearl away
Richer than all his tribe.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, v, 2, 346. (1605)

How many a thing which we cast to the ground,
When others pick it up, becomes a gem!

GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 41. (1862)

II—Pearls Before Swine

<sup>10</sup> Put not meat into a chamber-pot. (Cibum in metallam ne immitas.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 2. (1508)

Quoted as a saying of Pythagoras.

To put a ring of gold in a swine's snout. (Anulus aureus in naribus suis.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 24. Cited as of Hebrew origin. There are many similar phrases, "Boiled rice for asses," "A vineyard for crows," "Rose-water for a pig," and so on, all variants of the same theme.

Don't play the lute before a donkey.

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 484. (1872)

<sup>11</sup> We were swine cast before a pearl.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Head-Hunter. (1909)

<sup>12</sup> Neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you. (μηδὲ βάλητε τοὺς μαργαρίτας ὑμῶν ἐμπροσθεν τῶν χοίρων.)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 6. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Neque mittatis margaritas vestras ante porcos." This is the source of the Dutch, "Roozen strooien voor de varkens" (To scatter roses before swine), which TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 186, suggests may be due to a confusion of the Greek and Latin margarita (pearl) with the French marguerite (daisy, flower). "Margarita e stercore" (A pearl from the dunghill) is a Latin proverb.

<sup>13</sup> Huerof zayth ous god ine his spelle, Thet we ne thrauwe nagt oure precieuse stones touore the zuyn.

DAN MICHEL, Ayenbite of Inwyt (E.E.T.S.), p. 152. (1340)

Noli mittere Margeri—perles Among hogges.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text A, passus xi, l. 9. (1362)

Men should not put . . . perles whight,
To-fore rude swyne.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems (Percy Soc.), p. 188. (c. 1430)

Cast not your perles before hogges.

UNKNOWN, The Pilgrimage of Perfection, p. 24. (1526)

To cast precious stones before hogs.

JOHN HEYWOOD, English Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Before suche swyne no pearles maye be caste.

ROBERT CROWLEY, Epigrams. (1550) Works (E.E.T.S.), p. 6.

Pearl enough for a swine.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 2, 91. (1595)

To cast eloquence amongst a companie of stinctards is all one as if a man should scatter pearls amongst the hoggish animals ecliped swine.

JOHN DAY, Ile of Guls. Act iii. (1606)

This is got by casting Pearl to Hogs.

JOHN MILTON, Sonnets. No. xii. (c. 1645)

Oh, I do a thankless thing, and cast pearls before swine!

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 23. (1848)

I don't know what came over me, casting my pearls before the swine.

HANS HABE, A Thousand Shall Fall, p. 381.

(1941) "On a wrinkled neck a pearl weeps" says a German proverb.

I always talk of beauty. But I drop my pearls before swine . . . before scientists . . . before women.

STUART CLOETE, Congo Song. Ch. 26. (1943)

Many a time in jest we cast pearls of wisdom before swine

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Drowsy Mosquito, p. 25. (1943)

PEAS

1 [He] whines it out like an old woman in the last of pea-time.

W. A. CARUTHERS, The Kentuckians in New York, i, 190. (1834) At the last stage, or in a difficult situation.

[It was] the last of pea-time.

T. H. BENTON, Thirty Years' View, i, 467/2. (1834)

It was the last of pea-time with me, sure.

H. C. LEWIS, Louisiana Swamp Doctor, p. 174. (1850)

His look mo' lak de las' o' pea-time den de fust o' truck-time.

MARY A. OWEN, Voodoo Tales, p. 199. (1893)

Things looked pretty much like the last of pea time.

ELIZABETH ROBINS, The Magnetic North, xxi, 63. (1904)

2 Who bath many peas may put the more in the pot.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

He who bath much pease may put the more in the pot.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1670)

3 The smaller pesyn, the mo to the pot.

UNKNOWN, Harleian MS. 3362, f. 7 b. (c. 1470)

The smaller pese, the mo to the pott; the fayrere woman, the more gylott [wanton].

UNKNOWN. In Reliquiae Antiquae, ii, 40. (c. 1470)

AS LIKE AS TWO PEAS, see under LIKENESS.

PEASANT

4 Should the peasant become king, the scrip does not leave his neck.

Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, fo. 7b. (c. 450)

The lowest peasant speaks, moves, dresses, eats, and drinks as much as a man of the first fashion. but does them all quite differently.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 12 Nov., 1750. The Germans say, "The stupidest peasants have the biggest potatoes," and "When the peasant has money, so has the whole world." The Russians say, "Call a peasant 'brother,' and he will demand to be called 'father.'"

PEBBLE

5 There was another gotten the night that you were born. That is, if you will not serve me another will.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 331. (1721)

If you want to win her hand.

Let the maiden understand

That she's not the only pebble on the beach.

HENRY BRAISTEAD, You're Not the Only Pebble on the Beach. (1896)

You're not the only pebble on the beach.

MARGERIE ALLINGHAM, Black Plumes, p. 183

(1940) The modern English variant is, "You're not the only balloon in the barrage."

[He] makes me feel I'm the only pebble on the beach.

WENTWORTH, Clock Strikes Twelve, p. 20. (1944)

PECCAUI

6 Kyng Daud that wrote this psalme, with one worde spekyng his herte was chaunged sayenge Peccavi.

BISHOP JOHN FISHER, Funeral Sermon of Henry VII. (1509) Peccavi, "I have sinned."

Much soner shall al other . . . cry Peccavi.

WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, 65. (1553)

Now lowly crouch'd, I cry peccavi.

SWIFT, Sheridan's Submission. (1730)

Peccavi!

SIR CHARLES NAPIER, announcing his victory at Hyderabad in 1843, meaning "I have Scinde."

PECKER

7 Keep your pecker up.

CUTHBERT BEDE, The Adventures of Mr. Verdant Green, i, 12. (1853)

Keep your pecker up with that.

CHARLES DICKENS, Letter, 17 Aug., 1857.

"Keep your pecker up" . . . literally, keep your beak and head well up.

Slang Dictionary: Pecker. (1873)

Be firm, my moral pecker.

W. S. GILBERT, Trial by Jury. (1875)

Keep your tails up. (Sursum caudas.)

UNKNOWN. Title of verses in The Wipers Times, a British army periodical. (1917)

I was talkin' loud to keep my pecker up.

A. MERRITT, Seven Footprints to Satan. Ch. 13.

(1928) KEEP A STIFF UPPER LIP, see under LIP.

PEDANTRY

<sup>1</sup>
A precious apothegmaticall Pedant, who will finde matter inough to dilate a whole daye of the first inuention of Fy, fa, fum.

THOMAS NASHE, Have with You to Saffron-Walden, p. 43. (1596)

His mouth is full of particles. (Man tsui li ti chih 'hu yeh chê.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 488. (1875)

<sup>2</sup>
Pedantry is properly the over-rating of any kind of knowledge we pretend to.

SWIFT, A Treatise on Good Manners. (a. 1745)

Pedantry is the unseasonable ostentation of learning.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 12 Nov., 1751. Pedantry only the scholarship of le cuistre [a waiter].

WALTER PATER, Style. (1888)

Pedantry is the dotage of knowledge.

HOLBROOK JACKSON, The Anatomy of Bibliomania, p. 150. (1930)

<sup>3</sup>
Profound. Hem! perhaps you mean hollow. (Profond, hem. vous voulez dire, peut-être, creux.)

TALLEYRAND, Epigram, referring to Sieyès. (c. 1810) An echo of d'Alembert's remark about French philosophers, "They think themselves profound, while they are merely hollow."

A profound man who had become hollow (Homme profond qui était devenu creux.)

VICTOR HUGO, Quatre-vingt-treize. Pt. ii, bk. iii, ch. 1, sec. 5. (1879) Also referring to Sieyès.

A corrector of old proofs. (Correttor di stampe vecchie.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 214. (1856) An Italian proverb. The French say "Il corrige les épreuves des livres oubliés." (He corrects the proofs of forgotten books).

PEG

<sup>4</sup>
Our whole squadron in the Downs, not one of which attempted to move a peg.

SIR JOHN BARROW, in Croker Papers, 27 July. 1810.

You've got to fork over fifty dollar, . . . or this child don't start a peg.

MRS. H. B. STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 8. (1852)

One condition without which I don't stir a peg.

FRANCIS SMEDLEY, Harry Coverdale's Courtship. Ch. 3. (1855)

<sup>5</sup>
This doctrine plucketh them down one staff lower than they were before.

THOMAS BECON, Catechism, p. 561. (c. 1550)

'Tis I that must take you a peg lower.

JOHN LYLY, Pappe with a Hatchet. (1589)

We . . . took your Grandees down a peg.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, ii, ii, 522. (1664)

To take one a peg lower. To remind upstarts of their former condition. The Spaniards say, Pana- dero erades antes, aunque aora traéis guantes. You were once a baker, though you now wear gloves.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 189. (1670)

I must take her down a peg or two.

FRANCES SHERIDAN, The Dupe. Act iv, sc. 4. (1764)

I knew it would take him down a cup or two.

PEACOCK, Misfortunes of Elphin. Ch. 13. (1829)

I must take that proud girl down a peg.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Marcella. Vol. ii, p. 324. (1894)

TO TAKE ONE A BUTTON-HOLE LOWER, see under BUTTON-HOLE.

<sup>6</sup>
The world is like a board with holes in it, and the square men have got into the round holes. and the round into the square.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY (?). (a. 1753) Punch is responsible for the attribution to Berkeley, but the quotation has not been found in his works.

If you choose to represent the various parts in life by holes upon a table, of different shapes, . . . and the persons acting these parts by bits of wood of similar shapes, we shall generally find that the triangular person has got into the square hole, the oblong into the triangular, and a square person has squeezed himself into the round hole.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy Lect. 9. (1806)

A round man cannot be expected to fit a square hole right away. He must have time to modify his shape.

MARK TWAIN, Following the Equator. Ch. 71 (1897)

A square peg in a round hole. A man (usually an able man) in a position unsuited to his abilities.

. . . Cf. John Masefield's novel, The Square Peg

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

There is something admirable in a square peg in a round hole when it does its job and conceals its misfit.

JEFFERSON FARJEON, Murder at a Police Station, p. 158. (1943)

The social pressure which is constantly forcing square pegs into round holes.

BERNARD SHAW, Everybody's Political What's What, p. 51. (1944)

<sup>7</sup>
A crust of bread and cheese is an excellent peg to hang a pot of porter upon.

JOHN NOTT, The Gull's Hornbook, by T Decker, p. 30, note. (1812)

[He] merely wanted a peg to hang a grievance upon.

R. S. SURTEES, Ask Mamma. Ch. 1. (1858)

You only went out with him to find a peg to hang him on.

ANNE ROWE, Little Dog Barked, p. 216. (1942)

PEN

<sup>8</sup>
The lance never yet blunted the pen, nor the pen the lance. (Nunca la lanza embotó la pluma, ni la pluma la lanza.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 18. (1605)

i.e. Men of arms and men of letters do not interfere with one another.

<sup>1</sup> The pen is the tongue of the mind. (La pluma es lengua del alma.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 16. (1615)
The thought hath good legs, and the quill a good tongue.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 614. (1640) Cited by Ray and Fuller.

The pen is the tongue of the hand.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 108. (1887)

<sup>2</sup> Pen and ink is wit's plough.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 35. (1639)
The hand with the pen is worth as much as the hand at the plough. (La main à plume vaut la main à charrue.)

ARTHUR RIMBAUD, Une Saison en Enfer. Ch. 2. (1873)

<sup>3</sup> The pen wherewith thou dost so heavenly sing
Made of a quill from an angel's wing.

HENRY CONSTABLE, Sonnet. (c. 1592)
Poets' Pens, plucked from Archangels' wings.

JOHN DAVIES OF HEREFORD, Bien Venu. (a. 1626)

The feather, whence the pen
Was shaped . . . . .Dropped from an Angel's wing.
WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets: Walton's Book of Lives. (1822)

<sup>4</sup> Penne and inke, who (as the prouerbe goeth) neuer blusheth.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, sig.K2. (1577)
Pens may blot but they cannot blush.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, The Metamorphosis of Ajax, vii. (1596) Quoted as "The old saying."
DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 12. (1633) CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 268. (1639)

<sup>5</sup> The pen of a ready writer. (Velociter scriben-tis.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xlv, 1. (c. 350 B. C.)

II—The Pen: Its Might

<sup>6</sup> From this it is clear how much more cruel
the pen may be than the sword. (Hinc quam sit calamus saevior ense patet.)

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 4. (1621)
More danger comes by th' quill than by the sword.

MARTIN PARKER, The Poet's Blind Man's Bough. (1641)

A sword less hurt does, than a pen.

WILLIAM KING, Eagle and Robin, l. 82. (a. 1712)
A Goose-Quill is more dangerous than a Lion's Claw.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 184. (1732)
A certain Captaine used to say, that the pennes of writers, pearce the souldiers corslets.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 219. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>7</sup> "Anser, Apis, Vitulus. Populos et Regna gubernant." The goose, the bee and the calf (meaning wax, parchment and pen), rule the world, but of the three the pen is most pre-dominant.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, 3 July., 1635.

<sup>8</sup> Go on doing with your pen what in other times was done with the sword.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Thomas Paine. (1796)

<sup>9</sup> Beneath the rule of men entirely great,
The pen is mightier than the sword.

LORD LYTTON, Richelieu. Act ii, sc. 2, l. 307. (1838)
The pen is noisier than the sword.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Warning before Storm. (1940)

The typewriter is so much more to be reckoned with than the sword.

LEE THAYER, Persons Unknown, p. 190. (1941)

<sup>10</sup> His pen is as sharp as a sword. (Pi ju tao li.)
SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1157. (1875)

<sup>11</sup> Caesar had perished from the world of men,
Had not his sword been rescued by his pen.

HENRY VAUGHAN, On Sir Thomas Bodley's Library. (a. 1695)

PENDULUM

<sup>12</sup> Man! Thou pendulum betwixt a smile and tear!

LORD BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 109. (1818)

<sup>13</sup> She was as regular as a pendulum.

SARAH FIELDING, Ophelia. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1785)

<sup>14</sup> The pendulous folly of mankind oscillates as far in this direction as it has come from that.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Companions of My Solitude. Ch. 3. (1851)

George Eliot's fame has suffered from "the swing of the pendulum."

THEODORE WATTS-DUNTON, as quoted by the British Weekly, 15 Nov., 1906.

PENITENCE, see Remorse, Repentance

PENNY

<sup>15</sup> Be not Penny-wise.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Riches. (1597)

Penny wise and pound foolish.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 330. (1605) BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621) ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 295. (1712) etc., etc.

Worldly hearts are penny-wise and pound-foolish.
BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations. Vol. iv, ch. 27. (1612)

Many . . . are said to be penny-wise and pound-foolish: but they who are penny-foolish will hardly be pound-wise.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth, i, 239. (1827)

To save one Mon, one loses a thousand Mon.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 443. (1938) A Japanese proverb. The Mon is the smallest Japanese coin. The French say, "Gâter une chandelle pour trouver une épingle" (Waste a candle to find a pin); the Germans, "Mancher sucht einen Pfennig, und verbrennt dabei ein Pfund" (Many seek a farthing and in doing so consume a pound).

<sup>1</sup> The penny is ill saved that shames the master.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Shame. (1736) The Germans say, "Ein Pfennig mit Recht ist besser denn tausend mit Unrecht" (A penny with right is better than a thousand with wrong).

<sup>2</sup> Nobody seem'd one penny the worse.

R. H. BARHAM, The Jackdaw of Rheims. St. 8. (a. 1845)

<sup>3</sup> The soldiers made a pretty penny.

JOHN BYRON, The Narrative of . . . Distresses Suffered . . . on the Coast of Patagonia, p. 209. (1768)

The partridges will come to a fine penny.

HANNAH GLASSE, Art of Cookery, vii, 131. (1796)

The captain might still make a pretty penny

BRET HARTE, Maruja. Ch. 1. (1885)

<sup>4</sup> Take care of the pence, and the pounds will take care of themselves.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 6 Nov., 1747, 5 Feb., 1750. In the earlier letter, Chesterfield attributes the saying to "a very covetous sordid fellow," and adds, "This was a just and sensible reflection in a miser." In the later letter he says, "Old Mr. Lowndes [William Lowndes], the famous Secretary of the Treasury in the reigns of King William, Queen Anne, and King George the First, used to say, 'Take care of the pence, and the pounds will take care of themselves.' To this maxim, which he not only preached but practiced, his two grandsons at this time owe the very considerable fortunes that he left them"

A real out-and-out workin' chap, that will look sharp ater the pence, without leavin' the pounds to take care of themselves.

R. S. SURTEES, Handley Cross. Ch. 13. (1854)

He who doesn't take care of the pfennigs will never be a gulden's master. (Wer keinen Pfennig achtet, wird keines Gulden Herr.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 340. (1856) A German proverb.

Take care of the pence and the pounds will take care of themselves is as true of personal habits as of money.

BERNARD SHAW, Pygmalion. Act ii. (1912)

If we take care of the actors the plays will take care of themselves.

SHAW, Great Catherine: Preface. (1913)

Penny and penny laid up will be many.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 35. (1639) Cited by RAY, p. 130; FULLER, No. 288. See also under TRIFLES.

Nor trivial Loss, nor trivial Gain despise,
Molehills, if often heap'd, to Mountains rise

Weigh every small Expence, and nothing waste,
Farthings long sav'd, amount to Pounds at last.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

<sup>5</sup> A penny at a pinch is worth a pound.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 45. (1639)

Penny in pocket is a good companion.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 10. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 130. (1670)

There's no companion like a penny.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 13. (1659) Cited by RAY, p. 21; FULLER, No. 4891. The Scots say, "Nae friend like the penny."

Better penny in silver than any brother.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)

A penny in purse is the best friend John can have.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1712)

Penny in Pocket is a Merry Companion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3864. (1732)

A penny in the purse is better than a friend at court.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 126. (1875) Quoted as "a true saying."

<sup>6</sup> Who so spareth not the peny shall neuer come by the pownde.

MILES COVERDALE, tr., The Christen State of Matrymonye, sig. I3. (1541)

Who will not keep a penny, never shall have many.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 129. (1639)

Cited by RAY, p. 131; FULLER, No. 6383.

Small shots, paid often, waste a vast estate.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. (1648) "Penny goes after penny Till Peter hasn't any."

<sup>7</sup> He that regards not a Penny, will lavish a Pound.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2260. (1732)

Penny come quick soon makes two Pence.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3863. The Germans say "Pfennig ist Pfennigs Bruder" (Penny is penny's brother); the Scots, "Put twa halfpennies in a purse and they'll creep thegither."

Placks and bawbees grow pounds

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 16. (1832)

<sup>8</sup> A penny spared is twice got.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 508. (1640)

A penny saved is a penny gained.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, ii, 103. (1662)

A penny well sav'd is as good as one earn'd.

UNKNOWN, in Roxburghe Ballads. (B.S.), vi, 349. (c. 1686)

A penny sav'd is a penny got.

EDWARD RAVENSCROFT, The Canterbury Guests.

Act ii, sc. 4. (1695) STEELE, The Spectator.

No. 2. (1711) FIELDING, The Miser. Act iii,

sc. 12. (1733) DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 9.

(1852) etc., etc.

A Penny sav'd is Two-pence got.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 342. (1732)

A penny saved is two pence clear. A pin a day is a groat a year. Save and have.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

"A penny saved is a penny got"—

Firm to this scoundrel maxim keepeth he.

JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence.

Canto i, st. 50. (1748)

Money saved is money earned, as the old saying goes.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, Key Largo. Act i. (1939)

The French say, "Un sou épargné est un sou gagné"; the Germans, "Der Pfennig macht den Thaler"; the Spaniards, "Grano à grano allegria par tu año," or, more elaborately, "Quien come y condensa, dos veces pone la mesa" (He who eats and puts something by spreads the table twice).

To the thrifty a penny is something to be put out at stud.

OGDEN NASH, A Penny Saved Is Impossible. (1942)

1 She thinkth her farthyng good syluer.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

She has a good opinion of herself.

1 I thought my halfepey good syluer.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Glasse of Government.

Act i, sc. 5. (1575) In act iii, sc. 4, Gascoigne adds, "I think my halfepey as good syluer as another doth."

He deemeth no penny good syluer but his owne.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 46. (1579)

Euery one highly in his owne fauour, thinking no man's penny so good syluer as his own.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, i, 71. (1580)

Shee hath great cause . . . to thinke her halfe penie better syluer than other womens.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, fo. 115. (1586)

There are more Batchelors than Roger, and my peny is as good syluer as yours.

NICHOLAS BRETON, A Poste With a Packet of Mad Letters, liv, 20. (1603)

He counts his halfpenny good silver, That is, he thinks much of himself with little reason.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 172. (1721)

Is no Coin good Silver but your Penny?

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3112. (1732)

2 Freend (quoth the good man) a peny for your thought.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Is your minde on your meate? a penny for your thought.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 80. (1579)

How cheer you, sir? A penny for your thought.

ROBERT GREENE, Frier Bacon and Frier Bon-gay. Sc. 6. (1594) See also SWIFT, Polite Conversation, Dial. i. (1738); READE, Put Yourself in His Place, ch. 24 (1870); LARDNER, Zone of Quiet. (1926) etc., etc.

3 Towne ware was your ware, to tourne the peny.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

You must call usury and extortion God's blessing, or the honest turning of the penny.

WYCHERLEY, The Plain-Dealer. Act iii. (1676)

A married man . . . is not more averse to turning an honest penny when he can, than a single one.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 37. (1838)

He turns an honest penny by horse hire.

AUGUSTUS JESSOP, Arcady. Ch. 7. (1887)

Lucas has been sent across the seas to turn the "honest penny."

E. E. MONEY, A Little Dutch Maiden, p. 5. (1887)

Think nothing mean that brings in an honest penny.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Citizen. Act i, sc. 2. (1763)

4 I tell thee plainly, without any boast,

A halfpenny is as well saved as lost.

JOHN HEYWOOD, The Spider and the Flie (Farmer), p. 447. (1556)

5 A penny more buys the whistle.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 8. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 341. (1732)

6 Well, that, O'er shooes, o'er boots.

And In for a penny, in for a Pound.

THOMAS RAVENSCROFT, The Canterbury Guests.

Act v, sc. 1. (1695) SCOTT, Guy Mannering.

Ch. 46. (1815) DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch.

19. (1838) SOMERSET MAUGHAM, The Mixture as Before, p. 78. (1940) PATRICIA WENTWORTH, Pursuit of a Parcel, p. 24. (1942) etc., etc.

No propagation . . . is more rapid than that of evil. . . . He who is in for a penny, . . . will find he is in for a pound.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth, i, 230. (1827)

If you're in for a penny, you're in for a pound.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 57. (1939)

Being in for a penny, I am ready, as the saying is, to be in for a pound.

DICKENS, The Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 66. (1840)

In for a mill, in for a million.

EMERSON, Essays: Experience. (1844)

In for a penny, in for a pound. Throw the helve after the hatchet. . . . These and other reckless maxims were cited.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Perlycross. Ch. 15. (1894)

7 You may know by a penny how a shilling spends.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 78. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5951. (1732)

8 A penny in purse will bid me drink, when all the friends I have will not.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 130. (1678)

Every one hath a penny for the new ale-house.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 181. (1678)

9 Every penny that's saved is not gotten.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 139. (1670)

If you make not much of threepence, you'll never be worth a groat.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 210. (1678)

10 The bad shilling is sure enough to come back again.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Letter 2. (1824)

I always said he'd come back like a bad shilling.

BESANT AND RICE, Ready-Money Mortiboy. Ch.

8. (1872) The Germans say, "Böser Pfennig kommt immer wieder."

A bad penny always turns up again.

ALLAN UPDEGRAFF, The Hills Look Down, p. 238. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> The penny soul, it is said, never came to twopence.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 9. (1859)

A penny earned honestly is better than a shilling given. A Scotch proverb says, "The gear that is gifted [given] is never sae sweet as the gear that is won."

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 177. (1875)

<sup>2</sup> After the common saying, "No peny, no Pater-noster."

WILLIAM TINDALE, The Obedience of a Christen Man, p. 245. (1528) Priests insisted on being paid as a condition of performing service.

No peny, no pardon.

TINDALE, Exposition I John. (1531) In Works (1573), p. 395. Cited by Ferguson and Fuller. Some men saie, no peny no Pater noster.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546) Theyr couetouse is growne into this prouerbe, "No peny, no pater noster."

UNKNOWN, A Supplication of the Poore Commons, p. 87. (1546)

No grote no pater noster, no peny no placebo.

JOHN BAYLE, Kynge Johan, l. 1930. (c. 1550)

Placebo is the first word in the first antiphon in the Office for the Dead, meaning "I shall be pleasing" or "acceptable." See Psalms, cxiv, 9, Vulgate. Berkeley MSS, iii, 27, have, "No pipe, no pudding."

Who at a dead lift, Can't send for a gift

A Pig to the Priest for a Roster,

Shall heare his Clarke say, By yea and by nay,
No pennie, no Pater Noster.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Peter-Penny. (1648)

Whence came this comical saying, No peny, no Paternoster, but from pecuniary Indulgences?

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 200. (1709) The French say, "Point d'argent, point de Paternoster," or "De main vide, vide prière" (An empty hand, an empty prayer).

<sup>3</sup> Sometimes a penny well spent is better than a penny ill spared.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 32. (1672)
"Never grudge a penny for a pennyworth."

<sup>4</sup> Ffor there is a comyn byword, yf ye it herd havith:

"Wele sitteth he his peny, that the pound savith."

UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn, l. 2244. (c.1400)

The old saying, 'Well is spent the penny that gets the pound.'

UNKNOWN, Lisle Papers, xiv, art. 40. (1536)

The penny is well spent that saves a groat.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 332. (1605) Cited by Ray and Fuller.

'Tis a well spent penny that saves a groat.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

The French say, "Bonne est la maille qui sauve le denier" (Good is the farthing which saves the penny).

PEOPLE

See also Crowd, Mob, Multitude

<sup>5</sup> Go out and see how the people act.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 45a, and elsewhere. (c. 450.) In other words, follow the majority, as Mr. Pickwick advised. See under MAJORITY.

<sup>6</sup> To worship the people is to be worshipped.

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum: Pt. i, bk. 6, ch. 30, Popularitas. (1605)

<sup>7</sup> The people, doubtless, have the right to murmur, but they have also the right to be silent, and their silence is the lesson of kings. (Le silence du peuple est la leçon des rois.)

JEAN BAPTISTE DE BEAUVAIS, Sermon, at the funeral of Louis XV of France, 27 July, 1774.

<sup>8</sup> I do not know the method of drawing up an indictment against a whole people.

BURKE, Conciliation with America. (1775)

<sup>9</sup> I loathe all common things. (σικχαίνω πάντα τὰ δημόσια.)

CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. 30, l. 4. (c. 250 B. C.)

The dregs of the people. (Faex populi.)

CICERO, Ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. ii, epis. 9, sec. 5. (55 B. C.)

To scorn the envious mob. (Malignum spernere vulgus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 39. (c. 23 B. C.)

I loathe the vulgar mob and keep it far away. (Odi profanum vulgus et arceo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 1, l. 1. (c. 23 B. C.)

All this sort of people. (Hoc genus omne.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 2. (35 B. C.)

THE VULGAR HERD, see under HERD.

<sup>10</sup> The safety of the people shall be the highest law. (Salus populi suprema lex esto.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, ch. 3, sec. 8. (c. 46 B. C.)

There is not anything in the world more abused than this sentence, Salus populi suprema lex esto, for we apply it, as if we ought to forsake the known law.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: People. (c. 1654)

That grounded maxim, . . . that to the public good

Private respects must yield.

MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 865. (1671)

The noblest motive is the public good.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 200. (1711)

<sup>11</sup> The vulgar mob values few things according to truth, but many according to rumor. (Vulgus ex veritate pauca, ex opinione multa aestimat.)

CICERO, Pro Roscio Comoedo. Sec. 10. (c. 68 B. C.)

Hi byeth ase the wedercoc that is ope the steple, thet him went mid eche wynde.

DAN MICHEL, Ayenbile of Inwyt, p. 180. (c. 1340)

O stormy peple! unsad and ever untrewel
Ay undiscreet and chaunging as a vane,

Delyting ever in rumbel that is newe,
For lyk the mone ay wexe ye and wane.

CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 939. (c. 1388)
Certes, the commendacioun of the peple is som-tyme ful fals and ful brotel for to triste; this day they preyse, tomorwe they blame.

CHAUCER, The Persones Tale, sec. 28.

The common people look at the steeple.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 148. (1639)
I know what the people are; they change in a day.
They lavish easily their hatred and their love.
(Je sais quel est le peuple; on le change en un jour;

Il prodigue aisément sa haine et son amour.)

VOLTAIRE, La Mort de César. Act i, sc. 4. (1735)

1
The people may be made to follow a line of action, but they cannot be made to understand it. (Mun kho see yaou chee put kho see chee chee.)

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. viii, ch. 9. (c. 500
B. C.) Legge, tr.

The people docile to the yoke. (Ad iuga cur faciles populi.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 314. (c. A. D. 60)

2
Those three most intractable beasts, the owl, the serpent, and the people. (γλαυκὴ καὶ δράκοντι καὶ δῆμῳ.)

DEMOSTHENES, referring to the Athenians. (c.
340 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes.
Sec. 26.

Nor is the people's judgment always true:

The most may err as grossly as the few.

JOHN DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i,
l. 781. (1682)

3
The people are to be taken in very small doses.
If solitude is proud, so is society vulgar.

EMERSON, Essays: Society and Solitude. (1870)

4
Three ranks of citizens there be:
Highest, the useless rich, that ever crave for more;

Lowest, the poor and starving, dangerous folk, . . .

But of the three, 'tis the midmost saveth states.

Keeping the order which the state ordains.

(τῶν δὲ μοιρῶν ἡ, ἢ μέσῳ σώζει πόλεις, κόσμον φυλάσσουν' ὄντιν' ἂν τάξῃ πόλις.)

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 238. (c. 421 B. C.)

The people are the most important element in a nation.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. vii, pt. 2, ch. 14, sec.
1. (c. 300 B. C.)

5
Who serveth the commons. serveth no body.
(Chi seru' al comune, seru' a nessuno.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

To serve the People, is worse than to serve two Masters.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5227. (1732)
The Italians say, "Che serve al comune, ha cattivo padrone" (Who serves the public has a bad master)

6
The people is a beast of muddy brain.

TOMMASO CAMPANELLA, Sonnet. (c. 1630) SY-MONDS, tr. See HUNEKER, Overtones, p. 214.

The people are a many-headed beast.

POPE, Imitations of Horace. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 121.
(1733)

Your people, sir, is nothing but a great beast!

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, in an argument with
Thomas Jefferson. (c. 1792) See MUZZEY,
American History, p. 192.

7
The people cannot see, but they can feel.

JAMES HARRINGTON, The Oceana, p. 483. (a. 1677)

8
Let the people rule.

ANDREW JACKSON. His slogan while President of the United States, 1829-37. See GILTNER,
Growth and Problems of Our Nation, p. 85.

9
The people are the only sure reliance for the preservation of our liberty.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to James Madison.
(1787)

10
The people arose as one man. (Quasi unius hominis sermone respondit.)

Old Testament: Judges, xx, 8. (c. 700 B. C.)

11
She is tres grande dame . . . and never knows the wrong people.

CHARLES LEVER, Davenport Dunn. Ch. 32. (1859)

12
The Lord prefers common-looking people.
That is the reason he makes so many of them.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN. (c. 1862) The story is that one night Lincoln dreamed that he was in a crowd, when someone recognized him as the President, and exclaimed in surprise, "Why, he's a very common-looking man!" and Lincoln dreamed that he replied as above. See
MORGAN, Our Presidents, p. 149.

13
He who builds on the people, builds on mud.
(Chi fonda in sul popolo, fonda in sul fango.)

MACHIAVELLI, Il Principe. Ch. 9. (1513) Quoting what he calls a "trite proverb."

He that builds on the people, builds on the dirt.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 154. (1633) BEN
JONSON, Timber: Principum Varia. (1641)

14
The vulgar crowd is always taken in by appearances, and the world consists chiefly of the vulgar. (El vulgo ne va preso con quello che pare, . . . e nel mondo non è se noi vulgo.)

MACHIAVELLI, Il Principe. Ch. 18. (1513)

One secret has been kept many centuries: the terrible worthlessness of the people collectively.

E. W. HOWE, Country Town Sayings. (1911)

15
Heaven having produced the inferior people, appointed for them rulers and teachers.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. i, pt. 2, ch. 2. (Quoting
The Book of History (Shuking), c. 1000 B. C.)

All ranks and classes,
Down to that new Estate, "the masses."
THOMAS MOORE, The Fudges in England. Letter iv, l. 101. (1835)
I was told that the Privileged and the People formed Two Nations.
BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Sybil. Bk. iv, ch. 8. (1845)
Their natural gait is the goose-step.
H. L. MENCKEN, Prejudices. Ser. ii, p. 221. (1920)
Of the common people.

1
Let the People think they Govern and they will be Govern'd.
WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 337. (1693)
Govern the people by opposing them.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 333. (1817)

2
The people can prevail where laws prevail.
(Ibi pote valere populus ubi leges valent.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 329. (c. 43 B. C.)

3
I have never desired to please the people.
(Numquam volui populo placere.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxix. (c. A. D. 64)
"Ad captandum vulgum" (To captivate the vulgar) is a Latin proverbial phrase.
The rag-tag people.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, i, 2, 260. (1599)
TAG, RAG, AND BOBTAIL, see under TAG-RAG.

4
Another lean, unwash'd artificer.
SHAKESPEARE, King John, iv, 2, 201. (1596)
Clubs . . . To which th' unwashed artificer repairs.

WILLIAM COWPER, Table-Talk, p. 152. (1780)
THE GREAT UNWASHED, see UNWASHED.
The people, Lord, Thy people, are good enough for me!

RUDYARD KIPLING, A Pilgrim's Way. (c. 1890)

5
It was not his entent to bryng vnto Sylla
philip and cheinie.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, p. 311. (1542) Two common people taken at random.

Loiterers I kept so meanie, both Philip, Hob and Cheanie.

THOMAS TUSSEY, *Fiue Hundreth Pointes of
Good Husbandrie*. Ch. 2, st. 6. (1573)

Then Jack, and Tom, and Will, and Dick shall meet and censure me and my Council.

JAMES I. (c. 1604) See FULLER, Church-History.
Bk. x, sec. 1.

I neither care what Tom, or Jack, or Dick said.

JOHN TAYLOR THE WATER POET, *Sir Gregory
Nonsense*, p. 16. (1622)

Though Dick, Tom, and Jack
Will serve you and your pack.

ALEX. BROME, The Royalist's Answer. (1660)
Flowers and general ruck sent to him by Tom,
Dick and Harry from everywhere.

MARK TWAIN, Letters, p. 251. (1885)
He gathered his information from any Tom, Dick or Harry he came in contact with.

R. W. MATZ, Inns and Taverns of Pickwick, p. 242. (1921)

I've talked with the French equivalent of Tom,
Dick, and Harry.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave, p. 41.
(1941)

6
The people are like sheep—'tis better driving
A flock than one.

JOHN WILSON, Andronicus Comnenius. Act iii,
sc. 5. (1664)

II—Vox Populi

7
A people's voice is dangerous when charged with wrath. (Βαρεία δ' δότων φάτις ἐνὶ κότῳ.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 456. (458 B. C.)
A people's voice is a mighty power. (φήμη γὰρ μέντοι δημόθρους μέγα σθένει.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 938.

8
When many people voice her, talk is in some ways divine. (ἦν τινα πολλοὶ | λαοὶ φημίλωσι, θεὸς νύ τις ἐστί καὶ αὐτή.)

HESED, Works and Days, l. 763. (c. 800 B. C.)
The voice of the people is the voice of God. (Vox populi, vox dei.)

ALCUIN, Admonitio ad Carolum Magnum. Epis. 127. (c. A. D. 800) The context is, "We would not listen to those who were wont to say the voice of the people is the voice of God, for the voice of the people is near akin to madness."

Scripture calling the voice of the people the voice of God. (Scriptoria dicente vox populi, vox Dei.)

POPE SYLVESTER II, Epistles. (c. 999) Possibly a misreading of Isaiah, lxvi, 6: "A voice from the temple, a voice of God."

Au vois commune est accordant La vois de dieu.
JOHN GOWER, Mirour de l'Homme, l. 12725. (c. 1378)

Thus, my gode lorde, wynneth your peples vois;
for peples vois is goddes voys, men seyne.

THOMAS HOCCEVE, De Regimine Principum
(E.E.T.S.) p. 104. (1412)

Yet could I never any reason feele.

To thinke Vox populi vox Dei est.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Poies, p. 143. (1575)

The voice of the people is the voice of God. (La voix de peuple est la voix de Dieu.)

PIERRE DE SAINT-JULIEN, Mélanges Historiques, p. 636. (1588) The modern French form is, "Voix du peuple, voix de Dieu." The Germans compress it into two words "Volksstimme. Götterstimme."

The voice of the people hath some divineness in it.
(Vox populi habet aliquid divinum.)

FRANCIS BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum.
Pt. i, bk. vi, ch. 9. (1605)

Though sometimes they are flattered with that Aphorism, will hardly believe, The voice of the people to be the voice of God.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epidemica.
Bk. i, ch. 3. (1646)

But I have said enough to show
How little 'tis the people know;
How true, then, goes the saw abroad—
Their voice is but the voice of God!
(Le récit précédent suffit

Pour montrer que le peuple est juge récusable.

En quel sens est donc véritable

Ce que j'ai lu dans certain lieu,

Que sa voix est le voix de Dieu.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 26. (1678)

The voice of a friend is the voice of God. (Vox amici, vox Dei.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 227. (1778))

The voice of the people has been said to be the voice of God; and, however generally this maxim has been quoted and believed, it is not true in fact. The people . . . seldom judge or determine right.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, Speech, in the Federal Convention, 18 June, 1787.

The voice of the People is the Voice of God; this axiom has manifold exceptions.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. ii, No. 266. (1820)

That vox populi, which, when it bursts from the heaving depths of a nation's heart, is in truth vox dei.

HARE, Guesses at Truth, i, 164. (1827)

The Latin proverb, The voice of the people, the voice of God . . . rests on the assumption that the foundations of man's being are laid in truth.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 6. (1852)

The voice of the people is the voice of humbug. (Vox populi, vox humbug.)

W. T. SHERMAN, Letter to his Wife, 2 June, 1863.

Bringing to my mind the voice of the people and the revilings of men. (δήμου θῆκε φάτιν καὶ δνειδεα πολλὰ ἀνθρώπων.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 460. (c. 850 B. C.)

The voice of the people pressed hard upon us. (χαλεπή δ' ἔχε δήμου φῆμις.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xiv, l. 239. (c. 850 B. C.)

Demetrius said merrily of the voice of the people, that he paid no more attention to that which issued from above than to that which issued from below. (Demetrius disoit plaisamment de la voix du peuple, qu'il ne faisoit non plus de recepte de celle qui lui sortoit par en hault, que de celle qui lui sortoit par en bas.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 16. (1580)

PEPPER

Better one grain of pepper than a basketful of pumpkins.

Babylonian Talmud: Joma, fo. 85b; Megillah, fo. 7a. (c. 450) COHEN, Ancient Jewish Proverbs, p. 58, comments, "Just as a grain of pepper imparts more flavor than a heap of vegetables, so a little keen reasoning is worth more than a great deal of useless learning."

One grain of sharp pepper is better than a basket full of gourds. One wise man, how mean soever, is more valuable than many that are unwise.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 410. (1678)

There is a maxim there [in the tropics], that people who eat Cayenne pepper will live for ever. Like variety, it is the spice of life, sir, at the equator.

F. S. COXENS, Sayings, p. 15. (1870)

Though peper be blek yt hath a gode smek

RICHARD HILLS, Common-Place Book, p. 140.

(c. 1520) STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria, sig. C1. (c. 1520)

Snow is white and lieth in the dike, and euery man lets it lye.

Pepper is blacke and bath a good smacke, and euery man doth it bye.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

Spice is black, but it hath a sweet smack.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 296. (1720)

And to pore people han peper in the nose.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus xv, l. 197. (1377)

Have not pepir in thi nose.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Wysdom, in Anglia, li, 222, l. 53. (c. 1450)

For drede of the red hat Take peper in the nose.

JOHN SKELTON, Why Come Ye Nat to Courte, l. 381. (c. 1520)

If ony man offende hym, he may not forthwith take peper in the nose.

ROBERT WHITINGTON, Vulgaria (1527), v. 24 (1520)

He taketh pepper in the nose, that I complaine Vpon his fautes, my selfe beyng faultless.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, Ch. 4. (1546)

I would not that al women should take peper in the nose, in that I haue disclosed the legerdemaines of a few.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 118. (1579)

As old women are soone angry, she tooke pepper in the nose at the sharpe reply.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, ii, 52. (1583)

Take pepper in the nose.

JOHN FLORIO, tr., Montaigne. Bk. i, ch. 25. (1603) Florio's rendering of "se formalizer," to take offence.

He's a chollerick gentleman; he will take pepper in the nose instantly.

MARSTON, What You Will: Induction. (1607)

The peevish old gentleman took pepper in the nose.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Holy War, p. 267. (1682)

He takes Pepper in the Nose.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2032. (1732) i. e. he takes offence.

Pepper though it be hot in the Mouth, is colde in the Maw.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 73. (1579)

If Peter Piper pick'd a peck of pickled peppers,

Where is the peck of pickled peppers Peter Piper pick'd?

J. K. PAULDING, Koningsmarke. Ch. 2. (1823)

Quoting an old nursery rhyme, cited by HAL- LIWELL, Nursery Rhymes, p. 55. Sometimes

"off a pewter plate" is added at the end of each line. "She sells sea-shells by the sea-shore" is a well-known tongue-tripper, and another is, "Bill had a billboard and also a board bill, but the board bill bored Bill, so he sold the billboard to pay the board bill."

PERFECTION

<sup>1</sup> There never was such beauty in another man.
Nature made him, and then broke the mould
(Non è sì bello in tante altre persone, Natura il fece, e poi roppa la stampa.)

ARIOSTO, Orlando Furioso. Canto x, st. 84. (1532)

<sup>1</sup> I think Nature hath lost the mould
Where she her shape did take.
UNKNOWN, A Praise of His Lady. (1557) In Tottel's Miscellany. "The idea that Nature lost the perfect mould has been a favorite one with poets, and is found in most of the literatures of Europe."

No autumn, nor no age ever approach
This heavenly piece, which Nature having wrought
She lost the needle.

MASSINGER AND FIELD, The Fatal Dowry. (1632)
For Nature had but little clay
Like that of which she moulded him.

T. L. PEACOCK, Headlong Hall. Ch. 5. (1816)
<sup>2</sup> Job was a non-such in his day for holiness.

THOMAS BROOKS, Works (1867), vi, 30. (1670)

I have always thought you a nonsuch of a woman.
SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison.
Bk. 1, ch. 22. (1753)

As for your Prince, . . . he's not a nonsuch.
SARAH TYTLER (HENRIETTA KEDDIE), The Macdonald Lass, p. 172. (1895)

<sup>3</sup> Nothing is harder to find than perfection.
(Quicquam difficilius quam reperire quod sit omni ex parte in suo genere perfectum.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 21, sec. 79. (44 B. C.)
The Greek proverb is, χαλεπὰ τὰ κάλα.

<sup>4</sup> The more a thing is perfect, the more it feels pleasure and likewise pain. (Quanto la cosa è più perfetta, | più senta il bene, e così la doglienza.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto vi, l. 107. (c. 1300)

<sup>5</sup> "He must be a first-rater," said Sam. "A 1."
replied Mr. Roker.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 41. (1837)
He was six foot o' man, A 1,
Clear grit an' human natur'.
J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'. (1846)

<sup>6</sup> Perfection is for the few. (Que es de pocos lo perfecto.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim
245. (1647)

<sup>7</sup> O fair Cresseid, the flour and A-per-se
Of Troy and Greece.

ROBERT HENRYSON, The Testament of Cresseid,
l. 78. (c. 1480) A-per-se: paragon.

A verie A per se A, not her fellowe in Europe.
GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 104. (1573)

The mould was lost wherein was made
This a per se of all.

MONTGOMERIE, Cherrie and Slae. (c. 1585)
Such an one is an a per se for knavery.

WILLIAM BRATHWAIT, Whimsies, p. 123. (1631)

<sup>8</sup> Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect. (ἐσθε οὖν ὑμεῖς τέλειοι ὡς ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ὁ οὐράνιος τέλειός ἐστιν.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 48. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Estote ergo vos perfecti, sicut et pater vester caelestis perfectus est."

<sup>9</sup> Nothing is perfect in every way. (Rien n'est beat de toutes pars.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 44. (1548)
Everything has its faults, and nothing is happy in all respects. (Toutes choses il y a de la faute, & rien n'est en tous endroits heureux.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 25. (1552)
No perfection is so absolute,
That some impurity doth not pollute.

SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. l. 853. (1594)

<sup>10</sup> Do you seek Alcides' equal? None is, except himself. (Quaeris Alcidae parem? | nemo est nisi ipse.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 84. (c. A. D. 60)

Thou art the nonpareil.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 4, 20. (1606)

[She] but herself, admits no parallel.

MASSINGER, Duke of Milan. Act iv, sc. 3. (1623)

None but himself, himself can parallel.

UNKNOWN, *Lines under the Portrait of Colonel
Giles Strangeways*. (c. 1680) See GRANGER,
Biographical History, iii, 278.

He was equal only to himself.

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE, of Julius Caesar. (c.
1699) See DODD, Epigrammatists, p. 534.

None but itself can be its parallel.

LEWIS THEOBALD, Double Falsehood. Act iii,
sc. 1. (1728)

Oh! she was perfect past all parallel.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 17. (1818)

<sup>11</sup> You are the pink of courtesy.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

The very pink of perfection.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer.
Act i, sc. 1. (1773) BAYLY, Loves of the Butterflies. (a. 1839)

I'm the pink of prudence.

ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast. Act i. (1787)

The very pink and pineapple.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 7. (1843)

"You are the American aloe of the human race, my dear Chiv," said Mr. Tigg, "which only blooms once in a hundred years!"

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 7.

<sup>12</sup> This is something like a tansy.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

At a close hug . . . he's all splendiferous.

R. M. BIRD, Nick of the Woods, i, 226. (1837)

It's a corker. It's a humdinger.

NGAIO MARSH, Vintage Murder, p. 286. (1940)

She's a bit of all right.

NIGEL MORLAND, Murder in Wardour Street, p.
196. (1940)

All is gas and gaiters.

H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 281. (1941)

- 1 Perfection is unique and cannot be taught. (La perfection est une, et incommunicable.)
VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 687. (1746)
Perfection is the greatest flirt of them all.
ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 148. (1940)

PERFUME

See also Smell

- 2 The sweetest essences are always confined in the smallest glasses.
JOHN DRYDEN, Essays. Vol. ii, p. 178. (a. 1700)
3 You may smell their pride by their perfumes.
ROBERT GREENE, Farewell to Follie. (1591)
The room was full of the fragrance of flowers—both mille and cauli.
O. HENRY, Extradited from Bohemia. (1908)
4 And all your courtly civet-cats can vent,
Perfume to you, to me is excrement.
POPE, Epilogue to the Satires. Dial. ii, l. 183. (1738) Pope is alluding to the fact that civet, used in perfumery, is obtained from glands or sacs in the anal pouch of the civet cat.
I cannot talk with civet in the room.
COWPER, Conversation, l. 283. (1781)
5 Ointment and perfume rejoice the heart. (Unguento et variis odoribus delectatur cor.)
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 9. (c. 350 B. C.)
6 He who frequents the perfumer's shop and lingers even for a short time, will carry with him the scent of the place. (Qui in unguentaria taberna resederunt et paulo diutius commorati sunt, odorem secum loci ferunt.)
SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cviii, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 64)

PERHAPS

- 7 Little comfort can be sucked from a perhaps.
STEPHEN CHARNOCK, Delight in Prayer. (a. 1680)
We quietly believe this Universe to be intrinsically a great, unintelligible Perhaps.
CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, ch. 1. (1843)
We can make ourselves uncomfortable to any extent with perhapses.
RUSKIN, Ethics of the Dust. Ch. 4. (1866)
8 I am going to seek a grand perhaps; draw the curtain, the farce is played. (Je m'en vais chercher un grand peut-être; tirez le rideau, la farce est jouée.)
RABELAIS. (1553) His last words, according to Motteux, but probably an invention.
His religion, at best, is an anxious wish; like that of Rabelais, 'a great Perhaps.'
CARLYLE, Essays: Burns. (1828)
The grand Perhaps!
ROBERT BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology. (1855)

PERIL, see Danger

PERSECUTION

See also Oppression

- 9 He fell to the earth, and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? (τί με διώκεις;)
New Testament: Acts, ix, 4. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Quid me persequeris?"
10 He who never suffers persecution will never become a Buddha.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 439. (1938)
A Buddhist proverb.
11 Persecution is a very easy form of virtue.
LORD COLERIDGE, Judgment, Regina vs. Ramsay. (1883)
12 The history of persecution is a history of endeavors to cheat nature, to make water run uphill, to twist a rope of sand.
EMERSON, Essays: Compensation. (1841)
13 Whoever is right, the persecutor must be wrong.
WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. (1693)

PERSEVERANCE

- 14 Clinging like a limpet. (ὥσπερ λεπὰς προσεχόμενος.)
ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 105. (422 B. C.)
15 He overtakes at last who tires not.
NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Overtake. (1736)
16 Perseverance. A lowly virtue whereby mediocrity achieves an inglorious success.
AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)
17 Never say die—down upon your luck.
DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 2. (1837) See under DEATH.
18 Even an iron cudgel may be ground into a needle. ('Tieh 'chih mo 'chêng chên.)
DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 188. (1872)
19 Spit on the stane, it will be wet at the last.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 88. (c. 1595)
20 Slackness breeds worms; but the sure traveller, Though he alight sometimes, still goeth on.
GEORGE HERBERT, Church-Porch. St. 57. (1633)
Step after step the ladder is ascended.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 395. (1640)
21 Shoot the second shaft, and perhaps thou mayst find again the first.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1659)
22 For precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line: here a little and there a little. (Quia manda remanda, manda remanda, expecta reexpecta, expecta reexpecta, modicum ibi, modicum ibi.)
Old Testament: Isaiah, xxviii, 10. (c. 725 B. C.)

- 1
God is with those who persevere.
MOHAMMED, The Koran. Ch. 8. (c. 625)
- 2
Stick to one thing at a time. (Uno loco consistit.)
PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 46. (c. A. D. 60)
- 3
The good huntsman must follow the hounds and not give up the chase. (οὐκοῦν τὸν ἀγαθὸν αὐνηγέτην μεταθεῖν χρὴ καὶ μὴ ἀνίεσθαι.)
PLATO, Laches. Sec. 194B. (c. 375 B. C.)
To drag out Hermes. (Ἐρμῆν ἔλκειν.)
STRATTIS, The Lemnians. Frag. 1. (c. 375 B. C.)
As the last cup was drunk to Hermes, this means to make a last, supreme effort.
- 4
A second way of sailing. (δεύτερος πλοῦς.)
PLATO, Phaedo, sec. 99D. (399 B. C.)
By "the second voyage" is doubtless meant: If fair winds fail, take to the oars.
(ὁ δεύτερος πλοῦς ἐστὶ δῆπου λεγόμενος, ἂν ἀποτέχῃ τις οὐρίον, κώπαισι πλείν.)
MENANDER, Thrasyleon. Fr. 241K. (c. 300 B. C.)
"The second voyage" was proverbial for "The next best way."
We must set sail again, in the words of the proverb, and try some other scheme. (δεύτερος ἐσται, φασί, πλοῦς καὶ ἑτέρα βουλή.)
HELIODORUS, Aethiopica. Bk. i, ch. 15. (c. A. D. 350)
Forsaken by the wind, you must use your oars. (Destitutus ventis, remos adhibe.)
ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. ii, p. 162. (1814)
"Brave admiral, say but one good word: What shall we do when hope is gone?"
The words leapt like a leaping sword:
"Sail on! sail on! sail on! and on!"
JOAQUIN MILLER, Columbus. (a. 1897)
- 5
A just man falleth seven times and riseth up again. (Septies enim cadet iustus, et resurget.)
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiv, 16. (c. 350 B. C.)
He that often casteth shal sumtyme through one chance and sumtime an other. (Si crebro iacias, aliud alias ieceris.)
ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 13. (1508)
TAVERNER, tr., fo. 51. (1550)
They did not strike twelve the first time.
EMERSON, English Traits. Ch. 19. (1856)
TRY, TRY AGAIN, see under TRYING.
- 6
The Constant mind, that perseueres . . . neuer fears.
FRANCIS QUARLES, Job: Meditations, xv. (1624)
The proverbial form is, "Persevere and never fear."
- 7
There is nothing which persevering effort and unceasing and diligent care cannot overcome. (Nihil est quod non expugnet pertinax opera, et intenta ac diligens cura.)
SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. 50, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 64)
Perseverance kills the game.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 149. (1678)
- 8
Perseverance is more efficacious than violence; and many things which cannot be overcome

- when they stand together, yield themselves up when taken little by little. (τὴν ἐπιμονὴν ἀνυσιμωτέραν τῆς βίας οὖσαν.)
- SERTORIUS, Speech, to his army. (c. 80 B. C.)
Sertorius had just demonstrated this by producing two horses, one old and weak, the other large and strong. By the side of the feeble horse he placed a tall and robust man, and by the side of the powerful horse, a small and weak man. At a given signal, both men tried to tear the hair out of the horses' tails, but the strong man failed because he tried to tear it out all at once, while the weak man succeeded by pulling out the hairs one at a time.
- Great works are performed not by strength but by perseverance.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. (1759)
- 9
By perseverance the snail reached the ark.
C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)
SLOW AND SURE, see under SLOWNESS.
- 10
It's dogged as does it.
ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Last Chronicle of Barset. Ch. 61. (1867) MARSH, Death and the Dancing Footman, p. 218. (1941) BAILEY, Meet Mr. Fortune, p. 452. (1942)
I found that "dogged does it" had got into my blood, and I knuckled to at my work with a resolve to get it done.
J. R. GREEN, Letter to Miss Stopford, 30 March, 1877.
Leg over leg, the dog went to Dover.
H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 504. (1940) Frequently quoted by Elihu Root.
- 11
Good fortune brings success, but it is endeavor that deserves praise. (Successum fert fortuna, experientiam laus sequitur.)
VARRO, Rerum Diviniarum. Bk. xiv. (c. 50 B. C.)
Try shaking another oak. (ἄλλην ὄρον βαλάνιζε.)
UNKNOWN, Greek anthology, xi, 417. (a. A. D. 900) The title of the epigram is "On an Elderly Woman Annoying a Young Man," but the phrase is also a proverbial answer to a beggar.
- A hundred shots and a hundred hits. (Pai fo pai chung.)
DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 192. (1872)
- 12
Persevere, and preserve yourself for better days. (Durate, et vosmet rebus servate secundis.)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 207. (19 B. C.)
Persevere: it is thy part. Perhaps on the unhappy happier days shall wait. (Perge: decet. forsan miseros meliora sequentur.)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 153. (19 B. C.)
Endure and persevere; this pain will turn to your good by and by. (Prefer et obdura l dolor hic tibi proderit olim.)
OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 7. (c. 13 B. C.)
The Latin proverbial form is, "Persevera, per severa" (Persevere through difficulties).
See also under ENDURANCE.

1 O, thou hast damnable iteration, and art indeed able to corrupt a saint.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act i, sc. 2, l. 101.

2 Patience and persévérance

Made a Bishop of His Reverence.

UNKNOWN. Sometimes attributed to a Mr. Mullan, headmaster of the National School at Waterside, Londonderry, Ireland.

PERSONALITY

See also Individuality

3 As I am, so I see; use what language we will, we can never say anything but what we are.

EMERSON, Essays: Experience. (1844)

4 Such a man in truth am I. (Nimirum hic ego sum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 15, l. 42. (20 B. C.) "When means fail," Horace explains, "I praise a lowly lot; when riches come, I, the same man, praise them too."

Be my vessel large or small, I, the passenger aboard, shall remain one and the same. (Ego, utrum | nave ferar magna an parva, ferar unus et idem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 199.

No, I am that I am.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. cxxi. (1609)

5 You are you and I am I. Although you stand by my side with body naked, how can you defile me?

HWUY OF LEW-HEA. Quoted by MENCIVS, v, ii, 1, 3. (c. 300 B. C.)

Such am I and you; but what I am you cannot be; what you are anyone may be. (Hoc ego, tuque sumus: sed quod sum, non potes esse: | tu quod es, e populo quilibet esse potest.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 13. (c. A. D. 90)

6 We are at times as different from our real selves as from other people. (On est quelquefois aussi différent de soi-même que des autres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 135. (1665)

7 Reject what you are not. (Respue quod non es.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 51. (c. A. D. 58)

8 I am not what I was. (Non sum ego qui fueram.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. 12, l. 11. (c. 26 B. C.)

I am not now what once I was. (Non esse, quod fuerim.)

ST. JEROME, Letters. No. xxii, sec. 7. (A. D. 384)

Presume not that I am the thing I was.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, v, 5, 60. (1590)

9 Personality is to a man what perfume is to a flower.

CHARLES M. SCHWAB, Ten Commandments of Success. (c. 1910)

PERSUASION

10 We constantly read of the "Hebrew persuasion," or the "Jewish persuasion." I expect soon to see the term widened still more, and a man of colour described as "an individual of the negro persuasion."

HENRY ALFORD, in Good Words, p. 199. (1863)

A gentleman of the hair-cutting persuasion.

F. ANSTEY (T. A. GUTHRIE), The Tinted Venus. Ch. 7. (1885)

A sinister moustache of the tooth-brush persuasion.

ROBERT HICHENS, The Londoners, p. 33. (1902)

A dark little man, evidently of French persuasion.

BEATRICE HARRADAN, Katharine Frensham, p. 28. (1903)

11 Persuasion's only shrine is eloquent speech. (οὐκ ἔστι Πειθοῦς ἱερὸν ἄλλο πλὴν λόγος.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 1391. (405 B. C.) The very marrow of Persuasion. (Suadaeque medulla.)

ENNIUS, Annals. Bk. ix, frag. 305, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.) Of Marcus Cornelius Cethegus, an orator. Quoted by CICERO, Brutus, xv, 58. Suada (Ἰεῖθω) was the goddess of Persuasion.

He, from whose lips divine persuasion flows.

POPE, tr., Iliad. Bk. vii, l. 143. (1720)

Persuasion hung upon his lips.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1759)

No printer's type can record . . . the persuasion of his silvery tongue.

LORD LYTTON, What Will He Do with It? Ch. 8. Note. (1858)

12 The persuasion of the fortunate sways the doubtful.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 632. (1640)

13 Persuade him with kindly gifts and gentle words. (δώροισιν τ' ἀγαθοῖσιν ἐπεισὶ τε μιλχιόισι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 113. (c. 850 B. C.)

Would you persuade, speak of interest, not of reason.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734

14 Lash her with the whip of Suasion. (δοροί μαστιγι Πειθοῦς.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. iv, l. 219. (462 B. C.) Secret are the keys of wise Persuasion, which unlock the shrine of love. (κρυπταὶ κλαῖδες ἐντὶ σοφᾶς Πειθοῦς ἱερᾶν φιλοτάτων.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes, ix, 39. (474 B. C.)

15 By persuasion, not by force of arms. (πειθοὶ γάρ, οὐ δὲ ὀπλῶν.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Lysander and Sulla Compared. Ch. 2, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 110) Of Sulla. πειθανάγκη (forceful persuasion) was proverbial of the Thessalians and Spartans.

Those which with blows, are not to be reformed, are oftentimes wonne with light persuasions.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 381. (1580)

Win by persuasion, not force. (Persuasione cape, non vi.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 327. (1869) "Persuasion is better than force" is the usual English proverbial form.

<sup>1</sup> He'd persuade a wolf to run mad for the asking. (πεισαι καὶ τὸς λύκος αὐτίκα λυσσῆν.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. iv, l. 11. (c. 270 B. C.)

He did entreat me, past all saying nay.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii, 2, 232. (1597)

<sup>2</sup> There is a danger in being persuaded before one understands.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety. (c. 1755)

PERT

<sup>3</sup> Sche was . . . pert as is a pye.

CHAUCER, The Reeves Tale, l. 30. (c. 1386)

As peart as a bird.

WILLIAM WARNER, Albion's England. Ch. 31, st. 4. (1592)

As pert as a Frog upon a Washing-Block.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 723. (1732)

As peart as a sparrow.

MARY PALMER, Devon. Dialect. p. 70. (1837)

He was as piert as a game-cock.

KINGSLEY, The Water-Babies. Ch. 1. (1863)

As pecart as a robin.

FRANCIS E. TAYLOR, The Folk-speech of South Lancashire, p. 3. (1901)

<sup>4</sup> Here pricketh forth this hasty defender, as pert as a pearmonger.

THOMAS HARDING, quoted in JEWEL, Defence of the Apology, 822. (1564)

As pert as a pearmonger's mare.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 281. (1678)

You are as pert as a pearmonger.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

SOUTHEY, Correspondence, p. 319. (1835)

PERVERSTY

<sup>5</sup> Perverseness makes one squint-eyed.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 636. (1640)

Perverseness is one of the primitive impulses of the human heart.

E. A. POE, The Black Cat. (1840)

<sup>6</sup> There are ways of curing folly, but none of correcting perversity. (On trouve des moyens pour guérir de la folie, mais on n'en trouve point pour redresser un esprit de travers.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 318. (1665)

A right mind finds it easier to yield to perversity than to guide it. (Un esprit droit a moins de peine de se soumettre aux esprits de travers, que de les conduire.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 448.

<sup>7</sup> The perversity of inanimate things. (Die Tücke des Objekts.)

F. T. VISCHER, Auch Einer. (1879)

PESSIMISM

See also Optimism

<sup>8</sup> He throws a cloud over happiness. (Serenitati nubem inducit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iv, 30. (1523) Quoting Plutarch. A kill-joy, a mar-feast.

You make the better side the worse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 355. (1678)

Leave off looking at the ugly leg.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, The Handsome and Deformed Leg. (1780) Franklin is telling the story of the man who had a deformed leg, and who always judged people by whether they looked at his good leg or his bad one.

He sits at the bottom of a well to look at the sky. (Tso ching kuan 'tien.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 187. (1872)

We can never see the sun rise by looking in the west.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 446. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

And in his dim, uncertain sight

Whatever wasn't must be right,

From which it follows he had strong

Convictions that what was, was wrong.

GUY WETMORE CARRYL, The Iconoclast and the Acorn. (c. 1900)

<sup>9</sup> Do you know what a pessimist is? A man who thinks everybody as nasty as himself, and hates them for it.

BERNARD SHAW, Unsocial Socialist. Ch.5. (1887)

Pessimism is essentially a religious disease.

WILLIAM JAMES, Will to Believe, p. 39. (1895)

Pessimism. A philosophy forced upon the convictions of the observer by the disheartening prevalence of the optimist.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

Pessimism is only the name that men of weak nerves give to history.

BERNARD DE VOTO, Mark Twain: The Ink of History. (1940) Another definition is, "A pessimist is one who, when he has the choice of two evils, chooses both."

OPTIMIST AND PESSIMIST, see under OPTIMISM.

PETER

<sup>10</sup> Peter in, and Paul out.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 279, with the explanation, "Spoken when after we have wanted a necessary person a long time, upon his arrival, another equally necessary is gone."

Peter in, Paul's out.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 253. (1678)

Peter's in, Paul's out.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 246. (1868)

<sup>11</sup> Peter is so godly, that God don't make him thrive.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3870. (1732)

<sup>12</sup> Peter denies His Lord and cries.

BENJAMIN HARRIS (?), The New England

Primer. (c. 1687) Sometimes given in the past tense, "Peter deny'd His Lord and cry'd."

1 Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church. (σὺ εἶ Πέτρος, καὶ ἐπὶ ταύτῃ τῇ πέτρᾳ οἰκοδομήσω μου τὴν ἐκκλησίαν.)

New Testament: Matthew, xvi, 18. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Tu es Petrus, et super hanc petram aedificabo ecclesiam meam."

It was founded upon a rock. (Fundata enim erat super petram.)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 25. (c. A. D. 70)

Also Luke, vi, 48.

Christ's famous pun, "Upon this rock I will build my church."

BERNARD SHAW, John Bull's Other Island: Preface. (1905)

2 He 'hoped this 'spectable meeting warn't going to Peter-out.'

H. H. RILEY, Puddleford and Its People, p. 84.

(1854) To fail, to become exhausted, to give out. A reference, of course, to the Apostle Peter.

[When] they get right up to doing it, they simply peter out.

G. H. LORIMER, Letters of a Self-made Merchant to His Son, p. 246. (1902)

The real ol'-time feud is peterin' out.

FRANCIS ROIT-WHEELER, The Boy with the Census, p. 10. (1911)

The road . . . peters out altogether farther down. LONDON, Valley of the Moon, p. 377. (1913)

II—To Rob Peter to Pay Paul

3 Fewe Princes geue that which to them selfe attayne . . . They robbe S. Peter therewith to cloth S. Powle.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Egloges. No. 1. (1514)

That in my judgment is a shameful thing . . . to uncloathe Peter to cloath Paule.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 99. (1574) Pettie, tr.

To strip St. Peter to clothe St. Paul. (Descouvrir S. Pierre pour couvrir S. Pol.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Pol. (1611)

LOUDIN, Curiosités Française, p. 154. (1660)

Referring perhaps to the indiscriminate use of vestments on St. Peter's and St. Paul's days. A later form, "Dérober saint Pierre pour donner à saint Paul," is closer to the usual version, as is "Il ôte à saint Pierre pour donner à saint Paul" (He takes from St. Peter to give to St. Paul). It should be noted that ôter also has the sense of stripping off one's clothes. But the modern French form is "Décoliffer saint Pierre pour coiffer saint Paul" (Uncover—uncap—Saint Peter to cover Saint Paul).

4 Uncover not the church, therewith to mende the quere.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Mirrour of Good Manners, p. 30. (1570)

5 He rives the kirk to theik [thatch] the quier.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 48.

(c. 1595) Cited by DEAN RAMSAY, Reminiscences, v, 202, with the explanation, "Spoken of unprofitable persons who, in the English proverb, 'rob Peter to pay Paul.'"

Peel the kirk, and thick the quire.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 276. (1721)

6 As one who crucified Paul that Peter might go free. (Tanquam si quis crucifigeret Paulum ut redimeret Petrum.)

HERBERT OF BOSHAM, Life of St. Thomas of Canterbury, p. 287. (c. 1175)

7 Give not Saint Peter so much, to leave Saint Paul nothing.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 765. (1640)

Who praiseth St. Peter, doth not blame St. Paul.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 858. A later form is, "Praise Peter, but don't find fault with Paul."

8 Borowe of Peter to paye Paul . . . wher as a man doth Borowe of one to paye an other

RICHARD HULOET, Abcedarium. (1552)

Borrowing from Peter to pay Paul.

THOMAS UROUHART, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iii, ch. 3.

(1653) This is Urquhart's rendering of "Affin que par eulx vous faciez versure."

9 Sum medicyne is for Peter that is not good for Poul, for the diuersite of complexioun.

LANFRANCK, Science of Chirurgie, p. 331. (c. 1400)

10 To take from one's right side, to give to one's left.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 195. (1670)

RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 321 (1748), expands this slightly, "What the right side gives up, the left, he says, may be the better for."

To take from the right Hand, and give to the left.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5241. (1732)

To take out of one pocket to put in the other.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 544. (1855)

He tears away the east wall to repair the west wall. ('Tsê tung 'chiang pu hsi pi.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 188. (1872)

He gouges out flesh to heal an ulcer. (Wa jou i 'chuang.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 188. (1872)

The French say, "Faire un trou pour en boucher un autre" (To make one ditch to fill another).

He fattens the mule and starves the horse.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 203. (1875)

He blows his nose and blinds his eyes.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 600.

11 Lord, hou schulde God approve that thou robbe Petur, and gif this robbere to Poule in the name of Crist?

JOHN WYCLIF, Works (Arnold), iii, 174. (c. 1380)

The abbot seyde, "To robbe Petyr, and geue it Powle, it were not almesse but gret synne."

UNKNOWN, Jacob's Well, p. 138. (c. 1440)

Thei robbyn seynt petyr & geuyn it seynt Poule.

UNKNOWN, Jacob's Well, p. 305.

Lyke a pyckpurs pilgrim, ye prie and ye proule At rousers, to rob Peter and paie Poule.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

He robbeth Peter to paye Paul. (Lui robba Pietro per pagar san Paulo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firsle Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

To take from Peter, to give to Paul, is meer oppression.

DANIEL TUVIL, Vade Mecum, p. 36. (1637)

Much he [Dean Williams] expended on the repair of Westminster Abbey church; and his answer is generally known, when pressed by Bishop Laud to a larger contribution to St. Paul's, that he would not rob Peter to pay Paul.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain.

Bk. xi, ch. 6. (1655)

The lands of Westminster, so dilapidated by Bishop Thirlby . . . the rest laid out for reparation to the church of St. Paul; pared almost to the quick in those days of Rapine. From hence first came that significant By-word (as is said by some) of Robbing Peter to pay Paul.

PETER HEYLIN, Ecclesia Restaurata, p. 121.

(1661) No real authority has ever been found for this story.

Those that Rob Peter, as we say, to Pay Paul, and take the Bread out of their Masters Mouths to give it to Strangers.

L'ESTRANGE, Fables, clxxvi, 215. (1692)

It was not desirable to rob Saint Peter's altar in order to build one to Saint Paul.

MOTLEY, Dutch Republic. Vol. iii, ch. 5. (1855)

The appropriation of the lands of St. Peter at Westminster to pay for the repair of St. Paul's in the reign of Edward VI can hardly account for the phrase "To rob Peter to pay Paul." In French and German the allusion would be unintelligible, and furthermore, the early variant form, French and English, "To rob Peter to clothe Paul," must be considered in any explanation of origin.

ARCHER TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 198. (1931)

As the examples cited here show, the proverb is at least a hundred years older than the time of Edward VI. (1547) Undoubtedly some wag applied an old and well-known saying very aptly to a current incident.

You was going to rob Peter to stand off Paul.

O. HENRY, Shearing the Wolf. (1908)

PHARISEE, see Hypocrisy

PHILANTHROPY

<sup>1</sup> We praise those who love their fellow-men. (ὁσὲν τοὺς φιλανθρώπους ἐπαινοῦμεν.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. viii, ch. 1, sec. 3. (c. 335 B. C.)

We must get that philanthropic love of men into our hearts, but especially philadelphian, the love of the brethren.

NICHOLAS BYFIELD, An Exposition upon the Epistle to the Colossians, i, 10. (1615)

<sup>2</sup> In nothing do men more nearly approach the gods than in doing good to their fellowmen. (Homines ad deos nulla re propius accedunt quam salutem hominibus dando.)

CICERO, Pro Ligario. Ch. 12, sec. 38. (46 B. C.) The most acceptable service of God is doing good to man.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1. (1788)

He's true to God who's true to man, wherever wrong is done.

J. R. LOWELL, On the Capture of Fugitive Slaves near Washington. St. 7. (1845)

<sup>3</sup> He is like a needle that clothes people and is itself naked.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 563.

(1817) There is a similar proverb: "Like a wick which affords light to other people while being burnt itself."

<sup>4</sup> No one is a foreigner to me if he be good. (οὐδεὶς ἐστὶ μοι ἄλλότριος, ἀνὴρ ἢ χρηστός.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 602 K. (c. 300 B. C.)

I am a man, and nothing in man's lot can be indifferent to me. (Homo sum; humani nil a me alienum puto.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 77. (163

B. C.) St. Augustine states that this line was received with great applause by the audience, and it has been widely quoted. MONTAIGNE, Essays, bk. ii, ch. 2, adapts it, "Humani à se nihil alienum putet," and Florio puts this into a couplet: "He thinks that nothing strange be can | To him, that longs to any man." EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Table-Talk, also adapts it, "I am a man as well as a Roman, and nothing human is foreign to me." JAMES THOMSON, To the Memory of Lord Talbot, l. 282, has, "Nothing human foreign was to him."

He believed that he was born, not for himself, but for the whole world. (Nec sibi sed toti genitum se credere mundo.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. ii, l. 383. (c. A. D. 60) Referring to Cato. Quoted by FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1737.

Whatever concerns anyone concerns me. (Tout ce qui le touche me regarde.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1580)

As some old Aristotle or other said, whatever concerns a woman concerns me.

LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act ii. (1906)

He was genuinely a humanitarian. With Terence he might have said, had he ever heard of Terence, 'I am a man. Nothing that is human is outside my interest.'

SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS, Incredible Era, p. 55. (1939) Of President Warren G. Harding.

<sup>5</sup> Benevolence is the distinguishing characteristic of man. As embodied in man's conduct, it is called the path of duty.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. vii, pt. ii, ch. 16. (c. 275 B. C.)

1 To be the friend of the human race is not at all in my line. (L'ami du genre humain n'est point du tout mon fait.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Misanthrope. Act i, sc. 1, l. 64. (1666)

2 'Tis a kingly action, believe me, to assist the fallen. (Regia, crede mihi, res est succurrere lapsis.)

OVID, Epistulae Ex Ponto. Bk. ii, epis. 9, l. 11. (A. D. 13)

To pity distress is but human; to relieve it is Godlike.

HORACE MANN, Lectures on Education. Lect 6. (1845)

3 Philanthropy, the virtue closest akin to pity, its sister and its twin.

PHILO, De Virtutibus. Sec. 51. (c. A. D. 40)
Philo goes further into the kinship of εὐσέβεια and φιλανθρωπία in De Abrahamo, 208. Philanthropia may, of course, be translated as benevolence or kindness or charity or love of humanity.

4 Nine parts of self-interest gilt over with one part of philanthropy.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Pt. iii, ch. 8. (1851)

He is one of those philanthropists who, in a time of famine, would vote for nothing but a supply of toothpicks.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, Wit and Opinions: A Philanthropist, p. 2. (1859)

It is easy to live for others; everybody does.

RALPH WALDO EMERSON, Journals. Vol. vii, p. 46. (c. 1870)

Take egotism out, and you would castrate the benefactors.

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. ix, p. 519.

Philanthropies and charities have a certain air of quackery.

EMERSON, Nature, Addresses and Lectures: The Transcendentalist. (1875)

The philanthropist is the Nero of modern times.

GEORGE MOORE, Confessions of a Young Man. Ch. 7. (1888)

Philanthropy [has become] simply the refuge of people who wish to annoy their fellow-creatures.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act i. (1895)

The selfish wish to govern is often mistaken for a holy zeal in the cause of humanity.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, v, 194. (1897)

If not in coin you must pay in humiliation of spirit for every benefit received at the hands of philanthropy.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Cop and the Anthem. (1906)

5 Feel for others—in your pocket.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)

6 Myself not ignorant of adversity, I have learned to befriend the unhappy. (Non ignara mali miseris succurrere disco.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 630. (19 B. C.)

PHILIPPI

7 I am thy evil genius, Brutus, and thou shalt see me at Philippi. (ὁ σὸς, ὦ Βρούτε, δαίμων κακός· ὄψει δέ με περὶ Φιλίππους.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Caesar. Ch. 69, sec. 7. (c. A. D. 100) The threat of the spectre which appeared to Brutus in his tent at Abydos, 42 B. C., an omen that Caesar's murder was not pleasing to the gods. Brutus answered boldly, "I shall see thee there," and when the spectre reappeared at Philippi, Brutus, having been defeated, "put his naked sword to his breast and so died."

Thou shalt see me at Philippi.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iv, 3, 284. (1599)

See you at Philippi or thereabouts some time.

NIGEL MORLAND, Murder in Wardour Street, p. 45. (1040)

PHILISTINE

8 The Philistines be upon thee, Samson. (Philistiim super te Samson.)

Old Testament: Judges, xvi, 9. (c. 700 B. C.)

The Philistines have invaded the land. (Philistiim super terram.)

Old Testament: I Samuel, xxiii, 27. (c. 600 B. C.)

I feel a little like "The Philistines are upon thee, Samson."

LADY GRANVILLE, Letters, i, 40. (1812)

9 Philistins, for lewd (or drunken) people, des Debauchez.

GUY MIEGE, Great French Dictionary. (1688)

Philistines, Serjeants Bailiffs and their Crew.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew (a. 1700)

They say, you went to Court last night very drunk; Nay, I'm told for certain, you had been among Philistines.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

If he had fallen into the hands of the Philistines (which is the name given by the faithful to bailiffs).

HENRY FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. v, ch. 6. (1752)

10 Philistia, triumph thou because of me. (Mihi alienigenae subditi sunt.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lx, 8. (c. 350 B. C.)

Philistia, a plain in southeastern Palestine without interest, a country of the common-place.

11 The citizens he denominates Philistines.

JOHN RUSSELL, A Tour in Germany. Vol. i, ch.

3. (1824) Russell is referring to a sermon preached by one Pastor Goetze from the text Judges, xvi, 9, "The Philistines be upon thee, Samson," at the funeral of a student of the University of Jena, who was killed in a "town and gown" brawl in 1693. From that time onwards the students at German universities called the townsmen Philistern. Both Carlyle and Arnold, of course, heard it there, and later applied it to persons of low and materialistic ideas.

A little inn with a tea-garden, whither students and Philistines (i.e. townsmen who are not students) resort on Sundays.

T. L. BEDDOES, Letter: Poems, p. lix. (1826)
[The partisans of Illuminism] received the nickname of Philistern (Philistines) which the few scattered remnants of them still bear.

CARLYLE, Miscellaneous Essays, i, 58. (1827)
At other times, Philistines would enter, what we call bores, dullards, Children of Darkness.

CARLYLE, Life of Sterling. Vol. i, ch. 7. (1851)
A man without sentiment, who cares naught for moonlight and music. A low, practical man, who pays his debts. I hate him.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), Llaron, A Romance of the French School. (1860)

Efforts have been made to obtain in English some term equivalent to Philister or épicier [French for grocer]: Mr. Carlyle has . . . "respectability with its thousand gigs," . . . well, the occupant of every one of those gigs is, Mr. Carlyle means, a Philistine.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Heine. (1863)

Philistine must have meant, in the mind of those who invented the nickname, a strong, dogged, unenlightened opponent of the children of the light.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Essays in Criticism: Heine.
It was in this essay that Arnold introduced into England from Germany the term "philistine." This word was his chief contribution to the process of disintegrating Victorianism.

HUGH KINGSMILL, Matthew Arnold, p. 256.

(1928) As will be seen from the above citations, however, Carlyle introduced the word, but it was Arnold who gave it currency.

In common phraseology he [Macaulay] was a Philistine—a word which I understand properly to mean indifference to the higher intellectual interests.

LESLIE STEPHEN, Hours in a Library. Vol. iii, p. 306. (1879) Stephen has another definition. "A term of contempt applied by prigs to the rest of their species."

Philistine. One whose mind is the creature of its environment.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

1 Tell it not in Gath, publish it not in the streets of Ascalon, lest the daughters of the Philistines rejoice. (Nolite annunciare in Geth, neque annuncietis in compitis Ascalonis: ne forte laetentur filiae Philisthiim.)

Old Testament: II Samuel, i, 20. (c. 600 B.C.)

PHILOSOPHER

2 As for the philosophers, . . . their discourses are as the stars, which give little light, because they are so high.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning: Civil Knowledge. (1605)

Philosophers dwell in the moon.

JOHN FORD, The Lover's Melancholy. Act iii. (1628) A modern definition is, "A philosopher is one who knows less and less about more and more."

A good philosopher makes a bad citizen. (Un bon philosophe fait un mauvais citoyen.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Epigram. (c. 1810) See GUILLON, Napoléon, p. 294.

3 But al be that he was a philosophre,
Yet hadde he but litel gold in cofre.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 297.
Filosofres for-soken welthe, for thei wolde be neody.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text C, xxiii, l. 38. (1393)

And that I recorde of all philosophres,
That lytyll store of coyne kepe in her cofres.

LYDGATE, Assembly of Gods, l. 272. (c. 1420)

4 Pythagoras . . . is said to have first named himself philosopher or lover of wisdom.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Friend, p. 290. (1809)
However, the title, "The Philosopher" was specifically applied to Aristotle.

5 There is no philosopher who is a philosopher at all times.

EMERSON, Essays: The Conservative. (1841)

6 He is no mean philosopher who can give a reason for one half of what he thinks.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 339. (1823)

The greater the philosopher, the harder it is for him to answer the questions of common people.

HENRYK SIENKIEWICZ, Quo Vadis. Ch. 8. (1911)

7 A countryman, one of nature's philosophers, with rough mother-wit. (Rusticus, abnormis sapiens, crassaque Minerva.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 3. (35 B.C.)

8 The skilful philosophers of old were so deep as to be incomprehensible. (Shen pu 'k'o shih.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king. Sec. 15. Giles, tr.

No statement is so absurd that some philosopher has not made it. (Nihil tam absurde dici potest quod non dicatur ab aliquo philosophorum.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 58, sec. 119. (c. 44 B.C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 12.

9 O foolishness of men! that lend their ears
To those budge doctors of the Stoick furr.

MILTON, Comus, l. 706. (1634)

The stoicism of the philosophers was due purely to the circumstance that death was inevitable. (Le nécessité de mourir faisait toute la constance des philosophes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 504. (1665)

10 [They] fetch their precepts from the Cynic tub.

MILTON, Comus, l. 708. (1634) The tub from which Diogenes lectured.

11 The whole life of the philosopher is a preparation for death. (τὸ μελέτημα αὐτὸ τοῦτο ἐστὶν τῶν φιλοσόφων, λύσις καὶ χωρισμὸς ψυχῆς ἀπὸ σώματος.)

PLATO, Phaedo. Sec. 67D. (c. 385 B.C.) CICERO,

Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 30, sec. 74 Latins it: "Tota philosophorum vita commentatio mortis est."

Socrates was right when he said, Philosophy is nothing but a meditation upon death. (Socrates n'abusoit du terme, quand il disoit, Philosophie n'estre autre chose que meditation de mort.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 31. (1545)

To philosophise is nothing else than to prepare oneself for death. (Philosopher ce n'est autre chose que s'apprester à la mort.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1580) Quoting Cicero.

I fear he will prove the weeping philosopher [Heraclitus] when he grows old.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 2, 53. (1597) MENCEN, Prejudices, says, "There is no record in human history of a happy philosopher," but it is Cicero's dictum that "Dedecet philosophum adiciere mentem" (It ill becomes a philosopher to be cast down in mind).

1 Philosopher, amateur of wisdom, that is to say of truth. (Philosophe, amateur de la sagesse, c'est-à-dire de la vérité.)

VOLTAIRE, Dictionnaire Philosophique: Philosophie. (1764)

To be a philosopher is . . . so to love wisdom as to live according to its dictates.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1. (1854)

The philosopher is Nature's pilot.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

2 Happy is the commonwealth where a Philosopher is Prince.

JOHN WILSON, tr., The Praise of Folly. Sec. 25. (1668) Quoting "that goodly sentence" of Plato.

PHILOSOPHY

3 What I have gained from philosophy is the ability to feel at ease in any society. (τὸ δύνασθαι πᾶσι θαρρύντως ὁμιλεῖν.)

ARISTIPPUS, Apothegm. (c. 400 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristippus. Bk. ii, sec. 68.

What I have gained from the study of philosophy is the ability to hold converse with myself. (τὸ δύνασθαι ἑαυτῷ ὁμιλεῖν.)

ANTISTHENES, Apothegm. (c. 375 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 6.

I have gained this at least from philosophy: to be prepared for every fortune. (τὸ γοῦν πρὸς πᾶσαν τύχην παρεσκευάζειν.)

DIOGENES, Apothegm. (c. 350 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Diogenes. Bk. vi, sec. 63.

I have gained this by philosophy: that I do without being ordered what others do only from fear of the law. (τὸ ἀνεπιτάκτως ποιεῖν ἃ τινες διὰ τὸν ἀπὸ τῶν νόμων φόβον ποιοῦσιν.)

ARISTOTLE, Apothegm. (c. 340 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Bk. v, sec. 20.

4 I seek from philosophy an antidote to sorrow. (Doloris medicinam a philosophia peto.)

CICERO, Academica. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 11. (45 B. C.)

The true medicine of the mind is philosophy. (Est perfecta animi medicina, philosophia.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. 3, sec. 6. (45 B. C.)

Adversity's sweet milk, philosophy.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 3, 55. (1595)

5 Philosophy enables every man who obeys her precepts to pass every season of his life free from worry. (Philosophia, cui qui pareat omne tempus aetatis sine molestia possit degere.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. 1, sec. 2. (44 B. C.)

O philosophy, thou guide of life, O thou explorer of virtue and expeller of vice! (O vitae philosophia dux, o virtutis indagatrix expultrixque vitiorum!)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 2, sec. 5. (45 B. C.)

Benign Philosophy; . . . it is she that first teaches us the right. (Prima docet rectum sapientia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 189. (c. A. D. 120)

It is true that Tullie saith [CICERO, De Officiis, ii, 2, ff.] O Philosophy, the true fountayne of all virtues, and the perfection of vnderstanding.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 64. (1578)

Philosophy may teach us to bear with equanimity the misfortunes of our neighbors.

OSCAR WILDE, The English Renaissance of Art: Lecture, New York, 9 Jan., 1882.

6 Philosophy, the mother of all the arts. (Philosophia vero, omnium mater artium.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 26, sec. 64. (45 B. C.)

7 Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy. (βλέπετε μή τις ὑμᾶς ἔσται ὁ συλαγωγῶν διὰ τῆς φιλοσοφίας.)

New Testament: Colossians, ii, 8. (c. A. D. 59) The Vulgate is, "Videte ne quis vos decipiat per philosophiam."

8 You must be the slave of philosophy, if you would enjoy real freedom. (Philosophiae servias oportet, ut tibi contingat vera libertas.)

EPICURUS, Fragments. Frag. 199. (c. 290 B. C.)

See SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. viii, sec. 7.

9 That's absurd in one philosophy which is worthy truth in another.

JOSEPH GLANVILLE, The Vanity of Dogmatizing. Ch. 20. (1661)

This same philosophy is a good horse in the stable, but an arrant jade on a journey.

GOLDSMITH, Good-Natured Man. Act i. (1768)

10 It is the Philosophy of the Distaff.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1037. (1650)

11 To philosophize is to doubt. (Philosopher c'est doubter.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1580)

It is true that a little Philosophie inclineth Mans Minde to Atheisme, but depth in Philosophie bringeth Mens Mindes about to Religion.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Atheisme. (1607)

The first step toward philosophy is incredulity.

DENIS DIDEROT, Remark, during his last conversation. (1784)

1 Wonder is the foundation of all philosophy; inquiry, the progress; ignorance, the end. (L'admiration est fondement de toute philosophie; l'inquisition, le progres; l'ignorance, le bout.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 11. (1595)

2 To ridicule philosophy is truly philosophical. (Se moquer de la philosophie, c'est vraiment philosophier.)

BLAISE PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. 10, No. 36. (c. 1660)

3 Philosophy is the highest music. (φιλοσοφία μὲν οὐσης μεγίστης μουσικῆς.)

PLATO, Phaedo. Sec. 61A. (c. 385 B.C.)

Philosophy is nothing else than the love of wisdom. (Nec quicquam aliud est philosophia . . . praeter studium sapientiae.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 2, sec. 5. (c. 45 B.C.)

What is philosophy? Does it not mean making preparation to meet the things which may come upon us? (τὸ δὲ φιλοσοφῆσαι τί ἐστίν; οὐχὶ παρασκευάσασθαι πρὸς τὰ συμβαίνοντα;)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. 10, sec. 5. (c. A.D. 100)

Pantagruelism, which is a certain jollity of mind pickled in the scorn of fortune. (Pantagruelisme, c'est certaine gayeté d'esprit conficte en mepris des choses fortuites.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, Prologue. (1548)

Philosophy is nothing but sophisticated poetry. (La philosophie n'est qu'une poésie sophistiquée.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

Philosophy is nothing but Discretion.

SELDEN, Table-Talk: Philosophy. (a. 1654)

Philosophy; the lumber of the schools.

S. NUTT, Ode to Sir W. Temple. Pt. ii. (1745)

The science of sciences. (Scientia scientiarum.)

COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 12. (1817)

Philosophy is the middle state between science, or knowledge, and sophia, or wisdom.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table-Talk, 20 July, 1830.

What is Philosophy but a continual battle against Custom?

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1836)

Philosophy is the account which the human mind gives to itself of the constitution of the world.

EMERSON, Representative Men. Ch. 2. (1850)

Philosophy is the possession of Knowledge.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, Dialogues of Plato, i, 185 (1875)

All philosophies, if you ride them home, are nonsense.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note-Books. (c. 1890)

Philosophy. A route of many roads leading from nowhere to nothing.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

Philosophy: unintelligible answers to insoluble problems.

HENRY ADAMS, Apothegm. Quoted by TAYLOR, The So-Called Human Race, p. 154. Voltaire said, "When he to whom one speaks does not understand what one is saying, and he who speaks does not understand himself, that is metaphysics. (Quand celui à qui l'on parle ne comprend pas, et celui qui parle ne se comprend pas, c'est de la métaphysique.)

4 There are more things in heaven and earth, Horatio.

Than are dreamt of in your philosophy.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 5, 166. (1600)

There is much in philosophy which is found neither in heaven nor in earth.

GEORG LICHTENBERG, Apothegm. (c. 1780)

Quoted by FREUD, Wit and Its Relation to the Unconscious. Pt. i, ch. 2.

Stranger things there be, on land and sea, than aught you or I wot of.

H. S. KEELER, The Man with the Wooden Spectacles, p. 198. (1941)

PHYSIC, see under Medicine

PHYSICIAN, see Doctor

PIANO

5 O Piano [softly], my dear Lady Scrape, Piano. GEORGE COLMAN, SR., The Musical Lady. Act i, sc. 2. (1762)

6 'Tis wonderful how soon a piano gets into a log-hut on the frontier.

R. W. EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Civilization. (1870)

7 Don't be ashamed if you can't play the piano. Be proud of it.

E. W. HOWE, Country Town Sayings. (1911)

8 Try this on your piano.

JUDSON PHILLIPS, Bottom Deal. (1941)

Play that on your piano.

EDITH HOWIE, Murder's So Permanent, p. 271. (1942)

Try that one on your pianola.

P. G. WODEHOUSE, Money in the Bank, p. 120. (1942)

9 Please do not shoot the pianist. He is doing his best.

OSCAR WILDE, Impressions of America. (1893; Wilde alleged that he had seen this used as a sign in a Western dance-hall. Usually ascribed to Mark Twain.

PICK

10 Mamma, I wish you would not say "the pick of them" . . . it is rather a vulgar expression.

GEORGE ELIOT, Middlemarch. Ch. 11. (1872)

Customers had to wait . . . till the buyers of the Abbot had the pick of the market.

J. R. GREENE, A Short History of England. Vol. ii, sec. 6. (1874)

These young men . . . were the very pick of the parish.

AVOUSTUS JESSOPP, Arcady for Better or Worse. Ch. 4. (1887)

The lad . . . he's the pick of the basket.

P. A. GRAHAM, The Red Scaur, p. 23. (1896)
Pick of the bunch. The best of a group of persons, a set or batch of things: Colloquial. Rather commoner than the best of the bunch and much older than the pick of the basket.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

1 He found he had the liberty to pick and choose.

SIR THOMAS HERBERT, Travels into Africa and Asia, p. 37. (1665)

You may pick and choose which you like best.

WILLIAM BOGHURST, Loimographia, p.90. (1666)

Those who pick and choose.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Satire upon Plagiarism, l. 109. (a. 1680)

I might have my pick and choice of all the . . . dukes in the nation.

HENRY BROOKE, Fool of Quality, ii, 58. (1770)

2 It will never get well if you pick it.

H. L. MENCKEN, What is Going on in the World. American Mercury, Nov., 1933, p. 257. Quoting an American proverb, fashioned after the saying of Sancho Panza, "The more you stir it, the worse it will be." Don Quixote, bk. iii, ch. 8.

TO PICK A BONE, see under BONE.

TO PICK A HOLE, see under HOLE.

PICKING

3 To keep my hands from picking and stealing.

Book of Common Prayer: Catechism. (1548)

Without any such picking and chusing.

JOHN WILSON, Natural Religion, p. 234. (1672)

4 Where am I to look for my pickings (Unde me iubes petere cibaria praelecti?)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. vi, epis. 3. (50 B. C.)

The Vulturs had then but small pickings.

JOHN MILTON, Smectymnus, xii. (1642)

Pretty pickings, I warrant, abroad.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Commissary. Act i. (1765)

The pretty pickings to be made.

MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. v, ch. 1. (1809)

The pickings of the office were enormous.

W. P. COURTNEY, in Academy, 13 May, 1893. p. 413./1.

The pickings may be considerable. Pickings! Is there a finer word in the language?

J. M. BARRIE, Tommy and Grisel. Ch. 1. (1900)

There were pickings on the side. . . . Pickings for the carrion fowl as well as for the wolves.

EDGAR WALLACE, The Mind of Mr. J. G. Reeder. Ch. 6. (c. 1925)

5 Children and Chicken Must be always picking.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6078. (1732)

PICKLE

6 What brings thee to such a biting pickle? (Ma che ti mena a sì pungenti salse?)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xviii, l. 51. (c. 1300)

In this pickle lyeth man by nature.

JOHN FOXE, Sermon on II Corinthians, v, 21. (1585)

How camest thou in this pickle?

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, v, 1, 281. (1611)

I warrant, added she, he was in a sweet pickle.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela, i, 77. (1741)

I could see no way out of the pickle I was in.

R. L. STEVENSON, Catriona, p. 291. (1893)

7

Thou shalt be whipt with wire, and stew'd in brine.

Smarting in lingering pickle.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 5. 66 (1606)

ROD IN PICKLE, see under ROD.

PICK-POCKET

8

Pick-pockets are sure Traders, for they take ready Money.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3872. (1732)

9

I am no pick-purse of another's wit.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Astrophel and Stella. Sonnet lxxiv. (a. 1586)

10

He plays you as fair as if he picked your pocket.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 79. (1678)

He hath as fine a hand at picking a pocket as a woman.

JOHN GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act i, sc.6. (1727)

11

He were a foole which wolde trust hym . . . that hath picked his purse before his face.

WILLIAM TINDALE, Exposition I John, p. 8. (1531)

PICTURE

See also Painting

12

Painted creatures are dead speakers.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works (Grosart), ii, e 5. (1616)

Painted pictures are dead speakers.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 131. (1670)

13

He was gettin' too high up in the picture.

T. A. BURKE, ed., Polly Peaseblossom's Wedding, p. 147. (1851)

I feel that I am in the picture, when I wear black during Lent.

CLARA MORRIS, Stage Confidences, p.202. (1902)

14

A picture is a mute poem. (Mutum est pictura poema.)

CORNIFICIUS, Ad Herennium. Bk. iv, sec. 28. (c. 50 B. C.)

It is a pretty mocking of the life.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, i, 1, 35. (1608)

15

Pictures are the books of . . . lay-men.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, ii, 181. (1660) Or, "Pictures are the books of the unlearned."

Every noble picture is a manuscript book, of which only one copy exists, or ever can exist.

RUSKIN, Arrows of the Chace, i, 71. (1852)

PIE

<sup>1</sup> He has eaten many a Christmas pie.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia Anglo-Latina,
p. 189. (1639)

To EAT HUMBLE PIE, see under HUMILITY.

<sup>2</sup> Are you tender and scrupulous,—you must eat more mince-pie.

EMERSON, Representative Men: Montaigne. (1850)

<sup>3</sup> You had better not cut that pie.

T. C. HALIBURTON, The Attaché, Ser. xi. (1843)

<sup>4</sup> Why 'tis pasty crust; eat enough and it will make you wise, an old proverb.

JOHN LYLY, Midas. Act iv, sc. 3. (1592)

Pye-lid makes people wise. Because no man can tell what is in a pye till the lid be taken up.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 79. (1678)

One can't tell what a pie is till the lid is off.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 114. (1875)

<sup>5</sup> Oh, you must be a lover of your landlady's daughter,

Or you don't get a second piece of pie.

NGAIO MARSH, Vintage Murder, p. 172. (1940)

Quoted from a popular song of c. 1891.

You will eat bye and bye

In that glorious land above the sky;

Work and pray, live on hay,

You'll get pie in the sky when you die.

JOE HILL, The Preacher and the Slave, c. 1906.

<sup>6</sup> Does he want to keep all the pie for himself?

T. N. PAGE, Red Rock, p. 229. (1898)

PIETY

<sup>7</sup> Piety is the foundation of all virtues. (Pietas fundamentum est omnium virtutum.)

CICERO, Pro Plancio. Ch. 12, sec. 29. (54 B. C.)

In its original meaning piety meant the affection between parents and children, so "filial piety" was a much-used phrase.

True piety is this: to be able to survey all things with a mind at peace. (Pacata posse omnia mente tueri.)

LUCRETII, De Rerum Natura. Bk. v, l. 1203. (c. 45 B. C.)

Piety is the most sumptuous of all garments.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, vii, 26. (c. 622)

Is virtue, then, and piety the same?

No, piety is more; 'tis virtue's source.

EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. viii, l. 691. (1742)

True piety is cheerful as the day.

WILLIAM COWPER, Truth, l. 176. (1781)

"Piety," says Cicero, "is justice towards the gods."

EUSTACE R. CONDER, The Basis of Faith, i, 19. (1877)

<sup>8</sup> Young Obadiah, David, Josias, All were pious.
BENJAMIN HARRIS (?), The New England Primer. (c. 1687)

<sup>9</sup> No solemn, sanctimonious face I pull,
Nor think I'm pious when I'm only bilious.

THOMAS HOOD, Ode to Rae Wilson, l. 43. (a. 1845)

<sup>10</sup> It's not possible for piety to resist profit. (Non potest pietati opsisti huic.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 268. (c. 195 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> That's why you're poor, you're too blessed pious. (Isto tu pauper es, quom nimis sancte pius.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1234. (c. 200 B. C.)

There is no piety but amongst the poor.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, On the Content He Enjoys in the Muses. (c. 1635)

<sup>12</sup> Let them learn first to show piety at home. (μαθητέωσαν πρώτον τὸν ἰδίον οἶκον εὐσεβεῖν.)

New Testament: I Timothy, v, 4. (c. A. D. 62)

The Vulgate is, "Discat primum domum suam regere."

<sup>13</sup> A man full of piety. (Vir pietate gravis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 151. (19 B. C.)

PIG

See also Hog, Sow, Swine

<sup>14</sup> A pig in the parlor is still a pig.

A. L. B., Whiskey in Cap and Gown. See Good Health, April, 1940. The Japanese say, "A pig used to dirt turns up its nose at rice boiled in milk."

<sup>15</sup> I'll have one of the wigs to carry into the country with me an't please the pigs.

THOMAS BROWNE, Letters from the Dead to the Living. (1702) Works (1760), ii, 198.

An't please the pigs, in which . . . pigs is most assuredly a corruption of Pyx.

Gentleman's Magazine. Vol. xxv, p. 115. (1755)

An ingenious guess, but without authority.

I know what I'll do, and that is, please the Pix, I'll marry Louisa to her cousin George.

THEODORE HOOK, Sayings and Doings. Ser. ii, i, 183. (1825)

"But please the pigs,"—for that's her way of swearing in a passion.

THOMAS HOOD, Report from Below. (c. 1840)

You'll have no end of money, please the pigs.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, iv, 33. (1849)

Pigs. Contraction of pixies, in the common saying, "Plaze God and the pigs."

F. T. ELWORTHY, West Somerset Word-Book, p. 569. (1886) Another guess.

<sup>16</sup> Theer's more ways o' killin' pigs than chokin' 'em with butter.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 590. (1883)

<sup>17</sup> Had lights where better eyes were blind,
As pigs are said to see the wind.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, iii, ii, 1107. (1678)

'Tis as natural . . . as 'tis for a hog to see the wind.

EDWARD WARD, Writings, ii, 271. (1703)

Ask the pig who sees the wind!

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vii, st. 84. (1823)

Pigs can see the wind.

WILLIAM HONE, Year-Book, 29 Feb., 1831.

Quoted as a common saying.

That pigs can see the wind—in particular the east wind—is a notion pretty general in the Midlands.

Notes and Queries. Ser. vii, vol. ix, p. 14. (1890)
Pigs see the wind, i. e. the coming tempest, which makes them the most restless of animals.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, i, 437. (1902)

1 Make a pipe of a pig's tail.

CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 328. (1605)

Of a pig's tail you can never make a good shaft.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum, 2nd ed. (1651)

You can't make a horn of a pig's tail.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 104. (1670)

You cannot make a Hunting-Horn of a Fox's-Tail.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5877. (1732)
Tom, vain's your Pains; They all will fail:

Ne'er was good Arrow made of a Sow's Tail.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

There's sense in choosing your tools, for a pig's tail will never make a good arrow.

C. H. SPURGEON, Jahn Ploughman's Pictures, p. 31. (1880)

2 A pig plays on the organs.

JOHN CLARKE, Paraemiologia, p. 7. (1639)

To drive pigs, to snore.

WILLIAM CARR, The Dialect of Craven. (1818)

See under SNORING.

3 Pigs fly in the air with their tails forward.

JOHN CLARKE, Paraemiologia. p. 147. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 189. (1670)

They say that if pigs fly they always go with their tails forward.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 32. (1880)

4 A pretty Pig makes an ugly old Sow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 363. (1732)

Feed a Pig, and you'll have a Hog.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1517.

5 That is as likely as to see an Hog fly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4350. (1732)

It may be that swine may flee, but it's no an ilka day's bird. An emphatic expression of incredulity.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 179. (1862)

There is a proverb which says, A pig may fly, but it isn't a likely bird.

AUGUSTUS DE MORGAN, A Budget of Paradoxes, p. 275. (1872)

6 Every Pigge doth know his owne Pappe.

BARNABE GOOGE, tr., Foure Bookes of Husbandry. Pt. iiii. (1577)

Pigs dunno w'at a pen's fer.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

7 Pigs may whistle, but they hae an ill mouth for it.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 135. (1832)

A soo may whussle, but its mouth is no made for 't.

JAMES GRANT, Romance of War. Ch. 12. (1846)

8 And, peradventure, there, he and she

Will make me cuckold, even to anger me;

And then had I a pig in the worse panyer.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Iohan the Husbande, Tyb His

Wyf, and Ihan the Preest, xx, p. 89. (1533)

Who that hath either of these pygs in vre,

He hathe a pyg of the woorse panier sure.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11. (1546)

9 What, bid me welcome pyg.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Knew him well, the selfish old pig.

GRANT ALLEN, Babylon. Ch. 15. (1885)

He is usually called a sulky pig.

H. S. CONSTABLE, Horses, Sport and War, p. 46. (1891)

10 Though ye loue not to bye the pyg in the poke,
Snatch ye at the poke, that the pyg is in,
Not for the poke, but the pyg good chepe to wyn.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Provide against Mihelmas, bargain to make,
for ferme to give over, to keepe or to take:

In dooing of either, let wit beare a stroke, for bueing or selling of a pig in a poke.

THOMAS TUSSEY, Fiue Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: September's Husbandrie. (1573)

You do not buy a cat in a poke. (Vous n'achetez pas un chat en poche.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 42. (1580) Montaigne is quoting the French proverb equivalent to the English "pig in a poke," which is the way Florio renders it. In bk. iii, ch. 5, Montaigne says that women, when they marry, "achetent chat en sac." All European languages use "cat" instead of "pig" in this proverb. The Germans say, "Man kauft die Kätze nicht in Sack"; the Italians, "Comprare gatta in sacco."

He is a foole, they say, that will buy ye pig in the poke.

ROBERT GREENE, Works, ii, 121. (1583)

To buy a Pig in a poake (say we); to bargain vnaduisedly or hand ouer head.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Sac. (1611)

You may perhaps buy a pigge in a poke.

FRANCIS LENTON, Characterismi. sig. B11. (1631)

I thought it would be proper to see how I liked you, as not caring to buy a pig in a poke.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tender Husband. Act iii, sc. 2. (1705)

It is folly to accept a cat in a sack. (Folie est d'accepter chat en sac.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français. Vol. i, p. 157. (1859) Or, "C'est mal achat de chat en sac." The French also say, "Acheter le chat pour le lièvre" (To buy a cat for a hare).

The Italians say, "Vender gatta in sacco" (To sell a cat in a sack).

To buy a cat in a bag. (Ko k'ou tai mai mao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 650. (1875)

I can't buy a pig in a poke. . . . Let me know what you've got to sell, and then maybe I'll make a bid for it.

MURRAY, John Vale's Guardian. Ch. 25. (1890) Athelwold . . . with a friend's privilege told him not to be so simple as to buy a pig in a poke.

W. H. HUDSON, Dead Man's Plack. Ch.2.(1920) Catch you buying a pig in a poke!

A. FIELDING, The Case of the Missing Diary, p. 163. (1936)

I like to see the pig I'm buying.

R. A. J. WALLING, The Spider and the Fly, p. 18. (1940)

You don't expect me to buy a pig in a poke, do you?

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, Pursuit of a Parcel, p. 267. (1942)

I don't see why you should buy a pig in a poke. PETER CHENEY, Dark Duet, p. 170. (1943)

To buy a pig in a poke. To buy without seeing what one is buying: semi-proverbial.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Buy. (1941) The proverb is said to have originated from the practice in Greece, during Mohammedan dominion, of selling pork in the night-time with the greatest secrecy, in order to avoid giving offence to the authorities. Its antiquity is shown by the use of the Middle English "poke," meaning a sack or bag—the word from which "pocket" was formed as a diminutive—a little poke.

It is interesting to note the variations in "To buy a pig in a poke." The earliest forms, which were already current in the Middle Ages, speak merely of "buying in a sack," i. e. "buying sight unseen," as in, "Swær inme sack koufet, . . . der singet dicke klageliet" (Whoever buys in a sack, often sings a song of sorrow). Freidank, lxxxv, 5. Luther still used the medieval form. The cat, which is of course a dishonest substitute for the hare, early enters the phrase. The pig, which is evidently a sucking pig, appears in both English and German forms from the seventeenth century on and is apparently the latest development.

ARCHER TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 187. (1931)

<sup>1</sup> Pigs are a race unjustly calumniated. Pig has, it seems, not been wanting to man, but man to pig. We do not allow time for his education; we kill him at a year old.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, Sept., 1784.

<sup>2</sup> Pigs are pigs.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to S. T. Coleridge, 9 March, 1822.

Pigs is Pigs.

ELLIS PARKER BUTLER. Title of a story dealing with the fecundity of guinea pigs. (1906)

<sup>3</sup> The gentleman that pays the rent.

SAMUEL LOVER, Rory O'More. Ch. 23. (1837)

<sup>4</sup> The pig can hardly be regarded as a classic animal.

DONALD G. MITCHELL, Rural Studies, p. 65. (1867)

<sup>5</sup> Pyrrho's pig. (Le pourceau de Pyrrho.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 40. (1580) Montaigne is telling the story of Pyrrho who, during a storm, reproached the other voyagers with being frightened, when a pig on board showed no alarm at all. (c. B.C. 260) The story of Phyrro's pig is also told by PLUTARCH, Moralia, sec. 82F.

<sup>6</sup> I was brought up at Hoggorton, where pigges play on the organs.

THOMAS NASHE, Works (Grosart), ii, 273. (1593) A reference to the fact that the organist of the village church at Hock-Norton was named Piggs.

This fellow was borne at hogs Norton, where pigges play on the organ.

ROBERT ARMIN, The Valiant Welshman. Act ii, sc. 3. (1615) HOWELL, Proverbs, p.16.(1659)

Why should not other pigs on organs play, As well as they?

SAMUEL WESLEY, Maggots, p. 22. (1685)

<sup>7</sup> "We don't kill a pig every day," that is, we have not every day a merry-making.

PEACOCK, Lincs. Glossary, p. 403. (1877)

<sup>8</sup> This is not a thing which, as the proverb says, "any pig would know." (οὐκ ἄν πᾶσα ὕς γινώσκῃ.)

PLATO, Laches. Sec. 196D. (c. 375 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> He turned the pigs into the grass. (Tournoit les truies au foin.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i. (1534) A proverbial expression, meaning to create a diversion, to change the subject.

<sup>10</sup> The pigs would grunt now, if they knew what the old one suffers. (Gy ia mundu nu grisir, ef eir visse, hvat enn gamle yldi.)

RAGNAR LODBRÖK, Saga. (c. A. D. 800) When he was in the snake-pit. A saying which became proverbial in the Scandinavian languages. The Swedish form is: "The little pigs would grunt if they knew what the boar is suffering" (Grisarna skulle grymta om de visste vad galten lider).

The young pig grunts like the old sow.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 184. (1678)

What can you expect from a pig but a grunt?

P. W. JOYCE, English as We Speak It, p. 137 (1910) See under Hog.

<sup>11</sup> The first pig, but the last whelp of the litter, is the best.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 39. (1678)

A brindled pig will make a good brawn to breed on.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 67. (1678) "A red-headed man will make a good stallion."

<sup>12</sup> He is teaching a pig to play on the flute.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1678)

Pigs will never play well on the flute, teach them as long as you like.

SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 11. (1869)

- 1 Pigs love that lie together.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 124. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3875. (1732) Two others are, "Pigs grunt about everything and nothing," and "Pigs grow fat where lambs would starve."
You know the old saying, Sir Solomon, Lying together makes pigs love.
COLLEY CIBBER, The Double Gallant. Act v, sc. 2. (1707)
- 2 Have you pigs in your belly?
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
- 3 He's like the Irishman's pig—he'll neither lead nor drive.
F. E. TAYLOR, Lancs Sayings, p. 5. (1901)
I couldn't convince him. He's that pigheaded.
LAWRENCE TREAT, O as in Omen, p. 168. (1943)
- 4 Never ring a pig that has to root for a living.
H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 488. (1940)
- 5 The worst hog lights on the best pear.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 212. (1666)
The worst pig often gets the best pear.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 519. (1855)
- 6 I have brought my pigs to a fine market.
SIR THOMAS URQUHART, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iii, ch. 45. (1693)
Strap . . . observed that we had brought our pigs to a fine market.
SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 15. (1748)
You've carried your pigs to a fine market.
ARTHUR MURPHY, The Upholsterer. Act i, sc. 3. (1757)
Roger may carry his pigs to another market.
SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, 10 May, 1771.
Let. ii. See also under HOG.
- 7 You'd have sworn he had got the wrong pig by the ear.
UNKNOWN, The British Apollo, ii, 440. (1709)
See under Sow.
- 8 When me profereth the pigge, open the poghe.
UNKNOWN, Douce MSS., 52. (c. 1400) Cited in FARMER, Heywood's Proverbs, p. 422. Instances of the use of this saying, which means to seize one's opportunities, are very common, and only a few will be noted.
It is said comenly whan the pygge is profered: open the poughen.
WHITINTON, Vulgaria [E.E.T.S.], p. 107. (1520)
When ye proffer the pigge open the poke.
HILLS, Common-Place Book, p. 140. (c. 1530)
Whan the pygge is proferd it is good to apen the poke.
PALSGRAVE, La Langue Françoise, 594. (1530)
When pig is proferd, ope the poke.
FULWELL, Ars Adulandi, sig. G1. (c. 1580)
Quod datur accipe [what is given accept], when the pig is offered, hold ope the poke.
JOHN WITHEALS, Dictionary, p. 579. (1616)

- To profferd Pig each man doth hold ope his Poke.
SIR T. THROCKMORTON, Life of Sir N. Throckmorton. Ch. 91. (a. 1620)
When the pig is proffered, hold ope the poke.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 131. (1670)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5601. (1732) HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 462. (1869) etc., etc. The Spanish form is, "Quando te dieren la vaquilla, Acude con la soquilla" (When they give you a heifer, make haste with the halter). Never refuse a good offer.
- 9 Childe is pigge, and fader is the flicche. Porcellus nati fit perna patris veterati.
UNKNOWN, Douce MS., 52. (c. 1350) Förster, ed.
Child's pig, but father's bacon. Parents usually tell their children, This pig or this lamb is thine, but when they come to be grown up and sold, parents themselves take the money for them.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 111. (1678)
Child's Pig, but Father's Hog.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1101. (1732)
  - 10 That is euy a pyg of our own sow.
UNKNOWN, Gentleness and Nobility, sig. A1. (c. 1535)
God haue mercy, horse, a pyg of mine owne sow
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pl. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
I thought it not mete . . . to make men thinke I had geuen them a pigge of another mannes sowe.
JOHN BALE, tr., De Vera Obedientia, sig. G1. (c. 1553)
Syr ye gyue me a pyg of myne owne sowe.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs, p. 155. (1562)
The last, because it is known to be a Pig of myne owne Sowe, I will speake the lesse of it.
GOSSON, The Schoole of Abuse, p. 40. (1579)
To giue one a pig of his owne sow; to afford him help out of his owne meanes.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Chemise. (1611)
'Tis a pig of your own sow, your own self sold it
ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 1110. (1681)
If you come to my house I will treat you
With a pig of your own sow.
HENRY FIELDING, The Grub-Street Opera. Act iii, sc. 1. (1731)
"Who more charitable than the Monks?" "Go to! They do but give the laity back a pig of their own sow."
CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth Ch. 98. (1860)
  - 11 She followed him a heeles like a tantine pigge
UNKNOWN, The Passionate Morrice, p. 75. (1593)
Whereupon was raised a prouerbe, such a one will follow such a one, and whine as it were an Anthonie pig.
JOHN STOW, A Survey of London, p. 185. (1598)
Pigs were under the protection of St. Anthony, the patron of swineherds, and were allowed to roam the streets, following any one who fed them.
I have followed you up and down like a Tantalus pig.
CHAPMAN, Gentleman Usher. Act iv, sc. 1. (1606)

Lead on, little Tony—I'll follow thee, my Anthony, my Tantony, sirrah, thou shalt be my Tantony, and I'll be thy pig.

CONGREVE, Way of the World. Act iv, sc. 9. (1700)
She made me follow her last week through all the shops like a Tantiny pig.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Dangling after me everywhere, like a tantony pig.

ISAAC BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village. Act i, sc. 5. (1763)

PIGEON

<sup>1</sup> Sure hee's a pigeon, for he has no gall.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Act i, sc. 1. (1604) See also under GALL.

<sup>2</sup> Pigeons are taken, when Crows fly at pleasure.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3873. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> As wily a pigeon as the cunning Goldsmith, that accused his neighbour, and condemned himself.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Pierces Supererogation. (1593) Works (Grosart), ii, 245.

Nor is Sancho behind him for a Pigeon; both deluded commit equal errors.

EDMUND GAYTON, Don Quixot, p. 187. (1654)
He was a famous pigeon for the play-men; they lived upon him.

THACKERAY, The Four Georges: George IV. (1862) A simpleton, a dupe, any one that lets himself be plucked like a pigeon.

<sup>4</sup> The pigeon is neuer woe, till abenting she goe.
THOMAS RAVENSCROFT, Deuteromelia. sig. F3. (1609) Melismata in LEAN, Collectanea, i, 432. (1611)

The pigeon never knoweth wo
But when she doth a benting go.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 44. (1670)
At this time of year . . . the pigeons have had hardly any other field-meat besides, except the seed of bent-grass; which occasioned the old verse, The pigeon never knows more woe, Than when he does a-benting go.

ELLIS, Modern Husbandman, iii, 134. (1750)
When the pigeons go a benting, then the farmers lie lamenting.

FORBY, Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 417. (1830)

<sup>5</sup> Here's a pigeon so finely roasted, it cries,
Come eat me.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Pigeons in the grass alas.

GERTRUDE STEIN, Four Saints in Three Acts. (1934)

PIKE

<sup>6</sup> At the least, hee wolde graunte him dispencc and saffe conduit to passe thorow the pikes of his infortunat dangers.

SIR GEOFFREY FENTON, tr., Bandello, i, 239. (1567) To pass the pikes: to get out of danger. From the French, Passer par les piques.

Hauing already past the pikes in a dangerous conflict, without wound of honour.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation: Preface. (1581) Pettie, tr.

Y'ave past the pikes, i faith.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, May-Day. Act iii, sc. 2. (1611)

I bring you a masque . . . Which say the King likes, I ha passed the pikes.

BEN JONSON, Masque of Christmas. (1616)

To passe the pikes of Danger's deadly smart.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, i, e 6. (1626)

<sup>7</sup> I must run upon the pikes, in danger of my life.

JOHN PHILPOT, Examinations and Writings, p.

16. (a. 1555) To run upon the pikes: to expose oneself to danger, to rush to destruction.

A courageous harted man, of his own accorde, to pushe vpon the pykes of death.

ABRAHAM FLEMING, A Panoplie of Epistles, p. 390. (1576)

PIKER

<sup>8</sup> A Piker is one who gets into the Game on Small Capital and Lets On to be holding back a huge Reserve.

GEORGE ADE, Forty Modern Fables, p. 81. (1901)
I'm not a piker, you know. . . . I don't play for pennies.

G. B. MCCUTCHEON, Green Fancy, p. 304. (1917)

The thing that distinguishes our American commonwealth from the pikers and tin-horns . . . is our Punch.

SINCLAIR LEWIS, Main Street, p. 414. (1920)

PILGRIM

<sup>9</sup> As far goeth the pilgrim as the post.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 508. (c. 1594)

<sup>10</sup> Pilgrim. A traveler that is taken seriously.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1911)

<sup>11</sup> Pilgrimes are we alle.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Passus xiii, l. 139. (1362)

Pilgrimes were they alle.

CHAUCEER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 26. (c. 1386)

<sup>12</sup> God knows who is a good pilgrim. (Dieu scait qui est bon pelerin.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i, 17

Quoting a proverb of c. 1475.

God knows who are the best pilgrims.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 98. (1678)

PILL

<sup>13</sup> If the apothecaries pilles had a good taste. they would neuer gilde them ouer.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 57. (1633)

Apothecaries would not give pills in sugar unless they were bitter.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 108. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 2. (1670)

My lord Jupiter knows how to gild the pill. (Le seigneur Jupiter sait dorer la pilule.)

MOLIÈRE, Amphitryon. Act iii, sc. 10. (1668)
If the Pills were pleasant, they would not want gilding.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2711. (1732)

1
Some fell by laudanum, and some by steel,
And death in ambush lay in every pill.

GARTH, The Dispensary. Canto iv, l. 62. (1699)

The cannon-shot and doctor's pill

With equal aim are sure to kill.

UNKNOWN, British Magazine, iv, 436. (1763)

2
In steede of a pyll to purge his hotte blood, he gaue him a choake-peare to stoppe his breath.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber),
p. 321. (1580)

3
The good lady . . . swallowed down that pille without chewing.

WILLIAM PAINTER, The Palace of Pleasure, iii,
52. (1567) To give one a pill to swallow: to tell one something unpleasant. The Germans say, "Pillen muss man schlingen, nicht kauen" (Pills are to be swallowed, not chewed); the French, "Il faut avaler les pilules, sans les mâcher" (One must swallow the pills, without chewing).

4
This is a pill of harde digestion, this is a pill which if it bee a little chewed, it will be so bitter that you will never bee able to abide it.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 125. (1576)

When I was sick, you gave me bitter pills.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona,
ii, 4, 149. (1594)

Bitter pills may have blessed effects.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 69. (1721)

Present afflictions may tend to future good.

Bitter Pills may have wholesome Effects.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 985. (1732)

It was a bitter pill for the King to swallow.

WALPOLE, Last Journals, ii, 338. (1779)

It was a sore pill for him at his time of life.

PEACOCK, Manley Glossary, p. 405. (1889)

5
Yet cannot they abide to swallowe downe the holsome pille of the veritie beeyng bittur in their mouthes.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Paraphase of Luke, iv, 37. (1548)

6
With a Grecian bend and a heavy frill—
I tell you I'm a sweet little pill.

UNKNOWN, Girl of the Period. (c. 1867)

He was the worst-looking pill you ever saw.

A. A. HAYES, New Colorado, p. 64. (1881)

In the patois of her locality, she was called a
'pill.'

C. M. FLANDRAU, Harvard Episodes, p. 98. (1897)
He's a pill.

HARRY L. WILSON, Spenders, p. 341. (1902)

Mark was a Pill. His little Dame had Class.

DON MARQUIS, Tristram and Isolt. (1921)

PILLAR TO POST, see under POST.

PILLOW

7
Woe to the women that sew pillows to all armholes. (Vae quae consuunt pulvillos sub omni subito manus.)

Old Testament: Ezekiel, xiii, 18. (c. 600 B.C.)

To give a sense of false security.

'Tis no time to sew pillars under mens elbows.

THOMAS NEAL, in History of the Puritans, i,
258. (1572)

When I come to reprove sinne, I shall sowe no pillowes.

JOHN KING, Sermons: Mark, xxiv, 45. (1620)

You cannot sew pillows under folks' elbows; . . .
you cannot tickle a trout to take him.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, Love in a Wood. Act i, sc. 1. (1672)

8
You counsel me to take counsel of mi pillow.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 21. (1573)

Take a little more counsell of their pillowe.

STEPHEN GOSSON, Schoole of Abuse, p. 40. (1579)

Ask counsel of your pillow.

ROBERT GREENE, Vision. (1592)

Night gives advice; we say, take counsell of your pillow.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Conseil. (1611)
A mans pillow is his best counsellor.

OVERBURY, Newses from the Bed. (1613)

Others feared . . . that, if they suffered them to consult with their pillows, their pillows would advise them to make much of their heads.

THOMAS FULLER, The Profane State. Bk. v, ch.
16. (1642)

Take counsel of your pillow, and to-morrow resolve me.

COTTON, Walton's Angler. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1676)

"I will consult my pillow upon it," he said.

HENRY FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. ix, ch. 5. (1751)

PILOT

9
I was like a ship without a pilot, that could only run before the wind.

DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1719)

10
The Pilote feareth more the low water, then the high. (Il Piloto teme piu l'aqua bassa, che l'alta.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 96. (1578)

11
Drop the pilot. To dismiss, get rid of, the statesman that has piloted the ship of state.
From a famous cartoon by J. Tenniel in Punch, March 20, 1890; Kaiser Wilhelm's dismissal of Bismarck (in pilot's uniform).

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichéés: Drop. (1941)

12
You learn to know a pilot in a storm. (Gubernatorem in tempestate intellegas.)

SENECA, De Providentia. Ch. 4, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 45)

13
In a calm sea, as the saying goes, anyone is a pilot. (Tranquillo, ut aiunt, quilibet gubernator est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxv, sec. 34. (c.
A. D. 64)

A pilot's part in calms cannot be spy'd,
In dangerous times true worth is only try'd.

SIR WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomesday: Fifth Hour. (1614)

In a calm sea every passenger is a pilot.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 313. (1639)

In a calm sea every man is a pilot.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1670)

In a calm Sea every one can steer.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2808. (1732)

Anyone can be a pilot when the wind is fair.
(Ognun sa navigar quando è buon vento.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 199. (1856) Italian proverb. The Germans say, "Wenn das Schiff gut geht, will Jeder Schiffherr sein"; the Dutch, "The best pilots are ashore."

<sup>1</sup> What Ship can bee longe safe from wracke, where euery man will take vpon him to bee a Pylate?

WILLIAM STAFFORD, Examination of Complaints, i, 26. (1581)

<sup>2</sup> The paleness of the Pilot, is the true sign of a storm.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 169. (1666)

PIN

<sup>3</sup> A pin a Day, says our frugal proverb, is a
Groat a Year.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 295. (1712) SWIFT,
Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) HARE,
Guesses at Truth, i, 238. (1827) See also under THRIFF.

<sup>4</sup> "Twill employ

Seven men, they say, to make a perfect
pin: . . .

Seven men to a pin,—and not a man too much!

ELIZABETH BARRETT BROWNING, Aurora Leigh.
Bk. viii, l. 734. (1856)

<sup>5</sup> Your herte hangeth on a joly pin.

CHAUCER, Marchantes Tale, l. 272. (c. 1388)

I wyll mo more row a-geyn the flode,

I wyll sett my soule on a mery pynne.

UNKNOWN, Digby Mysteries, v, 492. (c. 1485)

Canne Avarice harte bee sett on a merie pynne?

UNKNOWN, Respublica. Act ii, sc. 3. (1553)

Faith I was never on a merrier pinn.

ROBERT DAVENPORT, *A New Tricke to Cheat
the Divell*. Act i, sc. 2. (1639)

To be in a merry pin. Probably this might come from drinking at pins. The Dutch and English were wont to drink out of a cup marked with certain pins.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 189. (1670)

The drinking vessels were marked with pegs, and each member of the company was supposed to drink from the level of one peg down to that of the next. Hence, a peg of liquor.

The cups going round apace, and all upon the merry pin.

MATTHEW HENRY, Commentary: Daniel, v, 4.
(1710)

Right glad to find his friend in merry pin.

COWPER, John Gilpin's Ride, l. 178. (1782)

When a person is much elated, we say he is in a merry pin, which no doubt originally meant he had reached that mark [in a pegged tankard] which had deprived him of his usual sedateness.

Gentleman's Magazine, ii, 13-17. (1818)

<sup>6</sup> You might have heard a pin drop in the house while that was going on.

SUSAN FERRIER, The Inheritance. Bk. ii, ch. 14.
(1824)

You might have heard a pin fall.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws.
Ch. 1. (1843)

You could 'a' heard a pin fall.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 25.

(1884) The French say, "On aurait entendu voler une mouche" (One could have heard a fly take wing), or "On entendrait une souris trotter" (a mouse run).

A silence that a dropped pin would have splintered like glass.

McKNIGHT MALMER, Never Say Die, p. 9. (1943)

<sup>7</sup> He that takes not up a pin, slights his wife.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 363
(1640) Cited by Ray and Fuller.

He that will not stoop for a pin will never be worth a pound.

SAMUEL PEPPYS, Diary, 2 Jan., 1668. Quoted as having been said to Charles II by Sir William Coventry, as "an old English proverb."

He that will not stoop for a pin shall never be worth a point.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 124. (1678)

See a pin and pick it up,

All the day you'll have good luck;

See a pin and let it lay,

Bad luck you'll have all the day.

H. O. HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes. Ch. 4, No.
85. (1843) The bad grammar of the third line led to various revisions, of which the best is

See a pin and let it lie,

You'll want a pin before you die.

The French say,

Qui voit une épingle et ne le prend,

Vient un temps qu'il s'en repent.

(He who sees a pin and doesn't pick it up

Will come to a time when he'll repent of it.)

Pick up pins, pick up sorrow.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 279. (1883)

<sup>8</sup> I left him upon the tenter-hooks of impatient uncertainty.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 45. (1748)

The heart . . . flutters upon the tenter-hooks of expectation.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Old Maid. (1761)

I . . . fidgeted on the board like a hen on a hot griddle.

D. M. MOIR, Mansie Wauch. Ch. 8. (1824)

[He] was hepping about the room "like a parched pea on a griddle."

J. C. HUTCHESON, Crown and Anchor. Ch. 4.
(1896)

He was plainly on pins and needles.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ac. 29. (1897)

I was on pins and needles till you came home.

P. W. JOYCE, English as We Speak It, p. 141. (1910)

I don't want to be kept on pins and needles longer than I can help.

CONNINGTON, No Past Is Dead, p. 150. (1942)

Here's a pin for that lie.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

The chylde yt begineth to pike at a pynne or a poynte wyl after pyke a penny or a pounce.

RICHARD WHITFORD, Werke for Householdiers, sig. D7. (1537)

He that begins to steal a pin will be hanged for a pound one day.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 84. (1639)

He that will steal a pin will steal a better thing.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 145. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6087. (1732)

PIN-PRICK

It is never the pin pricks which decide the fortune of states. (Ce ne sont jamais les coups d'épingle qui décident de la fortune des États.)

CHARLES GRAVIER DE VERGENNES, Letter to D'Angiviller, 11 Aug., 1777.

For the maintenance of peace, nations should avoid the pin-pricks which forerun cannon-shots. (Coups d'épingle que precedent des coups de canon.)

NAPOLEON, to Czar Alexander, Interview, Tilsit, 22 June, 1807. "A policy of pin-pricks" seems to have been in fairly common use as early as the middle of the 18th century, but nobody knows who originated it. It has sometimes been ascribed to Louis Marie Delahaye, but it was current long before his day. Its best known use was in 1898, when the conflicting colonial interests of France and England were causing a great deal of friction between the two countries. On 8 Nov., 1898, Le Matin deprecated a "politique des niches [tricks] à l'Angleterre," and "de continuelles piqures d'épingle," and 16 Nov., the London Times, referring to this article, used the words "a policy of pin-pricks." Le Temps of 19 Nov. had an article denying that France was pursuing a "politique de coups d'épingle," and The Times quoted this the same day as a "policy of pin-pricks," which at once became a political phrase. See O.E.D.: Pinprick.

PINCH

Corageously at a pynche [he] shal renne vpon hem.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Book of Faytes of Armes and of Chyualrye, i, xviii, 53. (1489)

Do nowe helpe me at a pynche.

JEHAN PALSgrave, Acolastus, sig. Aa3. (1540)

Helpe at a pinche, or els neuer.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Dialogue, p. 10. (1564)

Helpe, Frier, at a pinch.

ROBERT GREEN, Frier Bacon. Sc. 5. (1594)

It yet might serve him, in a pinch.

STEVENSON, Black Arrow. Bk. iv, ch. 1. (1888)

The pinch of death.

RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pithias. (1567)

Necessity's sharp pinch.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 4, 214. (1605)

The pinch of hunger.

BOSWORTH SMITH, Carthage and the Carthaginians, p. 279. (1878)

The pinch of poverty.

AUGUSTUS JESSOPP, Studies by a Recluse: Preface. (1892)

That Apprehension appeared Groundless when it came to the pinch.

HENRY NEVILLE, Plato Redivivus, 264. (1681)

Each of them could at a pinch stand in the shoes of the other.

EMERSON, English Traits: Ability, p. 56. (1856)

He will never flinch

To giue a full quart pot the empty pinch.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, The Letting of Humours Blood in the Head-vaine, vi, 75. (1600)

Thou art pinch'd for't now.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, v, 1, 74. (1611)

Hang Pinching.

UNKNOWN. Title of ballad. (c. 1630)

Hang pinching, let's be merry.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 276. (1666)

I'm forced to pinch, for the times are hard.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

PINE

Who leaves the pine-tree, leaves his friend. Unnerves his strength, invites his end.

R. W. EMERSON, Wood-Notes. Sec. 2. (1841)

Tell me, however, when the carpenter comes next with the axe into the wood, to fell timber, whether you had not rather be a bramble than a fir tree.

ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables, ccxxxvii.253. (1692)

The Pine wishes her self a Shrub, when the Ave is at her Root.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4705. (1732)

Be the wind never so high, the pine-tree sings her song. (ἔρθα καὶ ἦν πρὸς πολλὸν ὤρεμος, ἀ πύτυς ᾄδει.)

MOSCHUS, A Comparison, l. 8. (c. 150 B. C.)

Let the pine find only a ledge of vertical precipice to cling to, it will nevertheless grow straight.

JOHN RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Vol. v, pt. vi, ch. 9. (1860)

Something sweet is the whisper of the pine. (ἀδύ τι τὸ ψιθύρισμα καὶ ἀ τίτυς αἰπώλε.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl i, l. 1. (c. 270 B. C.)

Elijah Kellogg wrote a series of boys' books (1871) called The Whispering Pine Series.

1 A pine cut down, a dead pine, is no more a pine than a dead human carcass is a man.

H. D. THOREAU, Maine Woods. Ch. 2. (1864)

PIPE

2 The next time you go out to a smoking party, young feller, fill your pipe with that 'ere reflection.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 16. (1836)
For this you've my word, and I never yet broke it. So put that in your pipe, my Lord Otto, and smoke it.

R. H. BARRHAM, Lay of St. Odille. St. 14. (1840)
Put that in your pipe and smoke it.

W. R. NORRIS, Thirlby Hall. Ch. 25. (1884)
SHAW, Misalliance, p. 87. (1910) GEORGETTE HEYER, Envious Casca, p. 57. (1941) J. H. PENNELL, Rome Hanks, p. 213. (1944)

I can push that into my pipe and puff it.
A. E. W. MASON, The House of the Arrow. Ch. 16. (1924)

Put that on your needles and knit it.
NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 222. (1941)
Repeated in Colour Scheme, p. 267. (1943)
The French say, "Mettez cela dans votre sac."

3 I had the first honour of smoaking the pipe of peace with the little Carpenter.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Liar. Act i. (1762)
I would defer smokeing the Peace Pipe until I heard that they had called in all their warriors.

GEORGE ROGERS CLARK, Campaign in Illinois, p. 45. (1779)

I came to bid the hatchet's labour cease,
And smoke with friends the calumet of peace.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Subjects for Painters. (1789)

They had better smoke the pipe of peace.
MARY BRIDGMAN, Robert Lynne. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1870)

The little renegade had already smoked the pipe of peace with the savage.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Atavism of John Tom Little Bear. (1903)

4 [I] comes upon him in a joint where he's hitting the pipe.

A. H. LEWIS, The Boss, p. 373. (1903) Smoking opium.

5 He also strayedn his olde pype.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 278. (1580)
A strange orator, straining his pipes.

MULCASTER, Positions, xxxix, 188. (1581)
Thy small pipe

Is as the maiden's organ, shrill, and sound.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 4, 32. (1599)

She had a very sweet pipe.
JOHN TRUBLER, Modern Times, ii, 185. (1785)

6 Than maye the B[ishop] of Rome put up his pypes.

JOHN OLDZ, tr. Antichrist, p. 148. (1556) Put up one's pipes: cease from speaking, shut up.

He could haue found in his hart to haue packt vp hys pipes.

NASHE, Unfortunate Traveller, p. 12. (1594)
Faith, we may put up our pipes and be gone.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iv, 5, 96. (1595)
Put up your pipes in your bag, for I'll away.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 1, 20. (1605)
Poke [pocket] up your pypes.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Eagle and Robin. (a. 1758)

PIPER

7 The piper wants meikle what wants the nether chaff [lower jaw].

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 94. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 310, with the comment, "Spoken when a thing is wanting that is absolutely necessary." A similar proverb is, "He can ill pipe that has lost his upper lip."

8 Give the Piper a Penny to play. and Two-pence to leave off.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No 1660. (1732)

9 Alwayes those that dance must pay the musicke.

JOHN TAYLOR, Taylor's Feast, p. 98. (1638)
I am not at all in the humor to pay the fiddlers for others to dance. (Je ne suis point d'humeur à payer les violons pour faire danser les autres.)

MOLIÈRE, La Comtesse d'Escarbagnas. Sc. 8, l. 63. (1671)

After all this dance he has led the Nation, he must at last come to pay the piper himself.

THOMAS FLATMAN, Heracitus Ridens. No. 29. (1681) To pay the piper: to bear the cost.

If you dance you must pay the fiddler.

UNKNOWN, in Roxburghe Ballads, v, 67. (1681)
I warrant you, if he danc'd till Doomsday, he thought I was to pay the piper.

CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act ii, sc. 5. (1695)

10 Londoners had paid the piper, and should choose the tune.

UNKNOWN, Daily News (London), 18 Dec., 1895, p. 9/1.

I am going to pay the piper and call the tune.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act iii. (1905)
He who pays the piper calls the tune.

UNKNOWN, Spectator, 22 Oct., 1910, p. 643.

The old adage of "He who pays the piper can call the tune" has held good.

UNKNOWN, The Evening Standard (London), 14 Feb., 1923, p. 5/1.

PIPING

11 What argufies sniv'ling and piping your eye?

CHARLES DIBDIN, Poor Jack. (1789) To shed tears.

He was very frail and tearful, . . . his own peculiar mission was to pipe his eye.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 32. (1844)
One don't pipe one's eye when one comes into a fortune.

QUIDA (LOUISE DE LA RAMÉE), The Massarenex. Ch. 32. (1897)

<sup>1</sup> We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced. (ἡλλήσαμεν ὑμῖν καὶ οὐκ ὤρχησασθε.)

New Testament: Luke, vii, 32. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Cantavimus vobis tibiis, et non saltastis."

No longer pipe, no longer daunce.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 328. (1605)
It shall not be said, master, for me, "No longer pipe no longer dance."

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1620)

"He always dances well to whom fortune pipes."
"Yes, no longer pipe, no longer dance," replied Francisco.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Parent's Assistant: Little Merchants, iii, 410. (1796)

The vulgar saying of "No longer pipe, no longer dance," applies to landlord and tenant, chieftain and clan, . . . in short, to all the relations of mankind.

WALTER SCOTT, Familiar Letters, i, 61. (1806)

<sup>2</sup> The secular party may go pipe with an yuy [ivy] lefe.

JOHN WYCLIF, English Works (E.E.T.S.), p. 372. (c. 1370) To pipe in an ivy leaf: to console oneself for failure by some frivolous employment.

But Troullus, thou mayst now, est or west,
Pype in an ivy leef, if that thee lest.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. v, l. 1432. (c. 1380)
That oon of yow, al be him looth or leef,
He moot go pypen in an ivy-leef.

CHAUCER, Knights Tale, l. 979. (c. 1386)
The gardiner, he may pipe with an yue leafe, his fruite is failed.

THOMAS USK, The Testament of Love (Skeat). iii, vii, 50. (1388)

Thou mayst go pype in an yve-leffe.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Churl and the Bird, l. 276. (c. 1430)

Giue him an iuie leafe in stead of pipe to play.

TURBERVILLE, Tragical Tales, p. 309. (1587)

PIRATE

<sup>3</sup> Pirates make cheap pennyworths of their pil-lage.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 474. (1855)

<sup>4</sup> No man is a pirate unless his contemporaries agree to call him so.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table-Talk, 17 March, 1832.
There is a legal maxim, "Pirata est hostis humani generis" (A pirate is an enemy to all humanity), and various proverbial phrases are derived from the practices of pirates, such as "To fly false colors," and "To walk the plank."

<sup>5</sup> When the Pirate prays, there is great Danger.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5603. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Pirates, when they chance to cross each other's crossbones, the first hail is—"How many skulls?"

HERMAN MELVILLE, Moby Dick. Ch. 52. (1851)

<sup>7</sup> Twixt Pirate and Pirate, there's nothing to be had but empty barrels.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 54. (1666)
One Pyrate gets nothing of another but his Cask.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2790. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> They inwardly resolved that so long as they remained in the business their piracies should not again be sullied with the crime of stealing.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 13. (1876)
It is when pirates count their booty that they become mere thieves.

WILLIAM BOLITHO, Twelve Against the Gods: Introduction, p. 8. (1929)

PIT

<sup>9</sup> He who thinks he is raising a mound may, in reality, be digging a pit.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 370 (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>10</sup> Whoso diggeth a pit shall fall therein. (Qui fodit foveam, incidet in eam.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvi, 27. (c. 350 B. C.)
He made a pit and digged it, and is fallen into the ditch which he made. (Lacum aperuit, et effodit eum: et incidit in foveam, quam fecit.)

Old Testament: Psalms, vii, 15. (c. 250 B. C.)
Quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 52.

He that diggeth a pit shall fall into it. (Qui fodit foveam, incidet in eam.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, x, 8. (c. 250 B. C.)
The heathen are sunk down in the pit that they made: in the net which they hid is their own foot taken. (Infixae sunt Gentes in interitu, quem fecerunt.)

Old Testament: Psalms, ix, 15. (c. 250 B. C.)
St. Jerome alludes to this passage when he says, "Dum nescis, proprio captus es laqueo" (While you do not know, you are caught with your own snare).

He that diggeth a pit will fall into it, and he that setteth a snare shall be taken therein.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxvii, 26. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

I my selfe am fallen into the pit I digged for him.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 224. (1576)

He fals himselfe that digs another's pit.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. i, act i, sc. 13. (1604) The Germans say, "Wer andern eine Grube gräbt, fällt selbst hinein" (He who digs a pit for others falls into it himself).

<sup>11</sup> To him was given the key of the bottomless pit.

New Testament: Revelation, ix, 1. (c. A. D. 90)
See under HELL.

PITCH

<sup>12</sup> Whoso toucheth pitch, his hand is defiled.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiii, 1. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr. The Apor-rypha rendering is, "He that toucheth pitch shall be defiled therewith," and the Vulgate,

"Qui tetigerit picem, inquinabitur ab ea." The phrase was expanded into a medieval Latin jingle, "Hoc scio pro certo quod si cum stercore certo, Vinco seu vincor, semper ego maculor" (This I know for certain, that when I strive with filth, whether I vanquish or am vanquished, I am always stained thereby).

He who touches pitch shall be defiled from it. (Qui enim tangit picem, inquinatur ab ea.)

St. JEROME (Hieronymus), Commentary on Esai., vi, 5. (c. A. D. 385)

Who so handlyth pycche wellyng hote,
He shal haue fylthe therof sumdeyl [in some degree].

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Handlyng Synne, l. 6578. (1303)

He that handlith pich schal be foulid thereof.

JOHN WYCLIF, Works (1880), p. 218. (c. 1380)
Who-so toucheth warm pych, it shent [defiles] his fynghres.

CHAUCER, Personnes Tale, l. 854. (c. 1386)
Who touchith pich, bassay men may say,
It failith nat he shal befoyled be.

JOHN LYDGATE, tr., The Fall of Princes. Bk. i, l. 4696. (c. 1440)

Hee which toucheth pitch shalbe defiled therwith.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 44. (1574) Pettie, tr.

As he which toucheth pitch shalbee defiled therwith, so hee that useth womens company shalbee beeguled therwith.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 242. (1576)

Hee that toucheth Pitch shall bee defiled.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 111. (1579)
Who touches Pitch mought needes be defilde.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: May, l. 74. (1579)

This pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 455. (1597)
They that touch pitch will be defiled.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, iii, 3, 60. (1598)

[He] had handled pitch so long that at last it stuck to his fingers.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Bk. x, ch. 4. (1655)

Touch pitch and be daubed.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius, p. 157. (1852)

He who measures oil will get his hands greasy. (Quien el azeite misura, las manos se untan.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 226. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

You can't touch pitch and not be mucked.

STEVENSON, Treasure Island. Ch. 10. (1883)

You can't touch pitch and keep your hands clean.
STANLEY WEYMAN, Ovington's Bank. Ch. 31 (1922)

Them that touches pitch gets defiled.

OWEN DAVIS, Icebound. Act iii. (1923)

You couldn't touch tar without getting it on your fingers.

GEOFFREY HOLMES, The Man Who Murdered Himself. Ch. 16. (1936)

If you touch red, you become red; if you touch black, you become black.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 260. (1937)

He's the kind to believe you can't touch pitch without being defiled.

SALLY WOOD, Murder of a Novelist, p. 179. (1941)
You cannot play with tar without getting your fingers blackened.

ROBERT G. DEAN, On Ice, p. 69. (1942)

1 With all the work I have to do I must be at concert pitch.

W. S. MAUGHAM, Lord Mountdrago. (1939)

2 Looks to me as if he'd queered his own pitch.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, Pursuit of a Parcel, p. 207. (1942)

To queer the pitch. To spoil things. From one cheapjack spoiling another's market; pitch is here a cheapjack's or costermonger's stand.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

PITCHER

3 The pitcher takes up the same quantity of water, whether from the well or the ocean.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 49. (c. A. D. 100)

4 Whether the pitcher hits the stone or the stone the pitcher, it's bad for the pitcher. (Si da el cántaro en la piedra, o la piedra en el cántaro, mal para el cántaro.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)

The idea is the same as that of the old French fable, "Le pot de fer et le pot de terre." The Hindus say, "Whether the knife fall on the melon or the melon on the knife, the melon suffers equally."

If the stone falls on the pot, woe to the pot; if the pot falls upon the stone, woe to the pot; in either case, woe to the pot. . . . The weak always suffers. A proverb . . . current in Spain, borrowed in all probability from the Jews.

A. COHEN, Ancient Jewish Proverbs, p. 103 (1911)

5 Auoyd your children: small pitchers haue wide cares.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Be not angry with the child. Pitchers have ears.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, ii, 4, 37. (1592)

Pitchers have ears, and I have many servants.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv, 4, 52. (1594)

Everything has an ear, and a pitcher has two.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 237. (1639)

Little pitchers have wide ears.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 382. (1640)

Insisted on much in my earlier years,

To wit, Little pitchers have very long ears!

R. H. BARHAM, Ingoldsby Legends: St. Dunstan. (1837)

Charley verified the adage about little pitchers, I am sure.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 37. (1852)

Little pitchers have big ears.

MATTHEW HEAD, The Smell of Money, p. 100.

(1943) A proverb in many languages. The French say, "Petit chaudron, grandes oreilles"; the Flemings, "Klyne potten hebben ooren," etc., etc.

<sup>1</sup>
Zuo [so] longe geth the pot to the wetere that hit comth to-broke hom.

-DAN MICHEL, Ayenbite of Inwyt (E.E.T.S.),
p. 206. (1340)

The pot so longe to the watir goth,
That hoom it cometh at the laste y-broke.

THOMAS HOCCELEVE, De Regimine Principum, l.
4432. (1412)

A pot may goo so longe to water that at the laste it cometh broken hoom.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Reynart the Foxe
(Arber), p. 67. (1481)

Lo, the pot so long to the water gothe
Tyll at the laste in comthe home broken.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

Yet at last so long the pitcher goeth to the brooke, that it commeth broken home.

ROBERT GREENE, The Art of Conny-Catching,
ii, 15. (1591)

The pitcher that goes often to the well leaves behind either the handle or the spout. (Cantarillo que muchas veces va á la fuente o deja el asa ó la frente.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 30. (1605)
The French say, "Tant va le pot à l'eau qu'il demeure" (The jug goes so often to the water that it stays there), or "Tant souvent va le pot à l'eau que l'anse y demeure" (The jug goes so often to the water that the handle stays there), or "Tant souvent va la cruche à l'eau qu'à la fin elle se brise" (The pitcher goes so often to the water that at length it breaks). The Italians have the same form as the Spanish, "Vaso che va spesso al fonte, ci lascia il manico o la fronte." The Danes say,
"The goose goes so often to the kitchen that at last she is fastened to the spit."

The Pot that goes often to the water, comes home crack'd at last.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, i, i, 6. (c. 1645)
The pitcher doth not go so often to the water, but it comes home broken at last.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 131. (1670)
The Pitcher, that goes often to the Well, comes home broken at last.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4706. (1732)
Fuller gave the proverb its best form.

They talk about the pitcher going to the well;
but if it does not go to the well, how shall we get water?

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 1 Oct., 1826.

The old pitcher went to the well once too often.

JOHN L. SULLIVAN, when struggling to his feet after his defeat by James J. Corbett, 7 Sept., 1892.

The pitcher that never goes to the well never brings any water; but it may fall off the shelf and be broken.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr's Almanack, p. 92.
(1906)

All right. I'll take the old cracked pitcher to the well again.

FRANK GRUBER, The Navy Colt, p. 94. (1941)

<sup>2</sup>
When Tom's pitcher's broken I shall have the shards.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 351. (1678)

PITY

See also Compassion, Self-Pity

<sup>3</sup>
Pitee renneth sone in gentil herte.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Prologue, l. 503. (c. 1385) Repeated in The Knight's Tale, l. 903, in The Merchant's Tale, l. 742, and in The Squire's Tale, l. 471.

<sup>4</sup>
Pity's a poor plaster.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 122
(1875)

Pity without relief is like mustard without beef
CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 122.

Pity without relief is like pudding without suet.
Devonshire Assn. Transactions, xlv, 90. (1913)

<sup>5</sup>
Great souls with generous pity melt,
Which coward tryants never felt.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

<sup>6</sup>
Pity cureth Envy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3876. (1732)

<sup>7</sup>
This . . . Is either not pity, or peevins pity.
Which (as th' old saying saith) marreth the city.

JOHN HEYWOOD, The Spider and the Fle
(Farmer), p. 307. (1556)

Peevish pitty, marres a City.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 330
(1605) CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 181. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 131. (1670)

A foolish pitty quickly ouerthrowes

In warre an army, and in peace a state.

GEORGE WITHER, Abuses Stript and Whipt. Bk
i, sat. 13. (1613)

Foolish Pity Ruins a City.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6216. (1732)

<sup>8</sup>
He kin' o' l'itered on the mat,
Some doubtfle o' the sekle,

His heart kep' goin' pity-pat,

But hern went pity Zekle.

J. R. LOWELL, The Courtin'. (1848)

<sup>9</sup>
That you may gain your desire be pitiable.
(Ut voto potiare tuo, miserabilis esto.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 737. (c. 1 B. C.)

Anoon her herte hath pitee of his wo,

And, with that pitee, love com in also.

CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Dido,
l. 155. (c. 1385)

Pity and commiseration are mixed with some regard for the thing which one pities. (La plaincte et la commiseration sont meslees à quelque estimation de la chose qu'on plaint.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 50. (1580)

I pity you.—That's a degree to love.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 1, 134. (1599)

Pity is sworn servant unto love.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Queen's Arcadia. Act iii.
sc. 1. (1605)

Of all the paths that lead to a woman's love

Pity's the straightest.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, *The Knight of
Malta*. Act i, sc. 1, l. 73. (c. 1613)

Quoth she, Y' have almost made me in love
With that which did my pity move.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, ii, i, 267. (1663)

Can you pretend to love

And have no pity? Love and that are twins.

DRYDEN, Don Sebastian. Act iii, sc. 1. (1690)

Pity melts the mind to love.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast. St. 5. (1697)

Do pity me; Pity's akin to love.

SOUTHERNE, Oroonoko. Act ii, sc. 1. (1696)

Pity is but one remove from love.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, i, 34. (1753)

A woman's pity often opens the door to love.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 228. (1887)

They say that Pity is akin to Love, though only a Poor Relation.

F. LOCKER-LAMPSON, My Confidences, p. 95. (1896)

In women pity begets love, in men love begets pity.

CHURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms. (c. 1905)

She felt that sentiment which is akin to love.

O. HENRY, October and June. (1911)

Pity is achin' to love.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 483. (1940)

Pity is the wonderful and beautiful sister of love.

P. C. WREN, Uniform of Glory, p. 251. (1941)

<sup>1</sup> Pitty is the only pathway to prayse.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 175. (1576)

<sup>2</sup> She is more to be pitied than censured.
(Miserandum potius quam dammandam.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iii, fable 10, l. 46. (c. 25 B.C.)

The poor girl . . . is more to be pitied than blamed.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 24. (1850)

More to be pitied than censured.

KATHLEEN KNIGHT, Rendezvous With the Past, p. 211. (1940) Quoting the refrain of a popular song.

<sup>3</sup> I'm determined to pity nobody, since nobody pities me. (Neminis | miserere certum est, quia mei miseret neminem.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 765. (c. 200 B.C.)

Pity others so that others won't pity you. (Te aliorum miserescat, ne tis alios misereat.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 343. (c. 194 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> The man who pities his stricken fellow-man remembers his own lot. (Homo qui in homine calamitoso est misericors meminit sui.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 243. (c. 43 B.C.)

He that pities another, remembers himself.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 783 (1640) RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 121. (1748)

He that pitieth another remembereth himself.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1678)

<sup>5</sup> Pity raises good defences. (Bona comparat praesidia misericordia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 90. (c. 43 B.C.)

Vain is the appeal to him who cannot pity.
(Frustra rogatur qui misereri non potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 200.

When pity sees misery, there comes the comradeship of tears. (Contubernia sunt lacrimarum ubi misericors miserum adspicit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 143.

To know how to pity is to live without danger. (Misereri scire sine periculo est vivere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 370.

Pity gets a bad name nowhere. (Nullo in loco male audit misericordia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 462.

How wretched he to whom pity is repugnant! (Quam miser est cui est ingrata misericordia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 570.

<sup>6</sup> Sometimes the truest form of pity is to kill. (Interim optimum misericordiae genus est occidere.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 4. (c. A.D. 55)

<sup>7</sup> 'Twas pitiful, 'twas wondrous pitiful.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 160. (1605)

But yet the pity of it, Iago! O Iago, the pity of it, Iago!

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iv, 1, 206.

<sup>8</sup> No beast so fierce but knows some touch of pity.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 2, 71. (1592)

<sup>9</sup> Pity! the scavenger of misery.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act iii. (1905)

PLACE

See also Office

<sup>10</sup>

It is not places that make men to be held in honor, but men the places. (οὐχ οἱ τόποι τοὺς ἀνδρας ἐντίμους, ἀλλ' οἱ ἀνδρες τοὺς τόπους ἐπιδεικνύουσιν.)

AGESILAUS THE GREAT, when, as a boy, at a celebration of the festival of the naked boys, the director of the dance assigned him to an inconspicuous place. (c. 459 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia: Sayings of Spartans. Sec 208E.

It is not the place that honors the man, but the man that adds lustre to the place.

Babylonian Talmud: Taanith, fo. 21b. (c. 450)

When (as I remember) Agesilaus sonne was set at the lower end of the table, and one cast it in his teeth as a shame, he answered: this is the vpper end where I sit, for it is not the place that maketh the person, but the person that maketh the place honorable.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber). p. 255. (1580)

Let me sit wherever I will, that will still be the upper end. (Adonde quiera que yo me siente será vuestra cabecera.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 31. (1615)

That is the upper End, where the chief Person sits.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4362. (1732)

'Tis the Place that shews the Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5122. (1732)
Where Macgregor sits, there is the head of the table.

ROB ROY MACGREGOR, Saying, attributed to him by the Scots. (c. 1720) It has been quoted as from SCOTT, Rob Roy, but the compiler has been unable to find it there.

Wherever Macdonald sits, there is the head of the table.

R. W. EMERSON, The American Scholar. (1836)
Like the Macdonald—where Lord Innes sat was the head of the table.

J. W. BELLAH, Bones of Napoleon, p. 69. (1940)
OFFICE SHOWS THE MAN, see under OFFICE.

1 I see a dog, but no stone to shy at him;
Yonder's a stone—no dog's in view:

There is your dog, here stones to try at him—
The king's dog! what's a man to do?

BHARTRIHARI, Epigrams. No. 49. (c. A. D. 625)
The Telegus have the same proverb, "When the dog comes, a stone cannot be found; when the stone is found, the dog does not come."

Ther lakketh noght but only day and place.

CHAUCEER, Marchantes Tale, l. 754. (c. 1388)
Nor time nor place Did then adhere.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 7, 51. (1606)
Where you think there is bacon, there is no chimney.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 104. (1640)
Never the time and the place
And the loved one all together.

ROBERT BROWNING, Never the Time and the Place. (1883)

2 Get in your place and take a back seat,
Go way back and sit down.

ELMER BOWMAN, Go Way Back and Sit Down. (1901)

3 Nothing is more annoying than a low man raised to a high place. (Asperius nihil est humili cum surgit in altum.)

CLAUDIAN, In Eutropium. Bk. i, l. 181. (c. A. D. 400)
Though men may look big in a position which is beneath their capacity, they often look small in one which is too big for them. (Nous pouvons paraître grands dans un emploi au-dessous de notre mérite; mais nous paraissions souvent petits dans un emploi plus grand que nous.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 419. (1665)
He that thinks his place below him will certainly be below his place.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 146. (1902)

4 Tim and his Handsaw are good in their Place,
Tho' not fit for preaching or shaving a face.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

5 Place neither giveth nor taketh away virtue.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i,
p. 99. (1574) Pettie, tr.

6 All things have their place, knew we how to place them.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 381. (1640)

A place for everything and everything in its place.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 2 Aug., 1875. Quoted, but no source given.

Order is most useful in the management of everything. . . . Its maxim is, A place for everything and everything in its place.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 78. (1875)

A niche for everything and everything in its niche.

BEEDING, Eight Crooked Trenches, p. 84. (1936)
I believe in a place for everything and everything in its place.

OGDEN NASH, Hush, Here They Come. (1938)
A tidy person with a place for everything and everything in its place.

J. J. CONNINGTON, The Twenty-One Clues, p.
77. (1941) WENTWORTH, *Miss Silver Deals
With Death*, p. 135. (1943)

7 Let each [style] keep the becoming place allotted it. (Singula quaeque locum teneant sortita decentem.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 92. (c. 20 B. C.)
He need not fear to be chidden that sits where he is bidden.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Seoir. (1611)

Sit in your place, and none can make you rise.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 374. (1640)
Sit in your seat, and none will raise you.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 299. (1721)
Sit firm in thy Place, and none can hurt thee.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4180. (1732)
I hold to being kind to servants—but you must make 'em know their place.

HARRIET BEECHER STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin.
Ch. 16. (1852)

Sit in your own place, and no man can make you rise.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p.
99. (1853)

Sit down in your own place and you won't have to get up. (Sientate en tu lugar, y no te haran le-vantar.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 258. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The Germans say, "Wer wohl sitzt, der rücke nicht"
(Who is well seated, let him not stir); the Italians, "Chi sta bene, non si muova" (Who stands well, let him not shift).

8 Here indeed I am; this is my place. (Nimirum hic ego sum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 15, l. 42. (20 B. C.)
Every man has his own place. (Est locus uni cuique suus.)

HORACE, Satires, i, 9, 51. (35 B. C.)

9 Put Yourself in His Place.

CHARLES READE. Title of novel. (1870)

10 It is a maxim, that those to whom everybody allows the second place have an undoubted title to the first.

SWIFT, A Tale of a Tub: Dedication. (1704)

11 High place is quick to educate high minds.
(Les grands places instruisent promptement les grands esprits.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 569. (1746)

PLAGIARISM

See also Imitation

<sup>1</sup> It is as difficult to appropriate the thoughts of others as it is to invent.

EMERSON, Quotation and Originality. (1875)

<sup>2</sup> I am against the prophets, saith the Lord, that steal my words every one from his neighbour. (Propterea ecce ego ad prophetas, ait Dominus, qui furantur verba mea unusquisque a proximo suo.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xxiii, 30. (c. 700 B. C.)

THEY STEAL MY THUNDER, see under THUNDER.

<sup>3</sup> I take back my property wherever I find it. (Je reprends mon bien où je le trouve.)

MOLIÈRE, when he used several times in his Les Fourberies de Scapin—act ii, sc. 7, for example—(1671) the famous phrase, "Que diable allait-il faire dans cette galère?" (What the devil was he doing in that galley?) which he asserted Cyrano de Bergerac had stolen from him and used in his Pédant Joué, act ii, sc. 4.

It is permitted me, said Molière, to take my own where ever I find it. (Il m'est permis, disait Molière, de reprendre mon bien où je le trouve.)

JEAN DE GRIMAREST, Vie de Molière, p. 14. (1704)

He kens his groats among other folks kail.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 50. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 153, with the comment, "Spoken of those who are sharp and sagacious in knowing their own."

<sup>4</sup> The bees plunder the flowers here and there; but afterward they produce the honey, which is peculiarly their own. (Les abeilles pillotent deçà delà les fleurs; mais elles en font aprez le miel, qui est tout leur.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25. (1580) Montaigne is discussing the ethics of literary borrowing, and he concludes that it is justified if the borrower improves upon the original, but the source ought not to be concealed.

Though old the thought and oft exprest,
'Tis his at last who says it best.

J. R. LOWELL, For an Autograph. (1868)

<sup>5</sup> Whatever is well said by another, is mine. (Quicquid bene dictum est ab ullo, meum est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xvi, sec. 7. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>6</sup> Nothing is said nowadays that has not been said before. (Nullum est iam dictum quod non sit dictum prius.)

TERENCE, Enunchus: Prologue, l. 41. (161 B. C.) The same idea is said by the comic poet [Terence]: "Nothing is said which has not been said before." Whence my teacher, Donatus, when he was speaking of that verse said, "Confound those who have said our good things before us." (Huic quid simile sententiae et Comicus ait: "nihil est dictum, quod non est dictum prius." Unde preceptor meus Donatus, cum istum versiculum exponeret: Pereant, inquit, qui ante nos nostra dixerunt.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Commentary on Ecclesiastes, cap. i. (c. 375). See MINGE, Patriologiae Cursus, xxiii, 390.

Their writings are thefts which they have made from us in advance. (Leurs écrits sont des vols qu'ils nous ont faits d'avance.)

ALEXIS PIRON, Epigram. (c. 1755)

We can say nothing but what has been said. . . . Our poets steal from Homer.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

When 'Omer smote 'is bloomin' lyre,

He'd 'eard men sing by land an' sea;

An' what he thought 'e might require,

'E went an' took—the same as me!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Barrack-Room Ballads: Introduction. (1892)

Really, is it yours? I had supposed it was something old. (Obsecro, tuum est? vetus credideram.)

UNKNOWN. A Latin gibe at a plagiarist.

PLAIN

<sup>7</sup> He is as plain as a pack-staff.

THOMAS BECON, David's Harp. (1542) Early Works (Parker Soc.), p. 276. Pack-staff: the staff on which a peddler carries his bundle over his shoulder, and on which he supports it when standing to rest; the earlier form of "plain as a pike-staff."

They be as playne as a pyke staff.

RICHARD SHACKLOCK, tr., The Hatchet of Heresies, fo. 1. (1565)

A new game . . . plain as a pike-staffe.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), vi, 68. (1591) Packe-staffe plaine, uttrring the thing they ment

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Satires. Bk. iii, Prologue (1597)

It shows 'em a flat case as plain as a pack-staff.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Familie of Love. Act v, sc. 3. (1607)

Plain as a pike-staff without gilding.

CHARLES COTTON, Scarronides. Bk. i. (1664)

The evidence against him was as plain as a pike-staff.

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Last Chronicle of Barset. Bk. i, ch. 42. (1867)

"So plain's a pack-stave," which literature has corrupted into "plain as a pike-staff."

F. T. ELWORTHY, West Somerset Word-Book, 552. (1886)

Wrinkling up his nut over some plain as a pike-staff thing.

A. S. N. HUTCHINSON, If Winter Comes. Pt. i, ch. 1. (1921) See also CHENEY, Trap for Bellamy, p. 152. (1941) FREEMAN, Unconscious Witness, p. 165. (1942) etc., etc.

That's as plain as a pipestem.

THEODORA DU BOIS, The Wild Duck Murders, p. 122. (1943)

<sup>8</sup> A plaine honest man, without welt or garde. ROBERT GREENE, Frier Bacon and Frier Bongay, l. 2140. (c. 1590) Without ornament.

A plaine alehouse without welt or gard of anie iuybush.

THOMAS NASHE, The Unfortunate Traveller, p. 8. (1594)

I was christened Teresa, without welt or gard, nor addition of Don or Dona.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1620)

<sup>1</sup> No more seene then a nose in a man's face.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 173. (1574) Pettie, tr.

As plain as the nose on a man's face.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. v, Prologue. (1593) Motteux' rendering of "L'experience nous le demonstre" (Experience proves it).

Invisible, As a nose on a man's face.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 1, 141. (1594)

As clear and as manifest as the nose in a man's face.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iii, mem. iv, subs. 1. (1621)

As plaine as the nose on a man's face.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 188. (1639)

HENRY MORE, The Second Lash, (1655) etc.

As plain as the nose on your face.

WILKIE COLLINS, The Moonstone. Ch.15. (1868)

SHAW, Man and Superman, Acts i and ii. (1903)

MASON, Sulu Sea Murders, p. 139. (1933)

SHRIBER, A Body for Bill, p. 54. (1942) etc., etc.

<sup>2</sup> You could see it as plain as egg on the chin of an O'Grady on a Friday.

O. HENRY, The Handbook of Hymen. (1907)

<sup>3</sup> As plaine as dunstable by waie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

As playne . . . as Donstable waye.

HUTH, Ancient Ballads, Pt. i. (c. 1560)

Plaine Dunstable is the high way, and yet there are many holes in it.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works ii, c. 48. (1599)

"As plain as Dunstable Road." . . . Applied to things plain and simple, . . . Such this road; being broad and beaten.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, i, 166. (1662)

<sup>4</sup> Be plaine without pletes.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

<sup>5</sup> All is open that they do there,

As open as a gose eye.

HENRY MEDWALL, A Goodly Interlude of Nature. Pt. ii, l. 130. (c. 1500)

<sup>6</sup> It was as plain as day.

R. L. STEVENSON, Treasure Island, iii, 13. (1883)

The thing's as plain as daylight.

CHRISTIE, Tuesday Club Murders. Ch.13. (1933)

<sup>7</sup> Plain as corn beef and cabbage.

JEAN WEBB, No Match for Murder, p.50. (1942)

<sup>8</sup> An honeste true dealyng seruant . . . plaine as a packe-saddle.

WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, p. 143. (1553)

As plaine (as they say) as a pack-saddle.

GEORGE WITHER, Abuses Stript and Whipt: To the Reader. (1613) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 202. (1670)

PLAIN-DEALING

See also Candor; Speech: Plain-Speaking

<sup>9</sup> Plain dealing is praised more than practised.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 138. (1639)

<sup>10</sup> Nothing astonishes men so much as common sense and plain dealing.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Art. (1841)

<sup>11</sup> Plaine dealing is a jewel (though they that vse it commonly die beggers).

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus: Epistle Dedicatory. (1583)

Plain-dealing is a jewel, and he that useth it shall die a beggar.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. (1599)

Thereby grew the prouerbe "plaine dealing is a jewel." But he that vseth it shall die a begger.

JOHN DAY, Law-Tricks. Act ii. (1608)

How dost thou like this jewel?—Not so well as plain-dealing.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, i, 1, 216. (1608)

Plain dealing is a jewel.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, The Country-Wife. Act iv, sc. 3. (1675)

CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor. Act iv, sc. 22. (1692)

GARRICK, Bon Ton. Act ii, sc. 2. (1775) etc., etc.

Plain Dealing is a Jewel; but they that wear it are out of Fashion.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3878. (1732)

<sup>12</sup> Plaine dealers, voide of dissimulation.

JOHN PORY, tr., Historie of Africa, ii, 40. (1600)

I the Plain-Dealer am to act to-day,

An honest man . . . who speaks what he thinks

WYCHERLEY, Plain-Dealer: Prologue. (1676)

<sup>13</sup> Plain dealing is the best when all is done.

WILLIAM PRYNNE, Histrion-mastix, iii, 1. (1633)

Feign'd Zeal, you saw, set out with speedier pace.

But, the last heat, Plain Dealing won the race.

DRYDEN, Albion and Albanus: Epilogue. (1685)

<sup>14</sup> Plaine dealing: honesty is dead.

BARNABY RICH, The Ladies Looking Glasse, p. 60. (1616)

Plain Dealing is dead; and dyed without Issue.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3879. (1732)

Poor Plain Dealing! dead without Issue.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack. (1750)

PLAN

<sup>15</sup> What's your plan? What buskin's on your foot? (τίς ἡ πλάνια. τίς δὲ κόθορος τῆς οὐδοῦ;)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 994. (414 B. C.)

<sup>16</sup> Those whose ways are different do not make plans together.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xv, ch.39. (c.500 B. C.)

<sup>1</sup> Make no little plans; they have no magic to stir men's blood. . . . Make big plans: aim high in hope and work.

DANIEL H. BURNHAM, in Christian Science Monitor, 18 Jan., 1927.

Make your year's plans in the spring, and your day's plans early in the morning.

H. H. HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs, No. 87. (1937)

<sup>2</sup> A well laid plan is ever to my mind most profitable. (τὸ γὰρ εἰς βουλευέσθαι κέρδος μέγιστον εὐπράκτω ἐόν.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. vii, ch. 10. (c. 445 B.C.) Repeated in bk. vii, ch. 157.

<sup>3</sup> It is a bad plan that cannot be altered. (Malum est consilium quod mutari non potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 403. (c. 43 B.C.) Quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, xvii, 14, and by MONTAIGNE, ii, 1.

We are on our way back—not by mere chance, not by a turn of the cycle. We are coming back more surely than ever before because we planned it that way; and don't let anybody tell you differently.

FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT, Speech, at Charleston, S.C., 23 Oct., 1935. He repeated the statement in the closing days of the 1936 campaign.

PLASTER

See also Salve

<sup>4</sup> Quickly to the sore the plaster came. (E costi tosto al mal giunse lo impiastro.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxiv, l. 18. (c. 1300)

<sup>5</sup> A prodigious Plaister for so small a Sore.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4347. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> To breke myn hede, and yeve me an houffe.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems (Percy Soc.), p. 56. (c. 1430)

To break a mans hed . . . and give him a plaster.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Letter-Book, p. 52. (1573)

A plaister is a small amends for a broken head.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 324. (1580)

He broke my head, and then gave me a plaister.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 17. (1639)

<sup>7</sup> You rub the sore, When you should bring the plaster.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, ii, 1, 138. (1611)

You give me Coloquintida for Herb-John.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5905. (1732)

PLAY

See also Work and Play

<sup>8</sup> For these at Beste and L'Ombre woo,
And play for love and money too.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, iii, 1, 1007. (1678)

To "play for love" is to play without stakes.

I play over again for love, as the gamesters phrase it, games for which I once paid so dear.

CHARLES LAMB, New Year's Eve. (1821)

Mrs. Todgers proposed that . . . they should play for "love."

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 32. (1844)

<sup>9</sup> I warne yow wel, it is no childes pley.

CHAUCER, Marchantes Tale, l. 286. (c. 1388)

Leave boys-play, and fall to blow point; Relin- quere nuces [Put aside the nuts].

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, 997. (1681) See under NUT.

Let us leave off children's play and go to push-pin.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>10</sup> Hands off and fair play.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 273. (1639)

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering, Ch. 40

(1815), gives the modern form, "Hands off is fair play."

She endeavoured . . . to give both sides fair play.

CHARLES JENNER, The Placid Man, vi, 4. (1770)

Fair play's a jewel.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 21. (1824)

PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, i, 104. (1832)

CHAMIER, Saucy Arethusa. Ch. 9. (1837)

WEYMAN, Shrewsbury. Ch. 20. (1898) etc.

Fair play is good play.

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, ii, 1008. (1827)

One dog, one bull, signifies fair play.

JACKSON, Shropshire Word-Book, p. 309. (1879)

Spell for spell [turn for turn] is fair play.

F. K. ROBINSON, Whitby Glossary, p. 164. (1855)

He asked only for a fair field and a clear course.

E. PENNELL-ELMHIRST, The Cream of Leicestershire, p. 202. (1883) The usual phrase is "A fair field and no favor."

Turn about is fair play.

FITCH, Girl With Green Eyes. Act i. (1941)

<sup>11</sup> The people sat down to eat and to drink, and rose up to play. (Sedit populus manducare, et bibere, et surrexerunt ludere.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xxxii, 6. (c. 550 B.C.)

<sup>12</sup> Pith is good in all plays.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (c. 1595)

Pith is good in all plays but threading of needles.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 278. (1721)

<sup>13</sup> We should play, to live; not live, to play.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5457. (1732)

<sup>14</sup> Play with me and hurt me not,
Jest with me and shame me not.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 188. (1582)

HARINGTON, Orlando Furioso. Bk. xii. (1591)

BRATHWAIT, English Gentleman, p. 152. (1630)

Jape with me and hurt me not,

Bourde [jest] with me and shame me not.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM, The Arte of English

Poesie, p. 261. (1589)

<sup>15</sup> I can compare him to nothing more happily than a barber's virginals; for every one may play upon him.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act ii, sc. 3. (1598) Reminiscent of "Common as a barber's chair, which takes all buttocks."

See under COMMONNESS.

Call me what instrument you will, though you can fret me, yet you cannot play upon me.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 387. (1600)
Some Jackes [keys] are common to all that will play.

DAVIES, Scourge of Folly: Proverbs. (1611)

1 The dyeuel playth ofte . . . ase deth the cat mid the mous.

DAN MICHEL, Ayenbite of Inwyrt, p. 179. (1340)
You play with him as a cat plays with a mouse.
SHADWELL, Fair Quaker. Act ii, sc. 2. (1710)

2 Play with thy peir, or I'll pull thee like a Paipe.

ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, The Flyting betwixt M. and Polwart, 107. (a. 1585)
Play with your peirs.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (c. 1595)
Play with your play-feers [fellows].

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 281. (1721)

3 Shall I not be boty or party fellow with thee?

JEHAN PAISGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. T4. (1540)
They wil . . . consent as though they wil play booty against him.

JOHN AWDELEY, The Fraternitey of Vaca-bondes, p. 9. (1561) To play booty: to act as decoy for confederates; to practise collusion.

Wee are three of vs, let us all play booty, and joyne together to coozen the Cardinall.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Guzman d'Alfarache, i, 222. (1622)

We under stand what we ought to do; but when we come to deliberate, we play booty against our selves.

L'ÉSTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables, p. 116. (1692)
I believe the Devil plays booty against himself and tells you of my sins.

CIBBER, Comical Lovers. Act ii, sc. 1. (1707)
He had scornfully refused a considerable bribe to play booty on such an occasion.

FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1742)
Bribing a rider to play booty to lose the race.

PHILIP PARSONS, Newmarket, i, 108. (1771)
Five of 'em strung up in a row, and none left to play booty, or turn white-livered.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 9. (1838)
He had played booty, and played the traitor.
STANLEY WEYMAN, Skrewsbury. Ch. 12. (1898)

4 To faint or fall over would be a grand-stand play.

M. D. POST, Harvard Stories, p. 308. (1893) A grand-stand play is something done for applause or effect.

The ultimatum to the Sultan of Morocco, "Pericardis alive or Raisuli dead" was a good one. But telegraphing it to the National Convention at Chicago made it look very much like a grand stand play.

Editorial, Utica Observer, 23 June, 1904, p. 6.
Luther [was] obliged to make a few "grand-stand plays" himself.

MARY S. WATTS, Luther Nichols, p. 248. (1923)

5 There is a Spanish proverb, which says, Whego [phonetic for juego] de manos, whego de villanos [Play with the hands is the play of peasants].

THOMAS SHADWELL, Bury-Fair. Act ii, sc. 1. (1689) The English proverbial form is "Hand play, churls' play," or, "Horseplay is fools' play." The French say, "Jeu de mains, jeu de vilain."

6 To prevent any foule play that might be offered vnto me.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia, ii, 181b. (a. 1586)
All is not well; I doubt some foul play.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 255. (1608)
Foul Play.

CHARLES READE. Title of novel. (1868)

7 Of a new maried student that plained fast and loose.

UNKNOWN, Tottle's Miscellany: Title of Epigram (Arber), p. 157. (1557) Fast-and-loose was an old cheating game played by gipsies and vagrants.

Thus with the Aegyptian thou playest fast or loose.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 326. (1580)
Play fast and loose with faith.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iii, 1, 242. (1595)
To sell a bargain well is as cunning as fast and loose.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iii, 104 (1595)

This grave charm, . . .
Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose,
Beguil'd me.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iv, 12, 25. (1606)

She that wanton is and fond, that fast and loose will play.

UNKNOWN. In Pepysian Garland, p. 320. (1629)
Fast and loose is no possession.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 159. (1639)
Playing fast and loose, between Love and Indifference.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 320. (1712)
She had played fast and loose with me.

THACKERAY, Lovel the Widower. Ch. 6. (1860)
LEAVE OFF WHILE THE PLAY IS GOOD, see under GAMING.

II—Play: Drama

8 There is no play without a fool.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 149. (1639)
'Tis an old proverb, there can be no play without a foole in it.

UNKNOWN, News from New Exchange, p. 14 (1650)

What's a play without a woman in it?

THOMAS KYD, The Spanish Tragedie. Act iv, sc. 1. (c. 1589)

9 Judge not the play before the play be done.

SIR JOHN DAVIES, Respicie Finem. (a. 1626)

My soul, sit thou a patient looker-on;
Judge not the play before the play is done:

Her plot has many changes: ev'ry day
Speaks a new scene: the last act crowns the play.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Epigram: Respice Finem. Emblemes. Bk. i, emb. 15. (1635)

The first Act's doubtfull, but (we say)
It is the last commends the Play.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Plaudite. (1648)

RESPICE FINEM, LOOK AT THE END, see under END.

<sup>1</sup> Those who have free seats at the play are the first to hiss.

H. H. HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 277. (1937)

<sup>2</sup> For four hours or more the curtains are kept down. (Quattuor aut pluris aulaea premuntur in horas.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. i, l. 189. (c. 15
B. C.) In the ancient theatre, the curtain was lowered into the floor at the beginning of the play and raised again only when the play was over.

<sup>3</sup> No play would I have rather seen. (Nullos his mallem ludos spectasse.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 8, l. 79. (35 B. C.)
Referring to a dinner "with the rich Nasi-dienus" which a friend was describing.

I obtain more pleasure thence than from seeing quams in theatres. (Plus capio voluptatis inde quam spectandis in theatro ludis.)

PIETRO ARETINO, Dialogues. (c. 1550)

As good as a play!

CHARLES II, while listening to the debate in Parliament on Lord Ross's Divorce Bill. (c.
1680) For the ascription, see MACAULAY,
Essays: The Life of Sir William Temple.

The tale that Master Jarvis told was as good as a play.

MRS. HENRY WOOD, Dene Hollow. Ch. 20. (1871)
It is (or was) better than a play. It is (or was) most entertaining. There is an adumbration in the Latin of Aretino.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Cliché's. (1941)

<sup>4</sup> A farce or a comedy is best played; a tragedy is best read at home.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, to John Hay, after seeing Booth in The Merchant of Venice. (1863)

<sup>5</sup> If it be true that good wine needs no bush, 'tis true that a good play needs no epilogue.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It: Epil., l. 3. (1600)
The play, I remember, pleased not the million;
'twas caviare to the general.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 457. (1600) "Caviar to the general": unappreciated by the mob.
There are occasions when Reginald is caviare to the Colonel.

H. H. MUNRO (SAKI), Reginald. Ch. 1. (1904)

It appears to be a case of caviare to the general.
INNES, Appleby on Ararat, p. 150. (1941)

<sup>6</sup> Is there no play
To ease the anguish of a torturing hour?

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream,
v, 1, 36. (1596)

The play's the thing.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 633. (1600)

Play out the play.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 531. (1597)

The hotel business is like the theatre. No matter what happens, the show must go on.

HOLDING, Speak of the Devil, p. 281. (1941)

<sup>7</sup> Athens herself learned virtue at a play.

STEELE, The Funeral: Epilogue. (1701)

PLEASING

<sup>8</sup> The back is not broken by bending it.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col.
xxv, l. 11. (c. 700 B. C.) Griffith, tr.

The man is not made poor who says pleasant things.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live, xxv, 12.

<sup>9</sup> As pleasant as warm water on a bald head.

Babylonian Talmud: Kethuboth, fo. 39b. (c.
450)

<sup>10</sup> He doesn't please me who pleases himself so much. (Non placet ille mihi, quisquis placuit sibi multum.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 11. (c. 175
B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

<sup>11</sup> Too much desire to please pleasure divorces.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Ovid's Banquet of Sense
(1595)

He more had pleased us had he pleased us less.

JOSEPH ADDISON, An Account of the Greatest English Poets. (1694) Referring to Cowley.

The greatest mistake is the trying to be more agreeable than you can be.

WALTER BACEHOT, Biographical Studies, p. 294.
(a. 1877)

Too anxious to please to please.

O. HENRY, The Brief Debut of Tildy. (1906)

<sup>12</sup> If you mean to profit, learn to please.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Gotham, ii, 88. (a. 1764)

<sup>13</sup> It is as hard to please a knave as a knight.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 275. (1639)
Cited by RAY, p. 111; FULLER, No. 2907.

<sup>14</sup> Please the eye and picke the purse.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Marchandise. (1611)

She may please your eye a little . . . but vex your heart.

ANTHONY BREWER, Love-Sick King. Act iii.
(1655)

She was resolved to please her eye, if she should plague her heart.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 40. (1748)

It is a fatal maxim among women, "To please the eye, though they torment the heart."

UNKNOWN, The World. No. 80. (1754)

"Please your eye and plague your heart" is an adage that want of beauty invented, I dare say, more than a thousand years ago.

COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. Ch. 3. (1829)

But I will marry him, mamma—I'll please my eye, if I plague my heart.

MRS. LINNAEUS BANKS, Manchester Man. Ch.
38. (1876)

<sup>1</sup> Whenever you are sincerely pleased, you are nourished.

EMERSON, Considerations by the Way. (1860)

<sup>2</sup> When we are pleas'd our selves, we begin to please others.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5618. (1732)

They who are pleas'd themselves must always please.

JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence. Canto i, st. 15. (1748)

<sup>3</sup> He makes people pleased with him by making them first pleased with themselves.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 18 Jan., 1750.

To be pleased one must please.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 9 July, 1750.

Men seldom give pleasure where they are not pleased themselves.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 74. (1750)

The art of pleasing is to seem pleased.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 39. (1823)

The surest way to make ourselves agreeable to others is by seeming to think them so.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 57.

<sup>4</sup> When I craued a finall resolution to my fatal passions, shee . . . shooke me off with a Non placet.

ROBERT GREENE, Menaphon (Arber), p. 42. (1589) Non placet (it does not please), the phrase used in the older universities and in ecclesiastical assemblies, in voting negatively upon any question.

When flesh and bloud shall put up a petition, . . . give it a Non placet.

RICHARD SIBBES, The Christian's End (1639). v, 110. (a. 1635)

<sup>5</sup> Fair is not fair, but that which pleaseth.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 494.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1670)

<sup>6</sup> He pleased you by not studying to please.

LYTTELTON, Progress of Love. Pt. iii. (a. 1773)

<sup>7</sup> To be pleased with oneself is the surest way of offending every-body else.

LORD LYTTON, Pelham. Ch. 23. (1827)

<sup>8</sup> I consider him an unhappy man whom no one pleases. (Ego esse miserum credo. cui placet nemo.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, ep. 28, l. 9. (c. A. D. 90) He who is pleased with nobody is much more unhappy than he with whom nobody is pleased. (Un homme à qui personne ne plaît est bien plus malheureux que celui qui ne plaît à personne.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 561. (1665)

He that can please nobody is not so much to be pitted as he that nobody can please.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 231. (1820)

<sup>9</sup> I was (as the poet says) as pleased as Punch. THOMAS MOORE, Letter to Lady Donegal. (a. 1852)

When Sissy got into the school here . . . her father was as pleased as Punch.

DICKENS, Hard Times. Bk. i, ch. 6. (1854)

I'm as pleased as Punch, now I've thought of it.

GEORGE ELIOT, Middlemarch. Ch. 40. (1871)

As pleased as a dog with two tails.

EDWARD PEACOCK, Manley Glossary, p. 169. (1889)

As pleased as if the pot was on.

Folk-Lore. Vol. xxiv, p. 77. (1913)

<sup>10</sup> By whatever gifts you can please, please. (Quacumque potes dote placere, place.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 596. (c. 1 B. C.)

There is also some little delight in having pleased one's self. (Est etiam placuisse sibi quotacumque voluptas.)

OVID, De Medicamine Faciei, l. 31. (c. 1 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> If it pleases you, it does not displease me, as the saying is. (ἀλλ' ἐὶ ὅπως σοὶ φίλον, οὐδ' ἐμοὶ ἐχθρόν, φασίν.)

PLATO, Theaetetus. Sec. 162C. (c. 390 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, 1, 33, who gives the Latin, "Si tibi amicum, nec mihi inimicum."

<sup>12</sup> I would rather please one good man than many bad. (Bono probari malo quam multis malis.)

PITTACUS, Apothegm. (c. 675 B. C.) See AUSONIUS [?], Septem Sapientum Sententiae, l. 9.

<sup>13</sup> She who longs to please many longs to be unchaste. (Multis placere quae cupit culpam cupit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 392. (c. 43 B. C.)

Do not care how many, but whom, you please. (Non quam multis placeas, sed qualibus stude.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 483.

<sup>14</sup> Be always displeased at what thou art. if thou desirest to attain to what thou art not; for where thou hast placed thyself, there thou abidest.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Emblems. Bk. iv, emb. 3. (1635) Quoting Saint Augustine.

<sup>15</sup> If you be not pleased, put your hand in your pocket and please yourself. A jeering expression to such as will not be pleased with the reasonable offers of others.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 79. (1678)

If you be not Content, put your hand in your Pocket, and please your self.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2739. (1732)

<sup>16</sup> I do not exist to please you. (Non tibi spiro.) SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. (a. 1586) Motto on title-page.

Be you pig or god, I am marjoram, and do not breathe for you. (Sis sus, sis divus, sum caltha, et non tibi spiro.)

S. T. COLERIDGE, Aids to Reflection (1843). Vol.

i, p. 13. (1825) It is not known whether Coleridge originated this line or quoted it from some unindicated source.

1 Dream not that we can act to please ourselves,
Nor pay the price of pleasure by our pains.

(καὶ μὴ δοκῶμεν δρῶντες ἂν ἡδῶμεθα οὐκ ἀντιτίσσειν αὐθις ἂν λυπώμεθα.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1085. (c. 409 B. C.)

2 Those things are more pleasing which spring of their own accord. (Gratiora tamen quae sua sponte nascuntur.)

TACITUS, Dial. de Oratoribus. Sec. 6. (c. A. D. 85)

3 "I wyll please, what so betide."
If thou wyllt please, lay truthe a syde.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Wysdom, p. 19. (c. 1450)

The art of pleasing is the art of deceiving. (L'art de plaire est l'art de tromper.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 329. (1746)

II—Pleasing Everyone

4 He had need rise betimes that would please everybody.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 34. (1639)
Cited by RAY, p. 132; FULLER, No. 1854.

He that all men will please will never find ease.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 282. (1639)

He must rise early, yea, not at all go to bed, who will have everyone's good word.

FULLER, Holy War. Bk. iv, ch. 14. (1639)

He that resolves not to go to bed till all the world is pleas'd, shall be troubled with a head-ach.

L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables, p. 325. (1692)

He must rise early that would please everybody.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 115.
(1875) The French form is, "Qui veut plaire à tout le monde doit se lever de bonne heure."

5 Ther may no man all men please.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-Place Book, p. 132.
(c. 1530)

Oh poore man, if thou hadst al the eyes of Argos, the handes of Briarius, the wisdom of Salomon, with the riches of Midas, . . . thou shalt neuer
please al men.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 77. (1578)

One can hardly please all men.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 45. (1633)

One cannot please all people.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 204. (1666)

The French say, "On ne peut à tous complaire."

6 He is very foolish who aims at pleasing all the world and his father. (Il est bien fou du cerveau qui prétend contenter tout le monde et son père.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iii, fab. 1. (1668) A paraphrase of the French proverb, "On ne peut contenter tout le monde et son père."

7 There is no one thing which pleases all; one man gathers thorns, another roses. (Non omnibus unum est quod placet: hic spinas colligit, ille rosas.)

PETRONIUS, Poems. Frag. 1, Loeb, p. 342. (c. A. D. 60)

The gray plover is so highly esteemed, that this proverb is raised of a curious and malcontented stomack: A gray plover cannot please him.

THOMAS MOUFET, Health's Improvement, p.
98. (1655) The Germans say, "No tree will suit the thief to be hanged on."

8 Who seeks to please all men each way,
And not himself offend,
He may begin his work to-day,
But God knows where he'll end.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, Epigrams. (a. 1630)

He that would please all and himself too, undertakes what he cannot do.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 5. (1659)

He pleases everyone but cannot please himself.
(Il plait à tout le monde et ne saurait se plaire.)

BOILEAU, Satires. Sat. ii. (1666) Referring to Molière.

He that would please all, and himself too,
Undertakes what none could ever do.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6384. (1732)

He that would please all, and himself too,
Takes more in hand than he is like to do.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

9 In great affairs, it is difficult to please all. (ἐν μεγάλαις πᾶσιν ἀδύην χαλεπόν.)

SOLON, Apothegm. (c. 575 B. C.) See PLUTARCH,
Lives: Solon. Ch. xxv, sec. 5.

To please al folk is ful hard.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 60. (c. 1430)

It is harde to content all menys myndis.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 93. (1519)

It is hard to please all parties. . . . Durum est omnibus placere.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 220. (1721)

10 Not even God can please all, whether he rains or does not rain. (οὐδὲ γὰρ ὁ Ζεὺς | οὔθ' ὕων πάντας ἀνδάνει οὔτ' ἀπέχων.)

THEOGNIS, Elegies. Eleg. xxvi. (c. 600 B. C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vii, 55, with the Latin, "Ne Iupiter quidem omnibus placet." PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum,
p. 124, gives the Greek in a shorter form, οὐδὲ Ζεὺς πᾶσιν ἀπέσκει (Not even God can please everybody), and HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 137, gives the Latin proverb in another form, "Frustra laborat qui omnibus placere studet" (He labors in vain who tries to please everybody).

Jupiter does not please all men, either when he sends rain or fair weather. (Iovem nec pluvium, nec serenum, placere omnibus.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: The Lover of Glory.
(1524) Quoting Theocritus.

Call to minde the old proverbe, that Jupiter himselpe pleaseth not all.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, i, 106. (1574)

Not God above gets all men's love. Jupiter neque pluens neque abstineus omnibus placet.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 267. (1721)

Charles M. Schwab is credited with saying,
"A man who trims himself to suit everybody will soon whittle himself away."

PLEASURE

See also Delight, Happiness, Joy

<sup>1</sup> I would rather be mad than pleasure-loving.
(μαλὲρ ἢ ἡσθεῖν.)

ANTISTHENES, Fragments. Frag. 28. (c. 400 B. C.) Quoted by AULUS GELLIIUS, ix, 5, DIOGENES LAERTIUS, vi, 3, and MONTAIGNE, ii, 2, who translates it: "J'ayme mieulx estre furieux que voluptueux." Montaigne compares it with the saying of Sextius, "I would rather be tormented with pain than sensuality" (J'ayme mieulx estre enfermé de la douleur que de la volupté).

<sup>2</sup> It is a common saying, one day of respite is worth a year [of endurance].

LORD BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux (E.E.T.S.), p. 128. (1533)

One day of Pleasure, is worth two of Sorrow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3766. (1732)

A day in such serene enjoyment spent
Is worth an age of splendid discontent.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, Greenland. (a. 1854)

<sup>3</sup> Consider not pleasures as they come, but as they go.

BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 339. (1855)

<sup>4</sup> I do not love so to make a toyle of a pleasure.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Dialogue of Pitte. (1603)

Make a toil of's pleasure.

JOHN CLEVELAND, Works, p. 267. (a. 1658)

I will not make a toil of a pleasure, quoth the good man, when he buried his wife.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 192. (1721)

<sup>5</sup> Mingle occasional pleasures with your care
That you with courage any task may bear.
(Interpone tuis interdum guadia curis, ut possis animo quemvis sufferre laborem.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iii, No. 6. (c. 175 B. C.)

'Tis sweet at the fitting time to cast serious thoughts aside. (Dulce est desipere in loco.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 12, l. 28. (c. 13 B. C.)

Pleasure in moderation relaxes and tempers the spirit. (Modica voluptas laxat animos et temperat.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 20. (c. A. D. 55)

A LITTLE NONSENSE NOW AND THEN, see under NONSENSE.

<sup>6</sup> Vice poisons pleasure, passion falsifies it, temperance sharpens it, innocence purifies it, beneficence doubles it, friendship multiplies it.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 372. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>7</sup> The expectation of pleasures hoped for is combined with the recollection of pleasures past. (Expectatio speratarum voluptatum cum perceptarum memoria iungeretur.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 33, sec. 96. (c. 45 B. C.) Schiller has, "Ein Vergnügen erwarten ist auch ein Vergnügen" (Awaiting a pleasure is also a pleasure).

Pleasure is said by her votaries to consist of the memory of the past, the enjoyment of the present, and the hope of future delights.

PHILO, De Simniis. Sec. 209. (c. A. D. 40) Philo refers several times to this Epicurean doctrine that present ills are mitigated by the remembrance of past pleasure. See also under REMEMBRANCE.

<sup>8</sup> Wit, be my faculty, and pleasure my occupation.

CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor, i, 1. (1693)

PLEASURE MY BUSINESS, see under BUSINESS.

<sup>9</sup> Though on pleasure she was bent,
She had a frugal mind.

WILLIAM COWPER, John Gilpin's Ride. (c. 1782)

On pleasure bent. Seeking pleasure; eager to enjoy, set on enjoying, oneself.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: On. (1941) Partridge refers to Cowper as the source of the phrase.

<sup>10</sup> I know not how to conceive the good, apart from the pleasures of taste, sexual pleasures, the pleasures of sound, and the pleasures of beautiful form.

EPICURUS, Apothegm. (c. 290 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 6.

They utter sounds devoid of sense. (Ait eos voce inani sonare.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. 15. (c. 45 B. C.)

Quoting Epicurus, and referring to those who do not include pleasure in their scheme of morality.

Pleasure is the only thing to live for. Nothing ages like happiness.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act ii. (1895)

<sup>11</sup> Pleasure is our first and kindred good. (ταύτην γὰρ ἀγαθὸν πρῶτον καὶ συγγενικὸν ἔγνωμεν.)

EPICURUS, Letter to Menoeceus. (c. 290 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 128.

By pleasure we mean the absence of pain in the body and of trouble in the soul. (ἀλλὰ τὸ μῆτε ἀλγεῖν κατὰ σῶμα μῆτε ταραττεσθαι κατὰ ψυχὴν.)

EPICURUS, Letter to Menoeceus. DIOGENES LAERTIUS, bk. x, sec. 131.

Pleasure is in itself a good, nay . . . the only good.

JEREMY BENTHAM, The Principles of Morals and Legislation. Ch. 10. (1789)

<sup>12</sup> Virtue is the one thing without which pleasure cannot be. (τῆς ἡδονῆς τὴν ἀρετὴν μόνην.)

EPICURUS, Apothegm. (c. 290 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 138.

To live a life of pleasure is impossible without living a life of virtue and justice. (οὐκ ἔστιν ἡδὲως ἀνευ τοῦ καλῶς καὶ δικαίως ζῆν.)

CASSIUS, Letter to Cicero. (45 B. C.) Citing the Epicurean dogma. See CICERO, Ad Familiares, xv, 19.

Pleasure is nought but virtue's gayer name.

YOUNG, Night-Thoughts. Nt. viii, l. 573. (1745)

1 Pleasure is not pleasure when it is joined to evil report and an evil conscience. (Voluptas non est voluptas quae cum mala fama, malaque conscientia coniuncta est.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Hedonius. (1524)

2 Who pleasure gives, shall joy receive.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Some sweet Employ for leisure minutes chuse,
And let your very Pleasures have their Use.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

3 Pleasure tasteth well after Service.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3887. (1732)

To overcome Pleasure, is the greatest Pleasure.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5213.

Let pleasure overcome thee and thou learnest to like it.

HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 259. (1869)

4 Many a fool feeds on pleasure. (Dist on encore: Maint fol paist d'uis.)

GARIN, Du Prestre Ki Abevele, l. 87. (c. 1250)

MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, iii, 57.

5 The last pleasure in life is the sense of discharging our duty.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 409. (1823)

6 A pleasure long expected, is dear enough sold.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 867. (1640)

Say to pleasure, Gentle Eve, I will none of your apple.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1138.

Wherever pleasure is to be sold, I am always a purchaser.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. Letter 54. (1760)

7 Folowe pleasure, and then will pleasure flee;
Flee pleasure, and pleasure will folow thee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Fly pleasures and they'll follow you.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738. Repeated in 1758.

Pleasure is very seldom found where it is sought.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 58. (1758)
See also under WOOLING.

8 He has won every vote who has blended profit and pleasure. (Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit utile dulci.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 343. (c. 20 B. C.)

The line is used as a motto on the title-page of PETTIE, Petite Pallace (1576) and of Greene's works after 1584.

Joyning (if it may be) pleasure with profite.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 248. (1574) Pettie, tr.

To your common profit & pleasure.

R. B. (BARNABE RICH?), Introduction to Pettie's Petite Pallace. (1576)

9 Love of pleasure is the disease which makes men most despicable.

LONGINUS, On the Sublime. Ch. 44 (c. 250)

No man is a hypocrite in his pleasures.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1784.

10 No pleasure after death. (Post mortem nulla voluptas.)

SIR DAVID LYNDESAY, The Monarche. (1552)

Quoted as part of the epitaph of Sardanapalus. An Epicurean maxim.

The grave's a fine and private place,
But none, I think, do there embrace.

ANDREW MARVELL, To His Coy Mistress. (a. 1678) See under GRAVE.

11 It is pietie to abstaine from pleasure.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 76. (1579)

12 It is my delight to give pleasure to a select few. (Me raris iuvat auribus placere.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ii, epig. 86. (A. D. 85)

The most delicious pleasure is to cause that of other people. (Le plaisir le plus délicat est de faire celui d'autre.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De l'Homme. (1688)

13 All things that live and see the self-same sun
That we behold, to pleasure are enslaved.

(ἀπανθ' ὅσα ἢ καὶ τὸν ἥλιον βλέπει τὸν κοινὸν ἡμῖν, δοῦλα ταῦτ' ἐσθ' ἡδονῆς.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 611. (c. 300 B. C.)

Everyone cares only for his own pleasure. (Curæ sua cuique voluptas.)

OVID, Artis Amatoria. Bk. i, l. 749. (c. 1 B. C.)

All the opinions of the world conclude that pleasure is our end. (Toutes les opinions du monde en sont là, que le plaisir est nostre but.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 19. (1580)

14 God made all pleasures innocent.

CAROLINE NORTON, The Lady of La Garaye. Pt. i. (1861)

15 The pleasure that is safest is the least valued. (Quæ venit ex tuto, minus est accepta voluptas.)

OVID, Artis Amatoria. Bk. iii, l. 603. (c. 1 B. C.)

FOR FORBIDDEN PLEASURE, see PROHIBITION.

16 This is a brief and not a true pleasure. (Brevis est hæc, et non vera voluptas.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xix, l. 65. (c. 10 B. C.)

The Latin proverb is, "Nil unquam longum est quod sine fine placet" (Nothing is ever long which gives endless pleasure).

The shortest pleasures are the sweetest.

FARQUHAR, Twin Rivals. Act iii, sc. 3. (1702)

17 Pleasure deferred is keenest. (Sustentata venus gratissima.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 405. (c. 1 B. C.)

It is rarity that gives zest to pleasures. (Voluptates commendat rarior usus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xi, l. 208. (c. A. D. 120)

18 To think of fear is not the way of pleasure. (Metum respicere non solet quicquid iuvat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 385. (c. 43 B. C.)

Miserable is pleasure where there is recollection of danger. (Misera est voluptas ubi pericli memoria est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 406.

Secret pleasure is rather fear than joy. (Voluptas tacita metus est mage quam gaudium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 720.

1 What pleasure results from what is won with difficulty! (Quod vix contingit ut voluptatem parit!)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 573. (c. 43 B. C.) The pleasure which is won with difficulty is the sweetest. (Voluptas e difficili data dulcissima est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 700.

The great pleasure in life is doing what people say you cannot do.

BAGEHOT, Literary Studies. Ch. 1. (1879)

2 If you want pleasure, you must work for it. (Yu ch'iu shêng k'uai 'huo, hsü hsia ssü kung fu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 23. (1875)

3 Your ladyship has one pleasure to come.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) Referring to reading a play called Love in a Hollow Tree.

You have an immense pleasure to come.

JAMES TOWNLEY, High Life Below Stairs. Act ii, sc. 1. (1759) Referring to the reading of Shakespeare.

Believe me, Colonel, you have an immense pleasure to come.

ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast. Act iv, sc. 1. (1787) Referring to a projected visit to Europe.

4 The human mind always runs downhill from toil to pleasure. (Hominum ab labore proclive ad lubidinem.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 78. (166 B. C.)

5 A man devoted to pleasure. (Homo voluptati obsequens.)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 459. (165 B. C.)

We that are great women of pleasure . . . join the sweet delight And the pretty excuse together.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act v, sc. 2. (1623)

A man of pleasure,

A kind of thing that's for itself too dear.

HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 30. (a. 1633)

He [Clarendon] had enemies at court, especially . . . the ladies of pleasure.

JOHN EVELYN, Diary, 27 Aug., 1667.

These men of Pleasure (ye very pest and ruine of all Courts).

EARL OF ESSEX, Essex Papers, i, 72. (1673)

In our Dialect a vicious Man is a Man of Pleasure.

BISHOP GEORGE BERKELEY, Alciphron. Pt. ii, sec. 3. (1732)

A Man of Pleasure is a Man of Pains.

YOUNG, Night-Thoughts. Nt. viii, l. 793. (1745)

6 When our pleasures have exhausted us, we think that we have exhausted pleasure. (Lorsque les plaisirs nous ont épuisés, nous croyons avoir épuisé les plaisirs.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 195. (1746)

The greatest mental faculty is capacity for pleasure. (La plus grande perfection de l'âme est d'être capable de plaisir.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 546.

7 His own special pleasure attracts each one. (Trahit sua quemque voluptas.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. ii, l. 65. (37 B. C.) The usual proverbial form is, "Sua cuique voluptas" (To everyone his own form of pleasure).

8 No civilized man ever regrets a pleasure.

OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 6. (1891)

9 Occupy thyself with pleasure daily.

UNKNOWN, Song of the Harper, l. 500. (c. 2350 B. C.) See under TIME: GATHER YE ROSEBUDS.

II—Pleasure: Its Penalties

See also Pain and Pleasure

10 There is nothing so hateful and so pernicious as pleasure, since, if indulged in too much and too long, it turns the light of the soul into utter darkness. (Quocirca nihil esse tam detestabile tamque pestiferum quam voluptatem. si quidem ea, cum maior esset atque longior, omne animi lumen exstingeret.)

ARCHYTAS OF TARENTUM. As quoted by CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xii, sec. 41. (c. 400 B. C.)

In everything satiety closely follows the greatest pleasures. (Omnibus in rebus voluptatibus maximis fastidium finitimum est.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. iii, sec. 25. (55 B. C.)

Pleasure that comes too thick, grows fulsome.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3788. (1732)

But not even pleasure to excess is good:

What most elates then sinks the soul as low.

JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence. Canto i, st. 63. (1748)

Pleasure is to women what the sun is to the flower; if moderately enjoyed, it beautifies, it refreshes, and it improves; if immoderately, it withers, etiolates, and destroys.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 135. (1820)

When pleasure is the business of life, it ceases to be pleasure.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 10. (1843)

11 All pleasure hath this property,
She woundeth those who have her most,
And, like unto the angry bee,
Who hath her pleasant honey lost,
She flies away with nimble wing,
And in our hearts doth leave her sting.
(Habet hoc voluptas omnis,

Stimulis agit fruentes

Apiumque par volantum

Ubi grata mella fudit,

Fugit et nimis tenaci

Ferit icta corda morsu.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. iii, metre 7. (A. D. 524)

All the instances of pleasure have a sting in the tail.

JEREMY TAYLOR, Holy Living. Ch. 2, sec. 1. (1650)

To think o' th' sting that's in the tail of pleasure.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, The Old Batchelor: Epilogue. (1692)

You know the old saying, Pleasure has a sting in its tail.

THOMAS BROWN, Works (1760), i, 313. (1704)

There is rank Poison in the Tail of all unlawful Pleasures.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 207.

(1709) The Latin proverb is, "In cauda venenum" (The poison is in the tail); the French say, "En la queue gist le venin" (In the tail lies the poison), a proverb dating from c. 1400. The Italian form is the same, "Nella coda sta il veleno." See also under EPIGRAM.

Pleasure seems sweet, but proves a glass of bitters.

DAVID GARRICK, She Stoops to Conquer: Epilogue. (1773)

1 Never pleasure without repentance.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 329. (1605) Cited by Clarke and Ray.

2 Oft ill diseases spring from trivial pleasure. (Morbi causa mali minima est quaecumque voluptas.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 24. (c. 175 B. C.)

3 Pleasure is an inciter to vileness. (Voluptas est inlecebra turpitudinis.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. i, ch. 11, sec. 31. (c. 46 B. C.)

Pleasure has no fellowship with virtue. (Voluptas . . . nec habet ullum cum virtute commercium.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xii, sec. 42. (44 B. C.)

Elsewhere Cicero says, "Maximas virtutes iacere omnes necessa est, voluptate dominante" (All the chief virtues must be neglected where pleasure is lord). He is speaking of carnal pleasures.

I see pleasure the very pathway to perdition.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 269. (1576)

Pleasure is labour too, and tires as much.

COWPER, Hope, l. 20. (1781)

4 From pleasure comes grief, from pleasure comes fear; he who is free from pleasure neither sorrows nor fears.

DHAMMAPALA, Commentaries. Verse 212. (c. 475)

5 Flee that present pleasure, that bringeth afterward sorrow.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

Fly the present joy Which in time will breed annoy.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 99. (1591)

Flee all present pleasure that gives the future payne.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 277. (1623)

Fly that pleasure which paineth afterward.

Book of Meery Riddles, p. 97. (1629)

Fly the pleasure that bites tomorrow.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 446. (1640)

6 Grief often treads upon the heels of pleasure.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734. The Latin proverb is, "Voluptati moeror sequitur" (Upon pleasure sorrow follows).

Many a Man thinks he is buying Pleasure, when he is really selling himself a Slave to it.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

A life of pleasure is therefore the most unpleasing life in the world.

GOLDSMITH, Citizen of the World. No. 44. (1760)

7 Like unto the flie which flieth about the candle, with pleasure, you purchase your death.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 18. (1574) Pettie, tr.

8 It is better to drink of deep griefs than to taste shallow pleasures.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 406.

9 The pleasures of sin. (ἀμαρτίας ἀπόλαυσις.)

New Testament: Hebrews, xi, 25. (c. A. D. 90)

The Vulgate is, "Peccati iucunditatem."

Pleasure's a sin, and sometimes sin's a pleasure.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 133. (1818)

10 There is no pleasure unalloyed. (Usque adeo nulla est sincera voluptas.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. vii, l. 453. (A. D. 7)

See PAIN AND PLEASURE.

11 Pleasures are transient. (αἱ μὲν ἡδοναὶ φθαρταί.)

PERIANDER, Apothegm. (c. 600 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Periander. Bk. i, sec. 97.

Pleasures have mutable faces.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. ii, sec. 1. (1682)

But pleasures are like poppies spread:

You seize the flow'r, its bloom is shed;

Or like the snow falls in the river,

A moment white—then melts for ever.

ROBERT BURNS, Tam o' Shanter, l. 59. (1791)

12 The bait of sin. (κακοὶ δέλεαρ.)

PLATO, Timæus. Sec. 69D. (c. 370 B. C.) Referring to pleasure.

Pleasure is the bait of evil; for by it men are caught no less than fish with a hook. (Voluptas est malorum esca; quo ea non minus homines quam hamo capiuntur pisces.)

PLAUTUS. Paraphrasing Plato. (c. 200 B. C.)

Plato happily calls pleasure "the bait of sin," evidently because men are caught therewith like fish. (Divine Plato "escam malorum" appellat voluptatem quod ea videlicet homines capiuntur ut pisces.)

CICERO, De Senectute. Ch. xiii, sec. 44. (44 B. C.)

Do not bite at the bait of pleasure till you know there is no hook beneath it.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Maria Cosway, 26 Oct., (1786)

1 He that loveth pleasure shall be a poor man. (Qui diligit epulas, in egestate erit.)

2 Old Testament: Proverbs, xxi, 17. (c. 350 B. C.)

All pleasure harms whomso it charms. (Omnis voluptas quemcumque arrisit nocet.)

3 PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 483. (c. 43 B. C.)

Our pleasures are shallow, our troubles deep. (So lê chê ch'ien, so 'huan chê shên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 781. (1875) See also JOY AND SORROW.

4 Pleasure will be paid, one time or another. SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 4, 72. (1599)

5 Schort lykyng sal be longe bought. UNKNOWN, Coventry Mysteries (Shaks. Soc.), p. 32. (1468)

As a man woulde saye: for a lytle pleasure, longe payne.

GEORGE COLVILLE, tr., Boethius (1897), p. 66. (1556)

For a short pleasure, long remembrance. RANDIE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Plaisir. (1611)

Short pleasure long lament. De court plaisir long repentir.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 142. (1670)

Short Pleasures, long Pains. THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4155. (1732)

NO PLEASURE WITHOUT PAIN, see PAIN AND PLEASURE.

PLENTY

6 The plenty of things dooth ingender care.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 32. (1578) See also under POSSESSIONS.

Plentie, as the manner is, soone caused loathing. PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Livy, iii, i, 88. (1600)

Plenty breeds pride.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 33. (1639)

From the Latin proverb, "Ubi uber, ibi tuber" (Where there is plenty there is swelling).

7 A beggar in the midst of plenty. (Magnas inter opes inops.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 16, l. 28. (23 B. C.)

Plenty has made me poor. (Inopem me copia fecit.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. iii, l. 466. (A. D. 7)

Whose welth was want, whose plenty made him pore.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. i, canto iv, st. 29. (1590)

With much we surfeit, plenty makes us poor.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, The Legend of Matilda the Fair. (c. 1605)

Forced now to surfeit on her store, She prou'd this true: Much plentie made her poore.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Natures Embassie (1877), p. 269. (1621)

He that needs five thousand pound to live, Is full as poor as he that needs but five.

HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 18. (1633)

Plenty begetteth want; for he that hath much needs much.

NICHOLAS LING, Politeuphuia, p. 130. (1669)

8 Ther sholde be plente and pees perpetuel for euere.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text C, passus xviii, l. 93. (1377)

To regne in pees, plente, and plesaunce.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems (Percy Soc.), 6. (c. 1430)

Plenty is the child of peace.

WILLIAM PRYNNE, Histrion-Mastix. Act i, sc. 1. (1633)

9 Experience wole weel schewe that plente is no deinte.

REGINALD PECOCK, The Repressor of Over Much Blaming of the Clergy, p. 184. (c. 1449)

Plente is no deintie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 190. (1678)

1 I will not be daintie. . . Such guests as I be plentie.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. Q2. (1583)

Plenty makes dainty.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 190. (1678)

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 281. (1721)

SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 5. (1869)

'Tis Plenty that makes you dainty.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6375. (1732)

There is a variant, "Let not plenty make you dainty."

Too much Plenty makes Mouths dainty.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749. The Italians say, "Abbondanza genera fastidio" (Abundance generates fastidiousness).

10 As plentiful as blackberries.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 265. (1597)

Money is as plenty as blackberries.

C. A. DAVIS, Letters of J. Downing. (1834)

Constables are as thick as blackberries.

J. C. NEAL, Charcoal Sketches, p. 192. (1837)

Constitutions plentiful as blackberries.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero-Worship. Ch. 5. (1841)

Earthworks were as common as blackberries.

HARDY, Mayor of Casterbridge. Ch. 16. (1886)

11 The Goddess [Demeter] hath filled their threshing-floor in plenteous measure. (πλοῦς μέτρον.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. vii, l. 33. (c. 270 B. C.)

Golden Plenty from full horn has poured her fruits upon Italy. (Aurea fruges Italiae pleno defudit Copia cornu.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. xii, l. 29. (20 B. C.)

The horn of plenty. (La corne d'abondance.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 14. (1545)

12 Plenty never wrings its master by the ear.

UNKNOWN, Berkeley MSS, iii, 31. (1639)

Plenty is nae plague.

ALFRED HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 85. (1832) There is a variant, "Plenty is no fault," and the French say, "Ce qui abonde ne vicié pas" (Abundance of a thing does no harm).

PLOT

<sup>1</sup>
Plot me no plots.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act ii, sc. 5. (1609)

<sup>2</sup>
He hadde more tow on his distaf
Than Gerveys knew.

CHAUCER, The Miller's Tale, l. 588. (c. 1386)

<sup>3</sup>
Machination ceases.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, v, 1, 46. (1605)

<sup>4</sup>
Ay, now the plot thickens very much upon us.

GEORGE VILLIERS, DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM, The Rehearsal. Act iii, sc. 2. (1672) SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Letter 10. (1824) DOYLE, A Study in Scarlet. Pt. i, ch. 7. (1887) MICHAEL INNES, Comedy of Terrors, p. 155. (1940)

The plot thickens like a purée.

ELLERY QUEEN, The French Powder Mystery. Ch. 17. (1930)

The plot or action becomes more complex or intense. Villiers uses it literally of a dramatic plot.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

PLOUGH

<sup>5</sup>
Plough it also longwise, and still you will find that to engage in commerce is more profitable.

Babylonian Talmud: Jebamoth, fo. 63a. (c. 450) A Rabbi of the second century gave it as his opinion that there is no worse occupation than farming, and on seeing a field ploughed across its breadth, made the observation quoted above.

He that counts a' costs will ne'er put plough i' the yerd [earth].

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 239. (1678)

<sup>6</sup>
To plough the headlands before the butts.

CHARLOTTE BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 597. (1883) To begin at the wrong end.

<sup>7</sup>
The plough goes not well if the ploughman hold it not.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 92. (1639) Cited by RAY, p. 132; FULLER, No. 4710.

He that by the plow would thrive
Himself must either hold or drive.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 191. (1678) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

<sup>8</sup>
The plough that a dog drawes is not worth the driving.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Charrue. (1611)

I have seen a friendly dame, winding a ravelled skain of thread or yarn, exclaim with a curse, "This is as bad as ploughing with dogs."

Gentleman's Magazine, l. 299. (1795)

I might as well plough with dogs.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 79. (1917)

<sup>9</sup>
Plough, or not plough, you must pay your rent.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 1. (1846)

<sup>10</sup>
Thou shalt not plow with an ox and an ass together. (Non arabis in bove simul et asino.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxii, 10. (c. 650 B. C.)

To plough with the ass and the ox. i. e. To sort things ill.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 212. (1813)

<sup>11</sup>
If the plow cannot reach it, then the harrow can. (Li pu chao pa yeh chao.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 183. (1872)

<sup>12</sup>
How can he get wisdom that holdeth the plow? (Qua sapientia replebitur qui tenet aratrum?)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxviii, 25. (190 B. C.)

<sup>13</sup>
An innocent plowman is more worthy than a vicious prince.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734. Franklin also has, "A ploughman on his legs is higher than a gentleman on his knees."

<sup>14</sup>
Better have one Plough going than two Cradles.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 905. (1732)

<sup>15</sup>
If your plow be jogging, you may have meat for your horses.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659) Keep thy Plough jogging, so shalt thou have Corn for thy Horses.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3119. (1732)

<sup>16</sup>
To plow is to pray—to plant is to prophesy, and the harvest answers and fulfills.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Farming in Illinois. (1877)

<sup>17</sup>
If ye had not ploughed with my heifer, ye had not found out my riddle. (Si non arassetis in vitula mea, non invenissetis propositionem meam.)

Old Testament: Judges, xiv, 18. (c. 700 B. C.)

If I had had no Plough, you had had no Corn.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2684. (1732)

There is a similar Hebrew proverb, "If I had not lifted up the stone, you had not found the jewel."

<sup>18</sup>
Let us seek bread with the plough. (Panem quaeramus aratro.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 181. (c. A. D. 120)

Plow deep, thou shalt have bread enough.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs; Span.-Eng., p. 8. (1659)

Plough deep, while sluggards sleep, and you shall have corn to sell and to keep.

FRANKLIN, The Way to Wealth. (1736) DENHAM AND GLYDE give it, "While others sleep."

<sup>1</sup> And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God. (ἐπιβαλὼν τὴν χεῖρα ἐπ' ἄστρον.)

New Testament: Luke, ix, 62. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Mittens manum suam ad aratrum."

Quhen he had put hand to the pluiche, to receiue yairof profitte and gude fructe.

JAMES DALRYMPLE, tr., Historie of Scotland, iv, 253. (1596)

It was Time to set his Hand to the Plough in good Earnest.

HICKES AND NELSON, Life of John Kettlewell. Bk. i, ch. 23. (1718)

He had put his hand to the plow, and he was not the man to turn back.

MRS. LYNN LINTON, Paston Carew. Ch. 25. (1886)

How painful it is to me to take my hand from any plough to which I have laid it.

EDGAR JEPSON, Keep Murder Quiet, p. 52. (1940)

To put (or set) one's hand to the plough. To undertake something difficult or long to do. Mainly in allusion to Luke ix, 62.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> Follow the Plough.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 113. (1579)

<sup>3</sup> Moche uolk of religion zetteth the zuolg beuore the oksen.

DAN MICHEL, Ayenbite of Inwyt, p. 243. (1340)

He would set the cart before the oxen, and scratch where it did not itch. (Mettoy la charrette deuant les beufz, se grattoyt ou ne luy demangeoyt point.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534)

That makis . . . The plewche befor the oxin go.

UNKNOWN, Satirical Poems of the Time of the Reformation, xxix, 9. (1571)

<sup>4</sup> To plough the sea-shore. (Litus arare.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. iv, l. 48. (c. A. D. 9) To engage in fruitless labor.

To hoe a rock. (Sarrire saxum.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams, iii, 93. (c. A. D. 85)

We poets stick to our task; we go on drawing furrows in the thin soil, and turning up the shore with unprofitable plough. (Nos tamen hoc agimus tenuie in pulvere sulcos | ducimus et litus sterili versamus arato.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 48. (c. A. D. 120)

Stapylton's rendering is, "Yet still we plow the shoare and sow the sand."

I plough the barren rocks, and set my share into the shoare of the Sea.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 218. (1576)

With sweating browes I long haue plowde the sands. . . .

Report hath sent me home with emptie hands.

ROBERT GREENE, Never Too Late. (1590)

I had as soon plow the Sands, or till the air.

JEREMY TAYLOR, The Liberty of Prophesying: Epistle Dedicatory. (1647)

I preached at Dorking. But still I fear we are ploughing upon the sand: we see no fruit of our labours.

JOHN WESLEY, Journal, 15 Nov., 1775.

Our labour . . . is as certain to be thrown away as if you were to plough the sands of the seashore.

HERBERT ASQUITH, Speech, 21 Nov., 1894.

<sup>5</sup> Let the plough stand to catch a mouse. Guardar nel lucignolo e non nell olio.—Ital.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 175. (1678)

Let na the plough stand to slay a mouse.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 265. (1678)

Never let the plough stand to slay a mouse.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 5. (1710) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs,

p. 234, with the comment, "To wit, that we be not taken off from our proper business, by every obvious divertisement."

Don't stop the plough to catch a mouse.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 50. (1917)

<sup>6</sup> There belongs more than whistling to going to plough.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 191. (1678)

There belongs more than whistling to a Plowman.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4866. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> A man must plough with such oxen as he hath.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 191. (1678)

You must plough with such Oxen as you have.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5968. (1732)

You know we are obliged to plough with such cattle as we have found for us.

SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 1. (1869)

<sup>8</sup> I must plough my furrow alone.

EARL OF ROSEBERRY, Speech, City of London Liberal Club, 19 July, 1901. From which the proverbial "lonely furrow."

She always ploughed a straight furrow right to the end.

ETHEL WHITE, The Wheel Spins. Ch. 3. (1936)

<sup>9</sup> Where the plough shall fail to go,

There the weeds will surely grow.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 146. (1880)

<sup>10</sup> God sped the plowghe.

UNKNOWN, Paston Letters, iii, 50. (1472)

I pray to God, spede wele the plough.

UNKNOWN, Spede the Plough, p. 8. (c. 1500)

Yf we do not wel, God spede the plow!

BOORDE, Dyetary of Helth: Intro. (1542)

God speed the Plow, thou shalt not speed me.

THOMAS DEKKER, Honest Whore. Sc. 12. (1602)

God speed the plough, plague rooks and crows, And send us years more cheap.

Harleian Miscellany, ii, 503. (1661)

Speed the plough! If I can make no sport, I'll hinder none.

DRYDEN, Wild Gallant. Act iii, sc. 1. (1669)

"God speed the plough" does not mean "God hasten the plough," but "God prosper the plough."

W. W. SKEAT, A Student's Pastime, p. 79.

(1896) In its later use, "Speed the plough" seems to have been little more than an expletive phrase, meaning "Good luck to you."

POCKET

<sup>1</sup> He had a pautner with purses manyfold
And surely lined with silver and with golde.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Cytizen and Uplondyshman (Percy Soc.), lxi. (c. 1514)

When they have lin'd their coats [they]
Do themselves homage.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 1, 53. (1605)

Such change would line our breeches.

WILLIAM BOWMAN, Sermons. Ser. 29. (1731)

"To line one's pockets" is the modern phrase.

<sup>2</sup> If it were not for the holes in the pocket, we should all be rich. A pocket is like a cistern, a small leak at the bottom is worse than a large pump at the top.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 75. (1887)

<sup>3</sup> Pocket: The cradle of motive and the grave of conscience.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

<sup>4</sup> Put no more in the pocket than it will hold.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 11. (1639)

<sup>5</sup> [They] were touched in their pockets, and it filled them with fury.

F. C. FARRAR, Life of St. Paul, i, 492. (1879)

<sup>6</sup> [He] sat in her pocket all the evening.

LADY GRANVILLE, Letters, i, 42. (1812) Close to; in close attendance upon.

He sits in her pocket every evening.

W. H. MALLOCK, A Romance of the Nineteenth Century. Bk. iv, ch. 3. (1881)

<sup>7</sup> [He] was content to pockette vppe this Dishonour to saue his life.

ROBERT GREENE, Spanish Masquerado. (1589)
Works (Grosart), v, 273. To pocket a wrong or injury: to accept it without protest or showing resentment.

I will not pocket this injurious wrong.

ANTHONY MUNDAY, John a Kent, p. 28. (1595)

Well, ruffian, I must pocket up these wrongs.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iii, 1, 200. (1596)

You will not pocket up wrong.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 3, 183. (1597)

It is plain pocketing up of wrongs.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iii, 2, 54. (1599)

If he . . . pocket a wrong, and hold his hands, he is a coward.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Guzman de Alfarache, i,
214. (1622)

To pocket up one wrong, is to allure another.

DANIEL TUVIL, Vade Mecum, p. 184. (1638)

I thought it best to pocket the insult.

RICHARD GRAVES, The Spiritual Quixote. Bk. vi,
ch. 13. (1772)

<sup>8</sup> The bravest man sacrifices nothing by pocketing a little wrong which he cannot personally resent.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 23. (1826)

I put my pride in my pocket.

W. E. NORRIS, Adrian Vidal. Ch. 42. (1885)

<sup>9</sup>

They are above a hundred crowns in pocket.
SMOLLETT, tr., Don Quixote, iv, 143. (1755)

I'm a little out of pocket.

CONGREVE, Old Batchelor. Act ii, sc. 1. (1693)

POET

<sup>10</sup>

Swans sing before they die—'twere no bad thing

Did certain persons die before they sing.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Epigram. (a. 1834)

<sup>11</sup>

Can poets soothe you when you pine for bread?

GEORGE CRABBE, The Village. Pt. i. (1783)

<sup>12</sup>

Poets, the first instructors of mankind.

WENTWORTH DILLON, tr., De Arte Poetica, l.
449. (1680)

<sup>13</sup>

But since the world with writing is possest.

I'll versify in spite; and do my best

To make as much waste-paper as the rest.

DRYDEN, tr., Juvenal's Satires. Sat. i, l. 23. (1693)

What are our poets, take them as they fall? . . .

They are the mere wastepaper of mankind.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Paper. (a. 1790) Quoted by EASTMAN, Enjoyment of Poetry, p. 164.

<sup>14</sup>

All men are poets at heart.

R. W. EMERSON, Literary Ethics. (1836)

Every man will be a poet if he can.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 11 April, 1852.

<sup>15</sup>

Never poetics unless I've rheumatics. (Numquam poetor nisi si podager.)

ENNIUS, Satires. Frag. 21, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)

There is a legend that Ennius was at his best when he was drunk or had the gout.

<sup>16</sup>

He's a Blockhead, that can't make two Verses; and he's a Fool that makes four.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2433. (1732)

<sup>17</sup>

[They] playe the part of a Poet: and by the feigning of woordes, shewe the little plaine dealing that is in them.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i,
p. 124. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The truest poetry is the most feigning.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 3, 19. (1600)

A poet is that which by the Greeks is called κατ' ἐροχῆν, ὁ ποιητής, a maker, or a feigner:
. . . from the word ποιεῖν, which signifies to make, or feign. Hence he is called a poet.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Poeta. (1616)

<sup>18</sup>

Beggar is jealous of beggar and poet of poet.
(καὶ πτωχὸς πτωχῷ φθονεῖ καὶ δοιδὸς δοιδῷ.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 26. (c. 800 B. C.)

δοιδός: a singer, a minstrel, a bard.

Poets, like whores, are only hated by each other.

WYCHERLEY, The Country-Wife. Act iii. (1675)

Poets are sultans, if they had their will,

For every author would his brother kill.

ROOZER B. ORRERY, Prologues. (c. 1669)

[Envy] reigns more among bad poets than among any other set of men.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator, 20 Dec., 1711.
No author ever spar'd a brother;
Wits are gamecocks to one another.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Elephant and the Bookseller, l. 74. (1727)

Every poet in his kind

Is bit by him that comes behind.

SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 341. (1733)

The most envious man I ever heard of is a poet.

BYRON, Letter to John Murray, 7 Feb., 1821.

It is a lie that poets are envious.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Bernard Barton, 6 March, 1823.

1 Poets one and all cannot brook the toil and tedium of the file. (Non offenderet unum | quemque poetarum lima labor et mora.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 291. (c. 20 B. C.)

Polished by the file. (Lima rasa.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, No. 2. (A. D. 93)

2 He who cannot play a game, shuns the weapons of the Campus; if unskilled in ball or quoit or hoop, he stays aloof, lest the crowded circle burst into righteous laughter; yet the man who knows nothing about it dares to frame verses. (Qui nescit versus tamen audet fingere.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 379. (c. 20 B. C.)

A man who knows nothing of a ship fears to handle one; doctors undertake a doctor's work; carpenters handle carpenters' tools; but, skilled or unskilled, we scribble poetry all alike. (Scribimus indocti doctique poemata passim.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, No. i, l. 114. (20 B. C.)

3 The irritable tribe of poets. (Genus irritabile vatum.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 102. (20 B. C.)

4 A humble bard, I fashion laborious songs. (Operosa parvus carmina fingo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 2, l. 51. (23 B. C.)

Of all workers, the poet is most in love with his work. (De tous ouvriers, le poète est nommé le plus amoureux de son ouvrage.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1580) Quoting Aristotle.

The Poet, of all sorts of Artificers, is the fondest of his Works.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4711. (1732)

5 All these fear verses and detest poets. (Omnes hi metuunt versus, odere poetas.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 33. (35 B. C.)

Nobody loves a poet.

IRVING BABBITT, Rousseau and Romanticism (1919)

6 The poet remains, dismember him as you will. (Invenias etiam disiecta membra poetæ.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 62. (35 B. C.)

The fame which song brings lasts forever. (Carmina quam tribuent, fama perennis erit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 10, l. 62. (c. 13 B. C.)

Song is untouched by death. (Carmina morte carent.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 15, l. 31.

The poet's work endures. (Durat opus vatum.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 9, l. 29.

Poetry does not die. (La poesia non muore.)

BERNARDO ZENDRINI, Apothegm. (c. 1710)

Poets alone are sure of immortality.

LORD LYTTON, Caxtoniana. Essay 27. (1863)

7

The man is mad, or else he's writing verses.

(Aut insanit homo aut versus facit.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 7, l. 117. (35 B. C.)

Spoken by Davus, Horace's slave.

All poets are mad.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

8

Euery man, that writes in verse, is not a poet.

BEN JONSON, The Silent Woman. Act ii, sc. 3. (1609)

9

It costs less to keep a lion than a poet; the poet's belly is more capacious. (Constat leviori belua sumptu | nimirum et capiunt plus intestina poetæ.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 77. (c. A. D. 120)

The proverb, "Equi et poetæ alendi, non saginandi" (Horses and poets are to be fed, but not fattened), has been attributed to Charles IX, of France, but he was probably merely quoting it.

10

A poetical tempest arises. (Poetica surgit tempestas.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 24. (c. A. D. 120)

11

He does not write whose verses no one reads. (Non scribit, cuius carmina nemo legit.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, ep. 9, l. 2. (c. A. D. 90)

Nothing is safer than a bad poet. (Nil securius est malo poeta.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, epig. 63. (A. D. 103)

Because his poems are not worth stealing.

For there's no second-rate in poetry.

JOHN OLDHAM, An Ode on St. Cecilia's Day. (a. 1683)

12

My unpremeditated verse.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 24. (1667)

His unpremeditated strain.

JAMES THOMSON, The Castle of Indolence.

Canto i, st. 68. (1748)

The unpremeditated lay.

WALTER SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel: Introduction, l. 18. (1805)

Pour'd forth this unpremeditated lay.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 84. (1812)

13

Those who err follow the poets.

MOHAMMED, The Koran. Ch. 26. (c. 625) The Oriental belief being that poets are prompted by devils, with such scraps of angels' conversation as they are able to overhear.

14

I am the poet of the poor. (Pauperibus vates ego sum.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 165. (c. 1 B. C.)

Wherefore to colliers, carters and cokes,
To Jack and Tom my rime shall be directed.

SIR DAVID LYNDESAY, Ane Dialog betuix Experience and ane Courtseous. (1554)

1 Poets were once the care of chieftains and of kings. (Cura ducum fuerant olim: regumque poetarum.)

2 OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 405. (c. 1 B. C.)

All the great epic poets utter those fine poems not from art, but as inspired and possessed. (πάντες γὰρ οἱ τε τῶν ἐπῶν ποιηταὶ οἱ ἀγαθοὶ οὐκ ἐκ τέχνης ἀλλ' ἐνθεοὶ ὄντες καὶ κατεχόμενοι.)

PLATO, Ion. Sec. 534E. (c. 385 B. C.)
From celestial places comes our inspiration. (Sedibus aetheriis spiritus ille venit.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 550. (c. 1 B. C.)
The inexorable rule in the Muse's court, either inspiration or silence.

EMERSON, Poetry and Imagination. (1875)

3 The flower of poets. (Flos poetarum.)

PLAUTUS, Casina: Prologue, l. 18. (c. 200 B. C.)

4 Yes, every poet is a fool:

By demonstration Ned can show it:

Happy, could Ned's inverted rule

Prove every fool to be a poet.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Epigram. (1718)

Sir, I admit your general rule,

That every poet is a fool,

But you yourself may serve to show it,

That every fool is not a poet.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Epigram. (a. 1834)

He is a poet, which I take to be only one remove from a fool.

E. A. POE, The Purloined Letter. (1841)

5 The poet's eye, in a fine frenzy rolling,
Doth glance from heaven to earth, from earth to heaven.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v, 1, 12. (1596) "Furor poeticus" (The frenzy of the poet) is the Latin proverbial phrase.

6 "Till Block-heads blame, and Judges praise.
The Poet cannot claim his Bays.

SWIFT, To Doctor Delany, l. 167. (1730)

Neverout: What! I see you are a poet.

Miss: Yes, if I had but the wit to show it.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

7 Poets that lasting marble seek

Must come in Latin or in Greek.

EDMUND WALLER, Of English Verse. (a. 1687)

II—Poets Are Born Not Made

8 Each year new consuls and proconsuls are made; but not every year is a king or a poet born. (Consules fiunt quotannis et novi proconsules; | solus aut rex aut poeta non quotannis nascitur.)

LUCIUS ANNAEUS FLORUS, De Qualitate Vitae.

Frag. 8. (c. A. D. 100) Whence, perhaps, the proverb, "Poeta nascitur, non fit" (A poet is born and not made), but its origin is uncertain. Cicero is credited with "Nascimus poetae, fimus oratores" (We are born poets, and are made orators), and a similar proverb, "Nemo nascitur artifex" (Nobody is born an artificer), is cited by Erasmus. The Italians say, "Nessuno nasce maestro" (Nobody is born a master).

Therefore is it an old proverbe, Orator fit, Poeta nascitur. [The orator is made, the poet born.]

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, An Apologie for Poetrie (Arber), p. 62. (c. 1581)

Poets are born, but orators are made.

JOHN BODENHAM, Belvedere, p. 55. (1600)
According to the true belief, a poet is born one: that is to say a poet by nature comes forth a poet from his mother's womb. (Según es opinión verdadera, el poeta nace: quieren decir que del vientre de su madre el poeta natural sale poeta.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 16. (1615)
It is impossible to devise any scheme of education . . . for promoting the development of poetical genius. . . . Poeta nascitur, non fit.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth, p. 194. (1827)

A walker is born, not made. (Ambulator nascitur, non fit.)

H. D. THOREAU, Walking. (1851) Dr. F. S. Billings, the American pathologist, said, "Children are born and not made," taking the side of heredity against environment.

9 Every one is not born a poet.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1659)
Every Reed will not make a Pipe.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1457. (1732)

10 A good poet's made as well as born.

BEN JONSON, To the Memory of Shakespeare. (1616)

III—Poets and Poverty

11 An eager meagre servant of the Muses. (Μουσάων θεράπων ὀρεγνός.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Birds, l. 909. (414 B. C.)

He that lives with the Muses, shall die in the Straw.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2223. (1732)

12 A Cure for Poetry:—Seven wealthy towns contend for Homer dead,

Through which the living Homer begged his bread.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1739.

13 Parnassus has no Gold-Mines in it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3844. (1732)

14 Barefaced poverty drove me to writing verses. (Paupertas impluit audax ut versus facerem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. ii, l. 51. (c. 15 B. C.) Pliny the Younger quotes a proverbial phrase referring to poets, "Ut solent poetae" (As is usual with poets), i. e. poverty.

1 Indignation makes poetry (Facit indignatio versum.)

-- JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 79. (c. A. D. 120)
Usually quoted, "Facit indignatio versus," verses.

How can Poverty grasp the thyrsus when it is short of cash? (Thyrsusque potest contingere maesta | paupertas atque aeris inops?)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. vii, l. 60. (c. A. D. 120)
Cold and hunger never yet
Co'd a noble verse beget.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. (1648)

2 Poverty, otherwise called Suffering, mother of the nine Muses. (Penie, aultrement-dicte Souffreté, mere des neuf Muses.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 57. (1548)

Poverty is the muses' patrimony.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. iii, subs. 15. (1621)

3 Poets are the only poor fellows in the world whom anybody will flatter.

POPE, Letter to Wm. Trumbull, 12 March, 1713.

4 Having no candle to see to write his verses. (Non avendo cendele per iscrivere i suoi versi.)

TORQUATO TASSO, alluding to his distress, and entreating his cat to assist him, during the night, with the luster of her eyes. (c. 1580)
See D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Poverty of the Learned.

5 The poet is he who has fat enough, like bears and marmots, to suck his claws all winter.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Sunday. (1849)

IV—They Had No Poet and They Died

6 O fortunate youth, to have found in Homer the herald of thy valor! (O fortunate adolescens, qui tuæ virtutis Homerum praeconem inveneris!)

ALEXANDER THE GREAT, at the tomb of Achilles. (c. 331 B. C.) See CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta. Ch. x, sec. 24.

7 Many heroes lived before Agamemnon; but they are overwhelmed in unending night, unwept, unknown, because they lacked a sacred bard. (Vixere fortes ante Agamemnona | multi; sed omnes inlacrimabiles | urgentur ignotique longa | nocte, carent quia vate sacro.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 25. (23 B. C.)

Writings bear the years with them; by writings you know Agamemnon, and who it was that fought against him or beside him. (Scripta ferunt annos; scriptis Agamemnona nosti, | et quisquis contra, vel simul arma tulit.)

OID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 8, l. 51. (A. D. 13)
Forgot had been the thrice three worthies names,
If thrice three Muses had not writ their fames.

JOHN TAYLOR, A Kicksey Winsey. (1619)

Vain was the Chief's, the Sage's pride!

They had no Poet, and they died.

In vain they schemed, in vain they bled!

They had no Poet, and are dead.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Odes. Bk. iv, ode 9, l. 13. (c. 1735)

To all the starry host of Heaven they cried,
But had no radio and of course they died.

SAMUEL HOFFENSTEIN, Hymn to Science. (1928)

8 'Tis meet for the great to be hymned in fairest song, for every noble deed dieth if suppressed in silence. (πρέπει δ' ἐσλοῖσιν ὑμνεῖσθαι . . . καλλίσταις ἀοδαῖς . . . θνήσκει δὲ σιγαθὲν καλὸν ἔργον.)

PINDAR, Alexandro Amynta. Frag. 86. (c. 480 B. C.) See PINDAR, p. 580 in Loeb Classical Library.

How many men, most famous while they lived, are utterly forgotten for want of writers! (Quam multos clarissimos suis temporibus viros scriptorum inops deleuit oblivio!)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. ii, prosa 7. (c. A. D. 520)

9 To the man who made you famous give the credit for what you are. (Per quem sis clarus illi quod sis imputes.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 551. (c. 43 B. C.)
Howe should Alexander the great be so famous, if Q. Curtius had not written of hym? what were Vlisses & Achilles if Homer had not ben borne?

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 53. (1578)

A great deal, my dear liege, depends

On having clever bards for friends.

What had Achilles been without his Homer?

A tailor, woollen-draper, or a comber!

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), A Moral Reflection: To George III. (c. 1794)

10 Illustrious acts high raptures do infuse,
And every conqueror creates a muse.

EDMUND WALLER, Panegyric on Cromwell. (a. 1687)

POETRY

See also Rhyme and Reason, Song

11 Poetry is devil's wine. (Poesis est vinum daemonum.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Contra Academicos, i. (c. 387)
Did not one of the fathers in great indignation call poesy, vinum daemonum?

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning, Bk. ii. (1605)

Poems, the hop-grounds of the brain.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 506. (1737)

Poetry is the bill and coo of sex.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams. (1911)

12 That poetic itch of mine began scratching away. (Nostra illa poetica scabies coepit exculpere.)

AUSONIUS, Griphus Ternarii Numeri: Dedicatio. (c. A. D. 390) See also under WRITING:

THE ITCH OF WRITING.

1 It [poetry] was ever thought to have some participation of divineness, because it doth raise and erect the mind.

FRANCIS BACON, Of the Advancement of Learning. Bk. ii. (1605)

Poetry is the natural language of all worship.

MADAME DE STAËL, Germany. Pt.ii, ch.10. (1810)

Poetry, the language of the gods.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy. (c. 1820)

Poetry is itself a thing of God.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Proëm, l. 5. (1839)

God Himself is the best Poet.

E. B. BROWNING, The Dead Pan. St. 36. (1844)

Time cannot bend the line which God hath writ.

H. D. THOREAU, Inspiration. (1849)

2 Who often, but without success, have pray'd For apt Alliteration's artful aid.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Prophecy of Famine, l. 85. (a. 1764)

3 Poesy is of so subtle a spirit, that in pouring out of one Language into another, it will all evaporate.

SIR JOHN DENHAM, The Destruction of Troy: Preface. (1636)

Poetry cannot be translated; and, therefore, it is the poets that preserve the languages.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1776.

4 For all those pretty knacks you compose, Alas, what are they but poems in prose?

SIR JOHN DENHAM, To the Five Members of the Hon. House of Commons, l. 41. (a. 1668)

Who says in verse what others say in prose.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. i, l. 202. (1734)

Why then we should drop into poetry.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. i, ch.5. (1865)

5 Simonides' lyrics. (Σιμωνιδου μέλη.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. ix, No. 12.

(1523) Erasmus gives the Latin, "Simonidis cantilena." Referring to Simonides of Chios, the first of the Greek poets—and so the first of all poets—to write eulogies to order and for payment. So the proverb refers to poems which are made only when paid for.

6 A comic theme cannot be expressed in tragic verse. (Versibus exponi tragicis res comica non volt.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 89. (c. 20 B. C.)

Let the verse the subject fit, Little subject, little wit.

Namby Pamby is your guide.

HENRY CAREY, Namby-Pamby. (1729) A satire on Ambrose Philips, of whose first name "Namby-Pamby" was intended as a diminutive. The origin of the word.

His namby-pamby madrigals of love.

WILLIAM GIFFORD, The Baviad. (1794)

7 Verses void of thought, sonorous trifles. (Versus inopes rerum nugaeque canorae.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 322. (c. 20 B. C.)

Return to the forge the badly-turned verses. (Male tornatos incudi reddere versus.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 441.

Put your parchment in the closet and keep it back until the ninth year. (Nonumque prematur in annum, | membranis intus positus.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 388.

8 As is a picture, so is a poem. (Ut pictura poesis.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 361. (c. 20 B. C.)

Poetry is articulate painting, and painting is silent poetry. (ζωγραφίαν μὲν, εἶναι φθεγγομένην τὴν ποίησιν, ποίησιν δὲ σιγῶσαν τὴν ζωγραφίαν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Study Poetry,

18A. (c. A. D. 95) Quoted as an "oft-repeated saying"; and referred to again 58B.

Nor is he stranger to Poetry, which is musick in words; nor to Musick, which is poetry in sound.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. ii, ch. 7. (1642)

There are pictures in poems and poems in pictures. (Shih chung yu 'hua, 'hua chung yu shih.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 517. (1875)

9 'Tis not sufficient to combine Well-chosen words in a well-ordered line. (Non satis est puris versum perscribere verbis.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 54. (35 B. C.)

It is not riming and versing that maketh poetry. One may be a poet without versing, and a versifier without poetry.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, An Apologie for Poetry. (c. 1581)

10 His verses run with a halting foot. (Incomposito pede currere versus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 10, l. 1. (c. 35 B. C.)

This is a very false gallop of verses.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 119. (1600)

11 All good verses are like impromptus made at leisure. (Tous les vers excellents sont comme des impromptus faits à loisir.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 291. (1810)

12 The jingling medley of purloined conceits, Out-babying Wordsworth and out-glittering Keats.

LORD LYTTON, The New Timon. Pt. i, sec. 6. (1846) Referring to Tennyson.

13 I always make the first verse well, but I have trouble in making the others. (Je fais toujours bien le premier vers; mais j'ai peine à faire les autres.)

MOLIÈRE, Les Précieuses Ridicules. Sc.11. (1659)

Those that write in rhyme still make The one verse for the other's sake.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, ii, i, 27. (1663)

14 Let verse run smoothly, polished with fine pumice. (Exactus tenui pumice versus eat.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. i, l. 8. (c. 22 B. C.)

They write a verse as smooth, as soft as cream;
In which there is no torrent, nor scarce stream.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Ingeniorum. No. 5.
(1636)

1 Recite poetry only with a poet. (Shih hsiang
'hui jên yin.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
2273. (1875)

2 I had rather hear a brazen canstick turn'd,
Or a dry wheel grate on the axle-tree;
And that would set my teeth nothing on edge,
Nothing so much as mincing poetry;
'Tis like the forc'd gait of a shuffling nag.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 1, 131. (1597)

3 One should never talk of a moral or an immoral poem—poems are either well written or badly written, that is all.

OSCAR WILDE, The English Renaissance of Art.
(1882) Lecture delivered in New York City,
9 Jan.

All bad poetry springs from genuine feeling. To be natural is to be obvious, and to be obvious is to be inartistic.

OSCAR WILDE, The Critic as Artist. (1891)

4 I would rather have written that poem, gentlemen, than take Quebec to-morrow.

MAJOR-GENERAL JAMES WOLFE, the night before he was killed on the Plains of Abraham (13 Sept., 1759), referring to Gray's Elegy
Written in a Country Church-yard. See
HUME, History of England, ch. 30.

II—Poetry: The Poet's Licence

5 Many are the lies of the poets. (πολλὰ ψεύδονται αἰοῖοι.)

ARISTOTLE, Metaphysics. Sec. 983A. (c. 340
B.C.) A proverb quoted by PLUTARCH,
Moralia, sec. 16A, who adds that some of the lies are intentional and some unintentional.

The race of poets has liberty. (τὸ μὲν δὴ ποιητικὸν φύλον ἐλεύθερον.)

DEMOSTHENES, Encomium. (c. 340 B.C.)

The poet makes a lie look like the truth. (Poeta
... facit illud veri simile, quod mendacium est.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 401. (c. 195 B.C.)

Poets to the best of their power may chant falsehoods. (Poetae pro sua parte falsa conficte cannant.)

PACUVIUS, Teucer. Frag. 366, Loeb. (c. 160 B.C.)
The art of poetry is not greatly concerned with the truth. (ποιητική μὲν οὐ πᾶν μέλον ἐστὶ τῆς ἀληθείας.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Study Poetry,
sec. 17E. (c. A.D. 95) Quoted as a maxim.

To lie is permitted to poets. (Poetis mentiri licet.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. vi, epist. 21.
(c. A.D. 98)

Lying and poetry are always friends. (Le men-songe et les vers de tout temps sont amis.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Contre Ceux Qui Ont le
Goût Difficile. Bk. ii, fab. 1. (1668)

6 The freer utterances of the poet's licence.
(Poetarum licentiae liberiora.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. iii, ch. 38, sec. 153. (55 B.C.)
Using, as his habit is, a poet's licence. (Usus poetae, ut moris est, licentia.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 25. (c. 25 B.C.)
Painters and poets have always had an equal licence to dare anything. (Pictoribus atque poetis quidlibet audendi semper fuit aequa potestas.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 9. (c. 20 B.C.)
Measureless pours forth the creative licence of poets. (Exit in immensum fecunda licentia va-tum.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 12, l. 41. (c. 13 B.C.)
Freedom must be accorded to poetry. (Debita carminibus libertas.)

UNKNOWN, Aetna, l. 91. (c. A.D. 60)

Poetic licence. (Licentia poetica.)

SENECA, Naturales Quaestiones. Ch. xlv, sec. 1.
(c. A.D. 62)

The licence of the sweet poet. (Con la licenza del dolce poeta.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxvii, l. 3. (c. 1300)
Painters and poets have liberty to paint and devise what they list after their own fancy. (Les Peintres & Poetes ont liberté de peindre à leur plaisir ce qu'ilz veulent.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1532)

Crave the Poets privilege, to use the figure Hyperbole at their pleasure.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i,
p. 96. (1574) Pettie, tr.

7 According to that old verse . . . Astronomers, painters and poets may lye by authority.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, A Briefe Apologie of
Poetrie. Par. 3 (1591)

Poets and painters have leave to lie.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (c. 1595)

We poets lie by good authority.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Epigrams. Bk. ii, No.
88. (1618)

Poets and painters by authority

As wel as travellers we say may lie.

ROBERT HEATH, Epigrams, p. 35. (1650)

Painters and poets hae liberty to lie.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 253. (1670)

Poets and painters lye with license.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Poets. (1736)

Poets and painters, as all artists know,
May shoot a little with a lengthened bow.

LORD BYRON, Hints from Horace, l. 15. (1811)

8 Poets need not trammel their utterances with history's truth. (Obligat historica nec sua verba fide.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 12, l. 42. (c. 13 B.C.)
A man may be an admirable poet without being an exact chronicler.

JOHN DRYDEN, Aeneid: Dedication. (1697)

A poet does not work by square or line.

WILLIAM COWPER, Conversation, l. 789. (1781)

9 Good-bye to the fictions of the poets. (Valeant mendacia vatum.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. vi, l. 253. (c. A.D. 8)

Odds life! must one swear to the truth of a song?

MATTHEW PRIOR, A Better Answer. (a. 1721)

1 Poets, being liars by profession, ought to have good memories.

SWIFT, A Letter of Advice to a Young Poet, 1 Dec., 1720. See also under LIE.

POINT

2 A lord ful fat and in good poynt.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 200. (c. 1386)

She demaundyd of hym yf he were hole and in good poynt.

LORD BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux, xcv, 307. (a. 1533)

[They] looked in better point than all the rest.

JOHN EVELYN, Mrs. Godolphin, p. 176. (1685)

3 But to the poynt.

CHAUCER, Parlement of Foules, l. 372. (c. 1381)

This is the poynt, to speken short and pleyn.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 790. (c. 1386)

Come to ye poynt, and vse no more such langage.

LORD BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux, lxi, 236. (a. 1533)

When it comes to the point, "Who am I?"

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations: Old Testament, iv, iii. (1612)

Let us now come to the Point in Hand.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, p. 12. (1738)

When it came to the point, . . . he told her to write to him.

JANE AUSTEN, Pride and Prejudice. Ch. 27. (1796)

Do keep to the point, my excursive friends.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Realmah, p. 256. (1868)

4 I was set at work, arguing a moot-point or law-case.

SIR SIMONDS D'EWES, Autobiography, i, 240. (a. 1650) Moot point, an arguable, debatable or doubtful point. Originally a case proposed for discussion in a "moot" of law students.—O.E.D.

It is a moot point.

THOMAS BURTON, Diary, iii, 46. (1658)

5 He was—not to put too fine a point upon it—hard up.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 11. (1852)

6 So faire, so joly, and so fetys,

With lymes wrought at poynt devys.

CHAUCER (?), The Romaunt of the Rose, l. 829. (a. 1366) Point device, to the point of perfection.

Properly drest, All poynte deuyse.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 852. (1526) You are rather point device in your accoutrements.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, ii, 401. (1600)

Thus he grew up, in Logic point-device.

LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: Emma and Eginkhard, l. 35. (1872)

7 The young ladies had rather missed the point.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 11. (1844)

He had somewhat misapprehended the point of these observations.

LORD COLERIDGE, in Law Times, lxxv, 581/1. (1891)

8 Wyll you not streche one poynt: to being me in fauour agayne?

RICHARD EDWARDS, Damon and Pythias. (a. 1566)

He would not sticke to straine a point, so that he might glorifie Saint Thomas thereby.

WILLIAM LAMBARDE, A Perambulation of Kent, p. 401. (1596)

They might have stretched a point.

WALTER SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 53. (1814)

It would be straining a point to arrest him.

G. A. LAWRENCE, Guy Livingston. Ch. 34. (1857)

It would be stretching a point to say that Cuthbert was a handsome man.

HENRY KINGSLEY, Ravenshoe. Ch. 42. (1861)

You must be generous, strain point.

ROBERT BROWNING, Red Cotton Night-Cap Country, l. 393. (1873)

9 That is nothing to the point. (οὐδὲν πρὸς ἡμᾶς.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 111. (1511)

10 The brutons were vpe the pointe to fle.

ROBERT OF GLOUCESTER, Metrical Chronicle, l. 1457. (1297)

He was upon the point to fall upon the city.

COTTON, tr., Espernon, i, ii, 100. (1670)

11 Frow point to point al sche him tolde,

That sche hath longe in herte holde.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii, l. 33. (1390)

Answered from point to point.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, i. (1581)

From point to point I frankly tell

The deed of death as it befell.

WALTER SCOTT, Rokeby. Canto i, st. 15. (1813)

12 Maximes of the point of honour.

EDWARD GRIMSTONE, tr., History of Spain. Ch. 27. (1612)

When we say a Point of Honour, we mean a Rule, a Law, a Maxim of Honour.

UNKNOWN, Rules of Civility, p. 233. (1703)

The great Point of Honour in Men is Courage, in Women Chastity.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 99. (1711)

He has . . . the same point of view.

EPHRAIM CHAMBERS, Cyclopaedia: Point. (1728)

In a literary point of view.

MACAULAY, Misc. Writings, ii, 114. (1844)

13 I need not labor the point. (καὶ τί δεῖ μηχανεῖν.)

PHILO, De Profugis. Sec. 27. (c. A. D. 40)

14 [He] will have his Will and carry his Point.

WILLIAM POPPLE, tr., Locke's Toleration. (1689)

If I can carry this single Point.

RICHARD BENTLEY, Phalaris, p. 429. (1697)

She ended . . . by carrying her point.
 WILKIE COLLINS, Dead Secret. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1857)
 She had carried her point with her husband.
 MRS. MACQUOID, Louisa. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1885)
 1 Be redy at the poynte of day for to ride.
 UNKNOWN, Merlin, p. 585. (c. 1450)
 He was . . . at the poynt of dethe.
 WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Fables of Poge, vi. (1484)
 They were at the point of going.
 HALL CAINE, The Christian. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1897)
 NINE POINTS OF THE LAW, see under POSSESSION.

POISON

2 When the Fates will, two poisons work for good. (Cum fata volunt, bina venena iuvant.)
 AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. 3, l. 12. (c. A. D. 370)
 Venym for-doth venym.
 WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus xviii, l. 152. (1377)
 One poyson drives out another.
 GEOFFREY FENTON, Bandello, ii, 218. (1567)
 Ev'n as one poyson doth another heale.
 SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk. xxv, st. 1. (1591)
 One poyson expels another.
 JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 34. (1659)
 3 Somebody pulling a Borgia, if I'm not mistaken.
 CHRISTOPHER HALE, Murder in Tow, p. 82. (1943)
 4 You must use the antidote before the poison. (Prius antidotum, quam venenum, adhibes.)
 SAINT JEROME (HIERONYMUS), In Rufinum. (c. A. D. 400) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, iii, 98. Sometimes given, "Ne prius antidotum quam venenum."
 Fortune never separates the poison and the antidote.
 FIRDAUSI, Iskander's Conversations. (c. 1000)
 Poison kills only where there is no antidote.
 SADI, Bustan. Ch. i, Apologue 11. (c. 1257)
 5 Wicked poisons lurk in sweet honey. (In pia sub dulci melle venena latent.)
 OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 8, l. 104. (c. 13 B. C.)
 Is not poyson taken out of the Hunnysuckle by the Spider? venym out of the Rose by the Cancker? dunge out of the Maple tree by the Scorpion?
 JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 100. (1579)
 Doe we not commonly see that in painted pottes is hidden the deadliest poyson?
 JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 53. (1579)
 In golden pottes are hidden the most deadly poyson.
 THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 60. (1633)
 The strongest poison ever known
 Came from Caesar's laurel crown.
 WILLIAM BLAKE, Auguries of Innocence. (1789)
 6 Full as a toad of poison.
 JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 284. (1678)
 He that bites on every weed may light on poison.
 JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 72.

7 Ofttimes poisons have saved life. (Saepe enim saluti fuere pestifera.)
 SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, ch. 12, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 55)
 In poison there is physic.
 SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 1, 137. (1598)
 8 Poison is drunk from cups of gold. (Venenum in auro bibitur.)
 SENECA, Thyestes, l. 453. (c. A. D. 60)
 Poison is poison though it comes in a golden cup.
 THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 705. (1630)
 9 Sweet, sweet, sweet poison for the age's tooth.
 SHAKESPEARE, King John, i, 1, 213. (1596)
 A lutel ater [poison] bitteret muchel swete.
 UNKNOWN, Old English Homilies. Ser. i, l. 23. (c. 1175)
 Poyson pierseth every vaine.
 GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 131. (1576)
 One droppe of poyson infecteth the whole tunne of wine.
 JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 39. (1579)
 One droppe of poyson disperseth it selfe into eury vaine.
 JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 73.
 II—One Man's Meat, Another Man's Poison
 10 One century's meat is obviously another century's cyanide of potassium.
 LEONARD BACON, Old Fable for New Critics.
 Quoted in Sat. Rev. of Lit., 20 Apr., 1940.
 11 One man's breath, another's death.
 JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 253. (1639)
 One Man's Breath Is another's Man's Death.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6343. (1732)
 12 No hour brings good fortune to one man without bringing misfortune to another. (Bona nemini hora est, quin alicui sit mala.)
 ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iv, cent. v, No. 7. (1523)
 13 One man's mate is another man's passion.
 EUGENE HEALY, Mr. Sandeman Loses His Life, p. 135. (1940) George S. Kaufman has another variation, "One man's Mede is another man's Persian."
 14 What has benefited one has destroyed others. (Nam quod uni profuit, hoc aliis erat exitio.)
 HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 238. (1869)
 What is sweet to some is bitter to others. (Quod suave est aliis, aliis fit amarum.)
 HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 384. "What's sport to you is death to us."—Aesop's fable of the boys and the frogs.
 15 What to one man is food to another is rank poison. (Quod ali cibus est aliis fuat acre venenum.)
 LUCRETIIUS, De Rerum Natura, iv, 637. (45 B. C.)
 Ofte thinge that is holsome and goode to men is poyson to other bestes.
 JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., De Proprietatibus Rerum, xvii, iii. (1398)

What's one man's poison, signior,
Is another man's meat or drink.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act iii, sc. 2. (c. 1613)

As concerning the hatred of princes, one mans meate is another mans poyson.

WILLIAM BARCLAY, Nepenthes, p. 116. (1614)

One man's meat is another man's poison.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs. (1709)

SHAW, Major Barbara. Act i. (1905) HOWIE, Murder for Christmas, p. 136. (1941) etc., etc.

Is it not even a proverb, that what is meat to one man is poison to another?

MATTHEW PRIOR, Dialogues of the Dead, p. 246. (a. 1721)

Alas, Sir! what is one man's poison is another man's meat.

JAMES TOWNLEY, High Life Below Stairs. Act i, sc. 1. (1759)

One man's food is another man's poison.

TROLLOPE, Autobiography. Ch. 10. (1883)

One man's poison, another man's meat.

JOSEPH CONRAD, The End of the Tether. Sec. 14. (1902)

What's one woman's meat is another woman's poison.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 19. (1910)

Wan Lo has made an amazing discovery.

"I have found," he cries,

"That one man's poison is another man's poison."

HENRY HARRISON, Wan Lo Tanka. (a. 1930)

The fact that "one man's meat is another man's poison" has been known for ages, though nobody knows why. But what may be the scientific explanation of the proverb is found in the mass of facts which the majority of doctors see as evidence of "hypersensitivity" or "allergy."

LAWRENCE GOULD, Allergy. (1940) Physical Culture, lxxx, 5.

One man's strawberries are another man's hives.

DONALD G. COOLEY, Eat and Get Slim, p. 65. (1945)

1 The food that to him now is as luscious as locusts, shall be to him shortly as bitter as colocquintida.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 352. (1605)

POLICE

2 Ah, take one consideration with another—
A policeman's lot is not a happy one.

W. S. GILBERT, The Pirates of Penzance. Act ii. (1879) Quoted by MARSH, A Man Lay Dead, p. 272. (1942) INNES, The Weight of the Evidence, p. 50. (1943) etc., etc.

More truth than fiction in the old jingle about a policeman's lot not being blissfully happy.

M. V. HEBERDEN, Murder Makes a Racket, p. 14. (1942)

A policeman's lot is not so hot.

CLAYTON RAWSON, No Coffin for the Corpse, p. 163. (1942)

This policeman's lot is quite a happy one.

ANNE HOCKING, Death Loves a Shining Mark, p. 95. (1943)

3 Policemen are soldiers who act alone; soldiers are policemen who act in unison.

HERBERT SPENCER, Social Statics. Ch. 3. (1851)
A policeman may call himself a soldier of the truth.

E. R. PUNSHON, Conqueror Inn, p. 117. (1944)

4 You'll be copped, then.

THOMAS TERRELL, Lady Delmar. Act i. (c. 1884)
There were cries of "Coppers, coppers!"

THOMAS TERRELL, Lady Delmar. Act i.

5 Every policeman knows that though governments may change, the police remain.

LEON TROTSKY, What Next? Ch. 1. (1932)

POLICY

See also Cunning

6 All policy's allowed in war and love.

SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, Love at a Venture. Act i. (1706) ALL'S FAIR IN LOVE AND WAR, see under LOVE.

7 Policy may be virtuous as well as vicious.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3891. (1732)

8 No matter so harde but polycie can prevaile.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 162. (1576)

Polycie prevayleth above power.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 253.

A lytle pollicy praeuaileth when a great deale of strength fayleth.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 100. (c. 1590)

Policy help'd above strength.

CHAPMAN, Alphonsus. Act ii, sc. 3. (a. 1634)

Policy goes beyond strength.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 133. (1666)

Where force hath fail'd, Policy oft hath prevail'd.

CHURCHILL, The Ghost. Bk. iv, l. 1215. (1762)

9 He who has confidence in his policy is equal to an enemy. (Etiam hosti est aequus qui habet in consilio fidem.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 188. (c. 43 B. C.)

HONESTY THE BEST POLICY, see under HONESTY.

POLITENESS

See also Courtesy, Manners

10 Politeness. The most acceptable hypocrisy.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

11 Ceremonies are different in every country, but true politeness is everywhere the same. . . . The wise are polite all the world over, but fools are polite only at home.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. Letter xxxix. (1762)

12 When ye run down politeness ye take the mortar from between the bricks of the foundations of society.

O. HENRY, Between Rounds. (1906)

They were as polite as wax.

O. HENRY, Phonograph and Graft. (1909)

<sup>1</sup> Politeness smoothes wrinkles. (La politesse aplanit les rides.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 90. (1810)
"There is nothing but wind in a pneumatic tire, yet it eases the jolts along life's highway wonderfully," Marshal Foch is said to have retorted, when a guest at a dinner in his honor at Denver, Colo., remarked that there was nothing but wind in French politeness.

Politeness is to human nature what warmth is to wax.

ARTHUR SCHOPENHAUER, Aphorisms. (a. 1860)

<sup>2</sup> Politeness of spirit consists in thinking of things which are fastidious and in good taste. (La politesse de l'esprit consisté à penser des choses honnêtes et délicates.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 99. (1665)
Politeness may be defined as a dexterous management of our Words and Actions whereby we make other people have better Opinion of us and themselves.

UNKNOWN, The English Theophrastus, p. 108. (1702)

True politeness consists in being easy one's self, and in making every one about one as easy as one can.

POPE, Table-Talk. (a. 1744)

Politeness has been defined as artificial good nature; with much greater propriety it may be said that good nature is natural politeness.

STANISLAUS LESZYNSKI, KING OF POLAND, Œuvres du Philosophe Bienfaisant. (1763)

Politeness . . . is fictitious benevolence.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Tour to the Hebrides, 21 Aug. 1773.

As to politeness . . . I would venture to call it benevolence in trifles.

WILLIAM PITT, Correspondence, i, 79. (c. 1789)

Politeness is merely the art of choosing among your thoughts. (La politesse n'est que l'art de choisir dans ce que l'on pense.)

MADAME DE STAËL, Epigram. (c. 1800) See ABEL STEVENS, Life of Mme. de Staël. Ch. 4.

Politeness is artificial good humour.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Thomas J. Randolph. (1808)

Politeness is the flower of humanity. (La politesse est la fleur de l'humanité.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 120. (1810)

Politeness is the ritual of society, as prayers are of the church.

EMERSON, English Traits: Aristocracy. (1856)

Politeness has been well defined as benevolence in small things.

MACAULAY, Essays: Samuel Johnson. (1831)

Politeness is to do and say
The kindest thing in the kindest way.

LUDWIG LEWISOHN (?), Politeness. (c. 1910)

<sup>3</sup> Politeness costs nothing, and gains everything.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letters. (a. 1762)
See under COURTESY.

One never loses anything by politeness.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 75. (1904)

<sup>4</sup> Politeness wins the confidence of princes. (Yu li fu tē chung wang tao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1534. (1875)

<sup>5</sup> Civil as an orange, and something of that jealous complexion.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, ii, 1, 305. (1596)

<sup>6</sup> He is the very pineapple of politeness.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act iii, sc. 3. (1775)

He is the soul of courtesy and the pineapple of perfection.

DUDLEY NICHOLS, Article, in New York World, 24 Nov., 1926, referring to Willie Stevens, testifying at the Halls-Mill trial at Somerville, N.J. See also under PERFECTION.

<sup>7</sup> Politeness is excellent, but it does not pay the bill.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)

<sup>8</sup> With no more politeness than the back of the hand and the sole of the foot.

LEE THAYER, Guilty, p. 41. (1940)

POLITICIAN

See also Statesman

<sup>9</sup> An honest politician is one who, when he is bought, will stay bought.

SIMON CAMERON, Republican Boss of Pennsylvania, about 1860. Another American definition is, "A politician is an animal who can sit on a fence and yet keep both ears to the ground."

Politician. An eel in the fundamental mud upon which the superstructure of organized society is reared. . . . As compared with the statesman, he suffers the disadvantage of being alive.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

<sup>10</sup> O what is man Unless he be a Politician?

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Ambois. Act i, sc. 1. (1613)

<sup>11</sup> An upright minister asks, what recommends a man; a corrupt minister, who.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 9. (1820)

<sup>12</sup> Tadpole and Taper were great friends. Neither of them ever despaired of the Commonwealth.

DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1844)

Tadpoles and Tapers. Professional politicians that are the hacks of a party.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

<sup>13</sup> Politicians neither love nor hate.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel, i, 223. (1681)

Politicians neither love nor hate. Interest, not sentiment, directs them.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 23 Dec., 1748.

<sup>14</sup> Politicians, you suggest,
Should drive the nail that goes the best.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Ser. ii, fab. 9, l. 14. (a. 1732)

1
I am a politician, oathes with me
Are but the tooles I worke with, I may breake
An oath by my profession.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Iron Age. Pt. ii. (1632)
Those who are in Albany escaped Sing Sing, and those who are in Sing Sing were on their way to Albany.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Book of Epigrams. (c. 1911)
It should perhaps be explained for foreign purchasers of this book that Sing Sing (now Ossining) is the village where a state prison of New York State is located, and Albany is the capital of the State.

2
Timid and interested politicians think much more about the security of their seats than about the security of their country.

T. B. MACAULAY, Speech, House of Commons,
May, 1842.

3
The Dieul was . . . so famous a Politician
. . . that Hel, which at the beginning was but an obscure Village, is now become a huge citie.

THOMAS NASHE, Pierce Penilesse. (1592)

A Politician imitates the Devill, as the Devill imitates a cannon: wheresoever he comes to do mis-chiefe, he comes with his backside towards you.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Divel. Act iii, sc. 3.
(1612)

4
Politicians are like the bones of a horse's fore-shoulder—not a straight one in it.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, July, 1864.

5
It might be the pate of a politician, . . . one that would circumvent God.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 1, 86. (1600)

And, like a scurvy politician, seem

To see the things thou dost not.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 6, 174. (1605)

Meetings consisting of some half a dozen scurvy pot-house politicians.

WASHINGTON IRVING, *Knickerbocker's History
of New York*. Bk. iv, ch. 6. (1809)

He was more useful to the city than a host of loud-mouthed, pot-house politicians.

SAMUEL MORDECAI, Virginia in By-gone Days,
p. 57. (1860)

A pot-house politician should represent us at the court of St. James.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Life Amongst the Modocs, p.
105. (1873)

6
The deepest politician toils but for a momentary rattle.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Horace Mann, 14
May, 1777.

7
Among politicians the esteem of religion is profitable; the principles of it are troublesome.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, *Moral and Religious
Aphorisms*. (1753)

The greatest asset a politician can have is a blameless record as far as women are concerned.

W. S. MAUGHAM, Lord Mountdrago. (1939)

POLITICS

See also Party

8
"Hargrave," said his Lordship, "if you want any information upon points of practical politics . . . there is only one man in the kingdom whom you should consult."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. ii, ch. 14.

The first known appearance in print of the phrase "practical politics."

Out of the range of practical politics.

W. E. GLADSTONE. Referring to the abolition of the Established Church, April, 1865. See O'CONNOR, The Parnell Movement, p. 216.

The views that have governed my life in questions of practical politics.

GEORGE BANCROFT, in HOWE, Life, ii, 185. (1868)

I said myself in 1865, and I believed, that it was out of the range of practical politics, that is to say, the politics of the coming election.

W. E. GLADSTONE, Speech, at Dalkeith, 26 Nov., 1879.

I knew nothing about "practical politics."

G. B. McCLELLAN, Own Story, p. 34. (1887)

It would be interesting to imagine the first President of the United States confronted with some one who had ventured to approach him upon the basis of what is now commonly called "practical politics."

HENRY CODMAN POTTER, Address, Washington
Centennial service, 30 April, 1899.

The usual and ineffectual protest against "practical politics."

ALLEN FRENCH, The Barrier, p. 163. (1904)

The whole aim of practical politics is to keep the populace alarmed (and hence clamorous to be led to safety) by an endless series of hobgoblins.

H. L. MENCKEN, In Defence of Women. Ch. 13.
(1926)

9
In politics there is no honour.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. iv, ch. 1.
(1826)

There is no gambling like politics.

DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 82. (1880)

10
They are playing politics at the expense of human misery.

HERBERT HOOVER, Statement to the Press, 9
Dec., 1930. Referring to members of Congress who, out of self-interest, as Hoover believed, had introduced bills for unemployment relief.

11
There is a holy mistaken zeal in politics as well as religion. By persuading others we convince ourselves.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 35, 19 Dec., 1769.

Most men's politics sit much too loosely about them.

WILLIAM DRAPER, Letter to Junius, 17 Feb.,
1769. Letter No. 4 in Letters of Junius.

Politics is perhaps the only profession for which no preparation is thought necessary.

R. L. STEVENSON, Familiar Studies of Men and Books: Yoshida-Torajiro. (1882)

<sup>1</sup> The heavy roller of democracy.
J. R. LOWELL, On a Certain Condescension in Foreigners. (1880)

Steam-roller.

OSWALD F. SCHUTTE, Article, Chicago Inter-Ocean, June, 1908, describing the tactics employed by the Roosevelt-Taft majority in the Republican National Convention in seating Taft delegates from Alabama and Arkansas. In frequent use thereafter. See MENCKEN, American Language, p. 372.

Clear everything with Sidney.

F. D. ROOSEVELT(?), Remark, to Robert Hannegan, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, at Chicago, during Democratic National Convention, 1944, referring to Sidney Hillman, head of the Political Action Committee of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and indicating that the convention's choice for Vice-President must be acceptable to Hillman, whose support was essential to Roosevelt. Hannegan denied rather lamely that the President had used the phrase, but the Republicans exploited it during the ensuing campaign.

<sup>2</sup> Politics is not the Business of a Woman.

MRS. MARY MANLEY, The Adventures of Rivella, p. 117. (1714)

I must not write you about politics, because you are a woman.

JOHN ADAMS, Letter to his wife, 13 Feb., 1779. What are all your politics to women? A woman's politics are the man she loves.

OWEN RHOSCOMYL (O. VAUGHAN), For the White Rose of Arno, p. 74. (1897)

<sup>3</sup> In politics nothing is insignificant.

LOUIS N. PARKER, Disraeli. Act i. (1911)

<sup>4</sup> Politics, as the word is commonly understood, are nothing but corruptions.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1706)

Politics are now nothing more than means of rising in the world.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 11 April, 1775.

The art of governing mankind by deceiving them.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature, p. 339. (c. 1800)

Politics is, as it were, the gizzard of society, full of grit and gravel, and the two political parties are its two opposite halves which grind on each other.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 10 Nov., 1851.

Politics is but the common pulse-beat, of which revolution is the fever-spasm.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, before the Massachusetts Anti-Slavery Society, Boston, 27 Jan., 1853.

Politics is a deleterious profession, like some poisonous handicrafts.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power. (1860)

Politics is not an exact science. (Die Politik ist keine exakte Wissenschaft.)

OTTO VON BISMARCK, Speech, Prussian Chamber, 18 Dec., 1863.

Politics is mostly pill-taking.

THOMAS B. REED, Letter to John Dalzell, 1 Aug., 1896.

Politics. The conduct of public affairs for private advantage.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

Who gets what, when, how?

H. L. MENCKEN, American Language: Supplement I, p. 283. Cited as "a common definition of politics."

Politics is the means by which the will of the few becomes the will of the many.

KOCH AND HUSTON, In Time to Come. Act i, sc. 2. (1941)

<sup>5</sup>

I will not accept if nominated, and will not serve if elected.

WILLIAM TECUMSEH SHERMAN, Telegram, to General Henderson of Missouri, 5 June, 1884. Henderson was at the Republican National Convention at Chicago, and had repeatedly urged Sherman to accept the nomination for President, which Sherman had steadily refused to do. The telegram was in answer to a last urgent appeal. See SHERMAN, Memoirs, 4th ed., p. 466. This final chapter was added by members of Sherman's family after his death, and the text of the telegram as given above is on the evidence of his son, Thomas. It is usually quoted, "If nominated I will not accept; if elected I will not serve."

<sup>6</sup>

You can't beat somebody with nobody.

MARK SULLIVAN, Our Times, iii, 289. (1923)

An axiom of practical politics, usually attributed to "Uncle Joe" Cannon, for many years Speaker of House of Representatives. Another county heard from.

CLIFFORD ODETS, Awake and Sing. Act i. (1935)

An old political gag, originating from the counting of returns on election night.

There is an old political adage which says "If you can't lick 'em, jine 'em."

QUENTIN REYNOLDS, The Wounded Don't Cry, p. 23. (1941)

<sup>7</sup>

Politics make strange bedfellows.

C. D. WARNER, My Summer in a Garden. Ch. 15. (1870)

Politics, indeed, make strange bedfellows.

J. S. BASSETT, Life of Jackson, p. 351. (1911)

Into such incongruous bedfellowship do the exigencies of politics lure sheep and goat.

SAMUEL HOPKINS ADAMS, Incredible Era, p. 57. (1939) Adams is describing the alliance of J. B. Foraker with Theodore Roosevelt

POLYGAMY

<sup>8</sup>

Polygamy. A house of atonement, or expiatory chapel, fitted with several stools of repentance, as distinguishing from monogamy, which has but one.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906) An endeavor to get more out of life than there is in it.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Book of Epigrams. (1911)

<sup>1</sup> Marriages with more than one wife is like a man who is attached to more churches than one, whereby his faith is so distracted that it becomes no faith.

EMANUEL SWEDENBORG, Heaven and Hell. (1758)

POMP

<sup>2</sup> Wisdom's sullen pomp.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 216. (1737)

<sup>3</sup> Lo, all our pomp of yesterday
Is one with Nineveh and Tyre!

RUDYARD KIPLING, Recessional. (1897)

<sup>4</sup> Take physic, pomp;
Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 4, 33. (1605)

Behold, How pomp is follow'd!

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, v, 2, 150. (1606)

The tide of pomp

That beats upon the high shore of this world.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 1, 281. (1599)

Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 2, 365. (1612)

Why what is pomp, rule, reign, but earth and dust?

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, v, 2, 27. (1591)

<sup>5</sup> Pomp and circumstance.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 354. (1605)

The poms and gaudy shows of the world.

EARL OF KILMARNOCK, in MCKAY, History of Kilmarnock, p. 89. (1746)

Poms and vanities.

MARY MARTHA SHERWOOD, Stories Explanatory of the Church Catechism, p. 401. (1835)

The poms and vanities of the world are different to different people.

ELIZABETH SEWELL, Amy Herbert. Ch. 10. (1858)

POPE

See also Rome: The Roman Church

<sup>6</sup> One has to have a nose to be pope. (Il faut avoir du nez pour estre pope.)

JEAN-ANTOINE DE BAIF, Mimes, fo. 11. (1597)

That is, one has to be far-sighted and sagacious.

If you would be a Pope, you must think of nothing else.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 422. (1855)

<sup>7</sup> Pape and ape differ but a letter; but their charitie to their sons less.

HENRY BURTON, Baiting Pope's Bull, p. 67. (1627)

<sup>8</sup> St. Peter is very well at Rome. (Bien se está San Pedro en Roma.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, chs. 41, 53, 59. (1615)

Ye may not sit in Rome and strive with the Pope.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 112. (c. 1595)

It is hard to sit in Rome, and strive against the Pope.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 194. (1721)

It is ill sitting at Rome and striving with the Pope.
MACLAREN, Exposition, Daniel, 58. (c. 1906)

<sup>9</sup> Being a man I may come to be Pope. (Debajo de ser hombre puedo venir á ser papa.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 47. (1615)

What village priest would not like to be pope?

VOLTAIRE, Letters on the English. No. 5. (1733)

<sup>10</sup> Accept, receive, take, are words pleasing to the Pope. (Accipe, sume, cape, sunt verba placencia Papae.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 42. (1545)

Quoting a medieval ecclesiastical lampoon.

Take, have, and keep are pleasant words.

THOMAS HARDY, The Mayor of Casterbridge. Ch. 14. (1886) Quoted as "the medieval saying."

No popery!

Cry of the London mob in 1681 when a new Parliament was summoned at Oxford, and frequently thereafter. See HUME, History of England, chs. 21, 25.

Defoe says there were a hundred thousand stout country-fellows in his time ready to fight to the death against popery, without knowing whether popery was a man or a horse.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Sketches, p. 101. (a. 1822)

The cry of "No Popery" is foolish enough in these days.

CARLYLE, Heroes and Hero Worship. Ch. 4. (1840)

POPULARITY

<sup>11</sup> The popular breeze. (Aura popularis.)

CICERO, De Haruspicio Responso. Ch. 20, 43 (56 B.C.) The breath of public opinion

<sup>12</sup> The popularity of a bad man is as treacherous as himself. (Gratia malorum tam infida est quam ipsi.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 5. (A.D. 98)

<sup>13</sup> The man of whom all speak well wins the people's favors. (Cui omnes bene dicunt possidet populi bona.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 126. (c. 43 B.C.)

<sup>14</sup> Popularity is a crime from the moment it is sought; it is only a virtue when men have it whether they will or not.

GEORGE SAVILE, MARQUESS OF HALIFAX, Miscellaneous Reflections. (c. 1690)

Popularity, a splash in the great pool of oblivion.

SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Interch. 12. (1812)

Popularity is glory in copper pieces. (La popularité c'est la gloire en gros sous.)

VICTOR HUGO, quoting a French proverb. (c. 1865)

That empty and ugly thing called popularity.

R. L. STEVENSON, Letter to a Young Gentleman. (a. 1894)

<sup>15</sup> Art thou officer,
Or art thou base, common and popular?

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 1, 37. (1599)

What is popular is not necessarily vulgar.

HAZLITT, Sketches: On Taste. (c. 1820)

1 The love of popularity is the love of being beloved.

SHENSTONE, Of Men and Manners. (1764)

God will not love thee less, because men love thee more.

MARTIN FARQUHAR TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Self-Acquaintance. (1838)

PORPOISE

2 Like to the Porpose (Tempests prophesier), I play before the storme of my sad teares.

ROBERT TOFTE, Alba, l. 17. (1598)

A porpoise . . . which is always the messenger of tempests.

CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe. Act iii, sc. 2. (1605)
The wantonnesse of a peaceable common-wealth is like the playing of the porpesse before a storme.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Characters: Newes from Shipboard. (a. 1613)

That cardinal lifts up's nose, like a foul porpoise before a storm.

JOHN WEBSTER, The Dutchesse of Malfy. Act iii, sc. 3. (1623)

I neuer yet saw store of porposes playing, but soone a storme enswend.

SIR KENELM DIGBY, Journal of a Voyage into the Mediterranean, p. 9. (1628)

PORRIDGE

3 Blow thy own Pottage, and not mine.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 998. (1732)
He that eats most Porridge, shall have most Meat.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2092.

If it should rain Porridge, he'd want a Dish.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2687. See under LUCK: BAD LUCK.

4 Old porridge is sooner heated than new made.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 47. (1670)

Old Porridge is sooner warmed, than new made.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3724. (1732)

5 With cost one may make pottage of a stool-foot.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 70. (1678)

With cost, good Pottage may be made out of the Leg of a Joint-Stool.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5796. (1732)

6 If you drink in your pottage, you'll cough in your grave.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 133. (1670)

Smart: You ha'n't tasted my cider yet.

Never: No, my lord; I have just been eating soup, and they say, if one drinks with one's porridge, one will cough in one's grave.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

7 If the porage be burned . . . we say The bishop hath put his foote in the poote.

WILLIAM TYNDALE, The Obedience of a Christen Man. Works, p. 166. (1528)

KEEP BREATH TO COOL PORRIDGE, see BREATH.

PORT

8 Any port in a storm.

JAMES COBB, The First Floor. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1780) KAUFMAN AND RYSKIND, Of Thee I Sing. Act ii, sc. 1. (1931) etc., etc.

Take any port in a storm.

WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 4. (1821)

"Any port in a storm" was the principle on which I was prepared to act.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 25. (1894)

Any seat after a long tramp.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 376. (1938)

A Chinese proverb. The Arabic version is, "Any water in the desert."

9 The worse the Passage, the more welcome the Port.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4848. (1732)

There is a similar Latin proverb, "Post tot naufragia portum" (After so many shipwrecks, the harbor).

10 Seek sailor, the safe harbors. (Tutos pete, navita, portus.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iv, l. 625. (c. A. D. 8)

It is safe riding in a good haven.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 16/2. (1659)

'Tis good riding in a safe Harbour.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5083. (1732)

11 We have reached the port whither my course was directed. (Contigimus portus, quo mihi cursus erat.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 812. (c. 1 B. C.)

My haven's found; Fortune and Hope, adieu.

Mock others now, for I have done with you.

(Inveni portum Spes et Fortuna valet.

Nil mihi vobiscum ludite nunc alios.)

PRUDENTIUS, Epitaph. (c. A. D. 375) The ascription is by BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, ii, iii, 6. Latin version of Greek epitaph on the tomb of Francesco Pucci, in the church of S. Onofrio, Rome. JANUS PANNONIUS (JEAN DE CISINGE), Onofrio. (c. 1460)

Quoted in slightly different form by Le Sage, Gil Blas, bk. ix, ch. 10, last lines, and prefixed to the 1520 edition of Sir Thomas More's Epigrams.

12 Everything is now safe in port. (Omnis res est iam in vado.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 845. (166 B. C.) Plautus uses the same expression in Aulularia.

To sail into port. (In portu navigare.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 46. (1508)

POSSESSION

See also Keeping

13 The deuill hath eleuen poynts of the law against you; that is, possession.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 97. (1630)

At this day the Turk hath eleven points of the law in Jerusalem, I mean possession.

FULLER, The Holy War. Bk. v, ch. 29. (1639)

Possession is eleven points of the Law, and they say there are but twelve.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 191. (1678)

L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables, p.291. (1692)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Upon this you take immediate possession, and so you have the best part of the law on your side.

FARQUHAR, Twin-Rivals. Act ii, sc. 2. (1703)

Possession is a mighty Matter indeed; and we commonly say, 'tis eleven Points of the Law.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 213. (1709)

Possession . . . would make it much surer. They say it is eleven points of the Law!

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, John Bull. Pt. iv, ch.3. (1712)

Poor Nic. has only possession; eleven points of the law!

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, The Law Is a Bottomless Pit. Pt. iii, ch. 9. (1712)

Eight points of the law: 1. A good cause; 2. A good purse; 3. An honest and skilful attorney; 4. Good evidence; 5. Able counsel; 6. An upright judge; 7. An intelligent jury; 8. Good luck.

GEORGE AUGUSTUS SELWYN (attr.), when a candidate for Chamberlain of the City of London, c. 1750.

She had possession, and that is nine points of the law.

B. H. MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Ch. 21. (1809)

Take all necessary measures to secure that possession, which sages say makes nine points of the law.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 37. (1817)

In those days possession was considerably more than eleven points of the law.

T. L. PEACOCK, Maid Marian. Ch. 5. (1822)

There is a coarse axiom . . . that possession is nine points of the law. We have possession.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Mary Anerley. Ch. i. (1880)

He knew that possession is sometimes more than nine points of the law.

J. S. FLETCHER, The Diamonds. Ch. 3. (1923)

Possession is nine points of the law and self-possession is the other one.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr's Almanack, p. 15. (1906)

Proof is ninety points of the law.

JONATHAN LATIMER, The Lady in the Morgue, p. 216. (1936)

<sup>1</sup> Possession was the strongest tenure of the law.

BIDPAI, Fables: The Cat and the Two Birds. (c. 300 B. C.)

Possession is worth an ill chartour.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (c. 1595) The French say, "Possession vaut titre" (Possession is as good as a title).

<sup>2</sup> The pleasure of possessing Surpasses all expressing.

DRYDEN, Farewell, Ungrateful Traitor. (1681)

Possession means to sit astride of the world, Instead of having it astride of you.

KINGSLEY, Saint's Tragedy. Act i, sc. 2. (1848)

To know how to do without is to possess. (C'est posséder les biens que savoir s'en passer.)

J. F. REGNARD, Le Joueur. Act iv, sc. 13. (1696)
See also under MODERATION.

<sup>3</sup> We despise what we possess. (Nostri nosmet paenitet.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 172. (161 B. C.) MONTAIGNE, Essays, bk. iii, ch. 5, translates this, "Nous estimons à vice nostre estre" (We count our existence an offence). On the other hand, there is another Latin proverb which says, "Beati possidentes" (Blessed are those who possess).

An object in possession never retains the same charms it had in pursuit. (Nihil enim aequè gratum est adeptis, quam concupiscentibus.)

PLINY, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 15. (A. D. 98)

The thing possessed is not the thing it seems.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Civile Warres. Bk. ii, st. 104. (1595)

All things that are,

Are with more spirit chased than enjoy'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, ii, 6, 12. (1597)

Possession hinders enjoyment.

GRACIAN, Art of Worldly Wisdom. (1647)

'Tis strange, what different Thoughts inspire

In Man, Possession, and Desire;

Think what they wish so great a Blessing,

So disappointed when possessing.

SWIFT, Desire and Possession, l. 1. (1727)

Prospect is often better than Possession.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3958. (1732)

Possession is the grave of bliss.

A. EDWARD NEWTON, Amenities of Book-Collecting. Ch. 3. (1918) An old proverb, usually quoted, "Possession is the grave of pleasure." See also under WOOING.

<sup>4</sup> The want of a thing is perplexing enough, but the possession of it is intolerable.

VANBRUGH, The Confederacy. Act i, sc. 3. (1705)

<sup>5</sup> It is always much pleasanter to acquire than to enjoy. (Il est toujours plus sensible d'acquérir que de jouir.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 232. (1746)

POSSESSIONS

See also Goods, Property, Riches

<sup>6</sup> Tread not in the furrow of another.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. viii, l. 15. (c. 700 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

Enter not into the fields of the fatherless. (Agrum pupillorum ne introas.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 10. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> Enjoy your possessions as mortal; see to them as though immortal. (Re frueri ut natus mortalis; dilige sed rem tanquam immortalis.)

AUSONIUS, Epigrams, 145. (c. A. D. 375) Quoting Menander. Lucian has the same thought, "Enjoy your possessions as about to die, but spare them as though about to live."

<sup>8</sup> The wise man carries his possessions within him. (ὁ σοφὸς ἐν αὐτῷ περιφέρει τὴν ὁσίαν.)

BIAS, Apothegm. (c. 570 B. C.) DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bias, sec. 88, paraphrases this, "Make wisdom your provision for the journey from youth to old age, for it is a more certain support than all other possessions." Usually condensed to "I carry all my possessions with me," as Cicero gives it, Paradoxa, i, 1, "Omnia mecum porta mea." Cited by VALERIUS MAXIMUS, Facta et Dicta Memorabilia. Bk. vii, sec. 2 (c. A. D. 15) Bias, as the original quotation shows, referred to his wisdom—he was one of the Seven Wise Men of Greece—but Mlle. Fanny Bias, an opera singer, on leaving Paris, pointed to her face and figure as she said, "Like my illustrious ancestor, Omnia mea mecum porto." See LAROUSSE, Fleurs Historiques. The French also say, "Porter tout son saint-Crépin avec soi." Crépin is the patron saint of shoemakers.

I have lost nothing; all my possessions are with me. (Nihil; omnia mea mecum sunt.)

STILBO, when Demetrius asked him if he had lost anything in the sack of Megara, where his estate had been plundered and his daughters raped. See SENECA, De Constantia, v, 6. A learned man has always in himself a store of riches. (Homo doctus in se semper divitias habet.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fable 22. (c. 25 B. C.) This is the fable of Simonides, who, when caught in a shipwreck, remarked "All my possessions are about me" (Mecum mea sunt cuncta), jumped overboard without trying to save anything else, and got safe to shore, while his companions, loaded down with their property, were drowned. Simonides, of course, was quoting Bias.

He has all his possessions on his back. (ἅπαν τὴν οὐρανὴν ἠμφίεσται.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, iii, 12. (c. 950)

He carrieth all his wardrobe about him.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)

1 A little in one's own pocket is better than much in another man's purse.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1615)

2 Crates lets go of Crates' possessions lest Crates' possessions out-Crates Crates. (Κράτης ἀπολύνει τὰ Κράτητος ἵνα μὴ τὰ Κράτητος κρατήσῃ τὸν Κράτητα.)

CRATES, Epigram, when he threw his possessions to the people. (c. 325 B. C.) See APOSTOLIUS, Proverbs, x, 5. JOHN OF DAMASCUS gives the epigram in slightly different form, "Crates sets free the goods of Crates lest they come to be the possessor and he the possessed." APULEIUS, Florida, xiv, says that Crates simply cried, "Crates Cratetem manumittit" (Crates sets Crates free). SUIDAS, Lexicon, gives this in Greek, ἐλευθεροῖ Κράτητα Κράτης.

He does not possess possessions, his possessions possess him. (οὐχ οὗτος τὴν οὐρανὴν κέκτηται, ἀλλ' ἡ οὐρὰ τοῦτον.)

BION, of a wealthy miser. (c. 250 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Bion. Bk. iv, sec. 50.

If a man owns land, the land owns him.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Wealth. (1860)

My cow milks me.

EMERSON, Journal. Vol. v, p. 406. (c. 1870)

3 It is an olde sayinge: he that hath both shepe, swyne, and bees, slepe he, wake he, he maye thryue.

JOHN FITZHERBERT, The Boke of Husbandry, p. 74. (1523)

Who so keepe wel sheepe and bee'n,
Sleepe or wake, their thrift cooms in.

CHARLES BUTLER, The Feminine Monarchie, p. 139. (1609)

4 Many a Man would have been worse, if his Estate had been better.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

5 Kings this meum and tuum should not know.

GREENE AND LODGE, A Looking Glasse for London and Englande, C ii j. (1594)

He had contempt for those ridiculous distinctions of meum and tuum.

HENRY FIELDING, Jonathan Wild. Ch. 14. (1743)

What a careless, even deportment hath your borrower! . . . what a liberal confounding of those pedantic distinctions of meum and tuum.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: The Two Races of Men. (1820)

The first thing we learn is Meum, the last is Tuum. None can have lived among children without noticing the former fact; few have associated with men and not remark the latter.

HARE, Guesses at Truth, i, 3. (1827)

Peace would be general in the world, if there were neither mine nor thine. (Gran p.ee sarrebbe in terra, se non vi fosse il mio, e il tuo.)

THOMAS FIELDING, Proverbs of All Nations, p. 79. (1824) An Italian proverb.

I'm afraid you do not distinctly perceive the difference between those important pronouns, meum and tuum.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 1. (1850)

He had a good healthy sense of meum, and as little of tuum as he could help.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Way of All Flesh. Ch. 2. Meum, Tuum, Suum, set all the world together by the ears. (Mine, thine, his.)

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 48. (1904)

6 A man careth not to possesse that thing, which no man coveteth to have.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 11. (1574) Pettie, tr.

7 Much is required of them to whom much is given.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 3. (1843)

8 All came from and will go to others.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 44. (1640)

Estate in two Parishes is bread in two wallets.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 233.

When all men have what belongs to them, it cannot be too much.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 977.

To review one's store is to mow twice.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1005.

1 Care increases with possessions. (πλείων μὲν πλεόνων μελέτη.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 380. (c. 800 B. C.)

Care follows increasing wealth. (Crescentem sequitur cura pecuniam.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 16, l. 17. (23 B. C.)

The increase of possessions augments care.

Babylonian Talmud. Pirké Aboth, ii, 7. (c. 450)

Beter is, lytel to have in ese

Then muche to have in malese.

UNKNOWN, Kyng Alisaunder, l. 7365. (c. 1300)

Little goods, little care.

JOHN DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 161. (1633)

Much coin much care.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 98. (1639)

Little wealth, little care.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Little gear, less care.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 236. (1721)

Little wealth, little woe.

CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 101. (1875)

More store, more stink.

Folk-Lore. Vol. xii, p. 82. (1901)

Little cattle little care.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 92. (1917)

2 Who hath many pease maie put the mo in the pot.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

3 Why, in a life so brief, do we strive for great possessions? (Quid brevi fortes iaculamur aevo multa?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 17. (30 B. C.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 19.

4 Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? (οὐκ ἐξεστίν μοι ὃ θέλω ποιῆσαι ἐν τοῖς ἐμοῖς;)

New Testament: Matthew, xx, 15. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Aut non licet mihi quod volo, facere?"

May we not do with our own what we list?

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 364. (1629)

A Man may make bold with what's one's own, one would think.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 278. (1666)

These evicting gentlemen claimed the right of all men to do as they would with their own.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies, ii, 545. (1877)

5 All the possessions of mortals are mortal. (Mortale est omne mortalium bonum.)

METRODORUS, Fragments. Frag. 35. (c. 175 B. C.)

Nothing is really our own. (Nihil esse proprium quoquam.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 716. (166 B. C.)

I'm the only thing in my house I can call my own. (Ego meorum solus sum meus.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 587. (c. 161 B. C.)

Nothing in this life is given to a mortal as his own for good. (Nihil esse in vita proprium mortali datum.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Bk. xxvii, frag. 777, Loeb. (c. 131 B. C.)

Think nothing your own which can alter. (Nihil proprium ducas quicquid mutari potest.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 424. (c. 43 B. C.)

6 Is there noo more ynke lefte in thy penne?

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. H3. (1540)

He hath no ink in's pen, i. e. no money in his purse, or no wit in his head.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 254. (1678)

7 Hold on to whatever is yours. (Quod tuum est teneas tuum.)

PLAUTUS, Cistellaria, l. 768. (c. 200 B. C.)

Hold fast whan ye haue it (quoth she) by my lyfe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Mery owne thinge to kepe.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wife, l. 60. (c. 1460) See also GETTING AND KEEPING.

8 What's yours is mine, and of course all mine is yours. (Quod tuumst meumst, omne meumst autem tuum.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 329. (c. 196 B. C.) Later on, in l. 714, Plautus says, "What's mine is yours" (Quod meum erit id erit tuum).

We have what he had, he has what we had. (Quod habebat nos habemus, iste id habet quod nos habuimus.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 217. (c. 186 B. C.) A prostitute is talking of one of her lovers.

He who says, What is yours is mine and what is mine is mine is a wicked man.

Babylonian Talmud: Pirké Aboth, v, 13. (c. A. D. 450) The full quotation is: "There are four types of character in men: (i) He who says, 'Mine is mine, and thine is thine,' that is the moderate type; (ii) he who says, 'Mine is thine, and thine is mine,' that is the vulgar type; (iii) he who says, 'Mine is thine, and thine is thine,' that is what the good man says; (iv) he who says, 'This is mine, and mine is mine,' that is what the wicked man says."

That which is mine should bee yours and yours your own.

GEORGE PETTIE, Pelite Pallace, p. 88. (1576)

What's mine is yours and what is yours is mine.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, v, 1, 543. (1604)

Mine will now be yours; and . . . yours would be mine.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, v, 2, 150. (1606)

The English ever say, That which is mine is my own.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 278. (1666)

What's mine is my own; what's my Brother's is his and mine.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5512. (1732)

What's yours is mine, and what's mine is my own.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

What's hers is mine; what's mine is my own, quoth the husband.

FORBY, Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 430. (1830)

Whatever is not nailed down is mine. Whatever I can pry loose is not nailed down.

COLLIS P. HUNTINGTON (?), Epigram. (c. 1890)

What's yours is mine, and what's mine's yours.

FRANCIS ILES, Before the Fact. Ch. 6. (1932)
His attitude had been, "What's hers is mine, and what's mine's my own."

KIERAN ABBEY, Let the Coffin Pass, p.13. (1942)

1 Who does not own himself would Samos own.
(ὅς αὐτὸν αὐτὸν οὐκ ἔχει Σάμον θέλει.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Sayings of Spartans, 233D.
(c. A. D. 95) A proverb which Plutarch says originated at the close of the Peloponnesian war, 404 B. C., when the Athenians, having surrendered their city, declared that it was only right that Samos should be left to them, but the Spartans said, "Do you, at a time when you do not even own yourselves, seek to possess others?" See DIO CHRYSOSTOM, Oration lxxiv, 637M. The proverb is also cited by DIOGENIANUS, vii, 34.

2 One of the best of all earthly possessions is self-possession.

GEORGE D. PRENTICE, Prenticeana, p.155. (1860)

3 The circumstances of others seem good to us, while ours seem good to others. (Aliena nobis, nostra plus aliis placet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 28. (c. 43 B. C.)
How comes it, Maecenas, that no man living is content with the lot which either he has chosen or which chance has thrown in his way, but praises those who follow other paths? (Qui fit, Maecenas, ut nemo, quam sibi sortem | seu ratio dederit seu fors obiecerit, illa | contentus vivat, laudet diversa sequentis?).

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, No. i, l. 1. (35 B. C.)
The fat ox desires the trapping of the horse; the horse desires to plough. (Optat ephippia bos, piger optat arare caballus.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 14, l. 43. (20 B. C.)
The crops are always more abundant in other people's fields, and our neighbor's herd has richer udders. (Fertilior seges est alienis semper in agris | vicinumque pecus grandius uber habet.)

IVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 349. (c. 1 B. C.)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vi, 72.

My neighbor's field is richer than my own. (Vicini nostro quia pinguior.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. vi, l. 14. (c. A. D. 58)
The crop of our neighbor seems bigger and better than our own. (Maiorque videtur et melior vicina seges.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. xiv, l. 142. (c. A. D. 120)
Eche others byrdes or iewels, ye dooe weie
Aboue your owne.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)
"Our neighbor's hen seems a goose."

Your pot broken seems better than my whole one.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 272. (1640)
The other side of the road always looks the cleanest.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius. (1852)
In the fields, the best grain is another man's food;
on the road, the pretty woman is another man's wife.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 682. (1872)

4 Any possession beyond the needful is a burden. (Quicquid plus quam necesse est possideas premit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 603. (c. 43 B. C.) See also under RICHES.

5 He has a good estate, but that the right owner keeps it from him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 78. (1678)
They say he has a great estate, but only the right owner keeps him out of it.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

6 Wyse men done sey store ys no sore.

GEORGE RIPLEY, The Compound of Alchymy, xii, viii. (1471) In ASHMOLE, Theatrum Chemicum, p. 186.

Gredinesse, to drawe desyre to his lore

Saieth, . . . store is no sore.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)
The worlde waxeth harde, and store (thei saie) is no sore.

UNKNOWN, Respublica. Act i, sc. 1. (1553)
JONSON, Magnetick Lady. Act ii. (1632)
MASSINGER, New Way. Act iii, sc. 2. (1633)
etc., etc.

7 Great possessions depend on Fate;
On diligence small possessions wait.

(Ta fu yu ming, hsiao fu yu ch'in.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2635. (1875)

8 You think everything is yours, but a little the King has.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

9 Partake of thy possessions in joy of heart, turning not back. It is good for a man to eat his food.

UNKNOWN, Admonitions of an Egyptian Sage, p. 8, l. 6. (c. 2100 B. C.) Gardiner, tr.

Why bear a bow thus worthless as the wind?
(τί νυ τόξον ἔχεις ἀνεμώλιον αὐτῶς;)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxi, l. 474. (c. 850 B. C.)
ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ix, 20, gives the Latin as "Frustra habet qui non utitur" (It is useless to possess what can't be used).

What I ate I have, also the delightful deeds of wantonness and love which I did and suffered; whereas all my wealth is gone. (κεῖν ἔχω ὅσα ἔφαγον, καὶ ἐφύβρισα καὶ μετ' ἔρωτος | τέρπην ἔπαθον· τὰ δὲ πολλὰ καὶ δλβια πάντα λένυνται.)

SARDANAPALUS, Epitaph. (c. 625 B. C.) As recorded by ATHENAEUS, 530. See also Greek Anthology, xvi, 27.

Possessions are of no value unless they are used.
(οὐδὲν ἢ κτήσις, εἰ μὴ ἢ χρήσις προσή.)

AESOP, Fables: The Miser. (c. 570 B. C.) A miser converts all his possessions into money, and melts the money into a ball of gold, which he buries in the ground. A thief substitutes a stone for it, and points out to the miser that the stone is just as valuable to him as the gold, since he did not use the gold.

The ware is not his that gathers it, but his that enjoys it. (La robba non é á chi la fa, ma á chi la gode.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

So much is myne, as I enjoy, or els geue for Gods sake. (Tanto è mio quanto io godo, e do per Dio.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32.

Good is no good, but if it be spend.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheards Calender. May, l. 71. (1579)

A man hath no more good than he hath good of.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 10. (c. 1595)

Whatsoever the goods of fortune are, a man must have a proper sense to savour them: it is the enjoying and not the possessing of them, that makes us happy.

JOHN FLORIO, tr., Montaigne's Essays. Bk. i, ch. 42. (1603)

So much is mine as I possesse, and give or lose for God's sake.

UNKNOWN, Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 17.

(1629) FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 4198, modifies this to, "So much is mine as I enjoy, and give away for God's sake." See also under GIFT AND GIVING.

Goods are theirs that enjoy them.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 849. (1640) Cited by Ray and Fuller.

A Man has no more Goods, than he gets good by.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 276. (1732) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1749.

Sit down and enjoy what little you have, while the lunatic rushes out to look for more.

MARY LASSWELL, Suds in Your Eye, p. 160. (1942) Quoted as a Spanish proverb.

<sup>1</sup> The gods have not granted to all men to possess all things. (ὁὐ πάρτα θεοὶ πάντων ἔδωκαν ἔχουσιν.)

UNKNOWN, Epigram, Palatine Anthology. Bk. xii, epig. 96. (c. 950)

<sup>2</sup> As long as I am rich reputed,
With solemn voice I am saluted;
But wealth away once worn,
Not one will say good morn.

UNKNOWN. In Reliquiae Antiquae, p. 207. (c. 1525)

Now I have got an Ewe and a Lamb, every one cries, Welcome Peter.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3690. (1732)

Now I have a sheep and a cow, every body bids me good-morrow.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

<sup>3</sup> Own is owne.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Hendyng, 26. (c. 1300) Alwaie owne is owne, at the recknyngis eend.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546) Suum cuique is our Roman justice.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, i, 1, 280. (1593) Suum cuique: To every man his own.

My owne's my owne.

JOHN MARSTON, Antonio's Revenge. Act ii, sc. 2. (1602)

II—Possessions: Everyone Likes His Own

<sup>4</sup> We love our own warts and scars. (Naevos nostros et cicatrices amamus.)

AUSONTUS, Cupido Cruciat: Dedication. (c. A. D. 380)

<sup>5</sup> To every bird its nest is beautiful. (Ad ogni uccello suo nido è bello.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 214. (1856) An Italian proverb. The French have a similar jingle, "A chaque oiseau son nid est beau."

Nobody spits in his own beard. (Niemand speiet in seinen eigenen Bart.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 348. German.

<sup>6</sup> Everyone finds his own work excellent. (Suum cuique pulcrum est.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. v, ch. 22, sec. 63. (45 B. C.) Cicero is speaking of "Playwrights and poets and such horses' necks," to quote Dorothy Parker. PLINY, Naturalis Historia, xiv, 6, has the same thought, "Suum cuique placet." The Germans say, "Jedem Narren gefällt seine Kappe" (Every fool is satisfied with his own cap).

A creator praises his own work. (Auctor opus laudat.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 9, l. 9. (A. D. 13) The Germans have the same proverb, "Jeder lobt seine eigene Arbeit."

Every potter praises his own pot, and more if it be broken. (Cada ollero su olla alaba, y mas si la trae quebrada.)

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 351. (1855) The French say, "Chaque potier vante sa pot"; The Germans, "Ein jeder Pfaff lobt sein Heiligtum" (Every priest praises his own relics).

<sup>7</sup> Every peddler thinks well of his pack.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Panier. (1611) Every pedler prayseth his owne needles.

MABBE, tr., Celestina (T.T.), p. 161. (1631)

<sup>8</sup> An ass looks fairest to an ass, and a pig to a pig. (ὁσος τ' ὄνῳ κάλλιστος, ὅς δὲ τῷ σὺλ.)

EPICHRMUS, Fragments. Frag. 3. (c. 500 B. C.)

The Latin is, "Asinus asino, sus sui pulcher."

Everything is dear to its parent. (τῷ τεκόντι πᾶν φίλον.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus Coloneus, l. 1108. (c. 408 B. C.)

Often the foul is fair in the eyes of love. (πολλὰκις τὰ μὴ καλὰ καλὰ πέφανται.)

THEOCRITUS, Elegies. Eleg. vi, l. 19. (c. 270 B. C.)

What is mine is dear to me, as his own is dear to every man. (Meus mihi, suos cuique est carus.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 400. (c. 200 B. C.)

To my mind my little monkey beats the lot. (Iudicio superest omnibus iste meo.)

AVIANUS, Fables. Fab. xiv, l. 14. (c. A. D. 400)

From Aesop's fable, which tells how Jupiter offered a prize to the person with the most beautiful offspring, and among the competitors the monkey, with her flat-nosed, hairless baby, proudly took her place. The gods roared with laughter (which proved how stupid they were), and gave the prize to some one else, but the monkey only hugged her little one the harder and said, "Nevertheless I think my own baby the most beautiful of them all."

Every one thinks his own son beautiful.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 30. (c. 1258)

Everyone thinks his own beautiful. (Suum cuique pulchrum.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 15. (1508)

Included by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 6, with the rendering, "Euery man thynketh his owne thyng fayre."

1 The crow thinkth her owne birds fairest in the wood.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)
Every one is lightly in love with that which is his owne.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 244. (1576)

To everything nothing is more dear nor more admirable than its own kind. (À chasque chose il n'est rien plus cher et plus estimable que son estre.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

The owl in the fable set her young Ones up for the greatest Beauties that ever flew.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 160. (1709)

Where yet was ever found a mother,
Who'd give her booby for another?

JOHN GAY, Fables. Ser. i, fab. 3, l. 33. (1727)

The beetle is a beauty in the eyes of its mother.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 60. (1817)

The Flemings say, "Every one thinks his own owl a falcon."

De Lord can' make no chil'en so black but what dey mother loves 'em.

MARK TWAIN, A True Story. (1875)

There's only one pretty child in the world, and every mother has it.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 119. (1917)

2 It is a hard Thing to have a great Estate, and not fall in love with it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2862. (1732)

3 An ill-favoured thing, sir, but mine own.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, v, 4, 61. (1600)

A rag, if you will; but my rag is dear to me. (Guenille, si l'on veut; ma guenille m'est chère.)

MOLIÈRE. (a. 1672)

POSSIBILITY

4 We should measure both the length of our stride and the extent of our hope by what is possible. (καὶ τοῖς σκέλεσι καὶ ταῖς ἐλπίσι τὰ δυνάτα δεῖ διαβαίνειν.)

EPICTETUS (?), Fragments. No. 31, Loeb. (c. A. D. 100) STOBÆUS, iv, 46.

5 Possibilities are infinite.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3903. (1732)

Lamartine is credited with, "Le réel est étroit, le possible est immense" (The real is limited, the possible is immense).

6 Now thou seest . . . the possibilite of thilke that thou wendest had been impossible.

THOMAS USK, The Testament of Love, iii, iii, 122. (1387)

Everything is possible, including the impossible.

BENITO MUSSOLINI, Speech, at Trieste, 20 Sept., 1920. See also IMPOSSIBLE.

POSSUM

7 He is playing 'possum with you.

ADIEL SHERWOOD, A Gazetteer of the State of Georgia, p. 20. (1829)

He swears that I'm only playing 'possum.

W. G. SIMMS, Border Beagles, i, 170. (1840)

There is a belief among many naturalists that the Opossum never "plays 'Possum," in an attempt to deceive.

Mammals of America, p. 296/2 (1917)

POST

8 Thus fro poost to pylour he was made to daunce.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Assembly of Gods, l. 1147.

(c. 1420) That is, from whipping-post to pillory, although some think that the proverb has reference to the treatment of Christ before the crucifixion. However, TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 193, points out that an allusion from the end of the 16th century, "Tossed from post to pillar like an espial or runagate," suggests rather an origin in punishment like running the gauntlet. The present compiler thinks the first explanation, from whipping-post to pillory, the correct one. The French say, "Être renvoyé de Caïphe à Pilate," which of course, refers to the trial of Jesus Christ.

From poste to piller tossed shalt thou be.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Cytelen and Uplondysman. (Percy Soc), p. 67. (1514)

And turmoyleth away fro pyler to post.

ROBERT COPLAND, The Hye Way to the Spytell Hous, l. 715. (1536)

From post to piller, wyfe, I haue beene tost.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

This light sex is tumbled and tossed from post to pillar.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, All Fools. Act iii, sc. 1. (1605)
To be tost from post to pillory.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 190. (1670)

There can be no doubt as to Ray's opinion of the proverb's origin.

Hunted from post to pillar.

ANDREW MARVELL, Works, iii, 279. (1673)

So badgered, and worried, and tortured, by being knocked about from post to pillar, and from pillar to post.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 24. (1852)

It all makes me glad I am old, and thereby soon to take leave of a world in which one is driven, unoffending, from pillar to post.

HENRY JAMES, Letters, i, 435. (1903)

It's a wicked shame to hound me from pillar to post.

WALLACE, The India-Rubber Men. Ch. 7. (c. 1920)

She's been dragged around from pillar to post.
JUDSON PHILLIPS, Bottom Deal. (1941)

1 Between you and me and the bed-post, young master has quarrelled with old master.

LORD LYTTON, Eugene Aram. Bk. iv, ch. 1. (1832) In confidence.

Between you and me and the general post.

CHARLES DICKENS, Letters, i, 2. (1838)

Between you and me and the post, sir, it will be a very nice portrait.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 10. (1839)

Between you and me and the post, I don't think they have much money.

MRS. ALEXANDER, The Wooing O't. Bk. iii, ch. 4. (1873)

Between you and me and the bed-post,—as the old ladies say—I don't want Jack to have her.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Christowell. Ch. 13. (1882)

Between you and me and the wall.

BERNARD SHAW, O'Flaherty V.C. (1915)

Between you and me and the gatepost, she's a difficult woman to live with.

EDGAR WALLACE, The India-Rubber Men. Ch. 7. (c. 1920)

Between you and me and the doorpost I haven't given up all hope.

PETER CHEYNEY, A Trap for Bellamy, p. 163. (1941)

2 Where there is a brave man, there is the thickest of the fight, there the post of honor.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 2 Dec., 1839.

POST OF HONOR, POST OF DANGER, see under DANGER.

POSTERITY

3 We are always doing something for Posterity, but I would fain see Posterity do something for us.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 583. (1712) Ascribed to "an old fellow of a college."

The man was laughed at as a blunderer who said in a public business: "We do much for posterity; I would fain see them do something for us."

MRS. ELIZABETH MONTAGU, Letters, 1 Jan., 1742. As to posterity, I may ask (with somebody whom I have forgot) what has it ever done to oblige me?

THOMAS GRAY, Letter to Dr. Warton, 8 March, 1758.

Why should we put ourselves out of the way to do anything for posterity? What has posterity done for us?

SIR BOYLE ROCHE, Speech, in Irish Parliament, 1780. See FLAKINER, Studies in Irish History.

Few can be induced to labor exclusively for posterity, and none will do it enthusiastically. Posterity has done nothing for us.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, at Springfield Ill., 22 Feb., 1842.

4 The care of Posterity is most in them that have no Posterity.

BACON, Essays: Of Parents and Children. (1597)

5 People will not look forward to posterity, who never look backward to their ancestors.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. (1790)

6 Contemporaries appreciate the man rather than the merit; but posterity will regard the merit rather than the man.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. (1820)

7 Posterity, thinned by the crimes of its ancestors. (Vitio parentum | rara iuventus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 2, l. 23. (23 B.C.)

Posterity pays for the sins of its fathers.

(Culpa maiorum posterius luunt.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni. Bk. vii, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 50)

Posterity is a most limited assembly.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, 3 June, 1862.

8 Believe it, posterity! (Credite, posteri.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 19, l. 2. (23 B.C.)

He lives to posterity. (Vivit ad posteros.)

SENECA, Luciliūm. Epis. xciii, sec. 5 (c. A. D. 64)

Posterity is always the author's favourite.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, to Hester Thrale, 27 Oct., 1777.

9 The ancients said our ancestors, we say posterity. (Les anciens disaient nos ancêtres, nous disons la postérité.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 228. (1810)

Posterity? Why, posterity is just around the corner.

KAUFMAN AND RYSKIND, Of Thee I Sing. Act ii, sc. 3. (1931) A play upon Hoover's "Prosperity is just around the corner." See PROSPERITY.

10 Friendship is of any day, but posterity is of eternity.

LANGDON, Babylonian Proverbs. Tablet K 4347. (c. 2300 B.C.)

11 Think of your ancestors and your posterity. (Maiores vestros et posteros cogitate.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 32. (c. A. D. 98)

12 Posterity gives to every man his proper praise. (Suum cuique decus posteritas rependit.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 35. (c. A. D. 116)

Posterity pays every man his honour.

BEN JONSON, Sejanus His Fall. Act iii, sc. 1 (1603)

Posterity will give everyone his due.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 50. (1814)

POT

See also Pitcher

13 How agree the kettle and the earthen pot together? for if the one be smitten against the other, it shall be broken. (Quid communicabit cacabus ad ollam? quando enim se colliserint, confringetur.)

BEN STRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiii, 2. (190 B.C.) The Revised Version has, "What fellowship shall the earthen pot have with the kettle?"

A pot, as they say, and a stone do not go together. (χύτρα, φασί, καὶ πέτρα οὐ συμφωνεῖ.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, ch. xii, sec. 12.

(c. A.D. 100) A proverb derived from the fable of the earthenware pot and the bronze jar.

AESOP, 422 Halm; BABRIUS, 193; AVIANUS, 11.

If the stone falls on the pot, woe to the pot; if the pot falls on the stone, woe to the pot; in either case, woe to the pot.

Mishnah: Esther Rabbah, vii, 10. (c. 550) The Hindus say, "Whether the knife fall on the melon or the melon on the knife, the melon suffers."

I thinke not amisse to followe the fable of the earthen vessell, whiche in no wise woulde have the company of the brasen vessell.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 210. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Now see, what it is for thine earthen pitcher to knock with brass.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations, xxi, 5. (1612)

The earthen Pot must keep clear of the brass Kettle.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4494. (1732)

Fuller puts the proverb into its best form You are the vase of earth; beware of knocking yourself against the vase of iron.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigël. Ch. 11. (1822)

This is the proverb, The pot finds its own herbs. (Hoc est quod dicunt, ipsa olera olla legit.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode xciv, l. 2. (c. 57 B.C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 59. Everyone follows his own calling.

2 Such pot, such pot-lid.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Couverture (1611) See under LIKENESS.

That which will not make a Pot, may make a Pot-Lid.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4388. (1732)

3 See what a goodly port she bears, Making the pot with two ears!

CHARLES COTTON, Burlesque upon Burlesque, p. 236. (1675) Putting the arms akimbo.

4 A Pot that belongs to many, is ill stirr'd and worse boil'd.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 360. (1732)

TOO MANY COOKS, see under COOK.

5 He's dwindled down from a Pot to a Pipkin.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2457. (1732)

He has eat up the Pot, and asks for the Pipkin.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1868.

'Tis God's blessing that makes the Pot boil.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5081. But the French say, "Je sais à mon pot comment les autres bouillent" (I know from my own pot how the others boil). According to the English proverb, "One pot sets another boiling."

Touch Pot, touch Penny.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5270.

6 What's the use of watching? A watched pot never boils.

MRS. GASKELL, Mary Barton. Ch. 31. (1848)

Don't you know that vulgar old proverb that says that "a watched pot never boils"?

MARY E. BRADDON, Cloven Foot. Ch. 38. (1880)

A watched example never boils.

OGDEN NASH. Title of poem. (1938)

A watched pot never boils, they say—only this one finally did.

CLARE BOOTHE, Europe in the Spring, p. 277. (1940)

A watched phone never rang.

DOROTHY HUGHES, Bamboo Blonde, p. 241. (1941)

7 How the pottes walke about!

THOMAS HARMAN, A Caueat for Common Cursetors, p. 32. (1567) Of a drinking bout, where the pot of liquor is passed from one to another.

The pott continually walking, infused desperate and foolish hardinesse in many.

SIR RICHARD HAWKINS, Observations in his Voyage into the South Sea, p. 216. (1622)

Author of other little trivial matters merely to get bread, and make the pot walk.

ANTHONY WOOD, Athenae Oxoniensis, ii, 157. (1691)

8 To a boiling pot flies fly not.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

9 So poor, that it is hardly able to keep the Pot boiling for a parson's dinner.

PETER HEYLIN, Ecclesia Restaurata, p. 100. (1661)

We'll find out rich husband to make you the pot boil.

SIR WILLIAM D'AVENANT, Play-House to be Let. Act v. (c. 1663)

She teaches you economy, which makes the pot to boil.

CHRISTOPHER SMART, Ballads. No. 13. (a. 1771)

I think this piece will help to boil my pot.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), The Bard Complimenteth Mr. West. (c. 1790) Probably the origin of the term "pot-boiler" as applied to a piece of writing.

No fav'ring patrons have I got, But just enough to boil the pot.

WILLIAM COMBE, The Tour of Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque, xxiii, 18. (1812)

"Keep the pot a bilin', sir!" said Sam.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 30. (1837)

To employ them, as a literary man is always tempted, to keep the domestic pot a-boiling.

LOWELL, My Study Windows, p. 139. (1871)

Somebody's got to keep the pot boiling.

MARGARET KNIGHT, Rendezvous with the Past, p. 5. (1940)

To keep the pot boiling (or the wolf from the door). To do something that brings in money and keeps one alive. Adumbrated by "Peter Pindar," ca. 1790.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Keep. (1941)

1 Neither pot broken nor water spilt.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546)
In other words, "No harm done." BARNABE
RICH, Irish Hubbub, p. 16. (1619) HOWELL,
English Proverbs, p. 14. (1659)

2 Little potte soone whot.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
Now were not I a little pot and soon hot, my very lips might freeze to my teeth.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv,
1, 6. (1594)

Though I be but a little pot, I shall be as soon hot as another.

JOHN DAY, Ile of Guls. Act iii, sc. 2. (1606)
A little pot's soon hot. Little persons are commonly choleric.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 115. (1670)
It is an old saying that "a little pot is soon hot."

WASHINGTON IRVING, *Knickerbocker's History
of New York*. Bk. iv, ch. 1. (1809)

He is a little chimney heated hot in a moment.
H. W. LONGFELLOW, *The Courtship of Miles
Standish*. Pt. vi. (1858)

3 The weaker goeth to the potte.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
To go to pot: to be cut to pieces like meat for the pot; to be ruined or destroyed. See also under WEAKNESS.

We may assure our selves if any more
We take the field, our side goes to the pot.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk.
xxxviii, st. 60. (1591)

Many a wiser man than I hath gone to pot.
UNKNOWN. In Somers Tracts, vii, 88. (1649)

If these brains don't help me out, . . . to pot goes Pilgrarlick.

UNKNOWN, Terence Made English, p. 7. (1694)
All our fine project gone to pot!

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, The Reprisal. Act i, sc. 8.
(1757)

4 My pot is whole, and my water cleane.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

5 When the pot's full it will boil over.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 357. (1721)

When the Pot boils over, it cooleth itself.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5602. (1732)

6 There is death in the pot. (Mors in olla.)
Old Testament: II Kings, iv, 40. (c. 600 B. C.)
Usually quoted as referring to drinking, but the reference is really to a mess of pottage which was supposed to have been poisoned.

7 Zuo longe geth thet pot to the watere, thet it comth to-brok whom.

DAN MICHEL, Ayenbite of Inwyt, p. 206.
(1340) See under PITCHER.

8 The pot boils badly, and your friends desert
you. (Olla male fervet, . . . amici de medio.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 38. (c. A. D. 60)
When your affairs take a bad turn. See
FRIENDS AND ADVERSITY.

II—Pot and Kettle

See also Fault: Faults of Others

9 Said the crab, when he clawed the snake:
A friend should be straight, not crooked-hearted.

(εὐθὺν χρῆ τὸν ἐταῖρον ἔμμεν καὶ μὴ σκολιά φρονεῖν.)

ALCAEUS(?), Attic Scolia. (c. 595 B. C.) See
EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, iii, 567.

10 Ill may the Snight [snipe] the Woodcock twight [twit], for his long bill.

JAMES BELL, tr., Walter Hadden Against Oso-rius, 374. (1581)

The Snite needs not the woodcock betwite.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 344. (1678)
There is Winter enough for the Snipe and Woodcock too.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4939. (1732)

11 The ass says to the mule, "Get out, long ears."
(Dijó el asno al mulo: "Anda para orejudo.")

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 225. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The Germans say, "Ein Esel schimpft den andern, Langohr" (One ass calls another Long-ears).

12 The frying-pan said to the kettle, get away black-eye. (Dijó la sarten á la caldera, quitate allá, ojinegra.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 67. (1615)
The form shows Moorish influence, for the Arabic form is, "The kettle reproached the kitchen spoon, thou blackee." The last word is usually given as "culnegra" (blackbottom), instead of "ojinegra" (blackeye), and in the Dialogo de las Lenguas it runs "tira alla culnegra." Another form is, "Dijó la corneja al cuervo, quitate alla negro" (Said the crow to the raven, get away, blackamoor).

The Frying-pan said to the Kettle, avant black Brows.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4551. (1732)

13 The pot calls the pan burnt-arise.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 8. (1639)
As another old proverb says, do not let the kettle call the pot burnt-arise.

APHRA BEHN, The Feign'd Curtizans. Act v,
sc. 4. (1679)

14 It is much more easy to accuse one sex than to excuse the other; 'tis according to the saying, The pot and the kettle.

CHARLES COTTON, tr., Montaigne's Essays. Bk.
iii, ch. 5, ad fin. (1685)

The Pot calls the Kettle black Arse, when one accuses another of what he is as deep in himself.

B. E., New Dictionary of the Canting Crew:
Pot. (a. 1700)

Dares thus the devil rebuke our sin! Dare thus the kettle say the pot is black!

HENRY FIELDING, The Covent Garden Tragedy.
Act ii, sc. 5. (1732)

Do you know what the pot called the kettle?

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 32. (1834)

Come, you know you're a liar, Huck.—The pot and the kettle, anyhow, Tit, as far as that goes.

WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year. Ch. 2. (1841)

I've been as good a son as ever you were a brother. It's the pot and the kettle, if you come to that.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 24. (1844)

Kettle called Pot—you know what.

FITZGERALD, Polonius: Date and Dabitur. (1852)

How black you are, said the pot to the kettle.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 490. (1872)

It certainly was not for the pot to call the kettle black.

SHAW, Man and Superman: Preface. (1903)

Don't let's play pot and kettle.

PHOEBE ATWOOD TAYLOR, The Deadly Sunshade, p. 51. (1941) The proverb is common to all languages. Besides those already cited, the Italians say, "La padella dice al pajuolo, Fatti in là, che tu mi tingi" (The pan says to the pot, Keep off, or you'll smutch me); the Dutch, "Den pot verwijt den ketel dat hij zwart is" (The pot reproaches the kettle because it is black); the Hindus, "The colander said to the needle, Get away, you have a hole in you"; the Catalans, "Death said to the man with his throat cut, How ugly you look"; the Russians, "The pig said to the horse, Your feet are crooked and your hair is worthless"; the Greeks, "The ass said to the cock, Fat-headed"; the Scots, "Crooked carlin, said the cripple to his wife." As MARVIN, Curiosities in Proverbs, p. 126, points out, the habit of faultfinding is so common all the world over, that it is not remarkable that hundreds of proverbs should be devoted to it.

1 He should have a hail pow that cal's his neighbours nikkienow [hillock].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (c. 1595)

He had need to have a heal pow, that calls his neighbour nitty know.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 133. (1721)

2 The mud Buddha scolds the clay Buddha.

H. H. HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 136. (1937)

3 Clodius impeaches the adulterers. (Clodius accusat maechos.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 57.

(1869) "The sooty oven mocks the black chimney."

4 He is no whit the wiser man who laughs at you, and drags a tail behind him. (Nihilo ut sapientior ille, | qui te deridet, caudam trahat.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, No. iii, l. 52. (30 B. C.)

A reference to the trick played by children of tying a tail to people without their knowing it.

5 The poker ridicules the stove. (Le fourgon se moque de la paele.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595) The usual French form is, "La pelle se moque du fourgon" (The shovel scoffs at the poker).

The French also say, "Le chaudron mâchure la poêle" (The kettle blackens the stove or frying-pan), and "Le chaudron trouve que le poêle est trop noire."

The kiln calls the oven burnt hearth.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 196. (1639)

The kiln calls the oven burnt-house.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 110. (1670)

6 The ass said to the cock, "Big head." (εἶπεν ὁ γαῖδαρος τὸν πετεινὸν, κεφαλὰ.)

NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 33. (1831)

7 The pig for his blackness is mocked by the crow,

Who of his own inkiness nothing doth know. (Lao ya hsiao chu 'hê; tzu ch'ou pu chiao tê.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 579. (1875)

These rhyming couplets are very popular with the Chinese.

The old raven laughs at the blackness of the pig.

CHAMPION, Racial Poverbs, p. 444. Japanese.

8 The raven chides blackness.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus, ii, 3, 221. (1601)

Thou art a bitter bird, said the raven to the starling.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 195. (1678)

The Raven said to the Rook, stand away, black-Coat.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4729. (1732)

POTATO

9 What does it signify who your father was? if he had been better than you, . . . I'm blessed if you would not have been like a potato, the best part of you underground.

FREDERICK CHAMIER, Tom Bowling. Ch. 1.

(1841) An expansion of the proverb, "The best part of a potato is underground."

10 "Well, ta, ta, my turnip!" observed Mr. Waddle, and away the coaches rattled in opposite directions.

HENRY COCKTON, Valentine Vox. Ch. 5. (1840)

Lord what a turnip I am!

G. K. CHESTERTON, The Innocence of Father Brown: The Honour of Israel Gow. (1911)

Hello, my old potato.

ALFRED E. SMITH, Greeting, to Franklin D.

Roosevelt, at the Democratic State Convention at Albany, N.Y., 4 Oct., 1932. It was the first time the two men had met since Roosevelt had defeated Smith for the presidential nomination at the Democratic National Convention at Chicago, July 1, after a bitter contest. James A. Farley, then National Chairman, says in his autobiography, that he was standing by Roosevelt at the Albany convention and that Smith did not say this, but Smith, in a letter to the compiler, writes, "At the State convention for the nomination of Governor, President Roosevelt was on the platform as I came up to place Governor Lehman's name in nomination and I said to him, 'Hello, my old potato.'"

<sup>1</sup> This is what I call small potatoes and few of a hill.

DAVID CROCKETT, Exploits and Adventures in Texas, p. 25. (1836)

Political foes are such very small potatoes, that they will hardly pay for skinning.

E. G. PAIGE, Dow's Patent Sermons, i, 199. (c. 1849)

The Kurnel is rather small pertaters.

ARTEMUS WARD, The Prince of Wales. (1866)

Ward uses the phrase three or four times. It was proverbial for many years to denote insignificance. "Small potatoes and few in a hill" was an elaboration.

Aren't some men small potatoes?

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 76. (1920)

<sup>2</sup> It isn't at all a clean potato.

GEORGETTE HEYER, No Wind of Blame, p. 69. (1939)

<sup>3</sup> Tell that to the potatoes. Don't I know better.

W. G. SIMMS, Charlemont, p. 321. (1856)

POTTAGE, see Porridge

POTTER

<sup>4</sup> The potter is at enmity with the potter. (καὶ κεραμεὶς κεραμεῖ κοτέει.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 25. (c. 800 B.C.)

The Latin form is, "Figulus figulo invidet,"

TWO OF A TRADE NEVER AGREE, see under TRADE.

<sup>5</sup> Shall the clay say to him that fashioneth it, What makest thou? (Numquid dicet lutum figulo suo: Quid facis?)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xlv, 9. (c. 725 B.C.)

The vessel that he made of clay was marred in the hand of the potter. Dissipatum est vas, quod ipse faciebat e luto manibus suis.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, xviii, 4. (c. 700 B.C.)

A vase is begun; why, as the wheel goes round, does it turn into a pitcher? (Amphora coepit | institui: currente rota cur urceus exit?)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 21. (c. 20 B.C.)

The Latin proverb is, "Lutum nisi tundatur non ut urceus" (Unless the clay is well pounded, the vase is not fashioned).

Hath not the potter power over the clay, of the same lump to make one vessel unto honour, and another unto dishonour? (ἢ οὐκ ἔχει ἐξουσίαν ὁ κεραμεὺς τοῦ πηλοῦ ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ φύραματος ποιῆσαι ὃ μὲν εἰς τιμὴν σκεῦος, ὃ δὲ εἰς ἀτιμίαν.)

New Testament: Romans, ix, 21. (c. A.D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Non habet potestatem figulus luti ex eadem massa facere aliud quidem vas in honorem, aliud vero in contumeliam?" There are two Greek proverbs relating to potters, κεραμεὺς ἀνθρώπος (Man is as the potter), and κεραμεὺς πλούτος (Potter's wealth), of uncertainty.

You are said to be fashioned of Promethean clay. (Ficta Prometheo diceris esse luto.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams, Bk. x, No. 39. (A.D. 93)

Prometheus fashioned the human race out of clay.

The potters clay beeing once hardened in the Oven, will not bee made soft againe.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 89. (1576)

This is the porcelain clay of human kind.

DRYDEN, Don Sebastian. Act i, sc. 1. (1690)

The precious porcelain of human clay.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 11. (1818)

<sup>6</sup> And the chief priests took the silver pieces . . . and bought with them the potter's field, to bury strangers in. (τὸν Ἀγρὸν τοῦ Κεραμέως.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxvii, 6-7. (c. A.D.

50) The reference is to the thirty pieces of silver which Judas received for the betrayal of Christ, and which he threw down in the temple before hanging himself. The Vulgate is, "Agrum figuli in sepulturam peregrinorum."

POVERTY

<sup>7</sup> There are God's poor and the devil's poor: those the hand of God hath crossed; those that have forced necessity on themselves by a dissolute life.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, ii, 232. (1629)

There is God's Poor and the Devil's Poor, the first from Providence, the other from Vice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4895. (1732)

Fuller tightens up a too-diffuse aphorism.

<sup>8</sup> Beware of robbing the poor and of oppressing the weak.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. iv, l. 4. (c. 700 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

Rob not the poor, because he is poor; neither oppress the afflicted in the gate. (Non facias violentiam pauperi, quia pauper est: neque conteras egenum in porta.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 22. (c. 350 B.C.)

Rob not God nor the Poor, lest thou ruin thyself; The Eagle snatcht a Coal from the Altar, but it fired her Nest.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

<sup>9</sup> They sold the righteous for silver, and the poor for a pair of shoes. (Pro eo quod venderit pro argento iustum, et pauperem pro calceamentis.)

Old Testament: Amos, ii, 6. (c. 750 B.C.)

<sup>10</sup> Poverty does not mean the possession of little, but the non-possession of much. (Paupertas enim est non quae pauca possidet, sed quae multa non possidet.)

ANTIPATER, Fragments. No. 54. (c. 100 B.C.)

See SENECA, Ad Lucilium, lxxxvii, 39.

It is not the man who has too little, but the man who craves more, that is poor. (Non qui parum habet, sed qui plus cupit, pauper est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. li, sec. 6. (a. A.D. 64)

He that fearyth that he shall lacke, and is not contented with that he hath, but soroweth for more, . . . is not ryche, but poore.

GEORGE COLVILLE, tr., Boethius, p. 34. (1556)

Nor hee poore that hath but little, but hee that wants more.

ARTHUR WARWICK, Spare Minutes, p. 4. (1634)
He is not poor that hath little, but he that desireth more.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 311. (1640)
He is not poor that hath not much, but he that craves much.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1937. (1732)
Poverty consists in feeling poor.

EMERSON, Domestic Life. (1870)

<sup>1</sup> Without a peg. (ἐχουσι μηδὲ πάταλον.)

ARISTOPHANES, Ecclesiazusae, l. 284. (c. 393 B. C.) Used of beggars.

He hasn't a scraper or a lamp. (οὐδ' ἐστὶν αὐτῷ σταλεγγίς οὐδὲ λήκυθος.)

ARISTOPHANES, Fragments. Frag. 14. (c. 390 B. C.)
To empty the salt-cellar. (ἀλιὰν πρυπάν.)

CALLIMACHUS, Epigrams. No. 48, l. 1. (c. 250 B. C.) A mark of extreme poverty.

He cannot call his hair his own. (Non illum capillos liberos habere.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 38. (c. A. D. 60)
He has not a penny left to buy a halter. (μὲν οὐδὲ ὀβολὸν ὥστε πριάσθαι βρόχον ἐσχηκότας.)

LUCIAN, Timon. Sec. 20. (c. A. D. 175) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 49, who gives the Latin: "Nec obolum habet, unde restim emat." BLAND, Proverbs, i, 70, comments, "He has no property, 'ne in pelle quidem,' not even in his skin. 'Beg,' Gratiano says to Shylock, 'that thou mayst have leave to hang thyself, and yet, Thou hast not left the value of a cord.'" (SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, iv, i, 364.)

I am cast at carts arse.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)

A keafe of borage
Might buy all the substance that they can sell.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10.

I knew him, not woorth a grey grote.

He was at an ebbe, though he be now a flote,
Poore as the poorest.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
Unable to geue a dog a lofe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7.
Suche driftes draue he, from yll to wars and wars,
Tyll he was bare as a byrdes ars.

Money, and money woorth, did so misse him
That he had not one peny to blisse him.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8.
Thus had he brought haddocke to paddocke,
Till they both were not woorth a haddocke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 10.
Euery stoole he sate on, was penniles bench.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues and His England (Arber),
p. 244. (1580) See under BENCH.

He had not a pennie to buy his dog a loaf.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 50. (c. 1595)
Bitten [cheated] of all the bite [money] in his bung [purse], and turned to walk penylesse in Marke lane, as the saying is.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), x, 99. (1591)
He is so poor that he has not enough salt to season his water. (No le alcaca la sal al agua.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 71. (1814) A Spanish proverb. Bland adds that Xenophon, in one of his dialogues, makes an interlocutor say, "He has not so much land as would furnish dust for the body of a wrestler." The French say, "N'avoir plus un radis."

He had not twopence to rub on a tombstone.

J. J. HISSEY, Untravelled English. (1907) More often quoted, "to jingle on a tombstone."

Naked-handed and empty-fisted. (Ch'ih shou k'ung ch'üan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2573. (1875)

We'll both be on our uppers.

GUY WETMORE CARRYL, How a Cat Was Annoyed and a Poet Was Booted. (c. 1900)

With no soles to one's shoes.

An artist décavé—how do you say that?—on his uppers.

H. C. BAILEY, The Long Dinner. (1920)

You spend the following month on your uppers.

OGDEN NASH, Let Me Buy This One. (1940)

TO COME TO BUCKLE AND THONG, see under BUCKLE.

<sup>2</sup> Beggary and poverty are sisters, says the proverb. (πτωχείας πενίαν φάμεν εἶναι ἀδελφήν.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 549. (388 B. C.)

Plain of poverty and die a beggar.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 191. (1678)

<sup>3</sup> Come away; poverty's catching.

APHRA BEHN, The Rover. Pt. ii, act i. (1677)

<sup>4</sup> Evil is poverty if it come from sin.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiii, 24. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr. The usual rendering is, "Poverty is evil in the mouth of the ungodly" (Nequissima paupertas in ore impij).

Better the life of a poor man under a shelter of logs than sumptuous fare among strangers.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxix, 22.

<sup>5</sup> No man should commend poverty but one who is poor. (Nemo paupertatem commendaret nisi pauper.)

ST. BERNARD, Sermons. (a. 1153).

It is more easy to praise poverty than to bear it.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 432. (1855)

Leave it to the poor to pretend that poverty is a blessing.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act ii. (1905)

<sup>6</sup> We have an army of nearly two millions belonging to the submerged classes.

WILLIAM BOOTH, In Darkest England, i, ii, 22. (1890)

The Submerged Tenth—is it, then, beyond the reach of the nine-tenths in the midst of whom they live?

WILLIAM BOOTH, In Darkest England, i, ii, 23. The submerged tenth, that part of the population which is permanently in poverty and misery. (Contrasted with upper ten.)

Oxford English Dictionary: Submerged.

<sup>7</sup> Of all God's creatures, man Alone is poor.

JANE WELSH CARLYLE, To a Swallow Building Under Our Eaves. (a. 1866)

- 1 Poverty and an ugly face cannot be hid.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 373. (1938) A Chinese proverb.
It's the poor who give alms to the poor.
CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 444. Japanese.
- 2 He is poor indeed that can promise nothing.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 142. (1639)
Cited by RAY, p. 132; FULLER, No. 1941.
- 3 A poor man's table is soon spread.
THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 136. (1633)
Cited by RAY, p. 132; SPURGEON, ch. 5.
- 4 As the Verse or Proverb says—New Beer, new Bread, and green Wood will make a Man's Hair grow through his Hood. [i. e. reduce him to poverty.]
WILLIAM ELLIS, The Modern Husbandman, i, 91. (1750)
New bread, new beer, an' green 'ood, 'ull bring ruin to any man's house.
BARZILLAI LOWSLEY, Berkshire Glossary, p. 30. (1888)
- 5 Contented poverty is an honorable estate. (Honestia res est laeta paupertas.)
EPICURUS, Fragments. No. 475. (c. 300 B. C.)
Remember to bear patiently the burden of poverty. (Paupertatis onus patienter ferre memento.)
CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. Bk. i, No. 21. (c. 175 B. C.) The Germans say, "Man muss die Noth ertragen | Und nicht darüber klagen" (One must endure poverty and not complain about it).
Be patient in poverty and you may become rich. (Nai tē p'in, shou tē fu.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2690. (1875)
- 6 Poor men are fain of little thing.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (c. 1595)
Poor folk is fain of little. Because they have no hopes to get much.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 279. (1721)
Poor Folks must say, thank ye, for a little.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3893. (1732)
- 7 For one poor Man there are an hundred indigent.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.
- 8 A poor Man's Debt makes a great Noise.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 355. (1732)
- 9 Poore men are pleased with potage aye, till better vittailles fall.
ULFIAN FULWELL, Ars Adulandi, sig. G1. (c. 1580)
Poore folkes are glad of porridge.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 225. (1639)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3892. (1732)
Poor folks must be glad of pottage.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)
- 10 None is poorer than he who dreads poverty.
SALOMON IBN GABRIOL, Mibhar ha-Penininim (Choice of Pearls). No. 563. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr.

- 11 Let not Ambition mock their useful toil,
Their homely joys, and destiny obscure;
Nor Grandeur hear with a disdainful smile
The short and simple annals of the poor.
THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 29. (1750)
Above, th' eternal washing droops in air,
From wall to window hanging, everywhere!
What poet would not yield to their allure
"The short and simple flannels of the poor!"
JOHN REED, Forty-two Washington Square. (1913)
- 12 If there is food left over in the kitchen, there are poor people in the street.
H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 454. (1937)
- 13 Poverty is the test of civility and the touchstone of friendship.
HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 358. (1823)
- 14 Poverty does not kill one.
GEORGE HERZOG, Jabo Proverbs, p. 232. (1936)
- 15 Never dare to taunt a n'yan with deadly poverty, which eats out the heart. It is sent by the deathless gods. (μηδέ ποτ' ούλομένην πενήνην θνητοφθόρον ἀνδρὶ τέτλαθ' ὀνειδίζειν, μακάρων δόσιν αἰὲν ἐόντων.)
HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 717. (c. 800 B. C.)
Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 23F.
Whoso mocketh the poor reproacheth his Maker. (Qui despicit pauperem, exprobrat factori eius.)
Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 5. (c. 350 B. C.)
When I mock poorneess, then heaven make me poor.
BEN JONSON, The Case is Altered. Act iii, sc. 1. (1598) The French say, "Celui qui dévore la substance du pauvre, y trouve à la fin un os qui l'étrangle" (He who devours the substance of the poor, finds there at the end a bone which chokes him).
- 16 Men saie, long standyng and small offring
Maketh poore persons.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. II, ch. 9. (1546)
- 17 He is not poor who has enough of things to use. (Pauper enim non est, cui rerum suppetit usus.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. xii, l. 4. (20 B. C.)
I do not regard a man as poor if the little which remains is enough for him. (Non puto pauperem, cui quantulumcumque superest, sat est.)
SENECA, Ad Lucillum. Epis. i, sec. 5. (a. A. D. 64)
- 18 Every poor man is a fool.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)
Poverty, the reward of honest fools.
COLLEY CIBBER, Richard III, ii, 2. (c. 1715)
- 19 Nothing is to be got without pains except poverty.
F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 225. (1902)

<sup>1</sup> What mean ye that ye beat my people to pieces, and grind the faces of the poor? (Facies pauperum commolitis?)

Old Testament: Isaiah, iii, 15. (c. 725 B.C.)

<sup>2</sup> I was a father to the poor. (Pater eram pauperum.)

Old Testament: Job, xxix, 16. (c. 350 B.C.)

I am the friend of the unfriended poor.

P. B. SHELLEY, To Cambria. (c. 1818)

<sup>3</sup> Let the needy be thy family.

JOSE BEN JOCHANAN, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, i, 5. (c. 200) Oesterley, tr.

Withhold not thine hand from showing mercy to the poor.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 412. (1678)

<sup>4</sup> Poortha [poverty] is a pain, but no disgrace.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 278. (1721)

He bears Poverty very ill, who is ashamed of it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1811. (1732)

Poverty is not a Shame, but being ashamed of it is.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3908.

Having been poor is no shame, but being ashamed of it is.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

No shame in honest poverty.

SCOTT, St. Roman's Well. Ch. 35. (1824)

La pobreza no es vileza, Poverty is no disgrace, says the Biscayan proverb.

HARE, Guesses at Truth, i, 148. (1827)

Poverty is not a thing to be proud of.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act ii. (1905)

<sup>5</sup> Life, like poverty, has strange bedfellows.

LYTTON, The Caxtons. Pt. iv, ch. 4. (1849)

That dismal proverb which tells us how poverty makes us acquainted with strange bed-fellows.

THACKERAY, Roundabout Papers: On Some Carp. Par. 2. (1863)

<sup>6</sup> To have nothing is not poverty. (Non est paupertas habere nihil.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, ep. 32. (A.D. 93)

O how compelling is poverty. (O quantum cogit egestas.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xi, epig. 87.

<sup>7</sup> Ye have the poor always with you. (πάντοτε γὰρ τοὺς πτωχοὺς ἔχετε μεθ' ἑαυτῶν.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxvi, 11. (c. A.D. 50)

Mark, xiv, 7, has, "Ye have the poor with you always," and John xii, 8, has, "The poor always ye have with you." The Vulgate is, "Semper pauperes habetis vobiscum."

<sup>8</sup> Poverty of possessions may easily be cured, but poverty of soul never. (La pauvreté des biens est aysee à guarir; la pauvreté de l'ame, impossible.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1595)

<sup>9</sup> Rattle his bones over the stones,

He's only a pauper whom nobody owns.

THOMAS NOEL, The Pauper's Drive. (c. 1840)

Over the hill to the poor-house I'm trudgin' my weary way.

WILL CARLETON, Over the Hill to the Poor-House. (1871)

The poorhouse is vanishing from among us.

HERBERT HOOVER, Speech, 11 Aug., 1928, accepting the Republican nomination for President.

<sup>10</sup> He is poor who counts his flocks. (Pauperis est numerare pecus.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xiii, l. 824. (A.D. 7)

La Fontaine puts the line into French, "Le pauvre seulement doit compter son troupeau."

<sup>11</sup> In a change of government, the poor change nothing but their masters. (In principatu commutando saepius | nil praeter domini nomen mutant pauperes.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fable. 15. (c. 25 B.C.)

<sup>12</sup> Blessed is he that considereth the poor. (Beatus qui intelligit super egenum, et pauperem.)

Old Testament, Psalms, xli, 1. (c. 350 B.C.)

He that hath pity upon the poor lendeth unto the Lord. (Foeneratur Domino qui miseretur pauperis.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 17. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>13</sup> Nobody lives as poor as he was born. (Nemo tam pauper vivit quam natus est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 482. (c. 43 B.C.) Quoted by SENECA, De Providentia, vi, 6.

No Man lives so poor as he was born.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3604. (1732)

NAKED I WAS BORN, see under NAKEDNESS.

<sup>14</sup> In poverty, faith is as good as fortune. (Secunda in paupertate fortuna est fides.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 655. (c. 43 B.C.) This maxim has been rendered in various ways, but its obvious meaning is that if a man reduced to poverty retains his faith in the future, there is hope for him.

<sup>15</sup> The death of the poor is repose.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 17. (c. 1258)

Quoted as a saying of the Prophet.

<sup>16</sup> My friends are poor but honest.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, 3, 201. (1602)

It is a hard task to be poor and leal. Because poverty is a great temptation to steal.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 211. (1721)

'T is hard (but glorious) to be poor and honest: An empty Sack can hardly stand upright; but if it does, 't is a stout one!

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750. See also under SACK.

<sup>17</sup> I'm one of the undeserving poor.

BERNARD SHAW, Pygmalion. Act ii. (1912)

<sup>18</sup> Cultivate poverty like a garden herb, sage.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden: Conclusion. (1854)

<sup>1</sup> Remember the poor—it costs nothing.
MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.
(1893)

<sup>2</sup> Poverty is a hateful blessing. (Paupertas est odibile bonum.)

VINCENT OF BEAUVAIS, Speculum Quadruplex.
Bk. x, ch. 71. (c. 1250)

Paupertas, quod Pacience, est odibile bonum.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. B text, passus xiv, l. 275. (1377)

Povert is hateful good.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Wife of Bath, l. 339. (c. 1386)

<sup>3</sup> To bring a man to the pavement. (ἐπ' οὐδεὶ φῶτα καθίσσαι.)

UNKNOWN, Homeric Hymns: To Hermes, l. 284. (c. 700 B.C.) To strip a man bare. Literally, "To make him sit on the floor," that is, to take everything, down to his last chair.

II—Poverty: Its Compensations

<sup>4</sup> Thou know'st not how great strength lies in these: a wallet, a peck of pease, and never a care. (οὐκ οἶσθα, πήρα δύναμιν ἡλικην ἔχει | θέρμουν τε χοῖνις καὶ τὸ μηδὲνός μέλει.)

CRATES, Apothegm. (c. 325 B.C.) See STOBAEUS, Florilegium, xcvi, 31.

Who-so that halt him payd of his poverté,
I holde him riche, al hadde he nat a sherte.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Wyf of Bath, l. 329. (c. 1388)

Art thou poor, yet hast thou golden slumbers?
O sweet content!

DEKKER AND CHETTLE, Patient Grissil: Song.
(1603)

<sup>5</sup> Poverty is the begetter of wisdom. (πενία δὲ τῷ σοφίαν ἔλαχε.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. (c. 430 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 22, with the Latin, "Paupertas sapientiam sortita est." "Persons who have no property," says BLAND, Proverbs, i, 99, "but what is procured by their industry, will endeavour more diligently to improve their understandings than those who are amply endowed."

Wind in the face makes a man wise. (Vent au visage rend l'homme sage.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1550)

<sup>6</sup> He that hath little is less dirty.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 438. (1640)

<sup>7</sup> What great advantage there is in mallow and asphodel. (ὅσον ἐν μαλάχῃ τε καὶ ἀσφοδέλῳ μέγ' ὠφελία.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 41. (c. 800 B.C.)

That is, poor man's fare, "bread and cheese." How safe and easy the poor man's life and his humble dwelling! (O vitae tuta facultas | pauperis angustique lares!)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk.v,l.527.(c. A.D. 60)

If we have not the world's wealth, we have the world's ease.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 213.(1721)

There is nothing perfectly secure but poverty.
LONGFELLOW, Letter, 13 Nov., 1872.

<sup>8</sup> Poverty, the mother of manhood. (Fecunda virorum paupertas.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i,l.165.(c. A.D. 60)

Poverty, the mother of temperance. (πενία μητέρα σωφροσύνας.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A.D. 425) See Greek Anthology, x, 61.

Poverty, the mother of health. (Paupertas sanitatis mater.)

VINCENT OF BEAUVAIS, Speculum Quadruplex. Bk. x, sec. 71. (c. 1250) The Italians have the same proverb, "Povertà, madre de sanità."

Pouerte is moder of helthe.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus xiv, l. 298. (1377) HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 474. (1640) RAY, Proverbs, p. 17. (1678) RICHARDSON, Clarissa, ii, 110. (1748)

A poore table is the mother of health.

SIR RICHARD BARCKLEY, The Felicitie of Man, iv, iii, 335. (1598)

Poverty is a Friend to Health.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3907.(1732)

POVERTY, MOTHER OF THE MUSES, see POET.

<sup>9</sup> The poor are the protégés of the gods. (δεῖ νομίζουσι οἱ πένητες τῶν θεῶν.)

MENANDER, The Lady of Leucas. Frag. 310K. (c. 330 B.C.)

Blessed be ye poor: for yours is the kingdom of God. (μακάριοι οἱ πτωχοί, ὅτι ὑμετέρας ἐστὶν ἡ βασιλεία τοῦ θεοῦ.)

New Testament: Luke, vi, 20. (c. A.D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Beati pauperes: quia vestrum est regnum Dei."

The poor are styled "God's own."

Midrash: Exodus Rabbah, fo. 31. (c. 450)

Be careful how you wrong those whose sole advocate is God.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penininim (Choice of Pearls). No. 494. (c. 1050)

<sup>10</sup> Poverty has no means to feed its passion. (Non habet, unde suum paupertas pascat amorem.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 749. (c. 1 B.C.)

"However," Ovid adds, "this is scarcely a sufficient reason for wishing to be poor."

Breathing in content,

The keen, the wholesome air, of poverty.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Bk.i,l.306.(1814)

<sup>11</sup> Poverty is sister to good sense. (Bonae mentis soror est paupertas.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 84. (c. A.D. 60)

<sup>12</sup> Poverty is the only nurse of craftsmanship. She is the true teacher of labor. (ἡ πενία μύνα τὰς τέχνας ἐγγείρει | αὐτὰ τῷ μόχθοιο διδάσκαλος.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xxi, l. 1. (c. 270 B.C.)

Poverty teaches all the arts. (Paupertas artis omnis perdocet.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 178. (c. 200 B.C.) The Germans say, "Die Armuth, wo sie eingekehrt, Den Menschen alle Künste lehrt" (Poverty, where it enters, teaches men all the arts).

Poverty compels many an experiment. (Hominem experiri multa paupertas iubet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 247. (c. 43 B.C.)

Poverty is the discoverer of all the arts. (Paupertas . . . omnium artium repertrix.)

APOLLONIUS, De Magia. Sec. 18. (c. A.D. 35)

Poverty is the mother of all the arts and trades.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 214. (1666)

The Germans say, "Armuth ist aller Künste Stiefmutter" (Poverty is the step-mother of all art), and "Armuth ist der sechste Sinn" (Poverty is the sixth sense).

1 It is life near the bone, where it is sweetest.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 18. (1854)

III—Poverty: Its Penalties

2 Poverty, grievous and resistless ill. (ἀργάλεον ἱερὶα κακὸν ἀσχετον.)

ALCAEUS, To Poverty. Frag. 18. (c. 595 B.C.)

Quoted by STOBÆUS, Florilegium, xcvi, 17.

See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, i, 333.

I have tasted even the bitter aloe, and the taste was strong, but there is nothing more bitter than poverty.

ARIKAR, Teachings. Col. vii, l. 105. (c. 550 B.C.)

A curse is poverty. (κακὸν τὸ μὴ ἔχειν.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 405. (c. 420 B.C.)

Poverty, the most destructive pest in all the world. (πενία, . . . ἧς οὐδ' αὖτις οὐδὲν πέφυκε ὥσον ἐξωλέστερον.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 442. (388 B.C.)

The life of the poor is the curse of the heart.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxviii, 19. (c. 190 B.C.)

Poverty is a hissing and a reproach. (Paupertas maledictio probroque sit.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxv, sec. 11. (a.

A.D. 64)

All the days of the poor are evil. Ben Sira says, his nights also.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 100b. (c.

A.D. 350)

There is no affliction in the world more severe than poverty. Place all punishments in one scale and poverty in the other, and poverty will be the heavier.

Midrash Rabbah: Exodus, xxxi. (c. 610)

Grief is destruction, but poverty is the severest death.

Sepher Shashuim, p. 11. Also Mebakesh, 9b.

3 If thy fortune change that thou wexe povre. farewel freendshipe and felaweshipe.

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, l. 2749. (c. 1387)

Fy! Lak of coyn departith compaignie.

THOMAS HOCCEVE, Male Regle, l. 133. (1406)

Though love decree, departure death to bee,

Yet pouertie parteth felowship, we see.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

Pouertye and death will parte goode fellowship.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Feuer Pestilence. (1564)

Pouertie in the end partes friends.

THOMAS NASHE, The Unfortunate Traveller, p. 8. (1594)

Pouertie parts good company, and is an enemy to virtue.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (c. 1595)

Poverty parteth good fellowship.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 125. (1678)

Poverty trieth friends.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3914. (1732)

Kind was she, and my friends were free,

But Poverty parts good company.

JOANNA BAILEY, Poverty Parts Good Company.

(1823) Quoted by LOVER, Handy Andy.

Ch. 2.

See also FRIENDS AND ADVERSITY.

4 The poor must pay for all.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 99. (1639)

The poor man pays for all.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 257. (1678)

5 Poverty is an enemy to good manners.

SIR EDWARD DYER, Writings (Grosart), p. 97.

(1585) Quoted as "a prouerbe amongst us."

The rude inelegance of poverty.

ROBERT BLOOMFIELD, Farmer's Boy: Autumn, l. 82. (1801)

6 Poverty rendered their names unknown. (Paupertas obscurat nomina.)

ENNIUS, Alexander. Frag. 53, Loeb. (c. 180 B.C.)

7 Poverty teaches a man to play the villain from necessity. (πενία διδάσκει δ' ἄνδρα τῇ χρεΐα κακόν.)

EURIPIDES, Electra, l. 376. (c. 413 B.C.)

Poverty is the mother of crime. (Mater criminum necessitas tollitur.)

CASSIODORUS, Variae. Bk. ix, sec. 13. (a. A.D.

550) The Spanish form is the same, "La pobreza es madre de picardia."

Therefore clepeth Cassidore poverte "the moder of ruine," that is to seyn, the moder of overthrowing or falling down.

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 50. (c. 1387)

If poverty is the mother of crime, then want of sense is its father.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Sec. xi. (1688)

Mother of Miseries.

SOUTHEY, Maid of Orleans. Bk. iii. (a. 1843)

One may know the law, but starvation is hard to bear. (Ming chih wang fa, chi o nan tang.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2559.

(1875) Poverty causes crime.

8 The poor—none cares to win the poor for friends. (πένητας οὐδεὶς βούλεται κτᾶσθαι φίλους.)

EURIPIDES, Electra, l. 1131. (c. 413 B.C.)

A task it is to find anyone akin to a poor man.

(ἔργον εὐρεῖν συγγενῇ πένητός ἐστιν.)

MENANDER, The Brothers. Frag. 1K. (c. 300

B.C.) The English form is, "No one claims kindred with the poor."

No loyalty ever picked out the wretched as friends. (Nulla fides umquam miseros elegit amicos.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 525. (c. 200 B. C.)

The poor man has no comrade but the poor.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. iii, Apologue 28. (c. 1258)

If thou be povre, thy brother hateth thee,
And alle thy freendes fleeen fro thee, alas!

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Introduction to the Tale of the Man of Law, l. 120. (c. 1386)

See under FRIENDS AND ADVERSITY.

Poverty has no friends. (Paupertas nec illos habet amicos.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iv, cent. ii, No. 5. (1523)

In poverty not even parents are friends. (Mendico ne parentes quidem amici sunt.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, ii, 51. Poverty has the power of destroying even the love of a parent for his offspring. The Italians say, "Povertà non ha parenti" (Poverty has no relations). Poor folks' friends soon misken them.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 279. (1721)

Poverty, every door shut. (Armuth, alle Thür zuthut.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 303. (1856)

If you are poor keep out of a crowd; if you are unfortunate don't seek a relation. (Wu ch'ien hsiu ju chung; tsao nan mo hsin ch'ien.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 482. (1872)

On the day your horse dies and your gold vanishes, your relatives are like strangers met on the road.

H. H. HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 477. (1937)

1 There is no virtue, but pouertie wyl marre it. (Non è virtù, che pouerta non guasti.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

Poverty is a great enemy to human happiness; it certainly destroys liberty, and it makes some virtues impracticable.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Boswell, 7 Dec., 1782.

Poverty is a soft pedal upon all branches of human activity.

H. L. MENCKEN, Book of Prefaces. Ch. 4. (1917)

2 Pouertie is nought else but a candle, with the which light, we discouer many miseries, vnto which, man is subiect.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 41. (1578)

3 Pouertie is no vice, but an inconuenience.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 105. (1591)

Pouertie is no vice: yet a wofull inconuenience.

T. G., The Rich Cabinet, fo. 114. (1616)

Poverty is no sin.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 843. (1640)

Women of the meanest condition may make good wives; since Paupertas non est vitium; Poverty is no vice.

HENRY PEACHAM, The Worth of a Penny. (1641)

The Russians say, "Poverty is no sin, but twice as bad"; the French, "La pauvreté n'est pas un péché, Mieux vaut cependant la cacher" (Poverty is not a sin, nevertheless it is better to hide it).

Her poverty is not her crime, sir, but her misfortune.

MACKLIN, Man of the World. Act iv. (1781)

He found it inconvenient to be poor.

WILLIAM COWPER, Charity, l. 189. (1781)

Poverty is no disgrace to a man, but it is con-foundedly inconvenient.

SYDNEY SMITH. (a. 1845) See HOLLAND, Memoir.

4 Lice are the pearls of poverty.

ST. FRANCIS OF ASSISI. (c. 1210) See FORESTER, To the Indies, p. 7.

5 Poverty breaks Covenants.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3904. (1732)

Poverty is a Complication of Evils.

Poverty is an evil Counsellor.

Poverty is querulous.

Poverty makes Men poor-spirited.

Poverty on an old Man's Back, is a heavy Burthen.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 3905-3913.

6 Better the grave than a fall to poverty. (τέκνον, ζῶν ἐπαιτήσεως μὴ βιώσης κρείσσον ἀποθανεῖν ἢ ἐπαιτεῖν.)

SOLOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninin (Choice of Pearls). No. 564. (c. 1060)

Hebrew literature is filled with such aphorisms.

Herkne what is the sentence of the wyse:—

Bet is to dyen than have indigence.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Introduction to

The Tale of the Man of Lawe, l. 113. (c. 1386)

Therefore seith Salomon: that "bet it is to dye than for to have swich poverté."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 50.

Poverty is another death. (Paupertas mors altera.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 322. (1869)

Better die ten years sooner than live those years in poverty. (Yüan tuan shih nien shou, pu k'o lao lai p'ing.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1240. (1875)

Poverty is the open-mouthed, relentless hell which yawns beneath civilized society. And it is hell enough.

HENRY GEORGE, Progress and Poverty. Ch. 9. (1879)

7 There is bargayning for all thinges, whiche are fit to heale the diseases of povertie, and to get the health of riches.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 118. (1574)

His disease of all-shunn'd poverty.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, iv, 2, 15. (1608)

8 To be poor and seem poor is the very devil.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Friends in Council. Ser. ii, ch. 6. (1859)

To be poor and to look poor is the devil all over.

Folk-Lore. Vol. xxiv, p. 77. (1913)

9 Violence is bad for a poor man. (ὄβρις γὰρ τε κακὴ δειλῷ βροτῶ.)

HESED, Works and Days, l. 214. (c. 800 B. C.)

That is, the poor must be humble.

Poverty and anger do not agree.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 481. (1817)

Poore men haue no soules.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Three Hundred Epigrams.

No. 167. (1562) RAY, Proverbs, p. 21. (1670)

Poor men they say hes na soules.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (c.

1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 281, with the comment, "This is an old proverb in the time of Popery when the poor had no masses, or Dirige's said for them."

Neither does he know shame. (οὐδέ οἱ αἰδώς γίγνεται.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xxiv, l. 44. (c. 850 B.C.) Of a poor man.

A sense of shame belongs not at all to the needy man. (αἰδώς δ' οὐκ ἀγαθὴ κεχρημένον ἀνδρα κομίζει.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 318. (c. 800 B.C.)

Bashfulness is useless to a needy man. (Verecundia inutilis viro egent.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, sent. vii, No. 2.

(1523) Paraphrasing Hesiod's adage, which had become proverbial. "Poverty has no greater foe than bashfulness," is a variant.

Misterfull [needy] folk maun not be mensfull [modest].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 76. (c. 1595)

The misterfull must not be mensefull. They who are in need must importune.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 304. (1721)

Squeamishness was never yet bred in an empty pocket.

J. B. CABELL, Cream of the Jest, p. 86. (1917)

Cruel poverty. (Saeva paupertas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 12, l. 43. (23 B.C.)

The shame and ostracism of poverty. (Paupertatis pudor et fuga.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 24. (20 B.C.)

Squalid poverty. (Pauperies immunda.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 199.

Poverty is the strenuous life—without brass bands, or uniforms.

WILLIAM JAMES, The Varieties of Religious Experience. Ch. 14. (1902)

Every one louns o'er the dike where it is laighest [lowest]. Poor people are run down by everybody.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 97. (1721)

Little Jock gets the little dish, and it holds him ay long little. Poor people are poorly served, which prolongs their poverty.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 230.

The poor man's shilling is but a penny. Because he must buy everything at the dearest rate.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 337. (1721)

Nothing is more luckless than a poor man. (πένυτος οὐδὲν ἔστι δυστυχέστερον.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 597. (c. 330 B.C.)

Fortune, that arrant whore, Ne'er turns the key to the poor.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 4, 52. (1605)

7

A poor man, though he speak the truth, is not believed. (πένης λέγων τἀληθές οὐ πιστεύεται.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 856. (c. 330 B.C.)

8

Heart sickness is bad, belly sickness is worse, but that of the pocket is worst of all.

Midrash: Ecclesiastes Rabbah, 7. (c. 450)

9

Time was when genius was more precious than gold; but now it is monstrous barbarism to have nothing. (At nunc barbaria est grandis, habere nihil.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, No. viii, l. 4. (c. 13 B.C.)

Poverty is the greatest dishonesty.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from Any Whence: Countrey Newes. (1613)

'Tis still my maxim, that there is no scandal like rags, nor any crime so shameful as poverty.

FARQUHAR, Beaux' Stratagem, i, 1. (1706)

'Tis infamous, I grant it, to be poor.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Advice, l. 2. (1746)

The greatest of evils and the worst of crimes is poverty.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara: Preface. (1905)

10

The poor man everywhere lies low. (Pauper ubique iacet.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 218. (c. A.D. 8) Or "is despised." Lucan has "Paupertas fugitur, totoque arcessitur orbe" (Poverty is avoided and treated as a crime all the world over).

The skilfullest wanting money is scorned.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1670)

Poverty is certainly and invariably despised.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 26 Oct., 1751

11

The poor live miserably in every way. (Omnibus modis qui pauperes sunt homines miseri vivunt.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 290. (c. 200 B.C.)

A fourpenny life. (τετραβόλου βλος.)

PAUSANIAS, Fragment. (c. A.D. 160) As quoted by EUSTATHIUS, 140B. Four obols a day was the soldier's pay.

Squalor for the squalid is a maxim, Sirs.

MASON, Musk and Amber. Ch. 25. (1942)

12

Poverty causes me to be ridiculed. (Paupertas fecit ridiculus forem.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 177. (c. 200 B.C.)

Of all the woes of luckless poverty none is harder to endure than this, that it exposes men to ridicule. (Nil habet infelix paupertas durius in se, quam quod ridiculos homines facit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 152. (c. A.D. 120)

Poverty makes Men ridiculous.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3911. (1732)

13

So shall thy poverty come as one that travel-leth, and thy want as an armed man. (Veniet tibi quasi viator, egestas, et pauperies quasi vir armatus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, vi, 11. (c. 350 B.C.)

The Revised Version is, "So shall thy poverty come as a robber."

The destruction of the poor is their poverty.
(Pavor pauperum, egastas eorum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, x, 15. (c. 350 B. C.)

Poverty follows the poor.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92. a. (c. 400)

<sup>1</sup> Poverty breeds strife.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 354. (1678)

Want makes Strife, between the good Man and his Wife.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6109. (1732)

Want makes strife, 'Twixt man and wife.

BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 551. (1855)

<sup>2</sup> The poor man turns his cake, and another comes and takes it away.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 402. (1678)

The poor Man turns his Cake, and another comes and eats it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4714. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> The needy stain the garment of chastity with sin, as those who are hungry steal bread.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 19. (c. 1258)

Poverty borders on the denial of God. Poverty blackens the countenance in both worlds. Leisure and poverty will not combine, and the mind of the indigent cannot be at ease. Hast thou ever seen the hand of the suppliant tied behind his back, or the veil of chastity rent, or the hand amputated at the wrist, except by reason of poverty? [The punishment for theft was to amputate the hand.] God defend me from humiliating poverty.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 19.

<sup>4</sup> To one who aspires to power the poorest man is the most helpful, since he has no regard for his property, having none, and considers anything honorable for which he receives pay. (Homini potentiam quaerenti egentissimus quisque opportunissimus.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 86, sec. 3. (c. 40 B. C.)

He who has lost his wallet will go where you wish. (Ibit eo, quo vis, qui zonam perdidit.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. ii, l. 40. (c. 15 B. C.) Horace is telling the story of a soldier of Lucullus who by dint of many toils had laid by savings, but one night had them all stolen. Furiously he attacked a garrison in a city rich in treasure and captured it, winning fame, honors and twenty thousand sesterces. Soon after this, his commander, wishing to storm another fort, called upon the soldier to lead the attack, but the latter refused, with the explanation given above.

<sup>5</sup> The poorer one is the more devils one meets. (Yueh ch'ing yueh chien kuei.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 700. (1875)

He who has no store at home must gallop about for a living. (Chia wu chi tsan wei k'ou pên ch'ih.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2589.

<sup>6</sup> Poverty is to me a wretched crushing load. (Paupertas mihi onus visumst et miserum et grave.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 94. (161 B. C.) The Armenians say, "Poverty is a shirt of fire"; the Hebrews, "Poverty makes handsome women ugly"; the Italians, "Poverty is a bad guard for chastity," and "To be healthy and poor is to be half sick"; the Japanese, "Even the street-dog knows the house of a poor man."

<sup>7</sup> No man subject to poverty ever is able Either to speak or to act; his tongue is tied. (πᾶς γὰρ ἀνὴρ πενία δεδμημένος οὔτε τι εἰπεῖν οὔτ' ἔξει δύναται, γλῶσσα δὲ οἱ δέεται.)

THEOGNIS, Elegies, l. 177. (c. 550 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 22A. The proverbial form is, τῶν γὰρ πενήτων εἶσιν οἱ λόγοι κενοί (The words of the poor man are in vain).

So helpless is poverty. (ἀπορία τὸ δυστυχεῖν.)

EURIPIDES, Ion, l. 971. (c. 430 B. C.)

The poor man's wisdom is despised, and his words are not heard. (Sapientia pauperis contempta est, et verba eius non sunt audita.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ix, 16. (c. 250 B. C.)

Poverty, that great reproach, bids us do or suffer anything. (Magnum pauperies opprobrium iubet | quidvis et facere et pati.)

HORACE, Odes, iii, 24, 42. (23 B. C.)

There are many things which men dare not say when their clothes are in holes. (Plurima sunt quae | non audent homines pertusa dicere laena.)

JUVENAL, Satires, v, 130. (c. A. D. 120)

A poor man's tale cannot be heard.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 162. (1633)

The reasons of the poor weigh not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 635. (1640)

The poor man's reasons are of no weight.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 214. (1666)

Poor Men's Reasons are not heard.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3897. (1732)

The poor man is never free; he serves in every country. (Le pauvre n'est point libre; il sert en tout pays.)

VOLTAIRE, Les Guèbres. Act iii, sc. 1. (1769)

To be poor and independent is very nearly an impossibility.

COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. (1829)

The goat must browse where it is tied.

FITZGERALD, Polonius: Poverty. (1852)

The resolutions of a poor man are weak.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 494. (1872)

What power to bargain have the poor?

EDNA ST. VINCENT MILLAY, Gentlemen Cry, Peace. (1940) The Spaniards say, "A poor man is all plans," "The poor man's budget is full of schemes"; the French, "De moult se pourpense qui pain n'a" (He is very thoughtful who has no bread).

<sup>8</sup> The poor man's name is mentioned (only) because of his master.

UNKNOWN, Eloquent Peasant, B 1. 20. (c. 2000 B. C.) GUNN, tr. Referred to as "the proverb that people say."

IV—The Penniless Traveler May Sing Before Thieves

1 It is better, perhaps, after all, to live on bran and escape the shambles.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11. (c. 400 B. C.)

2 Poor folk fare the best.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 205. (1639)
Well fare nothing once a year; for then he is not subject to plundering.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1659)

3 A Thread-bare Coat is Armour-proof against Highwaymen.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 437. (1732)

4 Who can syng so mery a note,
As maie he, that can not chaunge a grote?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

Who so merry as he that hath nought to lose?
WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 39. (1672)
The old saying, No man sings a merrier note,
Then he that cannot change a groat.

L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables, p. 390. (1692)

Who doth sing so merry a Note,
As the Cobler, that cannot change a Groat!

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6449.
(1732) The Spanish form is, "Quando el Español canta, ó rabia, ó ne tiene blanca"
(When the Spaniard sings, he is either mad or he has nothing).

5 When you walk laden with gold you must beware of robbers. (Onusta incedis auro, latro vitandus est.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. No. xxii, sec. 3. (A. D. 384)

6 In danger a king finds safety in the disguise of a beggar; how much safer then is the lot of the really poor man than that of the lords of the earth! (In dubiis tutum est inopem simulare tyranno; | quanto igitur mundi dominis securius aevum | verus pauper agit!)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili, viii, 241. (c. A. D. 60)

Though you carry but few silver vessels with you in a night journey, you will be afraid of the cudgel of a freebooter, you will tremble at the shadow of a reed shaking in the moonlight; but the penniless traveler can sing before thieves. (Cantabit vacuus coram latrone viator.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 22. (c. A. D. 120)

A poor passenger can sing even before thieves. (Viator intrasses, coram latrone cantares.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. ii, ch. 4. (A. D. 524)

An hardy man of herte amonge an hepe of theues;
Cantabit pauper coram latrone viator.

WILLIAM LAGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus xiv, l. 305. (1377)

As who seith, a pore man, that berth no richesse on him by the weye, may boldly singe bifore theves, for he hath nat wherof to ben robbed.

CHAUCER (?), Boethius de Consolatione Philosophie. Bk. ii, Prose v, l. 210. (c. 1380)

Verray povert, it singeth proprely;

Juvenal seith of povert merily:

"The povre man, whan he goth by the weye, Bifore the theves he may singe and pleye."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Wyf of Bath, l. 335. (c. 1388)

The poore man affor the theeff doth syng.

LYDGATE, Fall of Princes, iii, 582. (c. 1440)

What man, the begger maie syng before the theefe. . . .

Yes, (quoth he), beggers maie syng before theeves,
And weepe before true men, lamenting their greeves.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

'Tis an old said saying, . . . a man purse-penniless may sing before a thief.

GEORGE PEELE, Edward I. Sc. 12. (1593)

The beggar may sing before the thiefe.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 312. (1614)

Clients returning before theefs may sing,
For back from London they can't money bring.

THOS. PEAKE, Parnassi Puerp., 21. (1659)

The money-less traveller can sing before a thief.

JOHN DUNTON, Athenian Sport, p. 155. (1707)

Beggars may sing before a Thief.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 964. (1732)

The poor traveller always sings safely even in company of thieves.

MRS. PIOZZI. (1804) In HAYWARD, Mrs. Piozzi, ii, 263.

The last prerogative of beggary, which entitled him to laugh at the risk of robbery.

WALTER SCOTT. LOCKHART, Life, vii, 173. (1829)

There is a proverb that a man with empty pockets is not cast down by falling among thieves.

JAMES PAYN, Walter's Word. Ch. 32. (1875)

7 Thorw the pas of Altoun Pouerte myghte passe with-oute peril of robberyng.

LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text C, passus xvii, l. 139. (1393) The wooded pass of Alton, on the borders of Surrey and Hampshire, was an ambush for outlaws.

8 Empty pockets travel safe. (Tutum carpit inanis iter.)

OVID (?), Nux, l. 44. (c. 5 B. C.) In l. 129, Ovid adds: "To be naked is an advantage: I have no spoil to tempt an enemy."

If you are empty-handed, the highwayman passes you by; even on an infested road, the poor travel in peace. (Nudum latro transmittit; etiam in obsessa via pauperi pax est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xiv, sec. 10. (c. A. D. 64)

No naked man is sought after to be rifled.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1061. (1640)

9 Poverty is safe; riches are exposed to danger. (Tuta est hominum tenuitas; magnae periculo sunt opes obnoxiae.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. ii, fab. 7, l. 13. (c. 25 B. C.)

When the trumpets sound, the savage's knife stands drawn at the rich man's throat: the poor man's rags are an amulet of safety. (Cum sonuere tubae, iugulo stat divite ferrum | barbaricum: tenuis praebia pannus habet.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. Frag. 7, Loeb. (c. A. D. 60)

V—Poverty and Pride

- <sup>1</sup> The head in the heavens, the tail in water.
BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 307. (1817)
His breech naked but scented with musk.
BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 413. Without money to buy clothes, he buys perfume.
Naked, but with a balance in his hand.
BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 432. Poverty stricken, but carrying a balance in which merchants weigh gold.
- <sup>2</sup> Poore and proud, fie fie.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 330.
(1605) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 132. (1670)
The saying old hath oft beene told,
It plain doth verifie, "Poore and proud, still taylor-like."
UNKNOWN. In Roxburghe Ballads, ii, 580. (c.
1620)
Taught us, like Spaniards, to be proud and poor,
And fling our Scraps before our door.
SWIFT, Ode to Sir W. Temple, l. 56. (1689)
If I am poor It is that I am proud.
H. D. THOREAU, Poverty. (1849)
- <sup>3</sup> He's poor and peeart [lively], like the parson's pig.
THOMAS DARLINGTON, *The Folk-Speech of
South Cheshire*, p. 289. (1887)
"Poor and peart, like the parson's pig" . . .
probably refers to the times when the parson collected his tithe in hand. The pig reserved for him, being a small one and not overfed, was consequently brisk and active.
English Dialect Dictionary, iv, 446. (1903)
- <sup>4</sup> Beggar's person, Emperor's mouth. (Chi kai shên huang ti 'kou.)
DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 189. (1872)
The American variant is, of course, "A beer salary and a champagne appetite."
- <sup>5</sup> Three sorts of men my soul hateth, . . . a poor man that is proud. (Tres species odivit anima mea, . . . pauperem superbum.)
Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxv, 2. (c. 190 B. C.)
This saying, that three sortes of men are odious to the world, a poore man proud.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii,
p. 172. (1574) Pettie, tr.
- <sup>6</sup> Pride and Poverty are ill met, yet often seen together.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3933. (1732)
Poverty and pride don't go at all well together.
DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iii, ch. 5.
(1865)
- <sup>7</sup> Pride may lurk under a thread-bare Cloak.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3947. (1732)
- <sup>8</sup> Nobody has occasion for pride but the poor;
everywhere else it is a sign of folly.
THOMAS GRAY, Letter to Thomas Warton,
18 Oct., 1753.

- <sup>9</sup> The poor and proud is the wise man's monster, but the proud and rich are no news.
BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Sermons. Works (1837),
v. 112. (1618)
- <sup>10</sup> The devil wipes his tail with the poor man's pride.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)
The D—l wipes his B—ch with poor Folks Pride.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.
- <sup>11</sup> A prowde hert in a beggers brest.
JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 56. (c. 1430)
Lo, here one maie see that ther is non wors
Then is a proude hart and a beggers purs.
ROBERT COPLAND, *The Hye Way to the Spytell
Hous*, l. 977. (c. 1530)
Wee say there is no good congruity in a proud heart and a beggers purse.
RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentlewoman, p. 272. (1631).
A proud mind and a beggar's purse agree not well together.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 133. (1670)
A proud mind and a poor purse are ill met.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 369. (1732)
There's nothing agrees worse,
Than a Prince's Heart, and a Beggar's Purse.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6386.
(1732) The Scots say, "A proud heart in a poor breast, he's meikle dollour to dre."
- <sup>12</sup> There is no greater pride than that of a poor man grown rich. (Il n'est orgueil que de pauvre enrichy.)
GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c.
1550)
- <sup>13</sup> O world, how apt the poor are to be proud!
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 1, 138. (1599)
- <sup>14</sup> Pride is a luxury a poor man can't afford.
RICHARD SHATTUCK, The Snark Was a Boojum,
p. 174. (1941)

VI—Poverty and Riches

- <sup>15</sup> The rich man in his castle,
The poor man at his gate,
God made them, high or lowly,
And ordered their estate.
CECIL FRANCES ALEXANDER, All Things Bright.
(1849)
Notwithstanding what we wish
In this world of fact and fate,
Some must fish and some dig bait—
Just a few of us can fish.
EUGENE F. WARE, Moral. (c. 1885)
It's the same the whole world over,
It's the poor that gets the blame,
While the rich gets all the pleasure,
Isn't it a bleeding shame?
H. C. BAILEY, The Apprehensive Dog, p. 41.
(1942) Quoting a soldier song of 1914–18.

<sup>1</sup> Better is poverty at the hand of God than riches in the storehouse.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. ix, l. 5. (c. 700 B. C.) Griffith, tr.

Better is little with the fear of the Lord, than great treasure and trouble therewith. (Melius est parum cum timore Domini, quam thesauri magni et insatiabiles.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xv, 16. (c. 350 B. C.) A little that a righteous man hath is better than the riches of many wicked. (Melius est modicum iusto, super divitias peccatorum multas.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxvii, 16. (c. 350 B. C.)

However, the Germans say, "Armuth macht nicht Glücklich und Reichthum ist keine Schande" (Poverty is not happiness and riches are no disgrace).

<sup>2</sup> Don't compare the man who is without bread with the man who has his basket full.

Babylonian Talmud: Joma, fo. 18a. (c. 450)

None is poorer than the dog and none richer than the pig.

Babylonian Talmud, Shabbath, fo. 155b.

<sup>3</sup> It is an easy thing in the sight of the Lord on the sudden to make a poor man rich.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xi, 21. (c. 190 B. C.) The Japanese, however, say, "From poverty to wealth is a troublesome journey, but the way back is easy."

<sup>4</sup> The rich doeth wrong and boasteth thereof, And the poor is wronged and [yet] hath to beseech.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiii, 3. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

What kind of peace can there be between a hyena and a dog? Or what peace between rich and poor?

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xiii, 18.

The pasture of the rich are the poor.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xiii, 19.

When a rich man is in difficulties he is supported by a friend but when a poor man is in difficulties he is thrust away by a friend. A rich man speaketh, and his supporters are many, and his unseemly words [are pronounced] beautiful. A poor man speaketh, and they cry "Yah, Yah!" Yea, though he speak wisdom, they will not suffer him.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xiii, 21, 22.

A rich man toileth in gathering money, and when he resteth he is filled with his good things: A poor man toileth in lack of substance, and when he resteth he cometh to want.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxxi, 3-4.

<sup>5</sup> Riches disclose bad qualities which poverty conceals.

JOHN LEWIS BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 575. (1817)

<sup>6</sup> Always from poverty grows the rich man's gain. (Semper pauperies quaestum praedivitis auget.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 29. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

How unfair it is that the poor man always has to give his mite to swell the rich man's store. (Quam inique comparatumst, ei qui minus habent | ut semper aliquid addant ditioribus!)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 41. (161 B. C.) The Germans say, "Reichen giebt man, Armen nimmt man" (We give to the rich, and take from the poor). To HIM THAT HATH, see under HAVE's AND HAVE NOT's.

<sup>7</sup> The sorrows of the rich are not real sorrows; the comforts of the poor are not real comforts.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 374. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>8</sup> Right so as by riches ther comen manye goodes, right so by poverté come ther manye harmes and yveles.

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 50. (c. 1387)

<sup>9</sup> Poor men go to heaven as soon as the rich.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 98. (1639)

<sup>10</sup> With coarse food to eat, water for drink, and a bent arm for a pillow—even with these I could be happy, for wealth and honor obtained unworthily are to me as a fleeting cloud.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. vii, ch. 15. (c. 500 B. C.)

It is better to sleepe vpon the ground without feare and lye safe, then sleepe in beddes furnished in gold and in sumptuous palaces, and be fearful, and in danger of many.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 49. (1578)

<sup>11</sup> It is harder to be poor without murmuring, than to be rich without arrogance.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xiv, ch. 11. (c. 500 B. C.)

<sup>12</sup> Poor men want meat for their stomachs; rich men stomachs for their meat.

ANTHONY COPLEY, Wits, Fittes and Fancies, p.

105. (1594) The Selkirk Grace (see under APPETITE) was perhaps founded on this.

The difference between the poor man and the rich, is that the one walketh to gett meat for his stomach, and the other to get a stomach for his meat.

HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 10/2. (1659) RAY, p. 79.

(1678) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1735.

Poor Men seek Meat for their Stomach, rich Men, Stomach for their meat.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3895. (1732)

The poor man labours to get a dinner to his appetite, the rich man to get an appetite to his dinner.

WALTER SCOTT. In LOCKHART, Life, v. 44. (1820)

<sup>13</sup> The poor man's labour is the rich man's wealth.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 6. (1846)

I don't 'old with Wealth. What is Wealth? Labour robbed out of the poor.

H. G. WELLS, Kipps. Bk. ii, ch. 4. (1905)

<sup>14</sup> The pleasures of the rich are the tears of the poor.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 141. (1633)

The dainties of the great are the tears of the poor.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum, No. 936. (1640)
The pleasures of the mighty are the tears of the poor.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1670)
The Pleasures of the Rich are bought with the Tears of the Poor.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4707. (1732)
The Italians say, "De' peccati de' signori fanno penitenza i poveri" (For the sins of the rich the poor must do penance); the Germans, "Die Armen müssen tanzen wie die Reichen pfeifen" (The poor must dance as the rich pipe), or, "Was die Fürsten geigen, müssen die Unterthanen tanzen" (What the princes fiddle the subjects must dance).

1
Better to have an honest poor man for kin or friend than wealthy knave. (κύνδιον βροτοῖς | πένητα χρηστόν ἢ κακὸν καὶ πλούσιον | γαμβρὸν πεπᾶσθαι καὶ φίλον.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 639. (c. 430 B. C.)

2
Bear wealth, povertie will bear itself.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 10. (c. 1595)
Bear wealth, for poverty will bear itself. Wealth is subject to a great many more temptations than poverty.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 64. (1721)

3
It is farre better to be poore, foule, and virtuous, then too bee riche, fayre, and vitious.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 88. (1578)

4
Riches may at any time be left, but not Poverty.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 4045.
Rich Men feel Misfortunes, that fly over poor Men's Heads.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4055.
The Rich are Trustees under God for the Poor.
The Rich follow Wealth, and the Poor the Rich.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 4732-33.

5
The wisdom of the poor is often despised, but riches cover folly.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 375. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr.

When the rich speaketh, every one keepeth silence, but when the poore speaketh, it is saide, what fellow is that?

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 190. (1574) Pettie, tr.

6
Riches breede pride, pride poverty, poverty humilitie, humilitie riches, and riches agayne pride.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 17. (1574) Pettie, tr.
Poverty breeds wealth; and wealth in its turn breeds poverty.

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)

7
When all are poor, it don't take much to make a rich man.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 14. (1843)

8
If you are rich, you speak the truth; if you are poor your words are but lies.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 458. (1937)

The rich add riches to riches; the poor add years to years.

H. H. HART, Chinese Proverbs, No. 465.

9
Shame goes with poverty, but confidence with wealth. (αἰδώς τοι πρὸς ἀνολίβη, θάρσος δὲ πρὸς ὀλβφ.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 319. (c. 800 B. C.)

10
God help the rich, the poor can beg.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 16/2. (1659) Cited by Ray, Kelly, Fuller, etc.

God help the poor, for the rich can help themselves.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 124. (1721)

God help the rich; the poor can sleep with their windows shut.

BERT LESTON TAYLOR, The So-Called Human Race, p. 9. (1922)

11
The poor man would accept the rich man's gout. (Pauper locupletem optare podagram.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. xiii, l. 96. (A. D. 127)

References to gout are frequent in the works of the Latin poets. See GOUT.

12
There is nothing between a poor man and a rich but a piece of an ill year. Because, in that space, many things may fall out, that may make a rich man poor.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 335. (1721)
We all get about the same amount of ice. The rich get it in Summer and the poor in Winter.

BAT MASTERTON (?), Epigram. (c. 1900)

13
The rich and poor are fairly pitted. We shall see who can hang or burn fastest.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to George Dyer, 20 Dec., 1830.

Rich men direct you to their furniture, poor ones divert you from it.

CHARLES LAMB, Captain Jackson. (1833)

14
Where the palaces are very splendid, there the fields will be waste and the granaries empty. (Chao shen ch'u, t'ien shen wu ts'ang shen hü.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue) Sec. 53. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

As far as the palaces of the rich stretch through Mayfair and Belgravia, so far (and farther) must the hovels of the poor stretch in the opposite direction.

EDWARD CARPENTER, England's Ideal. (1887)

15
You rich men, when there cometh a poor man unto you, . . . remember that thy riches be not thy own, but thou art but a steward over them.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons, v, 399. (1552)

Rich men are stewards for the poor.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)

1
If you are poor you will always be poor. (Semper pauper eris, si pauper es.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. v, epig. 81. (c. A. D. 90)
Once poor, seldom or never rich.

WILLIAM LAWSON, A New Orchard and Garden, p. 5. (1618)

If you've ever really been poor, you remain poor at heart all your life.

ARNOLD BENNETT, as quoted by MAUGHAM, Introduction to The Old Wives' Tale.

2
Painless poverty is better than embittered wealth. (πέναν τ' ἄλυπον μάλλον ἢ πλούτου πικρὸν.)

MENANDER, Fragments. No. 588. (c. 330 B. C.)
The rich tremble, but poverty is free. (Divitiae trepidant, paupertas libera res est.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 24. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.
Gold and silver are the glory of the rich, but the poor have inward repose.

SADI, Pand Namah. Sec. 13. (c. 1260)
Povertie in surete is better than riches in fere.
EARL RIVERS, fr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 29. (1477)

Riches bringth oft harme, and euer feare,
Where pouertee passeth without grudge or greefe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)
Want smiles secure when princely thoughts do feel

That Fear and Danger tread upon their heel.

ROBERT GREENE, Penelope's Web. (1587)

If thou art rich, thou'rt poor;
For, like an ass whose back with ingots bows,
Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey,
And death unloads thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 1, 25. (1604)

Poor and content is rich and rich enough,
But riches fineless is as poor as winter
To him that ever fears he shall be poor.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 172. (1605)

Happy the poor. Poverty is worth more than riches. (Heureux les indigents! La pauvreté vaut mieux qu'une telle richesse.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vii, fab. 6. (1678)

Robin that herds on the height
Can be as blithe as Sir Robert the knight.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 253. (1862)

The poor have peace, the rich many troubles. (P'in ch'üing tzü tsai, fu kuei to yu.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2621. (1875)

Better blue but smilin' lips anny time thin a full coal scuttle an' a sour heart.

FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Swearing. (1901)

Rich men never whistle, poor men always do;
bird-songs are in the hearts of the people.

STEPHEN B. ELKINS, Speech, 1906. The Danes say, "Rigdom har Sorg, og Armod har Tryghed" (Riches breed cares, poverty is safe).

3
It is better to endure straitened fortune than the arrogance of the wealthy. (βέλτερόν ἐστι τύχης καὶ θλιβομένης ἀνέχεσθαι ἢ τῶν πλουτούντων τῆς ὑπερηφάνειας.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 425) See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 93.

4
There is that maketh himself rich, yet hath nothing: there is that maketh himself poor. yet hath great riches. (Est quasi dives cum nihil habeat: et est quasi pauper, cum in multis divitiis sit.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiii, 7. (c. 350 B. C.)

The poor useth intreaties; but the rich answereth roughly. (Cum obsecrationibus loquitur pauper: et dives effabitur rigide.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xviii, 23.

The rich and poor meet together: the Lord is the maker of them all. (Dives, et pauper obviaverunt sibi: utriusque operator est Dominus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxii, 2.

5
The poor is hated even of his own neighbour: but the rich hath many friends. (Etiam proximo suo pauper odiosus erit: amici vero divitum multi.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 20. (c. 350 B. C.)

Wealth maketh many friends; but the poor is separated from his neighbour. (Divitiae addunt amicos plurimos: a paupere autem et hi, quos habuit, separantur.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xix, 4.

At the door of the well-supplied store-room brothers and friends are numerous; at the door of misery there are no brothers and no friends.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 32a. (c. 450)

Though a poor man dwell in the market-place, no one will ask about him; though a rich man bury himself in the mountains, his distant relatives will seek him out.

(P'in chu nao shih wu jên wên;

Fu tsai shên shan yu yüan ch'in.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 282. (1872)

6
When the poor man starts to ape the rich, he's lost. (Ubi coepit ditem pauper imitari, perit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 714. (c. 43 B. C.)

The poor man, who seeks to imitate the rich, comes to ruin. (Inops, potentam dum vult imitari, perit.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fable 24. (c. 25 B. C.)

When poor men to expenses run,
And ape their betters, they're undone.

CHRISTOPHER SMART, Phaedrus' Fables, i, 24 (1765)

7
The rich man hallows the evening with prayer; the poor man searches for his supper

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 19. (c. 1258)

Whoever is inferior to others in devotion, but surpasses them in wealth, is outwardly rich but inwardly poor.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 19.

The rich man must return to his palace every night, but the poor man is at home anywhere.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. iii, Apologue 28.

1 The rich are a revenue to the poor.
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 19. (c. 1258)
The pride of the rich makes the labour of the poor.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)
"Not so," Breton adds, "The labours of the poor make the pride of the rich."
The prodigality of the rich is the providence of the poor.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Hard Times and the Way Out. (c. 1890)

2 The rich man thinks of the future, the poor man thinks of today. (Fu jên ssü lai nien, ch'üing jên ssü yen ch'ien.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2602. (1875)

Rich men spend their time on books;
After pigs a poor man looks.
(Fu jên tu shu; ch'üing 'han wei chu.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2609.

The husk sticks to the rice, not the rice to the husk. (Chih yu pa pa chan fan, mu yu fan chan pa pa.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2619.

The poor stick to the rich, not the rich to the poor.

The poor enjoy the grace of the rich; the rich, the grace of heaven. (Ch'üing chan fu ên; fu chan t'ien ên.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2611.

If a poor man associates with a rich one, he will soon have no trousers.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2612. He will spend beyond his means.

The rich man spends his money, the poor man his strength. (Fu jên shê ch'ien, ch'üing jên shê li.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2633.

3 If rich, I should like to live; if poor, to die. (Aut dives opto vivere aut pauper mori.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxv, sec. 14. (c. 64 A. D.) A Greek fragment.

4 Often evil men are rich and good men poor. (πολλοὶ γὰρ πλουτεῦσι κακοί, ἀγαθοὶ δὲ πένονται.)

SOLON, Epigram. Frag. 15, Bergk. (c. 575 B. C.)

See PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Ch. 3, sec. 2.

5 The expectation of riches was amongst the causes of the poverty of the people. (Divitiarum exspectatio inter causas paupertatis publicae erat.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xvi, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 116)

6 You draw your wine from the hogshead, while I lack vinegar. (ἐκ πίθω ἀντλείς ὀῖνον, ἐγὼ δ' ἔχω οὐδ' ἄλις ὄξος.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. x, l. 13. (c. 270 B. C.)
Sometimes given, "You eat cake, while I haven't even black bread."

They eat and we say grace.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 44a. (c. 450) Machshirin, 11a, has: "Tobiah sinned and Sigud is beaten." "One beats the bush, and another catches the bird."

The rich feast, the poor fast;
The dogs dine, the poor pine.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 39. (1630)

7 Just in proportion to the outward poverty is the inward wealth.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, Nov. 13, 1851.

8 It is not true that men are better in poverty than in wealth. (Il n'est pas vrai que les hommes soient meilleurs dans la pauvreté que dans les richesses.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 77. (1746)

9 Poverty cannot debase sturdy souls, nor riches lift up mean ones. (Ni la pauvreté ne peut avilir les âmes fortes, ni la richesse ne peut élever les âmes basses.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 579. (1746)

10 He that was first satisfied and then hungry will offer thee his hand; but not he that was first hungry and then satisfied.

UNKNOWN, Alphabet of Ben Sira. No. 22. (c. 1000) A rich man grown poor will retain his habits of generosity, but a poor man grown rich will retain his niggardly ways.

VII—Poverty: Proverbial Comparisons

11 Als bare was his toure as Job the pouere man.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, tr., Langtoft's Chronicle, p. 323. (c. 1300)

To ben for evere til I deie

As pooere as Job, and loveles.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. v, l. 2505. (c. 1390)

Tush, thou art as poore as Job.

WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 207. (1560)

He is as poore as Job. (Lui è pouero come Job.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 31. (1578)

I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 2, 145. (1598)

As poor as Job.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, v, 5, 168. (1601) DRYDEN, The Pilgrim: Prologue. DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 6.

(1850) etc. etc.

I will not say as poore as Iob, but as bare as Ianuary.

ROBERT ARMIN, The Two Maids of More-clacke, sig. A1. (1609)

We are all as proud as Lucifer, and as poor as Job.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 8. (1822)

12 All that live with him are as poor as church-rats.

CORYE, Generous Enemies. Act i, sc. 1. (1672)

They're most of them as poor as church mice.

JOHN OZELL, tr., Molière, iv, 38. (1714)

As poor as a church mouse.

THOMAS COGAN, John Buncke, Junior, ii, 146.

(1778) COLMAN, John Bull. Act ii, sc. 3.

(1803) HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 26.

(1843) SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act i. (1913)

I have come back, poorer than a church mouse.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 78. (1841)

The young couple are as poor as church mice.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 23. (1848) The Spanish form is "Povero come un topo di chiesa."

<sup>1</sup> Poor as Job's turkey or a starv'd church mouse.

The Virginia Literary Museum, p.496./2.(1830)

The origin of the phrase is unknown. T. C. HALIBURTON, Sam Slick, The Clockmaker (1835) describes a turkey gobbler as being so poor that he had only one feather in his tail, but of course Job had no turkey, since the turkey was a native of America.

As poor as Job's turkey.

CLYDE FITCH, The Climbers. Act i. (1903) WIGGIN, Rebecca, p. 193.(1903) LONDON, Valley of the Moon, iii, 5. (1913) CUNNINGHAM, Banck Murder Case, p. 172.(1942) etc., etc.

Poor as Job's turkey—couldn't raise more'n three feathers and had to lean against the barn to gobble.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 496. (1940)

<sup>2</sup> He is so poor that he has not Salt to his Porridge.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1945.(1732)

<sup>3</sup> She is as poor as a hen partridge that's a hatchin' eggs.

T. C. HALIBURTON, (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 6. (1843)

<sup>4</sup> As ryche as a new shorne sheepe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 725. (1732)

As poor as a sheep new shorn.

GEORGE PEELE, The Old Wives' Tale. (1595)

<sup>5</sup> As poor as a cuckoo. (κίρκου πτωχότερος.)

MENANDER, Thais, l. 4. (c. 310 B. C.) Or possibly the wagtail or water-ousel: at least a bird which had no nest of its own.

<sup>6</sup> As poor as rats.

EDWARD WARD, Writings, ii, 120. (1703)

As poor as a rat.

FRANCES BURNEY, Cecilia, ix, iv. (1782)

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 31. (1833)

ROBERTSON, Ours. Act i. (1866) WILLIAM DE

MORGAN, Alice-for-Short. Ch. 16. (1907)

All as poor as rats, and no one better than the other.

STANLEY WEYMAN, Sophia. Ch. 5. (1900)

POWDER

<sup>7</sup> Put your trust in God, my boys, and keep your powder dry.

OLIVER CROMWELL, as his regiment was about to cross a stream to attack the enemy at the battle of Edgehill, 23 Oct., 1642.

Cromwell, when his troops were about crossing a river, . . . concluded an address with these words—"Put your trust in God, but mind to keep your powder dry."

HAYES, Ballads of Ireland, l, 191. (1855)

<sup>8</sup> This stone . . . will grind him to powder. (λικμήσει αὐτόν.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxi, 44. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Conteret eum."

I will crush thy head to powder.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, fo. 111b. (1542)

Grind them into powder.

BEN JONSON, Volpone. Act i, sc. 1. (1605)

<sup>9</sup> Ile sett you in with a powder.

UNKNOWN, Club Law. Act iii, sc. 4. (c. 1600) With a rush.

Then in came the French, with a powder as we say.

EDWARD WATERHOUSE, Fortescutus Illustratus, 515. (1663)

Off he went in sic a pooder.

SIDNEY GILPIN (G. COWARD), Songs and Ballads of Cumberland, p. 275. (1878)

And have him take a runout powder? Be yourself, lady.

P. G. WODEHOUSE, Money in the Bank, p. 187. (1942) The French say, "Prendre la poudre d'escampette" (scampering).

POWER

<sup>10</sup> But what can Cato do . . . pent up in Utica?

JOSEPH ADDISON, Cato. Act i, sc. 1. (1712)

No pent-up Utica contracts your powers,

But the whole boundless continent is yours.

JONATHAN MITCHELL SEWELL, Prologue to Addison's Cato. Sewell wrote the prologue for a performance of the play at the Bow Street Theatre, Portsmouth, N.H. (c. 1800), drawing a parallel between the events of the American Revolution and those of the play. Park Benjamin adopted the couplet as the motto of his paper, The New World.

<sup>11</sup> He hath no power that hath not power to use.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: A Visit. (1839)

Power flows to the man who knows how.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine, xi, 50. (1901)

As water finds its level, so power goes

To him who can use it.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, Elizabeth the Queen. Act ii, sc. 3. (1930)

<sup>12</sup> World power or downfall. (Weltmacht oder Niedergang.)

FRIEDRICH VON BERNHARDI, Deutschland und der nächste Krieg. Chapter 5. Heading. (1913) "Our next war," wrote Bernhardt, "will be fought for the highest interests of our country and mankind. 'World power or downfall' will be our rallying cry."

<sup>13</sup> Power gradually extirpates from the mind every humane and gentle virtue.

BURKE, Vindication of Natural Society. (1756)

Power, like a desolating pestilence,

Pollutes whate'er it touches.

SHELLEY, Queen Mab. Canto iii, l. 176. (1813)

Power, that most intoxicating of all immortal drugs.

P. C. WREN, Uniform of Glory, p. 108. (1941)

1 It is written, that "he is worthy to lesen his privilege that misuseth the might and the power that is yeven him."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 77. (c. 1387)
"Tis god-like to have power, but not to kill.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Chances. Act ii, sc. 2. (c. 1613) See also under GIANT.

The greater the power, the more dangerous the abuse.

EDMUND BURKE, Speech, House of Commons, 7 Feb., 1771.

2 The power that makes men terrible is a terror to its possessor.

ST. CYPRIAN OF CARTHAGE, Apothegm. (c. A. D. 250) See Life, 2 Nov., 1942, p. 106.

3 He recovered his own by his own prowess. (Suo Marte res suas recipiavit.)

CICERO, Philippicae. No. ii, sec. 95. (44 B. C.)
"Suo Marte," a proverbial phrase.

4 To know the pains of power, we must go to those who have it; to know its pleasures, we must go to those who are seeking it: the pains of power are real, its pleasures imaginary.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 428. (1820)

5 Increase of power begets increase of wealth.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. iv, l. 580. (1784)

6 The depository of power is always unpopular.
DISRAELI, Coningsby. Bk. iv, ch. 13. (1844)

7 Power is the first good.

EMERSON, Letters and Social Aims: Inspiration. (1875)

It was Watt who told King George III that he dealt in an article of which kings were said to be fond—Power.

EMERSON, Inspiration. Referring to James Watt, the discoverer of the power of steam.

8 To win the greatest gift of the gods, absolute power. (τὴν θεῶν μεγίστην ὥς ἔχειν τυραννίδα.)

EURIPIDES, Phoinissai, l. 506. (c. 420 B. C.)
Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, vii, 11.

9 Sudden Pow'r is apt to be insolent, Sudden Liberty saucy; that behaves best which has grown gradually.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753. See also under AUTHORITY.

10 Unlimited power is helpless, as arbitrary power is capricious. Our energy is in proportion to the resistance it meets.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 156. (1823)

Want of principle is power. Truth and honesty set a limit to our efforts, which impudence and hypocrisy easily overleap.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 197.

11 Power seldom grows old at Court.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1051. (1640)

12

Power of good and evil. (ὁμῶς ἀγαθῶν τε κακῶν τε.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 669. (c. 800 B. C.)

13 Power tempered with counsel even the gods make greater. (Vim temperatam di quoque provehant | in maius.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode iv, l. 65. (23 B. C.)

The mighty ought to use their power moderately, that they may use it continually.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 209. (1574) Pettie, tr. Quoting Cato.

14 Power weakeneth the wicked.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

Unlimited power is apt to corrupt the minds of those who possess it.

WILLIAM PITT, EARL OF CHATHAM, Speech, House of Lords, 9 Jan., 1770.

Power tends to corrupt, and absolute power corrupts absolutely.

LORD ACTON, Essays on Freedom and Power, p. 364. (Boston. Beacon Press, 1948)

15 There is nothing which power cannot believe of itself, when it is praised as equal to the gods. (Nihil est quod credere de se | non possit cum laudatur dis aequa potestas.)

JUVENAL, Sat. res. Sat. iv, l. 70. (c. A. D. 120)

16 Mickle power makes many enemies. Occasion'd partly by envy, partly by fear.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 253. (1721)

Much power makes many enemies.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Much. (1736)

17 Power admits no equal, and dismisses friendship for flattery.

EDWARD MOORE, The Foundling. Act i. (1748)

18 Divine power plays with human affairs. (Ludit in humanis divina potentia rebus.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 3, l. 49. (A. D. 13)

19 An alliance with the powerful is never to be trusted. (Numquam est fidelis cum potente societas.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fable v, l. 1. (c. 25 B. C.)

This is the fable of the cow, the she-goat, and the sheep who went hunting with the lion, only to find that the lion refused to share with them. See LION'S SHARE.

A partnership with men in power

We cannot build upon an hour.

SMART, tr., Phaedrus' Fables, i, v. (1765)

20

The highest power may be lost by misrule. (Male imperando summum imperium amittitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 380. (c. 43 B. C.)

Diminished power keeps not its strength. (Summissum imperium non tenet vires suas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 658.

21

There is no power but of God. (οὐ γὰρ ἔστιν ἐξουσία εἰ μὴ ὑπὸ θεοῦ.)

New Testament: Romans, xiii, 1. (c. A. D. 57)

Vulgate: "Non est enim potestas nisi a Deo."

All public power proceeds from God.

POPE LEO XIII, Immortale Dei, 1 Nov., 1885.

<sup>1</sup> The powers that be are ordained of God. (αἱ δὲ οὐσαὶ ὑπὸ θεοῦ τεταγμέναι εἰσιν.)

New Testament: Romans, xiii, 1. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Quae autem sunt, a Deo ordinatae sunt."

The powers that be. Those in authority (in a specified matter).

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> Power is always passing to the best man from the hands of his inferior. (Imperium semper ad optimum quemque a minus bono transfertur.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Sec. 2. (c. 41 B. C.)

Power is always gradually stealing away from the many to the few, because the few are more vigilant and consistent.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Adventurer, No. 45. (1753)

Power is ever stealing from the many to the few.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Address: Public Opinion, Boston, 28 Jan., 1852.

<sup>3</sup> He is most powerful who has power over himself. (Potentissimum esse qui se habet in potestate.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xc, sec. 34. (c. A. D. 64) See also under SELF-CONTROL.

<sup>4</sup> He who is too powerful seeks power beyond his power. (Quod non potest vult posse qui nimium potest.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 215. (c. A. D. 60)

Who has most power should be most patient to endure. (Quo plura possis, plura patienter feras.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 254. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>5</sup> Lust of power burns more fiercely than all the passions combined. (Cupido dominandi cunctis affectibus flagrantior est.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xv, ch. 53. (c. A. D. 116)

Everything slave-like for the sake of power. (Omnia serviliter pro dominatione.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. i, ch. 36.

Men, such as they are, very naturally seek money or power; and power because it is as good as money.

EMERSON, The American Scholar. (1837)

Every one loves power, even if they do not know what to do with it.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 82. (1880)

<sup>6</sup> Great danger might ensue in breaking the Balance of Europe.

ANDREW YARRANTON, England's Improvement by Sea and Land: To the Reader. (1677) A German Diet: The Balance of Europe is said to have been the title of a folio publication of 1653.

Your Glorious Design of Re-establishing a just Balance of Power in Europe.

UNKNOWN, in The London Gazette. No. 3758/7. (1701)

The balance of power.

SIR ROBERT WALPOLE, Speech. (1741) The phrase had by this time become popular and was frequently used by Edmund Burke and others.

Europe's balance hangs upon his tongue.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Night, l. 254. (1761)

An untoward event, threatening to disturb the balance of power.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, referring to the destruction of the Turkish navy at the battle of Navarino, 20 Oct., 1827.

The battle of Lutzen which determined the balance of power between Roman Catholicism and Protestantism in Germany.

ARTHUR PENRYN STANLEY, History of the Jewish Church. Vol. i, ch. 11. (1862)

THE POWER BEHIND THE THRONE, see under THRONE.

PRACTICE

See also Example and Precept; Preaching and Practice

<sup>7</sup> Even hard work grows easy to the practised hand. (Durum etiam facilem facit adusuetudo laborem.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 70. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 628. The Greek proverb is, οὐ γνῶσις, ἀλλὰ πρᾶξις (Not knowledge but practice)

First time raw, second time ripe.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 374. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>8</sup> By speaking men learn to speak. (ἐκ τοῦ λέγειν τὸ λέγειν πορίζεται.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 30. (1508) The Latin is, "Dicendo dicere discunt." Erasmus points out that there are many proverbs of this kind, "Fabricando fabricam discas, Canendo musicam, Scribendo discas scribere" (By building learn to build, By singing learn to sing, By writing learn to write). The French say, "À force de forger on devient forgeron" (By dint of smithing one becomes a smith).

In doing we learn.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640) See under DEED.

<sup>9</sup> Practice is better than theory. (Experientia praestantior arte.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 112 (1869) "Practice without learning is better than learning without practice"; "Knowledge without practice makes but half an artist."

<sup>10</sup> Use maketh Masterie.

THOMAS NORTON, The Ordinall of Alchimy. Ch. 7. (1477) HEYWOOD, Proverbs, ii, 2. (1546)

The Latin proverb is, "Exercitatio optimus est magister" (Practice is the best master).

Before arte was invented, eloquence was used, and through practise it perfect.

THOMAS WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, p. 5. (1560)

Use maketh perfectness.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue, p. 66. (1564)

Use makes perfection in many things.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, 11. (1639)

Practice makes perfect, as often I've read.

CHRISTOPHER ANSTEY, The New Bath Guide.

Let. 5. (1766) CRABBE, The Borough. Ch. 19.

(1810) READE, Hard Cash. Ch. 44. (1863)

DICKENS, Edwin Drood. Ch. 23. (1870) WREN,

Uniform of Glory, p. 18. (1941) etc., etc. The Latin form is, "Usus promptum facit"; the German, "Uebung macht den Meister"; the Spanish, "El usar saca oficial," or "Uso hace maestro."

Practice is nine tenths.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power. (1860)

Practice teaches us by experience. (Usus reapse experiundo edocet.)

PACUVIUS, Ad Herennium. (c. 160 B. C.)

Practice is everything. (μελέτη τὸ πᾶν.)

PERIANDER, Apothegm. (c. 600 B. C.) As given by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, i, 99. Cited by ERAS-

MUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 53, who gives the Latin,

"Exercitatio potest omnia" (Practice can do everything).

Exercise can brynge to passe all thynges.

RICHARD TAVERNER, Translations of Erasmus, p. 31. (1550)

It is difficult to retain the knowledge one has acquired, without putting it in practice. (Difficile est tenere, quae acceperis, nisi exerceas.)

PLINY, Letters. Bk. viii, epis. 14. (c. A. D. 108)

Suppose your wish is to excel,

Before an expert practise well.

(Yao tê kao, jên ch'ien ts'ao.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, No. 79. (1875)

PRAISE

See also Applause, Compliment

A part of man's praise may be told in his presence; the whole in his absence.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 63a. (c. 350)

Praise to the face is open disgrace.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws.

Ch. 26. (1943) BRET HARTE, A Lonely Ride.

(1869) See also under FLATTERY.

Praise is but the shadow of virtue.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, ii, 118. (a. 1680)

Praise is a debt we owe unto the Virtues of others.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 34. (1682)

The praise of so mean a creature was degrading to me. (Quae quidem conlaudatio hominis turpissimi mihi ipsi erat paene turpis.)

CICERO, In Pisonem. Ch. 29, sec. 72. (55 B. C.)

A paraphrase of the Latin proverb, "Turpe est laudari ab illaudatis" (It is discreditable to be praised by the undeserving), or, "Laudant quod non intelligunt" (They praise what they do not understand).

He is not praised whose praiser deserveth not praise.

GABRIEL HARVEY, The Trimming of Thomas Nashe. (1697)

It is as great a spite to be praised in the wrong place, and by a wrong person, as can be done to a noble nature.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Non Vulgi Sunt. (1636)

Of whom to be disprais'd were no small praise.

MILTON, Paradise Regain'd, iii, 56. (1671)

Praises from wicked Men are Reproaches.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3925. (1732)

If you would reap Praise you must sow the Seeds, gentle Words and useful Deeds.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

Praises are Admonitions well dressed out.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3923. (1732)

The Fox praised the Meat out of the Crow's Mouth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4546.

They, that value not Praise, will never do any Thing worthy of Praise.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4985.

Praising all alike is praising none.

JOHN GAY, Epistles. Epis. i, l. 114. (1714)

He who praises everybody praises nobody.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. (1777) BOSWELL, Life, iii, 225, note.

False prayse is naught els but mockerie.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 82. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Praise undeserv'd is satire in disguise.

BROADHURST, To the Celebrated Beauties of the British Court. (c. 1700) See BELL, Fugitive Poetry, iii, 118.

Praise undeserv'd is scandal in disguise.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 1, l. 413. (1733) Pope puts the line in quotation marks.

Praise to the undeserving is severe Satyr.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

Without some spur to everlasting praise, few men would be pricked forward to enterprize any thing worthie praise.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 217. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Those praises did not one whit please the Hare, which the willie Fox gave her in presence of the Wolfe, saying, that her flesh (of all other) was most pleasant to the tast, and verie daintie in eating.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. iv, 193.

True praise roots and spreads.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 640. (1640)

Praise none too much, for all are fickle.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 776. (1640)

Too much praise is a burthen.

NICHOLAS LING, comp., Politeuphuia, p. 140. (1669) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5266. (1732)

Praise not too much . . . for thou speakest to the Greeks Who know me.

W. C. BRYANT, tr., Iliad, x, 289. (1870)

<sup>1</sup> To syngne ones greate prayse.

THOMAS COOPER, Thesaurus: Cantus. (1565)

The players shall sing your praises.

BEN JONSON, Alchemist. Act ii, sc. 1. (1610)

I would both sing thy praise and praise thy singing.

HUGH HOLLAND, To Guy Farnaby. (a. 1633)

<sup>2</sup> Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition.

CHAPLAIN HOWELL M. FORGY, at Pearl Harbor during the Japanese attack of 7 Dec., 1941, encouraging a chain of men passing ammunition aboard the cruiser New Orleans. Attributed to Chaplain William Maguire by Life, 2 Nov., 1942, but denied by him. See his The Captain Wears a Cross, p. 3.

<sup>3</sup> None have less praise than those who hunt after it.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 133. (1902)

<sup>4</sup> He that departs with his own honesty
For vulgar praise, doth it too dearly buy.

BEN JONSON, Epigrams. No. 2. (1612)

<sup>5</sup> Praise tickles and wins the spirits. (La louange chatouille et gagne les esprits.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 14. (1668)

One can't praise too much three sorts of persons: the gods, one's mistress, and one's king. (On ne peut trop louer trois sortes de personnes: | Les dieux, sa maîtresse, et son roi.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 14.

<sup>6</sup> Usually we praise only to be praised. (On ne loue d'ordinaire que pour être loué.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 146. (1665)

The refusal of praise is a wish to be praised twice. (Le refus des louanges est un désir d'être loué deux fois.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 149.

Our heartiest praise is usually reserved for our admirers. (Nous ne louons d'ordinaire de bon cœur que ceux qui nous admirent.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 356.

Praise serves at least to confirm us in virtuous practices. (La louange qu'on nous donne sert au moins à nous fixer dans la pratique des vertus.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 598.

<sup>7</sup> I should have praised you more had you praised me less. (Je vous louerais davantage si vous m'aviez loué moins.)

LOUIS XIV, Remark, to Bossuet on receiving from him a fulsome poem. (c. 1675)

<sup>8</sup> Praise, the fine diet which we're apt to love,
If given to excess, does hurtful prove.

JOHN OLDHAM, A Letter from the Country to a Friend in Town. (c. 1683)

Praise is the best diet for us, after all.

SYDNEY SMITH. (a. 1845) See HOLLAND, Memoir.

<sup>9</sup> Good men are made better; bad, worse by praise.

THOMAS PECKE, Parnassi Puerperium, p. 95. (1659)

Praise makes good Men better, and bad Men worse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3918. (1732)

Praise a fool, and slay him. . . . Praise a wise man, and speed him on his way.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Commendation. (1839) "Praise a fool and water his folly."

<sup>10</sup> The weaving of wreaths is an easy task. (εἶπεν στεφάνους ἐλαφρόν.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. vii. l. 77. (c. 485 B. C.) A rosy festoon [of praise]. (ρόδα μ' εἶρηκας.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 910. (423 B. C.) Lilies from you? (κρίνεσι στεφανοῖς.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 911.

Roses from your lips! (πάττε πολλοῖς τοῖς ῥόδοις.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 1330.

<sup>11</sup> Satisfying Momus. (ῶ Μῶμψ ἀρέσκειν.)

PLATO, Republic. Bk. vi, sec. 487A. (c. 375 B. C.) Momus, the god of censure, who finds fault with the other gods. See ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 74, where the Latin is given as "Momo satisfacere." To satisfy Momus was to satisfy the most captious of all critics.

Praise from you delights me, father, for you are a man deserving of praise. (Laetus sum laudari me abs te, pater, a laudato viro.)

NAEVIUS, Hector Proficiscens. (c. 220 B. C.)

Quoted by CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum, iv, 31, 67.

I have a liking for Naevius's well-known Hector, who is not only delighted "to be praised" but all the more, he adds, "by one who has himself been praised." (Placet enim Hector ille mihi Naevianus, qui non tantum laudari se laetatur, sed addit enim, a laudato viro.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. v, epis. 12, sec. 8. (56 B. C.)

It is not the least praise to have pleased distinguished men. (Principibus placuisse viris non ultima laus est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 17, l. 35. (20 B. C.)

A word or a nod from a good man is worth a thousand arguments from others. (ῥῆμα καὶ νεῖμα μόνον ἀνδρὸς ἀγαθοῦ μυρίοις ἐνθυμήμασι καὶ περιόδοις ἀντίρροπον ἔχει πίστιν.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Phocion. Ch. v, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 110)

Nothing so soon the drooping Sp'rits can raise
As Praises from the Men whom all men praise.

ABRAHAM COWLEY, Ode upon Occasion of a Copy of Verses of My Lord Broghill's. St. 4. (a. 1667)

Approbation from Sir Hubert Stanley is praise indeed.

THOMAS MORTON, A Cure for the Heartache. Act v, sc. 2. (1797) Usually misquoted "Praise from Sir Hubert."

Praise from one's valet is praise indeed.

LEE THAYER, Persons Unknown, p. 39. (1941)

Praise from a wife is praise indeed.

E. R. PUNSHON, Conqueror Inn, p. 101. (1944)

1 Be thou the first true merit to befriend;
His praise is lost who stays still all commend.

POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 274. (1709)

2 Forbear to mention what thou canst not praise.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Carmen Seculare, l. 106. (a. 1721)

Among the smaller duties of life I hardly know any one more important than that of not praising where praise is not due.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy. Lecture 9. (1804)

3 Unless fresh praise is won, even the old is lost. (Laus nova nisi oritur, etiam vetus amittitur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 333. (c. 43 B. C.)

Old praise dies unless you feed it.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 701. (1640)

4 Praise always follows when toil has made the way. (Solet sequi laus, cum viam fecit labor.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 676. (c. 43 B. C.)

5 Go not down a well by a rope of praise.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. iv, Apologue 16. (c. 1257)
"Ne credas laudatoribus tuis" (Believe not those who praise you).

6 They lauded his virtue to the skies. (Virtutem animi ad caelum ferunt.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 53. (c. 41 B. C.) See under SKY.

They prayed him farre above the Starres.

SIR THOMAS MORE, The History of Kyng Richard the Third, p. 219. (1513)

7 I will praise any man that will praise me.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 6, 91. (1606)

Where fair is not, praise cannot mend the brow.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 1, 16.
No man Can justly praise but what he doth affect.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, i, 2, 220. (1608)

8 Good things should be praised.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iii, 1, 353. (1594)

It is a sure sign of mediocrity always to praise moderately. (C'est un grand signe de médiocrité de louer toujours modérément.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 12. (1746)
"Give praise where praise is due"; "Praise the bridge that carries you over."

9 Praises fill not the belly.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 131. (1666)

Praise but [without] profit puts little in the pot.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 280. (1721)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3922. (1732)

Weights . . . Solid pudding against empty praise.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 53. (1728) "Pretty pussy will not feed a cat." See also under PUDDING.

10

The art of praising began the art of pleasing. (L'art de louer commença l'art de plaire.)

VOLTAIRE, La Pucelle. Chant xix, l. 145. (1755)

11

Now prays at the partyng.

UNKNOWN, Towneley Plays (E.E.T.S.), p. 118. (c. 1410) LYLIV, Euphues (Arber), p. 363 (1580)

"Preyse at the parting," seide the knyght, "And behold wele the ende."

Gesta Romanorum (E.E.T.S.), p. 39. (c. 1440)

Praise us as we are tasted, allow us as we prove.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 2, 97 (1601)

Praise in departing.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, iii, 3, 38. (1611)

"Praise not too soon"; "Praise not till the entertainment be over." The Greek proverb is, μή πρότερος νίκης ἐγκώμιον (Praise not before the victory).

Praise not the Ford till you are safe over.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3920. (1732)

PRAISE DAY AT END AND LIFE AT CLOSE, see under DEATH: COUNT NO MAN HAPPY.

II—Praise: The Love of Praise

12

We are all imbued with the love of praise. (Trahimur omnes studio laudis.)

CICERO, Pro Archia Poeta. Ch. 11, sec. 26. (62 B. C.)

Do you swell with the love of praise? (Laudis amore tumes?)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 36. (20 B. C.)

The love of praise, howe'er conceal'd by art,
Reigns, more or less, and glows, in ev'ry heart

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. i, l. 51. (1728)

Itch of vulgar praise.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 60. (1732)

Modesty is the only sure bait when you angle for praise.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 17 May, 1750.

13

None ever gives the Lie to him that praiseth him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3649. (1732)

Praise is always pleasant.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3916.

Of praise a mere glutton, he swallow'd what came,
And the puff of a dunce, he mistook it for fame;
Till his relish grown callous, almost to disease,
Who pepper'd the highest was surest to please.

GOLDSMITH, Retaliation, l. 109. (1774) Referring to David Garrick.

The praise of a fool is incense to the wisest of us.

DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. vii, ch. 2. (1826)

14

They loved the praise of men more than the praise of God. (ἠγάπησαν γὰρ τὴν δόξαν τῶν ἀνθρώπων μᾶλλον ἢ τὴν δόξαν τοῦ θεοῦ.)

New Testament: John, xii, 43. (c. A. D. 70) The Vulgate is, "Dilexerunt enim gloriam hominum magis, quam gloriam Dei."

15

We are too apt to love Praise, but not to Deserve it.

WILLIAM PENN, More Fruits of Solitude. No. 103. (1718)

<sup>1</sup> Praise, the sweetest of all sounds. (ἡδίστου ἀκροάματος, ἐπαινοῦ.)

SIMONIDES, Apothegm. (c. 650 B. C.) See XENOPHON, Hiero. Ch. i, sec. 14.

Praise, sweetest of things to hear. (τοῦ δὲ πάντων ἡδίστου ἀκούσματος, ἐπαινοῦ ἐαυτοῦς.)

XENOPHON, Memorabilia. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 31. (c. 375 B. C.)

Praises, of whose taste the wise are fond.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 1, 18. (1595)

<sup>2</sup> He who loves praise loves temptation.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims of Piety, p. 114. (a. 1755)

III—Praise of Self

See also Boasting, Trumpet

<sup>3</sup> Praise yourself daringly, something always sticks. (Audacter te vendita, semper aliquid haeret.)

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms. (a. 1626) See also under SLANDER. The French say, "On n'auroit guère de plaisir, si l'on ne se flattoit point" (One would have scarcely any pleasure if one never praised oneself).

<sup>4</sup> He who discommendeth others obliquely commendeth himself.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 34. (1682)

We'll cry both arts and learning down,
And hey! then up go we!

FRANCIS QUARLES, Song of Anarchus. (a. 1644)

He gives Directions to the Town
To cry it up, or run it down.

SWIFT, On Poetry. (1733)

<sup>5</sup> Neither praise yourself nor blame yourself. (Nec te collaudes nec te culpaveris ipse.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 16 (c. 175 B. C.)

The usual proverbial form is, "Neque culpa neque lauda teipsum."

Self-praise and self-depreciation are alike absurd. (τὸ ἐπαινεῖν αὐτὸν ὥσπερ τὸ λοιδορεῖν ἀποπῶν εἶναι.)

MARCUS CATO, Apothegm. (c. 160 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Aristides and Cato. Ch. 5, sec. 2.

Alwayes have in minde that saying, that a man ought not to speake of him selfe, eyther in prayse or in dispraye: for that the one is a deede of arrogance, the other of folly.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 154. (1574) Pettie, tr.

A man's accusations of himself are always increased, his praises decreased. (Les propres condamnations sont tousjours accrues; les louanges, mescrues.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 8. (1595)

Neither praise nor dispraise thyself; thy actions serve the turn.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1670)

Hold forth upon yourself on no Pretence,
Unless invited, or in Self-Defence;

The Praise you take, altho' it be your Due,
Will be suspected if it come from you.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757.

Say nothing good of yourself, you will be dis-trusted; say nothing bad of yourself, you will be taken at your word.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: Joy. No. 22. (c. 1870)

Self-praise is no recommendation.

DICKENS, Bleak House. Ch. 55. (1852) Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iv, ch. 2. (1865)

Self-praise is no commendation.

R. S. SURTEES, Handley Cross. Ch. 39. (1854)
The Scots say, "Self-praise is nae honour," and the English, "Self-praise is no praise."

<sup>6</sup> He sings of himself. (Ipse semet canit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. v, No. 86. (1523) The Latin equivalent of "He blows his own trumpet." See under TRUMPET.

<sup>7</sup> Commend not your Wife, Wine, nor House.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1126. (1732)
Never praise your cider or horse.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

There is an old Finnish verse which runs,
"Praise your new horse in the morning, your wife in the second year, only in the third year your brother-in-law, and yourself never in life." A Sanscrit epigram runs, "Praise food when it is digested; the wife, when her youth is past; the hero, when he has returned from battle; the grain, when it is harvested."

<sup>8</sup> Hee which washeth his mouth with his owne praise, soyleth himselfe with the suddes.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 95. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Hast thou that ancient, true saide saw forgot,
That "a man's praise in his owne mouth doth stink"?

R. C., The Times' Whistle. Bk. iii, l. 1038. (1616) The Latin form of the "ancient saw" is "Laus in proprio ore sordescit," or "Proprio laus sordet in ore."

Self-praise debaseth. (La alabanza propria envilece.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 16. (1605)

He that praiseth himself, spattereth himself.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 988. (1640)

The Italians say, "Chi si loda, s'imbroda," the French, "Qui se loue, s'emboue."

It's a stinking praise comes out of ain's ain mouth.
ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

Self-praise comes aye stinking ben [home].

ALFRED HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 47. (1832) The Germans say, "Eigenlob stinkt, Freundes Lob hinkt" (Self-praise stinks, friends' praise halts).

<sup>9</sup> He that praiseth him self lacketh louyng neighbours.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 70. (1548)

Beat.: There's not one wise man among twenty that will praise himself. Bene.: An old instance that lived in the time of good neighbours.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, v, 2, 78. (1598)

You dwell by ill neighbours, Richard; that makes you praise yourself.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angry Women of Abington. Act iv, sc. 3. (1599)

Beware of self-praise; it argues you have slow neighbours, or few deserts.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, The English Gentlewoman, p. 320. (1631)

Who commendeth himself, wanteth good neighbours.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)
He dwells far from neighbours (or hath ill neighbours) that's fain to praise himself.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 125. (1670)
You live by ill neighbours, when you are forced to praise yourself.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

1
A man prefers to speak evil of himself rather than not speak of himself at all. (On aime mieux dire du mal de soi-même que de n'en point parler.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 138. (1665)
All censure of a man's self is oblique praise.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1778.

2
Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth. (Laudet te alienus, et non os tuum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 2. (c. 350 B. C.)
What would have been a great source of honor if another had related it, becomes nothing when the doer relates it, himself. (Quod magnificum referente alio fuisset, ipso, qui gesserat, recensente vanescit.)

PLINY, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 8. (A. D. 98)

3
He who praises himself quickly finds a scoffer. (Qui se ipse laudat cito derisorem invenit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 597. (c. 43. B. C.)

A man commends himself in praising that which he loves. (Quod quisque amat laudando commendat sibi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 608.

He dispraiseth him self that dispraiseth alle other and yeueth him self lawde.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 106. (1477)

4
If a man possesses merit, the merit speaks for itself, not the owner of the merit.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. vii, Apologue 5. (c. 1257)

He whose worth doth speak, need not speak his own worth.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Self-Praising. (1642)

On their own merits modest men are dumb.

GEORGE COLMAN, JR., The Heir at Law: Epilogue. (1797)

In general it is a good rule that self-praise is no commendation.

WILLIAM COBBETT, Register, lviii, 743/1. (1826)

5
When no friends are by, men praise themselves.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, v, 3, 118. (1593)

IV—Praise and Blame

6
Men preysen sometyme that that shold be blamed.

WILLIAM CANTON, tr., Aesop, iii, vii. (1484)

7
This miserable fate
Suffer the wretched souls of those who lived
Without or praise or blame.

(Che visser senza infamia e senza lodo.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto iii, l. 36. (c. 1300) They are goaded along by swarms of wasps and hornets.

8
It is more shameful to be praised faintly and coldly than to be censured violently. (Exigue atque frigide laudari quam insectanter et graviter vituperari.)

FAVORINUS, Apothegm. (c. A. D. 110) See AULUS

GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. xix, ch. 3.

When needs he must, yet faintly then he praises.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, The Purple Island. Canto vii, st. 67. (1633)

There are some censures which praise, and some praises which condemn. (Il y a des reproches qui louent, et des louanges qui médisent.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 148. (1665)
With faint praises one another damn.

WILLIAM WYCHERLEY, The Plain Dealer: Prologue, l. 6. (1678)

Well, well, is a word of malice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 141. (1678)

Faint Praise is Disparagement.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1487. (1732)

He covers me with his Wings, and bites me with his Bill.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1829. (1732)
Damn with faint praise.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 201. (1733)

That old saying, "Alget qui non ardet"—"he freezes who does not burn," is true.

UNKNOWN, British Weekly, 19 Dec., 1907, p. 321.

9
Blame-all and Praise-all are two blockheads.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Neither praise nor dispraise, till seven Christ-masses be over.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740. The Spanish form is, "No alabes ni desalabes hasta siete navidades" (Neither praise nor blame before seven years).

Praise little, dispraise less.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

After the Latin proverb, "Parum lauda, vituperà parcius."

10
He that praiseth publicly, will slander privately.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2250. (1732)

It is more difficult to praise rightly, than to blame.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2977.

11
Hee which speaketh ill of mee behinde my backe, doeth mee no wrong, hee which speaketh well of me before my face, reprocheth mee.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 90. (1574) Pettie, tr.

1 Lacking [blame] breeds laziness, praise breeds pith.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 237. (1721)

2 Few are wise enough to prefer reproof which is useful to them to praise which betrays. (Peu de gens sont assez sages pour préférer le blâme qui leur est utile à la louange qui les trahit.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 147. (1665) It would seldom be a bad bargain to disclaim all praise on condition of receiving no blame. (Il n'y guère d'occasion où l'on fit un méchant marché de renoncer au bien qu'on dit de nous, à condition de n'en dire point de mal.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 454. We praise or blame most things merely because it is the fashion to praise or blame. (On loue et on blâme la plupart de choses parce que c'est la mode de les louer ou de les blâmer.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 533.

3 Bi the oolde wijs prouerbe, A man schulde blame or commende as he fyndeth.

REGINALD PECOCK, Overmuch Blaming of the Clergy. Pt. i, ch. 9, p. 48. (c. 1449)

If he will not commend it, let him amend it.

JOHN LVLV, Euphues and His England: Epistle Dedicatory, l. 216. (1580)

The old maxim, "Commend or amend."

W. C. HAZLITT, in Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, vol. i, p. 201. (1868)

4 Fear not the anger of the wise to raise; Those best can bear reproof who merit praise.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 23. (1709)

Praise from a friend, or censure from a foe. Are lost on hearers that our merits know.

POPE, tr., The Iliad. Bk. x, l. 293. (1720)

5 Praise is hard to win; censure is easy to give. ('Hao yen nan tê; o yü i shih.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, No. 1106. (1875)

Blame yourself as you would blame others; Excuse others as you would excuse yourself.

(Tsé jên chih hsin tsé chi;

Shu chi chih hsin shu jên.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1699.

PRAYER

6 Long tarries destiny, but comes to those who pray. (τὸ μόρσιμον μένει πάλαι, εὐχομένοις δ' ἂν ἔλθοι.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 464. (458 B.C.) Whosoever shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed and be thou cast into the sea; and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith. Therefore I say unto you, What things soever ye desire, when ye pray, believe that ye receive them, and ye shall receive them. (πάντα ὅσα προσέχετε καὶ αἰτεῖσθε, πιστεύετε ὅτι ἐλάβετε, καὶ ἔσται ὑμῖν.)

New Testament: Mark, xi, 23, 24. (c. A. D. 65)

Vulgate: "Omnia quaecumque orantes petitis credite quia accipietis, et evenient vobis."

More things are wrought by prayer

Than this world dreams of.

TENNYSON, Morte d'Arthur, l. 298. (1842)

If you pray with faith even to a sardine's head, it will grant what you wish.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 445.

(1938) A Japanese proverb. The head of a fish is used in Japan to keep off evil spirits.

THE PRAYER OF FAITH WILL SAVE THE SICK, see under SICKNESS.

7 Don't beseech little things of the gods, but necessary things. (μὴ δεῖν ἐπὶ τῶν ἐλαχίστων τοῦ θεοῦ δεῖσθαι, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ τῶν ἀναγκαίων.)

AESOP, Fables: The Flea. (c. 570 B.C.) The fable of the man who called upon Hercules to rid him of a flea.

He that demands, misseeth not, unless his demands be foolish.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 361. (1640)

God He rejects all Prayers that are sleight.

HERRICK, Prayers Must Have Poise. (1647)

8 Pray thou with a loving heart, all its words being hidden.

ANI, Maxims. No. 1. (c. 1000 B.C.)

Pray to God for nothing except what you can pray for openly. (Nihil deum roges, nisi quod rogare possis palam.)

ATHENODORUS, De Superstitione. (c. A. D. 50)

See SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. x, sec. 5.

Prayers all men may hear. (Aperto vivere voto.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 7. (c. A. D. 58)

Live among men as if God beheld you; speak with God as if men were listening. (Sic vive cum hominibus, tamquam deus videat; sic loquere cum deo, tamquam homines audiant.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. x, sec. 5. (a. A. D. 64)

Not one will pray under his breath. (Nihil arcano qui roget ore deos.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 39. (c. A. D. 85)

He who is loud in his prayers is short in his faith.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 24b. (c. 450)

9 He who prays must direct his heart to heaven.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 31a.

A man's prayers are not heard unless he places his heart in his hands. As it is said, "Let us lift up our hearts in our hands unto God in heaven."

Babylonian Talmud: Taanith, fo. 8a. (c. 450)

My words fly up, my thoughts remain below:

Words without thoughts never to heaven go.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 3, 97. (1600)

When I would pray and think, I think and pray To several subjects; Heaven hath my empty words.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 4, 1. (1604)

In Prayer the Lips ne'er act the winning part Without the sweet concurrence of the Heart.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Heart. (1647)

When I pray, my heart is in my prayer.

LONGFELLOW, Giles Corey. Act ii, sc. 3. (1868)

If your heart is in your prayer, God will know it.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 373. (1938)

1 Be not fainthearted when thou makest thy prayer. (μή ὀλιγοψυχῆσθς ἐν τῇ προσευχῇ σου.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), vii, 10. (c. 190 B.C.) Babylonian Talmud, Erubin, fo. 65a, has: Let not a man pray whose mind is not at rest within him, because it is said, In adversity who shall give thanks, perhaps a reminiscence of Psalms, vi, 5: "In the grave who shall give thee thanks?"

A prayer out of a poor man's mouth reacheth to the ears of God, and his judgment cometh speedily.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxi, 5.

The prayer of the humble pierceth the clouds. (Oratio humilantis se, nubes penetrabit.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxxv, 21.

And Satan trembles when he sees

The weakest saint upon his knees.

COWPER, Exhortation to Prayer. (a. 1800)

Even the prayers of an ant reach to heaven.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 438. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

2 Prayer is and remains always a native and deep-seated impulse of the soul of man.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Letter to George A. Duncan, 9 June, 1870.

3 Praying to God, and hammering away. (A Dios rogando, y con el mazo dando.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, chs. 35, 71. (1615) The Italians say, "Invoca i Santi e da di piglio all' aratro" (Invoke the Saints and hold on to the plow); the French, "Dieu donne fil à toile ourdie" (God gives thread to the woven cloth), or "Joindre les mains, c'est bien; les ouvrir, c'est mieux" (To join the hands [in prayer] is good; to open them [in work] is better); the Germans, "Beten und Arbeiten" (Pray and work), which is, of course, merely the Latin "Ora et labora"; the Russians, "Pray to God, but row to shore." The idea stems back to the Latin, "Dii facientes adiuvant" (The gods help the doers). See also GOD: GOD HELPS THEM THAT HELP THEMSELVES.

4 Ful tendrely he preycle, and made his mone.

CHAUCEUR (?), Troilus. Bk. iv, l. 950. (c. 1380)

Who-so wol preye, he moot faste and be clene, And fatte his soule and make his body lene.

CHAUCEUR, Somnours Tale, l. 171. (c. 1386)

5 He who offends against heaven has none to whom he can pray. (Put in wak chooi eü tien moo so tou.)

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. iii, ch.13. (c. 500 B.C.)

If thou forgettest to say, "Praise be to God," in what other words wilt thou pray?

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 8. (1817)

Addressed to persons who neglect the principal object of their business, and execute only the least important part.

6 When prayers were ended, Madame ends her pranking.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Messe. (1611)

When prayers are done, my Lady is ready.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 75. (1640)

7 No man ever prayed heartily without learning something.

R. W. EMERSON, Miscellanies: Nature. (1836)

The prayer of the farmer kneeling in his field to weed it, the prayer of the rower kneeling with the stroke of his oar, are true prayers heard throughout nature.

EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841)

8 Prayer should be the key of the day and the lock of the night.

OWEN FELTHAM, Resolves, lxvii, 353. (c. 1625)

9 To gods both false and true I'll humbly pray, If only they will give me my own way.

E. T. FOWLER, Fuel of Fire. Ch. 17. (1901)

10 Serving God is doing good to Man, but praying is thought an easier Service, and therefore more generally chosen.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753

11 He says any thing but his Prayers, and them he whistles.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.2014. (1732)

Miss will say anything but her prayers, and those she whistles.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Zay ev'ry thing besides their pray'rs, And those, agosh! they whistle.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), The Middlesex Election. Pt. iii. (1802)

12 A good prayer is not like a stratagem in war, to be used but once. . . . A good prayer, though often used, is still fresh and fair in the ears and eyes of Heaven.

THOMAS FULLER, Good Thoughts in Bad Times: Meditations on all Kind of Prayers. Sec. 12. (1645)

13 Fools, who came to scoff, remained to pray.

GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, l. 180. (1770)

They came to jeer but remained to whitewash.

MARK TWAIN, Tom Sawyer. Ch. 2. (1876)

They came to cough and remained to spray.

OLIVER HERFORD, of patients in the waiting room of a throat specialist. (a. 1935)

14 Who goes to bed, and doth not pray, Maketh two nights to every day!

GEORGE HERBERT, Charms and Knots. (c. 1633)

He that forgets to pray

Bids not himself good-morrow nor good-day.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Necessary Observations.

Precept 1. (a. 1635) "He who ceases to pray ceases to prosper."

15 At going to bed . . . he will have prayers in the hall. . . . The like he doth in the morning, using pleasantly the outlandish proverb, that Prayers and Provender never hinder Journey.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Country Parson. Ch. 17. (1632)

Prayers and provender hinder no journey.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 279. (1640) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1744.

Prayers and provender hinder no mans journey.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 133. (1670)
We're letting luncheon get cold, aren't we? I always used to be told that prayer and provender hinder no man.

KNOX, Other Eyes than Ours, p. 182. (1926)

1
Pray for yourself, I am not sick.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)

PRAYER WILL HEAL THE SICK, see under SICKNESS.

2
Ave Maria (quoth he) how much mocion

Here is to praiers, with how littell deuocion.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

He has meikle prayer, but little devotion.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 54. (c. 1595) Cited by Ray and Kelly.

3
Prayers are the daughters of God. (Αἱ ἀγαθὲς αἰεὶ Διὸς κόυραι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 502. (c. 850 B.C.)

4
So spake he in prayer, and Zeus, the counsellor, heard him, and a part the Father granted him, and a part denied. (ὥς ἔφατ' εὐχόμενος, τοῦ δ' ἔκλυε μητιέτα Ζεύς. | τῷ δ' ἕτερον μὲν δῶκε πατὴρ, ἕτερον δ' ἀνένευσε.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvi, l. 249. (c. 850 B.C.)

As half the prayer wi' Phoebus grace did find,
The t'other half he whistled down the wind.

(Audiit et voti Phoebus succedere partem mente dedit, partem volucris dispersit in auras.)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 794. (19 B.C.) SCOTT, tr., Waverley, ch. 43.

A god when angry is moved by the voice of prayer. (Flectitur iratus voce rogante deus.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 442. (c. 1 B.C.)

God, who's in Heav'n, will hear from thence;
If not to th' sound, yet, to the sense.

ROBERT HERRICK, God Heares Us. (1648)

Who hearkens to the gods, the gods give ear.

W. C. BRYANT, tr., Iliad. Bk. i, l. 280. (1870)

A generous prayer is never presented in vain.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Merry Men. (1880)

5
Set some fixed limit to your prayers. (Certum voto pete finem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 56. (20 B.C.)

Brevis oratio penetrat caelum. (A short prayer enters heaven.)

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text
A, passus xi, l. 304. (1362) Quoting a Latin proverb, common to many other languages.
The French say, "Courte prière pénètre les cieux"; the Italians, "Breve orazione pene-tra"; the Germans, "Je weniger Worte, je besser Gebet" (The fewer the words the better the prayer).

A schort prayer wynneth heyyvyn.

UNKNOWN, The Good Wyf Wold a Pylgremage,
l. 167. (c. 1450)

It is a common proverb that a short prayer thirleth [penetrates] heuen.

UNKNOWN, Dives and Pauper, fo. 74. (1493)

A short prayer enters heaven, and a long drink empties the can. (Brevis oratio penetrat celos, longa potatio euacuat scyphos.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 41. (1534)

A short prayer penetrates.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 178. (1666)

Prayer should be short, without giving God Almighty reasons why he should grant this, or that.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Prayer. (1689)

A short Prayer may reach up to the Heaven of Heavens.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 397. (1732)

6
He pray'd by quantity.

ROBERT POLLOK, The Course of Time. Bk. viii,
l. 630. (1827)

7
Prayers bring down the first blessing, and praises the second.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 8. (1659)

Prayers plough not! Praises reap not!

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

8
Whenever a man lives by prayer you will find that he eats considerable besides.

INGERSOLL, Speech, Chicago, 26 Nov., 1882.

9
We weary heaven with our petitions. (Nous fatiguons le ciel à force de placets.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vi, fab. 11. (1668)

With our importunate prayers we weary the gods.
(Par des vœux importuns nous fatiguons les dieux.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 5.

10
Both . . . pray to the same God, and each invokes His aid against the other. . . . The prayers of both could not be answered.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Second Inaugural Address,
4 March, 1865.

We, on our side, are praying to Him to give us victory, because we believe we are right; but those on the other side pray Him, too, for victory, believing they are right. What must He think of us?

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Remark, to the Rev. Byron
Sunderland, Chaplain of the U.S. Senate.
(1862)

11
To have prayed well is to have well endeavored. (Bene orasse est bene studuisse.)

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk: Prayer. (a.
1546)

12
He who fashions sacred images of gold or marble does not make them gods; he makes them such who prays to them. (Qui fingit sacros auro vel marmore vultus, | non facit ille deos: qui rogat, ille facit.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, ep. 24, l. 5. (A. D. 93)

13
Your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him. (ὁ πατὴρ ὑμῶν ὧν ἤξετε ἐχete πρὸ τοῦ ὑμᾶς αἰτῆσαι αὐτόν.)

New Testament: Matthew, vi, 8. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Scit enim pater vester, quid opus sit vobis, antequam petatis eum."

Leave it to the gods to decide what is best for us. (Permitte ipsis expendere numinibus quid | conveniat nobis.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 347. (c. A. D. 120)

1 Enough of prayers and praying, as the saying goes. (ταῦτα μὲν δὴ, φασίν, εὖχθω.)

MENANDER, The Girl Who Gets Her Hair Cut, l. 171. (c. 300 B. C.)

Cease to hope that heaven's decrees can be turned aside by prayer. (Desine fata deum flecti sperare precando.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 376. (19 B. C.)

Don't waste time in praying. (Ne tempora perde precando.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. xi, l. 286. (c. A. D. 7) The wish to talk to God is absurd. . . . The uses of prayer are only subjective.

IMMANUEL KANT, Lecture, Königsberg. (1775) Men's prayers are a disease of the will.

EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841)

2 Who rises from Prayer a better man, his prayer is answered.

GEORGE MEREDITH, The Ordeal of Richard Feverel. Ch. 12. (1859)

3 Prayers travel more strongly when said in unison. (Coniunctas fortius ire preces.)

PETRONIUS, Fragments. Frag. 92. (c. A. D. 60) Quoted as a proverb.

4 To a hostile mind no prayers gain entrance. (Inimici ad animum nullae conveniunt preces.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 325. (c. 43 B. C.)

5 Do not pray for yourself; you do not know what will help you. (οὐκ ἐὰν εὖχεσθαι ὑπὲρ ἑαυτῶν διὰ τὸ μὴ εἰδέναι τὸ συμφέρον.)

PYTHAGORAS, Axiom. (c. 525 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Sec. 9.

Don't pray for what you'll wish you hadn't got. (Postea noli rogare, quod inpetrare nolueris.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcv, sec. 2. (a. A. D. 64) Quoted as a common saying.

We, ignorant of ourselves,

Beg often our own harms, which the wise powers Deny us for our good; so find we profit

By losing of our prayers.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, l. 5. (1606)

We prayed for the rising of the Nile; the Nile came and we were drowned.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 484. (1817) [We are] too often cursed with the granting of our prayer.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate. (1860)

When the gods wish to punish us, they answer our prayers.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act ii. (1895)

Take care to get what you like, or you will be forced to like what you get.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

6 The prayers of those who asked moderately were never unanswered. (De ceulx les prieres n'ont iamais esconduites.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, Prologue. (1548)

7 She is at her last prayers.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 79. (1678)

Stale maid, at her last prayers.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew, sig. L5. (1690)

I'm at my last prayers.

UNKNOWN, Terence Made English, p. 157. (1698)

8 They shall have no more of our prayers than we of their pies, quoth the vicar of Layton.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 191. (1678)

9 Without ceasing I make mention of you always in my prayers. (ἀδιαλείπτως μνησάμενος ὑμῶν ποιοῦμαι πάντοτε ἐπὶ τῶν προσευχῶν μου.)

New Testament: Romans, i, 9. (c. A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Sine intermissione memoriam vestri facio semper in orationibus meis."

Nymph, in thy orisons

Be all my sins remember'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 89. (1600)

10 Better no prayer than too big an offering.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 146 (c. 900) Bellows, tr.

11 Fear drives the wretched to prayer. (In vota miseros ultimus cogit timor.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 510. (c. A. D. 60) The Germans say, "Noth lehrt beten" (Necessity teaches to pray).

Nothing costs so much as what is bought by prayers. (Nulla res carius constat quam quae precibus emptae.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. ii, ch. 1, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 54) See also FAVORS.

12 That's past praying for.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 211. (1597)

13 Let me say "amen" betimes, lest the devil cross my prayer.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii, 1, 22. (1596)

I could not say "Amen,"

When they did say "God bless us!" . . .

"Amen" stuck in my throat.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 2, 28. (1606)

14 Common people do not pray; they only beg.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 57. (1910)

The person who asks the gods for special protection is a racketeer by nature.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 27. (1940)

15 Go home, and say your prayers.

JAMES SHIRLEY, Hyde Park. Act i, sc. 2. (1637)

16 Nor are any prayers, unless righteous, heard by the gods. (Neque a Diis nisi iustas supplicium preces audiri.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 36. (c. A. D. 116)

The prayers of the wicked won't prevail.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

You can't pray a lie—I found that out.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 31. (1884)

1 Pray without ceasing. (ἀδιαλείπτως προσεύχεσθε.)

New Testament: I Thessalonians, v,17. (c. A. D. 52) The Vulgate is, "Sine intermissione orate."

Pray for us. (προσεύχεσθε περὶ ἡμῶν.)

New Testament: II Thessalonians, iii,1. (c. A. D. 53.) The Vulgate is "Orate pro nobis."

Men ought always to pray, and not to faint. (πάντοτε προσεύχεσθαι αὐτοὺς καὶ μὴ ἐνκακεῖν.)

New Testament: Luke, xviii, 1. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Oportet semper orare et non deficere."

2 The only prayer for a brave man is to be a-doing.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 13 Oct., 1840.

Do not pray for easy lives. Pray to be stronger men. Do not pray for tasks equal to your powers. Pray for powers equal to your tasks.

PHILLIPS BROOKS, Going Up to Jerusalem. (c. 1880) In his Twenty Sermons, No. 18.

3 It is good to go cross-legged and say prayers backward.

UNKNOWN, The Old Wives' Tale. (1595)

To say his prayers backwards.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 265. (1678)

Ye'er like a witch, ye say your prayers backwards.

DENHAM, ed., Denham Tracts, ii, 84. (1850)

HE THAT WOULD LEARN TO PRAY, LET HIM GO TO SEA, see under SEA.

PREACHER

See also Clergy, Parson, Priest

4 Ye been a noble prechour in this cas!

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 165. (c. 1388)

The test of a preacher is that his congregation goes away saying, not What a lovely sermon, but, I will do something!

ST. FRANCIS DE SALES, Introduction to the Devout Life. (1609)

5 The painful Preacher,—like a candle bright, Consumes himself in giving others Light.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

6 Saturday the working day and Monday the holiday of preachers.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, i, 240. (1661)

7 He that hath charge of souls, transports them not in bundles.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 984. (1640)

8 The pulpit has been called "coward's castle," the implication being that preachers are afraid of criticism.

CLEMENT F. ROGERS, Verify Your References, p. 76. (1938)

9 It takes a long tall brown-skin gal to make a preacher lay his Bible down.

MARSHALL WALKER. Title and refrain. (1917)

PREACHING

See also Sermon

10

No preaching o'er yar liquor.

APHRA BEHN, Roundheads. Act iv, sc. 3. (1682) Dangerous to preach over your liquor.

DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 295. (1709)

Did you ever hear of parson Palmer? . . . He used to preach over his liquor.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Parson Palmer, a jocular name or term of reproach, to one who stops the circulation of the glass by preaching over his liquor, as it is said was done by a parson of that name, whose cellar was under his pulpit.

FRANCIS GROSE, Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Parson. (1785)

11

Let us, even to the wearing of our tongues to the stumps, preach and pray.

JOHN BRADFORD, On Repentance. (c. 1555)

To preach long, loud, and Damnation, is the way to be cried up. We love a man that Damns us, and we run after him again to save us.

SELDEN, Table-Talk: Damnation. (a. 1654)

And pulpit, drum ecclesiastick,

Was beat with fist instead of a stick.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto 1, l. 11. (1663)

12

None preaches better than the ant, and she says nothing.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

13

He that preacheth, giveth alms.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 789. (1640)

14

A woman's preaching is like a dog's walking on his hind legs. It is not done well; but you are surprised to find it done at all.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 31 July, 1763.

15

What ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the housetops. (ὃ εἰς τὸ οὖς ἀκούετε, κηρύξατε ἐπὶ τῶν δωματίων.)

New Testament: Matthew, x, 27. (c. A. D. 50)

The Vulgate is, "Quod in aure auditis, prae-dicate super tecta."

II—Preaching and Practice

See also Example and Precept; Word and Deed

16

Base is the preacher when sin confutes his preaching. (Turpe est doctori, cum culpa redarguat ipsum.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 30. (c. 175 B. C.)

I hate base men who preach philosophy. (Ego odi homines ignava opera et philosophia sententia.)

PACUVIUS, Fragments. Frag. 348, Ribbeck. (c. 150 B. C.) As quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, xiii, viii, 4.

Not to guard yourself, and to give others counsel, is most stupid. (Sibi non cavere, et aliis consilium dare, stultum est.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fab. ix, l. 1. (c. 25 B. C.)

If gold ruste, what shal iren do?
For if a preest be foul, on whom we truste,
No wonder is a lewed man to ruste.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 502.
(c. 1386)

What's the adage rife in man's mouth? Why,
"The best

I both see and praise, the worst I follow."

ROBERT BROWNING, La Saisiaz. Sec. 22. (1878)

He preaches well who lives well. (Bien predica quien bien vive.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 20. (1615)

He preaches well that lives well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2006. (1732)

He is a great teacher who practises what he teaches. (Doctor erit magnus, factis qui quod docet implet.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 23. (c.
A. D. 600)

If ye lyuen as ye leren [teach] vs, we shal leue
[believe] you the bettere.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman, Text
B, passus v, l. 45. (1377)

A taught horse, and a woman to teach, and teachers practising what they preach.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

He first practices what he preaches, and then preaches according to his practice.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. ii, ch. 13. Referring to the superior man. (c. 500 B. C.)

This noble ensample to his sheep he yaf,
That first he wroughte, and afterward he taughte.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 498.
(c. 1386)

Cristes lore, and his apostles twelve,
He taughte, and first he folwed it himselfe.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 529.

His preaching much, but more his practice wrought—

A living sermon of the truths he taught.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Character of a Good Parson, l. 77. (c. 1700)

Saints who taught and led the way to Heaven.

THOMAS TICKELL, To the Earl of Warwick, on the Death of Mr. Addison, l. 41. (1719)

Of right and wrong he taught, . . .

And (strange to tell) he practis'd what he preach'd.

JOHN ARMSTRONG, *The Art of Preserving
Health*. Bk. iv, l. 301. (1744)

Allur'd to brighter worlds, and led the way.

GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, l. 167. (1770)

He practised the lesson which Hesiod only preached.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, tr., Plato, v, 47. (1875)

Sound, & sound Doctrine, may pass through a Ram's Horn, and a Preacher, without straightening the one or amending the other.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

Mankind are very odd Creatures: One Half censure what they practise, the other half practise what they censure; the rest always say and do as they ought.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

When a man's life is despicable, it follows that his preaching must fall into contempt.
(Cuius vita despicitur, restat ut eius praedicatio contemnatur.)

SAINT GREGORY, Apothegm. (c. A. D. 300)

There are many who preach agreeably, but do not live up to it.

Babylonian Talmud: Haggigah, fo. 14b. (c.
450) Applied as a reproach to Ben Asai, who strongly recommended matrimony, but himself remained a bachelor.

The exhortation of the wise, unaccompanied by practice, falls on the heart as rain on stone; and he whose words are at variance with his deeds disgraces himself; hence, words which come not from the heart can never penetrate the ear.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim
(Choice of Pearls). No. 69. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr.

Woe to those preachers who listen not to themselves.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 142. (1902)

Let him who exhorts others to give, give of his own. (Qui suadet, sua det.)

DEAN W. R. INGE, Assessments and Anticipations, p. 136. (1929) Quoting a Latin proverb.

Then saythe Seynt Austeyn that an ensampull yn doying ys mor commendabull then ys techyng other prechyng.

JOHN MIRKUS, Mirk's Festial, 216. (c. 1430)

I fall short of my own counsels. (Monitis sum minor ipse meis.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 547. (c. 1 B. C.)

Do yourself what you preache that we should do. (Facias ipse quod faciamus nobis suades.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 644. (c. 200 B. C.)

A prechur schuld lyve parfytly,

And do as he techys truly.

JOHN AUDELEY, Poems, p. 31. (1426)

We must practise what we preach.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., *Seneca's Morals:
The Happy Life*. Ch. 2. (c. 1680) YOUNG,
Love of Fame, iii, 48. (1728) COMBE, *Dr.
Syntax in Search of Consolation*, xxvii. (1812)
etc. etc.

The clergy should practise what they preach.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, v, 81. (1748)

Divines do not always practise what they preach.

DICKENS, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 37. (1840)

The gap between theory and practice is a wide one.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Patriotic Murders, p.
173. (1941)

I learn much from those who do not practice what they preach.

J. H. RHODES, Jonathan's Apothegms. Vol. ii,
No. 5. (1942)

What I preach, I shall follow up with deeds.
(Ut dico, factis persequar.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 554. (c. 200 B. C.)

1 He that techeth good to other and doth it not him self, is like to hym that lighteth a candell to another and goth him self darkeling.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictees and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 58. (1477) Quoting Plato.

2 I have taught you, my dear flock, for above thirty years how to live; and I will show you in a very short time how to die.

GEORGE SANDYS, Anglorum Speculum, p. 903. (c. 1644)

He taught them how to live and how to die.

WILLIAM SOMERVILLE, In Memory of the Rev. Mr. Moore, l. 21. (a. 1742)

3 Preachers say, Do as I say, not as I do.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Preaching. (a. 1654) See also WORD AND DEED.

It is what a man says, not what he is, that makes the preacher.

J. H. RHOADES, Jonathan's Apothegms. Vol. ii. No. 1. (1942)

4 It is a good divine that follows his own instructions.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 2, 15. (1597)

Do not, as some ungracious pastors do,
Show me the steep and thorny way to heaven;
Whiles, like a puff'd and reel less libertine,
Himself the primrose path of dalliance treads,
And recks not his own rede.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet. Act i, sc. 3, l. 47. (1600)

5 Whose life lightens, his words thunde. (Cuius vita fulgor, eius verba tonitrua.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 64. (1853) A mediæval Latin proverb.

PRECEDENT

See also Example

6 As well to create good precedents, as to follow them.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Great Place. (1597)

To follow foolish precedents, and wink
With both our eyes, is easier than to think.

COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 255. (1784)

Former people did so, and their successors follow suit. (Hsien jên tso 'hou jên 'chuan.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 185. (1872)

7 The road runs wheresoever a predecessor leaves his footprint. (Iter est quacumque dat prior vestigium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 328. (c. 43 B. C.)

What was now but a path has become a highroad. (Modo quæ fuerit semita, facta via est.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. vii, epig. 61. (c. A. D. 90)

For men are prone to go it blind
Along the calf-paths of the mind,
And work away from sun to sun
To do what other men have done. . . .

For thus such reverence is lent
To well-established precedent.

SAM WALTER FOSS, The Calf-Path. (c. 1897)

Where there is a cart ahead, there is a track behind.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 552. (1937)

8 I'll show thee a precedent.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV. Act ii, sc. 4, l. 37. (1597)

Is not Precedent indeed a King of men?

A. C. SWINBURNE, A Word from the Psalmist. (c. 1880)

9 What we today defend by precedents will hereafter become a precedent. (Quod hodie exemplis tuemur, inter exempla erit.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xi, sec. 24. (c. A. D. 116)

One precedent creates another. They soon accumulate and constitute law.

JUNIUS, Letters: Dedication. (1772)

The acts of today become the precedents of tomorrow.

FARRAR HERSHELL, Speech, 23 May, 1878.

10 Be wise to-day: 'tis madness to defer;
Next day the fatal precedent will plead.

EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts, i, 392. (1742)

PRECEPT

See also Example and Precept

11 An ounce of practice is worth a pound of precept.

RICHARD D. BLACKMORE, Cradock Nowell. Ch. 37. (1866)

12 Precept must be upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line. (Quia manda remanda, manda remanda, expecta re-expecta, expecta re-expecta.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxviii, 10. (c. 725 B. C.)

13 Precept has generally been posterior to performance.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 31 Aug., 1751

14 Charming women can true converts make.
We love the precepts for the teacher's sake

GEORGE FARQUHAR, A Constant Couple. Act v, sc. 3. (1700)

Uncurs'd by doubt our earliest creed we take;
We love the precepts for the teacher's sake.

O. W. HOLMES, A Rhymed Lesson, l. 191.

PREDECESSOR

See also Ancestry

15 One of my illustrious predecessors.

HENRY FIELDING, Covent-Garden Journal. No. 3, 11 Jan., 1752.

My illustrious predecessor.

EDMUND BURKE, Thoughts on the Cause of the Present Discontents. (1770)

I tread in the footsteps of illustrious men . . . in receiving from the people the sacred trust confided to my illustrious predecessor.

MARTIN VAN BUREN, Inaugural Address, 4 March, 1837. Van Buren was referring to Andrew Jackson.

PREGNANCY

<sup>1</sup> Here's a health to the Hans in Kelder, and the mother of the boy, if it prove so.

RICHARD BROME, The Sparagus Garden. Act iii, sc. 4. (1635) Child in the womb.

I think of sending you one day . . . a little drama . . . It is yet only in embryo—a sort of poetical Hans in Kelder.

WALTER SCOTT, Letters, 12 Nov., 1816.

<sup>2</sup> Our women have a proverb, "It is a sad burden to carry a dead man's child."

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Bk. ii, ch. 5, sec. 29. (1655)

It is a sad Burthen for a Woman to carry a dead Man's Child.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No.2873.(1732)

<sup>3</sup> It stinks! She's feeding two when she eats and drinks. (Es stinkt! Sie füttert zwei, wenn sie nun isst und trinkt.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc.17: Am Brunnen. (1806)

<sup>4</sup> Talk of unusual swell of waist
In maid of honour loosely laced.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Splen, l. 188. (1737)

My dear angel has been qualmish of late, and begins to grow remarkably round in the waist.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Roderick Random: Conclusion. (1748)

As women wish to be who love their lords.

JOHN HOME, Douglas. Act i. (1756)

<sup>5</sup> A ship under sail, a man in complete armour, and a woman with a big belly, are the three handsomest sights in the world.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)

A ship under sail and a big-bellied woman are the handsomest two things that can be seen common.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1735.

<sup>6</sup> Some women will conceive if you but shake a pair of breeches at them.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, i, 461. (1902) Or, "If you just hang your pants on the bed-post."

<sup>7</sup> Kit has lost her key.

WILLIAM PATTEN, The Expedition into Scotland: Preface. (1548) She is pregnant.

I am afraid it is a timpany [swelling] with two legges.

UNKNOWN, The Marriage of Wit and Wisdom, p. 15. (1579) Roxburghe Ballads, vii, 28. (c. 1685) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4127 (1732) has, "She hath a Tympany with two Heels."

Some say she hath taken a venew under the girdle and swells upon it.

CHAMBERLAIN, Letters (C.S.), p. 18. (1598)

She's in a hopeful way.

ETHEREGE, The Man of Mode. Act i, sc.1. (1676)

The cat hath eaten her count. Spoken of women with child, that go beyond their reckoning.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 68. (1678)

If you should your pipkin crack, your credit will away.

Roxburghe Ballads (B.S.), v, 67. (1681)

If her husband shou'd find out that she has crackt her pipkin, he'll cut your throat.

The Spanish Bawd. Act iii, sc. 2. (1707)

She had broke her Pipkin.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4124. (1732)

She has got a kid in her kilting.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 300. (1721)

Mrs. Dunning . . . is just ready to fall to pieces.

JEREMY BENTHAM, Works (1843), x, 111. (1781)

She has been stung by a serpent. (E atata beccata da una serpe.)

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 59.

(1855) An Italian proverb. The Germans say, "Der Storch hat die Mutter ins Bein gebissen" (The stork has bitten mother's leg).

She has a chip of Bede's chair in her pouch. It has been the custom from time immemorial for the ladies, immediately after the conclusion of the marriage ceremony (before Hymen's altar in Harrow church), to proceed to the vestry and cut a chip off Bede's chair, to ensure their fruitfulness. The saying is generally applied to those females who show signs of fecundity rather early after entering into the happy state of matrimony.

MICHAEL DENHAM, ed., Denham Tracts, i, 67. (1846)

I hear the gypsy has a row to hoe.

JOHN MASEFIELD, The Widow in the Bye Street. Pt. iv, st. 19. (1912)

<sup>8</sup> Earth does not imitate woman in the matter of conception and birth, but woman earth. (οὐ γὰρ γῆ γυναῖκα μιμούμεται κνήσει καὶ γεννήσει, ἀλλὰ γυνὴ γῆν.)

PLATO, Menexenus. Sec. 238A. (c. 375 B.C.)

Philo quotes this in his De Opificio Mundi, sec. 133.

PREJUDICE

<sup>9</sup> Drive out prejudices by the door, they will come back by the window. (Chassez les préjugés par la porte, ils rentreront par la fenêtre.)

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Letter to Voltaire, 19 March, 1771.

<sup>10</sup> Prejudice is the child of ignorance.

HAZLITT, Essays: On Prejudice. (c. 1821)

Ignorance is the mother of prejudice.

JOHN BRIGHT, London Times, 18 July, 1861.

Prejudices are the props of civilization.

ANDRÉ GIDE, Counterfeiters. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1926)

<sup>11</sup> Where there is grave prejudice, there is no judicial investigation. (Grave praeiudicium est quod iudicium non habet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 229. (c. 43 B.C.)

When the judgment's weak the prejudice is strong.

KANE O'HARA, Midas. Act i, sc. 4. (1764)

To be prejudiced is always to be weak.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Taxation No Tyranny. (1775)

My corns ache, I get gouty, and my prejudices swell like varicose veins.

JAMES HUNEKER, The Old Foggy. Ch. 1. (1913)

Never trust in people who always look out at one hole. (Ne vous fiez jamais en gens qui regardent par vn partuys.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 34. (1532)

It is never too late to give up our prejudices.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1. (1854)

Prejudice is opinion without judgment. (Le préjugé est une opinion sans jugement.)

VOLTAIRE, Dictionnaire Philosophique: Préjugés. (1764)

A prejudice is a vagrant opinion without visible means of support.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

Prejudice is the bandage that protects a sore segment of the brain.

BEN HECHT, A Guide for the Bedevilled, p. 30. (1944)

Prejudices, friend, are the kings of the vulgar herd. (Les préjugés, ami, sont les rois du vulgaire.)

VOLTAIRE, Le Fanatisme, ii, 4. (1769)

PREPAREDNESS

Against danger it pays to be prepared. (πρὸς τὸν κίνδυνον παρασκευάζεσθαι.)

AESOP, Fables: The Wild-Boar and the Fox. (c. 570 B. C.) The fox, finding the boar sharpening his tusks upon a tree, asks why he is doing that when he is in no danger. "When danger comes," the boar answers, "it will behove me not to sharpen my tusks, but to use them."

Fear preserves the vineyard. (Miedo guarda viña.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 261. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

The man who is prepared has his battle half fought. (Hombre apercebido, medio combatido.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 17. (1615)

The Italian is, "Chi è avvisato è armato."

FIRST BLOW HALF THE BATTLE, see under BLOW.

'Tis safest making peace with sword in hand.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle. Act v, sc. 3. (1699)

To prate of peace and arm your ships. (Pacem orare manu, praefigere puppibus arma.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 315. (1869) Quoting Vergil. "Love thy neighbor, but pull not down thy hedge."

Know how to take your own part. (Saberse ayudar.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 167. (1647)

Wepin [weapons] makith pese divers times.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-Place Book (E.E. T.S.), p. 128. (c. 1530) The Latin proverb is, "Armis pacis fulcra" (Arms the props of peace). "Arms carry peace" is a variant.

Weapons bode peace.

HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 449. (1869)

As a wise man in time of peace prepares for war. (In pace ut sapiens aptarit idonea bello.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 111. (35 B. C.)

They who are best prepared for war have it most in their power to live in peace. (τοῖς κάλλιστα πολεμῶν παρεσκευασμένοις, τοῦτοις μάλιστα ἔξεστιν εἰρήνην ἄγειν.)

DIO CHRYSOSTOM, First Discourse on Kingship. Sec. 27. (C. A. D. 75)

In time of peace, we should think of war. (Pacis tempore, cogitandum de bello.)

LUCIAN, Dialogues. (C. A. D. 175) As quoted by

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 151.

Another form of the proverb is, "Si vis pacem, para bellum" (If you desire peace, be prepared for war).

Who desires peace, let him prepare for war. (Qui desiderat pacem, praeparet bellum.)

VEGETIUS, Epitoma Rei Militaris. Bk. iii, Prologue. (C. A. D. 380)

Happy is that city which in time of peace thinks of war.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 6. (1621) Quoting an inscription in the armory at Venice.

There is nothing so likely to produce peace, as to be well prepared to meet an enemy.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Elbridge Gerry, 29 Jan., 1780.

To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace.

WASHINGTON, Address, to Congress, 8 Jan., 1790. If we desire to secure peace, . . . it must be known that we are at all times ready for war.

WASHINGTON, Address, to Congress, 3 Dec., 1793

Ef you want peace, the thing you've gut to du Is jes' to show you're up to fightin', tu.

LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 2. (1862)

Lord Beaconsfield had acted on the maxim that "if you want peace, you must prepare for war."

CHARLES LOWE, Prince Bismarck, Ch. 7. (1885)

Again and again we have owed peace to the fact that we were prepared for war.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, at the Naval War College, June, 1897.

Pride, arrogance and lust of conquest are the natural and bitter fruits of military preparation.

JOHN JAY, A Review of the Causes and Consequences of the Mexican War. Ch. 37. (1849)

Keep the munition, watch the way, make thy loins strong, fortify thy power mightily. (Custodiat obsidionem: contemplare viam, conforta lumbos, robora virtutem valde.)

Old Testament: Nahum, ii, 1. (c. 625 B. C.)

Nahum, iii, 14, has, "Draw thee waters for the siege, fortify thy strong holds."

Let your loins be girded about, and your lights burning. (ἔστωσαν ὑμῶν αἱ ὀσφύες περιεζωσμένοι καὶ οἱ λύχνοι καίόμενοι.)

New Testament: Luke, xii, 35. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Sint lumbi vestri praeincti, et lucernae ardentes in manibus vestris."

Then Christian began to gird up his loins.

JOHN BUNYAN, Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i. (1678)

GIRD UP THY LOINS AND FLEE, see under FLIGHT.

<sup>1</sup> Get thy spindle and thy distaff ready and God will send thee flax.

ALEXINA OGILVIE, Profitable Proverbs. (1923)

Prepare thyself in the hall that thou mayest be admitted into the palace.

ALEXINA OGILVIE, Profitable Proverbs.

<sup>2</sup> He who is not prepared to-day, will be less so to-morrow. (Qui non est hodie, cras minus aptus erit.)

OWID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 94. (c. 1 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> We should provide in peace what we need in war. (Prospicere in pace oportet quod bellum iuvet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 513. (c. 43 B. C.)

Just as in peace we must prepare for war, so, too, in years of plenty we must provide against dearth. (καθ' ὅσον ἐν εἰρήνῃ προνοεῖν τῶν ἐν τῷ πολέμῳ παρασκευῶν, καὶ ἐν εὐπορίαις τῶν κατ' ἐνδεϊαν.)

PHILO, De Iosepho. Sec. 115. (c. A. D. 40)

<sup>4</sup> Prudence . . . armeth herself against the fears of war, forewarning men by the sword drawn to prevent the drawing of swords.

SAMUEL PURCHAS, His Pilgrims, xix, 254. (1625)

FOREWARNED, FOREARMED, see WARNING.

One sword keeps another in the sheath.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 725.

(1640) The Italians say, "Una spada tien l'altro nel fodro," or "Un coltello fa tener l'altro nella guaina"; the Germans, "Ein Schwert hält das andere in der Scheide"; the French, "Qui porte épée, porte paix" (Who carries a sword, carries peace).

It is a wise saying that one sword often keeps another in the scabbard.

FRANKLIN, The Way to Wealth. (1758)

The proverb, "One sword drawn keeps the other in the scabbard," was verified.

FREDERICK CHAMIER, Ben Brace. Ch. 1. (1836)

One sword keeps another in the scabbard; . . . a far wiser word than the puling . . . babble of our shallow Peace Societies.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 93. (1853) There is a somewhat similar mediaeval Latin proverb, "Ubi bona custodia, ibi bona pax" (Where there is good guarding, there is good peace).

Peace the offspring is of power.

BAYARD TAYLOR, A Thousand Years. (a. 1878)

<sup>5</sup> Speak softly and carry a big stick; you will go far.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Address, Minnesota State Fair, 2 Sept., 1901. Quoting a saying which he refers to as "a West African proverb." It is reminiscent of the French, "Baton porte paix" (A cudgel carries peace), and of the Hindu, "A man without a stick will be bitten even by a sheep."

Broomstick preparedness.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Great Adventure. (1918)

<sup>6</sup> Prepared for either alternative. (In utrumque paratus.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 61. (19 B. C.) A similar Latin proverb is "In omnia paratus" (Prepared against all things).

PRESENT

See also Now; Past and Present; Today

<sup>7</sup> Many witty authors compare the present time to an isthmus, or narrow neck of land, that rises in the midst of an ocean, immeasurably diffused on either side of it.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 590. (1712)

The present is an indivisible point which cuts in two the length of an infinite line.

DENIS DIDEROT. (c. 1770) See MORLEY, Diderot and the Encyclopaedists, ii, 283.

This narrow isthmus 'twixt two boundless seas, The past, the future, two eternities.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh. Pt. ii, l. 138. (1817)

The poorest day that passes over us is the conflux of two Eternities.

CARLYLE, Essays: Signs of the Times. (c. 1857)

<sup>8</sup> The present . . . is everywhere at once the child of the past, and the parent of the future.

J. S. BLACKIE, tr. Aeschylus, ii, 151. (1850)

<sup>9</sup> The Complaints of the present Times, is the general Complaint of all Times.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4458. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> One realm we have never conquered—the pure present.

D. H. LAWRENCE, New Poems: Preface. (1918)

<sup>11</sup> No time like the present.

MRS. MARY DE LA RIVIERE MANLEY, The Lost Lover. Act iv, sc. 1. (1696)

"There is no time like the present," cried Mr. Bramble.

SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, 28 Sept., 1771.

No time like the present, a thousand unforeseen circumstances may interrupt you at a future time.

JOHN TRUSLER, Proverbs Exemplified, p. 152.

(1790) SCOTT, Fair Maid of Perth. Ch. 2.

(1828) DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 36.

(1839) MRS. OLIPHANT, Second Son, Ch. 4

(1888) etc. etc.

There is no time like now time.

J. H. MCCARTHY, If I Were King. Act iii. (1901)

<sup>12</sup> Remember that it is only this present, a moment of time, that man lives. (ἔτι συμνημόνευε, ὅτι μόνον ἡ ἑκάστος τὸ παρὸν τοῦτο δ' ἀκαριαῖον.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iii, sec. 10. (c. A. D. 174)

Since yesterday has gone and tomorrow has not come, take account of this one moment that now is.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. ix, Apologue 5. (c. 1257)
Learn, that the present Hour alone is Man's.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Irene. Act iii, sc. 2. (1749)

II—Present and Future

See also Today and Tomorrow

1 Those who live to the future must always appear selfish to those who live to the present.

EMERSON, Essays: Character. (1844)

2 Seize the present; trust the future as little as you may. (Carpe diem, quam minimum credula postero.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 11, l. 8. (23 B. C.)

Let the soul be joyful in the present, disdaining anxiety for the future. (Lactus in praesens animus quod ultra est oderit curare.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 25.

The future is purchased by the present.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 178. (1750)

3 The future is no more uncertain than the present.

WALT WHITMAN, Song of the Broad-Ax. (1856)

PRESENTS

See also Gift

4 "Presents," I often say, "endear absents."

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: A Dissertation upon Roast Pig. (1823) The Germans say, "Geschenke halten die Freundschaft warm" (Presents keep friendship warm).

If it were not for the Presents, an Elopement would be Preferable.

GEORGE ADE, Forty Modern Fables: The General Manager of the Love Affair. (1901)

Presents speak louder than words.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr's Almanack, l. 124. (1906)

PRESS, THE

See also Newspaper

5 The press is in large part in the hands of Jews and malcontents who have missed their calling.

OTTO VON BISMARCK, Newspaper Statement, at Rügen, 10 Nov., 1862. He is usually misquoted as having said, "A journalist is a man who has missed his calling."

6 Great is Journalism. Is not every able Editor a Ruler of the World?

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. ii, bk. i, ch. 4. (1837)

We live under a government of men and morning newspapers.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Address: The Press. (1863)

In America the President reigns for four years, and Journalism governs for ever and ever.

WILDE, Soul of Man under Socialism. (1891)

7 The yellow eye of Journalism.

THOMAS CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Pt. ii, bk. 3, ch. 3. (1837)

It is time for . . . psychological investigators to make a careful study of the Yellow literary atmosphere.

CHARLES DUDLEY WARNER, The Yellows in Literature. Harper's Magazine, xc, 481, Feb., 1895.

The Yellow Press is for a war with Spain at all costs.

Daily News (London), 2 March, 1898, p. 7/2.

Referring to the Hearst newspapers.

Whatever nation your Yellow Press happens to be insulting at this moment.

A. T. QUILLER-COUCH, From a Cornish Window, p. 52. (1906)

"Yellow journalism" traces its origin to these comics [the Yellow Kid] of the Hearst and Pulitzer newspapers, a phrase credited to Ervin Wardman, who, before he died in January, 1923, was publisher of Munsey's Herald.

JOHN R. WINKLER, W. R. Hearst, p. 110. (1928)

8 With much communication will he tempt thee, and smiling upon thee will get out thy secrets.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xiii, 11. (c. 190 B. C.)

He will print them, out of doubt; for he cares not what he puts into the press.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 1, 79. (1601)

And faith he'll print it.

ROBERT BURNS, On the Late Captain Grose's Peregrinations thro' Scotland. St. 1. (1791)

9 The press is like the air, a chartered libertine.

WILLIAM PITT, Letter to Lord Grenville, 1757.

The press, like fire, is an excellent servant, but a terrible master.

J. FENIMORE COOPER, The American Democrat Ch. 25. (1838)

In old days men had the rack. Now they have the press.

WILDE, Soul of Man under Socialism. (1891)

10 They sed the press was the Arkymedian Leaver which moved the world.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), Artemus Ward, His Book: The Press. (1862)

II—Freedom of the Press

11 The liberty of the press is essential to the nature of a free state.

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries on the Laws of England. Bk. iv. (1765)

The liberty of the press is the palladium of all the civil, political, and religious rights of an Englishman.

JUNIUS, Letters: Dedication. (1769)

The freedom of the press is one of the great bulwarks of liberty.

GEORGE MASON, The Virginia Declaration of Rights. Sec. 12. (15 June, 1776)

Our liberty depends on the freedom of the press, and that cannot be limited without being lost.

JEFFERSON, Letter to James Currie. (1786)

Where dwells the man who dare suppress
The noble freedom of the press?

UNKNOWN, The Freedom of the Press. St. 1.

In The Freeman's Journal, 27 June, 1787.

No government ought to be without censors; and,
where the press is free, no one ever will.

JEFFERSON, Letter to George Washington, (1792)

Where the press is free and every man able to read, all is safe.

JEFFERSON, Letter to Charles Yancey. (1816)

Absolute freedom of the press to discuss public questions is a foundation stone of American liberty.

HERBERT HOOVER, Address, at the annual luncheon of the Associated Press, New York,
22 April, 1929.

Freedom of the press is the staff of life for any vital democracy.

WENDELL L. WILLKIE, Letter to W. N. Hardy,
18 Sept., 1940.

1 Despotism can no more exist in a nation until the liberty of the press be destroyed, than the night can happen before the sun is set.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 468. (1820)

2 Areopagitica, A Speech for the Liberty of Vnlicenc'd Printing.

JOHN MILTON. Title of book. (1644)

A Seasonable Memorial . . . upon the Liberties of the Press.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE. Title of book. (1680)

3 He said, he should always consider the liberty of the press as a national evil, while it enabled the vilest reptile to soil the lustre of the most shining merit.

SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, 15 July, 1771.

What have the Germans gained by their boasted freedom of the press except the liberty to abuse each other?

GOETHE, Table-Talk. (1809)

The liberty of thinking and of publishing whatever one likes . . . is the fountain-head of many evils.

POPE LEO XIII, Immortale Dei, 1 Nov., 1885.

III—Press: The Fourth Estate

4 Four persons diversely clothed; one of them dressed like a Monk, . . . the other like a Falconer, . . . the third like a Solicitor, . . .
the fourth looked like one of your Vive Barbers. . . . Pantagruel enquir'd of one of their Coxswain's Crew who those persons were? He answer'd that they were the Four Estates of the Island. (Les quatre estatx de l'isle.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 48. (1548)

A fourth estate of wrangling lawyers, to add to the three ancient ones of the church, nobility, and people. (Un quatriesme estat de gents manians les proceiz.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 22. (1580)

That very large and powerful body which forms the fourth estate in the community—the mob.

HENRY FIELDING, Covent Garden Journal, 13
June, 1752.

The gallery in which the reporters sit has become a fourth estate of the realm.

T. B. MACAULAY, Essays: Hallam's Constitutional History. Tenth paragraph from end.
Published in The Edinburgh Review, Sept., 1828.

Burke said there were Three Estates in Parliament; but, in the Reporters' Gallery yonder, there sat a Fourth Estate more important far than they all.

CARLYLE: On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters. (1841) The attribution to Burke instead of Macaulay was probably a slip of the pen, as the phrase has not been found in Burke's published works.

What Fielding called "The Fourth Estate." That dignity is now assigned to the press.

KNIGHT, Once Upon a Time, ii, (1854)

At that period the Times constituted a fourth estate of the realm.

SIR H. LYTTON BULWER, Life of Palmerston.
Vol. ii, ch. 9, p. 119, note. (1870)

The Fourth Estate. The Newspaper Press; coined
ca. 1790, perhaps by Burke. The three estates, proper, of the realm are the Peers, the Bishops, the Commons.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Fourth. (1941)

PRETENCE

See also Affectation, Hypocrisy

5 Weak to perform, though mighty to pretend.
COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 15. (1780)

6 Pretence accomplishes nothing. Few are deceived by a mask that is easily drawn over the face. (Nihil simulatio proficit. Paucis inponit leviter extrinsecus inducta facies.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxix, sec. 18. (c.
A. D. 64) There is a Greek proverb, κόρηπος ἐν λαχάροις (A pimpernel among the vegetables), of sorry pretenders.

We gain more by permitting our real selves to be seen, than by trying to appear something we are not. (Nous gagnerions plus de nous laisser voir tels que nous sommes, que d'essayer de paraître ce que nous ne sommes pas.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 457. (1665)

PRETTINESS

See also Beauty

7 They are pretty that have pretty conditions.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 15. (1633)

Pretty and witty will wound if they hit ye.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

8 Prettiness dies first.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 406. (1640)

Prettiness dies quickly.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1670)

Prettiness is short-liv'd.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3930. (1732)

9 As the saying is, every thing is pretie when it is young.

SAMUEL HIERON, Works, i, 588. (1616)

1 Prettiness makes no pottage.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 192. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3931. (1732)

2 He was pretty enough to frame.
MARK TWAIN, Connecticut Yankee, p. 14. (1889)
She's as pretty as a red heifer in a flower bed.
O. HENRY, One Dollar's Worth. (1910)
There's that girl—she's as pretty as paint.
E. V. LUCAS, Genevra's Money. Ch. 16. (1922)

PREVENTION

3 Before thou fight, seek thee a helper;
Before thou art sick, seek thee a physician.
BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xviii, 19. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

4 Meet the malady on its way. (Venienti occurrere morbo.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 64. (c. A. D. 58) See also under DISEASE.

How much better and more useful it is to meet the trouble in time, rather than to seek a remedy after the damage has been done. (Cum melius et utilius sit in tempore occurrere quam post causam vulneratam quaerere remedium.)

HENRY DE BRACON, De Legibus. Bk. v, ch. 10, sec. 14. (c. 1240)

Prevention is so much better than healing.

THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 598. (1630)
It is far easier to prevent than to cure. (Que es más fácil el prevenir que el remediar.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 86. (1647)

The wisdom of prevention is better than the wisdom of remedy.

UNKNOWN. In Somers Tracts, ix, 225. (1685)
Prevention is much preferable to Cure.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3932. (1732)
Prevention is the better Cure,
So says the Proverb, and 'tis sure.

COTTON, Visions in Verse: Health. (1751)
An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.
T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 15. (1843)

Prevention is better than cure.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 51. (1850)
SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, No. 2053.

In my opinion, in nine cases out of ten, cure is better than prevention. . . . By looking forward to all possible evils, we waste the strength that had best be concentrated in curing the one evil which happens.

SIR G. C. LEWIS, in BAGEHOT, Biographical Studies, p. 212. (a. 1863)

Precaution is better than cure. (Praestat cautela quam medela.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 336. (1869) Quoting Coke.

I felt that an ounce of precaution would be better than a pound of struggle.

GARDNER, Case of Turning Tide, p. 229. (1941)

5 Prevention is the daughter of intelligence.
SIR WALTER RALEGH, Letter to Sir Robert Cecil, 10 May, 1593.

PRICE

See also Cheapness, Value, Worth

6 Better be cheated in the price than in the [quality of the] goods. (Más vale ser engañado en el precio que en la mercadería.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 157. (1647)

7 Now he has paid the full price for all. (νῦν δ' ἀθρόα πάντ' ἀπέτισεν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 43. (c. 850 B. C.)

8 Come, buy wine and milk, without money and without price. (Absque argento, et absque ulla commutatione.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lv, 1. (c. 725 B. C.)

9 Earth gets its price for what Earth gives us.
J. R. LOWELL, The Vision of Sir Launfal: Pt. i, Prelude. (1848)

10 The price depends on the market. (C'est de tel vente tel marché.)

MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, ii, 240. (c. 1250)

Scarcity raises the price of everything. (La rareté, laquelle hausse le pris de toutes choses.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 39. (1552)

Tyme and place give best advice,

Out of season, out of price.

ROBERT SOUTHWELL, Losse in Delaye. (1595)

11 What price Salvation?

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act ii. (1905)

What Price Glory?

MAXWELL ANDERSON AND LAURENCE STALLINGS.

Title of play, produced 3 Sept., 1924.

12 The real price of everything . . . is the toil and trouble of acquiring it.

ADAM SMITH, Wealth of Nations. Ch. 1. (1776)

13 Nothing is dear if it's good.

H. G. WELLS, You Can't Be Too Careful, p. 185. (1942)

Everything that's worth having must be paid for.

ETHEL WHITE, Fear Stalks the Village, p. 154. (1942)

II—Price: "Every Man Has His Price"

14 Every man is to be had one way or another, and every woman almost any way.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 June, 1750. A modern variant is, "Every man has his price, and every woman her figure."

15 Different men sell themselves at different prices. (ἄλλοι γὰρ ἄλλων τιμωσκούσιν.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 11. (c. A. D. 100)

All have prices,
From crowns to kicks, according to their vices.
LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto v, st. 27. (1820)

<sup>1</sup> As in other things, so in men, not the seller but the buyer determines the price.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch.15.(1651)

<sup>2</sup> All things are salable at Rome. (Romae omnia venalia esse.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 8, sec. 1. (c. 40 B. C.)

All things at Rome have their price. (Omnia Romae cum pretio.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 183. (c. A. D. 120) Everything had its price. (Venum cuncta dari.)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. Bk. i, l. 179. (c. A. D. 395)

<sup>3</sup> All those men have their price.

SIR ROBERT WALPOLE, Speech. (1734) See WILLIAM COXE, Memoirs of Sir Robert Walpole (1798), vol. i, p. 757. The context is, "Flowery oratory he [Walpole] despised. He ascribed to the interested views of themselves or their relatives the declarations of pretended patriots, of whom he said, 'All those men have their price.'" In The Gentleman's Magazine, iv, 589, A. F. Robbins asserts that the phrase used by Walpole in a speech either in November or December, 1734, was, "Every man has his price." Horace Walpole hotly denied this, in a letter dated 26 Aug., 1785, and claimed that the phrase had been attributed to Sir Robert by his enemies. In LATHAM, Famous Sayings and Their Authors, the assertion is made that Sir Robert remarked to Lord John Leveson-Gower, "I know the price of every man in this house [the House of Commons] except three," and that it was from this the misquotation arose. See Notes and Queries, 11 May, 1907, p. 367. Whether or not Walpole ever said it, it is certain he did not originate it, for in The Bee, vol. viii, p. 97 (1734), Sir William Wyndham wrote, "It is an old maxim that every man has his price," and the idea is at least as old as Epictetus.

That politician . . . whose favourite saying was, "Do not tell me of your virtue. . . I tell you, every man has his price."

JOHN WESLEY, Sermons, p. 123. (1790)

Oh! every man has his price.

GEORGE P. R. JAMES, The Smuggler. Ch. 10. (1845)

That shallow maxim of worldly cynicism, which tells us that "every man has his price."

HENRY P. LIDDON, Some Words of Christ, p. 23. (1892) The French say, "Chacun vaut son prix" (Every man is worth his price, or, Every man has his value).

His cynical belief that every man had his price.

ERLE STANLEY GARDNER, The Case of the Turning Tide, p. 97. (1941)

Every man has a price.

M. V. HEBERDEN, Aces, Eights and Murder, p. 33. (1941)

<sup>4</sup> Few men have virtue to withstand the highest bidder.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Robert Howe, 17 August, 1779.

PRIDE

<sup>5</sup> Pride is never without her own pain, though she will not feel it; be her garments what they will, yet she will never be too hot nor too cold.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 190. (1629) Pride feels no pain. Girt thee hard, Prue.

BEN JONSON, The New Inn. Act ii, sc. 1. (1631) Pride never feels pain.

THOMAS FULLER, A Pisgah-Sight of Palestine Bk. iv, ch. 6, sec. 7. (1650)

Pride feels no cold.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 126. (1678) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 277, with the comment, "Spoken to young women when, in compliance with the fashion, they went with their breasts and shoulders bare."

Pride feels no Frost.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3933. (1732) Truly, indeed, does the proverb say that "pride knows no pain."

THEODORE HOOK, Jack Brag. Ch. 18. (1837) Pride must be pinched. A reproof to one who complains of tight boots.

G. F. NORTHALL, Folk-Phrases, p. 21. (1894)

<sup>6</sup> The man who is proud is the man with a blemish.

Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, fo. 29a.(c. 450)

<sup>7</sup> How should dust and ashes be proud.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), x, 9. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

Pride is the beginning of sin.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, x, 13.

Pride was not made for man.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, x, 18.

Take heed that thou be not over-proud.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xiii, 8.

<sup>8</sup> Pryde against frende or neighbour is as a bath where men feare the thondyr strooke. (Orgueil est toujours nuisant a lomme.)

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regisme de Mesnaige. (c. 1130)

<sup>9</sup> Pride makes us esteem ourselves; Vanity makes us desire the esteem of others. It is just to say, as Dean Swift has done, that a man is too proud to be vain.

HUGH BLAIR, Lectures on Rhetoric. Vol.i, ch.10 (1783)

<sup>10</sup> Pride: a vice whose name is comprehended in a Monosyllable, but in its nature not circumscribed with a World.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 8. (1643)

<sup>11</sup> The dog saw himself in fine breeches [and would not recognize his companions]. Vióse el perro en bragas de cerro [y no conocio a su companero].)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 50. (1615) Another form is, "Viose et villano en bragas de cerro y el fiero que fiero" (The clown saw himself in plush breeches and was prouder than proud). There is a kindred African proverb, "When the slave is freed, he calls himself a nobleman." The English, "Set a beggar on horseback" expresses the same idea. See under BEGGAR.

1 And eek, for she was somdel smoterlich [smirched],
She was as digne [proud] as water in a dich;
And ful of hoker and of bisemare [scorn and contempt].

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Reves Tale, l. 44. (c. 1386)

2 It's good beating proud folks, for they will not complain.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 31. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 133. (1670)

3 Though pride is not a virtue, it is the parent of many virtues.

J. CHEURTON COLLINS, Aphorisms. (c. 1905)

4 There is this paradox in pride: it makes some men ridiculous, but prevents others from becoming so.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 207. (1820)

5 Pride, Envy, Avarice—these are the sparks
Have set on fire the hearts of all men.
(Superbia, invidia ed avarizia sono le tre faville ch' hanno i cuori accesi.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto vi, l. 74. (c. 1300)

Pride (of all others the most dang'rous fault)
Proceeds from want of sense, or want of thought.

WENTWORTH DILLON, An Essay on Translated Verse. (1684)

Pride ruined the angels.

R. W. EMERSON, The Sphinx. (Dial, Jan., 1841.)

6 What proud man is not odious? (τίς δ' οὐ σεμνὸν ἀχθῆνός βροτῶν;)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, l. 94. (c. 428 B. C.)

Pride is hateful before God and man.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), x, 7. (c. 190 B. C.)

A proud man is hated even by the people of his own house.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 98a. (c. 450)

I do hate a proud man, as I hate the engendering of toads.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, ii, 3, 170. (1601)

Likeness begets Love, yet proud Men hate one another.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3243. (1732)

7 Pride oppresseseth loue, prouoketh disdain, ingend'reth malice, confoundeth iustice, & corrupteth great states.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 64. (1578)

As sore places meet most rubs, proud folks meet most affronts.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

The Proud hate Pride—in others.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

Great Pride and Meanness sure are near ally'd;
Or their Partitions do their Bounds divide.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

To be proud of Knowledge, is to be blind with Light;
To be proud of Virtue is to poison yourself with the Antidote.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

Pride dines upon Vanity, sups on Contempt.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

Pride breakfasted with Plenty, dined with Poverty, supped with Infamy.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757.

8 He that is too proud to ask, is too good to receive.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2194. (1732)

9 Pride had rather go out of the way than go behind.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3937. (1732)

Pride scorns a Director.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3949.

The proud will rather lose than ask their way.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, Farewell, l. 382. (1764)

10 Pride is scarce ever cur'd.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3942. (1732)

Pride and the Gout are seldom cur'd throughout.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

11 Pride is the sworn Enemy to Content.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3944. (1732)

12 A proud Man has many Crosses.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 368. (1732)

Pride increaseth our Enemies, but putteth our Friends to Flight.

Pride, joined with many Virtues, chokes them all.
Pride in Prosperity turns to Misery in Adversity.
Pride is to be fear'd, even in good Actions.

Pride loves no Man, and is belov'd of no Man.

Pride may lurk under a thread-bare Cloak.

Pride scorns the Vulgar, yet lies at its Mercy.

Pride will spit in Pride's Face.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 3938–3953.

(1732) Most of these are also cited by BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 476. "Pride with pride will not abide" is a variant of the last one.

13 I kept myself up with proverbs as long as I could; "Pride must abide"—and such wholesome pieces of pith.

ELIZABETH GASKELL, North and South. Ch. 29. (1855)

14 Pride in their port, defiance in their eye,
I see the lords of human kind pass by.

GOLDSMITH, The Traveller, l. 327. (1764)

15 Pride is the cause of alle wo.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis; i, 3006. (1390)

In general, pride is at the bottom of all great mistakes.

JOHN RUSKIN, The True and Beautiful: Conception of God. (c. 1860)

- 1 How low, how little are the proud.
THOMAS GRAY, Ode to Spring. (1748)
Pride Howe'er disguised . . . Is littleness.
WORDSWORTH, Lines Left Upon a Seat in a Yew-tree, l. 50. (1795)
This passion with a pimple.
EDWARD YOUNG, Love of Fame, i, 109. (1728)
- 2 Do you not know the saying of the Poet, that There is no rigour like to his,
Who from low state extolled is.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 196. (1574) Pettie, tr.
Nothing more proud than basest blood, when it doth rise aloft.
UNKNOWN. In Harleian Miscellany, ii, 65. (1642)
- 3 Purging the sinne of pride with the abstinence of the mouth.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 35. (1574) Pettie, tr.
- 4 Pride is as loud a beggar as want, and a great deal more saucy.
LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. (1693) Works, p. 181.
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3941. (1732)
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1750.
- 5 Pride is the possession of fools. (φιλοτιμία κτήμα σκαίων.)
HERODOTUS, History. Bk. iii, ch. 53. (c. 455 B. C.)
Pride, the never-failing vice of fools.
POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. ii, l. 4. (1709)
For often a man's own angry pride
Is cap and bells for a fool.
TENNYSON, Maud. Pt. i, sec. 6, st. 7. (1855)
- 6 I proud and thou proud, who shall beare th' ashes out?
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
I stout, and thou stout, who shall carry the dirt out?
JOHN DONNE, Polydoron, p. 44. (1631)
You a lady, I a lady, who shall drive the hogs a-field?
R. C. TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 4. (1853)
- 7 Pompous prouision comth not all, alway
Of glottony, but of pryde sometyme, some say.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
- 8 Pride costs us more than hunger, thirst, and cold.
WILLIAM HONE, Year-book, col. 1612 (1831)
- 9 Pride is a flower that grows in the devil's garden.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs. (1659)
- 10 Pride is seldom delicate; it will please itself with very mean advantage.
SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. Ch. 9. (1759)
- 11 He wats not whether he bears the earth. o the earth him. Spoken of excessive prou' people.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 174. (1721)

Mrs. Sheller (who has Irish blood in her veins) used to say that the ground was not good enough for them to walk on.

BLACKMORE, Clara Vaughan. Ch. 39. (1864)

12 Oh, why should the spirit of mortal be proud?

WILLIAM KNOX, Oh, Why Should the Spirit of Mortal Be Proud? (a. 1825) The favorite hymn of Abraham Lincoln.

13 If we had no pride ourselves, we would not lament that of others. (Si nous n'avions point d'orgueil, nous ne nous plaindriens pas de celui des autres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 34. (1665)
All men are equally proud. They differ only in their opportunities and ways of displaying pride. (L'orgueil est égal dans tous les hommes, et il n'y a de différence qu'aux moyens et à la manière de le mettre à jour.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 35.
Subtractions from the other vices are often additions to pride. (Notre orgueil s'augmente souvent de ce que nous retranchons de nos autres défauts.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 450.

14 A prowde hert in a beggers brest.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems, p. 56. (c. 1430)
See under HEART.

15 Proud in our own conceits.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 329 (1580) See also CONCEIT.

Pride and conceit were the original sin of man.

LE SAGE, Gil Blas. Bk. vii, ch. 3. (1715)

16 Pride lodges in the mind; the tongue can have no great share in it. (L'orgueil giste en la pensee; la langue n'y peult avoir qu'une bien legiere part.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (1580)

17 Pride without which the Gods are worms!

EUGENE O'NEILL, The Great God Brown. Act i, sc. 1. (1926)

18 God resisteth the proud, and giveth grace to the humble. (ὁ θεὸς ὑπερηφάνους ἀντιτάσσειται ταπεινοῖς δὲ δίδωσιν χάριν.)

New Testament: I Peter, v, 5. (c. 63 A. D.) The Vulgate is, "Deus superbis resistit; humilibus autem dat gratiam."

19 Proud bearing is appropriate to proud fortunes. (Secundas fortunas decent superbiae.)

PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 300. (c. 200 B. C.)

20 Nothing is so full of pride by nature as a man. (οὐδὲν γὰρ οὕτω γαῦρον ὡς ἀνὴρ ἐφιν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia. Sec. 779D. (c. A. D. 95)
Quoting from an unidentified tragic poet.

Pride still is aiming at the bless'd abodes,
Men would be Angels, Angels would be Gods.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 125. (1732)

21 An high look, and a proud heart, and the plowing of the wicked, is sin. (Exaltatio oculorum est dilatatio cordis: lucerna impiorum peccatum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxi, 4. (c. 350 B. C.)

1 His pride of birth was equal to either.

ANN RADCLIFFE, The Italian. Ch. 1. (1797)

Pride of rank and office.

ROBERT POLLOK, Course of Time, ix, 723. (1827)

Pride of place. Ostentatious pride of position (or occasionally of rank). Cf. the Biblical pride of life (ἡ ἀλαζονεία τοῦ βίου: superbia vitae).

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

2 Pride an' grace ne'er dwell in one place.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 253. (1678)

Pride and Grace dwell never in one Place.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6273. (1732)

3 Pride is the habit of the ignorant. Pride caused the fall of Azazel [Satan].

SADI, Pand Namah. Sec. 8. (c. 1260)

4 An avenging god pursues the proud. (Sequitur superbos ultor a tergo deus.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 385. (c. A. D. 60)

Pride is always too big for its shoes and not big enough for its hat.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr., p. 50. (1906)

5 Two curs shall tame each other; pride alone Must tarre the mastiffs on.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus, i, 3, 391. (1599)

He that is proud eats up himself; pride is his own glass, his own trumpet, his own chronicle.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, ii, 3, 164.

6 I must put my pride in my pocket.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act i. (1905)

I don't propose to put my pride in my pocket.

LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act ii. (1906)

7 You do me proud, as Brother Jonathan says.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 33. (1850)

You've done yourselves proud.

MARK TWAIN, Innocents at Home. Ch. 5. (1872)

8 I wou'dn't be as sick as she's proud for all the world.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

9 Proud looks make foul work on fair faces.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 491. (1940)

10 Thou shalt sooner detect an ant moving in the dark night on the black earth, than all the motions of pride in thy heart.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 68. (1852) A Persian proverb.

If pride were an art, how many graduates we should have! (Se la superbia fosse arte, quanti Dottori avremmo.)

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 69. Italian.

11 Speak not words of pride and arrogance, even when thou art sitting alone.

TUAUF, Teaching. No. xxii. (c. 2500 B. C.)

12

Deep is the sea, and deep is hell, but Pride mineth deeper.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Pride. (1839)

13

Pride is the consoler of the weak. (L'orgueil est le consolateur des faibles.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 614. (1746)

The greatest handicap, if one is not born rich, is to be born proud. (Ce qu'il y a de plus embarrassant, quand on n'est pas né riche, c'est d'être né fier.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 646.

14

A proud man hath no God.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Moral Aphorisms. (1753)

15

There is such a thing as a man being too proud to fight.

WOODROW WILSON, Speech, at Philadelphia, 10 May, 1915.

I had not been two days in Washington before I supplied the President through Tumulty [his secretary] with a phrase which brought down upon him a storm of abuse and denunciation. The words "too proud to fight," embodied in his Philadelphia speech of May 10, were mine.

O. G. VILLARD, Fighting Years, p. 256. (1939)

It requires more courage not to fight than to fight.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, Elizabeth the Queen. Act i, sc. 2. (1930)

16

Puere done pride makythe nakid syde.

UNKNOWN, How the Good Wüf Taugte Hir Doughtir, l. 95. (c. 1430)

If pride leads the van, beggary brings up the rear.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

As Pride increases, Fortune declines.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanac, 1744.

II—Pride: Synonyms

17

Not to think of men above that which is written, so that no one of you be puffed up for one against another. (ἵνα μὴ εἰς ὑπὲρ τοῦ ἐνὸς φυσιοῦσθε κατὰ τοῦ ἐτέρου.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, iv, 6. (A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Ne supra quam scriptum est, unus adversus alterum inflatur pro alio."

Puffed up and full of his relationship to Nero.

(Inflatum plenumque Nerone propinquo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 72. (c. A. D. 120)

God loveth not those who are puffed up with pride.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xvi, 23. (c. 622)

Puffed up with pride and vainglorie.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 80. (1574) Pettie, tr.

18

Upon the high-ropes, Cock-a-hoop.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Rope. (a. 1700) Excited, disdainful.

The Duke of Marlborough . . . is one day humble, and the next upon the high ropes.

SWIFT, Journal to Stella, 6 Dec., 1711.

[They] were always upon the high ropes with her.
DAVID GARRICK, Correspondence, i, 433. (1771)
All upon the high rope.

GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act ii. (1773)

She was quite on the high ropes about something.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 31. (1838)

Nora was rather on the high ropes just then, and would not notice him.

MRS. HENRY WOOD, Trevlyn Hold. Ch. 22. (1864)

1 His eyes grow on the top of his head. (Yen ching shêng tou ting chung.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 189. (1872)

Said of a proud and haughty man.

2 He is so hy in thinstep, and so streight laste [laced],

That pryde and couetyse withdrawth all repaste.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

They be hyghe in the instep, and stondesth in theyr owne consayte.

ANDREW BOORDE, Introduction to Knowledge. Ch. 26. (1547)

The gentleman was growne higher in the instep.

FYNES MORYSON, An Itinerary, ii, 26. (1617)

Too high in the instep . . . to bow to beg a kindness.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Bk. x, sec. 6. (1655)

"She is rather high in her instep," she is proud and haughty.

CARR, The Dialect of Craven: Instep. (1828)

3 I beware of a stuck-up comrade. (Superbum convivam caveo.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xi, l. 129. (c. A. D. 120)

He's a nasty stuck-up monkey.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 9. (1839)

Tom . . . considered him a stuck-up fellow.

KINGSLEY, The Water-Babies. Ch. 1. (1863)

She has no stuck-up ideas about herself.

TROLLOPE, He Knew He Was Right. Ch. 35. (1869)

4 Proudnecked at the smallest cause. (μικροτάτοις ελώθαμεν ὑψαυχεῖν.)

PHILO, De Mutatione Nominum. Sec. 154. (c. A. D. 40) STIFF-NECKED, see under OBSTINACY.

III—Pride Goes Before a Fall

5 Pride hated stands, and doth unpitied fall.

WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomsday: The Fourth Hour. St. 85. (1614)

Thus unlamented pass the proud away,

The gaze of fools, the pageant of a day!

POPE, Elegy to the Memory of an Unfortunate Lady, l. 43. (1715)

Pride goeth forth on horseback grand and gay,

But cometh back on foot, and begs its way.

LONGFELLOW, The Bell of Atri. St. 6. (1870)

6 When pride cometh, then cometh shame. (Ubi fuerit superbia, ibi erit et contumelia.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xi, 2. (c. 350 B. C.)

Pryde goyth before and shame comyth after.

UNKNOWN, Douce MS, 52. (c. 1350) SKELTON,

Against Garnesche, 165. (a. 1529) HEYWOOD,

Proverbs, i, 10. (1546)

Pride goth before, and shame folwyth after.

UNKNOWN, Jacob's Well, p. 70. (c. 1440)

Pryde goth before, but shame do it ensue.

BARCLAY, The Shyp of Folyes, ii, 164. (1509)

Eene let pride go afore; shame wil follow after, I warrant you.

CHAPMAN AND MARSTON, Eastward Hoe. Act iv, sc. 1. (1605)

Lewis the eleventh, King of France, was wont to say, when pride was in the saddle, mischief and shame were on the crupper.

UNKNOWN, The Country-man's New Commonwealth, p. 26. (1647)

Pride goes before, and shame follows after.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 126. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3933. (1732)

When Pride is on the Saddle, Shame is on the Crupper.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5566. (1732)

When Pride rides, Shame lacqueys.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5567.

Pride gets into the Coach, and Shame mounts behind.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

7 Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall. (Contritionem praecedit superbia: et ante ruinam exaltatur spiritus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvi, 18. (c. 350 B. C.)

Wyclif's version follows the Latin, "Pride goeth before contrition."

A man's pride shall bring him low. (Superbum sequitur humilitas.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxix, 23.

It hath be sene, is sene, and euer shall

That first or last foule pryde wyll haue a fall.

BARCLAY, The Shyp of Folyes, ii, 159. (1509)

Inordynate pride wyll haue a falle.

JOHN SKELTON, Against Garnesche. No. iv, l. 158. (1529)

Pryde wyll haue a fall.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

GAYTON, Pleasant Notes of Don Quixote, p. 8. (1654) RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Ch. 6.

(1748) etc., etc. The Germans say, "Hochmuth kommt vor dem Falle."

Without more circumlocution, pryde hath a fall.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, ii, 61. (1593)

Pride must have a fall, and break the neck

Of that proud man that did usurp his back.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, v, 5, 88. (1595)

The lowly hart doth win the love of all,

But pride at last is sure of shameful fall.

GEORGE TURBERVILLE, Of Pride. (a. 1610)

That pride will have a fall, is from common experience grown proverbiall.

JEREMIAH WHITAKER, The Danger of Greatness, p. 26. (1646)

Pride never left his master without a fall.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 276. (1721)

You were afraid that pride would have a fall.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Pride goeth before destruction.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 29. (1816)

"Pride shall have a fall, and it always was and will be so," observes the housemaid.

DICKENS, Dombey and Son. Ch. 59. (1848)
Pride goeth before a raise.

ODGEN NASH. Title of poem. (1933)

Pomposity goes before a fall.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p.117.(1940)

IV—Pride that Apes Humility

<sup>1</sup> The abomination of pride is humility.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiii, 20. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

They are proud in humility; proud in that they are not proud.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. 3, subs. 14. (1621)

<sup>2</sup> And the devil did grin, for his darling sin
Is pride that apes humility.

S. T. COLERIDGE, The Devil's Thoughts. (1799)
And he owned with a grin. That his favourite sin
Is pride that apes humility.

SOUTHEY, The Devil's Walk. St. 8. (1827) An expansion of Coleridge's verses.

[He] divested himself of his patelot in which he had been doing "the pride that apes humility."

R. S. SURTEES, Ask Mamma. Ch. 17. (1858)

<sup>3</sup> One day when Plato had invited to his house friends coming from Dionysius. Diogenes trampled upon his carpets and said, "I trample upon the pride of Plato," who retorted, "Yes, Diogenes, with pride of another sort." ("πατῶ τὸν Πλάτωνος τύφον"· τον δὲ φάναι, "ἐτέρῳ γε τύφῳ, Διόγενες.")

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Lives: Diogenes. Sec. 26. (C. A. D. 230)

To Diogenes, saying I trede the pride of Plato vnder my feet: So thou doest in deede (quoth Plato) but it is with an other kinde of pride, as greate as mine.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, p. 82. (1564)

Diogenes said, "I trample upon the pride of Plato." Plato mildly answered, "But with greater pride."

BACON, Apophthegms. No. 107. (a. 1626)
There are those who despise pride with a greater pride. (Tal sprezza la superbia con una maggior superbia.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 69. (1853) An Italian proverb.

<sup>4</sup> Pride, perceiving Humility honourable, often borrows her Cloak.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3948. (1732)
Pride often wears the cloak of humility.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 476. (1855)

<sup>5</sup> Pride that licks the dust.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 333. (1733)

<sup>6</sup> As proude coms behinde, they say, as any goes before!

JOHN STILL (?), Gammer Gurton's Needle. Act v, sc. 2. (1575)

As proud come behind as go before.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 318. (1605) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 724. (1732)

York was rather quiet than contented, pleasing himself that "as stout came behind as went before."

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History of Britain. Bk. iii, sec. 3. (1655)

As proud go behind as before.

R. C. TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 69. (1853)

V—Pride: Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>7</sup> As proud of the boy as a dog with two tails.

H. C. BAILEY, The Apprehensive Dog, p. 219. (1942)

<sup>8</sup> She was proud, and pert as is a pye.

CHAUCER, The Reves Tale, l. 30. (c. 1386)

<sup>9</sup> And yet as proud a pekock can he pulle.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus, Bk. i, l. 210. (c. 1380)

As eny pecok he was proud and gay.

CHAUCER, The Reves Tale, l. 6. (c. 1386)

Prowde as a pecocke.

HENRY BRADSHAW, The Life of Saint Werburge, (E.E.T.S.), p. 69. (1513)

Proud as peacocks.

RICHARD SHACKLOCK, Hatchet of Heresies, fo. 26b. (1567)

"Fly pride," says the peacock.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iv, 3, 81. (1593)

They are as bragge and as proude as peacokes.

JOHN DAUS, tr., Sleidanus Commentaries, p. 119. (1560)

Lord L., proud as a peacock, is . . . come for me.

RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, p. 137. (1753)

He is proud as a peacock and calls for ram's milk.

NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 66. (1831)

A peacock or a turkey-cock strutting about with puffed-up feathers, is sometimes said to be an emblem of pride.

CHARLES DARWIN, The Expression of the Emotions. Ch. 11. (1872)

<sup>10</sup> He was so proud that should he meet
The Twelve Apostles in the street,

He'd turn his nose up at them all

And shove his Saviour from the wall.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Duellist. Bk. iii, l. 129. (1764) Referring to William Warburton, Bishop of Gloucester.

<sup>11</sup> Proud as an apothecary.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 32. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 288. (1678)

As proud as an ass of a new pack-saddle.

WALTER SCOTT, Quentin Durward. Ch. 27. (1823)

As proud as a pig with two tails.

THEODORE HOOK, Jack Brag. Ch. 16. (1837)

As proud as a hen with one chick.

LOWSLEY, Berks Glossary, p. 30. (1888)

<sup>12</sup> Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iii, 3, 24. (1609)

1 Who was Old Cole whose dog was so proud that he took the wall of a dung-cart and got squeezed to death by the wheel?

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 125. (1837)

2 They been as proud as Luciferre.

UNKNOWN, In WRIGHT, Political Poems, i, 318. (c. 1394)

Be thow as prowde as Lucifer.

UNKNOWN, Partonope, l. 9740. (c. 1450)

QUARLES, Virgin Widow. Act v. (1649) MRS.

SHERIDAN, The Dupe. Act iii, sc. 7. (1764)

MISS BURNLEY, Cecilia. Ch. 9. (1782) SCOTT,

Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 8. (1822) DICKENS,

Dombey and Son. Ch. 26. (1848) CONAN

DOYLE, Rodney Stone. Ch. 5. (1896) O.

HENRY, A Blackjack Bargainer. (1910) etc. etc.

Thereupon it is saide, that Lucifer through pride and ambition fell from heaven, desiring rather to commaunde, then obey.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 99. (1574) Pettie, tr.

When it comes to pride, Luke would make Lucifer look like a charity-boy asking for more soup.

W. V. MOODY, The Great Divide. Act iii. (1906)

PRIEST

See also Preacher

3 My profession is to keep secrets. (Mi profesión es de guardar secreto.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1615) A priest is speaking.

4 When heather-bells grow cockle-shells, The miller and the priest will forget themsels.

ROBERT CHAMBERS, Popular Rhymes of Scotland, p. 72. (1842) Will forget to exact their dues.

5 Draweth no monkes moore unto youre in.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Prioress's Prologue, l. 8. (c. 1386)

He who wishes to keep his house clean, Will not have there either priest or pigeon.

(Chi vuol tener la casa monda

Non tenga mai ne prete ne colomba.)

JEAN ANTOINE BAFF, Mimes. (c. 1565) See LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 85.

He that in a neat house will dwell

Must priest and pigeon thence expel.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Pigeon. (1611)

Doves and domines leave ay a foul house.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (1721)

6 The priesthood is the profession of a gentleman.

JEREMY COLLIER, The Immortality and Profaneness of the English Stage, iii. (1693)

7 Eyes and priests bear no jests.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735. Repeated in 1739.

8 Bad priests bring the devil into the church.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 835. (1732)

9 But now I see well the old proverb is true, That parish priest forgetteth that ever he was clerk!

JOHN HEYWOOD, Johan the Husband and Tyb His Wyfe, p. 86. (1533)

When he was once crowned King . . . he cast aside his old condicions . . . verefieng ye old prouerbe, honoures chaunge maners, as the parishe prest remembreth that he was neuer parishe clerck.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 387. (1548) HONORS CHANGE MANNERS, see under HONORS.

Now nought he setteth

By poore folk, For the paryshe forgetteth That ever he hath bene holy water clarke.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

The parish priest forgetteth that ever hee was clarke.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 94. (1676)

The proverb old is come to passe, The priest when he begins the masse, Forgets that ever clarke he was.

RICHARD JOHNSON, The Crown Garland of Golden Roses, p. 48. (1612)

The Priest forgets he was a Clark.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4721. (1732)

10 Every man is a patriarch and priest in his own house.

DEAN S. R. HOLE, More Memories. Ch. 21. (1894)

11 Like people, like priest. (Sicut populus, sic sacerdos.)

Old Testament: Hosea, iv, 9. (c. 725 B.C.) Wyclif renders it, "As the peple, so the prest."

Quoted by St. Bernard (c. 1130) as a saying, in the form, "Ita populus sic sacerdos."

Like people, like priest begins now to be verified.

THOMAS NASHE, Works (Grosart), i, 121. (1598)

Ita populus, sicut sacerdos, Such as the priest is, such will the people be: the priest cannot err, but he causeth others to err also.

JOSEPH MEDE, Discourses, xxxvi, 276. (1664)

Like priest, like people.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 114. (1670)

In most places it is at this day, like parson, like people.

ANDREW YARRANTON, England's Improvement. Pt. ii, p. 183. (1681)

A mad Parish must have a mad Priest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 268. (1732)

12 But first among the Priests dissension springs.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 353. (1667)

When priests dispute, we come at the truth.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742.

DISPUTATION THE SCAB OF THE CHURCH, see under CHURCH.

13 New Presbyter is but Old Priest writ Large.

MILTON, On the New Forcers of Conscience. (c. 1646)

Knowing how easily "presbyter" might become "priest writ large."

DAVID MACLEOD, Memoir of Norman Macleod. Ch. 1. p. 183. (1876)

When Elizabeth died [1603], . . . the Presbyterian elders became themselves "hireling wolves," "old priest" written in new characters.

J. A. FROUDE, Bunyan, p. 66. (1880)

1 Oh, the case is alter'd: no priest, no mass.

EDMUND PLOWDEN, when a pretender who was no priest offered to officiate. (a. 1585) See FULLER, Worthies, iii, 54.

No Priest, no Mass.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3618. (1732)

2 Once a priest, for ever a priest.

G. A. SALA, Once Round the Clock, p. 290. (1859)

In this country we stick to the maxim, "once a parson, always a parson."

LESLIE STEPHEN, Letter, 13 Jan., 1865.

On 9 Aug., 1870, an act enabling the clergy to unfrock themselves was passed.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 71. (1902)

3 Baldheads are ready-made priests. (T'u tzu wei cho shang.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2400. (1875) Buddhist priests shave their heads.

4 Such as the abbot is, such is the monk.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 1. (1666)

Such as the Priest, such is the Clerk.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4279. (1732)

PRINCE

See also King

5 Princes . . . always see, they seldom weigh.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 14 Nov., 1749.

6 A Prince shoulde alwayes be more prompt and ready in geuyng, then in taking.

JOHN FLORIO, Firſte Fruites, fo. 68. (1578)

Quoting Alexander the Great.

7 Experience has shewn that between the prisons and the graves of princes, the distance is very small.

SIR MICHAEL FOSTER, Foster's Crown Cas., 1762. (Discourse I, c. 1. s. 3.)

Princes and lords may flourish, or may fade; A breath can make them, as a breath has made.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 53. (1770)

8 Many Princes sin with David, but few repent with him.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

Friends are the true Sceptres of Princes.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754

9 Princes, like Beautys, from their youth Are strangers to the voice of truth.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Fab. i, l. 5. (1727)

10 To reprehend princes it is dangerous, and to commend them, plaine lying.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 199. (1574) Pettie, tr.

You will say with Aristotle, that prudence is only proper to Princes.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 201. Remembring the Proverbe, that an evill Prince, hath evill sides: that is, evill counsaylours.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 207. Hee findeth that saying true, That whether thy Prince love thee, or hate thee, it is all one evill.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 209.

11 The iolly fellowes that once in England liued like Princes in their Abbeies and Frieries.

ROBERT GREENE, Spanish Masquerado. (1589)

Works (Grosart), v, 266.

We came to Sir W. Batten's, where he lives like a prince.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 1 Nov., 1660.

12 The chiefe fault commonly is, in those counsellors that put a sword into a mad-mans hand, by putting such conceits into Princes heads

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, Orlando Furioso: Allegory, p. 413. (1591)

Learning in a prince is like a dangerous knife in the hand of a madman.

DANIEL TUVIL, Vade Mecum, p. 16. (1638)

13 Princes have no way.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 954. (1640)

Of a new Prince, new bondage.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1114.

Princes are venison in Heaven.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1147.

The Philosophy of Princes is to dive into the secrets of men, leaving the secrets of nature to those that have spare time.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1156.

14 Every little prince has ambassadors. (Tout petit prince a des ambassadeurs.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. i, fab. 3. (1668)

15 To compliment princes on virtues they do not possess is to insult them with impunity. (Louer les princes des vertus qu'ils n'ont pas, c'est leur dire impunément des injures.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 320. (1665)

The devotion which one gives to princes is an inferior self-love. (La dévotion qu'on donne aux princes est un second amour-propre.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 518.

16 The punishment of bad princes is to be thought worse than they are. (Le châtimement des mauvais princes est d'être crus pires qu'ils ne sont.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 195. (1810)

17 The prince that is feared of many must of necessity fear many.

NICHOLAS LING, comp., Politeuphuia, p. 79. (1597) See also FEAR: FEARED AND FEARING.

- 1 One maye poynt at a Starre, but not pull at it, and see a Prince but not search him.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 264. (1580)
- 2 A Prince's greatest virtue is to know his own. (Principis est virtus maxima nosce suos.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. viii, epig. 15. (A. D. 93)
- 3 When the prince calls, the carriage must not be waited for.
MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, pt. ii, ch. 2. (c. 300 B.C.) Quoting Liki (Book of Rites). Ch. 19. (c. 900 B.C.)
If the prince of a State love benevolence, he will have no opponent in all the empire.
MENCIUS, Discourses, Bk. iv, pt. i, ch. 7.
- 4 It's her own prince that's dear to a princess. (Suos rex reginae placet.)
PLAUTUS, Stichus, l. 133. (c. 200 B.C.)
- 5 The prince is not above the laws, but the laws above the prince. (Non est princeps super leges, sed leges supra principem.)
PLINY THE YOUNGER, Panegyric of Trajan. Sec. 65. (C. A. D. 100)
The freedom princes owe their people is the freedom of law, of which you are only the minister and first depository.
JEAN BAPTISTE MASSILLON, Sermon, preached before Louis XV, 1717.
The prince is the first servant and the first magistrate of the state.
FREDERICK THE GREAT, Motto, of his political testament, written in French with his own hand. (c. 1750) See Mémoires de Brandebourg. The same idea is frequently expressed in Frederick's writings. See also under KING.
- 6 Put not your trust in princes. (Nolite confidere in principibus.)
Old Testament: Psalms, cxlvi, 3. (c. 350 B.C.)
The kingly Prophet well evinces
That we should put no Trust in Princes.
SWIFT, A Pastoral Dialogue, l. 13. (1727)
He follow'd David's Lesson just,
In Princes never put thy Trust.
SWIFT, On the Death of Dr. Swift, l. 341. (1731)
- 7 Who draws his sword against his prince must throw away the scabbard.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5698. (1732)
- 8 Never Prince hath founded great Empire, but by making warre in person, nor hath lost any, but when he made warre by his lieutenants.
DUKE OF ROHAN, Le Parfait Capitaine. Ch. 22. (1636) As quoted by FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iv, ch. 18.
- 9 The friendship of princes may be changed by a caprice.
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 9. (c. 1258)

- How wretched
Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favours!
SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 2, 366. (1612)
- 10 The fortune of princes changes with their character. (Fortuna simul cum moribus immutatur.)
SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 2. (c. 41 B.C.)
- 11 When the Prince wants a minister to die, he dies. (Chün yao ch'en ssü ch'en chiu ssü.)
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2091. (1875) The Germans say, "Was die Fürsten geigen, müssen die Unterthanen tanzen" (When the prince fiddles, the subjects must dance).
- 12 Princes are the glass, the school, the book, Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do look.
SHAKESPEARE, The Rape of Lucrece. St. 88. (1594)
As the princes are, so are the people; qualis rex, talis grex.
ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)
Examples lead us, and wee likely see,
Such as the Prince is, will his people be.
ROBERT HERRICK, Like Prince, Like People. (1648) There is a Latin proverb, "Vitium exemplo principis inolescit" (Vice, through the example of the prince, becomes a custom.)
- 13 I always disapproved that false compliment to princes, that the most lasting monument they can have is in the hearts of their subjects.
SWIFT, Letter to the Lord High Treasurer, 22 Feb., 1712.
- 14 If a prince does wrong, let him make atonement with his head.
TELIPINUS, KING OF THE HITTITES, Proclamation. (c. 1650 B.C.)
- 15 Princes give rewards with their own hands, But death or punishment by the hands of others.
JOHN WEBSTER, White Devil. Act v. sc. 6. (1612)
- 16 An unlearned Prince is a crowned Ass.
WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, to his son, Henry, when the latter refused to study. (c. 1070)
See CAMDEN, Remains, p. 265.
A prince without letters is a Pilot without eyes. All his government is groping.
BEN JONSON, Explorata: Illiteratus Princeps. (1616)
- 17 The princes among us are those who forget themselves and serve mankind.
WOODROW WILSON, Speech, Washington, 31 March, 1916.
- 18 Princes and women must not be contradicted, says the proverb.
EDMUND H. YATES, The Rock Ahead. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1868)

1 If the people have plenty, how can the Prince be in want? But if the people are in want, how can the Prince have plenty?

YU JO. Quoted by CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.) Giles, tr.

PRINCIPLE

2 Every principle contains in itself the germs of a prophecy.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 10. (1817)

The value of a principle is the number of things it will explain.

R. W. EMERSON, The Preacher. (1867)

3 The old adage may be verified, that "the men of principle may be the principal men."

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Preface. (1820)

Independence of principle consists in having no principle on which to depend.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon: Preface.

4 Men of principle are always bold, but bold men are not always men of principle.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xiv, ch. 5. (c. 500 B. C.)

A man can enlarge his principles; his principles do not enlarge the man.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xv, ch. 28.

5 Principles become modified in practise by facts.

J. FENIMORE COOPER, The American Democrat. Ch. 29. (1838)

No exclusive and inflexible plan [for governing the Southern states] can safely be prescribed as to details and collaterals. . . . [But] important principles may and must be inflexible.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, at Washington, 11 April, 1865. Lincoln's last public address.

6 Dying for a principle seems to me a higher degree of virtue than scolding for it.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 5. (1860)

7 We talk on principle, but we act on interest.

W. S. LANDOR, Imaginary Conversations: Banos and Alpuente. (1824)

I don't believe in princerple,

But, oh, I du in interest!

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 6. (1848)
The American proverb is, "In politics a man must learn to rise above principle."

8 Do not be sick or despairing if you do not always succeed in acting from right principles. (μή σικχαίνειν μηδὲ ἀπαυδᾶν . . . εἰ μὴ καταπικροῦθαί σοι τὸ ἀπὸ δογμάτων ὁρθῶν ἕκαστα πράσσειν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. v, sec. 9. (c. A. D. 174) "When thou art foiled," Aurelius adds, "come back again to them, and rejoice if on the whole thy conduct is worthy of a man."

PRINTING

See also Press

9 What soeuer is uttered in such mennes hearing, must bee done in printe, as wee say in oure common Prouerbe.

ABRAHAM FLEMING, A Panoplie of Epistles, p. 357. (1576)

All this I speak in print, for in print I found it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 1, 175. (1594)

O sir, we quarrel in print.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, v, 4, 94. (1600)

In print, rarely, admirably, finically.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 56. (1616)

10 Providence . . . permitted the invention of printing as a scourge for the sins of the learned.

POPE, The Dunciad: Proem. (1728)

11 The thing is written. It is true. (Cela est escrit. Il est vray.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii. (1534) Writing formerly lent the same verisimilitude to a statement which was afterwards ascribed to printing.

That whiche is written I will believe.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue against the Fever Pestilence. (1564)

I love a ballad in print o' life, for then we are sure they are true.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, iv, 4, 264. (1610) "If it is in print it must be true."

12 The art preservative of arts. (Ars artium omnium conservatrix.)

UNKNOWN. The phrase was part of an inscription on the façade of the house at Haarlem, Holland, once occupied by Laurens Janszoon Koster, one of the reputed inventors of printing from movable type. (c. 1400) The tradition is that he kept his invention a secret, but that it was stolen by one of his workmen named John Fust. The full inscription ran, "Memoriae Sacrum Typographia Ars Artium Omnium Conservatrix. Hic Primum Inventa Circum Annum MCCCCXL."

PRISCIAN

13 Prisians hed broken now handy dandy.

JOHN SKELTON, Speke, Parrot, l. 176. (1529)

Priscian was a celebrated Roman grammarian (c. 500). "To break Priscian's head" became proverbial for speaking or writing bad Latin, and, by extension, bad English. The locus classicus for the idea is Priscianus Vapularians, a comedy by NICODEMUS FRISCHLIN.

As when we speake false English . . . euery poore scholler . . . cals it the breaking of Priscians head.

GEORGE PUTTENHAM, The Arte of English Poesie, p. 258. (1589)

Bone? bone for bene: Priscian a little scratched, 'twill serve!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 1. 31. (1595)

Will speake false Latine, and breake Priscians head.

UNKNOWN, Sir Gyles Goosecappe. Act i, sc. 4. (1606)

Throwing words at random she never brake Priscian's head.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Hildegardis. (1642)

[They] hold no sin so deeply red
As that of breaking Priscian's head.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, ii, ii, 224. (1664)

And counted breaking Priscian's head a thing
More capital, than to behead a king.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, i, 220. (a. 1680)

Some free from rhyme or reason, rule or check,
Break Priscian's head, and Pegasus's neck.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. iii, l. 162. (1728)

Priscian . . . was so devoted to his favourite study, that to speak false Latin in his company was as disagreeable to him, as to break his head.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Priscian. (1785)

PRISON

<sup>1</sup>
A prison ain't just a place; it's bein' some-wheres you don't want to be.

OWEN DAVIS, Icebound. Act ii. (1923)

<sup>2</sup>
Away with him to the deepest dungeon beneath the castle moat.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 29. (1839)

<sup>3</sup>
The worst use you can make of a man is to put him in prison.

EDWARD EVERETT HALE, My Double, and How He Undid Me. (1859)

<sup>4</sup>
A jailor's conscience and his fetters are both made of one metal.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1659)

<sup>5</sup>
Stone walls do not a prison make,
Nor Iron bars a cage.

RICHARD LOVELACE, To Althea from Prison. (1642)

<sup>6</sup>
A jailbird hardly worthy of a jail. (Carcer vix carcere dignus.)

LUCILIUS, Satires. Frag. 1176, Loeb. (c.130 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup>
The chain gang. (Genus ferratile.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 19. (c. 220 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup>
Under a government which imprisons any unjustly, the true place for a just man is also in prison.

H. D. THOREAU, Civil Disobedience. (1849)

Whilst we have prisons, it matters little which of us occupies the cells.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

II—Prison: Euphemisms

<sup>9</sup>
Who can put the country under lock and key.
(Quien puede poner puertas al campo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 25. (1605)

Poner puertas, lit., place gates or doors.

We were run into a lock-up.

H. E. HAMBLEY, The General Manager's Story, p. 271. (1898)

They walked side by side . . . a short block to the lock-up.

IRVIN COBB, Back Home, p. 86. (1912)

<sup>10</sup>
Hee's in Cobs pound.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia Anglo-Latina, p. 188. (1639)

Crowdero, whom, in irons bound,
Thou basely threw'st into Lob's pound.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, i, iii, 910. (1663)

Between 'um both he's got into Lobb's pound.

JOHN CROWNE, Juliana. Act i, sc. 1. (1671)

You are in Lob's pound; get out as you can.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

What! are you all in Hob's pound?

FRANCES BURNEY, Camilla. Bk. iv, ch. 3. (1796)

Lob's pound, a prison.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Lob. (1758)

Lob's pound. The bridewell.

MOOR, Suffolk Words, p. 215. (1823) It may also mean any difficulty or perplexity.

<sup>11</sup>
You'll be sent to a stronger house than ever your father built for you.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia Anglo-Latina, p. 209. (1639)

<sup>12</sup>
Quod: Newgate; also any prison, tho' for debt.

B. E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew: Quod. (a. 1700)

There is not such a pickpocket in the whole quad.

HENRY FIELDING, Amelia. Bk. i, ch. 4. (1752)

She . . . grudged me a hundred pound to get me out of quod.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 54. (1848)

<sup>13</sup>
He was . . . had to the Clinke.

JOHN FOXE, The Book of Martyrs (1596), 1464/1. (1563) Originally the nickname of a noted prison in Southwark, London. Afterwards, any prison, especially a small, dismal one.

The rest was close in clinke.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Posies. (1575) Works (1587), p. 171.

I was thrust into the clink, or lock-up.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Japhet. Ch. 58. (1836)

<sup>14</sup>
He will faint at the smell of a wall-flower. Intimating that the person so spoken of had been confined in the gaol of Newgate; formerly styled the wall-flower, from the wall-flowers growing up against it.

FRANCIS GROSE, Provincial Glossary: London, p. 198. (1787)

He has studied at Whittington's college. That is, he has been confined in Newgate, which was rebuilt A. D. 1423, according to the will of Sir Richard Whittington, by . . . his executors.

FRANCIS GROSE, Provincial Dictionary: London, p. 204. "Greystone College" is the American equivalent.

1 Four went to the can. I was one of the guys who went to the can.

GEOFFREY HOMES, The Street of the Crying Woman, p. 180. (1942)

2 Go to the basket and repent.

MASSINGER AND FIELD, The Fatal Dowry. Act v, sc. 1. (1632) Said to a man arrested for debt.

3 I was . . . seven days in the new stir.

HENRY MAYHEW, London Labour and the London Poor, i, 421. (1851)

A man has time to think things out, in stir.

ARTHUR MORRISON, A Child of the Jago, p. 313. (1896)

4 He be in danger of miserably rotting within a Stone Doublet.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 12. (1693) This is Motteux' rendering of "Miserablement pourrir en prison."

5 The coaches won't run over him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 186. (1813)

6 Lodged in the cooler over night.

UNKNOWN, Milnor ([N.] Dakota) Teller, 8 Aug., 1884.

He's on the square as long as he keeps out of the cooler.

GEORGE ADE, Artie, p. 181. (1896)

Sing Sing! The penitentiary? The sure-enough cooler.

G. B. McCUTCHEON, The Rose in the Ring, p. 262. (1910)

Have our prisoners taken down to the refrigerator.

JOHN HAY, The Bread Winners, p. 237. (1883)

An elegancy for "cooler."

7 They were safely lodged in the jug.

UNKNOWN, Niles' Register, ix, sup. 190. (1815)

In a box of the stone-jug I was born.

HARRISON AINSWORTH, Rookwood. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1834)

The poor fellow was soon "jugged up."

GEORGE CATLIN, North American Indians, ii, 30. (1841)

They sentenced me . . . to ten years in the jug.

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 1. (1861)

We'll . . . see your prisoner jugged.

JOHN TOWNSEND TROWBRIDGE, Three Scouts. Ch. 13. (1865)

Get him. Throw him in the jug.

HOMER CROY, R.F.D. No. 3, p. 229. (1924)

That would have made me want to jug everyone.

EDGAR JEPSON, Keep Murder Quiet, p. 166. (1940)

IN DURANCE VILE, see under DURANCE.

PRIVACY

8 I might have been a gold-fish in a glass bowl for all the privacy I got.

H. H. MUNRO (SAKI), Reginald. Ch. 1. (1904)

I was not having any more privacy in that hospital than a goldfish.

IRVIN S. COBB, Speaking of Operations. (1915) Since Crowell's death I've had about as much privacy as a goldfish.

HOWIE, Murder at Stone House, p. 153. (1942)

PRIVILEGE

9 A monopoly of privileges is always invidious.

J. A. FROUDE, Caesar. Ch. 3. (1879)

10 What men mourn most is a privilege, even if it be that of chief mourner at a funeral.

J. R. LOWELL, Address, at Birmingham, Eng., 6 Oct., 1884.

11 The concessions of the privileged to the unprivileged are seldom brought about by any better motive than the power of the unprivileged to extort them.

J. S. MILL, Subjection of Women. Ch. 3. (1869) The common ambition strains for elevations, to become some privileged exclusive.

WALT WHITMAN, Democratic Vistas. (1870)

The prettiest sight in this fine pretty world is the Privileged Class enjoying its privileges.

PHILIP BARRY, The Philadelphia Story. Act ii, sc. 2. (1939)

12 By non-usage all privileges are lost, say the clerks. (Par non vsaige sont perduz tous priuileges, se disent les clerks.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 27. (1545)

A Pryvalege, priuilegium, quasi priuatus legem. (As it were, a private law.)

UNKNOWN, Catholicon Anglicum, p. 292/1. (1483) The legal proverb is, "Privilegium est quasi privata lex." Another is, "Privilegium non valet contra rempublicam" (Privilege does not avail against the commonwealth).

PRIZE

See also Reward

13 To rank the effort above the prize—is not this the way to exalt virtue?

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xii, ch. 21. (c. 500 B. C.) The deed is everything, the glory naught. (Die That ist alles, nichts der Ruhm.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. ii, act iv, sc. 1. (1830)

The virtue lies in the struggle, not the prize.

R. M. MILNES, The World to the Soul. (1844)

14 Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? (εἰς δὲ λαμβάνει τὸ βραβεῖον.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, ix, 24. (A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Unus accipit bravium."

Such as he is, he's my prize-packet.

PINERO, Preserving Mr. Panmure. Act ii. (1911)

- 1 Who would run, that's moderately wise,
A certain danger for a doubtful prize?
JOHN POMFRET, Love Triumphant, l. 85. (a. 1702)
The paltry prize is hardly worth the cost.
LORD BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto ii, st. 35.
(1812) The Latin proverb is, "Palma non sine pulvere" (The prize is not without dust).
See also under PALM.

PROBABILITY

- 2 Probabilities direct the conduct of the wise man. (Probabilia . . . sapientis vita regeretur.)
CICERO, De Natura Deorum. Bk. i, ch. 5, sec. 12. (45 B.C.)
Probability is the very Guide of Life.
BISHOP JOSEPH BUTLER, The Analogy of Religion Natural and Revealed: Introduction. (1736) A somewhat similar saying is credited to Voltaire, "Almost all human life depends on probabilities."
3 Likelie lies in the myre, and unlikelie goes by it.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 72. (c. 1595)
Likely lies in the Mire, when Unlikely gets over.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3242. (1732)
4 No priest or soothsayer that ever lived could hold his own against Old Probabilities.
O. W. HOLMES, Pages from an Old Volume of Life, p. 327. (1875) "Old Probabilities," the U.S. Weather Bureau.
5 A reasonable probability is the only certainty.
E. W. HOWE, Sinner Sermons. (1926) There is, however, an Italian proverb, "A thousand probabilities do not make one fact."
6 Fate laughs at probabilities.
LORD LYTTON, Eugene Aram. Ch. 1. (1832)
7 Probability must atone for want of truth.
MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon on the Vanity of the World: Preface. (1718)
Lest men suspect your tale untrue,
Keep probability in view.
JOHN GAY, Fables: The Painter Who Pleased Nobody, l. 1. (1727)

PROCRASTINATION

See also Delay, Tomorrow

- 8 Often have I heard it said, What good thing you can do, do not defer it. (Semper audiui dici, Quod bene potes facere noli differre.)
ALBERTANO OF BRESCIA, Liber Consolationis et Consilii. (1246)
No idleness, no laziness, no procrastination; never put off till to-morrow what you can do to-day.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 Dec., 1749.
NEVER PUT OFF TILL TO-MORROW, see under TOMORROW.

- 9 He who has a lawsuit should go to the judge.
Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 3b. (c. 450)
He who has pain should go to the doctor.
Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 46b.
10 By and by never comes. (Modo, et modo, non habebant modum.)
ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. viii, ch. 5, sec. 12. (c. A. D. 397) The Spanish form is, "Por la calle de Despues se acabe á la casa de Nunca" (By the street of By-and-By one comes to the house of Never).
By and by is easily said.
SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 403. (1600)
Two anons and a by and by is an hour and a half.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 334. (1605) Cited by Ray and Fuller.
Lagg puts all in his bag.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 322. (1666)
11 Procrastination brings loss, delay danger. (Dilatio damnum habet, mora pericula.)
ERASMUS, Colloquia: Adolenscens. (1524)
Nothing so perilous as procrastination.
JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 65. (1579)
There is no safetie in procrastinating.
W. D. MONTAGU, Al Mondo, p. 124. (1633)
12 The procrastinating man is ever struggling with ruin. (αἰεὶ δ' ἀμβολιερῶς ἀνὴρ ἀτῆσι παλαίει.)
HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 413. (c. 800 B.C.)
13 Procrastinated time will always fly on.
MARTIN MADAN, tr., Persius, p. 130. (1789)
14 procrastination is the | art of keeping | up with yesterday.
DON MARQUIS, certain maxims of archy. (1927)
15 While we are procrastinating life speeds by. (Dum differtur, vita transcurrit.)
SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. i, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 64)
16 Procrastination is the thief of time;
Year after year it steals, till all are fled.
EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night i, l. 393. (1742)
Punctuality is the thief of time.
OSCAR WILDE, The Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 3. (1891)
Procrastination is all of the time.
OGDEN NASH. Title of poem. (1939)
Far from being the thief of Time, Procrastination is the king of it.
OGDEN NASH, Long Live Delays. (1940)

PRODIGALITY

See also Spending

- 17 He who throws bread to the ground and squanders his money, will not leave this world before he is in need of the support of strangers.
Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 108. (c. 450)
He who eats the fat tail ['alyethā] will have to hide himself in the garret ['ilithā]; who eats cross [kākulē] may rest quietly by the dung hills [kiklē].

Palestinian Talmud: Pesachim, fo. 114a. (c. 450) The "fat tail" was a luxury, and one who indulges in it may have to conceal himself from his creditors. The one who lives parsimoniously may expose himself in the most conspicuous part of the town. Note the play upon words.

<sup>1</sup> When thrift is in the town, he is in the field.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 675. (a. 1626)
It is easy for the economical to become prodigal, but not for the prodigal to become economical. (Ts'ung chien ju shē i; ts'ung shē ju chien nan.)
DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 482. (1872)

<sup>2</sup> Make ducks and drakes with shillings.

GEORGE CHAPMAN, Eastward Hoe, i, 1. (1605)
See under DUCK.

<sup>3</sup> Lavishness is not Generosity.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3147. (1732)
Young Prodigal in a Coach, will be an old Beggar barefoot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6042.

<sup>4</sup> We commonly say of a prodigal man that he is no man's foe but his own.

BISHOP JOHN KING, Lecture on Jonah. (1594)
See also under ENEMY.

<sup>5</sup> As much sinneth he that lauisheth without meane, as he that hoordeth without measure.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 192. (1579)
The Prodigal generally does more Injustice than the Covetous.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1732.

<sup>6</sup> Youth . . . tedding [scattering] that with a forke in one yeare, which was not gathered together with a rake, in twentie.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 228. (1580)
The Fork is commonly the Rake's Heir.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4536. (1732)
Don't throw your property out through the door with a spade, while your husband is bringing it in through the window with a spoon.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 589. (1883)
The Prodigal robs his Heir, the Miser himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4722. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> Money abides not in the palm of a careless liver; it is even as water in a sieve.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 13. (c. 1258)
A gay life melts away a fortune.

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2691. (1875)

<sup>8</sup> A prodigal course
Is like the sun's; but not, like his, recoverable.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, iii, 4, 12. (1608)

<sup>9</sup> To be a spendthrift is to be laughed at, when you have nothing left. (Prodigere est cum nihil habeas te inridier.)

CAECILIUS STATIUS, Hymnis. Frag. 67, Loeb. (c. 175 B.C.)

<sup>10</sup> It's not money you're squandering, it's your life. (Non tu hoc argentum perdis, sed vitam tuam.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 410. (160 B.C.) Quoted as a proverb.

No man distributes his money to others, but every one his life and time.

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 12. (1595)

<sup>11</sup> To bring an abbey to a grange.

UNKNOWN, Early Miscellanies (Warton), 26. (c. 1480)

Our changes are soche that an abbaye turneth to a graunge.

BALE, Kynge Johan (Camden), 23. (c. 1540)

To bring an Abbey to a Grange. . . . We speak it of an unthrift.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 161. (1670)

A brace of as delicate jades

As ever brought ninepence to nothing.

UNKNOWN, Roxburghe Ballads, viii, 812. (1729)

To bring one's ninepence to nothing: to lose property by neglect and waste.

BURNE, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 596. (1883)

II—Prodigality: The Prodigal Son

See also Calf; The Fatted Calf

<sup>12</sup> The younger son gathered all together, and took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living. (ἐκεῖ διεσκόρπισεν τὴν οὐσίαν αὐτοῦ ζῶν ἀσώτως.)

New Testament: Luke, xv, 13. (C. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Dissipavit substantiam suam vivendo luxuriose."

And when he had spent all, there arose a mighty famine in that land; and he began to be in want. . . . And he would fain have filled his belly with the husks that the swine did eat. (τῶν κερατίων ὧν ἤσθιον οἱ χοῖροι.)

New Testament: Luke, xv, 14–16. (C. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Siliquis, quas porci manducabant."

Waste not thy substance in riotous living.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xvii, 26. (c. 622)

[He] may have been squandering his substance in riotous living.

PERCIVAL WILDE, Tinsley's Bones, p. 164. (1942)

<sup>13</sup> Prodigals lately come from swine-keeping.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iv, 2, 38. (1591)

How like the prodigal doth she return

With over-weather'd ribs!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 6, 17. (1597)

A returning prodigal is not to be exchanged for gold. (Lang tzū 'hui 'tou chin pu 'huan.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 189. (1872)

When prodigals return great things are done.

A. A. DOWTY, The Siliad. In BEETON, Christmas Annual, 1873

<sup>14</sup> I have received my proportion; like the prodigious son.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 3, 3. (1594)

PROFESSION, see Trade

PROFESSOR, see Teacher

PROFIT

<sup>1</sup> Where does the bread come in? (τὴ πρὸς τ' ἀλφίτα;)

ARISTOPHANES, Clouds, l. 649. (423 B. C.) "What profit is there in this for me?" Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vi, 643, who gives the Latin, "Quid ad farinas?"

Will it bake bread?

EMERSON, Essays: Prudence. (1841)

<sup>2</sup> Man does not know whereby he may profit.

Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, fo. 54b. (c. 450)

<sup>3</sup> A blow that is profitable does not hurt the neck.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 330. (1817)

<sup>4</sup> Where profit is, loss is hidden near by.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 444. (1938) A Japanese proverb. See also GAIN AND LOSS.

<sup>5</sup> He will go to hell for the house profit.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 54. (c. 1595)

If his profit lay in the breach of a dog, he would eat it.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 578. (1817)

<sup>6</sup> By Hawk and by Hound | Small Profit is found.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6339. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> This sentence is well woorthy to bee written in letters of golde, that Hee utterly seeketh his owne shame, who onely seeketh his owne profite.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i. p. 32. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Euery man seeketh his owne profite (Ogniuno cerca il suo profitto.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 14. (1578)

<sup>8</sup> Quick returns make rich merchants.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 282. (1721) "Small profits and quick returns" is the proverbial phrase.

His mission had been conducted on strictly commercial lines of small profits and quick returns.

ALGERNON WEST, Recollections. Ch. 31. (1899)

<sup>9</sup> What's none of my profit shall be none of my peril.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 343. (1721)

What's none of your Profit, need be none of your Peril.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5514. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> Unearned increment.

JOHN STUART MILL, Dissertations and Discussions (1875), iv, 299. (1873) The increase in the value of land or property which occurs without labor or expenditure on the part of the owner.

<sup>11</sup>

No man profits but by the loss of others. (Il ne se fait aulcun proufit qu'au dommage d'aultruy.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 21. (1580)

Where their profit lieth, there should also be their recreation. (Où est leur proufit, que là feust aussi leur esbat.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25.

<sup>12</sup>

No profit is possible, if outlay exceeds income. (Quaestus non consistet, si eum sumptus superat.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 287. (c. 194 B. C.) A similar Latin proverb is, "Nihil prodest improbam mercem emere" (There is no profit in buying bad merchandise).

All men are callous or sensitive as profits dictate. (Omnes homines ad suum quaestum callent et fastidiunt.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 932. (c. 186 B. C.)

If no profit he espies,

Where's the man will early rise?

(Jên wu li hsi, shui k'ên tsao ch'í?)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 161. (1875)

<sup>13</sup>

Great profits, great risks. (Li ta 'hai ta.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 186. (1875)

Fish see the bait, but not the hook; men see the profit, but not the peril.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. xlii. (1938)

A Chinese proverb.

<sup>14</sup>

Better sell for small profits than fail in business. (Chê pên pu ju chien mai 'huo.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 190. (1875)

He sings for joy who makes a profit easily. (Tê liao pien ts'ai ch'ang ya tiao.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 201.

Small profits on large capital are great;

Great profits on small capital are small.

(Pên ta li hsiao 'huan shih ta:

pên hsiao li ta 'huan shih hsiao.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 237.

<sup>15</sup>

Better it is to have more of profit and less honour.

UNKNOWN, Melusine. Ch. 34. (c. 1385)

Honour and profit lie not all in one sack.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

After the Spanish, "Honor y provecho no caben en un saco."

PROGRESS

<sup>16</sup>

All progress is based upon the universal innate desire on the part of every organism to live beyond its income.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note-Books. (c. 1890)

<sup>17</sup>

The history of progress is written in the lives of infidels.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Speech, New York, 1 May, 1881.

All progress begins with a crime.

ELBERT HUBBARD, 1001 Epigrams, p. 109. (1911)

1 Not to go back, is somewhat to advance,
And man must walk, at least, before they dance.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles. Bk. i.
epis. 1, l. 53. (1732)

There is a period of life when we go back as we advance. (Il est un terme de la vie au-delà duquel en rétrograde en avançant.)

ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. ii. (1762)

All that is human must retrograde if it does not advance.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 71. (1776)

He who moves not forward goes backward.

GOETHE, Herman and Dorothea, iii, 66. (1797)

After the Latin, "Qui non profecit, deficit."
Another form is, "Non progredi est regredi"
(Not to progress is to go back).

2 Yesterday I was walking under the fence; and I heard the peasant boys here, instead of some old ballad, bawling a street-song. That's what progress is.

TURGENEV, Fathers and Children. Ch. 27. (1862)
What we call "Progress" is the exchange of one nuisance for another nuisance.

HAVELOCK ELLIS, Impressions and Comments.
Ser. i, p. 16. (1914)

PROHIBITION

3 To cross the line and trespass on the for-bidden. (Pasar la raya y llegar a lo vedado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 20. (1605)

4 Touch not; taste not; handle not. (μὴ ἅψῃ μὴ δὲ γεύσῃ μὴ δὲ θίγῃς.)

New Testament: Colossians, ii, 21. (c. A. D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Ne tetigeritis, neque gus-taveritis, neque contrectaveritis."

Thou shalt abstain, Renounce, refrain! (Entbehren sollst du! sollst entbehren!)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 4. (1806)

5 Vicious actions are not hurtful because they are forbidden, but forbidden because they are hurtful.

FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 1. (c. 1780)

6 And when the woman saw that the tree was good for food, . . . she took of the [forbidden] fruit thereof, and did eat. (Tulit de fructu illius. et comedit.)

Old Testament: Genesis, iii, 6. (c. 550 B. C.)

It is more pleasing to pluck an apple from the branch which you have seized, than to take one up from a graven dish. (Et magis adducto pomum decerpere ramo, | quam de caelata sumere lance iuvat.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iii, epis. 5, l. 19. (c. A. D. 13)

7 Sweet is the fruit when the watcher is gone.
(γλυκεῖ δ' ὥρα φύλακος ἐκλειπότος.)

PLUTARCH. (c. A. D. 100) The ascription is by

DIOGENIANUS, iii, 95. Cited by ERASMUS,
Adagia, iv, iv, 92 with the Latin, "Dulce pomum, cum abest custos."

8 The flesh hadde delit in the beautee of the fruyt defended.

CHAUCER, The Persones Tale, l. 332. (c. 1386)
But as the proverb hath it, apples are sweet when they are plucked in the gardener's absence. Eve liked no apple in the garden so well as the for-bidden.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 53. (1629)

A more modern form is, "The apples on the other side of the wall are sweetest."

So glist'ed the dire Snake, and into fraud
Led Eve, our credulous Mother, to the Tree
Of Prohibition, root of all our woe.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 643. (1667)

Some one has told you that stolen fruit tasted sweetest.

MRS. GASKELL, North and South. Ch. 31. (1855)
Forbidden fruit is sweet.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 357.

(1855) The Italians say, "I frutti proibiti
sono i più dolci."

Adam was but human—that explains it all. He did not want the apple for the apple's sake, he wanted it only because it was forbidden.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.
(1893)

9 We find many things to which the prohibition of them constitutes the only temptation.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 140. (1823)

10 My love passes over what is served to all, and chases flying game. (Meus amor . . .
transvolet in medio posita et fugientia captat.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 2, l. 107. (35 B. C.)

What is lawful has no charm; what is unlawful pricks one more keenly on. (Quod licet, ingratum est; quod non licet, acrius urit.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 19, l. 3. (c. 13 B. C.)

The proverbial form is, "Quicquid licet, minus disideratur" (What is permitted is least desired).

Whatever is guarded we desire the more; few love what they may have. (Pauci, quod sinit alter, amant.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 25.

What is not ours charms more than our own.
(Capiant animos plus aliena suis.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae, i, 348. (c. 1 B. C.)

11 The greater the obstacle, the stronger the desire. (Plus l'obstacle étoit grand, plus fort fut le désir.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 16. (1678)

12 The Great Way is very smooth, but the people love the by-paths. (Ta tao' shen i erh min 'hao ching'.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king. Sec. 53. (c. 550 B. C.)

13 When secure you lack appetite. (Securus non potes arrigere.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, No. 70. (c. A. D. 85)

1 Difficulty gives a price to things. (La difficulté donne prix aux choses.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 15. (1580)

Forbidden wares sell twice as dear.

JOHN DENHAM, Natura Naturata, l. 16. (c. 1650)

2 Stolen sweets are followed by a most bitter end. (τὸ δὲ πὰρ δίκαν | γλυκὺ πικροτάτα μένει τελευτά.)

PINDAR, Isthmian Odes, vii, 47. (c. 456 B.C.)

3 Stolen waters are sweet, and bread eaten in secret is pleasant. (Aquae furtivae dulciores sunt, et panis absconditus suavior.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, ix, 17. (c. 350 B.C.)

"Much sweeter," she saith, "more acceptable Is drinke, when it is stolen privily, Than when it is taken in forme avowable."

JOHN LYDGATE, The Remedy of Love. (c. 1430)

Venison stolen is aye the sweeter, The ferther the narrower fet the better!

JOHN LYDGATE, The Remedy of Love.

Sin shows you a fair picture—"Stolen waters are sweet."

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 159. (1629)

Pleasure stolen being sweetest.

MASSINGER, City-Madame. Act ii, sc. 1. (1632)

Stolen sweets are always sweeter:

Stolen kisses much completer;

Stolen looks are nice in chapels:

Stolen, stolen be your apples.

THOMAS RANDOLPH, Song of Fairies. (a. 1635)

Gold barr'd with locks, Is best being stolen.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Wonder of a Kingdom. Act ii. (1636)

The proverb, that stolen meat is sweetest.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, The English Rogue: Preface. (1671)

Nay, I must confess stolen pleasures are sweet.

CIBBER, The Rival Fools. Act i. (1709)

Everything forbidden is sweet.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 557. (1817)

Stolen glances, sweeter for the theft.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 74. (1818)

His eyes dancing with all the glee of a forbidden revel; and his features . . . confessing the full sweetness of stolen waters and bread eaten in secret.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Let. 10. (1824)

A stolen drink is sweetest of all. (Furtivus potus plenus dulcedine totus.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 135. (1853) Citing a Latin proverb. The French say, "Pain dérobé réveille l'appétit" (Stolen bread arouses the appetite).

Forbidden fizz is often the sweetest.

H. H. MUNRO (SAKI), Reginald in Russia. (1910)

4 Longing desire likes nothing better than what is not allowed. (Nihil magis amat cupiditas quam quod non licet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 438. (c. 43 B.C.)

'Tis forbidden joys delight. (Iuvat inconcessa voluptas.)

OVID, Amores, iii, 4, 31. (c. 13 B.C.)

As furtive water gives a sweeter taste Than wine that's drunk too copiously, to one, So is love's joy, that hides long unembraced By any husband, the sweeter felt when won.

(L'acqua furtiva, assai più dolce cosa

È che il vin con abbondanza avuto:

Così d'amor la gioia, che nascosa

Trapassa assai, del sempre mai tenuto

Marito in braccio.)

BOCCACCIO, Il Filostrato. Canto ii, st. 74. (c. 1250) Cummings, tr.

Forbade us thing, and that desyren we.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 519. (c. 1386)

We naturallye are desirous of thinges whiche are forbidden us, and wee knowe that "She sinneth lesse, who hath free power to sinne."

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 24. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Vices the more prohibited, the more provoked

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 204. (1576)

To forbid anything is the way to make us long for it. (Nous deffendre quelque chose, c'est nous en donner envie.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 15. (1580)

It is the nature of man to long after things forbidden and to desire what is denied us. (Nous entreprenons tousiours choses deffendues & conuitions ce que nous est denié.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 57. (1534)

Forbid a thing and that we will do.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (c. 1595) KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 107. has,

"Forbid a fool a thing, and that he will do."

The French say, "Chose défendue est la plus désirée" (The forbidden thing is the most desired).

5 Every may be hath a may not be.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 174. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1437. (1732)

6 What we should shun we seek. (Fugienda petimus.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 699. (c. A. D. 60)

To the ignorant mind, the pleasure of everything is increased by the very danger which should make us flee it. (Omnium enim rerum voluptas apud imperitos ipso, quo fugari debet, periculo crescit.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. vii, ch. 9, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 56) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 15.

7 The thing that you can't get is the thing that you want, mainly.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 95. (1889)

The most interesting things in life are either immoral, illegal, or too fattening.

ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT. As quoted by HABAS, Art of Self-Control, p. 30.

8 Everything which is not compulsory is forbidden.

JOHN T. WHITAKER, Italy's Seven Secrets. Saturday Evening Post, 23 Dec., 1939, p. 53. Quoting a definition of Fascism.

II—Prohibition of Intoxicants

<sup>1</sup> If you say, "would there were no wine" because of the drunkards, then you must say, going on by degrees, "Would there were no steel," because of the murderers, . . . and "Would there were no women" because of adultery.

ST. JOHN CHRYSOSTOM, Homilies. (c. A. D. 390)

<sup>2</sup> There is a crying for wine in the streets; all joy is darkened, the mirth of the land is gone. (Clamor erit super vino in plateis: deserta est omnis laetitia: translatum est gaudium terrae.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxiv, 11. (c. 725 B. C.)
The lid's on in this precinct.

O. HENRY, Suite Homes and Romance. (1910)

<sup>3</sup> Prohibition will work great injury to the cause of temperance. It is a species of intemperance within itself.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN (?), Speech, in the Illinois House of Representatives, 18 Dec., 1840. It has been asserted that this is a forgery promulgated during an anti-saloon campaign in 1887. In a letter to the compiler, Philip Van Doren Stern, editor of The Life and Writings of Abraham Lincoln, states that he has been unable to verify it.

Prohibition only drives drunkenness behind doors.

MARK TWAIN, Letter to the Alta Californian, 28 May, 1867.

I'd rather that England should be free than that England should be compulsorily sober.

W. C. MAGEE, ARCHBISHOP OF YORK, Sermon, at Peterborough, 1868.

A great social and economic experiment, noble in motive and far-reaching in purpose.

HERBERT HOOVER, Letter, to William E. Borah, 28 Feb., 1928. Referring to prohibition in the U.S., thereafter commonly referred to as "the noble experiment." The prohibition amendment to the American Constitution was adopted 29 Jan., 1919; went into effect 16 Jan., 1920, and was repealed 5 Dec., 1933.

PROMISE

<sup>4</sup> The day obliterates the promise of the night.

J. L. BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 561. (1817) The supposed reply of a beautiful woman to Haroun al Raschid, when he came in the morning to claim the favor she had promised the night before. The saying more generally current at Cairo is, "The promise of the night is rubbed with butter, which melts away under the light of day."

<sup>5</sup> Pledges don't distress a good paymaster. (Al buen pagador no le duelen prendas.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, chs. 14, 30, 34, 59, 71. That is, one who is sure of his ability to pay. (1615)

<sup>6</sup> Promises are not to be kept if the keeping of them is harmful to those to whom you have made them. (Nec promissa igitur servanda sunt ea, quae sint iis, quibus promiseris, inutilia.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 10, sec. 32. (45 B. C.)
Bad promises are better broken than kept.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Address, at Washington, 11 April, 1865. His last public address.

<sup>7</sup> He loseth his thanks who promiseth and delayeth.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 42. (1633)

<sup>8</sup> There was never promise made, but it was broken or kept.

QUEEN ELIZABETH. (c. 1590) As quoted by JOHN DEE, Diary (Camden Soc.), p. 37.

All promises are either broken or kept.

JOHN TAYLOR, The Last Voyage, p. 8. (1641)
L'ESTRANGE, Aesop, p. 383. (1692) SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>9</sup> The eue to geue, is to promise. (El promettere, è la viglia del dare.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

Promising is the eve of giving.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 846. (1640)

Promise is the eve of the gift.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 219. (1666)

<sup>10</sup> A Man apt to promise, is apt to forget.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 271. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> Mankind lives on promises.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 11. (1843)

<sup>12</sup> He whiche is a promise breaker, escapeth not alway free.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 184. (1548)

Some persons make promises for the pleasure of breaking them.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics, p. 145. (1823)

<sup>13</sup> He who lightly promises will seldom keep his word.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 63. (c. 500 B. C.) Old, tr.

Too many promises lessen confidence. (Multa fidem promissa levant.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. ii, epis. 2, l. 10. (c. 15 B. C.)
He that promiseth all, deceiueh all.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 167. (1633)

He that promises too much, means nothing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2253. (1738)

<sup>14</sup> Upright men keep their obligations; those without virtue think only of their claims.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 79. (c. 550 B. C.) Carus, tr.

A promise must be kept. (Fides servanda est.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 1023. (c. 220 B. C.)

Undertake not what you cannot perform, but be careful to keep your promise.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Copy Book. (a. 1748)

<sup>15</sup> Sit not on every path making promises.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, vii, 84. (c. 622)

1 Ah! what a fine promissory note La Châtre has! (Ah! le bon billet qu'a La Châtre!)

NINON DE L'ENCLOS, when taking another lover (c. 1670), after promising the Marquis de la Châtre to be faithful to him in his absence. "The phrase," says Sainte-Beuve, "became proverbial among the French for empty promises."

2 Ye shall know my breach of promise. (Sciētis ultionem meam.)

Old Testament: Numbers, xiv, 34. (c. 550 B.C.)
Perfidiousness, and breach of promise.

SAMUEL PURCHAS, His Pilgrimage, 631. (1613)
Chops and Tomato sauce. Yours, Pickwick. Chops! Gracious heavens! and Tomato sauce!

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 34. (1837)
It's better to change your attitude an' pay some heart balm than to be dug up later an' analyzed.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin's Broadcast, p. 85. (1930)

3 Be sure to promise: what harm is there in promises? In promises every one can be rich [since they cost nothing]. (Promittas facito: quid enim promittere laedit? | pollicitis dives quilibet esse potest.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 443. (c. 1 B.C.)

Ovid's advice on how to win a woman. The last phrase is a Latin proverb. The French say, "Nul n'est si large que celui qui n'a rien à donner" (There are no greater promisers than those who have nothing to give), or "Il se ruine à promettre, et s'acquitte à ne rien tenir" (He ruins himself by promising, and saves himself by not performing).

Promise, promise; want for no promising.

CHAPMAN, Monsieur d'Olive. Act iii, sc. 1. (1606)

Promises engage more effectually than Presents.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3956. (1732)

O promise me.

HARRY B. SMITH. Title of song in Robin Hood. Act i. (1890)

4 I pull in my rope. (Funem reduco.)

PERSIUS, Satires. No. v, l. 118. (c. A.D. 58)

Proverbial for taking back a promise, or changing one's mind.

5 These juggling fiends . . .

That keep the word of promise to our ear,
And break it to our hope.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, v, 8, 21. (1606)

6 Promises don't fill the belly.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 18. (1800)

7 He caught his fish by promising mountains, well-nigh of gold. (Modo non montis auri pollicens.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 68. (161 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 15, the proverbial form being, "Aureos montes polliceri."

He began to promise her seas and mountains. (Maria montisque polliceri.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catalinae. Ch. xxiii. (c. 40

B.C.) A proverbial phrase for promising more than can be performed.

He promiseth seas and mountaines. (El promette mari e monti.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

8 Fair promises avail but little,
Like too rich pye-crust, they're so brittle.

EDWARD WARD, Hudibras Redivivus. Pt. v, canto vii, p. 9. (1706)

Promises and pie-crust are made to be broken.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i, (1738)

DAVID GARRICK, Correspondence, i, 583. (1773)

Then all the Vengeance of the Gods invoke,
In case this Pye-crust Promise should be broke.

ROGER BULL, tr., Grobrianus, 162. (1739)

"Pshaw!" said Catherine, "promises are pie-crusts."

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 81. (1860)

Promises like that are mere pie-crusts.

TROLLOPE, Ralph the Heir. Ch. 23. (1871)

What about your promise? Pie-crust?

LOCKE, House of Balhazar. Ch. 16. (1920)

9 Promises not only come home to roost, but also lay for you.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr., p. 35. (1906)

10 Promise est dette due, si fay ne seit oublie.

UNKNOWN. In WRIGHT, Political Songs (Camden Soc.), p. 312. (c. 1310) The earliest form of "His word is as good as his bond." See under WORD.

Biheste [promise] is dette.

CHAUCEER, Canterbury Tales: Introduction to the Man of Law's Prologue, l. 41. (c. 1386)
Everyman, l. 821. (c. 1530) HARVEY, Works, i, 174. etc., etc.

Of a trewe man, be-heste is dette.

THOMAS HOCCEVE, De Regimine Principum, p. 64. (1412)

Euery promys, it is dette,

That with no falsed muste be lette.

UNKNOWN, Babees Book, p. 19. (c. 1500)

Promise is a due debt.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 194. (1639)

He who promises runs in debt.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1813) The Germans say, "Zusagen macht Schuld" (Promising makes debt); the Spaniards, "Quien promete [or Quien fia ó promete], en deuda se mete" (He who promises puts himself in debt). There is an English variant, "Promises make debts, and debts make promises."

11 Promessis uacuis spes luditur irrita follis.

EGBERT V. LÜTTICH, Fecunda Ratis (Voigt), p. 116. (c. 1023)

Fair biheeste [promise] desceyeveth fule.

CHAUCEER (?), tr., Romaunt of the Rose, l. 4446. (c. 1365)

Fayre promys makyth folys fayne.

GEORGE RIPLEY, The Compound of Alchymy, v. (1471)

Fair heights [promises] makes fools fain.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (c. 1595)

The French say, "Doucees promesses obligent les fols"; the Italians, "Bella promessa lega il matto."

II—Promise and Performance

<sup>1</sup> Many promise great things without being able to do even little things. (πολλοὶ μεγάλα ἐπαγγέλλονται, μὴδὲ μικρὰ ποιῆσαι δυνάμενοι.)

AESOP, Fables: The Woman Magician. (c. 570 B. C.) She was led away to execution after asserting that she was able to avert the anger of the gods.

Giants in their promises, but . . . weak pigmies in their performance.

MASSINGER, Duke of Florence, ii, 3. (1627)

<sup>2</sup> A Zeus's Corinth. (ὁ Διὸς Κόρινθος.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Ecclesiazusae, l. 828. (c. 393 B. C.) A proverbial phrase, meaning promise without performance; high-flown language that accomplishes nothing.

Succors of Spain. (Socorros de España.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 43. (1853) A Spanish proverb, meaning succor that never comes, help that is firmly promised but never arrives.

<sup>3</sup> The righteous promise little and perform much; the wicked promise much and perform not even a little.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metsia, fo. 87a. (c. 350)

<sup>4</sup> What you can't perform, do never promise. (Quod dare non possis, verbis promittere noli.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 25, (c. 175 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> He promises like a merchant but pays like a man of war.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 194. (1639)

Cited by RAY, p. 21; FULLER, No. 2007.

<sup>6</sup> Large promise, with small observance. (Lunga promessa con l'attender corto.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxvii, l. 110. (c. 1300)

Great promise, small performance.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Epigrams. Cent. v, No. 10. (1562)

Fair promises and small performance.

ROBERT GREENE, Planetomachia. (1585)

Great promisers, weak performers.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Faiseur. (1611)

Those who are quick to promise are generally slow to perform.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 18. (1880)

<sup>7</sup> To promise and give nought is to comfort a fool.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 167. (1633)

To promise, and give nothing, is comfort to a fool.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 22. (1670)

To promise, and give nothing, is a Comfort for a Fool.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5215. (1732)

The Portuguese say, "Prometter naõ he dar, mas a nescios contentar" (Promising is not giving, but it contents fools).

<sup>8</sup> Promises may get friends, but it is performance that must nurse and keep them.

OWEN FELTHAM, Resolves: Of Promises. (1623)

Promises may get thee friends, but non-performance will turn them into enemies.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

Promises may make friends, but 'tis performances keep them.

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 329. (1869)

<sup>9</sup> He will never send you away with a sore heart. Spoken of those who are ready at their promises, but slow in their performances.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 165. (1721)

<sup>10</sup> The sea promises mountains and wonders; look out! the winds and the robbers will come. (La mer promet monts et merveilles: Fiez-vous-y: les vents et les voleurs viendront.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 2. (1668)

<sup>11</sup> We promise according to our hopes, and perform according to our fears. (Nous promettons selon nos espérances, et nous tenons selon nos craintes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 38. (1665)

<sup>12</sup> Knowing promise to be debt, I will paye it with performance.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 56. (1579)

A variant is, "A promise fulfilled is a debt settled," and, on the contrary, "A promise delayed is justice deferred," or, "A promise neglected is an untruth told." Attributed to Rousseau is the proverb, "Le plus lent à promettre est toujours le plus fidèle à tenir" (The slowest in promising is always the most faithful in fulfilling).

Great promises without performance, delight for the tyme, but yerke euer after.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 476.

<sup>13</sup> (One acre of performance is worth twentie of the Land of Promise.

THOMAS NASHE, Have with You to Saffron-Walden. (1596)

An acre of performance is worth the whole Land of Promise.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, iv, 33. (1645)

<sup>14</sup> Begin to supplement your promises with deeds. (Incipe pollicitis addere facta tuis.)

OVID, Amores, ii, 16, 48. (c. 13 B. C.)

<sup>15</sup> Promise golden hills and perfourme durty dales.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 58. (1576)

Masters now adayes will promise mountaines, & will geue little stones.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 36. (1578)

He will spend his mouth, and promise, like Brabber the hound; but when he performs, astronomers foretell it.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus, v, 1, 97. (1601)

His promises were, as he then was, mighty; But his performance, as he is now, nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iv, 2, 41. (1612)

He promises much and gives little. (Shuo ta 'hua yung hsiao ch'ien.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1726. (1875)

They promise mountains and perform molehills. C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 18. (1880)

His presents are falling short of his promises. (Quia non suppetunt dictis data.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 56. (c. 200 B. C.)

Between promising and performing a man may marry his daughter.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1678) The French have the same proverb, "Entre promettre et donner doit-on marier sa fille." They also say, "Promettre et tenir sont deux choses" (To promise and to perform are two things).

This is the epitome of all the contracts in the world betwixt man and man, betwixt prince and subject: they keep them as long as they like them, and no longer.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk. (a. 1654)

Thy promises are like Adonis' gardens That one day bloom'd and fruitful were the next.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI. Act i, sc. 6. l. 6. (1591)

You say you'll give me anything I ask. who soon perhaps will deny me salt. (φῆς μοι πάντα δόμεν τάχα δ' ὑστερον οὐδ' ἄλα δοίης.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xxvii, l. 61. (c. 270 B. C.)

PROOF

What is now proved was once only imagin'd. WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

All the proof of a pudding is in the eating. WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britain (1870), p. 319. (1605)

The proof of the pudding is in the eating.

HENRY GLAPTHORNE, The Hollander. Act iii. (1635) ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 567. (1714) LANGDON MITCHELL, New York Idea. Act ii. (1906) SHAW, Doctor's Dilemma. Act i. (1906) MAUGHAM, The Mixture as Before, p. 68. (1940) etc., etc.

The proof of the pudding is in the eating. Wait for another slice.

PHILIP MACDONALD, Warrant for X, p. 203. (1937)

Prudent jurors . . . voted "Not proven." (Non liquere dixerunt.)

CICERO, Pro Cluentio. Sec. 76. (66 B. C.)

A verdict of "not proven" is allowable—and common—in Scotland.

JOHN ERSKINE, Principles of the Law of Scotland, p. 598. (1754)

A verdict of Not Proven indicates suspicion, but a want of proof of guilt.

J. R. McCULLOCH, A Descriptive Account of the British Empire, ii, 225. (1846)

The proof of gold is fire; the proof of woman, gold; the proof of man, a woman.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733

That, which proves too much, proves nothing. THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4384. (1732)

After the French, "Qui veut trop prouver ne prouve rien." Another proverb is, "Never try to prove what nobody doubts."

Proofo vpon practise, must take holde more sure

Than any reasonyng by gess can procure.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 6. (1546)

The clear evidence of his senses.

JOHN LOCKE, Human Understanding. Bk. iv. ch. 19. sec. 10. (1690)

I must have the evidence of more senses than one. FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle. Act i, sc. 1. (1698)

He who furnishes a proof for his statements argues himself unknown. (Qui notorem dat, ignotus est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. 39, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 64)

Who finds the heifer dead and bleeding fresh And sees fast by a butcher with an axe, But will suspect 'twas he that made the slaughter?

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iii, 2, 188. (1590)

Some circumstantial evidence is very strong, as when you find a trout in the milk.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 11 Nov., 1850. Quoted by CONAN DOYLE, The Noble Bachelor.

Give me the ocular proof.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 360. (1605)

Proof positive.

W. E. NORRIS, Thirlby Hall. Ch. 31. (1883)

What was lately proved is now disproved. (Quod modo ratum erat, inritum est.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 951. (161 B. C.)

Nothing in the world is provable.

JOHN KEATS, Letter, to Benjamin Bailey, 13 March, 1818.

Nothing worthy proving can be proven, Nor yet disproven.

TENNYSON, The Ancient Sage, l. 66. (1842)

Prove all things; hold fast that which is good. (πάντα δὲ δοκιμάζετε, τὸ καλὸν κατέχετε.)

New Testament: I Thessalonians, v, 21. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Omnia autem probate: quod bonum est tenete." There are a number of Latin proverbial phrases relating to proof, among them, "Ecce signum" (Behold the proof); "Onus probandi" (The burden of proof); "Quod erat demonstrandum" (Which was to be proved), the Euclidian formula at the demonstration of a problem, usually contracted to Q.E.D.; "Quod gratis asseritur, gratis negatur" (That which is asserted without proof may be denied without proof).

PROPERTY

See also Possessions

- 1 The owner of the beam shall enter with the heaviest part of it.
Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 64. (c. 450)
Let the property of your fellow-man be as dear to you as your own.
Babylonian Talmud: Pirké Aboth, ii, 17. (c. 450)
- 2 Property has its duties as well as its rights.
THOMAS DRUMMOND, Letter, to the Landlords of Tipperary, 22 May, 1838. McLENNAN, Memoir of Thomas Drummond, p. 338, says, "The letter was composed by Wolfe, Drummond, and Chief Baron Pigot, and none of them was afterwards able to say who suggested the celebrated phrase," but it is usually credited to Drummond, and is engraved on the pedestal of his statue in the City Hall, Dublin. Disraeli used the phrase in his novel, Sybil, bk. ii, ch. 11 (1845), without indicating that he had borrowed it.
Mr. Drummond's famous dictum, that property has its duties as well as its rights.
J. E. T. ROGERS, Industrial and Commercial History. Vol. ii, ch. 4. (1891)
We mustn't forget that property has duties even if other people forget that it has rights.
HENRY ARTHUR JONES, The Triumph of the Philistines. Act i. (1895)
- 3 Some people talk of morality, and some of religion, but give me a little snug property.
MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Absentee. Ch. 2. (1812)
- 4 Property has been well compared to snow—"if it fall level today, it will be blown into drifts tomorrow."
R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Nature. (1836)
- 5 Endeavor vigorously to increase your property. (Rem strenuus auge.)
HORACE, Epistles, i, vii, 7, 71. (20 B.C.)
- 6 Few rich men own their own property. The property owns them.
R. G. INGERSOLL, Speech, in New York, 29 Oct., 1896. See also under POSSESSIONS.
- 7 The wearing of embroidered robes, the carrying of sharp swords, fastidiousness in food and drink, superabundance of property and wealth—this I call flaunting robbery.
LAO-TSE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 53. (c. 550 B.C.) Giles, tr.

Exclusive property is a theft in its nature. (La propriété exclusive est un vol dans la nature.)

- JEAN PIERRE BRISSOT, Théorie des Lois Criminelles. (1781)
- What is property? Property is theft. (Qu'est-ce que la propriété? La propriété, c'est la vol.)
PIERRE JOSEPH PROUDHON, Qu'est-ce que la Propriété? Ch. 1. (1840)
- Property is based in violence and slaying and the threat thereof.
LEO TOLSTOY, The Kingdom of God is Within You. (1893)
- Property, says Proudhon, is theft. That is the only perfect truism that has been uttered on the subject.
GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)
- 8 It is no less a virtue to take care of property than to acquire it. (Nec minor est virtus quam quærere, parta tueri.)
OVID, Artis Amatoriae, ii, 13. (c. 1 B.C.)
- 9 Worth now lies in what a man is worth; property gives honors, property brings friendships; everywhere the poor man is trodden down. (In pretio pretium nunc est; dat census honores, | census amicitias; pauper ubique iacet.)
OVID, Fasti. Bk. i, l. 217. (c. A.D. 8)
From the respect paid to property flow, as from a poisoned fountain, most of the evils and vices which render this world such a dreary scene.
MARY WOLLSTONECRAFT, A Vindication of the Rights of Women. Ch. 9. (1792)
What we call real estate—the solid ground to build a house on—is the broad foundation on which nearly all the guilt of this world rests.
HAWTHORNE, The House of the Seven Gables: The Flight of the Two Owls. (1851)
- 10 He guards his own property who wishes the common property to be safe. (Sua servat qui salva esse vult communia.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 685. (c. 43 B.C.)
That which is common property with another ceases to be one's own. (Quod commune cum alio est, desinit esse proprium.)
QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. (c. A.D. 80)
A Pot that belongs to many, is ill stirred and worse boiled.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 360. (1732)
What belongs to the Publick, is no Body's Property.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5480. (1732)
Mine is better than ours.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.
- What belongs to the public belongs to nobody.
BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 554. (1855)
Another form is, "What belongs to everybody belongs to nobody."
- 11 Property assures what toil acquires.
RICHARD SAVAGE, Of Public Spirit in Regard to Public Works, l. 39. (1737)

PROPHECY

<sup>1</sup> Who is there, if he shoots at a mark all day long, will not occasionally hit the white? (Quis est enim, qui totum diem iaculans non aliquando colliniet?)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 59, sec. 121. (44 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, I, 11. Cicero is explaining why some prophecies come true.

<sup>2</sup> We know in part, and we prophesy in part. (ἐκ μέρους γὰρ γινώσκουμεν καὶ ἐκ μέρους προφητεύομεν.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xiii, 9. (A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Ex parte enim cognoscimus, et ex parte prophetamus."

<sup>3</sup> Divinations, and soothsayings, and dreams are vain. (Divinatio erroris, et auguria mendacia, et somnia malefacientium, vanitas est.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxxiv, 5. (c. 190 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> Fore-cast is better than Work-hard.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1588. (1732)
Force without Fore-cast, is of little avail.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1589.

<sup>5</sup> Carriages without horses shall go.
And accidents fill the world with woe. . . .
Around the world thoughts shall fly
In the twinkling of an eye. . . .
Under water men shall walk,
Shall ride, shall sleep, and talk;
In the air men shall be seen
In white, in black, and in green. . . .
Iron in the water shall float
As easy as a wooden Boat.

CHARLES HINDLEY, The Prophecies of Mother Shipton. (1862) Ascribed to a mysterious Martha Shipton, of 1641, but really a hoax by Hindley, a London bookseller.

<sup>6</sup> I will eat exceedingly and prophesy.
BEN JONSON, Bartholomew Fair, i, 6. (1614)

<sup>7</sup> No prophecy of the scripture is of any private interpretation. (πᾶσα προφητεία γραφῆς ἰδίας ἐπιλύσεως οὐ γίνεται.)

New Testament: II Peter, i, 20. (c. A. D. 60)
The Vulgate is, "Omnis prophetia Scripturae propria interpretatione non fit."

<sup>8</sup> If you live to see this time come to pass, say, Pompey told you so.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 1, 262.
Of all the horrid, hideous notes of woe, . . .
Is that portentous phrase, "I told you so,"
Utter'd by friends, those prophets of the past.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiv, st. 50. (1824)
If a misfortune which a man has prognosticated befalls his friend, the monitor . . . will often exclaim . . . Didn't I tell you so?

J. C. AND A. W. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)
The pleasure of saying, "I told you so."

WILLIAM BLACK, The Strange Adventures of a Phaeton Ch 15. (1872)

PROPHET

See also Oracle

<sup>9</sup> How can you pretend to foretell the affairs of others when you cannot foresee your own? (ὁ τὰλλότρια πράγματα προειδέναι ἐπαγγελλόμενος, τὰ σαυτοῦ οὐ προεματεύου;)

AESOP, Fables: Mantis. (c. 570 B. C.) Of the soothsayer who, while prophesying in the forum, was told that his house had been broken into and robbed.

Alas for the ignorant minds of the Prophets! (Heu vatum ignarae mentes!)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 65. (19 B. C.)

He too was a king, and the augur best beloved of King Turnus; yet he could not by augury avert his doom. (Rex idem et regi Turno gratissimus augur; | sed non augurio potuit depellere pestem.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ix, l. 327. (19 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> When the prophet beats the ass,
The angel intercedes.

E. B. BROWNING, Aurora Leigh, viii, 795. (1856)

<sup>11</sup> That was a clever remark which Cato made many years ago: "I wonder," said he, "that a soothsayer doesn't laugh when he sees another soothsayer." (Mirari quod non rideret haruspex haruspice cum vidisset.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 24, sec. 52 (44 B. C.) Repeated in De Natura Deorum, i, 26.

<sup>12</sup> A prophet is a man that foresees trouble.
FINLEY PETER DUNNE, Rising of the Subject Races. (1901)

<sup>13</sup> Each prophet comes presently to identify himself with his thought, and to esteem his hat and shoes sacred.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Nature. (1844)

<sup>14</sup> The best of seers is he who guesses well (μάντις δ' ἄριστος ὅστις εἰκάξει καλῶς.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. Frag. 973, Nauck. (c. 420 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, sec 432C.

He who guesses best I maintain is the best diviner (Bene qui conciet, vatem hunc perhibebo optimum.)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. iv, sec. 12. (44 B. C.) Citing the "much-quoted Greek verse," from Euripides. Both are given by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 78.

He who conjectures least amiss,
Of all the best of prophets is.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, ii, 6. (1814)

<sup>15</sup> Make me a diviner and I will make thee rich.
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 30. (1578)

Make me a guesser, and I shall make you rich of it.
JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Hours of a Soldier, p. 172. (1623)

Make me a Sooth-sayer, and I'll make thee rich.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3315. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> He that knows nothing of it may by chance be a prophet, while the wisest that is may happen to miss.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734

<sup>2</sup> The best qualification of a prophet is to have a good memory.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. Works, p. 249. (1693)

<sup>3</sup> Ye plaie coleprophet (quoth I), who takth in hande

To knowe his answeare before he do his erraunde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)
Cole Prophet is he, that when his maister sendeth him on an errand, he wyl tel his answer therof to his maister or he depart from hym.

JOHN AWDELEY, The Fraternitie of Vacabondes, p. 15. (1560)

To play the cold prophet, is to recount it good or bad luck, when salt or wine falleth on the table.

REGINALD SCOT, The Discoverie of Witchcraft. Bk. ix, ch. 3. (1584)

<sup>4</sup> The gift of the king makes gracious the prophet.

LANGDON, Babylonian Proverbs: Tablet K. 4347. (c. 2300 B. C.) An early expression of cynicism concerning the value of the diviner's art.

Prophets are all a money-getting tribe. (τὸ μαντικὸν γὰρ πᾶν φιλάργυρον γένος.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 1055. (c. 441 B. C.)

Temporal Prosperity was not excluded from the Prophetesyer's Thoughts.

WILLIAM SHERLOCK, A Practical Discourse Concerning Death, iv, 217. (1754)

That Prophet ill sustains his holy call,
Who finds not heav'ns to suit the tastes of all.

THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: The Veiled Prophet, l. 558. (1817)

<sup>5</sup> A loafer if he go to another city becomes its head.

LANGDON, Babylonian Proverbs. Tablet K. 4347. (c. 2300 B. C.)

The native on the ground, the stranger in the heavens.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 9a. (c. 450)

<sup>6</sup> All armed prophets have conquered and all unarmed ones failed. (Tutt'i profeti armati vinsono, e li disarmati ruinarono.)

MACHIAVELLI, Il Principe. Ch. 6. (1513)

<sup>7</sup> A prophet is not without honour, save in his own country, and in his own house. (οὐκ ἔστιν προφήτης ἀτιμος εἰ μὴ ἐν τῇ πατρίδι καὶ ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ αὐτοῦ.)

New Testament: Matthew, xiii, 57. (a. A. D. 65) See also Mark, vi, 4; Luke, iv, 24; John, iv, 44. The Vulgate is, "Non est propheta sine honore nisi in patria sua, et in domo sua."

No prophet has honor in his own country. (Nemo propheta in sua patria honorem habet.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. No. xiv, sec. 7. (A. D. 374)

No man has been a prophet not only in his home, but in his country, says the experience of histories. (Nul a esté prophete non seulement en sa maison, mais en son païs, dict l'experience des histoires.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1595) "Here in Gascony," Montaigne continues, "they think it a joke to see me in print. The farther the knowledge of me is from home, of so much more worth am I. In Guienne I pay printers; in other places they pay me."

Nobody is a prophet in his own country. (Nul n'est prophète en son pays.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vii, fab. 12. (1678)
In Bk. viii, fab. 8, he has, "Nobody is a prophet at home" (Aucun n'est prophète chez soi).

A fine genius in his own country, is like gold in the mine.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733. The Hindus say, "The pearl is valueless in its own shell"; the Telegus, "The tree in the backyard won't do for medicine"; the Tamils, "Fame abroad and famine at home."

A prophet ne'er got honour in his own country.

JOHN GALT, The Entail. Bk. iii, ch. 28. (1823)

A prophet with the kind of honor prophets generally get at home.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson, p. 100. (1893)
He said to himself that a prophet was not without honour save in his own country, but he had been lately getting into an odious habit of turning proverbs upside down, and it occurred to him that a country is sometimes not without honour save for its own prophet.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Way of All Flesh. Ch. 50. (a. 1902)

<sup>8</sup> Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves. (προσέχετε ἀπὸ τῶν ψευδοπροφητῶν, οἵτινες ἔρχονται πρὸς ὑμᾶς ἐν ἐνδύμασι προβάτων ἔσωθεν δὲ εἰσὶν λύκοι ἀρπαγες.)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 15. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Attendite a falsis prophetis, qui veniunt ad vos in vestimentis ovium, intrinsecus autem sunt lupi rapaces."

Take heed of a prophetess.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum (1640)

<sup>9</sup> God has granted to every people a prophet in his own tongue.

MOHAMMED, The Koran. (c. 625) As quoted by EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon. A shorter form is, "Every people has its own prophet."

<sup>10</sup> You are a true prophet. (Vera hariolare.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 924. (c. 200 B. C.)

He told me things which I had forgotten myself. (Hic mihi dixit etiam ea, quae oblitus eram.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 76. (c. A. D. 60) Of an astrologer.

With the fond maids in palmistry he deals;
They tell the secret first which he reveals.

PRIOR, Henry and Emma, l. 134. (a. 1721)

1 Is Saul also among the prophets? (Num et Saul inter prophetas?)

Old Testament: 1 Samuel, x, 12; xix, 24. (c. 800 B. C.) One of the few proverbs of whose origin there is a clear and trustworthy account: Saul, who had never prophesied, meeting a company of prophets, "and the Spirit of God came upon him and he prophesied among them." And his companions were astonished, and said, "What is this that has come unto the son of Kish? Is Saul also among the prophets?" The text goes on, "Therefore it became a proverb" (Propterea verum est in proverbium). Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 64.

Is Saul, you will say, among the prophets?

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannerings. Ch. 21. (1815) "Is Saul also among the prophets" . . . finds its application as often as any one reveals suddenly . . . a nobleness which had been latent in him till now.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 2. (1853)

This is indeed finding Saul among the prophets.

F. ANSTAY (T. A. GUTHRIE), Vice Versa. Ch. 4. (1882)

2 "In the name of the Prophet—figs!"

HORACE AND JAMES SMITH, Rejected Addresses: Johnson's Ghost. (1812) A pompous introduction to some triviality.

3 The wisest prophets make sure of the event first.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to Thomas Walpole, 9 Feb., 1785.

My gran'ther's rule was safer 'n 'tis to crow:

Don't never prophesy—unless ye know.

J. R. LOWELL, Mason and Slidell (1862) Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 2

PROSPERITY

4 Prosperity unassailed by envy is my choice. (κρίνω δ' ἀφθονον δλβον.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 471. (458 B. C.)

In prosperity we all grow over-nice. (ἀβρύνεται γὰρ πᾶς τις εὖ πράσσων πλέον.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1205. (458 B. C.) A somewhat similar Latin proverb is, "Felicitas nutrix est iracundiae" (Prosperity is nurse to ill-temper).

5 Prosperity may be overturned by a shadow. (εὐτυχούντα μὲν σκιά τις ἂν τρέψειεν.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1328. (458 B. C.)

In human life there is nothing which prospers to the end. (τῶν γὰρ ἐν βροτοῖς οὐκ ἔστιν οὐδὲν διὰ τέλους εὐδαιμονοῦν.)

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 269. (c. 421 B. C.)

Put not your trust in prosperity. (Desinat elatis quisquam confidere rebus.)

CLAUDIAN, In Rufinum. Bk. ii, l. 440. (c. A. D. 395)

No man may always han prosperitee.

CHAUCER, The Clerkes Tale, l. 754. (c. 1386)

Lat no man trust on blind prosperitee.

CHAUCER, The Monkes Tale, l. 7. (c. 1387)

Prosperity doth bewitch men, seeming cleere;
As seas doe laugh, shew white, when rocks are neere.

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Divil. Act v, sc. 6. l. 250. (1612)

Prosperity is a feeble reed. (C'est un faible roseau que la prospérité.)

DANIEL D'ANCHERÈS, Tyr et Sidon. (c. 1625)

6 Trees loaded with fruit are bent down; clouds charged with rain hang down near the earth: even so good men are not uplifted through prosperity.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 70. (c. A. D. 100)

The boughs that bear the most hang the lowest.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. (1732)

7 Good times are just around the corner.

VICE-PRESIDENT CHARLES CURTIS, Remark.

Chicago, 5 Nov., 1930, commenting on the Democratic landslide of the day before, and predicting that it wouldn't happen in 1932

Prosperity is just around the corner.

PRESIDENT HERBERT HOOVER, Sixty Day Proclamation, March, 1931. See SELDES, Years of the Locust, p. 43.

8 Prosperity has many friends. (Felicitas multos habet amicos.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. v. No. 4. (1523)

Prosperity makes few friends. (La prospérité fait peu d'amis.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 17. (1746)

9 Prosperity has puffed them up. (εὐτυχούντες οὐκ ἐπιστάνται φέρειν.)

EURIPIDES, Suppliants, l. 124. (c. 421 B. C.)

Prosperity urges pride beyond itself. (Prosera animos efferunt.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 252. (c. A. D. 60)

10 Prosperity and Vanity are often lodg'd together.

Prosperity destroys Fools, endangers the Wise, Prosperity has every Thing cheap.

Prosperity knows not the worth of Patience. Prosperity takes no Counsel, and fears no Calamity.

Prosperous Men seldom mend their Faults.

FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 3959–3967. (1732)

11 Who may be termed most prosperous? He who barter the perishable for the everlasting.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 529. (c. 1050)

12 The Lord was with Joseph, and he was a prosperous man. (Fuitque Dominus cum eo, et erat vir in cunctis prospere agens.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xxxix, 2. (c. 550 B. C.)

13 Watch out w'en you'er gittin all you want Fattenin' hogs ain't in luck.

JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS, Uncle Remus: Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

1 Prosperity lets go the bridle.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 738. (1640)
When Prosperity was well mounted, she let go the Bridle, and soon came tumbling out of the Saddle.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754

2 The prosperous man is never sure that he is loved for himself. (Felix se nescit amari.)
LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. vii, l. 727. (c. A. D. 60)

3 The gods willing, there are many ways to prosperity. (πολλὰι δ' ὁδοί | σὺν θεοῖς εὐπραγίας.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. No. viii, l. 13. (460 B. C.) Heaven's gift to men is prosperity. (θεοῦ δὲ δῶρον ἔστιν εὐτυχεῖν βροτοῖς.)

UNKNOWN. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia
Prosperity's the very bond of love.
SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, iv, 4, 583. (1610)

4 They say that prosperity which abides in bloom brings evil as well as good in its train.
(φαντί γε μὰν οὕτω κεν ἀνδρὶ παρμονίαν |
θάλλοισαν εὐδαιμονίαν | τὰ καὶ τὰ φέρεσθαι.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. vii, l. 20. (486 B. C.)
The man who does not steel his heart
To evil fates and fair
Is crumbled by prosperity
Like unbaked earthenware.

The Mahabharata. (c. 200 B. C.) Ryder, tr.
We are corrupted by prosperity. (Felicitate cor-rumpimur.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. i, sec. 15. (c. A. D. 109)
And you shall find the greatest enemy
A man can have is his prosperity.

SAMUEL DANIEL, Philotes: Dedication, l. 13.
(1605) The Italians say. "Non hanno gli uomini maggior nemico che la troppo grande prosperità."

5 Prosperity is envied to its full height, while the humble man murmurs unheeded. (ἰσχεῖ τε γὰρ ὄλβος οὐ μέλαινά φθόρον | ὁ δὲ χαμηλὰ πνέων ἀφαντον βρέμει.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. xi, l. 29. (474 B. C.)

6 Rome is being shattered by her own prosperity. (Frangitur ipsa suis Roma superba bonis.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 13, l. 60. (c.
22 B. C.)

7 Prosperity crushes unless well sustained.
(Bona quae veniunt nisi sustineantur opprimunt.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 82. (c. 43 B. C.)
Truly prosperity tries the souls even of the wise.
(Quippe secundae res sapientium animos fati-gant.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 11. (c. 41 B. C.)
It is not easy to bear good fortune with equable mind. (Nec facile est aequa commoda mente pati.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 438. (c. 1 B. C.)
Everything may be borne except good fortune.
(Ogni cosa si sopporta, eccetto il buon tempo.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. p.

75. (1853) An Italian proverb. The Italians also say, "Nella prosperità non fumano gl' altari" (In prosperity, no altars smoke). In other words, during prosperity the gods are forgotten.

8 No one in the world is contented with his prosperity, even if it comes to him on the run.
(Nemo enim est, cui felicitas sua, etiam si cursu venit, satis faciat.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxv, sec. 17. (c. A. D. 64)

9 Prosperity is the surest breeder of insolence I know.

MARK TWAIN, Letter to the Alta Californian,
23 Feb., 1867.

II—Prosperity and Adversity

10 If thou findest thyself able to keep an even mind during the time of prosperity, when adversity comes thou wilt find thyself able to bear it.

ANI, Teaching. No. 33. (c. 2000 B. C.) BUDGE,
Teaching of Amen-em-apt, 242.

When their fortunes are highest, then especially is it the duty of men to reflect within themselves how they are to endure adversity. (Omnes, cum secundae res sunt maxime, tum maxime, meditari secum oportet, quo pacto adversam aerumnam ferant.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationes. (45 B. C.)

11 The Virtue of Prosperity is Temperance; the Virtue of Adversity is Fortitude: which in Morals is the more Heroicall Virtue.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Adversitie. (1597)
Prosperity is the Blessing of the Old Testament; Adversity is the Blessing of the New; which carrieth the greater Benediction.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Adversitie.
The ancient maxim that prosperity is the blessing of the Old Testament, and affliction the blessing of the New.

A. C. BENSON, At Large. Ch. 12. (1908)

12 Prosperity is not without many Feares and Distastes; and Adversity is not without Comforts and Hopes.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Adversitie. (1597)
Prosperity doth best discover Vice; but Adversity doth best discover Virtue.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Adversitie. The French say, "L'adversité fait l'homme, et la bonheur les monstres" (Adversity makes a man, and prosperity makes monsters).

Prosperity often best discovers Vices, and Adversity Virtue.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3960. (1732)
Prosperity discovers Vice, Adversity Virtue.

FRANKLIN, Poor Rickard's Almanack, 1751

13 In the day of prosperity there is a forgetfulness of affliction: and in the day of affliction there is no more remembrance of prosperity.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus). xi,
25. (c. 190 B. C.)

Remember the time of famine in the time of plenty, And poverty and want in the days of wealth.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xviii, 25.

<sup>1</sup> In favor, you know no body; in disgrace, no-body knows you. (Con el favor, no te conoceras; sin el, no te conoceran.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbs, p. 248. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

<sup>2</sup> Why gabbestow, that seydest thus to me
That "him is wors that is fro wele y-throwe,
Than he hadde erst non of that wele
y-knowe?"

CHAUCER (?), Troilus, Bk. iv, l. 481. (c. 1380)
Adversity is ever most bitter to him who hath longe time lived in prosperity.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 23. (1576)

Adversity is easier borne, than Prosperity forgot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 763. (1732)

It is hard to become used to being suddenly poor, but it is even harder to become used to being suddenly rich.

PERCIVAL WILDE, Inquest, p. 136. (1940)

<sup>3</sup> It is a sign of weakness not to bear prosperity as well as adversity with moderation. (Ut ad-versas res, sic secundas immoderate ferre levitatis est.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 26, sec. 90. (c. 45
B.C.) The Portuguese say, "In prosperity, caution; in adversity, patience."

Happy is he who knows how to bear the estate of either slave or king. (Felix quisque novit famulum | regemque pati.)

SENECA, Hercules Oetaeus, l. 228. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>4</sup> In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider. (In die bona fruere bonis, et malam diem praecave.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 14. (c. 250 B.C.)

Take your parte as it comth, of rough and eke of smoothe.

UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn, p. 37. (c. 1400)

<sup>5</sup> Shod in the cradle, bairfoot in the stubble.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 88. (c. 1595)

Longest at the fire soonest finds cold.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 238. (1721)

<sup>6</sup> Calamity and Prosperity are the Touchstones of Integrity.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

<sup>7</sup> He that swells in Prosperity, will shrink in Adversity.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2321. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> It is harder to find a man who can bear good fortune well than one who can bear misfortune well. (χαλεπώτερον εἶναι εὐρεῖν ἄνδρα τάγαθὰ καλῶς φέροντα ἢ τὰ κακά.)

GOBYRUS, to Cyrus. (c. 525 B.C.) See XENO-
PHON. Cyropaedia. Bk. viii, ch. 4, sec. 14

We need greater virtues to sustain good than evil fortune. (Il faut de plus grandes vertus pour soutenir la bonne fortune que la mauvaise.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 25. (1665)

For one man who can stand prosperity, there are a hundred that will stand adversity.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship: The Hero as Man of Letters. (1840)

I'll say this fer adversity—people seem to be able to stand it, an' that's more'n I kin say fer prosperity.

KIN HUBBARD, Abe Martin, p. 79. (1930)

<sup>9</sup> Adversity and prosperity have no fixed road;
they are evoked by men themselves.

LAO-TSZE, Kan-ying-p'ien (Book of Rewards and Punishments). (c. 550 B.C.)

<sup>10</sup> It is a common fault of men not to reckon on storms in fair weather. (Il che è comune defetto delli uomini, non fare conto nella bonac-cia della tempesta.)

MACHIAVELLI, Il Principe. Ch. 24. (1513) "Fair weather brings on cloudy weather" (εὐδία ἐπάγει νέφος) is an ancient Greek proverb, of which "After an uphill comes a downhill" (μετὰ τὸν ἀνθρόπον κατήφορος) is a modern Greek variant.

Ups and downs is the way of the world. (Así el mundo va andando: unos riendo y otros llo-rando.)

FRANCIS BEEDING, Heads Off at Midnight. Ch.
7. (1940) A Spanish proverb.

<sup>11</sup> Be modest in prosperity, prudent in adversity.
(εὐτυχῶν μὲν μέτριος ἴσθι, ἀτυχῶν δὲ φρόνιμος.)

PERIANDER, Apothegm. (c. 600 B.C.) See STO-BAEUS, Florilegium, iii, 79.

In prosperity he is brave, in doubtful fortune
a runaway. (Re secunda fortis est, dubia fugax.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 2, l. 13. (c. 25 B.C.)

Remember in adversity to keep an even mind, and likewise in prosperity a spirit restrained from overweening joy. (Aequam memento rebus in arduis | servare mentem, non secus in bonis | ab
insolenti temperatam | laetitia.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 3, l. 1. (23 B.C.)

Hopeful in adversity, anxious in prosperity, is the heart prepared for weal or woe. (Sperat infestis, metuit secundis | alteram sortem bene praeparat-
um | pectus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 10, l. 14.

Adversity is wont to reveal genius, prosperity to hide it. (Ingenium res adversae nudare solent, celare secundae.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 8, l. 73. (35 B.C.)

See also POETS AND POVERTY.

<sup>12</sup> Prosperity proves the fortunate, adversity the great. (Secunda felices, adversa magnos pro-bent.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Panegyric on Trajan. Sec.
31. (c. A. D. 100)

Prosperity gets Followers, but Adversity distinguishes them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3962. (1732)
See also FRIENDS AND ADVERSITY.

<sup>1</sup> Greater in adversity than in prosperity. (Maiorum in adversis quam in secundis rebus.)

SALLUST, Ad Caesarem. Ch. 1. (c. 50 B.C.) It was not only amid distress that his wisdom shone: with heart unaltered he could face prosperity (Pectore non alio prosperiora tulit.)

RUTILIUS NAMATIUS, De Reditu Suo Bk. i, l. 498. (c. A.D. 416) Of Victorinus.

<sup>2</sup> We become wiser in the midst of adversity; it is prosperity that takes away righteousness. (Melius in malis sapimus; secunda rectum auferunt.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. 94, sec. 74. (c. A.D. 64)

Affliction teacheth a wicked person some time to pray: Prosperity never.

BEN JONSON, Explorata: Afflictio Pia Magistra. (1616)

Prosperity is a great teacher; adversity is a greater.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Essays: On the Conversation of Lords. (1819)

<sup>3</sup> Welcome the sour cup of prosperity! Affliction may one day smile again; and till then, sit thee down, sorrow!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 316. (1595)

<sup>4</sup> All men, when prosperity is at its height, ought then chiefly to consider in what way they will endure disaster. (Omnis, quom secundae res sunt maxume, tum maxume | meditari secum oportet quo pacto advorsam aerum nam ferant.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 241. (161 B.C.) An elaboration of Cato's maxim, "Cum fueris felix quae sunt adversa caveto" (When you are fortunate, beware of adversity).

In time of prosperitie remember adversitie.

UNKNOWN. In Antiq. Repertory, iv. 398 (c. 1500)

In prosperity prepare for adversity. It is both wiser and easier to collect winter stores in summer. (Prevenirse en la fortuna próspera para la adversa. Arbitrio es hacer en el estío la provision para el invierno.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual Maxim 113. (1647)

<sup>5</sup> In the shade I will believe what in the sun I loved.

H. D. THOREAU, On the Sun Coming Out in the Afternoon. (1 April, 1841)

PROVERB

I—Definitions

<sup>6</sup> Apothegms are, according to Cicero, micrones verborum, pointed speeches. Salinas, salt pits from which one can draw the salt of discourse

FRANCIS BACON, Apothegms New and Old: Introduction. (a. 1626) The Arabs say, "A proverb is to speech what salt is to food."

<sup>7</sup> Proverbium: An olde sayed sawe.

THOMAS COOPER, Thesaurus Linguae Romanae et Britanicae. (1565)

This, in spite of its brevity, very nearly touches the root of the matter. Being "old," the popular utterance has the stamp and dignity of antiquity: being "sayed," it is not merely a golden maxim buried deeply in the pages of some venerable tome, . . . it has become incorporated in the popular speech.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 7. (1902) Hulme cites many other definitions. He says that the Rev. John Ward, vicar of Stratford-on-Avon in the reign of Charles II, declared that for a proverb six things were essential: it must be short, clear, in common use, figurative in expression, ancient, true, and adds that popularity is an essential feature. He quotes approvingly Agricola's "Short sentences into which the ancients have compressed life," Howell's "Sayings which combine sense, shortness, and salt," Chambers's "Proverbs are pithy, practical, popular sayings, expressive of certain more or less general convictions," and Annandale's "A proverb is a short and pithy sentence forming a popular saying, and expressing some result of the experience of life in a keen, quaint and lively fashion." The Oxford English Dictionary's definition is, "A short pithy saying in common and recognized use; a concise sentence, often metaphorical or alliterative in form, which is held to express some truth ascertained by experience or observation, and familiar to all."

<sup>8</sup> The People's Voice the voice of God we call: And what are proverbs but the People's Voice?

JAMES HOWELL, Before a Great Volume of Proverbs. (a. 1647) Quoted by TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 22, as by "an old English poet."

Proverbs may not improperly be called the Philosophy of the Common People, or, according to Aristotle, the truest Reliques of old Philosophy

JAMES HOWELL, Lexicon: Proverb (1659)

<sup>9</sup> Truth comes in a well rubbed-down state in the form of the sayings of the ancestors.

KHATI I, KING OF EGYPT, Teaching No. 8. (c. 2500 B.C.) Budge, tr.

Short sayings drawn from long experience. (Sentencias sacadas de la mesma experiencia.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 21. (1605) A proverb is much matter decocted into few words.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies. Ch. 2. (a. 1661)

It is a highway saying.

JOHN DUNTON, Athenian Sport, p. 454. (1707)

The Greek word for proverb, παροιμία (pár + ómos), means literally beside the way, wayside.

Scraps from the table of wisdom, that will if well digested yield strong nourishment to thy mind.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739. His characterization of the maxims scattered through the almanacs

The philosophy of the vulgar.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Philosophy of Proverbs. (1823) D'Israeli also quotes a Spanish definition, "Refranes que dicen las viejas tras el fuego" (Sayings of old wives by their firesides).

Copper coinage of wisdom.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Sandra Belloni. Ch. 40. (1864)

The apothegms of a people are the gold and silver coins of their language.

F. S. COZZENS, Sayings, p. 48. (1870)

Proverbs may be called the literature of the illiterate.

F. S. COZZENS, Sayings, p. 49. An older definition is, "Proverbs are the wisdom of the streets."

Proverbs, the ready money of human experience.

LOWELL, My Study Windows, p. 162. (1870)

1

A proverb is an Instructive Sentence, in which more is generally Design'd than is Express'd, and which has pass'd into Common Use and Esteem either among the Learned or Vulgar.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs. (1710)

What is a proverb, but the experience and observation of several ages, gathered and summed up into one expression?

ROBERT SOUTH, Sermons, i, 437. (a. 1716)

A proverb is usually defined as an instructive sentence, or common and pithy saying, in which more is generally designed than expressed.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs: Preface to the Fourth Edition. (1767)

A maxim is the exact and noble expression of an important and unquestionable truth. (Une maxime est l'expression exacte et noble d'une vérité importante et incontestable.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 137. (1810)

A proverb is one man's wit and all men's wisdom.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL, Apothegm. (c. 1850) As given by MACKINTOSH, Memoirs, ii, 473. But it is usually quoted, "The wisdom of many, the wit of one," the one being "the man who puts into happy form, and so crystallizes and preserves, a truth which many have already felt," as Hulme puts it.

A proverb is a racial aphorism which has been, or still is, in common use, conveying advice or counsel, invariably camouflaged figuratively, disguised in metaphor or allegory.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs: Introduction. (1938)

2

What can be the use of sawing about a set of maxims to which there are a complete set of antagonist maxims?

SYDNEY SMITH, Lecture on the Conduct of the Understanding, i. (1806)

Proverbial wisdom, it must be borne in mind, deals sometimes with only one aspect of a truth. The necessary brevity often makes the teaching one-sided. . . . "A rolling stone gathers no moss"; but on the other hand it is equally true that "A tethered sheep soon starves."

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 10. (1902)

Almost every wise saying has an opposite one, no less wise, to balance it.

GEORGE SANTAYANA, Little Essays, p. 237. (c. 1905)

3

Proverbs . . . receive their chief value from the stamp and esteem of ages through which they have passed.

SIR WILLIAM TEMPLE, Of Ancient and Modern Learning. (1692)

II—Proverbs: Aphorisms

4

There is some degree of licentiousness and error in forming axioms.

FRANCIS BACON, Novum Organum. Pt. ii, Summary. Aphorism 17. (a. 1626)

Most maxim-mongers have preferred the prettiness to the justness of a thought, and the turn to the truth.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

In all pointed sentences, some degree of accuracy must be sacrificed to conciseness.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, x, 286. (c. 1778)

5

The genius, wit, and spirit of a nation are discovered in its proverbs.

FRANCIS BACON. (a. 1616) The Germans say, "Judge a country by the quality of its proverbs."

The maxims of men reveal their characters. (Les maximes des hommes décèlent leur cœur.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 107. (1746)

The French also say, "Judge a man by his favorite proverbs."

Maxims are the condensed good sense of nations.

SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH. (a. 1832) Quoted on the title page of Broom's Legal Maxims.

The proverbs of a nation furnish the index to its spirit.

J. G. HOLLAND, Gold-Foil: An Exordial Essay. (a. 1881)

6

A good maxim is never out of season.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 288. (1855)

7

And therewith-al, he knew of mo proverbes Than in this world ther growen gras or herbes.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 773. (c. 1388)

I know more proverbs than a book. (Porque sé más refranes que un libro.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)

Also, "No hay refran que no sea verdadero" (There is no proverb that is not true). The Russians say, "There is no proverb without its grain of truth."

8

Lat be thyne olde ensamples, I thee preye.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. i, l. 760. (c. 1380)

With many prouerbe diuers and vnkouth, Be rehersaile of his Sugrid mouth.

LYDGATE, Siege of Thebes, Bk. i, l. 3. (c. 1420)

This formal fool speaks naught but proverbs.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington: The Proverb Monger. (1599)

I do not say a proverb is amiss when aptly and seasonably applied; but to be forever discharg-of Lindus, Myson of Chen, and last of the traditional seven, Chilon of Sparta. All these were lovers and disciples of the Spartan culture, and you can recognize that character in their wisdom by the short, memorable sayings that fell from each of them: they dedicated these as the first-fruits of their lore to Apollo in his Delphic temple, inscribing there those maxims which are on every tongue.

PLATO, Protagoras. Sec. 342E. (c. 389 B. C.)

I will tell you in verse the cities, names, and sayings of the seven sages:

Cleobulus of Lindus said, "Moderation is best." (μέτρον ἀριστόν.)

Chilon in hollow Lacedaemon said, "Know thyself." (γνώθι σεαυτόν.)

Periander, who dwelt in Corinth, said, "Master anger." (χόλου κρατεῖν.)

Pittacus, who was from Mytilene, said, "Nothing in excess." (οὐδὲν ἄγαν.)

And Solon, in holy Athens, "Look at the end of life." (τέρμα δ' ὅρᾱν βίωτοιο.)

Bias of Priene declared that "Most men are bad." (τοὺς πλεόνας κακίους.)

And Thales of Miletus said, "Shun suretyship." (ἐγγύην φεύγειν.)

UNKNOWN, Greek Anthology. Bk. ix, epig. 366.

The dates of the Wise Men run from 600 to 550 B. C.

1 An old saying, if it comes into use with time, becomes like an ordinance. (Scitumst, per tempus si obviamst, verbum vetus.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 135. (c. 194 B. C.)

2 To understand a proverb, and the interpretation; the words of the wise, and their dark sayings. (Animadvertet parabolam, et interpretationem, verba sapientum, et aenigmata eorum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, i, 6. (c. 350 B. C.)

A wise heart discerneth the proverbs of the wise. BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iii, 29. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

The wise proverb, let it not escape thee.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, vi, 35.

Despise not the discourse of the wise, but acquaint thyself with their proverbs.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, viii, 8.

They that are wise in words also show that they are wise in that they pour forth wise proverbs

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xvii, 29.

3 A maker of maxims is synonymous with a pessimist. (Maximist, pessimist.)

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest: Prelude. (c. 1870)

4 As saith the proverb of the ancients. (Sicut et in proverbio antiquo dicitur.)

Old Testament: 1 Samuel, xxiv, 13. (c. 600 B. C.)

He gave good heed, and sought out, and set in order many proverbs. (Investigans composuit parabolas multas.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, xii, 9. (c. 250 B. C.)

A faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance. (πιστὸς ὁ λόγος καὶ πάσης ἀποδοχῆς ἄξιος.)

New Testament: 1 Timothy, i, 15. (c. A. D. 62)

The Vulgate is, "Fidelis sermo, et omni acceptione dignus."

5 Patch grief with proverbs.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, v, 1, 17. (1598)

6 An old saying, that was a man when King Pepin of France was a little boy.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 1, 121. (1595)

I can tell thee where that saying was born.

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, i, 5, 9. (1599)

As the saying is.

GEORGE FARQUHAR, The Beaux Stratagem. (1707) Repeated frequently throughout the play.

7 I am proverb'd with a grandsire phrase.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 4, 37. (1595)

The proverb is something musty.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 2, 359. (1600)

A most remarkably long-headed, flowing-bearded and patriarchal proverb.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 13. (1844)

A maxim is only a proverb in its caterpillar stage.

D. E. MARVIN, The Antiquity of Proverbs. (1922)

Proverbs are all old, If they're new they're not proverbs.

EUGENE HEALY, Mr. Sandeman Loses His Life, p. 135. (1940)

8 It is more trouble to make a maxim than it is to do right.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar. (1893)

PROVIDENCE

See also Destiny, Fate

9 No man hurts his finger here below unless the order is given from above.

Babylonian Talmud: Chullin, fo. 7. (c. 450)

That which cometh from above, let no man question.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, ii, 243. (1662)
Quoted as a Spanish proverb. There is a Latin one, "Omnia desuper" (All things are from above).

10 I am not one to fly in the face of Providence. S. BARING-GOULD, The Queen of Love, ii, 59. (1894)

It seems like flying in the face of Providence. HULBERT FOOTNER, Death of a Saboteur, p. 159. (1943)

11 His pet hobby was playing the part of a small, beneficent Providence.

WILLIAM BLACK, White Heather. Ch. 47. (1886)

12 Providence has been called the baptismal name of Chance, but a devout person would say that Chance is a nickname of Providence. (Quelqu'un disait que la Providence était le nom de baptême du Hasard, quelque dévot dira que le Hasard est un sobriquet de la Providence.)

SEBASTIAN CHAMFORT, Maximes et Pensées. Pt. i. (a, 1794)

<sup>1</sup> Providence has many different aspects. (πολλὰ μορφαὶ τῶν δαιμονίων.)

EURIPIDES, Alcestis, l. 1159. (c. 438 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> If you leap into a Well, Providence is not bound to fetch you out.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2795. (1732)

Providence directs the Dice.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3970.

Providence is not purblind.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3972.

<sup>3</sup> Providence requires three things of us before it will help us—a stout heart, a strong arm, and a stiff upper lip.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 13. (1843)

<sup>4</sup> Providence is better than a rent.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 256. (1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3971. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> Let the morn come, and the meat with it.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 231. (1721)

Providence cares for every hungry mouth.

ROBERT BROWNING, Ferishtah's Fancies: The Eagle. (1884) See also under MOUTH.

<sup>6</sup> Providence knows what we need better than we ourselves. (La Providence | Sait ce qu'il nous faut mieux que nous.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Jupiter et le Métayer. Bk. vi, fab. 4. (1668) This is the fable of the farmer who wagered Jupiter that he could produce better weather for his crops than Jupiter himself. The result was that his crops died, while those of his neighbors flourished.

<sup>7</sup> The ways of the Gods are full of Providence. (τὰ τῶν θεῶν προνοίας μετὰ.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ii, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 174)

The lap of providence.

HUMPHREY PRIDEAUX, Directions to Church-Wardens, p. 105. (1701)

<sup>8</sup> There's a special providence in the fall of a sparrow.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 230. (1600) See also under SPARROW.

Dont boast, John. Dont tempt Providence.

BERNARD SHAW, Misalliance, p. 26. (1910)

Providence always has the last word.

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii. (1913)

Every drunken skipper trusts to Providence. But one of the ways of Providence with drunken skippers is to run them on the rocks.

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act iii.

PROVIDENCE AND BIG BATTALIONS, see under GOD.

PRUDENCE

See also Carefulness, Caution, Discretion, Heed

<sup>9</sup> Prudence excels the other virtues as much as sight excels the other senses. (τοσοῦτον διαφέρειν τὴν φρόνησιν τῶν ἄλλων ἀρετῶν, ὅσον τὴν ὄρασιν τῶν ἄλλων αἰσθήσεων.)

BION. (c. 300 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, iv, 51.

<sup>10</sup> Prudence is a rich, ugly old maid, courted by Incapacity.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

<sup>11</sup> Nobody hath too much prudence or virtue.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 463. (1855)

<sup>12</sup> Achilles, though invulnerable, never went to battle but completely armed.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 15 Jan., 1753.

<sup>13</sup> By prudence, which the Greeks call φρόνησις, we understand the practical knowledge of things to be sought, and of things to be avoided. (Prudentiam enim, quam Graeci φρόνησιν dicunt, aliam quamdam intellegimus, quae est rerum expetendarum fugiendarumque scientia.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 43, sec. 153. (c. 45 B. C.)

<sup>14</sup> Prudence is a good thing; forethought is wisdom. (ἀγαθὸν τι πρόνοον εἶναι, σοφὸν δὲ ἡ προμηθία.)

CROESUS, to Cambyses. (c. 535 B. C.) As recounted by HERODOTUS, bk. iii, sec. 36. See also FORESIGHT.

<sup>15</sup> Prudence is God taking thought for oxen.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Prudence. (1841)

Prudence, the soul's stern sacristan.

SIDNEY DOBELL, The Roman. Pt. vii. (1850)

Prudence is the pledge of security.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 280. (1872)

<sup>16</sup> The greatest good is prudence; wherefore prudence is a more precious thing even than philosophy; from it spring all the other virtues. (τὸ μέγιστον ἀγαθὸν φρόνησις.)

EPICURUS, Maxim. (c. 290 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Epicurus. Bk. x, sec. 132.

<sup>17</sup> A grain of Prudence is worth a Pound of Craft.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 187. (1732)

An ounce of prudence is worth a pound of gold.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 15. (1748) From the Italian proverb, "Un oncia di prudenza val piu che una libra d' oro."

<sup>18</sup> Prudence is not satisfied with May-be's.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3974. (1732)

Prudent Pauses forward Business.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3976.

1 There is no luck nor ill-luck except prudence and imprudence. (No hay más dicha ni más desdicha que prudencia ó imprudencia.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 21. (1647)

2 Prudence keeps life safe, but does not often make it happy.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 57. (1758)

If we thatch ourselves too thickly from winter, we miss all the music of the storms.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street. (1940)

3 One has no protecting power save prudence. (Nullum numen habes si sit prudentia.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. x, l. 365; sat. xiv, l. 315.

(c. A. D. 120) This has been cast into proverbial form, "Nullum numen abest si sit prudentia" (No divinity is absent if prudence is present).

Though the proverb Nullum numen abest, si sit prudentia, does not always prove true, we may be certain of the converse of it, Nullum numen adest, si sit imprudentia. [No divinity is present, if imprudence is there].

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 30 March, 1783. Boswell does not note the exact date of the remark, but says, "I shall here insert a few of Johnson's sayings, without the formality of dates."

Scott seldom failed to introduce some passing hint of caution—such as Nullum numen abest si sit prudentia.

LOCKHART, Life of Scott. Ch. 37. (1837)

"If prudence be present, no divinity is absent," according to high authority.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Mary Anerley. Ch. 49. (1880)

4 Praises are heaped on the virtue of prudence, which, however, cannot secure us the smallest result. (Il n'y a point d'éloges qu'on ne donne à la prudence; cependant elle ne saurait nous assurer du moindre évènement.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 65. (1665)

5 With a mantelle of prudens clad thou be.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poems (Percy Society, 1840), p. 9. (c. 1430)

6 Often imprudence succeeds and prudence fails. (Et male consultis pretium est, prudentia fallax.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica. Bk. iv, l. 95. (c. B. C. 25) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 47.

7 Prudence is always in season. (La prudence est toujours de saison.)

MOLIERE, Dépit Amoureux. Act v, sc. 8, l. 8. (1654)

8 Prudence is the first thing to desert the wretched. (Miseros prudentia prima relinquit.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. iv, epis. 12, l. 47. (A. D. 3)

9 The simple believeth every word: but the prudent man looketh well to his going. (Innocens credit omni verbo: astutus considerat gressus suos.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 15. (c. 400 B. C.)

LOOK BEFORE YOU LEAP, see under LOOK.

10 You will conquer more surely by prudence than by passion. (Consilio melius vincas quam iracundia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 110. (c. 43 B. C.)

We accomplish more by prudence than by force. (Plura consilio quam vi perficimus.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. ii, sec. 26. (c. A. D. 116)

11 Prudence, like experience, must be paid for.

SHERIDAN, School for Scandal. Act iv, sc. 3. (1777)

I am the pink of prudence.

ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast. Act i, sc. 1. (1787)

II—Prudential Proverbs *

See also Behavior: Admonitions

12 O Nazirite, do not approach even the neighborhood of a vineyard.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 13a, and elsewhere. (c. 450) A Nazirite was one who had taken a vow to abstain from the production of wine. Mishnah, Aboth, i, 1, says, "Make a fence round the law."

A man does not look behind the door unless he has stood there himself.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 492. (1940)

13 Keep out of a hasty man's way for a while; out of a sullen man's all the days of your life.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 436. (1855)

Keep yourself from the anger of a great man, from the tumult of a mob, from a man of ill fame, from a widow that has been thrice married, from a wind that comes in at a hole, and from a reconciled enemy.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 437.

The Latin proverb is, "Cave a signatis" (Beware of marked men).

Never tread on a sore toe.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 459.

14 If thou seest a wall inclining, run from under it.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 13. (1817)

Fly from him whose power is tottering.

15 When you know yourself outmatched, retreat for the time being. (Cui scieris non esse parem, pro tempora cede.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 10. (c. 175 B. C.)

* There are hundreds of "cowardly and prudential proverbs," as Stevenson called them, dealing with money (borrowing and lending, saving, thrift), with health (eating, exercise, sleep), with women, and with behavior in general. The specific ones will be found elsewhere in this book under their appropriate headings—"Make haste slowly," for example, is under HASTE—but a few of the more general ones are grouped together here. In case of doubt as to where to find these proverbs, the Index should be consulted.

1 It is better not to stir the rice although it sticks. (Es mejor no menear el arroz aunque se pegue.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 37. (1615)

2 You advise me to keep the outside course. (Me mones, ut τὴν ἔξω γραμμὴν teneam.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. iv, epis. 8. (55 B.C.)
As in a chariot race; that is, to be prudent.

3 Taste your pottage before you crumb in your bread.

ANTHONY COPLEY, Wits, Fits and Fancies, p. 116. (1594)

Crumb not your bread before you taste your porridge.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Monsieur Thomas. Act iv, sc. 4. (c. 1613)

4 In a field of melons do not pull up your shoe; under a plum tree do not adjust your cap.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Philosophy of Proverbs. (1823) A Chinese proverb.

Don't lace your boots in a melon field, nor adjust your hat under a plum tree. (Kua t'ien pu li, li hsia pu cheng kuan.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1928. (1875)

Do not adjust your sandals while passing through a melon field; nor yet arrange your hat beneath an orange tree.

ERNEST BRAHMAH, Kai Lung's Golden Hours. (c. 1920)

5 [Use] another's foot to kick a dog. (Pieh jên chiao 'ti 'chüan.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 186. (1872)

Another Chinese proverb is, "Mai chên 'kan 'kung" (In buying needles examine the eyes).

If you know there are tigers in the hills, don't go there. (Ming chih shan yu 'hu, mo hsiang 'hu shan hsiang.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Proverbs, ii, 482.

6 Keep the rake near the scythe, and the cart near the rake.

EMERSON, Essays: First Series: Prudence. (1841) Quoted as a proverb.

7 It is better to go back than to go ahead badly. (Satiis est recurrere, quam currere male.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ix, No. 32. (1508) From the Greek of Lucan.

Better go back, than lose your self.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 897. (1732)

It is often better to return than to go on, if you find you have taken the wrong road.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 211. (1814)

DRAW BACK TO LEAP BETTER, see under LOOK.

8 Leave not your staff at home. (Absque baculo ne ingreditor.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, iv, 61. (1523)

9 Cast not forth the old water while the new come in.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 26. (c. 1595) From the Latin proverb, "Ne praesentem aquam effundas, priusquam aliam sis adeptus" (Don't throw away the water you have until you have obtained more).

Don't throw away dirty water till you have got clean.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 89. (1710)

Cast not out the foul water till you bring in the clean. Part not with that way of living you have, till you are sure of a better.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 80. (1721)

She was a fool to throw out her dirty water before she got clean.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

You know the old saying, "Don't throw out your dirty water until you get in fresh."

SAMUEL LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 29. (1842)

SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 8. (1869)

SHAW, Fanny's First Play. Act iii. (1911)

10 Alwaies measure manie, Before you cut anie.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 97. (1591)

Measure thrice, before thou shapest once.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 275. (1623)

Measure thrice what thou buyest, and cut it but once.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1670)

Score twice before you cut once.

RANDLE HOLME, The Academy of Armory. Bk. iii, ch. 6, p. 292. (1688)

Measure thrice, and cut once.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3381. (1732)

A word of timely caution . . . lies in the . . . Russian proverb: Measure thy cloth ten times; thou canst cut it but once.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 4. (1853)

11 Take heed of an ox before, of a horse behind, of a monk on all sides.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 899.

(1640) JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1670)

Beware of a mule's hind foot, a dog's tooth, and a woman's tongue.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 118. (1880)

The Boldest Farmer heeds the Cautious Rule

To stand Behind the Bull, Before the Mule.

GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 106. (1924)

12 Throw not Stones at your own Window.

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5041. (1732) THOSE WHO LIVE IN GLASS HOUSES, see under HOUSE.

13 Although it rain, throw not away thy watering pot.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 327. (1640)

Although the sun shine, leave not thy cloak at home.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 328.

When 'tis fair, be sure you take your coat with you.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734. The Italians say, "Nè di state, nè d'inverno, non andar senza mantello" (Neither in summer nor in winter go outside without your cloak).

Though the weather be fine, take your umbrella. (Ch'ing tai yü san.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2048. (1875)

1 It is good tying the sack before it is full.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 841. (1640) The Arabs say, "Light your lamp before it becomes dark."

2 Grasp not at much, for fear thou lovest all.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Sise. (1633)

3 Admire a small ship, but put your goods on a big one. (ῥῆ ὀλίγην αλγεῖν, μεγάλη δ' ἐνὶ φορτία θέσθαι.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 643. (c. 800 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 22F.

Praise the sea, on shore remaine.

Wonder at hills, keepe on the plaine.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 99. (1591) The Italians say, "Loda il mare, e tieniti alla terra"; the French, "Il faut louer la mer, et se tenir en terre."

Praise the mountaines, but loue the plaines.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 277. (1623)

Praise a hill, but keep below. Praise the sea, but keep on land.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. Nos. 490-1. (1640)

Commend the sea, but keep thyself ashoar. Commend the hills, but keep thyself on the plains.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, ii, 666. (1659)

Talk of Camps, but stay at Home.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4319. (1732) Speak well of the Highlands, but dwell in the Laigh [Lowlands].

A. CHEVIOT, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 303. (1896)

4 Cross the stream where it is ebbest [shallowest].

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Plutarch's Morals, p. 747. (1603)

O let me now perswade, be not extreame, Its easie (saies the Prouerb) to wade the streame, Where th' foord's a lowest, recollect to minde.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, A Strappado for the Diuell, 222. (1615)

5 Take things always by their smooth handle.

JEFFERSON, Writings. Vol. xvi, p. 111. (c. 1802)

6 If you are prudent, do not thrust your hand into the fire. (Prudens in flammam ne manum iniicito.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Apothegm. (c. A. D. 400) Quoting an old proverb.

7 Juke [duck] and let a jaw [wave] go o'er you. That is, prudently yield to a present torrent.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 189. (1721)

Jouk and let the jaw gae bye.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 25. (1818)

8 One must not jeer at the dogs till one is out of the village. (Il ne faut pas moquer des chiens qu'on—ne soit hors du village.)

LE ROUX, Dictionnaire Comique, ii, 182. (1786)

9 Theseus woulde not goe into the Laborinth without a threede that might shew him the way out.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 393. (1580)

If you go into a Labyrinth, take a Clew with you.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2752. (1732)

10 Do not step down unless you know the depth.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 803. (1842)

He who sees not the bottom, let him not pass the water. (Chi non vede il fondo, non passi l'acqua.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 76. (1853) An Italian proverb. The Scots have a variant, "If you dinna see the bottom, dinna wade."

Never venture out of your depth till you can swim.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 459. (1855)

11 The prudent man, when contention arises, steps aside; when peace prevails, he casts anchor there.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 96. (c. 1258)

PRUDERY

12 Prude. A bawd hiding behind the back of her demeanor.

AMBROSE BIERCE, The Devil's Dictionary. (1906) Elsewhere (Collected Works, viii), Bierce gives another definition: "A prude is one who blushes modestly at the indelicacy of her thoughts and virtuously flees from the temptation of her desires."

13 Propriety is the least of all laws, and the most observed. (La bienséance est la moindre de toutes les lois, et la plus suivie.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 447. (1665) Propriety in a poke bonnet.

J. J. CONNINGTON, Four Defences, p. 134. (1940)

14 Hence, far hence, ye prudes! (Procul hinc, procul este, severae!)

OVID, Amores. Bk. ii, eleg. 1, l. 3. (c. 13 B. C.)

Disdainful prudes, who ceaseless ply The superb muscle of the eye.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 119. (1737)

The pink of prudery.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 38. (1839)

15 What is Prudery? 'Tis a Beldam Seen with Wit and Beauty seldom.

POPE, Answer to Mrs. Howe. (1720)

In England, the garden of Beauty is kept By a dragon of prudery placed within call.

THOMAS MOORE, We May Roam Through This World. (a. 1852)

Prudery pretends to have only those passions that it cannot feel.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Art and Morality. (1888)

<sup>1</sup> Comstockery is the world's standing joke at the expense of the United States.

BERNARD SHAW, Letter, to the N.Y. Times, 26 Sept., 1905. The New York Public Library had just relegated Man and Superman to the reserved shelves, an action which Shaw thought Anthony Comstock had inspired, and so he wrote a letter to the London correspondent of the New York Times, which was cabled to New York and printed on the front page, occupying nearly two columns. It was Comstock who, as agent for the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, had caused the police to close Shaw's play, Mrs. Warren's Profession, in 1904. and "Comstockery" passed into the language

I propose to add to a dictionary that is already too long the word comstock. If you associate dirt, filth and obscenity with an idea, a picture, a statue, or anything, why—you simply comstock it.

BERNARR MACFADDEN, in Physical Culture, May, 1917.

<sup>2</sup> Will Honeycomb calls these over-offended ladies the outrageously virtuous.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 266. (1711) Strait-laced, but all-too-full in bud For puritanic stays.

TENNYSON, The Talking Oak, l. 59. (1842)

PRUNES

<sup>3</sup> At this every lady drew up her mouth as if going to pronounce the letter P.

GOLDSMITH, Letter to R. Bryanton, Sept., 1758. You have only, when before your glass, to keep pronouncing to yourself nimini-pimini—the lips cannot fail of taking the plie.

JOHN BURGUYNE, The Heiress. Act iii, sc. 2. (1786)

Father is rather vulgar, my dear. The word Papa, besides, gives a pretty form to the lips. Papa, potatoes, poultry, prunes, and prism are all very good words for the lips; especially prunes and prism. You will find it serviceable, in the formation of a demeanour, if you sometimes say to yourself in company—on entering a room, for instance—Papa, potatoes, poultry, prunes and prism, prunes and prism.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1857)

He has none of the "prunes and prism" style.

British Weekly, 28 Sept., 1888, p. 353/1.

Surface accomplishments, the prunes and prisms of education.

W. J. JENKINS, in American Ann. Deaf, April, 1892, p. 91.

No sign of the three p's about her—no peroxide, patchouli nor peau de soie.

O. HENRY, A Tempered Wind. (1908)

Aunt Rebecca's full of prunes.

GARDNER, Case of the Empty Tin, p. 75. (1941)

PRY

<sup>4</sup> I hope I don't intrude.

JOHN POOLE, Paul Pry. An apology on the lips of the inquisitive and intrusive Paul Pry. Produced at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket, London, 13 Sept., 1825. The phrase had been previously used in General John Burgoyne's comedy, The Maid of the Oaks, act ii, which was produced in 1774, and no doubt it occurred elsewhere as well, but it was Poole who gave it point and currency, and created a character whose name passed into proverbial use. "Paul Pry is on the spy."

He conceives that . . . the magistrate . . . ought to be . . . a Paul Pry in every house, spying, eaves-dropping.

MACAULAY, Essays: Southey, v. 348 (1829) Others . . . Paul Prying into the bedroom windows.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, A Diary in America. Ser i, i, 110. (1839)

Swift flies the tale of laughter, shame or folly. Caught by Paul Pry, and carried home to Polly.

CHARLES SPRAGUE, Curiosity, l. 329. (1841)

Who the deuce are you, cross-questioning and Paul-Prying?

HENRY KINGSLEY, The Hillyars and the Burtons. Ch. 30. (1865)

It will cure her of her Paul-Pry tricks.

MARY BRIDGMAN, Robert Lynne, ii, 1, 4. (1870) Blindness means to all men . . . continual and irritable curiosity—there is no Paul Pry like your blind man.

A. E. W. MASON, Four Feathers. Ch. 13. (1902)

PUBLIC

See also People

<sup>5</sup> Who serueth the commons serueth no body.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)

Ouvrage de commun ouvrage de nul; All niens worke is no mans worke; or that which is done for many is acknowledged by none. Qui sert commun nul ne le paye, et s'il defaut chascun l'abbaye; The service done to a people no man rewards, the disservices every man rails at.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Commun. (1611)

He that does anything for the Public, is accounted to do it for nobody.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2082. (1732)

He who serves the public hath but a scurvy master.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 401. (1855)

<sup>6</sup> To serve the Publick faithfully, and at the same time please it entirely is impracticable.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

<sup>7</sup> There is not a more mean, stupid, dastardly, pitiful, selfish, spiteful, envious, ungrateful animal than the Public. It is the greatest of cowards, for it is ashamed of itself.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Table Talk: On Living to One's-Self. (1821)

The public has neither shame nor gratitude.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 85. (1823) "The public pays with ingratitude" is a proverbial form.

<sup>1</sup> The Public is a fool.

POPE, Imitations of Horace: Epistles, II, 1, 94. (1732)

The public! How many fools does it take to make a public? (Le public! Combien faut-il de sots pour faire un public?)

SEBASTIEN CHAMFORT, Maximes. (a. 1794)

The Public is an old woman.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 1835.

The public's nothing better than a great baby.

THOMAS CHALMERS, Letter. (a. 1847) Quoted by RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies, I, 40. (1864)

<sup>2</sup> The public be damned! I'm working for my stockholders.

WILLIAM H. VANDERBILT, Retort, to Clarence Dresser, a reporter for the Chicago Daily News, 8 Oct., 1882. Vanderbilt, who was president of the New York Central Railroad, had explained that a fast train between New York and Chicago had been discontinued because it did not pay, and Dresser had asked, "Are you working for the public or for your stockholders?" There are various versions of the incident. Henry Clews is the authority for this one. See Chicago Daily News, 9 Oct., 1882; MELVILLE STONE, Fifty Years a Journalist, p. 116; and letters to N.Y. Times, 25 Aug., 1918; N.Y. Herald, 1 Oct., 1918; 28 Oct., 1918.

I realized that Vanderbilt had been all wrong when he said "The public be damned." What he ought to have said was "The public be dumb."

A. MERRITT, Seven Footprints to Satan. Ch. 3. (1928)

The public is damned, but it attends to the matter itself.

Meditations in Wall Street, p. 57. (1940)

PUBLICITY

<sup>3</sup> Without publicity there can be no public spirit, and without public spirit every nation must decay.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, 8 Aug., 1871.

<sup>4</sup> As gaslight is found to be the best nocturnal police, so the universe protects itself by pitiless publicity.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship. (1860)

The phrase, "Pitiless publicity," was used effectively by Woodrow Wilson while Governor of New Jersey in 1911, and later while President, to describe his policy toward spoilsmen and "practical politicians."

<sup>5</sup> In every field of human endeavor, he that is first must perpetually live in the white light of publicity.

THEODORE F. MACMANUS, The Penalty of Leadership. (Sat. Eve. Post, 2 Jan., 1915.)

PUDDING

<sup>6</sup> A podding merits double praise, a podding hath two ends.

THOMAS BASTARD, Chrestoleros. Bk. iii, epig. 12. (1598)

A pudding hath two ends, but a fool hath none.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

AH things have an end, and a pudding has two.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>7</sup> If you eat a pudding at home, the dog shall have the skin.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains Concerning Britain (1870), p. 325. (1605)

<sup>8</sup> Pudding is no meat with you.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 74. (1639)

<sup>9</sup> "Too much pudding will choke a dog," which is a caution against excess.

GEORGE COLMAN, JR., Random Records. (1830)

It was possible to choke a dog with a pudding.

WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year. Ch. 16. (1841)

Too much pudding would sate [surfeit] a dog.

BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 141. (1917)

<sup>10</sup> Puddings and paramours wald be hotelie handlit.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (c. 1595)

Puddings, and paramours, should be hotly handled. Puddings, when cold, are uneatable, and love, when coldrife, is near the breaking off.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 277. (1721)

<sup>11</sup> The proof of the pudding is in the eating.

HENRY GLAPTHORNE, The Hollander. Act iii. (1635) See under PROOF.

<sup>12</sup> This geare comth euen in puddyng time rightlie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
At the right moment.

Even in pudding time

Yonder cometh Ralph Roister, an old friend of mine!

ULPIAN FULWELL, Like Will to Like. (1568) In HAZLITT, Old Plays, iii, 319.

In pudding time you have spoken.

THOMAS NASHE, Works, iii, 169. (1596)

We come in pudding-time, for here's a duke.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. i, act v, sc. 2. (1604)

Oft things fall out in pudding time.

JOHN DAVIES, The Scourge of Folly: Proverbs, 41. (1611)

You are come in pudding-time.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

I want to have a little chat with you, and thought to have dropped in at pudding-time, as they say.

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, The Brothers. Act ii, sc. 4. (1769)

The good luck of settling concerns of the greatest consequence, exactly at the critical minute, is expressed by being "just in pudding time."

GEORGE COLMAN, JR., Humorous Works (Hotten), p. 421. (1830)

1 You are he that did eat the pudding and the bagg.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)
He claws it as Clayton claw'd the Pudding, when he eat Bag and all.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1826. (1732)

2 He that never eat flesh, thinks a pudding a dainty.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 126. (1721)

3 In nice balance, truth with gold she weighs,
And solid pudding against empty praise.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 54. (1728)

'Tis not improbable that a Man may receive more solid Satisfaction from Pudding, while he is living, than from Praise, after he is dead.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack: Preface. (1750)

An old proverb says, "Pudding still before praise!"

R. H. BARHAM, The Ingoldsby Legends: Housewarming. (1847)

4 Those that eat black-pudding will dream of the devil.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

A pudding is poison when it is too much boil'd.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii.

5 Settle the Wit, as Pudding settles Love.

SAMUEL WESLEY, Maggots, p. 41. (1685)
Pudding cold,

Is said you know in proverb old, To settle love.
EDWARD WARD, Works, iv, 39. (1709)

Cold pudding will settle your love.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

The cold plum-pudding, too, was a wonder, . . .
and there was enough of it to settle everybody's love.

ALBERT SMITH, The Christmas Tadpole. Ch. 60. (1848)

Take a little cold pudding to settle your love.

BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 110. (1917)

6 Would not a dog for anger swell to see a pudding creepe?

UNKNOWN, in Roxburghe Ballads (B.S.), i, 58. (c. 1630)

It would vex a Dogg to see a pudding creep.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 21. (1659)

PULL

7 You'll have quite the pull of me.

JOHN BURGOYNE, The Lord of the Manor. Act iii, sc. 1. (1781)

Pull, an important advantage possessed by one party over another.

J. H. VAUX, Flash Dictionary: Pull. (1812)

I have got a pull, and anyone who has got a pull can do a great deal.

W. H. STEAD, If Christ Came to Chicago, p. 51. (1894)

Finally his Father worked a Pull and got him a Job.

GEORGE ADE, More Fables, p. 62. (1900)

There were teachers who had secret 'pull.'

ROBERT HERRICK, Lilla, p. 102. (1923)

8 There is a pull from above and a push from below.

HUXLEY AND MARTIN, Elementary Biology. Ch. 8. (1875)

9 A long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together.

MARRYAT, Jacob Faithful. Ch. 12. (1834)

With a long pull, a strong pull, and a pull all together, round goes the wheel.

GILMOUR, Among the Mongols, p. 154. (1883)

PULSE

10 My pulse, as yours, doth temperately keep time,

And make as healthful music.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 140. (1600)

The alarum watch, your pulse.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 36. (1737)

11 There are worse occupations in this world than feeling a woman's pulse.

LAURENCE STERNE, A Sentimental Journey: The Pulse. (1768) Quoted by BLAKE. Corpse in the Snowman, p. 68. (1941)

PUMPKIN

12 Newhaven is celebrated for having given the name of pumkin-heads to all the New Englanders. It originated from the Blue Laws, which enjoin every male to have his hair cut round by a cap. When caps were not to be had, they substituted the hard shell of a pumkin.

S. A. PETERS, History of Connecticut, p. 195. (1781)

Beside each pumpkin-head peered the end of a rusty musket.

WASHINGTON IRVING, Knickerbocker's History of New York. Bk. iv, ch. 9. (1848)

Ef we hadn' . . . ben sich punkin-heads, as de sayin' is, we'd a seed de raf.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 18. (1884)

Regular pumpkin-heads!

HAROLD FREDERIC, The Deserter, p. 143. (1898)

13 Tom is 'some punkin-.''

W. T. PORTER, ed., Spirit of the Times, 18 April, 1846, p. 91/2.

I thought I was "some pumpkins" at dancing.

M. L. BYRN, An Arkansas Doctor, p. 97. (1851)

You're some punkins at a hundred yards dash.

LONDON, Valley of the Moon, p. 380. (1913)

PUN

14 The seeds of punning are in the minds of all men.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 61. (1711)

A turn for punning, call it Attic salt.

LORD BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 68. (1809)

1 A good pun may be admitted among the excellencies of lively conversation.

JAMES BOSWELL, Life of Samuel Johnson, 1791.

A pun is a noble thing per se. It fills the mind; it is as perfect as a sonnet; better.

LAMB, Letter to S. T. Coleridge. (c. 1810)

I never knew an enemy to puns who was not an ill-natured man.

LAMB, Letter to J. B. Dibdin, June, 1826.

2 A man who could make so vile a pun would not scruple to pick a pocket.

JOHN DENNIS, Remark. (c. 1693) See Gentleman's Magazine, vol. ii, l. 324.

A great Critick formerly . . . declared He that would pun would pick a Pocket.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. i, l. 63, note. (1729)

The critic [Dennis] immediately started up and left the room, swearing that any man who could make such an execrable pun would pick his pocket.

UNKNOWN, Article, in The Public Advertiser (London), 12 Jan., 1779.

But still a pun I do detest, . . .

They who've least wit can make them best.

WILLIAM COMBE, Dr. Syntax in Search of the Picturesque. Canto xxvi. (1812)

A pun is primâ facie an insult to the person you are talking with. It implies utter indifference to or sublime contempt for his remarks, no matter how serious. . . . A pun does not commonly justify a blow. But if a blow were given and death ensued, the jury . . . might . . . return a verdict of justifiable homicide.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 1. (1858)

i konsider punning a sort ov literary prostitushun in which future happynessz is swopped oph for the plezzure ov the moment.

HENRY W. SHAW, Josh Billings on Ice. (1868)

3 Of puns it has been said that those most dislike who are least able to utter them.

E. A. POE, Marginalia. (1844)

4 How every fool can play upon the word!

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii. 5, 48. (1597)

Puns . . . are the wit of words. [But] the wit of words is so miserably inferior to the wit of ideas that it is very deservedly driven out of good company.

SYDNEY SMITH, Sketches of Moral Philosophy Lect. 10. (1805)

PUNCTUALITY

5 Punctuality is the soul of business.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 3. (1843)

Punctuality is the very hinge of business.

W. H. PLATT, Business, p. 95. (1878)

6 Punctuality is the politeness of kings. (L'ex-actitude est la politesse des rois.)

LOUIS XVIII OF FRANCE. His best-known saying. (c. 1820) See Fleurs Historiques.

Punctuality is the virtue of princes.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Helen. Ch. 25. (1834)

Punctuality is the politeness of princes.

R. S. SURTEES, Handley Cross. Ch. 35. (1854)

"Punctuality," said Louis XIV, "is the politeness of kings." It is also the duty of gentlemen, and the necessity of men of business.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 9. The ascription to Louis XIV is an error.

Punctuality is a politeness which a man owes to his stomach.

ÉMILE GABORIAU, Other People's Money. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1867)

Punctuality has been called the politeness of kings. It's more than that: it's plain good business.

CARTER DICKSON, And So to Murder, p. 181. (1940)

7 Punctuality is a compliment you pay to the intelligent and a rebuke you administer to the stupid.

W. S. MAUGHAM, Lord Mountdrago. (1939)

8 He never broke his hour that kept his day.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 122. (1678)

If you're there before it's over, you're on time.

JAMES J. WALKER, Remark, to reporters, on arriving late at a dinner, Oct., 1931, while Mayor of New York City.

9 Too early to a meeting, the beer not yet brewed; too late, it is all drunk.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 66. (c. 900)

10 O. madam, punctuality is a species of constancy very unfashionable in a lady of quality.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act iv, sc. 3. (1777)

She is always a pattern of punctuality.

MISS BRADDON, Just as I Am. Ch. 45. (1880)

11 He was always late on principle, his principle being that punctuality is the thief of time.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. Ch. 3. (1891)

PUNISHMENT

12 As . . . Captain Whitby . . . used to say to his seamen (when "married to the gunner's daughter")—"two dozen, and let you off easy."

LORD BYRON, in MOORE, Letters, p. 139. (1821)

Lashed to a ship's gun for punishment.

I'll marry some of you young gentlemen to the gunner's daughter.

MARRYAT, Peter Simple. Ch. 32. (1833)

13 Let the punishment fit the offence. (Noxiae poena par esto.)

CICERO, De Legibus. Bk. iii, ch. 20. (c. 46 B. C.)

Care should be taken that the punishment does not exceed the offence. (Cavendum est ne maior poena quam culpa sit.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 25, sec. 89. (45 B. C.)

My punishment should match my offence. (Par delicto sit mea poena suo.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 578. (c. A. D. 9)

Like fault, like punishment.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works, p. 243. (1542)

Like punishment and equal pain,

Both key and keyhole do sustain.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 239. (1639)

My object all sublime

I shall achieve in time—

To let the punishment fit the crime,

The punishment fit the crime.

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act ii. (1885)

The punishment fits the crime.

H. C. BAILEY, The Bishop's Crime, p. 7. (1941)

1 Anger is to be very specially avoided in inflicting punishment. (Prohibenda autem maxime est ira in puniendo.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 25, sec. 89. (c. 45 B. C.)

The man who does wrong is to be corrected, not without chastisement, but without anger. (Non sine castigatione sed sine ira.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 55)

The old schoolmasters' flogging line was, "Castigo te non quod odio habeam, sed quod amem" (I chastise thee not because I have thee in hatred, but because I love thee).

2 The greatest incitement to sin is the hope of not being punished. (Maximam inlecebram esse peccandi, impunitatis spem.)

CICERO, Pro Milone. Ch. 16, sec. 43. (52 B. C.)

The fear of punishment may be necessary to the suppression of vice; but it also suspends the finer motives to virtue.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 131. (1823)

3 It is the slow horse which receives the whip, the worthless man who receives punishment.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 280. (1872)

4 He that chastiseth one amendeth many.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 32. (1633)

Cited by Ray and Fuller.

He that chastens one, chastens twenty.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 358. (1640)

5 Man punishes the Action, but God the Intention.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3332. (1732)

To punish and not prevent, is to labour at the Pump, and leave open the Leak.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5216.

6 Cain said unto the Lord, My punishment is greater than I can bear. (Maior est iniquitas mea, quam ut veniam merear.)

Old Testament: Genesis, iv, 13. (c. 550 B. C.)

7 Happy is he that chastens himself.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 143. (1640)

Corn is cleaned with wind, and the foul with chastenings.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 160.

8 There are in nature neither rewards nor punishments—there are consequences.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Some Reasons Why. (1881)

9 The power of punishment is to silence, not to confute.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, ix, 499. (c. 1776)

10 My father hath chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with scorpions. (Pater meus cecidit vos flagellis, ego autem caedam vos scorpionibus.)

Old Testament: I Kings, xii, 11. (c. 600 B. C.)

Also II Chronicles, x, 14.

"My father chastised you with whips, and I will chastise you with scorpions." So answered a foolish Hebrew king [Rehoboam], and lost an empire for his pains.

FROUDE, Short Studies, iii, 104. (1870)

11 Blyssed be the betynges and skowrynges that compellyn a chylde to declyne from his trespassys.

JOHN LYDGATE, tr., Pilgrimage of the Life of Man, l. 17000. (1426)

He scap'd a scouring.

MARTIN MARPRELATE, Epitome, p. 31. (1588)

I hardly escaped a scouring.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Livy, xxii, 457. (1600)

What a scowering have I scapt tonight.

DRYDEN, Wild Gallant. Act v, sc. 1. (1663)

[He] escaped a scouring for that time.

DEFOE, Memoirs of a Cavalier. Ch. 10. (1721)

'Fore God, Sir Hargrave, somebody has escaped a scouring, as the saying is.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, i, 318. (1753)

12 Punishment brings wisdom and makes us juster; it is the medicine for wickedness. (δικαιοτέρους ποιεῖ καὶ λατρικὴ γίγνεται πορνεία ἢ δίκη.)

PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 478D. (c. 385 B. C.) ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. bk. ii, repeats the statement, "Punishment is a sort of medicine."

Sin is the suppurating wound; punishment is the surgeon's knife.

ST. JOHN CHRYSOSTOM, Homilies, vi. (c. 388)

It is a common saying, Vexatio dat intellectum, Correction giveth understanding.

HUGH LATIMER, Sermons, p. 501. (1552)

Punishment has in it the notion of a remedy, and has the place of a mean, not of an end.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Moral Aphorisms. (1753)

13 Any evil-doer under punishment is a protection to the good. (Malus quicumque in poena est praesidium est bonis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 417. (c. 43 B. C.)

The punishment is lightened when the pain slackens. (Poena allevatur ubi relaxatur dolor.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 543.

It is punishment enough when the offender comes on his knees. (Poena sat est qui laesit cum supplex venit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 552.

When punishment is necessary, the fit time is best. (Quicquid vindicandum est, optima est occasio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 577.

1 Heavy is the punishment of the mind which regrets a deed after it is done. (Gravis animi poena est quem post facti paenitet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 231. (c. 43 B. C.)

It is more than punishment to succumb to wrong. (Plus est quam poena iniuriæ succumbere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 510.

It is a smaller thing to suffer punishment than to have deserved it. (Estque pati poenam, quam meruisse, minus.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 62. (A. D. 13)

Crime is all the shame of punishment.

DANIEL DEFOE, Hymn to the Pillory. (1703)

Not in the punishment, but in the crime, is the disgrace. (Non nella pena, | nell' delitto è la infamia.)

ALFIERI, Antigone. Act i, sc. 3. (c. 1780)

The rule now laid down is, that it is the crime and not the punishment, which makes a man infamous.

WILLIAM SELWYN, The Law of Nisi Prius, ii, 817. (1817)

2 He who hesitates to punish makes rascals more numerous. (Que ulcisci dubitat improbos plures facit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 580. (c. 43 B. C.)

Absence of punishment always encourages people to worse offences. (Impunitas semper ad deteriora invitāt.)

COKE, Institutes. Pt. i. (1628) A legal maxim. Every unpunished delinquency has a family of delinquencies.

HERBERT SPENCER, The Study of Sociology: Postscript. (1873) See also under JUDGMENT.

3 Many without punishment, none without sin.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1678)

4 The time that precedes punishment is the severest part of it. (Quod antecedit tempus, maxima venturi supplicii pars est.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. ii, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 54)

Extreme punishment should be allotted only to extreme crime. (Ultima supplicia sceleribus ultimis ponat.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, ch. 6, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 55)

Good luck frees many men from punishment, but no man from fear. (Multos fortuna liberat poena, metu neminem.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, sec. 15. (c. A. D. 64)

5 As Plato says, a sensible man does not punish a man because he has sinned, but in order to keep him from sin. (Ut Plato ait, nemo prudens punit, quia peccatum est, sed de peccatur.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. i, ch. 19, sec. 7. (c. A. D. 55)

Quoting PLATO, Laws, bk. ix, sec. 934A.

Men are not hanged for stealing horses, but that horses may not be stolen.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims. Works, p. 229. (1693)

The object of punishment is prevention from evil; it can never be made impulsive to good.

HORACE MANN, Lectures on Education. Lect. 7. (1845)

6 All punishments the world can render
Serve only to provide th' offender;
The will gains strength from treatment horrid,
As hides grow harder when they're curried.

JOHN TRUMBULL, McFingal. (1782)

The world does not grow better by force or by the policeman's club.

W. J. GAYNOR, Letters and Speeches, p. 314. (c. 1911)

Punishment is always a two-edged sword.

BURLEIGH AND BIERSTADT, Punishment. Act i. (1916)

7 The execution of malefactors is not more for the credit of governors than the death of patients is for the credit of physicians.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Moral Aphorisms. (1753)

When we execute a murderer it may be that we fall into the same mistake as a child that strikes a chair it has collided with.

G. C. LICHTENBERG, Reflections. (1799)

The best of us being unfit to die, what an inexpressible absurdity to put the worst to death!

HAWTHORNE, Journals, 13 Oct., 1851

II—Punishment: Its Certainty

See also Retribution

8 God will suffer no evil to remain unpunished.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 177. (1574) Pettie, tr.

9 Rarely does punishment, although its foot is lame, abandon the pursuit of the criminal in front of it. (Raro antecedentem scelestum | deseruit pede poena claudō.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 2, l. 31. (23 B. C.)

The thief may escape punishment two or three times.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 7a. (c. 450)

The sword of heaven is not in haste to smite, Nor yet doth linger.

(La spada di quassù non taglia ni fretta, nè tardo.)

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xxii, l. 16. (c. 1300)

Cary, tr. The Italians also say, "Il castigo puo differirsi ma non si toglie" (Punishment may be deferred, but it is not put off forever).

Where vice is, vengeance follows.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 325. (1639)

Punishment is lame, but it comes.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 251. (1640)

10 Punishment follows close on guilt. (Culpam poena premit comes.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 5, l. 24. (23 B. C.)

Punishment will follow crime. (Crimen poena sequatur.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 90. (c. A. D. 120) Hesiod corrects the saying of Plato that "punishment follows quickly on the heels of sin," for he says that "it is born on the instant together with sin itself."

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1580)

Crime and punishment grow out of one stem.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Compensation. (1841)

1 Punishment with creeping pace catches up with the offender in the moment of his haste. (Poena ad malum serpens iam cum properat venit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 509. (c. 43 B. C.)

2 Never yet has a sinner escaped punishment. (μήπω γενέσθαι ποῦτος ἀνοσίου βροτῶν.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus Coloneus, l. 281. (c. 408 B. C.) Even if at first we hide the perjury, yet in the end comes Punishment on noiseless feet. (Si quis primo periuria celat, | sera tamen tacitis Poena venit pedibus.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. 9, l. 3. (19 B. C.)

3 Each of us suffers his own Spirit. (Quisquis suos patimur Manis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 743. (19 B. C.)

Crime can never go unpunished, since the punishment of crime lies in the crime itself. (Nec ullum scelus . . . inpunitum est, quoniam sceleris in scelere supplicium est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xcvi, sec. 14. (c. A. D. 64)

PURITAN

4 To Banbury came I, O profane one,
Where I saw a Puritane one
Hanging of his cat on Monday,
For killing of a mouse on Sunday.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Itinerarium. (1638)

5 Bear-baiting was esteemed heathenish and unchristian; the sport of it, not the inhumanity, gave offense.

DAVID HUME, The History of Great Britain. Vol. i, ch. 62. (1754)

The Puritan hated bear-baiting, not because it gave pain to the bear, but because it gave pleasure to the spectators.

MACAULAY, History of England. Vol. i, ch. 2. (1849)

Puritanism restricted natural pleasures; it substituted the Jeremiad for the Paean.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Way of All Flesh. Ch. 5. (Published posthumously in 1903.)

6 The Puritan's idea of religious liberty was to find some place where he could give his own intolerance a little more room.

BILL NYE, as quoted by A. E. WIGGAM, The New Decalogue of Science, p. 84.

7 This name Puritaine is very aptly given to these men, not because they be pure, . . . but bicause they think them selues to be mundi-ores ceteris, more pure than others.

JOHN WHITGIFT, An Answer to a Certen Libel, p. 18. (1572)

I knowe they are commonly called Puritans. . . . They take themselves to be pure, when they are filthy in God's sight.

THOMAS NASHE, Pasquil's Returne. (1589)

Pure in show, an upright holy man,
Corrupt within—and called a Puritan.

UNKNOWN, A Song of the Puritan. (c. 1605)
"The Puritan always thinks below the belt."

PURITY

See also Chastity

8 The real Simon Pure.

SUSANNAH CENTLIVRE, A Bold Stroke for a Wife. Act v, sc. 1. (1710)

9 Purity is to have righteous thoughts. (ἀγνείη δ' ἐστὶ φρονεῖν δαία.)

CLEMENT OF ALEXANDRIA, Miscellanies, v, 652. (c. A. D. 200) Quoting an inscription on the temple of Epidaurus by an unknown author.

Purity is the feminine, Truth the masculine, of honour.

HARE, Guesses at Truth. Pt. i. (1827)

Purity Is obscurity.

OGDEN NASH, On a Wicked World. (1940)

10 The hard may be rubbed without losing its substance; the white may be steeped without losing its purity.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.) Citing a much older Chinese proverb.

11 If guiltlesse hand the Altar touch,
No offering, cost it ne'er so much,
Shall better please our God offended,
Than corne with crackling-corne-salt blended.
(Immunis aram si tetigit manus, non sumptuosa blandior hostia,
mollivit aversos Penates farre pio et saliente mica.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode xxiii, l. 17. (23 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 56. The translation is Florio's. The Latin proverb is, "Puras Deus non plenas aspicit manus" (God regards pure hands, not full).

Blessed is he who hath clean hands and a pure heart, who preserveth his soul from evil.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, lxxxvii, 14. (c. 622) He who keeps pure his soul shall attain to happiness.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xci, 9.

12 Blessed are the undefiled in the way. (Beati immaculati in via.)

Old Testament: Psalms, 119, 1. (c. 350 B. C.)

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God. (μακάριοι οἱ καθαροὶ τῇ καρδίᾳ, ὅτι αὐτοὶ τὸν θεὸν ὄψονταί.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 8. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Beati mundo corde: quoniam ipsi Deum videbunt."

<sup>1</sup> With the pure thou wilt shew thyself pure.
(Cum sancto sanctus eris.)

Old Testament: II Samuel, xxii, 27. (c. 600 B. C.)

Psalms, xviii, 26. (c. 350 B. C.)

The better a man is, the less ready is he to suspect wickedness in others. (Ut quisque est vir optimus, ita difficillime esse alios improbos suspicatur.)

CICERO, Ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. i, epis. 1, sec. 4. (c. 60 B. C.)

Unto the pure all things are pure: but into them that are defiled . . . is nothing pure. (πάντα καθάρᾳ τοῖς καθαροῖς τοῖς δὲ μεμιασμένοις . . . οὐδὲν καθάρῳ.)

New Testament: Titus, i, 15. (c. A. D. 62) The Vulgate is, "Omnia munda mundis: coinquinatis autem, nihil est mundum." HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 346, gives the Latin proverb as "Puris omnia pura."

To the pure all things are pure. (Omnia munda mundis.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. No. xxii, sec. 13. (A. D. 384) Frequently quoted, recently by A. A. FAIR, Double or Quits, p. 93 (1941), and by NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 192. (1941)

To the unconsciously indelicate all things are delicate.

MARK TWAIN, A Connecticut Yankee, p. 32. (1889)

A pure man seeing it calls it pure.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 373. (1938)

A Chinese proverb.

To the pure all things are slightly indecent.

MARGERY ALLINGHAM, Black Plumes, p. 61. (1940)

To the pure, my dear man, all things are impure.

ANTHONY BOUCHIER, The Case of the Baker Street Irregulars, p. 55. (1940) "I have a rankling suspicion that that paraphrase has been made often before."

To the immature, all apples are green, or some such proverb.

MARION RANDOLPH, Grim Grow the Lilacs, p. 136. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> The pure in heart fear no thunderbolts. (Hsin chêng pu p'a lei ta.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2431. (1875)

<sup>3</sup> So . . . pure, that precious perle ther hit was pygt.

UNKNOWN, Early English Alliterative Poems, 227. (c. 1340)

As pure in thought as angels are.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Jacqueline, l. 70. (1813)

There's a woman like a dew-drop, she's so purer than the purest.

ROBERT BROWNING, A Blot in the 'Scutcheon. Act i, sc. 3. (1842)

Pure as the lily's inmost leaf.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Danites. Act iv. (1877)

She was pure as the snow, but she drifted.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 493. (1940)

Ogden seems to be pure as a lily.

NGAIO MARSH, Death in Ecstasy, p. 251. (1941)

PURPOSE

See also Aim, Intention, Motive

<sup>4</sup> Nothing to the purpose. (οὐδὲν πρὸς ἔπος.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Ecclesiazusae, l. 751. (c. 393 B. C.) PLATO, Euthydemus, 295C, has μηδὲν πρὸς ἔπος. There are a number of Greek proverbial phrases to express irrelevance: Lucian's "In no relation to the chord" (οὐδὲν πρὸς τὴν χορδήν); Zenobius' (v, 40) "Nothing to Dionysius" (οὐδὲν πρὸς Διονύσιον); Aristophanes' "Touching neither heaven nor earth" (οὔτε γῆς οὔτε οὐρανοῦ ἀπτεται); Lucian's "What's that to do with Hermes?" (τί πρὸς τὸν Ἑρμῆν); and the anonymous "What's that to do with bread?" (τί πρὸς τὰ ἄλφιστα;).

It would be answering no purpose.

FRANCES BURNAY, Cecilia. Bk. v, ch. 2. (1782)

<sup>5</sup> A man without a purpose is soon down at zero. Better to have a bad purpose than no purpose at all.

CARLYLE, Remark, to Churton Collins. (a. 1866)

<sup>6</sup> The secret of success is constancy to purpose.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, in London, 24 June, 1872.

<sup>7</sup> Purpois dois change as wynd or rane.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, Poems, lxxvi, 27. (1510)

A wise man ought to be ashamed to change purpose.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

A wise man needs not blush for changing his purpose.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 615. (1640)

<sup>8</sup> Good Purposes should be the Directors of good Actions, not the Apology for bad.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1728. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> However brilliant an action may be, it should not be accounted great when it is not the result of a great purpose. (Quelque éclatante que soit une action, elle ne doit pas passer pour grande lorsqu'elle n'est pas l'effet d'un grand dessein.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 160. (1665)

<sup>10</sup> His pestiferous purpose.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 82. (1576)

<sup>11</sup> To as much purpose as to give a goose hay.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 190. (1670)

To as much purpose as the geese slur [slide] on the ice.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 190. (1670)

To no more purpose than to beat your heels against the ground, or wind.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 190. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5209. (1732)

<sup>12</sup> Purpose without power is weakness; power without purpose is fatuity.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 59. (c. 1258)

<sup>1</sup> His wife . . . On purpose shut the doors.
SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iv, 3, 92. (1593)

She did it on purpose.

H. RIDER HAGGARD, Colonel Quaritch, V.C. Ch. 30. (1888)

<sup>2</sup> Infirm of purpose.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, ii, 2, 52. (1606)

<sup>3</sup> My purpose is, indeed, a horse of that colour.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 3, 181. (1599)

<sup>4</sup> I doubt not thro' the ages one increasing purpose runs.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 137. (1842)

<sup>5</sup> To the purpose, as priests praise God in the morning.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 474. (1623)

The master-piece of man is to live to the purpose.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

I'll tell you a story to the purpose.

DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1719)

PURSE

<sup>6</sup> When purse is heavy oftetime the heart is light.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, Egloges, p. 29. (c. 1510)

An heauie purse maketh a mans heart light.

UNKNOWN, Pedlers Prophecic, l. 1591. (1595)

A light purse makes a heavy heart.

FRANCIS THYNNE, Emblemes and Epigrames, p. 59. (1600) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 241. (1732)

A heavy purse makes a light heart.

BEN JONSON, The New Inne. Act i, sc. 1. (1629)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 114. (1670)

When thy purse is light, then will thy heart be heavy.

EDWARD WARD, Female Policy, p. 36. (1716)

Light purse, heavy heart.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733

<sup>7</sup> A full purse begetting a stout stomach.

RICHARD CAREW, Survey of Cornwall, p. 315. (1602)

A full purse makes the mouth to speak.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 22. (1670)

A full purse makes the mouth run over.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 123. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> The master-organ, soul's-seat, and true pineal gland of the body social.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Ch.1. (1836)

<sup>9</sup> The purse of your Catullus is full of cobwebs. (Tui Catulli | plenus sacculus est araneorum.)

CATULLUS, Odes. No. xiii, l. 7. (c. 57 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> But-if a mannes soule were in his purs;
For in his purs he sholde y-punished be.
"Purs is the erchedeknes helle." seyde he.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: Prologue, l. 658. (c. 1386) "Erchedeknes": archdeacon's.

<sup>11</sup> 'Tis not all saved that's put in the purse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 45. (1639)

All is not gain that is got into the purse.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iii, ch. 30. (1767)

<sup>12</sup> Let your purse be your master.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 129. (1639)

<sup>13</sup> He that shows his purse longs to be rid of it.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 176. (1639)

He that shows his purse bribes the thief.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 129. (1721)

He that sheweth his Wealth to a Thief, is the Cause of his own Pillage.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2299. (1732)

<sup>14</sup> He hath left his purse in his other hose.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 244. (1639)

He left his purse in his other breeks. A taunt to him that wants money to pay his reckoning.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 138. (1721)

He hath left his Purse in his other Breeches.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1889. (1732)

<sup>15</sup> He that hath no money needeth no purse.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 138. (1633)

<sup>16</sup> An empty purse fills the face with wrinkles.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 161. (1633)

A toom [empty] purse makes a blate [bashful] merchant.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 356. (1678)

An empty Purse frights away Friends.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 597. (1732)

See also FRIENDS AND ADVERSITY.

An empty purse causes a full heart.

FIELDING, Don Quixote in England. Act i, sc. 6. (1734)

An empty purse and a new house make a man wise, but too late.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1813)

An empty purse is nothing but a piece of leather (Bolsa sin dinero, llamala cuero.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 227. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

Don't fling away the empty wallet.

J. C. HARRIS, Plantation Proverbs. (1880)

<sup>17</sup> The body is well but the purse is sick. (Corpus valet sed aegrotat crumena.)

ERASMUS, Familiar Colloquies. (1524)

I know the disease, you have a flux in your purse. (J'entens le mal: vous avez vn fluz de bourse.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1532)

He is purse-sick and lacks a physician.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

I can get no remedy against this consumption of the purse: borrowing only lingers and lingers it out, but the disease is incurable.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 2, 263. (1598)

<sup>18</sup> Ask thy Purse what thou shouldst buy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 820. (1732)

If you put nothing into your Purse, you can take nothing out.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2781.

Keep your Purse and your Mouth close.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3122. The French say, "Selon ta bourse gouverne ta bouche" (According to your purse govern your mouth).

The Purse-Strings are the most common Ties of Friendship.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4727. The Germans say, "Die beste Freunde stehen im Beutel" (The best friends are in the purse).

Wrinkled Purse make wrinkled Faces.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5836.

A light Purse is a heavy Curse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6493.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1745.

1 The purs is threede bare.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

Ye would by my purs, geue me a purgacion.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11.

Giue his masters purse a purgacion.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, Bulwarke of Defence Against All Sicknesse, fo. 27. (1562)

2 Where would you wish to be now, or what to see,

Without the Fortunate Purse to bear your charges.

BEN JONSON, The Fortunate Isles. (1626) The inexhaustible purse of Fortunatus, a hero of medieval legend.

3 O'er fine a purse to put a plack [one third of a penny] in. Spoken when one builds a magnificent house upon a small estate.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 272. (1721)

4 Betuene the porse and the wombe of the gloutone . . . strife.

DAN MICHEL, Ayenbite of Inwyt [E.E.T.S.], p. 53. (1340)

There is nothing in this worlde that agreeth wurs, Then dooeth a Ladies hert and a beggers purse.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

In his Epigrams (1562), p. 134, Heywood changes "ladies" to "lordes."

His purse and his palate are ill met. Spoken when a poor man loves to eat good meat.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 154. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2513. (1732) The American equivalent of "He has a champagne appetite and a beer salary."

5 Let us all have one purse. (Marsupium unum sit omnium nostrum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, i, 14. (c. 350 B.C.)

6 The rusty sword and empty purse plead performance of covenants.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1670)

Defoe was fond of another sword and purse maxim, "It is not the longest sword but the longest purse that conquers," and used it several times.

7

That is but an empty purse that is full of other men's money.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 194. (1678)

That is but an empty Purse, that is full of other Folks Money.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4352. (1732)

8 Open thy purse, and then open thy sack. Open thy purse to receive thy money, and then open thy sack to deliver thy goods.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 402. (1678)

9 No eyes in your head, nor no money in your purse?

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 6, 148. (1605)

10 Our purses shall be proud, our garments poor.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iv, 3, 173. (1594)

Who steals my purse steals trash.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 157. (1605) See under NAME.

11 [They] Round me dyd cluster with purse and person.

RICHARD STANYHURST, tr., Aeneid, ii, 69. (1582)

My purse, my person, my extremest means,

Lie all unlock'd to your occasions.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, i, 1, 138. (1597)

You feel so keenly in your own purse and person the consequence of inattention to business.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 10. (1838)

12 Better the purse than body starue of twayne.

GEORGE WHETSTONE, Promos and Cassandra. Pt. ii, i, vii. (1578)

If ye hae no purse to fine, ye hae flesh to pine.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 27. (1818)

13 Do thow better, do thow worse,

Do after hym that beryth the purse.

UNKNOWN. Douce MS, 52. (c. 1350)

Be it better or be it worse do after hym that berith the purse.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-Place Book, p. 130. (c. 1530)

It is saide be it better be it wurs,

Dooe ye after him that beareth the purs.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

It is an old prouerbe, Be it better, or be it worse. Please you the man that beares the purse.

THOMAS DELONEY, Thomas of Reading. Ch. 8. (c. 1600)

As the proverb saith, Be it better or worse, we must be ruled by him that beares the purse.

DANIEL ROGERS, Matrimonial Honour, p. 85. (1642)

Be it better, be it worse,

Be ruled by him that bears the Purse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6387. (1732)

My puir mither used aye to tell me, Be it better, be it worse, Be ruled by him that has the purse.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 27. (1818)

SILK PURSE OUT OF SOW'S EAR, see under SOW.

Q

QUALITY

<sup>1</sup> Don't value a man for the quality he is of, but for the qualities he possesses.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

<sup>2</sup> We ask not quality but quantity. (Quaerimus non quale sit quidque, sed quanti.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxv, sec. 10. (c. A. D. 64) Excellence resides in quality, not in quantity. (No consiste la perfeccion en la cantidad, sino en la calidad.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 27. (1647)

Quality without quantity is little thought of.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 282. (1721)

<sup>3</sup> Come, give us a taste of your quality.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 452. (1600)

Hans had given me a touch of his quality by spearing a bird on the wing.

ELISHA KANE, Arctic Explorations. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1856)

[He] asked for a taste of his quality.

JOHN DORAN, Annals of the Stage, p. 369. (1863)

QUANDARY

<sup>4</sup> The captaine . . . standeth in a quandare, not knowing what to doe.

JOHN GRANGE, Golden Aphroditis, sig. D3. (1577)

Thou makest me in a greater quandary.

UNKNOWN, Misogonus. Act iii, sc. 1. (1577)

Euphues . . . departed, leaving the olde gentleman in a great quandarie.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 45. (1579)

You have brought her into such a canaries as 'tis wonderful. The best courtier of them all . . . could never have brought her to such a canary.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 2, 61. (1601)

QUARREL

<sup>5</sup> Quarrel about the donkey's shadow. (περί δρου σκιᾶς.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 191. (422 B. C.)

To quarrel about nothing. See under Ass.

Thou! why, thou wilt quarrel with a man that hath a hair more, or a hair less, in his beard than thou hast. . . . Thy head is as full of quarrels as an egg is full of meat.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 1, 18. (1595)

Though scabby-headed, he quarrels about the comb.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 504. (1817)

He quarrels about something of no importance to him. The Germans say, "Sie streiten um ein Ei, und lassen die Henne fliegen" (They quarrel about an egg and let the hen fly). The French say, "Une querelle d'Allemand" (A German quarrel), a trumped-up quarrel.

<sup>6</sup> When two quarrel, he who keeps silence first is the more praiseworthy.

Babylonian Talmud: Kiddushin, fo. 71b. (c. 450) Sometimes given as, "Who is first silent in a quarrel comes of a good family."

<sup>7</sup> Quarrel not with a loud-tongued man, and lay not wood on fire. (Non litiges cum homini linguato, et non strues in ignem illius ligna.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), viii, 3. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

A hasty quarrel leadeth to bloodshed.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxviii, 11.

Fists ready and good sense absent.

JOHN LEWIS BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 331. (1817).

<sup>8</sup> The quarrel past, its bitter words ignore: 'Tis ill to remember wrath when strife is o'er. (Litis praeteritae noli maledicta referre: post inimicitias iram meminisse malorum est.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 15. (c. 175 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> It is better to quarrel with a knave than a fool.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. ii, No. 67. (1820)

<sup>10</sup> When we quarrel, how we wish we had been blameless!

EMERSON, Journals. Vol. ix, p. 497. (c. 1870)

Some strand of our own misdoing is involved in every quarrel.

R. L. STEVENSON, Prince Otto. (1885)

<sup>11</sup> A quarrelsome Man has no good Neighbours.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

<sup>12</sup> Those, who in quarrels interpose, Must often wipe a bloody nose.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Mastiff. Ser. i, fab. 34. (1727)

<sup>13</sup> When the Frog and the Mouse would take up the Quarrel, the Kite decided it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5586. (1732)

<sup>14</sup> No Quarrel ever stirred Before the Second Word.

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, A Poet's Proverbs, p. 39. (1924) The Japanese say, "The second word makes the quarrel."

<sup>15</sup> Quarrels do not last long if the wrong is only on one side. (Les querelles ne dureraient pas longtemps si le tort n'était que d'un côté.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 496. (1665)

The Dutch say, "When two quarrel both are to blame."

Quarrels never could last long, If on one side only lay the wrong.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.

<sup>1</sup> He does not quarrel, therefore no one in the world can quarrel with him. (Fu wéi pu tseng, ku' t'ien hsia moh neng 'yü tzü tseng.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-tek-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 22. Repeated in sec. 66. (c. 550 B.C.) Carus, tr.

It takes two to make a quarrel. (ἐπὶ γὰρ οὐ πρόσεστι ραῦρα.)

SOCRATES, Apothegm. (c. 406 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Bk. ii, sec. 36.

A quarrel is quickly settled when deserted by one party. (Cadit statim stimultas ab altera parte deserta.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, ch. 34, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 55) Two make a quarrel.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 73. (c. 900)

There must be two at least to a Quarrel.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4942. (1732) There must always be two parties to a quarrel, says the old adage.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 15. (1838)

It takes two to make a quarrel.

KINGSLEY, Geoffrey Hamlyn. Ch. 30. (1859)

"It takes two to make a quarrel," . . . it takes two to make peace also.

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, Romans, p. 298. (1912)

In spite of the proverb, it takes in reality only one to make a quarrel. It is useless for the sheep to pass resolutions in favour of vegetarianism, while the wolf remains of a different opinion.

DEAN W. R. INCE, Outspoken Essays, p. 42. (1919) These misguided fellows [husbands] are under the impression that it takes two to make a quarrel.

OGDEN NASH, I Never Even Suggested It. (1938)

Mr. Nash adds, "In real life it takes only one to make a quarrel."

<sup>2</sup> More quick-tempered than curs, more quarrelsome than game-cocks. (φιλονεικότεροι δὲ τῶν ἀλεκτρυόνων.)

LUCIAN, Piscator. Sec. 34. (c. A. D. 180)

As quarrelous as the weasel.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iii, 4, 162. (1609)

<sup>3</sup> Above all, avoid quarrels caused by wine. (Iurgia praecipue vino stimulata caveto.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 591. (c. 1 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> Quarrelling in place of friendship is a foolish thing.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 31. (c. 3550 B.C.) Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

<sup>5</sup> Quarrelers do not live long.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 8. (1828) The Swedes say, "Quarrel and strife make short life."

<sup>6</sup> It is easier to refrain than to retreat from a quarrel. (Facilius est se a certamine abstinere quam abducere.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, ch. 8, sec. 8. (c. A. D. 55)

There is an old proverb that "the tired man seeks a quarrel," but it applies just as well to the hungry and thirsty man. (Vetus dictum est a lasso rixam quaeri; acque autem et ab esuriente et a sitiente.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, ch. 9, sec. 5.

<sup>7</sup> We will compound this quarrel.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 2, 27. (1594)

If you'll patch a quarrel.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 2, 52. (1606)

<sup>8</sup> Beware

Of entrance to a quarrel; but being in, Bear 't that the opposed may beware of thee. SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 65. (1600)

<sup>9</sup> Thrice is he arm'd that hath his quarrel just.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iii, 2, 233. (1590) See under JUST.

No quarrel, but a slight contention.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, i, 2, 6. (1591)

<sup>10</sup> Launcelot and I are out.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, iii, 5, 34. (1597)

Things at home are crossways, and Betsy and I are out.

WILL CARLETON, Betsy and I Are Out. (1873)

<sup>11</sup> In a false quarrel there is no true valour.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, v, 1, 120. (1598) Quoted by BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 423. (1855)

<sup>12</sup> For souls in growth, great quarrels are great emancipations.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts. (1931)

<sup>13</sup> In our own quarrel we can see nothing truly.

STEVENSON, Across the Plains. Ch. 12. (1892)

<sup>14</sup> I won't quarrel with my bread and butter.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) I won't quarrel with my means of support.

To quarrel with one's bread and butter.

RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Ch. 5. (1748)

How did she show superior sense by thus quarrelling with her bread and butter?

WILLIAM CRAIG, The Mirror. No. 69. (1780)

He who turns up his nose at his work quarrels with his bread and butter.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 19. (1869)

Edgar had shown his wisdom in not "quarreling with his bread and butter."

PAYN, Thicker than Water. Ch. 38. (1883)

One mustn't quarrel with one's bread and butter.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, Easy to Kill, p. 114. (1939)

<sup>15</sup> The quarrels of those nearest akin are the sharpest. (Accerima proximorum odia.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. iv, sec. 70. (c. A. D. 109)

<sup>16</sup> He who knows when to speak and when to be silent will never be drawn into a quarrel.

UNKNOWN, Niti Sastras. (c. 1250)

<sup>17</sup> The seyde parson . . . hathe pekyd a quarrel to on Mastyr Recheforthe.

UNKNOWN, The Paston Letters, i, 87. (c. 1449)

He begynneth to pyke a quarel of my wordes.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 128. (1519)
As I am not minded to picke a thanke with the one, so am I not determined to picke a quarrell with the other.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 107. (1579)
Ready to pick any quarrel with her.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, History of Moderation, p. 75. (1669)

QUARTER

1
M. le Grand is about to pass a bad quarter of an hour. (Un mauvais quart d'heure.)

LOUIS XIII OF FRANCE, Remark, referring to the execution of Cinq-Mars, in 1642. See LADY JACKSON, Old Paris, i, 227, who asserts that the French proverb was first used on this occasion.

Rabelais's Quarter of an Hour, that is, when the reckoning is to be paid.

AMÉDÉE FRÉZIER, Voyage to the South Sea, p. 110. (1712)

When I reached the station . . . I had an unpleasant quarter of an hour.

JOHN BALL, Notes of a Naturalist in South America, p. 338. (1887)

He will have a rather nasty quarter of an hour.

W. E. NORRIS, Marietta's Marriage. Ch. 31. (1897)

This is my bad quarter of an hour.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, Elizabeth the Queen. Act iii. (1930)

2
I ask no quarter. (οὐδέν σου παρακαλῶ.)
PLATO, The Republic. Bk.i,sec.341C.(c.375 B. C.)
It is grown into a proverb, I'll give you no more quarter than a dog does a wolf.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Erasmus' Colloquies, p. 555. (1725)

QUEER

3
I am as queer as Dick's hatband; that is, out of spirits, or don't know what ails me.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue: Dick. (1796)

Who was that other Dick who wore so queer a hat-band that it has ever since served as a standing comparison for all queer things?

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Ch. 125. (1837)

As queer as Dick's hatband, made of pea-straw, that went nine times round, and would not meet at last.

BAKER, Northants Glossary: Dick. (1854)

As queer as Dick's hatband, that went nine times round but was too short to tie.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 25. (1917)
There are many other forms.

4
You are in the wrong box—planted in Queer Street, as we say in London.

LYTTON, Ernest Maltravers. Bk. iv, ch. 7. (1837)

Queer Street is full of lodgers just at present.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk.iii, ch.1. (1865)

The more it looks like Queer Street, the less I ask.

R. L. STEVENSON, Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1886)

QUESTION

5
Begging or assuming the point at issue consists (to take the expression in its widest sense) in failing to demonstrate the required proposition. (τὸ δ' ἐν ἀρχῇ αἰτεῖσθαι.)

ARISTOTLE, Organon: Prior Analytics. Bk. ii, ch. 16 (c. 340 B. C.) The proverbial form is ἀρχῇ αἰτεῖν, of which the Latin is the well known "Petitio principii," to beg the chief point, that is, to assume without proof.

I say this is still to begge the question.

WILLIAM CLARKE, in Conferences Held in the Tower of London, iv, Ff iij. (1581)

Begging the question is when the thing to be proved is assumed in the premises.

THOMAS REID, Aristotle's Logic. Ch. v, sec. 3. (1788)

The vulgar equivalent for petitio principii is begging the question.

FRANCIS BOWEN, A Treatise on Logic. Ch. 9, p. 294. (1864)

6
He that nothing questioneth, nothing learneth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2241. (1732)

7
The questions of the wise are indicative of wisdom.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar-ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 3. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr. Bacon puts it in slightly different form, "Prudens interrogatio quasi dimidium sapientiae" (A prudent question is, as it were, half of wisdom).

8
Question for question is all fair, you know.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act i, sc. 2. (1773)

Ask me no questions and I'll tell you no fibs.

GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act iii. See under LIE.

9
Who will burden himself with your liturgical parterre when the burning questions [brennende Fragen] of the day invite to very different toils?

KARL RUDOLF HAGENBACH, Grundlinien der Liturgik und Homiletik. (c. 1843)

The burning question of the day.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Commons, March, 1873.

Take any of the burning questions of the day.

MAX MÜLLER, India: What Can It Teach Us, i, 32. (a. 1883)

A burning question. A subject that causes keen and general debate, esp. by the public.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Burning. (1941) O.E.D. says that a burning question is "one that is under hot discussion."

10
Avoid a questioner, for such a man is also a tattler. (Percontatorem fugito; nam garrulus idem est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18. l. 69. (20 B. C.)

Questioning is not a mode of conversation among gentlemen.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1776.

1 A question must be decided by knowledge and not by numbers, if it is to have a right decision. (ἐπιστήμη γάρ, οἶμαι, δεῖ κρινεσθαι ἀλλ' οὐ πλῆθει τὸ μέλλον καλῶς κριθήσεσθαι.)

PLATO, Laches. Sec. 184E. (c. 375 B. C.)

Men are never so likely to settle a question rightly as when they discuss it freely.

MACAULAY, Essays: Southey's Colloquies. (a. 1859)

No question is ever settled

Until it is settled right.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, Settle the Question Right. (1886) The phrase has been attributed to Abraham Lincoln, referring to the slavery question.

2 They asked for buckets, but tubs were refused. (ἄμας ἀπῆτουν, οἱ δ' ἀπηρνούντο σκάφας.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Garrulity. Sec. 512E.

(c. A. D. 95) Quoting a proverb. "The man who wishes to make a careful answer," says Plutarch, "must wait to apprehend exactly the sense and the intent of him who asks the question."

3 There are two sides to every question. (δύο λόγους εἶναι περὶ παντὸς πράγματος.)

PROTAGORAS, Aphorism. (c. 435 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Protagoras. Bk. ix, sec. 51.

Protagoras is said to have been the first to maintain this.

Sir Roger told them, with the air of a man who would not give his judgement rashly, that much might be said on both sides.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 122. (1711)

Let them recollect this, that there are two sides to every question.

KINGSLEY, The Water-Babies. Ch. 6. (1863)

The man who sees both sides of a question is a man who sees absolutely nothing at all.

OSCAR WILDE, The Critic as Artist. (1891)

There are two sides to a story—

Right and wrong!

WILL A. PHELAN, Two Sides to a Story. (1900)

Of course there are two sides to the question

O. HENRY, The Trimmed Lamp. (1907)

I always see both points of view,

The one that's wrong and mine.

UNKNOWN, Broad Minded. (1936) A variant is,

"There are three sides to every question—your side, my side, and the right side."

Afflicted with the suspicion that there are two sides to every question.

OGDEN NASH, Don't Grin. (1938)

One side of the moon we've seen alone;

The other she has never shown.

What dreamless sleep, what sound digestion,

Were it the same with every question!

OGDEN NASH, Yes and No. (1939)

HEAR THE OTHER SIDE, see under JUDGMENT.

4 Afraid he would now, and now, and now, pop the question; which he had not the courage to put.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, vi, xx, 101. (1753)

I've got to pop the question, as they call it.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 45. (1850)

5 The . . . unquiet time

Did push it out of farther question.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, i, 1, 5. (1599)

It was out of all question.

FANNY BURNEY, Evelina. Ch. 34. (1778)

He is beyond all question the most eminent.

JAMES MILL, The History of British India. Vol. ii, ch. 5. (1818)

Beyond all question full of coarse abuse.

LESLIE STEPHEN, Life of Pope. Ch. 5. (1880)
Referring to The Dunciad.

6 A question not to be asked.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 451. (1597)

How needless was it then to ask the question!

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, ii, 1, 117. (1595)

That is not the question.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, 1, 227. (1601)

Don't ask questions with a dirty face.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

7 The greatest men

May ask a foolish question, now and then.

JOHN WOLCOTT, The Apple Dumpling and the King. (a. 1819)

II—Question and Answer

8 Euery woorde requireth not an answer. (Ogni parola non vuol risposta.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 32. (1578)

Every question requireth not an answer.

UNKNOWN, Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 31. (1629)

It is not every question that deserves an answer.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 118. (1875) The French say, "Trop enquerre n'est pas bon" (Too much questioning is bad), the Germans, "Wer viel fragt, krieget viele Antworten" (Who asks many questions gets many answers).

9 Weighty questions ask for deliberate answers.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735

Never answer a question until it is asked.

V. S. LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 56. (1904)

10 Hard questions must have hard answers. (τὰς ἀποκρίσεις ἀπὸρους εἶναι.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Alexander. Ch. 64, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 110)

Hard are those questions;—answer harder still.

EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. ix, l. 1532. (1745)

11 A question not to be asked is a question not to be answered.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Interch. 12. (1812) Quoted as by "an odder person than

I shall ever pretend to be."

12 Questions are never indiscreet. Answers sometimes are.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act i. (1895)

QUICK

- <sup>1</sup> Touching to the quick. (ἐνυπὶ ἐν καρδίᾳ)
 SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 786. (c. 409 B.C.)
 Practyse aboue all toucheth to the quicke.
 JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 6. (1546)
 Touched on the quicke, and hit on the gale.
 RALPH ROBINSON, Utopia, p. 53. (1551)
 Itching and smartyng, both touch us at quicke
 JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs and Epigrams, p. 178. (1562)
 How dearly would it touch thee to the quick.
 SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, ii, 2, 132. (1593)
 I'll tent him to the quick.
 SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, ii, 2, 626. (1600)
 There I confess I am touched to the quick.
 JOHN CLEVELAND, Works, p. 131. (a. 1658)
 The last appellation stung her to the quick.
 FIELDING, Joseph Andrews. Bk. i, ch. 17. (1742)
 Her last words had touched him to the quick
 KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 1. (1855)
 THE QUICK AND THE DEAD, see UNDER LIFE AND DEATH.

QUICKNESS

See also Swiftness

- <sup>2</sup> The desire to have things done quickly prevents their being done thoroughly.
 CONFUCIUS, Analects. Ch. 13. (c. 500 B.C.) A Latin proverb says, "Quod cito fit, cito perit" (What is quickly done is quickly undone). See under DEED.
<sup>3</sup> We say, good at meat, good at worke.
 COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Eschauffer (1611)
 Quick at meat, quick at work.
 JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 92. (1639)
 FULLER, A Pisgah-Sight of Palestine. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1650) SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
 Speedy at victuals, quick at work's an old proverbial saying.
 EDWARD WARD, Nuptial Dialogues, i, 307. (1710)
 "Quick at meals, quick at work," is a saying as old as the hills.
 COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. Let. 3. (1829)
<sup>4</sup> A quick Baker, and a slow Brewer.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 373. (1732)
<sup>5</sup> Quicke as a bee.
 JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)
 CHURCHYARD, Charitie, p. 16. (1595)
 As quick as thought.
 THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 48. (1620) RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Ch. 6. (1748)
 As quick as lightning.
 MRS. FRANCES SHERIDAN, The Discovery. Act i, sc. 2. (1763) D'ARBLAY, Diary, ii, 427. (1787)
 STEVENSON AND HENLEY, Deacon Brodie. Act i, sc. 3. (1880) "Quicker than greased lightning" is the American variant.

- I put my clothes on as quick as a wink.
 T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 7. (1843)
<sup>6</sup> Quicker than you can speak. (Dicto citius.)
 HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 2, l. 80. (35 B.C.)
 A proverbial expression.
 Quicker than you can cook asparagus. (Celerius quam asparagi cocuntur.)
 AUGUSTUS CAESAR, to express the speed of a hasty action. (c. 27 B.C.) See SUETONIUS, Augustus, 87, 1.
 Quicker than tongue can tell. (Dicto citius.)
 SENECA (?), Ludus de Morte Claudii. Sec. 13 (C. A. D. 55)
 As shortly as a horse will licke his eare.
 JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
 Quicker'n a cat can lick her ear.
 H. G. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 495. (1940)
<sup>7</sup> Quick and nimble 'twill be your own another day.
 JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 345. (1678)
 Quick and nimble; more like a Bear than a Squirrel.
 THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3992. (1732)
<sup>8</sup> Now Dragon could kill a wolf in a brace of shakes.
 CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth Ch. 93. (1861)
<sup>9</sup> He would have had it unripped before you could say knife.
 PATRICIA WENTWORTH, Weekend with Death, p. 116. (1941)
 BEFORE YOU CAN SAY JACK ROBINSON, see JACK.

QUIET

- See also Peace of Mind; Rest; Tranquillity
<sup>10</sup> Let quietness of heart be given unto me instead of cakes and ale.
 ANI, Papyrus: Book of the Dead. Ch. clxxv. l. 12. (c. 4000 B.C.)
<sup>11</sup> Quiet is a good thing. (καλὸν ἡσυχία.)
 ARCHIDAMUS III, KING OF SPARTA. (c. 350 B.C.)
 The saying is attributed to Periander by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, i, 97. Hicks (Loeb) translates it, "Rest is beautiful."
 Quietness is best.
 HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 135. (1832)
 Quietness is best, as the fox said when he bit the cock's head off.
 HOLLAND, Cheshire Glossary, p. 453. (1886)
<sup>12</sup> She is never quiet but when she is sleeping.
 RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Whimsies, p. 104. (1631)
 An inability to stay quiet . . . is one of the most conspicuous failings of mankind.
 BAGEHOT, Physics and Politics, p. 186. (1876)
<sup>13</sup> Be restful. (ἡρεμῶς χρῆσθαι.)
 CHILON, Apothegm. (c. 550 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Chilon. Sec. 70.

Quiet Persons are welcome everywhere.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3996. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> In quietness and in confidence shall be your strength. (In silentio, et in spe erit fortitudo vestra.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxx, 15. (c. 725 B.C.)

<sup>2</sup> All quiet along the Potomac tonight.

GEORGE B. McCLELLAN, a phrase used in his dispatches while in command of the Army of the Potomac, 1861-62, and repeated so frequently that it exasperated the people of the North, who were demanding action. It was used as the title and refrain of a somewhat satirical poem by Ethel Lynn Beers. A similar phrase, "Im Westen nichts neues" (In the west nothing new), occurred often in the German communiques, 1915-18, and was used by Eric Remarque as the title of a novel, 1929. In English it was elaborated somewhat to "All Quiet on the Western Front."

<sup>3</sup> Keep this quiet. (ἀλλὰ σίῳπα.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Garrulity. Sec. 507C. (c. A.D. 95) In the following section Plutarch uses another proverbial formula, ταῦτα μηδὲν φράσῃς ἀλλὰ σίῳπα (Keep this quiet and tell it to no one). Plutarch is commenting on the futility of a husband saying this to his wife.

<sup>4</sup> Better is a dry morsel, and quietness therewith, than an house full of sacrifices with strife. (Melior est buccella sicca cum gaudio, quam domus plena victimis cum iurgio.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 1. (c. 350 B.C.) Better is a handful with quietness, than both the hands full with travail and vexation of spirit. (Melior est pugillus cum requie, quam plena utraque manus cum labore, et afflictione animi.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iv, 6. (c. 250 B.C.)

<sup>5</sup> Next to love, quietness.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 104. (1678)

ANYTHING FOR A QUIET LIFE, see under LIFE.

<sup>6</sup> Breathing spell.

F. D. ROOSEVELT, Remark, to Raymond Moley, 1 Sept., 1935. Coined to quiet the opposition to New Deal interference with business.

<sup>7</sup> Study to be quiet. (φιλοτιμείσθαι ἡσυχάζειν.)

New Testament: I Thessalonians, iv, 11. (c. A.D. 52) The Vulgate is, "Quieti sitis."

Dwell with yourself; "study to be quiet." (Tecum habita.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 52. (c. A.D. 58)

<sup>8</sup> Whatever I tell you is on the Q.T.

UNKNOWN, The Talkative Man from Poplar. Broadside ballad, of 1870. "Q.T.," the slang of the period for quiet.

Fond of fun as fond can be,

If it's on the strict Q. T.

HENRY J. SAYERS, Ta-ra-ra-Boom-der-é. (1891) Speedily corrupted by the public to Ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay."

II—Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>9</sup> Within was as quiet as the grave.

ERNEST BRAMAH, The Tragedy at Brookbend Cottage. (1914) DALY, Murders in Volume 2, p. 108. (1941)

<sup>10</sup> Wont to be still as a mouse.

RICHARD FLECKNOE, Diarium, p. 9. (1656)

GRAVES, Spiritual Quixote. Bk.ii, ch.14.(1772)

As quiet as a mouse in his hole.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 16. (1824)

Both armies lay as quiet as mice.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 11. (1894)

<sup>11</sup> She is as quiet as a wasp in one's nose.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)

She is as quiet as a Wasp in one's Ear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4130.(1732)

<sup>12</sup> He is as louh [quiet] as a lomb.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text A, passus vi, l. 43. (1362)

Stille as a lambe.

JOHN LYDGATE, Fall of Princes. Bk. i, l. 6934. (c. 1440)

I can presently make him as quiet as a lamb.

TERENCE MADE ENGLISH, p. 180. (1694)

I used to . . . wander about as quiet as a lamb.

MADAME D'ARBLAY, Diary, ii, 337. (1787)

I walked into the church as quiet as a lamb.

THOMAS HARDY, Under the Greenwood Tree. Pt. v, ch. 1. (1872)

<sup>13</sup> Quiet as a nun.

WORDSWORTH, It Is a Beauteous Evening. (1802)

QUIETUS

<sup>14</sup> For who would bear the whips and scorns of time . . .

When he himself might his quietus make

With a bare bodkin?

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 75. (1600)

[Nature's] audit, though delay'd, answer'd must be,

And her quietus is to render thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. No. 126. (1609)

You have . . . to this care a fair Quietus given.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Loyal Subject. Act ii, sc. 5. (1618)

If an unlucky bullet should carry a quietus with it.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act v, sc. 3. (1775) The medieval Latin is "Quietus est" (He is quit) —acquitted, dead.

QUOTATION

See also Plagiarism

<sup>15</sup> There is no less wit and invention in applying rightly a thought one finds in a book than in being the first author of that thought.

PIERRE BAYLE, Dictionary, ii, 1077. (1696)

The art of quotation requires delicacy.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Quotation. (1823)

Next to the originator of a good sentence is the first quoter of it.

EMERSON, Quotation and Originality. (1875)

1 Quotation confesses inferiority.

EMERSON, Quotation and Originality. (1875)

2 Every quotation contributes something to the stability or enlargement of the language.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Dictionary: Preface. (1755)

Classical quotation is the parole of literary men all over the world.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life. 8 May, 1781. To be occasionally quoted is all the fame I care for.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: Men of Letters. (1863)

3 Always verify your references.

DR. MARTIN JOSEPH ROUTH, PRESIDENT OF MAGDALEN COLLEGE, Advice, given to Dean John William Burgon, 29 November, 1847. Dean Burgon in his Lives of Twelve Good Men, tells how he paid a visit to Dr. Routh, and asked, "Every studious man, in the course of a long and thoughtful life, has had occasion to experience the special value of some one axiom or precept. Would you mind giving me the benefit of such a word of advice?" Dr. Routh answered, "I think, sir, you will find it a very good practice always to verify your references." The word "quotations" was used in the first edition of the book, but afterwards changed to "references." Another confirmation of the advice given by one aged sage to somebody who sought his guidance in life, namely, "Always wind up your watch and verify your quotations."

EARL OF ROSEBERY, Speech, 23 Nov., 1897.

4 A fine quotation is a diamond on the finger of a man of wit, and a pebble in the hand of a fool.

JOSEPH ROUX, Meditations of a Parish Priest Pt. i, sec. 74. (c. 1870)

5 I shall never be ashamed to quote a bad author if what he says is good. (Numquam me in voce bona mali pudebit auctoris.)

SENECA, De Tranquillitate Animi. Ch. 11, sec. 8. (C. A. D. 80)

6 He has invented words which deserve to be quoted. (Qui invenit verba quibus deberent loqui.)

VOLTAIRE, Irène: Preface. (1778)

7 Some for renown, on scraps of learning dote. And think they grow immortal as they quote.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Satire i, l. 89. (1728)

Proud of his learning (just enough to quote)

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xiii, st. 91. (1824)

R

R—Three R'S

8 "I only took the regular course," said the Mock Turtle. "Reeling and Writhing, of course, to begin with, and then the different branches of Arithmetic—Ambition, Distraction, Uglification, and Derision."

LEWIS CARROLL (C. L. DODGSON), Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 9. (1865)

School-days, school-days, dear old Golden Rule days,

Readin' and 'ritin' and 'rithmetic,

Taught to the tune of a hick'ry stick.

WILL D. COBB, School-Days. (1907)

It was seldom that the examination . . . went beyond the three elementary subjects commonly known as the Three R's. (What philosopher . . . first found out that reading, writing and arithmetic all begin with R?)

E. M. SNEYD-KYNNERSLEY, H.M.I. Ch.6. (1908) The countries where the rubber, red pepper and revolutions come from.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Smith. (1909)

9 Here from the nostril sounds the canine letter. (Sonat hic de nare canina littera.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 109. (C. A. D. 58) The "dog's letter," the letter R, which has the sound of a snarl.

This man malycious . . . Nought els soundeth but the hoorse letter R . . . , he none answereth hath saue the dogges letter.

BARCLAY, Shyp of Folyes, i, 182. (1509)

Both with an R.—Ah! mocker? that's the dog's . . . letter.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 4, 221. (1595)

R is the Dogs Letter and hurreth [snarls] in the sound.

BEN JONSON, English Grammar, p. 47. (1636)

RABBIT

10

To go a Coney-catching with a dead Ferrit.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5170. (1732)

To go rabbit hunting with a dead ferret. (Andar a caça con huron muerto.)

JOHN RAY, Proverbs, p. 213. (1813) A Spanish proverb.

One does not catch rabbits with a dead ferret.

H. S. MERRIMAN (HUGH S. SCOTT), In Kedar's Tennis. Ch. 7. (1897)

11

He's like a rabbit, fat and lean in 24 hours.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 288. (1678)

I am like a rabbit, fat and lean in four-and-twenty hours.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

RACE

<sup>1</sup> The Race that every man in this his transitory life haue to runne.

WILLIAM CUNNINGHAM, The Cosmological Glasse. Sec. 1. (1559)

Their Ministry perform'd, and race well run.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 505. (1667)

Awake, and run the heavenly Race.

ISAAC WATTS, Awake, Our Souls. (1709)

The well-known place

Whence first we started into life's long race.

WILLIAM COWPER, Tirocinium, l. 315. (1784)

<sup>2</sup> The race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong. (Nec velocium esse cursum, nec fortium bellum.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, ix, 11. (c. 250 B.C.) "The race is not always to the swift" is the form most frequently quoted, recently by ADLER, How to Read a Book, p. 30. (1940)

It is not honesty, learning, worth, wisdom, that prefers men, (the race is not to the swift, nor the battle to the strong) but . . . chance.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy Pt. ii, sec. iii, memb. 7 (1621)

The battle is not to the strong alone; it is to the vigilant, the active, the brave.

PATRICK HENRY, Speech, in the Virginia Convention, 23 March, 1775.

The battle was not to the strong, but the race was to the swift.

SHAW, Caesar and Cleopatra. Act i. (1897)

Not to the swift, the race!

Not to the strong, the fight.

HENRY VANDYKE, Reliance. (a. 1933)

The race is not always to the swift, but that is where to look.

HUGH E. KEOUGH. Quoted by F. P. ADAMS, Atlantic Monthly, Aug., 1942, p. 30.

<sup>3</sup> The slow catches the swift. (κίχάνει τοι βραδύς ὤκυν.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 329. (c. 850 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 66, with the Latin, "Velocem tardus assequitur." Homer is telling the story of how Hephaestus (Vulcan) caught his wife Aphrodite and Ares (Mars) asleep in bed together, and bound them around with chains, and then called the gods to look at them. The gods were much amused, and, remembering that Hephaestus was lame, said, "The slow catches the swift, even as now Hephaestus, slow though he is, has outstripped Ares, for all that he is the swiftest of the gods."

The swift is overtaken by the feeble, the eagle by the tortoise. (πρὸς χελώνης ἀετὸς βραχεί χρόνῳ.)

ACHAEUS, Omphale. Frag., Nauck, 34. (c. 360 B.C.) Quoted by DIOGENES LAERTIUS, ii, 133, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 67, who gives the Latin, "Aquilam testudo vincit."

The last dogge oftentimes catcheth the Hare, though the fleetest turne him.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 419. (1580)

A Cripple may possibly catch an Hare.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 60. (1732)

It would be setting the tortoise to catch the hare.

T. R. MALTHUS, Principles of Population, iii, 117. (1798)

He had slept and the tortoise had won the race.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 21. (1850)

The lame foot, as the Greek proverb said, overtakes the swift in the end.

J. A. FROUDE, Short Studies, ii, 43. (1867)

<sup>4</sup> To drop the napkin. (Mittere mappam.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, No. xxix, l. 9. (A. D. 103) A few years later (A. D. 120) Suetonius used the same phrase in his Life of Nero, sec. 22. The dropping of a napkin was the signal for the starting of the races in the circus.

<sup>5</sup> There is to be a torch-light race this evening. They will carry torches and pass them along one to another (λαμπάς ἔσται πρὸς ἐσπέραν. . . . λαμπάδια ἔχοντες διαδώσουσιν ἀλλήλοις.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. i, sec. 328A. (c. 375 B.C.)

Begetting and rearing children, handing on life like a torch from one generation to another. (καθάπερ λαμπάδα τὸν βίον παραδίδοντας ἄλλοις ἐξ ἄλλων.)

PLATO, Laws. Bk. vi, sec. 776B. (c. 345 B.C.)

<sup>6</sup> The race by vigour, not by vaunts, is won.

POPE, The Dunciad. Bk. ii, l. 59. (1728)

The Race is got by running.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4728. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> All the advantage isn't in running fast, but rather in getting an early start. (Ce n'est tout l'avantage de courir bien tost, mais bien de partir de bonne heure.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch 21 (1534)

It doesn't help to run; it's necessary to start on the dot. (Rien de sert de courir; il faut partir à point.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Lièvre et la Tortue Bk. vi, fab. 10 (1668)

<sup>8</sup> Provided the dunce has persistency and application, he will inevitably head the cleverer fellow without those qualities. Slow but sure wins the race.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help, p. 358. (1859)

Slow and steady wins the race.

G. F. NORTHALL, Folk-Phrases, p. 22. (1894)

<sup>9</sup> The long race is truly to the lean.

PETER J. STEINCROHN, More Years for the Asking, p. 139. (1940)

RAIN

See also Sun and Rain

<sup>10</sup> It Cannot Rain but it Pours.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT. Title of book. (1726) Also title of paper by SWIFT AND POPE, in their Prose Miscellanies.

It never rains but it pours.

THOMAS GRAY, Letter to Dr. Wharton, 2 Feb.,

- 1771; KINGSLEY, Yeast. Ch. 6. (1851) BORROW, Romany Rye. Ch. 28. (1857) TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 46. (1857) etc., etc.
- It never rains monkeys but it pours gorillas.
LANGDON MITCHELL, The New York Idea. Act i. (1906)
- Wilde and his epigrams are shown up as brilliant bores
Before the unpretentious penetration of the comment that It never rains but it pours.
OGDEN NASH, I'll Take a Bromide, Please. (1940)
- 1 Before the clouds appeared, the rain came upon me.
BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 529. (1817)
- 2 Though it rain daggers with their points downward.
ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. ii, mem. 3. (1621)
It shall raine . . . dogs and polecats.
RICHARD BROME, The City Wit. Act iv, sc. 1. (1653)
- Sir John will go, though he were sure it would rain cats and dogs.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738) See also SCOTT, Journal, 16 April, 1840. BLACKMORE, Christowell. Ch. 20. (1882) COFFIN, Mare's Nest, p. 38. (1941) etc., etc.
- Raining cats and dogs comes from "catadupe" (κατὰ δοῦπος) meaning a cataract or waterfall—rain is coming down like a waterfall.
F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 126. (190)
- It's raining pitchforks and hammer handles.
JAKE FALSTAFF, Jacoby's Corners, p. 75. (1938)
- It's raining cats and dogs
And pitchforks and assorted frogs.
MARGARET FISHBACK, A Case of Mistaken Identity. (1940)
- It was raining curs and pussies when I got here.
GILBERT FRANKAU, Air Ministry, Room 28, p. 64. (1942)
- 3 May the cloak be over me when it rains. (Sobre mí la capa cuando llueve.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 66. (1615)
Neither Coat nor Cloak will hold out against Rain upon Rain.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3522. (1732)
- 4 When the heaven is shut up, and there is no rain. (Clauso caelo pluvia non fluxerit.)
Old Testament: II Chronicles, vi, 26. (c. 300 B. C.)
- 5 The love of the earth for the rain. (ἐοᾶν μὲν ὁ μῦθου γαῖαν.)
EURIPIDES, Fragments. Frag. 890. (c. 450 B. C.)
Rain is the husband of the earth.
Babylonian Talmud: Taanith, fo. 6b. (c. 450)
Rain fertilizes the earth.
- 6 The rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights. (Facta est pluvia super terram quadraginta diebus et quadraginta noctibus.)
Old Testament: Genesis, vii, 12. (c. 550 B. C.)
- 7 He's about to drink many a cloud. (πυκνὰς πέμφγας πίνουσι.)
IBYCUS, Fragments. Frag. 17. (c. 535 B. C.)
Quoted by GALEN, xvii, i, 881, as a proverbial saying used of travellers in a storm. See EDMONDS, Lyra Graeca, ii, 93.
- 8 The rain cometh down and . . . watereth the earth, and maketh it bring forth and bud. (Descendit imber et . . . enebriat terram, et infundit eam, et germinare eam facit.)
Old Testament: Isaiah, lv, 10. (c. 725 B. C.)
God sendeth down water from Heaven, and causeth the earth to revive.
MOHAMMED, The Koran. Ch. 16. (c. 625)
Rain is good for vegetables, and for the animals who eat those vegetables, and for the animals who eat those animals.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 6 July, 1763
- 9 It is good to have our coag [dish] out, when it rains kail.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 176. (1721)
When it rains pottage you must hold up your dish.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 559. (1855)
There is a vulgar old proverb that says, "Put out your tubs when it is raining."
MACLAREN, Exposition of Hebrews, 353. (1909)
- 10 "There is no rain—the Christians are the cause," had become a popular proverb in Rome.
W. H. LECKY, History of European Morals. Vol. i, ch. 3. (1869) The saying is recorded by ST. AUGUSTINE, De Civ. Dei, ii, 3. (c. 413)
- 11 To see it rain is better than to be in it.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 130. (1678)
- 12 The rain it raineth every day.
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, v, 1, 401. (1599)
King Lear, iii, 2, 77.
- 13 In peaceful slumber sunk,
To hear the pattering raindrops on the roof.
(κᾶν ὑπὸ στέρῃ πυκνῆς ἀκούειν ψακάδος εὐδούσῃ φρενί.)
SOPHOCLES. Fragment. (c. 450 B. C.) As quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, ii, 7.
- A thousand recollections
Weave their air-threads into woof,
As I listen to the patter
Of the rain upon the roof.
COATES KINNEY, Rain on the Roof. (1899)
- 14 A coming shower your shooting corns presage.
SWIFT, Description of a City Shower. (1710)
- 15 We were neither sugar nor salt; we were not afraid the rain would melt us.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
I persist in believing the weather will clear, . . . at any rate I am not made of sugar or of salt.
THOMAS CARLYLE, in FITZGERALD, Letters, 1, 235. (1855)

I am made neither of sugar or salt. . . . Do you call this rain?

MARY BRIDGMAN, Robert Lynne. Vol. i, ch. 15. (1870)

<sup>1</sup> Sweet to the corn is a shower. (Dulce satis umor.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. Vol. iii, l. 82. (37 B. C.)

Nor does the parched blade bow to Jove the Rain-giver. (Arida nec pluvio supplicat herba Iovi.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. i, eleg. 7, l. 26. (19 B. C.)

"Jupiter pluvius" is the usual Latin phrase.

RAIN ON JUST AND UNJUST, see under JUST.

Rain: Weather Proverbs

There are scores of weather proverbs about rain, but only a few of the more generally known ones are given here. For a complete list see INWARDS, Weather Lore.

<sup>2</sup> If it rains in the morning, O ass-driver, roll up thy sack and retire to sleep.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 59a; Taanith, 6b. (c. 450)

He is no good swain that letteth his journey for the rain.

HILLS, Commonplace-Book, p. 131. (c. 1530)

For a morning rain, leave not your journey

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 974. (1640)

<sup>3</sup> A foot deep of rain Will kill hay and grain,
But three feet of snow Will make them come mo'.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Lorna Doone. Ch. 50. (1869)

Quoted as an old saying.

<sup>4</sup> A sunshiny shower Won't last half an hour.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 8. (1846)

A sunshiny shower Never lasts half an hour.
Sunshiny rain Will soon go again.

INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 111. (1893)

<sup>5</sup> As the old prouerbe saith, after winde com-meth rain.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 22. (1548)

<sup>6</sup> Rain, rain, go to Spain, Fair weather come again.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 20. (1659)

Rain, rain, go away, Come again on Saturday.

JOHN AUBREY, Gentilisme and Judaisme, p. 180. (1687)

<sup>7</sup> The farther the sight, the nearer the rain.

INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 105. (1893)

<sup>8</sup> O, here, "St. Swithin's, the xv day, variable weather, for the most part rain," good; for the most part rain: why, it should rain forty days after, now, more or less.

BEN JONSON, Every Man Out of His Humour.

Act i, sc. 3. (1599) St. Swithin's day is July 15.

How, if on Swithin's feast the welkin lours,
And ev'ry penthouse streams with hasty show'rs,
Twice twenty days shall clouds their fleeces drain
And wash the pavement with incessant rain.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 182. (1716) The proverbial jingle is, "St. Swithin's day, if thou dost rain, For forty days it will remain." The French have a similar rhyme about St. Médard's day, June 8.

St. Swithin is christening the apples.

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book. Vol. i, col. 960. (1825)

<sup>9</sup> Pride of the dewy morning,
The swain's experienced eye

From thee takes timely warning,
Nor trusts the gorgeous sky.

JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: 25th Sunday after Trinity. (1827)

There had been a shower as the sun rose—the "pride of the morning" the soldiers call the sprinkle—just sufficient to lay the dust.

ARCHIBALD FORBES, Barrack, Bivouac and Battle, p. 9. (1891)

<sup>10</sup> When God pleases, it rains with every wind.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 91. (1678)

When God wills, all winds bring rain.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 98. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5554. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> Some rain, some rest. A harvest proverb.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 80. (1678)

More rain, more rest; more water will suit the ducks best.

Notes and Queries, iii, v, 208. (1864)

More rain, more rest, Fine weather not the best.

Notes and Queries, v, xi, 18. (1879)

Some rain, some rest; Fine weather isn't always best.

INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 108. (1893)

<sup>12</sup> Small rain lays a great dust.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 135. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4193. (1732)

<sup>13</sup> When it rains and the sun shines at the same time the devil is beating his wife. (Le diable bat sa femme.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 79. (1666)

Quoted as "the French say." The French sometimes add "et marie sa fille" (and is marrying his daughter). The Dutch say, "Dan is het kermis in de hel" (There is a fair in hell).

Thrash him round the church-yard, as the devil does his wife in rainy weather when the sun shines.

EDWARD WARD, Writings, ii, 299. (1703)

Colonel Atwit: It rained, and the sun shone at the same time.

Neverout: Why, then the devil was beating his wife behind the door with a shoulder of mutton.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Sharp shower coming on. "The devil will soon be beating his wife with a leg of mutton," as the proverb says.

LORD LYTON, Pelham. Ch. 61. (1828)

If it rains while the sun is shining the devil is beating his grandmother. He is laughing and she is crying.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 110. (1893)

- 1
Rain before seven, fine before eleven.
Notes and Queries, i, viii, 218. (1853)
Rain at seven, fine at eleven.
INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 44. (1893)
Rain before seven, fine before eleven;
If it rains at eleven, 'twill last till seven.
Notes and Queries, ix, iii, 317. (1899)
"Rain before seven, shine before eleven" is one of the most trustworthy of all country saws.
The Spectator, 20 March, 1909, p. 452.
- 2
Est, me seith, and soth hit is, a muchel wind
alith mid a lutel rein.
UNKNOWN, Ancren Riwle, p. 246. (a. 1225)
And windes great gon down with litle rein.
JOHN LYDGATE, The Daunce of Machabree, l.
448. (c. 1430)
And litle reyne dooth a greet wynd abate.
EARL RIVERS, tr., Morale Prouerbes. (1478)
A little rain stills a great wind. (Peu de pluye abat grand vent.)
RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 11. (1532) Repeated in bk. iv, ch. 44.
It is sayd that a small rayne abatyth a grete wynd.
LORD BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux, p. 39. (a.
1533)
A little rain alaieth a great wind. (Piccola pioggia fa cessar gran vento.)
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv,
p. 183. (1574) Young, tr.
Small raine lays great winds.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 204. (1639)
Petite pluye abat grand vent. Small rain, or a little rain, lays a great wind.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 135. (1670)
A small Rain may allay a great Storm.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 410. (1732)
- 3
Fair weder turneth ofte into reine.
UNKNOWN, Long Life, p. 3. (c. 1250) In *Old
English Miscellanies*, p. 156.
After the rayne cometh the fair weder.
WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Aesop, ii, viii. (1484)
After stormes come fayre weather. (Dopo tempesta vien bel tempo.)
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)
After showers at length would come a sunne.
CHRISTOPHER MIDDLETON, The Famous Historie of Chinon of England (E.E.T.S.), p. 26.
(1597)
After rain comes fair weather.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 194. (1678)
After rain comes clear shining.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch.
5. (1869) See also under COMPENSATION.
FEBRUARY RAIN, see under FEBRUARY.
- RAINBOW
- 4
A rainbow is big enough for everyone to look at.
FRANK CASE, Do Not Disturb, p. 126. (1940)
- 5
When it is dark the sun no longer shines, but who can forget the colors of the rainbow?
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 373. (1938)
A Chinese proverb.
- 6
Go to the end of the rainbow, and you'll find a crock of money.
W. D. COOPER, Provincialisms, p. 40. (1836)
Where the rainbow rests is a crock of gold.
Notes and Queries, i, ii, 512. (1850)
- 7
If in the mornynge the raynebow appere, it signifieth moysture. . . . If in the evening it spend it self, fayre weather ensueth.
LEONARD DIGGES, Prognostication, sig. B2.
(1555)
The evening rainbow portends fair weather.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 13. (1666)
If there be a rainbow in the eve, it will rain and leave; but if there be a rainbow in the morrow, it will neither lend nor borrow.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 43. (1670)
A rainbow in the morning Is the shepherd's warning,
But a rainbow at night Is the shepherd's delight
WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, i, 670
(1825) SIR HUMPHREY DAVY, Salmonica, vi,
164 (1828) repeats this jingle, and adds, "I have often observed that the old proverb is correct."
If the rainbow comes at night
The rain is gone quite.
ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia,
p. 417. (1830)
A dog in the morning Sailor take warning;
A dog in the night Is the sailor's delight.
ROPER, Weather Sayings, p. 6. (1883) A sun-dog in nautical language is a small rainbow near the horizon.
A rainbow at morn Is the sign of a storm;
A rainbow at night Is a shepherd's delight.
HOLLAND, Cheshire Glossary, p. 444. (1886)
The rainbow in the marnin'
Gives the shepherd warnin'
To car' his gurt coat on his back;
The rainbow at night
Is the shepherd's delight,
For then no gurt coat will he lack.
INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 112. (1893)
A rainbow in the morn, put your hook in the corn;
A rainbow in the eve, put your hook in the sheave.
INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 112.
Rainbow at night, Sailor's delight;
Rainbow in morning, Sailors take warning.
RICHARD INWARDS, Weather-Lore, p. 135. Another sailors' jingle is, "Rainbow to windward, foul fall the day; Rainbow to leeward, damp runs away."
- 8
God loves an idle rainbow
No less than labouring seas.
RALPH HODGSON, Poems, p. 59. (1913)
- 9
Zeus stretches forth for mortals a lurid rainbow from out of heaven to be a portent.
(πορφυρέην ἰὺν θνητοῖσι τανύσση | Ζεὺς δὲ οὐρανὸν τέρας.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xvii, l. 547. (c. 850 B.C.) To the Greeks the rainbow was a portent of evil.

I do set my bow in the cloud, and it shall be for a token of a covenant between me and the earth. (Arcum meum ponam in nubibus, et erit signum foederis inter me, et inter terram.)

Old Testament: Genesis, ix, 13. (c. 550 B.C.)
Look upon the rainbow, and praise him that made it. (Vide arcum, et benedic eum, qui fecit illum.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xliii, 11. (c. 190 B.C.)

<sup>1</sup> Rainbow in the east, fine weather; rainbow in the west, rain. (Tung 'hung jih t'ou, hsi 'hung yü.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2486. (1875)

<sup>2</sup> The rainbow-chasers of the Administration are not idle these days.

HENRY WATTERSON, in Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal, 1 Oct., 1892, p. 1/8.

<sup>3</sup> My heart leaps up when I behold
A Rainbow in the sky.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, My Heart Leaps Up. (1807)

RAKE

<sup>4</sup> Most men nowadays, as it is in the proverb, are better at the rake than at the pitchfork, better to pull in than to give out.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 9. (1629)
He is better with a rake than a fork.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 266. (1678)
He comes oftener with the rake than the shovel.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 129. (1721)
He useth the Rake more than the Fork.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2375. (1732)
TO SPREAD WITH THE FORK, see under PRODIGALITY.

<sup>5</sup> Keep the rake, says the hay-maker, as nigh the scythe as you can, and the cart as nigh the rake.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: Prudence. (1841)

<sup>6</sup> Men some to bus'ness, some to pleasure take,
But ev'ry woman is at heart a rake.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 216. (1735)
He was a rake among scholars, a scholar among rakes.

MACAULAY, Essays: Aiken's Addison. (a. 1859)

<sup>7</sup> There is little for the rake to get after the besom.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 259. (1678)

<sup>8</sup> With one hand he gracefully turned over four Kings and a Jack, and with the other tremblingly "raked down" the pile of bank notes.

SOLOMON F. SMITH, Theatrical Apprenticeship, p. 151. (1845)

The plunder he raked down vexed Arithmetic to count.

J. G. BALDWIN, The Flush Times of Alabama and Mississippi, p. 8. (1853)

You kin rake down the pile now.

BRET HARTE, Story of Mine, p. 373. (1877)

RANCOR

<sup>9</sup> Rancor sticks long by the ribs.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 178. (1639)

HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)

<sup>10</sup> Rancour will out.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, i, 1, 142. (1590)

<sup>11</sup> Rancor runs in thin streams which eat their own channels.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 100. (1940)

RANK

<sup>12</sup> Rank is a great beautifier.

LYTTON, Lady of Lyons. Act ii, sc. 1. (1838)

Oh! a Baronet's rank is exceedingly nice,
But the title's uncommonly dear at the price!

W. S. GILBERT, Ruddigore. Act ii. (1887)

The earls might be belted or suspendered, or pinned up with safety-pins, as far as I am concerned.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Best-Seller. (1909)

<sup>13</sup> Known men are greater than mere noblemen. (Noti magis quam nobiles sunt.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iii, sec. 28. (c. A. D. 54)

The rank is but the guinea's stamp,

The Man's the gowd for a' that.

BURNS, For a' That and a' That. (1795)

<sup>14</sup> Rank is a farce: if people Fools will be,
A Scavenger and King 's the same to me.

JOHN WOLCOTT (PETER PINDAR), Peter's Prophecy. Title page. (c. 1790)

RAP

<sup>15</sup> I scorn to rap against a lady.

HENRY FIELDING, Amelia, ii, x. (1752) To swear a thing against a person.

He thought he could beat the rap.

E. S. GARDNER, The D.A. Goes to Trial, p. 266. (1940)

This would be a tough rap to beat.

MICHAEL VENNING, The Man Who Slept all Day, p. 88. (1942)

<sup>16</sup> Copper halfpence or farthings . . . have been for some time very scarce, and many counterfeits passed about under the name of raps.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Drapier's Letters. Works. (1755), v, ii, 14. (1724) Hence something of no value.

I have seen the Landholders without a rap

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xi, st. 84. (1823)

For the mare-with-three-legs [gallows] I care not a rap.

W. H. AINSWORTH, Rookwood. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1834)

A man who dies and leaves not a rap behind.

MISS BRADDON, Asphodel. Ch. 14. (1881)

If I thought you cared a rap for me, I should stay.

MISS BRADDON, Mount Royal. Bk. iii, ch. 4. (1882)

RARITY

- <sup>1</sup> Rarer than birds' milk. (ὀρνίθων γάλα.)
ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 508. (422 B. C.)
Repeated in The Birds, l. 733.
Rarer than chicken's milk. (Lac gallinaceum.)
PLINY, Naturalis Historia: Preface. (A. D. 77)
Rarer than a phoenix. (φοίνικος σπανιώτερος.)
PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. x, ch. 2. ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vii, 10, gives the Latin, "Phoenix rarior."
A rare class. (Rarum genus.)
CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. 21, sec. 79. (44 B. C.)
Cicero is speaking of true friends.
A bird as rare upon the earth as a black swan. (Rara avis in terris nigroque simillima cycno.)
JUVENAL, Satires, Sat. vi, l. 165. (c. A. D. 120)
Juvenal is speaking of chastity.
No man findeth a blacke swanne.
JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., De Proprietatibus Rerum, xii, lf. 120/1. (1398)
It is as rare to see a rich surety, as a black swan.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 229. (1579)
A black swan, an honest lawyer.
JOHN WESLEY, Journal, 2 Oct., 1764.
A feathered phenomenon, to which a black swan was a matter of course.
DICKENS, A Christmas Carol, St. iii. (1843)
Rarer than a white crow. (Corbo rarior albo.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. vii, l. 202. (c. A. D. 120)
Referring to a really lucky man.
Why try to see a white crow? (λευκὸν ὀρεῖν κόρακα:)
UNKNOWN, Greek Anthology, xi, 417.
The one as rare as the black swan, the other as common as the blacke crow.
GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 69. (1576)
These eyght thynges are rare times seene, A fayre mayden without a loue, a great Faire without theeues, an old vsurer without money, a young man without ioy, an old barne without Mice, a scald head without Lice, an olde goate without a beard.
JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 24. (1578)
Horses are scarcer than hen's teeth around here
E. KIRKE, Southern Friends, p. 250. (1863)
Sometimes clients get as scarce as hen's teeth.
CHARLES EGBERT CRADDOCK (MARY N. MURFREE), Where the Battle was Fought, p. 29. (1884)
<sup>2</sup> Precious Things are not found in Heaps.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3928. (1732)
A variation of Cicero's, "Omnia praeclara rara" (All things which excel are rare).
<sup>3</sup> Rarity is what gives price to a thing. (La rareté du fait donnoit prix à la chose.)
LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. xii, fab. 12. (1694)
Rare things are prized. (Rarum carum.)
ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 388. (1869) Another form is, "Quae rarissima carissima" (What is rarest is dearest); also, "Omne rarum carum, vilescit quotidianum" (All that is rare is dear; everyday things are cheap).

- <sup>4</sup> Rare things please one. (Rara iuvant.)
MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, No. 29. (c. A. D. 90)
Rarity enhances pleasure. (Voluptates commendat rarior usus.)
JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xi, l. 208. (c. A. D. 120)

RASCAL

See also Knave, Rogue

- <sup>5</sup> The rascal has met a bigger rascal. (ὁ πανούργος ἕτερον πολὺ πανουργίας.)
ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 683. (424 B. C.)
<sup>6</sup> Turn the rascals out!
CHARLES A. DANA, used first in the New York Sun (c. 1871), referring to the Tweed ring, and afterwards as the slogan of Greeley's campaign against Grant in 1872.
Turn their rascals out and put our rascals in.
ALVA JOHNSON, Sat. Eve. Post, 16 March, 1940. p. 67. Quoted as the political slogan in Indiana.
<sup>7</sup> There is no such rascal clear to Nevers. (N'a tel larron jusqu'a Nevers.)
JEAN DE BOVES, De Barat et de Haimet, l. 123. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, iv, 96. There is another French proverb about rascals, "Rien ne ressemble plus à un honnête homme qu'un fripon" (Nothing resembles an honest man more than a rascal).
<sup>8</sup> Every man of any education would rather be called a rascal than accused of deficiency in the graces.
SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 29 April, 1776. The nearest date Boswell gives.
<sup>9</sup> It's my opinion you are a damned rascal (Scelestissimum te arbitror.)
PLAUTUS, Amphitruo, l. 552. (c. 200 B. C.)
The worst not only of two-legged, but of four-legged creatures. (Omnium ne bipedum solum, sed etiam quadrupedum impurissimo.)
CICERO, In Clodium. (c. 54 B. C.)
The biggest rascal that walks on two legs. (Omnium bipedum nequissimus.)
MODESTUS, referring to Regulus. (c. A. D. 98)
As quoted by PLINY THE YOUNGER, Letters, Bk. i, epis. 5. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 42, and included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus fo. 62, with the rendering, "The starkest knave that goeth on two legges."
<sup>10</sup> Be a rascal among rascals. (Improbis cum improbus sit.)
PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 657. (190 B. C.)
<sup>11</sup> The joys of rascals soon collapse in ruin. (Cito improborum laeta ad perniciem cadunt.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 117. (c. 43 B. C.)
When a rascal does right, he is concealing his character. (Naturam abscondit cum improbus recte facit.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 432.

<sup>1</sup> Flatter a rascal, he will cudgel you; cudgel a rascal, he will lick your boots. (Oignez villain, il vous poindra. Poignez villain, il vous oindra.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 32. (1534)

RASHNESS

See also Boldness

<sup>2</sup> That valour which is not founded on prudence called rashness. (La valentia que no se funda sobre la basa de la prudencia se llama temeridad.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 28. (1615)
Rashness is not Valour.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4002. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> Full of the most reckless and insane rashness. (Plenus inconsideratissimae ac dementissimae temeritatis.)

CICERO, De Haruspicum Responsis. Ch. 26, sec. 55. (65 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> I'll warrant ye, goes before Rashness; Who 'd-a-tho't comes sneaking after.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

<sup>5</sup> Whatsoever is done rashly is done also rawly.

JOHN LYL, Euphuus (Arber), p. 136. (1579)

<sup>6</sup> To a few rashness brings luck, to most misfortune. (Paucis temeritas est bono, multis malo.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. v, fable 4. (c. 25 B. C.)
Rashness is not always fortunate. (Non semper temeritas est felix.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxx, ch. 42. (c. 10 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> In rashness there is hope. (Ex temeritate spes.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. iii, sec. 26. (c. A. D. 109)
Rashness often makes a man immortal; even if he falls he is praised in song.

GOETHE, Iphigenie auf Tauris. Act v. (1787)

<sup>8</sup> Rashness is the result of ignorance, hesitation of thought. (ἀμαθία μὲν θράσος, λογισμὸς δὲ ἄκνον φέρει.)

THUCYDIDES, History. Bk. ii, ch. 40, sec. 3. (c. 400 B. C.)

Foolhardiness proceeds of ignorance.

JAMES I OF ENGLAND, Uranie: Preface. (c. 1423)
He that is ofty ruled by a Fool.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2178. (1732)

RAT

<sup>9</sup> To the end of time it will be so . . . the rats inherit the earth.

MAXWELL ANDERSON, Elizabeth the Queen. Act iii. (1930)

<sup>10</sup> Anything like the sound of a rat
Makes my heart go pit-a-pat!

BROWNING, The Pied Piper. Pt. iv. (1842)

<sup>11</sup> It is the Wisdome of Rats that will be sure to leaue a House, somewhat before it fall.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Wisdome for a Man's Self. (1597)

Like the mice That forsake falling houses, I would shift to other dependance.

CYRIL TOURNEUR, The Revengers Tragedie. Act v, sc. 2. (1607)

A rotten carcass of a boat, . . . the very rats Instinctively have quit it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 2, 147. (1611)

Fled . . . As rats do from a falling house.

BUTLER, Hudibras, i, ii, 939. (1663)

All vermin from a falling palace run.

JOHN CROWNE, Charles VIII. Act v. (1672)

As rats, before the mansion falls,
Desert late hospitable walls.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Ser. ii, fab. 9. (1738)

They say a falling house is best known by the rats leaving it.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 25. (1824)

It is a great house still . . . but it is a ruin none the less, and the rats fly from it.

DICKENS, Dombey & Son. Ch. 59. (1848)

This is bad news indeed. . . . It is a case of the rats leaving a sinking ship.

JAMES PAYN, In Market Overt. Ch. 26. (1895)

If you think the ship is sinking, you can leave it like any other rat.

C. W. GRAFTON, The Rat Began to Gnaw the Rope, p. 142. (1943)

<sup>12</sup> Too late repents the ratt,
If once her taile be caught by the cat.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 165. (1591)

Too late repents the rat when caught by the cat.

JOHN WOODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 516. (1623)

<sup>13</sup> Welcome death, quoth the rat, when the trap fell down.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 10. (1659)

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5469. (1732)

We are caught like rats in a trap.

SHAW, Caesar and Cleopatra. Act iii. (1897)

Like a rat-trap—easier to get into than out of.

TROTTER, Life of Nicholson. Ch. 11. (1897)

<sup>14</sup> It rained by the bucket, and they came home wet as drowned rats. (Statim urceatim plovebat, . . . et omnes redibant udi tanquam mures.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 44. (c. A. D. 60)

Fah, a draggled fox is a fine creature. (Vah, bella res est volpis uda.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 58. (c. A. D. 60)

Three heares on a side, like a drowned ratte.

NICOLAS UDALL, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, fo. 180b. (1542)

Piteous they will look, like drowned mice.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry VI, i, 2, 12. (1591)

To look like a drowned mouse.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 286. (1678)

I was dragged out of a river like a drowned rat.
SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, 14 Oct., 1771.

1
Yf they smell a ratt, They grisely chide and chant.

JOHN SKELTON, Image of Hypocrisy, i, 51. (c. 1550)

With Gill I smell a rat.

THOMAS DELONEY, The Gentle Craft. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (c. 1598) I suspect something is wrong.

Now you talk of a cat, Cicely, I smell a rat.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, A Woman Killed With Kindness. Act iv, sc. 4. (1603)

I smell a rat.

MIDDLETON, Family of Love, iv, 2. (1608)

SHIRLEY, Andromana, ii, ii, 14. (1660) BUTLER, Hudibras, i, i, 821. (1663) DRYDEN, The Wild Gallant, iv, 1. (1669) MOTTEUX, Rabelais. Bk. iv, ch. 36. (1694) [Motteux' rendering of "Il y aura icy de l'asne."] FARQUHAR, Love and a Bottle, v, 3. (1699) OZELL, Molière, i, 102. (1714) LYTON, Paul Clifford. Ch. 34. (1840) etc., etc.

Do you not smell a rat?

BEN JONSON, A Tale of a Tub. Act iv. (1633)

Whist, whist, I smell a bird's nest.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 276. (1678)

Mr. Spcaker, I smell a rat. I see him floating in the air. But mark me, sir, I will nip him in the bud.

BOYLE ROCHE, Speech, in the Irish Parliament. (c. 1790)

I don't see how she can fail to smell a rat.

WILLIAM IRISH, Phantom Lady, p. 238. (1942)

RAVEN

2
The raven will seek the carrion.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence. (1564)

He who takes the raven for a guide shall light upon carrion.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 74. (1853)

3
He pardons the ravens, but storms at the doves. (Dat veniam corvis, vexat censura columbas.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 63. (c. A. D. 120)

4
Nourish a raven and he will scratch out thine eyes.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, i, 432. (1902) See also under INGRATITUDE.

5
It means something—that raven cawing on my left just now. (Non temere est quod corvos cantat mihi nunc ab laeve manu.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 624. (c. 210 B. C.)

Thou art always (like the Raven) croaking.

HOLLAND, tr., Don Zara del Fogo, 130. (1656)

That raven on yon left-hand oak (Curse on his ill-betiding croak)

Bodes me no good.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Farmer's Wife and the Raven, l. 27. See also SUPERSTITION: OMENS.

6
Thou art a bitter bird, said the raven to the starling.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 195. (1678)

The Raven said to the Rook, "Stand away, black Coat!"

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4729. (1732) See also under POT: POT AND KETTLE.

7
The rauen wyll not gyue her blacke pennes for the pecoakes paynted fethers.

WYNKYN DE WORDE, The Pilgrimage of Perfection, 63. (1526)

RAZOR

8
To all it stands on a razor's edge, either woe-ful ruin or life for the Achaeans. (νῦν, γὰρ δὴ πάντεσσιν ἐπὶ ξυροῦ ἵσταται ἀκμῆς | ἢ μάλα λυγρὸς ὀλεθρος Ἀχαιοῖς ἡ ἐ βιῶναι.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. x, l. 173. (c. 850 B. C.) At the critical moment.

Our cause stands on the razor-edge of decision. (ἐπὶ ξυροῦ γὰρ ἀκμῆς ἔχεται ἡμῖν τὰ πρήγματα.)

DIONYSIUS, the Phocian general, to the Ionians. (c. 495 B. C.) As related by HERODOTUS, vi, 11.

With our own lives we saved all Greece when her fate stood upon a razor's edge. (ἐστακυῖαν ἐπὶ ξυροῦ.)

SIMONIDES, Fragments. Frag. 124. (c. 475 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Malignity of Herodotus, 39.

READING

See also Books

9
It is not wide reading but useful reading that tends to excellence. (οὐδὲ οἱ πολλὰ ἀλλ' οἱ χρήσιμα ἀναγινώσκοντες εἰσι σπουδαῖοι.)

ARISTIPPUS, Maxim. (c. 400 B. C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Aristippus. Bk. ii, sec. 71.

In reading of many books is distraction. (Dis-tringit librorum multitudo.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ii, sec. 3. (a. A. D. 64)

You complain that in your part of the world there is a scant supply of books. But it is quality rather than quantity that matters. (Non refert, quam multos, sed quam bonos habeas.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xlv, sec. 1.

We should read much, but not many books (Multum legendum esse, non multa.)

PLINY, Epistles. Bk. vii, epis. 9. (A. D. 98) The Spanish form is, "Libros y amigos pocos y buenos" (Books and friends should be few and good).

The bookful blockhead, ignorantly read.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pr. iii, l. 53. (1709)

Let blockheads read what blockheads wrote

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 1 Nov., 1750.

10
Reading maketh a Full Man; Conference a Ready Man; and Writing an Exacte Man.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies. (1597)

Histories make Men Wise; Poets Witty; the Mathematicks Subtill.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Studies.

Reading is to the Mind, what Exercise is to the Body.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Tatler. No. 147. (1709)

Reading makes a full man—meditation a profound man—discourse a clear man.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

Some read to think,—these are rare; some to write,—these are common; and some to talk,—and these form the great majority.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. ii, No. 9. (1820)

Reading is seeing by proxy.

SPENCER, Study of Sociology. Ch. 15. (1873)

1 Read, mark, learn, and inwardly digest.

Book of Common Prayer: Collect for the Second Sunday in Advent. (1548)

Read, try, judge, and speak as you find.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 71. (1813)

2 If that thou wilt not read, let it alone;

Some love the meat, some love to pick the bone.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress: The Author's Apology for His Book. (1678)

3 Read much, but, having read, discard much. (Multa legas facito, perfectis neglege multa.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iii, No. 18. (c. 175 B. C.)

4 It's with blood that letters enter. (La letra con sangre entra.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 36. (1615)

5 To read a book for the first time is to make the acquaintance of a new friend; to read it a second time is to meet an old one.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 351. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

6 Read not before you learn to spell.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 4. (1639)

7 In its leaves that day We read no more. (Quel giorno più non vi leggemmo avante.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 138. (c. 1300)

8 It is a tie between men to have read the same book.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

'Tis the good reader that makes the good book.

EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Success. (1870)

9 If you wish to be a good reader, read. (ἂν θέλῃς, ἀναγνώστικός εἶναι, ἀναγίγνωσκε.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. ii, ch. 18, sec. 2 (c. A. D. 100)

10 When a man will keepe a thing in memory, let him reade it often.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 26. (1578)

What is twice read is commonly better remembered than what is transcribed.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Idler. No. 74. (1758)

11 Reading is the best medicine for a sicke man, the best musicke for a sadde man, the best counsel for a desperate man, the best comfort for one afflicted.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 52. (1578) The praise of reading continues for many pages, and is made up of quotations from many authors. See also BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, ii, ii, 4.

12 True vertue and learning, is gotten rather by practise then by reading.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 44. (1574) Pettie, tr.

13 Write the vision, and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it. (Scribe visum, et explana eum super tabulas: ut percurrat qui legerit eum.)

Old Testament: Habakkuk, ii, 2. (c. 500 B. C.)

The Septuagint text is, ὅπως διώκῃ ὁ ἀναγνώσκων αὐτά, which has been alleged to mean, "That he that reads may make haste to escape." But Jerome interpreted the passage as meaning that the writing was to be so plain that the reader might run and not be prevented from reading by his speed. Grotius considered it to mean "That it was to be so written that the reader should be quick in comprehending it," or able to read it easily. The R.C. translation from the Vulgate gives the passage, "That he that readeth it may run over it."

Run as we may, we still must read.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Warning Before Storm. (1940)

He who runs may read and he who sits should forbear to carp.

E. A. HOOTEN, Why Men Behave Like Apes, p. 157. (1941)

14 Turn over with nightly and daily labor. (Nocturna versate manu, versate diurna.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 269. (c. 20 B. C.) Of reading the Greek classics.

15 From one that reads but one book . . . the Lord deliver us.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., p. 7. (1659) See under Book

16 A man ought to read just as inclination leads him, for what he reads as a task will do him little good.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 14 July, 1763. What we read with inclination makes a much stronger impression. If we read without inclination, half the mind is employed in fixing the attention.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1777

When I take up the end of a web and find it pack-thread, I do not expect, by looking further, to find embroidery.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, explaining why it is not necessary to read a whole book in order to determine its quality. BOSWELL, 16 Oct., 1769.

17 We read to say that we have read.

CHARLES LAMB, in New Times, 13 Jan., 1825.

He has left off reading altogether, to the great improvement of his originality.

CHARLES LAMB, Last Essays of Elia: Detached Thoughts on Books and Reading. (1833)

1 As you read it out it begins to grow your own. (Cum recitas, incipit esse tuus.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 38. (A. D. 85)

2 My foolish parents taught me to read and write. (Me litterulas stulti docuere parentes.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. ix, ep. 73, l. 7. (A. D. 93)

3 Men that read much and work little are as bells, the which do sound to call others, and they themselves never enter into the church.

NORTH, tr., Diall of Princes, p. 138. (1557)

Reading is sometimes an ingenious device for avoiding thought.

HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1849)

4 They read not, neither do they swim, as the saying goes. (τὸ λεγόμενον μήτε γράμματα μήτε νεῖν ἐπιστῶνται.)

PLATO, Laws. Bk. iii, sec. 689D. (c. 345 B. C.)

That is, they are ignorant of even the most ordinary accomplishments.

He taught his grandsons reading, swimming, and the other elements of education. (Nepotes et literas et natate aliaque rudimenta per se plerumque docuit.)

SUETONIUS, De Vita Caesarum: Divus Augustus. Ch. lxiv, sec. 3. (c. A. D. 120) Referring to Augustus.

Neither to swim nor to read. (Necque natate, necque literas.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iv, No. 13. (1523) Two things which the Greeks and Romans were careful their children should be instructed in early, and which it was held disgraceful not to have learned.

5 Exceedingly well read.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 1, 166. (1597)

Our high respect for a well-read man is praise enough of literature.

EMERSON, Quotation and Originality. (1875)

6 He hath never fed of the dainties that are bred in a book.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 2, 25. (1595)

7 Read o'er the volume of young Paris' face.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 3, 81. (1595)

O, like a book of sport thou'lt read me o'er.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus, iv, 5, 239. (1601)

That lady . . . read him like a book.

WHYTE-MELVILLE, Uncle John. Ch. 5. (1874)

8 People say that life is the thing, but I prefer reading.

LOGAN PEARSALL SMITH, Afterthoughts. (1931)

9 Verily, when the day of judgment comes, we shall not be asked what we have read, but what we have done. (Certe, adveniente die iudicii, non quaeretur a nobis quid legimus, sed quid fecimus.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 4. (c. 1420)

10 Read the best books first, or you may not have a chance to read them at all.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers. (1849)

Life being very short, and the quiet hours of it few, we ought to waste none of them in reading valueless books.

RUSKIN, Sesame and Lilies: Preface. (1864)

Be sure to read no mean books.

R. W. EMERSON, Society and Solitude: Books. (1870)

Life is too short for reading inferior books.

JAMES BRYCE, Address, at Rutgers College, 10 Nov., 1911.

11 Learn to read slow: all other graces Will follow in their proper places.

WILLIAM WALKER, The Art of Reading. (c. 1675)

Better to read little with thought, than much with levity and quickness.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Thinking. (1839)

12 If you cannot enjoy reading a book over and over again, there is no use reading it at all.

OSCAR WILDE, The Decay of Lying. (1889)

It's what you read when you don't have to that determines what you will be when you can't help it.

REV. D. F. POTTER, Slogan, to encourage unprescribed reading. (1927)

REASON

13 Reason is a light that God has kindled in the soul. (τὸν νοῦν ὁ θεὸς φῶς ἀνήψεν ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ.)

ARISTOTLE, Art of Rhetoric, iii, x, 72. (c. 300 B. C.) Aristotle is quoting the saying of some still older philosopher.

Reason is nothing else but a portion of the divine spirit set in a human body. (Ratio autem nihil aliud est quam in corpus humanum pars divini spiritus mersa.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium, Epis. lxvi, sec. 12. (c. A. D. 64)

The divine guide of life, reason. (θεῖον ἡγεμόνα τοῦ βίου τὸν λόγον.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Listening to Lectures, 37E. (c. A. D. 95)

Sweet reasonableness.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, St. Paul and Protestantism: Preface. (1870) Frequently used by Arnold.

14 Neither poverty nor great riches will hear reason.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 458. (1855)

Reason governs the wise man and cudgels the fool.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 479

15 This picklock Reason is still a-fumbling at the wards, bragging to unlock the door of stern Reality.

ROBERT BRIDGES, The Testament of Beauty. Bk. i, l. 463. (1930)

1 Every human proposition hath equal authority, if reason make not the difference. (Toute proposition humaine a autant d'autorité que l'autre, si la raison n'en fait la différence.)

PIERRE CHARON, De la Sagesse. (1601) Quoted by SIR WALTER RALEGH, History of the World: Preface.

2 Reason and speech, which bring men together. (Ratio et oratio quae . . . conciliat inter se homines.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 50. (c. 45 B.C.) Usually adapted, "Societatis vinculum est ratio et oratio" (The bond of society is reason and speech).

3 In nothing [than by reason] are we further removed from the nature of wild beasts. (Neque ulla re longius absumus a natura ferarum.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 50. (c. 45 B.C.)

A beast, that wants discourse of reason.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 150. (1600)

A man without reason is a beast in season.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

Cited by Ray and Fuller.

A man that does not use his reason is a tame beast; a man that abuses it is a wild one.

LORD HALIFAX, Maxims Works, p. 254. (1693)

All man's reason has done for him is to make him beastlier than a beast.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act iii. (1903)

Reason is the mistress and queen of all things. (Domina omnium et regina ratio.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. ii, ch. 21. (45 B.C.)

Reason rules all things.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 9/2. (1659)

5 Nothing can be lasting when reason does not rule. (Nihil potest esse diuturnum cui non subest ratio.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFINUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni, iv, 14, 19. (c. A.D. 50)

6 Reason is not measured by size or height, but by principle. (λόγου γὰρ μέγεθος οὐ μήκει οὐδ' ὕψει κρίνεται, ἀλλὰ δόγμασιν.)

EPICETUS, Discourses. Bk. i, ch. 12, sec. 26. (c. A.D. 100)

7 It is wise even in adversity to listen to reason. (σοφὸν τει κἀν κακοῖς ἂν δεῖ φρονεῖν.)

EURIPIDES, Hecuba, l. 228. (c. 425 B.C.)

We must be fortified by reason against all adversities. (τῷ λογισμῷ πρὸς πάντα.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Solon. Ch. vii, sec. 4. (c. A.D. 110)

Reason is a fair weather friend.

Meditations in Wall Street, p. 142. (1940)

8 Hearken to reason, or she will be heard.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 79. (1640)

Hear Reason, or she'll make you feel her.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

When Reason preaches, if you don't hear her she'll box your ears.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

If you will not hear Reason, she will surely rap your knuckles.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

9 Reason lies between the spur and the bridle.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 713.

(1640) A rendering of the Italian proverb, "Tra la briglia e lo sprone consiste la ragione."

10 To make carnall appetite content,

Reason laboreth wyll, to wyn wyls consent.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

Reason pandars will.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 88. (1600)

So convenient a thing it is to be a reasonable creature, since it enables one to find or make a reason for everything one has a mind to.

FRANKLIN, Autobiography. Ch. 2. (c. 1771)

Franklin is telling how he came to abandon vegetarianism. At the age of sixteen, he had read a book recommending a vegetable diet and had adopted it, but a year later, in 1723, on his way by boat from Boston to New York, some fish were served for dinner. "I had formerly been a great lover of fish," Franklin writes, "and recollected that, when the fish were opened, I saw smaller fish taken out of their stomachs; then thought I, 'If you eat one another, I don't see why we mayn't eat you.' So I dined upon cod very heartily," and was a vegetarian only occasionally thereafter.

11 Ther's reason in roasting of Eggs.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)

BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village. Act iii, sc. 1. (1762) TROLLOPE, Last Chronicle of Barset. Ch. 75. (1867) etc., etc.

But you'll observe he humbly hopes and begs, Some reason in this roasting of her eggs.

PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, v, 145. (1855)

There's wit in poaching eggs, the proverb says.

ANDREW LANG, Poetical Works (1923), ii, 205. (c. 1880)

12 Come now, and let us reason together. (Venite, et arguite me.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, i, 18. (c. 725 B.C.)

I desire to reason with God. (Disputare cum Deo cupio.)

Old Testament: Job, xlii, 3. (c. 350 B.C.)

13 We may take Fancy for a companion, but must follow Reason as our guide.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Boswell, 1774.

14 We have not enough strength to follow reason absolutely. (Nous n'avons pas assez de force pour suivre toute notre raison.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 42. (1665)

We have not enough reason to use all our strength. (Nous n'avons pas assez de raison pour employer toute notre force.)

MADAME DE GRIGNAN, paraphrasing La Rochefoucauld, to illustrate how the reverse of his maximes was often as true as the original. (c. 1670) See MADAME DE SÉVIGNÉ, Lettres, vi, 527.

We are lost to all reason when we despair of finding it in others. (On n'a plus de raison, quand on n'espère plus d'en trouver aux autres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 586. (1665)

1 When the world has reason, race horses are used for hauling dung; when the world is without reason, war horses are bred in the common.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 46. (c. 550 B.C.) Carus, tr.

2 To a rational being, to act according to nature and according to reason is the same thing. (τῷ λογικῷ ζῷον ἡ αὐτὴ πρᾶξις κατὰ φύσιν ἐστὶ καὶ κατὰ λόγον.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. vii, 11. (c. A.D. 174)

3 Reason is but choosing.

JOHN MILTON, Areopagitica. (1644)

Reason is the only faculty we have wherewith to judge of anything.

JOSEPH BUTLER, The Analogy of Religion. Pt. ii. (1736)

4 Reason marcheth ever crooked, halting and broken-hipt. (La raison va tousjours, et torte, et deshanchée.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580)

Human reason is a two-edged dangerous sword. (La raison humaine est un glaive double et dangereux.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17.

5 Reason is my oracle. (Augurium ratio est.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 9, l. 51. (c. A.D. 9)

Every man's own reason is his best Oedipus.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 6. (1643) It was Oedipus who solved the riddle of the Sphinx.

Every man's reason is every man's oracle.

LORD BOLINGBROKE, Of the True Use of Retirement and Study. Letter 2. (a. 1751)

Every man's own reason must be his oracle.

JEFFERSON, Letter to Benjamin Rush. (1813)

6 Hit standeth with reason.

THOMAS PAYNELL, tr., Schola Salernitana. B. iij. (1528)

It stood greatly with reason.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1612)

It standeth to good reason.

PHILEMON HOLLAND, tr., Cyruopaedia, p. 149. (1632)

It stands to reason.

BOYLE, Epistles of Phalaris, p. 137. (1698)

7 Cure the soul's distress by healing remedies of reason. (παιωνίους λόγου φαρμάκοις.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: To Apollonius, 118C. (c. A.D. 95) Paraphrasing AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 848.

8 Say first, of God above or Man below

What can we reason but from what we know?

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 17. (1732)

9 You will conquer more wisely by reason than by passion. (Consilio melius vincas quam iracundia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 110. (c. 43 B.C.) Claudian has, "Diis proximus ille est | quem ratio non ira movet" (He is nearest to the gods whom reason not passion moves); and Gallus, "Plus ratio quam vis caeca valere solet" (Reason is apt to be of more avail than blind force).

How tragic when reason is conquered by chance! (Quam miserum est ubi consilium casu vincitur!)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 601.

Reason is a captive in the hands of the passions, as a weak man in the hands of an artful woman

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 58. (c. 1258)

Plain right reason is, nine times in ten, the fettered and shackled attendant of the . . . passions.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 16 March, 1752

Passion and prejudice govern the world. only under the name of reason.

JOHN WESLEY, Letter to Joseph Benson, 5 Oct., 1770.

10 The soul of man is divided into three parts. intelligence, reason and passion. Intelligence and passion are possessed by other animals, but reason by man alone. . . . Reason is immortal, all else mortal. (καὶ τὸ μὲν φρόνιμον ἀθάνατον, τὰ δὲ λοιπὰ θνητά.)

PYTHAGORAS, Maxim. (c. 525 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Bk. viii, sec. 30.

Reasoning comes as naturally to man as flying to birds. (Quippe id est homini naturale; ac sicut aves ad volatum.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. i, ch. 1. (c. A.D. 80)

11 Reason? we use none of it here. (Raison? nous n'en vsons point ceans.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 20. (1534)

12 Nothing is to be done without reason. (Nihil sine ratione faciendum est.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. iv, sec. 10. (c.A.D. 54)

If you wish to subject all things to yourself, subject yourself to reason. (Si vis omnia tibi subicere, te subice rationi.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. 37, sec. 4. (c.A.D. 64)

Everything according to reason. (Tout par raison.)

CARDINAL RICHELIEU, Mirame. (c. 1625)

13 Give you a reason on compulsion! if reasons were as plentiful as blackberries. I would give no man a reason upon compulsion, I.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 264. (1597)

14 You should hear reason.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, i, 3, 5. (1596)

The rogues were now more capable to hear reason.

DEFOE, Robinson Crusoe. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1719)
I always listen to reason, because it can then do no harm.

GOLDSMITH, Good-Natur'd Man. Act i. (1768)

1 It fits thee not to ask the reason why.

SHAKESPEARE, Pericles, i, 1, 157. (1608)
Theirs not to reason why.

TENNYSON, The Charge of the Light Brigade.
(1854) PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés, says this line has been a cliché almost from the day it first appeared.

2 I have no other but a woman's reason.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, i, 2, 22. (1594) See WOMAN: A WOMAN'S REASON.

3 Be led by reason. (νοῦν ἡγεμόνα ποιοῦ.)

OLON, Maxim. (c. 575 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Bk. i, sec. 60.

Let reason be thy schoolmistress.

SIR WALTER RALEGH, Instructions to His Son. Sec. 1. (1616)

4 Reason, the choicest gift bestowed by heaven. (φρένας, πάντων δα' ἐστὶ κτημάτων ὑπέρτατον.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 683. (c. 441 B.C.)
Reason, which is, as it were, the light and lamp of life. (Ratio . . . quasi quaedam lux, lumenque vitae.)

CICERO, Academicarum Quaestionum. Bk. i, ch. 5, sec. 8. (c. 45 B.C.)

Reason and authority, the two brightest lights of the world. (Ratio et auctoritas, duo clarissima mundi lumina.)

SIR EDWARD COKE, Legal Maxim. (c.a. 1634)
Reason, the power

To guess at right and wrong, the twinkling lamp Of wand'ring life.

CONGREVE, The Mourning Bride Act iii. (1697)

5 Those that differ upon reason may come together by reason.

BENJAMIN WHICHOTE, Moral Aphorisms. (1753)

6 Reason, an ignis fatuus of the mind.

JOHN WILMOT, A Satire Against Mankind, l. 11. (a. 1680) An imitation of Boileau.

I look upon human reason as I do on the parts of a promising child—it surprises, . . . but is not come to maturity.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to the Countess of Upper Ossory, 19 Jan., 1777.

7 Swift instinct leaps, slow reason feebly climbs.

EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night vii. (1745) See under INSTINCT.

8 Vainly you try reason in chains to keep:
Freely it moves as fish sweep through the deep.

UNKNOWN, Book of Songs (Shiking). Pt. ii, Bk. iii. Moral Lessons. (c. 600 B.C.)

NEITHER RHYME NOR REASON, see under RHYME.

REASONS

See also Motive, Purpose

9 Reasons good may conquer reasons bad. (ἀλλ οἱ λόγοι γε καταπαλοῦσιν φόβους.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia at Aulis, l. 1013. (c. 410 B.C.)

Good reasons must, of force, give place to better.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iv, 3, 203. (1599)

10 It's common for men to give pretended Reasons instead of one real one.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745.

11 Reasons of adamant. (ἀδαμάντινους λόγους.)

PLATO, Gorgias. Sec. 509A. (c. 375 B.C.)

12 Making the worse appear the better reason. (τὸν ἥττω λόγον κρείττω ποιεῖν.)

PROTAGORAS. (c. 425 B.C.) As quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, v, 3, who says that Protagoras was a clever sophist, who promised his pupils that he would teach them by what verbal dexterity the weaker cause could be made the stronger. Quoted also by ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric, ii, 24, 11 (c. 330 B.C.), with the comment that "men were justly disgusted with the promise of Protagoras, for it is a lie."

Comic writers charge Socrates with making the worse appear the better reason. (Socrati obiciunt comici docere eum, quomodo peiorem causam meliorem faciat.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. ii, ch. 16, sec. 3. (c. A.D. 80)

Aristophanes attacks him [Socrates] in his plays for making the worse appear the better reason. (λόγον κρείττω ποιοῦντα.)

DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Socrates. Sec. 20. (c. A.D. 230)

His Tongue

Dropt Manna, and could make the worse appear The better reason, to perplex and dash Maturest Counsels.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ii, l. 112. (1667)
Like Belial, in Milton, 'he made the worse appear the better cause.'

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 12 Dec., 1749. Referring to Lord Bolingbroke.

It was his [Dr. Skinner's] paid profession to make the worse appear the better reason.

SAMUEL BUTLER, The Way of All Flesh. Ch. 27. (a. 1902)

13 Strong reasons make strong actions.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iii, 4, 182. (1596)

14 Why is this thus? What is the reason of this thusness?

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), Moses, the Sassy. (1862)

15 Good reasons said, and euill understood, are roses strawn to hogges, and not so good.

JOHN WOODROEFHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 477. (1623)

REBELLION

See also Revolution

- 1 The Rebellions of the Belly are the worst.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seditions. (1597)
Rebellions, that is, caused by hunger.
- 2 A little rebellion now and then . . . is a medicine necessary for the sound health of government.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to James Madison. (1787) Jefferson is referring to Shays's rebellion.
Rebellion to tyrants is obedience to God.
Motto, on Jefferson's seal. (c. 1770) The line has been attributed to Benjamin Franklin.
See RANDOLPH, Life of Jefferson, iii, 585.
There can be no doubt that rebellion is the last remedy against tyranny.
HENRY T. BUCKLE, History of Civilization in England. Vol. i, ch. 12. (1857)
- 3 He . . . from Rebellion shall derive his name, Though of Rebellion others he accuse.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. xii, l. 36. (1667)
The devil was the first o' the name
From whom the race of rebels came.
SAMUEL BUTLER, Miscellaneous Thoughts, l. 169. (a. 1680)
- 4 The only justification of rebellion is success.
THOMAS B. REED, Speech, in House of Representatives, 12 April, 1878.
- 5 Rebellion is as the sin of witchcraft. (Quasi peccatum ariolandi est, repugnare.)
Old Testament: I Samuel, xv, 23. (c. 600 B. C.)
- 6 They who plan rebellion have already rebelled. (Qui deliberant, desciverunt.)
TACITUS, Histories. Bk. ii, ch. 77. (c. A. D. 109)
Rebellion, flat rebellion!
SHAKESPEARE, King John, iii, 1, 298. (1596)

RECKONING

- 7 The examiner is quite out in his reckoning.
RICHARD BENTLEY, Phalaris: Preface. (1699)
He was short in his reckoning.
MALKIN, tr., Gil Blas. Bk. vii, ch. 12. (1809)
- 8 A small sum will serve to pay a short reckoning.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 128. (1639)
D'URFEY, Quixote. Pt. iii, act v, sc. 1. (1696)
Short Reckonings are soon cleared.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4156. (1732)
Pay as you go and keep from small scores. Short reckonings are soon cleared.
C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 12. (1869)
- 9 Old accòmpts breed new differences.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Dispute. (1611)
Old Reckonings make new Quarrels.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3725. (1732)

- 10 Misrecknyng is no paiment.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)
Cited by RAY, p. 121; FULLER, No. 3423.
Wrong reckoning is no payment.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 126. (1639)
Wrong count is no payment.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 348. (1721)
- 11 Merry is the feast-making till we come to the reckoning.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 175. (1678)
So comes a reck'ning when the banquet's o'er,
The dreadful reck'ning, and men smile no more.
JOHN GAY, What D'ye Call It? Act ii, sc. 9. (1715)
Merry is the Company, till the Reckoning comes.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3409. (1732)
The French call it, "Le quart d'heure de Rabelais," the moment when the reckoning has to be paid.
- 12 The commune prouerbe is that ofte rekeninge holdeth longe felawshyppe.
RICHARD WHITFORD, Werke for Householdiers, sig. A6. (1537) Frequent settlement of accounts.
Euen recknyng maketh longe freendis.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)
Mony purses holds friends together.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 76. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 248, with the comment, "When every man pays his equal club, we are not burthen-some to our friends, and so continue our friendship."
Oft compting makes good friends.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (c. 1595)
Even reckning keeps long friends.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 127. (1678)
Oft counting keeps friends long together.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 271. (1721)
Right Reckoning makes long Friends.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4053. (1732)
Short reckonings make long friends.
WILLIAM HONE, Year-Book, col. 1417. (1831)
LOVER, Handy Andy. Ch. 8. (1842) HENLEY AND STEVENSON, Admiral Guinea. Act ii, sc. 1. (1892) etc., etc.
Clear reckonings, good friends. (Patti chiari, amici cari.)
CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 203. (1856) The Italians also say, "Conto spesso e amicizia longa" (Frequent reckonings make long friendship). A proverb in many languages. The Germans say, "Kurze Rechnung, lange Freundschaft," or, putting it differently, "Strenge Rechnung hält die Freundschaft" (Strict reckoning halts friendship); the Portuguese, "Conta de perto, amigo de longe"; the Dutch, "Effene rekeningen maken goede vrienden." The French say it in two ways, "Les bons comptes font les bons amis" (Good reckonings make good friends), or "À vieux comptes, nouvelles disputes" (From old accounts, new quarrels).

RED

- <sup>1</sup> And with that word he gan to waxen reed.
(E questo detto diventò vermiglio Come fuoco nel viso.)
BOCCACCIO, Il Filostrato. Canto vi, st. 23. (c. 1350) CHAUCER, tr., Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 925. (c. 1380) See also BLUSHING.
Of his owne thought he wex al reed.
CHAUCER, The Shipman's Tale, l. 111. (c. 1386)
Camma . . . could not keepe the Roseal redde out of her Alabaster cheekes.
GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 14. (1576)
Dying her lily cheekes with Vermillion red.
GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 70.
- <sup>2</sup> Any color so long as it's red.
EUGENE FIELD, Red. (1885)
- <sup>3</sup> As red as blood.
LAYAMON, Brut, l. 15940. (c. 1205) CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales, Prologue, l. 635. (c. 1386)
TREvisa, tr., Higden i, 123. (1387) MALORY, Morte Darthur. Bk. xvii, ch. 4. (1485)
STEVENSON, Kidnapped. Ch. 6. (1886) etc., etc.
- Redder than fire. (Plus rouge que feus.)
UNKNOWN, De Fevre de Creeil, l. 99. (c. 1250)
See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, i, 234.
CHAUCER, Knight's Tale, l. 1306. (c. 1386)
CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of Aymon, p. 27. (c. 1489) etc., etc.
- As red as any glede.
WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers Plowman. Text B, ii, 12. (1377) CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women: Prologue, l. 235. (c. 1385) A glede (or glead) is a live coal.
- As red as rose.
CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. ii, l. 1256. (c. 1380) CAXTON, tr., Jason, p. 156. (c. 1477)
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, ii, 4, 27. (1598)
COLERIDGE, Ancient Mariner. Pt. i, st. 9. (1798) KINGSLEY, Water-Babies Ch. 2. (1863) etc., etc.
- Red as a cherry.
WILLIAM BULLEIN, Government of Health, fo. 49. (1558) KENDALL, Flowers of Epigrammes, p. 292. (1577) Cobbes Prophecy, sig. D1 (1614) BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 11. (1849)
- Red as a turkey-cock.
BEAUMONT and FLETCHER (?), The Faithful Friends. Act iii, sc. 2. (c. 1620) COFFEY, Boarding-School Sc. 2. (1733) SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 6. (1880) etc., etc. The French have a similar comparison, "Rouge comme une pivoine" (Red as a peony). They also say, "Rouge comme une écrevisse" (crayfish, river lobster).
- As red as a fox.
CHARLES LEVER, Harry Lorrequer. Ch. 6. (1837)
- <sup>4</sup> He that commeth before an Elephant will not wear bright colours, nor he that commeth to a Bull red.
JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 474. (1580)

His appointment . . . was looked on as a job, and Mr. Galdstone, to whom a job was like a red rag to a bull, thought so.

SIR ALGERNON WEST, Recollections. Vol. ii, ch. 14. (1899) The French have the same phrase, "C'est comme le rouge pour les taureaux."

- <sup>5</sup> The flaming red denotes a callous mind,
Too harsh for love, or sentiment refined.
CHARLES STEARNS, The Ladies' Philosophy of Love. (1797)

REED

- <sup>6</sup> Reeds become darts. (Las canas se vuelven lanzas.)
CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 12. (1615)
i. e. arrows, deadly weapons.
- <sup>7</sup> Every Reed will not make a Pipe.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1457. (1732)
Where there are reeds there is water.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5674.
- <sup>8</sup> Lo, thou trustest in the staff of this broken reed, on Egypt; whereon if a man lean, it will go into his hand, and pierce it. (Ecce confidis super baculum arundineum confractum istum.)
Old Testament: Isaiah, xxxvi, 6. (c. 725 B. C.)
To lean on a falling wall. (In caducum parietem inclinare.)
AELIUS SPARTIANUS, Hadrian. Sec. 23. (c. A. D. 293)
Trust not nor lean not upon a windy reed. (Non confidas nec innitaris super calamum ventosum.)
THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi Bk. ii, ch. 7. (c. 1420)
But, senseless man, what do I mean,
Upon a broken reed to lean?
DELONEY, Garland of Goodwill, p. 13. (c. 1586)
Lean not on a Reed.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3157. (1732)
Lean not on Earth, . . . a broken reed at best
EDWARD YOUNG, Night Thoughts. (1742)
You lean upon a broken reed, if you trust to their compassion.
SMOLLETT, The Reprisal. Act i, sc. 1. (1757)
I only meant
To show the reed on which you leant.
SCOTT, Lady of the Lake. Canto v, st. 11. (1810)
A broken reed. An undependable person (or thing).
ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Broken (1941)
MAN A THINKING REED, see under MAN.
- <sup>9</sup> What went ye out into the wilderness to see?
A reed shaken with the wind? (κάλαμον ὑπὸ ἀνέμου σαλευόμενον;)
New Testament: Matthew, xi, 7. (c. A. D. 65)
The Vulgate is, "Arundinem vento agitatam?"
The French say, "C'est un roseau qui plie à tout vent" (He is a reed that bends to every wind) and "C'est un roseau peint en fer" (He is a reed painted like iron).

REFORM

<sup>1</sup> With most men reform is a trade—with some a swindling trade—with others an honest but yet a lucrative trade. Reform for its own self seldom thrives.

JOHN QUINCY ADAMS, Letter, 21 April, 1837. Th' more reforms th' more laws, th' more laws th' more polismen, th' more polismen th' more crimes, th' more crimes th' more reformers, an' so on.

F. P. DUNNE, The Prohibition Era. (1919)

<sup>2</sup> To innovate is not to reform.

EDMUND BURKE, A Letter to a Noble Lord. (1796)

<sup>3</sup> Every reform, however necessary, will by weak minds be carried to an excess which will itself need reforming.

COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 1. (1817) Reform . . . is a cathartic which our political quacks recommend to others, but will not take themselves; it is admired by all who cannot effect it, and abused by all who can.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 113. (1820)

<sup>4</sup> Reform has no gratitude, no prudence, no husbandry. . . . It inclines to asinine resistance, to kick with hoofs; it runs to egotism and bloated self-conceit.

R. W. EMERSON, The Conservative. (1841)

Every reform is only a mask under cover of which a more terrible reform, which dares not yet name itself, advances.

EMERSON, Journals, vii, 205. (c. 1870)

<sup>5</sup> To-morrow I'll reform, the fool does say; To-day itself's too late; the wise did yesterday.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

<sup>6</sup> It is easier to bear with what's amiss, than go about to reform it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2926. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> No sooner does he hear any of his brothers mention reform or retrenchment, than up he jumps.

IRVING, Sketch Book: John Bull. (1820)

I am for peace, retrenchment, and reform.

WILLIAM IV OF ENGLAND, Remark, to Earl Grey, in an interview, 17 Nov., 1830. See MOLESWORTH, History of the Reform Bill of 1832, p. 98.

Peace, retrenchment and reform—thirty years ago the watchwords of the great Liberal party.

JOHN BRIGHT, Speech, Birmingham, 28 April, 1859. The watchword, it will be remembered by the readers of WARREN, Ten Thousand a Year, was inscribed on the banner of Tittlebat Titmouse.

An indefinable something is to be done, in a way nobody knows how, at a time nobody knows when; that will accomplish nobody knows what.

THOMAS B. REED, Letter to Sereno Payne, 2 Dec., 1902.

<sup>8</sup> Reform only yourself; for in doing that you do everything. (Reformez vous seulement; car en cela vous pouvez tout.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1595)

<sup>9</sup> Every reformation must have its victims.

H. H. MUNRO (SAKI), Reginald on the Academy. (1904)

<sup>10</sup> Every reform movement has a lunatic fringe.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT. Speaking of the Progressive Party, in 1913.

Men who form the lunatic fringe in all reform movements.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Autobiography. Ch. 7. (1913)

<sup>11</sup> Never came reformation in a flood.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, i, 1, 33. (1599)

<sup>12</sup> Every generation needs regeneration.

C. H. SPURGEON, Salt-Cellars. (1885)

<sup>13</sup> My method of reforming

Is by Laughing, not by Storming.

SWIFT, Epistle to a Lady, l. 229. (1733)

REFORMER

<sup>14</sup> The reformer is like the daughter of the horse-leech, and still cries for more.

WALTER BESANT, All Sorts and Conditions of Men. Ch. 28. (1882)

<sup>15</sup> It is a general error to suppose the loudest complainers for the public to be the most anxious for its welfare.

EDMUND BURKE, Observations on a Publication, "Present State of the Nation." (1769)

<sup>16</sup> No Sow-gelder . . . but cry'd Reform!

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto ii, l. 538. (1663)

<sup>17</sup> Is not every true reformer, by the nature of him, a priest first of all?

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero Worship. Ch. 4. (1840)

<sup>18</sup> We are reformers in Spring and Summer; in Autumn and Winter we stand by the old; reformers in the morning, conservers at night.

R. W. EMERSON, Essays: The Conservative. (1841)

<sup>19</sup> All reformers are bachelors.

GEORGE MOORE, The Bending of the Bough. Act i. (1900)

<sup>20</sup> That man is a weakling and degenerate who struggles and maligns the order of the universe and would rather reform the gods than reform himself. (Ille pusillus et degener, qui oblectatur et de ordine mundi male existimat et emendare mavult deos quam se.)

SENECA, Ad Lucillum. Epis. cvii, sec. 12. (c.

A. D. 64) "Reforms should begin at home—and stay there," and "A man who reforms himself has contributed his full share toward the reformation of his neighbor," are two modern derivatives.

God did not make man a hound-dog to scent out evil.

JOHN T. STONE, Everyday Religion. (c. 1920)
Be not angry that you cannot make others as you wish them to be, since you cannot make yourself as you wish to be.

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 2. (c. 1420) As quoted by Dr. Samuel Johnson. See BOSWELL, Life, 30 March, 1778. The Latin which Johnson was paraphrasing is, "Si non potes te talum facere qualem vis, quomodo poteris alium ad tuum habere beneplacitum?"

2 Tyrants have no consciences, and reformers no feeling; and the world suffers both by the plague and by the cure.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to the Earl of Strafford, 26 June, 1790.

REFUSAL

See also Denial

3 He who from cowardice made the great refusal. (Che fece per viltate il gran rifiuto.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto iii, l. 60. (c. 1300)
Probably Celestine V, who was elected Pope in 1294, at the age of eighty, and resigned five months later in favor of Boniface VIII.

4 To know how to refuse is as important as to know how to consent. A gilded No gives more satisfaction than a dry Yes. (Tanto importa como el saber, conceder. . . . Porque un no dorado satisface más que un sí á secas.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 70. (1647)

5 He who refuses nothing is capable of anything. (Quisquis nil negat, fellat.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. xii, ep. 79. (c. A. D. 103)

6 Refusal is difficult when your better entreats. (Durum est negare superior cum supplicat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 170. (c. 43 B. C.)
Not Hebrew, Arabic, Syriac, Coptic, nor even the Chinese language, seems half so difficult to me as the language of refusal.

WILLIAM SHENSTONE, Egotisms. (a. 1763)

7 He is less disappointed who is promptly refused. (Minus decipitur cui negatur celeriter.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 374. (c. 43 B. C.)
The Germans say, "Kurz abschlagen ist Freundschaft" (A short refusal is friendship).

It is no slight kindness to say "no" at once. (Non leve beneficium praestat qui breviter negat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 481.

Do me the favour to deny me at once.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

8 It is a kindness to refuse gently what you intend to deny. (Pars benefici est quod petitur si belle neges.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 517. (c. 43 B. C.)

Some texts have "si cito neges," to refuse quickly.

He could refuse more gracefully than other people could grant.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 18 Nov., 1748.

Referring to the Duke of Marlborough.

REGRET

See also Remorse, Repentance

9 Everything passes—even regret.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 309. (1920)

Regrets last longer than repentance.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 136. (1940)

10 Win or lose, never regret. (Shu ying, wu 'hui.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1986. (1874)

11 A hundred years of regret

Pay not a farthing of debt.

SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 12. (1869)

12 Make the most of your regrets. . . . To regret deeply is to live afresh.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 13 Nov., 1839.

13 Of all sad words of tongue or pen,
The saddest are these: "It might have been."

J. G. WHITTIER, Maud Muller, l. 105. (1854)

More sad are these we daily see,
"It is, but it hadn't ought to be."

BRET HARTE, Mrs. Judge Jenkins. (1871)

Of all cold words of tongue or pen

The worst are these: "I knew him when."

ARTHUR GUITERMAN, Prophets in Their Own Country.

14 Holde thy thombe in thi fyst,
And kepe ye welle fro "Had I wyst."

UNKNOWN, Douce MS., No. 52. (c. 1350)

Had I wyst is a thyng it servys of nought.

Towneley Plays. No. xiii, l. 93. (c. 1388)

She is all ware of had I wist.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis. ii, 473. (1390)

Nowe it is to late to speke of had-I-wist.

UNKNOWN, Tale of Beryn, l. 2348. (c. 1400)

When dede is doun, hit ys to lat; be ware of hady-wyst.

Good Wyf Wold a Pylgrymage, l. 120. (c. 1460)

Beware of Had I wyste!

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 213. (1529)

Cited by Heywood and Fuller.

Certainelye, had I wyst, is a foles worde.

RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus' Apophthegms, fo. 3. (1550)

Had I wyst, is ever had at the worst.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 207. (1576)

Hadde I wyste, commeth too late.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 281. (1639)

Had I wist was a fool.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Works, ii, 60. (1599)

Had I wist, quoth the fool.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 131. (1721)

Had I wist. Had I known.

ATKINSON, Cleveland Glossary, p. 577. (1868)

The Germans say, "Hätte ich gewusst ist ein armer Mann" (Had I wist is a poor man).

RELATIVES, see Kin

RELIGION

See also Christianity, Creeds, Sects, Theology

The true meaning of religion is not merely morality, but morality touched by emotion.

MATTHEW ARNOLD, Literature and Dogma. Ch. 1. (1873)

Religion brought forth riches, and the daughter devoured the mother. (Religio peperit divitias et filia devoravit matrem.)

ST. BERNARD, Apothegm. (c. 1145) See REUSNER, Aenigmatographia. Pt. i, p. 361. (1602)

Religion is the rule of life.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)

The religion of one seems madness unto another.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 2. (1658)

Methinks there be not impossibilities enough in Religion for an active faith; the deepest Mysteries ours contains have not only been illustrated, but maintained, by Syllogism and the rule of Reason.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 9. (1643)

Where mystery begins religion ends.

EDMUND BURKE, A Vindication of Natural Society. Par. 41. (1756) Quoting "a good parson."

Mystery constitutes the essence of worship. (C'est le mystère qui fait l'essence du culte.)

HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 5 Juin, 1870.

Religion without mystery ceases to be religion.

BISHOP W. T. MANNING, Sermon, 2 Feb., 1930.

Persecution is a bad and indirect way to plant Religion.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 25. (1643)

Persecution produced its natural effect on them. It found them a sect; it made them a faction.

MACAULAY, History of England. Ch. 1. (1849)

Justice and religion are the two chief props of a commonwealth: . . . as Sabellicus delivers, a man without religion is like a horse without a bridle. (Homo sine religione sicut equus sine fraeno.)

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. i, subs. 2. (1621)

One religion is as true as another.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.

Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. ii, subs. 1. (1612)

Religion is like the fashion. One man wears his doublet slashed, another laced, another plain; but every man has a doublet. So every man has his religion. We differ about trimming.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Religion. (a. 1654)

All religions must be tolerated for in this country every man must get to heaven his own way.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Note, on margin of report concerning Roman Catholic schools, 22 June, 1740. See CARLYLE, Frederick the Great.

There is only one religion, though there are a hundred versions of it.

BERNARD SHAW, Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant: Vol. ii, Preface. (1898)

A man's religion is the chief fact with regard to him.

THOMAS CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero Worship. Ch. 1. (1840)

Men will wrangle for religion; write for it; fight for it; die for it; anything but—live for it.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i, No. 25. (1820)

There are only two things in which the false professors of all religions have agreed: to persecute all other sects, and to plunder their own.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Pt. i, No. 172.

God is for men and religion for women.

JOSEPH CONRAD, Nostromo. Ch. 4. (1904)

Capt. Underhill killed his neighbor's wife, and "got his religion on a pipe of tobacco."

C. W. ELLIOTT, New England History, i, 460. (1857)

We had come to Andover to get religion.

JOSIAH QUINCY, Figures of the Past, p. 6. (a. 1861)

Religion among the low becomes low.

R. W. EMERSON, The Conservative. (1841)

There is no age which religion does not become. (Nullam aetatem non decet religio.)

ERASMUS, Colloquia: Pietas Puerilis. (1524)

Sam's religion is like a Cheder cheese, 'tis made of the milk of one-and-twenty parishes.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

Talking against Religion is unchaining a Tyger; the Beast let loose may worry his Deliverer.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

Many have quarrel'd about Religion that never practised it.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1753.

True Religion, like the Sun's blest Beam, Darts thro' the conscious Mind a heav'nly Gleam.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

It matters not what Religion an ill Man is of.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3038. (1732)

Much Religion, but no Goodness.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3485.

No Man's Religion ever survives his Morals.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3609.

No Religion, but can boast of its Martvrs.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3621.

Religion is the best Armour in the World, but the worst Cloak.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4011.

Religion without Piety hath done more Mischief in the World, than all other Things put together.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4012.

1 When doctrines meet with general approbation,
It is not heresy, but reformation.

DAVID GARRICK, Epigram. (a. 1779)

Erasmus laid the egg of the Reformation and Luther hatched it.

R. C. TRENCH, Medieval Church History. Ch. 26. (1877)

2 Man has been rather defined as a religious than a rational animal.

JAMES HARRINGTON, Oceana, p. 484. (1656)

Man is by his constitution a religious animal
EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. (1790)

3 Religion is a disease, but it is a noble disease.
HERACLEITUS, Fragment. (c. 500 B.C.) There is a modern elaboration of this, "Religion is an infectious disease, the rapid spread of which is due to the social instincts of mankind."

Count religion but a childish toy.

MARLOWE, The Jew of Malta. Act i. (c. 1592)

Religion is the opium of the people.

KARL MARX, Introduction to a Critique of the Hegelian Philosophy of Right. (1844) See RÜHELE, Karl Marx, p. 57. In 1919 the Russian Bolsheviks adopted this as one of their slogans, "Religia opium dlia naroda," attributing it to Lenin.

His religion is at best an anxious wish—like that of Rabelais, a great Perhaps.

CARLYLE, Essays: Burns. (a. 1857)

Religion has reduced Spain to a guitar, Italy to a hand-organ, and Ireland to exile.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Gov. Rollin's Fast Day Proclamation. (a. 1899)

Formal religion was organized for slaves: it offered them consolation which earth did not provide.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Philistine. Vol. xxv, p. 89. (1908)

Religion is a monumental chapter in the history of human egotism.

WILLIAM JAMES, The Varieties of Religious Experience. Ch. 20. (1902)

Religion is a sum of scruples which impede the free exercise of our faculties.

SALOMON REINACH, Cults, Myths, and Religions. Ch. 1. (1904)

Religion—a daughter of Hope and Fear, explaining to Ignorance the nature of the Unknowable.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

Religion is not an intellectual test, but a faith.

E. W. HOWE, Sinner Sermons. (1926)

A religious system is an assemblage of guesses.
ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 30. (1940)

4 Religion stands on tiptoe in our land,
Ready to pass to the American strand.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church Militant, l. 235. (a. 1633)

Religion always sides with poverty.

GEORGE HERBERT, The Church Militant, l. 252.

5 Religion, Credit, and the Eye are not to be touched.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 836. (1640)

Jest not with the eye, or with religion.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 163. See under JESTING.

6 Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction, and to keep himself unspotted from the world. (ἀσπιλον ἑαυτὸν πᾶρῃν ἀπὸ τοῦ κόσμου.)

New Testament: James, i, 27. (A.D. 44) The Vulgate is, "Immaculatum se custodire ab hoc saeculo."

7 I must ever believe that religion substantially good which produces an honest life.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Miles King. (1814)

8 Religion's in the heart, not in the knees.

DOUGLAS JERROLD, The Devil's Ducat, i, ii. (a. 1857) "Monday religion is better than Sunday profession."

9 A man who has never had religion before, no more grows religious when he is sick, than a man who has never learnt figures can count, when he has need of calculation.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 28 April, 1783

10 Religion has brought forth criminal and impious deeds. (Religio peperit scelerosa atque impia facta.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 83. (c. 45 B.C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 12. Lucretius is describing the sacrifice of Iphigenia at Aulis. and in line 101 adds, "Tantum religio potuit suadere malorum!" (How many evils has religion caused!)

What excellent fools Religion makes of men!

BEN JONSON, Sejanus. Act v, sc. 1. (1603)

Men never do evil so completely and cheerfully as when they do it from religious conviction.

PASCAL, Pensées. Sec. xiv, No. 895. (c. 1660)

11 I find no quality so easy to counterfeit as religious devotion. (Je ne treuve aulcune qualité si aysee à contrefaire que la devotion.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1595)

In religion, as in friendship, they who protest the most are the least sincere.

SHERIDAN, The Duenna. Act iii, sc. 3. (1775)

<sup>1</sup> Wherever religion is a business, there will business be a religion.

A. J. MORRIS, Religion and Business. Title-page. (1853)

<sup>2</sup> All religions have been made by men.

NAPOLÉON BONAPARTE, to Gasper Gourgaud, at St. Helena, 28 Jan., 1817.

The more religious a country is, the more crimes are committed in it.

NAPOLÉON, to Gourgaud, 27 Dec., 1817.

<sup>3</sup> Hee that lives without religion, sayles without a compasse.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Newes from Shipboord. (1613)

Man, without religion, is the creature of circumstances.

HARE, Guesses at Truth. Bk. i. (1827)

<sup>4</sup> My own mind is my own church.

THOMAS PAINE, Age of Reason. Ch. 1. (1794)

Religion is like empire; they alone

Are fit to keep it who create their own.

A. W. RYDER, Aetius at Chalons. (1925)

<sup>5</sup> To do good is my religion.

THOMAS PAINE, The Age of Reason. Ch. 3. (1794)

<sup>6</sup> Religion is the Fear of God, and its Demonstration on good Works.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. Pt. i, maxim 454. (1693)

To have Religion upon Authority, and not upon Conviction, is like a Finger Watch, to be set forwards or backwards, as he pleases that has it in keeping.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude, i, 523.

That Religion cannot be right, that a Man is the worse for having.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude, i, 526.

No Religion is better than an Unnatural One.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude, i, 527.

To be Furious in Religion, is to be Irreligiously Religious.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude, i, 533.

It were better to be of no Church, than to be bitter for any.

WILLIAM PENN, Fruits of Solitude, i, 535.

<sup>7</sup> Men of sense are really but of one religion; but men of sense never tell it.

ANTHONY ASHLEY COOPER, EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, Apothegm. (c. 1675)

"People differ in their discourse and profession about these matters, but men of sense are really but of one religion." . . . "Pray, my lord, what religion is that which men of sense agree in?" "Madam," says the Earl immediately, "men of sense never tell it."

BISHOP GILBERT BURNET, History of My Own Time. Vol. i, bk. ii, ch. 1. (a. 1715) Note by ARTHUR ONSLOW, Speaker of the House of Commons. FROUDE, Short Studies on Great Subjects: A Plea for the Free Discussion of Theological Difficulties, tells a similar anecdote of Samuel Rogers, but this was probably a confusion of memory on Froude's part.

The saying has also been attributed to Benjamin Franklin, who no doubt repeated it upon some occasion, as it was exactly the sort of witticism which would appeal to him. "As for that," said Waldenshare, "sensible men are all of the same religion." "And pray, what is that?" inquired the Prince. "Sensible men never tell."

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 81. (1880) Borrowed from Lord Shaftesbury without credit.

<sup>8</sup> In religion
What damned error, but some sober brow
Will bless it, and approve it with a text?

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, iii. 2. 77. (1597)

Fools make the text, and men of wit the commentaries. (Les sots font le texte, et les hommes d'esprit les commentaires.)

ABBÉ FERDINANDO GALIANI, Of Politics. (c. 1770)

<sup>9</sup> All religious organizations exist by selling themselves to the rich.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act ii. (1905)

<sup>10</sup> We have just enough religion to make us hate, but not enough to make us love, one another.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

About as much religion as my William likes.

HANNAH GODWIN, Letter to her brother William, recommending that he marry Miss Gay. (c. 1795)

<sup>11</sup> There is more religion in men's science than there is science in their religion.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Sunday. (1849)

<sup>12</sup> The truths of religion are never so well understood as by those who have lost the power of reasoning.

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Religion. (1764)

<sup>13</sup> Orthodoxy is my doxy; heterodoxy is another man's doxy.

WILLIAM WARBURTON, Bishop of Gloucester, to Lord Sandwich. (c. 1770) See PRIESTLEY, Memoirs, i, 572.

<sup>14</sup> A fellow that makes religion his stalking-horse.

JOHN WEBSTER, Malcontent. Act iv, sc. 1. (1604)

They made Religion a stalking-horse to intend their own profit.

JOHN GEE, New Shreds of the Old Snare, p. 14. (1624)

Religion a stalking-horse to shoot other fowl.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1067. (1640)

How . . . abominable is it to make of . . . Religion a Stalking-horse, to get and enjoy the world.

JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress (1877), i, 115. (1678)

<sup>1</sup> Even in religious fervor there is a touch of animal heat.

WALT WHITMAN, Democratic Vistas. (1870)

<sup>2</sup> Truth, in matters of religion, is simply the opinion that has survived.

OSCAR WILDE, The Critic as Artist. (1891)

Religions die when they are proved to be true. Science is the record of dead religions.

OSCAR WILDE, Phrases and Philosophies for the Use of the Young. (1894) A somewhat similar saying is John Morley's "All religions die of one disease, that of being found out."

REMEDY

See also Medicine

<sup>3</sup> He that will not apply new remedies, must expect new evils.

BACON, Essays: Of Innovations. (1597) There is a Latin proverb which says, "Anceps remedium est melius quam nullam" (A doubtful remedy is better than none).

No remedies cause so much pain as those which are efficacious. (Nulla remedia tam faciunt dolorem quam quae sunt salutaria.)

BACON, Letter to Lord Henry Howard. (a.1616)

<sup>4</sup> Of the most High cometh healing. (A Deo est enim omnis medela.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxviii, 2. (c. 190 B.C.)

<sup>5</sup> Remedies which are bitter to the taste, when inwardly received wax sweet. (Degustata quidem mordeant, interius autem recepta dulcescant.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. iii, prose. 1. (A.D. 524)

O! sooth is seyed, that heled for to be . . . Men mooste drinke . . . Ful bittre drink.

CHAUCER, Troilus. Bk. iii, l. 1213. (c. 1380)

<sup>6</sup> The cure of hunger is food; the cure of ignorance is study.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 278. (1872)

<sup>7</sup> For divers ills are remedies diverse: The kindly speech of friends for one in grief, And admonitions when one plays the fool.

(ἄλλο δέγ' ἐπ' ἄλλη φάρμακον κείται νόσῳ. λυπονύμεν μὲν μῦθος εὐμενῆς φίλων, ἄγαν δὲ μωραίνονται νοουητέματα.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. Frag. 962. (c. 425 B.C.)

<sup>8</sup> What drugs cannot heal, the knife can heal; what the knife cannot heal, the cautery can heal; what the cautery cannot heal, nothing can heal.

HIPPOCRATES, Aphorisms. (c. 400 B.C.)

<sup>9</sup> Remember the olde prouerbe, past cure, past care, without remedie, without remembrance.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), ii, 154. (1593)

Past cure is still past care.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 28. (1595)

Things past redress are now with me past care.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, ii, 3, 171. (1595)

Comfort is now vnpleasing to mine eare,

Past cure, past care, my bed become my Beere.

MICHAEL DRAYTON, Heroical Epistles: Richard II to Queen Isabel. (1598)

When remedies are past, the griefs are ended.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 202. (1605)

Things without all remedy Should be without regard.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 2, 11. (1606)

Past cure I am, now reason is past care.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet cxlvii. (1609)

What's past help should be past grief.

SHAKESPEARE, Winter's Tale, iii, 2, 223. (1610)

But what is past my help is past my care.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Double Marriage. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1625)

If there be no remedy, then welcome Pilvall

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 189. (1670)

WHAT CAN'T BE CURED MUST BE ENDURED, see under ENDURANCE.

<sup>10</sup> He that bewails himself hath the cure in his hands.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 443. (1640)

There is a remedy for everything could men find it.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1140.

For every ill beneath the sun

There is some remedy or none;

If there be one, resolve to find it;

If not, submit, and never mind it.

UNKNOWN, Maxims and Morals. (c. 1843)

<sup>11</sup> Do not seek a remedy in others, but only in yourself.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. iii, pt. i, ch. 2, sec. 4. (c. 300 B.C.)

<sup>12</sup> That sick man is not to be pitied who has his cure in his sleeve. (Le malade n'est pas à plaindre, qui a la guarison en sa manche.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1595) i.e. his arm, capable of work. FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4371. (1732)

<sup>13</sup> I dressed him; God cured him. (Je le pansay; Dieu le guarit.)

AMBROSE PARÉ, concluding sentence of many of his surgical reports. (1552-73) The Latin phrase is, "Vis medicatrix naturae" (The healing power of nature).

<sup>14</sup> It is a bad remedy when something of nature perishes. (Mala est medicina, ubi aliquid naturae perit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 368. (c. 43 B.C.)

<sup>15</sup> Slower are remedies than diseases. (Tardiora sunt remedia quam mala.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 3. (c. A.D. 98) Similarly, "Satius est initiis mederi quam fini" (It is better to cure at the commencement than at the end).

A man is not so soon whole as hurt.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington. (1599) In HAZLITT, Old Plays, vii, 257.

A man is not so soon healed as hurt.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 317. (1605)

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 48. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 281. (1732)

One is not so soon healed as hurt.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 13. (1670)

<sup>1</sup> The remedy for the riot was another riot. (Remedium tumultus fuit alius tumultus.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. ii, sec. 68. (c. A. D. 109)

The Germans say, "Teufel muss man mit Teufeln austreiben" (Devils must be driven out with devils). "Poison drives out poison."

See under POISON.

<sup>2</sup> Remedies doe cure without a physician, but not a physician without remedies.

ROBERT WITTIE, tr., Popular Errors in Physick, i, 42. (1651)

<sup>3</sup> Against the evil of death there is no remedy in the gardens. (Contra malum mortis, non est medicamen in hortis.)

UNKNOWN. A medieval Latin proverb. (c. 1400)

Agens deeth is worth no medicine.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Daunce of Machabree, l. 432. (c. 1430)

There is a remedie for all things, sauving for death.

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Howres of Recreation, p. 99. (1572)

Vnto al is remedie, except vnto death. (A tutto è rimedio, ecetto che alla morte.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578)

There is a remedy for everything but death. (Para todo hay remedio, si no es para la muerte.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)

The French say, "Il y a remède à tout, fors à la mort."

II—Desperate Remedies

<sup>4</sup> For a hard knot a hard wedge is necessary. (Malo arboris nodo, malus cuneus requierendus.)

HIERONYMUS OF CARDIA, Oceanus. (c. 300 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 5, who also gives the variant, "Malo nodo, malus quaerendus cuneus" (For a hard knot seek a hard wedge). Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 5, with the rendering, "To a crabbed knotte muste be sought a crabbed wedge," and the addition, "A strong disease requyareth a stronge medicine. A shrewede wyfe a shrewede husbände to tame her. A boysteous horse, a boysteous snaffell."

Blunt wedges rive hard knots.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus, i, 3, 316. (1601)

A crabbed knot must have a crabbed wedge.

JOHN DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 24. (1611)

A blunt Wedge will do it, where sometimes a sharp Ax will not.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 19. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> Extreme remedies are very appropriate for extreme diseases.

HIPPOCRATES, Maxim. (c. 400 B. C.) And Hippocrates adds, "To do nothing is sometimes a good remedy."

Strong disease requyareth a strong medicine. (Extremis malis extrema remedia.)

RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, i, 4. (1539)

A desperate disease is to be committed to a desperate doctor.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues (Arber), p. 67. (1579)

So strange a maladie was to be cured with a desperate medicine.

LYLX, Euphues and His England, p. 321.

Diseases desperate grown

By desperate appliance are relieved,

Or not at all.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 3, 9. (1600)

Diseases desperate must find cures alike.

JOHN FORD, Broken Heart. Act iii, sc. 2. (1633)

Desperate cuts must have desperate cures.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 200. (1639)

The Spanish form is, "A mala llaga, mala yerva" (For a desperate wound, a desperate herb).

Desperate diseases must have desperate cures.

THOMAS FULLER, Church-History, ix, ii. (1655)

The desprat'st is the wisest course.

BUTLER, Hudibras to Sidrophel, l. 5. (1663)

A desperate disease must have a desperate cure.

SHADWELL, The Humourists. Act iv. (1670)

A proverbial saying in physic, desperate diseases must have desperate remedies.

DANIEL DEFOE, Reasons Against the Succession of the House of Hanover. (1713) RICHARDSON, Clarissa. Ch. 7. (1748)

<sup>6</sup> When gentle medicines haue no force to purge, wee must vse bitter potions, and where the sore is neither to be dissolved by plaister, nor to be broken, it is requisite, it should be launced.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 372. (1580)

Greevous woundes must have smarting playsters.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 163. (1576)

The ultimate remedy is a cautery.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 30. (1817)

<sup>7</sup> For the strongest maladies the strongest remedies. (Aux plus fortes maladies les plus forts remèdes.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1580) Another French form is, "À mal désespéré, remède héroïque."

For great evils great remedies. (Aux grands maux les grands remèdes.)

MAX O'RELL, John Bull et Son Ile, p. 286. (1890)

<sup>8</sup> No one tries desperate remedies at first. (Extrema primo nemo temtavit loco.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 153. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>9</sup> Intemperate agues, make Physitians cruell.

WEBSTER, Dutchesse of Malfy. Act iv, sc. 1. (1614)

III—The Remedy Worse than the Disease

<sup>1</sup> Cure the Disease and kill the Patient.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Friendship. (1597)
It is kill or cure.

ROBERT E. SHERWOOD, There Shall Be No Night. Act ii. (1940)

<sup>2</sup> The cure is not worth the pain. (τὸ ἐπανόρθωμα τῆς ἀλγηδόνος οὐκ ἔστιον.)

GAIUS MARIUS, Remark, after having had a varicose vein cut from his leg. (c. 90 B. C.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Gaius Marius. Ch. 6, sec. 3.

<sup>3</sup> My treatment increases the malady. (ὡμενος μείζον τὸ νόσημα ποιῶ.)

PLATO, Protagoras. Sec. 340E. (c. 389 B. C.)
Still higher it mounts, more inflamed by the healing. (Exsuperat magis, aegrescitque medendo.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xii, l. 46. (19 B. C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 12, with the French rendering, "Les remèdes ne font qu'aggraver le mal" (The remedies only aggravate the disease).

The disease is often made worse by the remedy. (Muchas veces hace la enfermedad del mismo remedio.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 121. (1647) Repeated in Maxim 138.

<sup>4</sup> Nearly all men die of their remedies, not of their diseases. (Presque tous les hommes meurent le leur remèdes, et non pas de leurs maladies.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Malade Imaginaire. Act iii, sc. 3, l. 151. (1673)

<sup>5</sup> As your physician, he is worse than the disease. (ἔστι δὲ θεραπέων τῆς νόσου βαρύτερος.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Garrulity. Sec. 504B. (c. A. D. 95)

<sup>6</sup> There are some remedies worse than the disease. (Graviora quaedam sunt remedia periculis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 238. (c. 43 B. C.)
His remedies were more grievous than the offence. (Gravior remediis quam delicta erant.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iii, sec. 28. (c. A. D. 116)
Another Latin form is, "Excessit medicina malum" (The remedy has exceeded the disease). The Italians say, "Il remedio è peggio del male."

Ungrateful is Lucius Sulla, who healed his fatherland by remedies that were harsher than her ills. (Ingratus L. Sulla, qui patriam durioribus remediis, quam pericula erant, sanavit.)

SENECA, De Beneficiis. Bk. v, ch. 16. sec. 3. (c. A. D. 54)

The Remedy is worse than the Disease.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Seditions and Troubles. (1597) VANBRUGH, The Provok'd Wife. Act v. (1697) DEFOE, title of tract. (1714) etc., etc.

I find the medicine worse than the malady.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Love's Cure. Act iii, sc. 2. (c. 1613)

The cure Is worse than the disease.

MASSINGER, The Bond-Man. Act i, sc. 1. (1623)
The Remedy often times proves worse than the Disease.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. Maxim 332. (1693)

The cure sometimes presents a worse problem than the affliction.

ELLERY QUEEN, The Trojan Horse. (1940)

He decided that the cure, if any, was worse than the disease.

JOHN SPAIN, Dig Me a Grave, p. 168. (1942)

<sup>7</sup> How often does God find remedies for us worse than our perils. (Remedia quotiens invenit nobis deus | periculis peiora.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 433. (c. A. D. 60)

REMEMBRANCE

See also Memory

<sup>8</sup> Things hard to bear grow pleasant to relate. (Aspera perpessu fiunt iucunda relatu.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichon, l. 32. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 626.

'Tis sweet to think on what was hard t' endure.
ROBERT HERRICK, Satisfaction for Suffering. (1648)

Oh! that was the good time; I was very unhappy (Oh! c'était le bon temps; j'étais bien mal heureuse.)

SOPHIE ARNOULD, Remark, to Claude Rulhière (c. 1785)

One day a famous actress was telling me of the rages of her first lover, and half-dreaming, half-laughing, she added this charming word: Oh, that was the good time—I was very unhappy.

(Un jour, une actrice fameuse
Me contait les fureurs de son premier amant;
Moitié revant, moitié rieuse,
Elle ajouta ce mot charmant:
Oh! c'était le bon temps, j'étais bien malheureuse.)

CLAUDE RULHIÈRE, Épître à M. de Cha— (c. 1787)

Oh, the good time when we were so unhappy (Oh le bon temps ou étions si malheureux.)

ALEXANDRE DUMAS, Le Chevalier d'Harmental. Bk. ii, p. 318. (c. 1860)

<sup>9</sup> The remembrance of the past is the teacher of the future.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts). Bk. iii, sec. 2. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr. Quoted as a saying of Kagi.

<sup>10</sup> Woe to him who, left to moan,
Reviews the hours of brightness gone.
(τὸ δὲ μετ' εὐτυχίας κακοῦ-σθαι θνατοῖς βαρὺς αὐτῶν.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia in Taurica, l. 1121. (c. 414 B. C.)

Heavier will grow my woes if I remember joys. (Tristibus afficiar gravior, si laeta recorder.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichon, l. 37. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 626.

In every adversity of fortune, to have been happy is the most unhappy kind of misfortune. (In omni adversitate fortunae, infelicissimum est genus infortunii fuisse felicem.)

BOETHIUS, De Consolatione Philosophiae. Bk. ii, prose 4, l. 4. (c. A. D. 520)

There is no greater pain than to recall a happy time in wretchedness. (Nessun maggior dolore, | che ricordarsi del tempo felice | nella miseria.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto v, l. 121. (c. 1300)

For of fortunes sharp adversitee

The worst kinde of infortune is this,

A man to have ben in prosperitee,

And it remembreth, whan it passed is.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. iii, l. 1625. (c. 1380)

Nor nothyng more may hertis disaunaunce

Than off old ioie newe remembraunce.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Fall of Princes. Bk. i, l. 650. (c. 1440)

The remembrance of pleasure doubles our pain. (Che ricordarsi il ben doppia la noia.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1580) Quoting an Italian proverb.

To have been happy adds to calamity.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Fair Maid of the Inn. Act i, sc. 1, l. 250. (c. 1613)

The consideration of pleasures past greatly augments the pain present.

LING, comp., Politeuphuia, p. 102. (1669)

The memory of Happiness makes Misery woeful.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia No. 4650. (1732)

Of joys departed

Not to return, how painful the remembrance!

ROBERT BLAIR, The Grave, l. 109. (1743)

There is no worse sorrow than remembering happiness in the day of sorrow. (Il n'est pire douleur Qu'un souvenir heureux dans le jour de malheur.)

ALFRED DE MUSSET, La Saule. (1837)

Remembrance wakes with all her busy train, Swells at my breast, and turns the past to pain.

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, Deserted Village, l. 81. (1770)

In after time a man finds joy even in woes, when he has suffered much and wandered much. (μετὰ γὰρ τε καὶ ἀλγεσι τέρεται ἀνὴρ, | ὅς τις δὴ μάλα πολλὰ πάθη καὶ πόλλ' ἐπαληθῆ.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 400. (c. 850 B. C.)

Misquoted by ARISTOTLE, Art of Rhetoric, i, 11, 8.

It is truly pleasant to remember toil after one has escaped it. (ἀλλ' ἡδὺ τοι σωθέντα μεμνησθαι πόνων.)

EURIPIDES, Andromeda. Fr. 133, T.G.F. (c. 430 B. C.) Quoted approvingly by ARISTOTLE, Art of Rhetoric, i, 11, 8, and by CICERO, De Finibus, ii, 105, who gives the Latin, "Suavis laborum est praeteritorum memoria."

Past woes are sweet to hear. (ἡδὺ τοι μόχθων κλύειν.)

EURIPIDES, Helen, l. 665. (c. 412 B. C.)

The placid remembrance of past trouble is not without its charm. (Habet enim praeteriti doloris secreta recordatio delectationem.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. v, epis. 12, sec. 4. (56 B. C.)

The memory of past evils is pleasant. (Iucunda memoria est praeteritorum malorum.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. ii, ch. 32, sec. 105 (c. 45 B. C.)

Perchance even this distress will some day be a pleasure to recall. (Forsan et haec olim meminisse iuvabit.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 203. (19 B. C.) La Fontaine puts the line into French: "Endurons tous ces maux; peut-être à l'avenir, | Nous sera-t-il bien doux de nous en souvenir" (Let us endure these woes; perhaps in the future they will be very sweet to us in remembrance).

It is a pleasure, too, to remember. (Namque est meminisse voluptas.)

OVID, Heroides, Epis. xviii, l. 55. (c. 10 B. C.)

Things that were hard to bear are sweet to remember. (Quae fuit durum pati, meminisse dulce est.)

SENECA, Hercules Furens, l. 656. (c. A. D. 60)

Laboures once done, be swete. (Iucundi acti labores.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. iii, No. 43. (1508) Taverner, tr.

The remembrance of the paine that is past is sweete.

GEOFFREY FENTON, tr., Bandello, i, 4. (1567)

The remembrance of perill past delighteth.

GEORGE PRETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 61. (1576)

All these woes shall serve

For sweet discourses in our time to come.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iii, 5, 52. (1595)

Th' hydroptique drunkard, and night-scouting thiefe,

The itchy Lecher, and selfe tickling proud

Have the remembrance of past joyes, for reliefe Of comming ills.

JOHN DONNE, Holy Sonnets, iii. (c. 1617)

The remembrance of past sorrow is joyful.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 206. (1639)

Ah! how the memory of our Crosses past, Heightens our joys when we succeed at last.

SIR SAMUEL TUKE, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act v, sc. 3. (1663)

Past Labour's pleasant.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3845. (1732)

That which was bitter to endure, may be sweet to remember.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4385.

Sorrows remembered sweeten present joy.

POLLOCK, Course of Time. Bk. i, l. 464. (1827)

Pleasant the looking back upon our sins

In all their rainbow forms.

When the sad chastity of age begins,

How we regret the storms!

LAURENCE HOUSMAN, Aged Virtue. (c. 1920)

Fallen blossoms leave their perfume behind.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 438 (1938) A Japanese proverb.

He lives twice, who is able to find delight in the life that is past. (Hoc est | vivere bis, vita posse priore frui.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 23. (A. D. 93)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 5.

I remember, I remember,
The house where I was born;
The little window where the sun
Came creeping in at morn.

THOMAS HOOD, I Remember. (1826)

Where is the heart that doth not keep,
Within its inmost core,

Some fond remembrance hidden deep,
Of days that are no more?

ELLEN C. HOWARTH, 'Tis But a Little Faded Flower. (1864)

1
The saddest lot of all, they say, is to know the good, and yet, perforce, to be debarred therefrom. (καλὰ γινώσκοντ' ἀνάγκ' ἐκτὸς ἔχειν πῶδα.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. Ode iv, l. 510. (462 B. C.)

CHURTON COLLINS, Illustrations of Tennyson, p. 62, says that this was the inspiration of Tennyson's line, given below.

This is truth the poet sings

That a sorrow's crown of sorrow is remembering happier things.

TENNYSON, Locksley Hall, l. 75. (1842)

2
If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth. (Adhaereat lingua mea faucibus meis, si non meminero tui.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxvii, 6. (c. 250 B. C.)

Live remembering us. (Vive memor nostri.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. xi, l. 125. (c. 10 B. C.)

I remember it better than my own name. (Teneo melius ista quam meum nomen.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iv, No. 37. (c. A. D. 90)

3
Most mortals remember only that which happens last. (Plurique mortales postrema meminere.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. li, sec. 15. (41 B. C.)

4
No one forgets his own happiness. (Nemo felicitatis suae obliviscitur.)

SENECA (?), Ludus de Morte Claudii Sec. 5.
(c. A. D. 55)

Remembered joys are never past.

JAMES MONTGOMERY, The Little Cloud. (1818)

5
Praising what is lost
Makes the remembrance dear.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, v, 3,
19. (1602)

Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen.
In the remembrance of a weeping queen.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iii, 4. 106. (1595)

There's rosemary, that's for remembrance.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 5, 175. (1600)

6
Our Knowledge is but mere Remembrance all,
Remembrance is our Treasure and our Food.

SWIFT, To Sir William Temple, l. 30. (1689)

7
You can't order remembrance out of a man's mind.

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Ch. 10. (1858)

8
The weight of present woe will express the sweetness of past experience.

H. R. THOREAU, Early Spring in Massachusetts.
3 April, 1842.

9
I'll see if I can call it back from recollection's vaults.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 21. (1884)

REMORSE

See also Regret, Repentance

10
Hastow som remors of conscience?

CHAUCER, Troilus. Bk. i, l. 554. (c. 1380)

He is euer in doubt and in remors of conscience.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Cato, sig. Dj. (1483)

And first within the portche and lawes of Hell
Sate diepe Remorse of conscience.

THOMAS SACKVILLE, The Mirror for Magistrates: Induction. (1563)

11
Remorse, the fatal egg by Pleasure laid.

COWPER, The Progress of Error, l. 239. (1780)

Remorse is the poison of life.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Jane Eyre. Ch. 14. (1847)

Remorse is a violent dyspepsia of the mind, . . .

And one man's remorse is another's reminiscence.

OGDEN NASH, A Clean Conscience Never Relaxes. (1940)

Remorse is the thing we ought to feel and don't.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p.

143. (1940) Another American variant, "Remorse is a sign that it wasn't as pleasant as expected."

Remorse—the "again-bite."

R. A. FREEMAN, The Case of Oscar Brodski:
(1941)

Remorse is pride's ersatz for repentance.

ALDOUS HUXLEY, Time Must Have a Stop. Ch.
30. (1944)

12
A daie after the fayre comth this remors.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

"A day after the fair," a day too late. See under LATENESS.

13
Remorse goes to sleep during a prosperous period and wakes up in adversity. (Le remords s'endort durant un destin prospère et s'aigrit dans l'adversité.)

J.-J. ROUSSEAU, Confessions. Bk. i. (a. 1778)

14
No man is more heavily punished than he who is consigned to the torture of remorse.
(Nec quisquam gravius adficitur quam qui ad supplicium paenitentiae traditur.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. iii, ch. 26. (c. A. D. 55)

O, full of scorpions is my mind.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 2, 36.

Nor ear can hear nor tongue can tell

The tortures of that inward hell.

LORD BYRON, The Giaour, l. 748. (1813)

15
Abandon all remorse;

On horror's head horrors accumulate.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 369. (1605)

Farewell, remorse: all good to me is lost;
Evil, be thou my good.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 109. (1667)

1 Why feel remorse for what is past recall? (τὶ σὴτ' ἂν ἀλγούης ἐπ' ἐξυργασμένοις;)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 377. (c. 409 B.C.)

Remorse for what is done is useless. (ἀνωφελὲς αἰ μεταμέλειαι.)

PHILO, De Iosepho. Sec. 173. (c. A.D. 40)

REPENTANCE

See also Regret, Remorse

2 If only I could be saved now! (οὐν γένοιτο σωθῆναι μόνον.)

AESOP, Fables: The Tortoise and the Eagle. (c. 600 B.C.) The tortoise asked the eagle to teach it to fly, but soon had cause to repent, and exclaimed, "If only I could be saved now, I'd never again be so foolish!"

He repents too late who repents after he has lost.

(Je di: Cil se repent trop tart, Qui se repent quant a perdu.)

UNKNOWN, De III. Dames Qui Troverent I. Vil, l. 139 (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux, v, 36.

I repent of it, but it is too late. (Si m'en repent, mais ch'est à tart.)

MILON D'AMIENS, De Prestre et du Chevalier, l. 783. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, ii, 71.

You come too late to repent. (Tu vendras tart au repentir.)

DURAND, Des Trois Boçus, l. 222. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, i, 20.

3 One self-chastisement in a man's heart is better than many lashes.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 7a. (c. 450)

Better is one hour of repentance and good deeds in this world than a whole life in the World to Come.

Babylonian Talmud: Pirké Aboth, iv, 22

Repentance and good deeds are man's advocates.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 32a.

4 I ne'er repented any thing yet in my life,
And scorn to begin now.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Queen of Corinth. Act iv, sc. 1. (c. 1613)

Never to repent and never to reproach others, these are the first steps to wisdom.

DENIS DIDEROT, Pensées. (a. 1784)

Come, fill the Cup, and in the fire of Spring
Your Winter-garment of Repentance fling:

The Bird of Time has but a little way

To flutter—and the Bird is on the Wing.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, The Rubáiyát. St. 7. (1859)

5 Repent one day before thy death. (μὴ ἀνάμενε ἐπιστρέφαι πρὸς κύριον, καὶ μὴ ὑπερβάλλου ἡμέραν ἐξ ἡμέρας.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), v, 7. (c. 190 B.C.)

R. Eliezer said, "Repent one day before your death." His disciples asked him, "Does, then, anyone know on which day he will die?" He replied to them, "How much more reason is there for him to repent today!"

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 153a. (c. 450) See also Pirké Aboth, ii, 10, and Sepher Hachasdim, sec. 82.

Delay not repentance, for death comes unawares.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 450 (c. 1050)

"Would a man 'scape the rod?"

Rabbi Ben Karshook saith,

"See that he turn to God

The day before his death."

"Ay, could a man inquire

When it will come!" I say.

The Rabbi's eye shoots fire—

"Then let him turn to-day!"

ROBERT BROWNING, Ben Karshook's Wisdom (1854)

"Oh, God, if I were sure I were to die tonight I would repent at once." It is the commonest prayer in all languages.

BARRIE, Sentimental Tommy. Ch. 8. (1896)

The moral is a monkish one: repent and reform now; for tomorrow it may be too late.

SHAW, Man and Superman: Preface. (1903)

6 Repentance. The faithful attendant and follower of Punishment.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

7 For old sins, new penitence. (Peccato vecchio. penitenza nuova.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbs, p. 203. (1856) An Italian proverb.

8 In all my life, I have never repented but of three things: that I trusted a woman with a secret, that I went by sea when I might have gone by land, and that I passed a day in idleness.

MARCUS CATO. (c. 160 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 9, sec. 6. Quoted by RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 24.

9 Who sins and mends commends himself to God. (Quien yerra y se enmienda, a Dios se encomienda.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 28. (1615)

10 Penitence of goode and humble folk is the penitence of every day.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Persones Tale. Sec. 3. (c. 1389) Quoting St. Augustine.

11 The seeds of repentance are sown in youth by pleasure, but the harvest is reaped in age by pain.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 455. (1820)

12 No power can the impenitent absolve. (Ch' assolver non si può, chi non si pente.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxvii, l. 118. (c. 1300)

<sup>1</sup> I will not buy repentance for ten thousand drachmas. (οὐκ ἀνοῦμαι μυρίων δραχμῶν μεταμέλειαν.)

DEMOSTHENES, when Lais, the celebrated courtesan of Corinth, demanded that sum as the price of her favors. (c. 340 B. C.) See AULUS GELLIUS, i, 8.

Not every man may go to Corinth town. (οὐ πάντες ἀνδρὸς ἐς Κόρινθον ἐσθ' ὁ πλοῦς.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. i, ch. 8. (C. A. D. 150) Gellius says that the origin of this Greek maxim was the fact that Lais demanded such a high price for her favors that few could afford them.

Lais, the most beautiful of women, when I ask you what is the price of your favors, you at once require an Attic talent. At such a cost, Lais, I do not buy repentance. (Tanti non emo. Lai, poenitere.)

MARTIAL (?), Epigrams: Against Lais. Loeb, p. 531. (C. A. D. 85) The French proverb, "Le repentir coûte bien cher" (Repentance costs very dear) is derived from this anecdote.

In time [they] should him fear,

Lest after they buy repentance too dear.

BEN JONSON, The Poetaster. Act v, sc. 1 (1601)

<sup>2</sup> Repentance is the virtue of weak minds.

DRYDEN, Indian Emperor. Act iii, sc. 1. (1665)

<sup>3</sup> No resolution of repenting hereafter can be sincere.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

<sup>4</sup> True repentance never comes too late. (Poenitentia vera numquam est sera.)

FULGENTIUS, Faith. (C. A. D. 508) As quoted by PONTANUS, p. 160, who also quoted St. Augustine as saying, "True repentance is rare" (Poenitentia sera raro vera).

It is an old saying, Repentance is never too late; but it is a true saying, Repentance is never too soon.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons (1866), i, 218. (a.1591) It's never too late to repent.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 112. (1670) He comes never too late who comes repentant

JUAN DE HOROZCO, Manasses. Act iii.

And while the lamp holds out to burn,
The vilest sinner may return.

ISAAC WATTS, Hymns. Bk. i, No. 88. (1707)

<sup>5</sup> Repentance is not to be measured by Inches and Hours.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4017. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Rise not without thanks, nor sleep not without repentance.

ROBERT GREENE, Never Too Late. (1590)

<sup>7</sup> I singe nowe in this facte, factus est repente,
Nowe mine eies be open I do repent me.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

<sup>8</sup> The hearts of good men admit of repentance. (ἀκεστὰ τοι φρένες ἐσθλῶν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiii, l. 115. (c. 850 B. C.)

A noble mind disdains not to repent.

POPE, tr., Iliad, xv, 227. (1720)

<sup>9</sup> He who finds it easy to repent will find it easy to sin.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 215. (1902)

<sup>10</sup> The commune proverbe seith thus: "he that sone demeth sone shal repent." (Car l'on dit communément: qui tost juge, tost se repent.)

JEAN DE MEUNG (?), Le Livre de Melibee et de Dame Prudence, i, 190. (c. 1290) Chaucer, tr. (c. 1387)

<sup>11</sup> I repent in dust and ashes. (Ago poenitentiam in favilla et cinere.)

Old Testament: Job, xlii, 6. (c. 350 B. C.)

Now, mea culpa, lord! I me repent.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. ii, l. 525. (c. 1380)

His soul smelt pleasant as rain-wet clover.

"I have sinned and repented and that's all over."

STEPHEN VINCENT BENÉT, King David. (1931)

<sup>12</sup> It is a common saying, Poenitentia sera raro vera.

HUGH LATIMER, Works (P.S.), ii, 193. (1552)

Late repentance is seldom true.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 255. (1639)

He well repents that will not sin, yet can;

But Death-bed sorrow rarely shews the man.

NATHANIEL LEE, The Princess of Cleve Act iv. sc. 3. (a. 1692)

A death-bed repentance seldom reaches to restitution.

JUNIUS, Letters: Dedication. (1769)

<sup>13</sup> He runneth far that neuer returneth, and he sinneth deadly that neuer repenteth.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber) p. 197. (1579)

Better solde for sorrow, then bought for repentaunce.

LYLY, Euphues and His England, p. 288.

<sup>14</sup> Joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth, more than over ninety and nine just persons, which need no repentance. (οὕτως χαρὰ ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ ἔσται ἐπὶ ἐνὶ ἁμαρτωλῷ μετανοοῦντι ἢ ἐπὶ ἐνενήκοντα ἑννέα δικαίοις οἵτινες οὐ χρεῖαν ἔχουσιν μετανοίας.)

New Testament: Luke, xv, 7. (C. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Gaudium erit in caelo super uno peccatore poenitentiam agente, quam super nonagintanovem iustis, qui non indigent poenitentia."

<sup>15</sup> Harm doon, to late folweth repentaunce.

JOHN LYDGATE, The Fall of Princes. Bk. iii, l. 915. (c. 1440)

Bought witte is deare, and drest with sower salte, Repentaunce commes to late.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Posies: Flowers. (1575)

When all is consumed, repentance comes too late.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 22. (1670)

When all is gone, Repentance comes too late.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5545. (1732)

1 He that repents either was, or is, a fool.
SAMUEL PALMER, Proverbs, p. 286. (1710)
He that repents of his own Act, either is, or was a Fool by his own Confession.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2264. (1732)
Repentance is the Whip for Fools.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4018.

2 Repentance follows a hasty plan. (Velox consilium sequitur paenitentia.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 734. (c. 43 B. C.)
Repentance is the fruite of haast.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 107. (1477)

He who repents his deed punishes himself. (Sibi supplicium ipse dat quem admissi paenitet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 660.

3 Who repents his sin is almost innocent. (Quem paenitet peccasse paene est innocens.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 243. (c. A. D. 60)

Repentance and good works are as a shield against punishment.

RABBI ELIEZER BEN JACOB, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, iv, 15. (c. A. D. 180)

He that sinneth, and verrailly repenteth him in his laste ende, holy chirche yet hopeth his saviour.

CHAUCER, The Persones Tale, Sec. 2. (c. 1389)
Who after his transgression doth repent.

Is halfe, or altogether innocent.

ROBERT HERRICK, Penitence. (1648) However, another proverb says, "Repentance is good,
but innocence is better."

4 I desire rather to feel compunction than to know its definition. (Opto magis sentire compunctionem, quam scire eius definitionem.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 1. (c. 1420)

5 Repent in the morning, and in the evening you will have already gained the wage that will support you.

TSE-CHAN, Sublimity of Righteousness. (c. 550 B. C.)

But with the morning cool repentance came.

SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 12. (1818)

The morning is the time for repentance.

BESANT AND RICE, Chaplain of the Fleet, i, 159. (1881)

6 The Romish doctors reckon three stages in the passage from vice to virtue, attrition, contrition, and repentance.

ABRAHAM TUCKER, The Light of Nature Pursued, ii, 65. (1768)

ON THE STOOL OF REPENTANCE, see under STOOL.

7 There's no repentance in the grave.

ISAAC WATTS, Solemn Thoughts. (1707)

8 O Penitence, let me truly tast thy Cup,
That throwes men downe, onely to raise them up.

WEBSTER, Dutchesse of Malfy, v, 2. (1614)

9 Repentance is quite out of date, and beside, if a woman really repents, she has to go to a bad dressmaker, otherwise no one believes in her.

OSCAR WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act iii. (1892) "Few women repent if the sun is shining brightly," adds an unidentified ironist.

REPETITION

10 "What again?" quoth Paul when his wife made him a cuckold the second time.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 303. (1639)

"What again?" quoth Palmer.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)

11 Repetition is every where unacceptable, tho' 'twere in Homer.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4020. (1732)

12 Use not vain repetitions. (μὴ βατταλογήσητε.)
New Testament: Matthew, vi, 7. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Nolite multum loqui."

The Scriptures abound in elegant repetitions.

THEOPHILUS GALE, The Court of the Gentiles, i, iii, x, 107. (1669)

13 I object to saying things twice. (Nolo bis iterari.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 388. (c. 195 B. C.)

14 I re-tell thee again and again.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 372. (1605) The French have a proverbial phrase, "Toujours perdrix" (always partridge), meaning always the same thing, said to have originated from the story of Henry IV having ordered nothing but partridge to be served to his confessor, who had rebuked him for his love affairs.

CRAMBE, REPETITION, see under CABBAGE.

REPORT

See also Reputation, Rumor

15 Thou shalt not raise a false report. (Non suscipies vocem mendacii.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xxiii, 1. (c. 550 B. C.)
Generall reports are seldom false. Vox populi vox Dei.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Fame. (1642) "What everyone says must be true."

See also under VOICE.

I am almost inclined to reverse the proverb and say, "What every one says must be a lie."

S. T. COLERIDGE, Letters, i, 119. (1820)

16 A false report rides post.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Brit.-Eng., p. 14. (1659) There is a Latin proverb, "Ea fama vagatur" (That report is in circulation), and another, "Dictum de dicto" (A report founded on a report).

17 A good report maketh the bones fat. (Fama bona impinguat ossa.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xv, 30 (c. 350 B. C.)

By evil report and good report. (διὰ δυσφημίας καὶ εὐφημίας.)

New Testament: II Corinthians, vi, 8. (c. A. D.

55) The Vulgate is, "Per infamiam, et bonam famam."

Far better thou be good, although defamed, than bad and of good report.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. ii. Apologue 23. (c. 1258)

REPROACH

1 A man's first care should be to avoid the reproaches of his own heart.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Sir Roger de Coverley Papers: Sir Roger on the Bench. (1711)

2 One reproach for another. (ὀνειδος ἀντ' ὀνείδους.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1560. (458 B.C.)
Sting thy liver with merited reproaches, for to the right-minded reproach serves as a spur. (ἀλγῶσον ἥπαρ ἐνδίκῳις ὀνείδεσιν | τοῖς σώφροσιν γὰρ ἀντίκεντρα γίνεταί.)

AESCHYLUS, Eumenides, l. 135. (458 B.C.)

3 He who bears reproach without resentment escapes a thousand grievances.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 7a. (c. 450)

Better a good grievance than a bad compensation. (Mas vale buena queja que mala paga.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1615)

4 The Sting of a Reproach is the Truth of it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4769. (1732)

5 This was he, whom we had sometimes in derision, and a proverb of reproach. (Hi sunt, quos habuimus aliquando in derisum.)

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, 5, 3 (c. 100 B.C.)

REPROOF

6 Severitie breedeth Feare, but Roughnesse breedeth Hate. Even Reproofes from Authority, ought to be Grave, and not Taunting

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Great Place. (1597)

7 Reprove thy neighbour before thou threaten.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xix, 17. (c. 150 B.C.)

Reprove before you punish.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 271. (c. 1050)

8 Salomon seith: that "he that repreveth him that doth folye, he shal finde gretter grace than he that deceyveth him by swete wordes."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeuus. Sec. 57. (c. 1387)

Flattery is sickness; reproof is medicine. (Kan yen chi yeh: k'u yen yao yeh.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1693. (1875)

Who flatters me is my enemy; who reproves me is my teacher. (Tao wu 'hao ché shih wu tsei; | Tao wu o ché shih wu shih.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1702.

Who reproves the lame must go upright.

SAMUEL DANIEL, History of the Civil War. Bk.

iii, st. 10. (1595) The usual form is, "Only the upright may reprove the lame."

10 He that can bear a Reproof, and mend by it, if he is not wise, is in a fair way of being so.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750

11 Public Reproof hardens Shame.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3977. (1732)

Reproof never does a wise Man any harm.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4026.

12 Admonition leads to friendship, for without admonition love is worthless.

Midrash Rabbah, Genesis, liv. (c. 550) Rokeiach: Preface, has, "There is no kindness like that of friendly admonition."

13 Reprove not a scorner, lest he hate thee: rebuke a wise man, and he will love thee. (Noli arguere derisorem, ne oderit te. Argue sapientem, et diliget te.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, ix, 8. (c. 350 B.C.)

Fear not the anger of the wise to raise;

Those best can bear reproof who merit praise.

POPE, Essay on Criticism. Pt. iii, l. 23. (1709)

14 Open rebuke is better than secret love. (Melior est manifesta correptio, quam amor absconditus.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 5. (c. 350 B.C.)

Rebukes ought not to weigh a graine more of salt then suger.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 327. (1580)

Rebukes ought not to have a Grain of Salt more than of Sugar.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4007. (1732)

15 Reproof is cruel in adversity. (Crudelis est in re adversa obiurgatio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 101. (c. 43 B.C.)

16 Buy a fan to cover your face. (Mai pa shan tzū ché lien.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1689.

(1875) Said to another this conveys reproof; said of one's self, apology

17 He that sharply chides is ready to pardon.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote Pt. ii, ch. 70. (1620)

He that sharply chides, is the most ready to pardon.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2293. (1732)

REPUBLIC

See also Democracy

18 A monarchy is a merchantman which sails well, but will sometimes strike on a rock and go to the bottom, a republic is a raft which will never sink, but then your feet are always in the water.

FISHER AMES, Speech, House of Representatives. (1795) Quoted by EMERSON, Politics.

A monarchy is like a man-of-war,—bad shots between wind and water hurt it exceedingly; there is danger of capsizing. But democracy is a raft. You cannot easily overturn it. It is a wet place, but it is a pretty safe one.

JOSEPH COOK, Monday Lectures: Labor. (1880)

A striking example of a bad paraphrase to avoid direct quotation.

<sup>1</sup> The republican is the only form of government which is not eternally at open or secret war with the rights of mankind.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Reply to Address. (1790)
The republican government is slow to move, yet when once in motion, its momentum becomes irresistible.

JEFFERSON, Letter to F. C. Gray. (1815)

<sup>2</sup> An acrimonious and surly republican.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Milton. (1779)

<sup>3</sup> You are an impertinent, my friend, a man to be banished from the republic of letters. (Vous êtes un impertinent, mon ami, un homme bannissable de la république des lettres.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Mariage Forcé. Sc. 4, l. 2. (1664)

Pray consider what a figure a man would make in the republic of letters.

JOSEPH ADDISON, Ancient Medals, i, 19. (1702)
The commonwealth of letters.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 529. (1712)

A pamphlet which should make a great noise in the republic of letters. (Une brochure . . . qui doit faire grand bruit dans la république des lettres.)

LE SAGE, Gil Blas. Bk. xii, ch. 7. (1715)

The death of Dr. Hudson is a loss to the republic of letters.

WILLIAM KING, Letter, 7 Jan., 1719.

If there could be a wise republic, it ought to be, apparently, the republic of letters. (S'il pouvait y avoir une république sage, ce devrait être, ce semble, la république des lettres.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 675. (1746)

"The Republic of Letters" is a very common expression among the Europeans.

GOLDSMITH, The Citizen of the World. Letter 20. (1760)

It gives me sincere satisfaction to learn the flourishing state of your literary republic.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, referring to Harvard College. (1789) See ELIOT, History of Harvard College, p. 152.

<sup>4</sup> Republics are brought to their ends by luxury, monarchies by poverty. (Les républiques finissent par le luxe; les monarchies par la pauvreté.)

MONTESQUIEU, The Spirit of the Laws. Ch. 7. (1748)

<sup>5</sup> Republics exist only on tenure of being agitated.

WENDELL PHILLIPS, Speech, in Boston, 28 Jan., 1852.

<sup>6</sup> In a republic, all are masters, and each tyrannizes over the others.

MAX STIRNER, The Ego and His Own. (1845)
See also LOWELL, under DEMOCRACY.

<sup>7</sup> It is easier for a republican form of government to be applauded than realized. (Rei publicae forma laudari facilius quam evenire.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 33. (c. A. D. 116)

REPUTATION

See also Name: Good Name

<sup>8</sup> I am a long-suffering man. I pay heed to my reputation; it shows what is in my heart.

ANTEF, Philosophy. No. iv. From his stele in British Museum. (c. 2200 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> He who leaves the fame of good works after him does not die.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 625. (1817)

<sup>10</sup> Hold fast to your reputation. (Existimationem retine.)

CATO (?), Disticha: Prol. No. 42. (c. 175 B. C.)
The wounds of base repute are never cured. (Numquam sanantur deformis vulnera fama.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 5. See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

A wounded reputation is seldom cured.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 304. (1855)

<sup>11</sup> The reputation of a woman may be compared to a mirror of crystal, shining and bright, but liable to be sullied by every breath that comes near it.

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 33. (1605)
Reputation crackt is a Venice-Glass broke.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4021. (1732)
Glass, China, and Reputation, are easily crack'd. and never well mended.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750.

The Italians say, "A good reputation is like the cypress: once cut, it never again puts forth leaf."

Don't consider your reputation, and you may do anything you like.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 374. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>12</sup> The solar system has no anxiety about its reputation.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship. (1860)
The reputations of the nineteenth century will one day be quoted to prove its barbarism.

EMERSON, Uses of Great Men. (1850)

All reputations each age revises.

EMERSON, Journals, v, 312. (c. 1860)

<sup>13</sup> A great Reputation is a great Charge.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 202. (1732)

A successful Man loses no Reputation.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 426.

Reputation depends less upon our selves than upon Fortune.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4022.

Reputation serves to Virtue, as Light does to a Picture.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4025.

1 Work is the price that is paid for reputation. (Cómprase la reputación á precio de trabajo.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 18. (1647)

Reputation depends more on what is hidden than on what is done. (Consiste el crédito en el recato más que en el hecho.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 126.

Never stake your reputation on a single cast. (Nunca exponer el crédito á prueba de sola una vez.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 185.

2 The great difficulty is first to win a reputation; the next to keep it while you live; and the next to preserve it after you die.

BENJAMIN R. HAYDON, Table Talk. (a. 1846)

3 Some man maie steale a hors better Than some other maie stande and looke vpon.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

That is, with a good reputation, a man can get away with anything; with a bad one, it is dangerous even to look at a horse. The Chinese say, "One man may set the town ablaze, another may not light his lantern."

Some man may better steale a horse, than another looke ouer the hedge.

JOHN LYL, Endimion. Act iii, sc. 3. (1591)

Some may better steal a horse than others look on.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Michaelmas Terme. Act i, sc. 1. (1607)

One man may better steal a horse, than another look over a hedge.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 128. (1670)

See the partiality of mankind! One man may steal a horse, better than another look over a hedge.

GAY, The Beggar's Opera. Act iii, sc. 4. (1728)

An Englishman may look over the hedge, while an Irishman must not stale a horse.

GARRICK, The Irish Widow. Act i, sc. 3. (1772)

Nobody has bellowed "Plagiarist!" Some people may not look over a fence: Mr. [R. L.] Stevenson, if he liked, might steal a horse.

ANDREW LANG, Essays in Little, p. 30. (1891)

4 How many people live on the reputation of the reputation they might have made!

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 3. (1858)

5 Those that throw away virtue must not expect to save reputation.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 133 (1902)

6 The blaze of a reputation cannot be blown out, but it often dies in the socket.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to Mrs. Thrale, 1 May, 1780.

7 Men . . . have their reputation by distance.

BEN JONSON, Explorato: Decipimur Specie. (1636)

8 Character is like a tree and reputation like its shadow. The shadow is what we think of it; the tree is the real thing.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Epigram. (c. 1863) See GROSS, Lincoln's Own Stories, p. 109.

Many a man's reputation would not know his character if they met on the street.

ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, iv, 82. (1897)

Character is made by what you stand for; reputation by what you fall for.

ROBERT QUILLEN, Epigram. (c. 1935)

9 Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! (οὐαὶ ὑμῖν καλῶς ὑμᾶς εἰπωσιν πάντες οἱ ἄνθρωποι.)

New Testament: Luke, vi, 26. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Vae cum benedixerint vobis homines."

Reputation is but a synonym of popularity.

ANNA JAMESON, Essays: Allston. (c. 1850)

10 The sort of people with the reputation that we journalists describe as unsavoury.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, Christmas Holiday. (1939)

11 A superior man is ashamed of a reputation beyond his merits.

MENCIUS, Discourses. Bk. iv, pt. ii, ch. 18, sec. 3. (c. 300 B. C.)

12 How many worthy men have we seen survive their own reputation! (Combien avons nous vu d'hommes vertueux survivre à leur propre reputation!)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 16. (1580)

13 A great reputation is a great noise: the more there is made, the farther off it is heard.

NAPOLEON, Sayings. See EMERSON, Representative Men: Napoleon. (c. 1816)

14 Reputation is measured by the acre.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, News from Any Whence: Countrey News. (1613)

Reputation is commonly measured by the Acre.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4023. (1732)

15 We are ourselves responsible for the good and the ill that is said of us. (αὐτοὺς ἑμαὶ καὶ τοῖς λόγοις καὶ τοῖς ἔργοις ψευδομένου εἰλέγειν.)

PHILIP, KING OF MACEDON. (c. 350 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia: Sayings of Kings, 177E.

It is a maxim with me that no man was ever written out of reputation but by himself.

RICHARD BENTLEY, Apothegm. (a. 1742) See MONK, Life of Bentley. Vol. i, ch. 6.

16 Blessed is he who has a good reputation. (ὁ δ' ἄλβιος, ὃν φάμαι κατέχοντ' ἀγαθαί.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. No. vii, l. 10. (464 B. C.)

A good reputation keeps its lustre in the dark. (Bona fama in tenebris proprium splendorem tenet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 83. (c. 43 B. C.)

An honorable reputation is a second patrimony.
(Honestus rumor alterum est patrimonium.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 254.

To the upright man a good reputation is the greatest inheritance. (Probo bona fama maxima est hereditas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 546.

The purest treasure mortal times afford
Is spotless reputation: that away,
Men are but gilded loam or painted clay.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, i, 1, 177. (1595)

A good Reputation is a fair Estate.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 172. (1732)

Win a good reputation, and sleep at your ease.
(Cobra buena fama, y échate a dormir.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 248. (1856) A Spanish proverb. The French say, "Acquiers bonne renommée, et dors grasse matinée."

There are few things better worth having in this world than a good reputation.

WILLIAM ROUGHHEAD, Murder and More Murder, p. 195. (1939)

Those who have been most celebrated have not always been the most illustrious. (Illustrium alia clariora esse, alia maiora.)

PLINY, Epistles. Bk. iii, epis. 16. (A. D. 98)

Reputation is the life of the mind, as breath is the life of the body.

T. SALDKELD, tr., The Complete Gentleman, p. 96. (1730)

Seeking the bubble reputation.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 152. (1600)
Reputation is a bubble upon the rapid stream of time.

SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Interch. 12. (1812)

Reputation is a bubble which a man bursts when he tries to blow it for himself.

EMMA CARLETON, Epigram. The Philistine, xi, 82. (1901)

Seeking the bubble of reputation in the cannon's larynx.

O. HENRY, The Moment of Victory. (1909)

Foraker was in the field again, seeking the bubble Vindication.

S. H. ADAMS, Incredible Era, p. 77. (1939)

Not seeking the bubble reputation in the cannon's mouth.

ERNEST HEMINGWAY, For Whom the Bell Tolls, p. 232. (1940)

Reputation is . . . oft got without merit and lost without deserving.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, ii, 3, 267. (1605)

Reputation is often got without Merit, and lost without Crime.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4042. (1732)

I see my reputation is at stake.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, iii, 3, 227. (1601)

At every word a reputation dies.

POPE, Rape of the Lock, iii, 16. (1714)

Wink a reputation down,

SWIFT, Journal of a Modern Lady. (1729)

Reputation bleeds in ev'ry word.

CHARLES CHURCHILL, The Apology, l.48. (1761)

Thou art gone a-whoring after reputation.
(τὸ κακὰς ἡπόσαο ρήκας.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. iv, l. 27. (c. 270 B. C.)

Reputation is a jewel.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Provok'd Wife. Act i, sc. 2. (1697)

GOOD NAME, JEWEL OF SOULS, see under NAME.

RESIGNATION

Suffering without resignation is like a burn without the balm.

ABDULLAH ANSARI, The Knower and the Known. (c. 1075)

Resignation is the crown of mankind, for avarice is poverty, suspense is slavery, but resignation is liberty.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 173. (c. 1050) In his notes, Ascher states that this is derived from a maxim of Aristotle "Avarice and lust are poverty in disguise, resignation is opulence."

Proba supported, with Christian resignation, the loss of immense riches.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 31. (1781)

Let him resign his place, like a guest well filled. (Cedat uti conviva satur.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 119. (35 B. C.)

An age that melts with unperceiv'd decay,
And glides in modest innocence away.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 292. (1748)

Sinks to the grave in unperceiv'd decay,
While Resignation gently slopes the way.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 110. (1770)
Goldsmith later changed "sinks" to "bends."

Since one cannot escape the arrows of Fate, resignation is the only shield.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. v, Apologue 7. (c. 1257)

What is called resignation is confirmed desperation.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 1. (1854)

RESISTANCE

The spirit of resistance to government is so valuable on certain occasions that I wish it to be always kept alive.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, to Abigail Adams. (1787)

The passive resistance of the Tolbooth-gate.

SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 6. (1818)

In this humour of passive resistance, . . . Isaac sat in a corner of his dungeon.

SCOTT, Ivanhoe. Ch. 23. (1819)

Passive resistance was the only weapon to which they trusted.

H. H. WILSON, British India, i, 467. (1844)

Passive resistance is the most potent weapon ever wielded by man against oppression.

BENJAMIN R. TUCKER, Instead of a Book. (1893)

RESOLUTION

<sup>1</sup> Bold Resolution is the Favourite of Providence.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1004. (1732)

<sup>2</sup> The resolved mind hath no cares.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 466. (1640)

<sup>3</sup> Resolve, and thou art free.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Masque of Pandora. Pt. vi. (1875)

<sup>4</sup> Every task is easy to a resolute man. (Shih p'a yu hsin jên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 122. (1875)

One with life-long resolution rivals the loftiness of heaven. (P'ing shêng chih ch'i yü t'ien kao.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 126.

<sup>5</sup> Never tell your resolution before hand.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Wisdom. (a. 1654)

<sup>6</sup> My will is back'd with resolution.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 352. (1592)

Put on The dauntless spirit of resolution.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, v, 1, 52. (1596)

<sup>7</sup> The fatality of good resolutions is that they are always too late.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. (1891)

HELL IS PAVED WITH GOOD RESOLUTIONS, see under INTENTIONS.

RESPECT

See also Self-Respect

<sup>8</sup> See to it that thou be respected of men, Then wilt thou be greeted by all.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. x, l. 17. (c. 700 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

<sup>9</sup> Respect's the younger brother sure to love.

JOHN BANCROFT, King Edward III. Act iii, sc. 2. (1691)

<sup>10</sup> He that respects not is not respected.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 429. (1640)

We are respected in proportion as we respect ourselves. (On nous estime à proportion que nous nous estimons nous-mêmes.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 459. (1746)

Men are respectable only as they respect.

EMERSON, Sovereignty of Ethics. (c. 1875)

<sup>11</sup> Respect a man, he will do the more.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 16. (1659)

<sup>12</sup> To be capable of respect is almost as rare as to be worthy of it. (Être capable de respect est aujourd'hui presque aussi rare qu'en être digne.)

JOSEPH JOUBERT, Pensées. No. 247. (1810)

<sup>13</sup> In my own city my name, in a strange city my clothes procure me respect.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 409. (1678)

<sup>14</sup> Is there no respect of place, persons, nor time in you?

SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, ii, 3, 99. (1599)
GOD IS NO RESPECTER OF PERSONS, see under GOD.
Methinks you might have an M under your girdle, miss.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
O.E.D.: "To use a respectful prefix (Mr., Mrs.) when addressing or mentioning a person."

<sup>15</sup> Respect wears itself out, just as love does. (L'estime s'use comme l'amour.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 44. (1746)

We should seek the respect of others less eagerly if we were more certain of deserving it. (Nous ambitionnerions moins l'estime des hommes, si nous étions plus sûrs d'en être dignes.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 499. (1746)

RESPECTABILITY

<sup>16</sup> Respectability: The offspring of a liaison between bald head and a bank account.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

You need a lot of money before you can afford not to be respectable.

BLAKE, Corpse in the Snowman, p. 223. (1941)

<sup>17</sup> Your good respectable people are the thieves of virtue.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xvii, ch. 13. (c. 500 B. C.) The word hsiangyuan has been differently translated. Legge has "Your good careful people in the villages are the thieves of virtue"; Lin Yutang, "The goody-goodies are the thieves of virtue"; Soothill, "Your honest countryman is the spoiler of morals," and adds in a note that this is because he hates change. TEHYI HSIEH, Confucius Said It First, translates it, "The bane of all things noble is the average citizen," and says that Confucius was referring to the Babbitts of his day.

'Tis the misfortune of respectable people that they are cowards. (Un des plus grands malheurs des honnêtes gen c'est qu'ils son des lâches.)

VOLTAIRE, Épigram. (a. 1778) As quoted by EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Fate.

<sup>18</sup> The more things a man is ashamed of, the more respectable he is.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act i. (1903)

Men have to do some awfully mean things to keep up their respectability.

SHAW, Fanny's First Play. Act iii. (1911)

1 As respectable as hides and logwood.
H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Tuesday. (1849)
She looked as respectable as a pair of rubbers.
F. W. BRONSON, Nice People Don't Kill, p. 154. (1940)

2 It is the coat makes the man respectable.
ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast. Act ii. (1787)
Respectable means rich, and decent means poor.
I should die if I heard my family called decent.
T. L. PEACOCK, Crotchet Castle. Ch. 3. (1831)
To be respectable implies a multitude of little observances, from the strict keeping of Sunday, down to the careful tying of a cravat.
VICTOR HUGO, Toilers of the Sea. Pt. i, bk. 3, ch. 12. (1866)
The only man to me who is not respectable is the man who consumes more than he produces.
ELBERT HUBBARD, The Philistine, xx, 36. (1905)

3 Q. What sort of a person was Mr. Weare?
A. He was always a respectable person.
Q. What do you mean by respectable?
A. He kept a gig.
Evidence of an unknown witness at the trial of John Thurtell for the murder of William Weare, in 1823. As reported in The Quarterly Review, vol. xxxvii, p. 15 (1828), where the writer says, "We quote from memory." The report of the trial in the London Times (3 Nov., 1823), reads, "He always maintained an appearance of respectability, and kept his horse and gig." It was from this that Carlyle evolved "gigman" to describe a person of narrow-minded respectability, and "gigmania" for respectability itself.

The gig and gigmania must rot.
CARLYLE, Remark. (1830) As quoted in FROUDE, Life (1882), vol. ii, p. 122.
Thus does society naturally divide itself into four classes: Noblemen, Gentlemen, Gigmen, and Men.
CARLYLE, Essays: Boswell. Note. (1830)

REST

See also Quiet, Sleep

4 Quietly rested under the drums and tramlings of three conquests.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Hydriotaphia. Ch. 5. (1658)

5 Rest is for the dead.
THOMAS CARLYLE, Journal, 22 June, 1830.

6 Absence of occupation is not rest.
WILLIAM COWPER, Retirement, l. 623. (1781)

7 He that can take rest is greater than he that can take cities.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

8 All be not a bedde, that shall haue yll rest.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7. (1546)
The diuell with his dam, hath more rest in hell Than I haue here with thee.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 7.

9 Think not of rest; though dreams be sweet, Start up, and ply your heavenward feet.
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Second Sunday in Advent. (1827)

10 She resolved . . . to set up her last rest, in hope to recover her losses againe.
WILLIAM LAMBARDE, A Perambulation of Kent, p. 430. (1576) A phrase originally taken from the game of Primero, but afterward meaning to settle down in a place.
Aliena resolved there to set vp her rest.
THOMAS LODGE, Rosalynde, p. 50. (1590)
Have at you with a proverb: Shall I set in my staff?

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, iii, 1, 51. (1593)
O! here Will I set up my everlasting rest.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, v, 3, 110. (1594)

Here I counted to set up my rest for life.
BROOKE, The Fool of Quality, iii, 1811. (1768)
Here, then, Mannering resolved, for some time at least, to set up the staff of his rest.
WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 19. (1815)

11 Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. (δεῦτε πρός με πάντες οἱ κοπιῶντες καὶ πεφορτισμένοι, καὶ γὰρ ἀναπαύσω ὑμᾶς.)
New Testament: Matthew, xi, 28. (c. A. D. 70)
The Vulgate is, "Venite ad me omnes, qui laboratis, et onerati estis, et ego reficiam vos."

12 Rest is sweet after strife.
OWEN MEREDITH (E. R. BULWER-LYTTON), Lucile. Pt. i, canto iv, st. 25. (1860)

13 Well-earned rest. Deserved repose or relaxation or holiday. [a cliché] from ca. 1880.
"The statesman is now enjoying a well-earned rest."

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Well. (1941)
There's no rest like an earned rest.
RICHARD LAKIN, The Body Fell on Berlin. p. 93. (1943)

14 What is without periods of rest will not endure. (Quod caret alterna requie, durable non est.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. iv, l. 89. (c. 10 B. C.)
Take rest; a field that has rested gives a bountiful crop. (Da requiem; requietus ager bene credita reddit.)

OVID, Artis Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 351. (c. 1 B. C.)
Rest a while and rounne a myle.

PALSGRAVE, Langue Françoyse, p. 436. (1530)
Sit a while and go a mile.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 235. (1639)
Our foster-nurse of nature is repose.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 4, 12. (1605)
To husband out life's taper at the close, And keep the flame from wasting by repose.
GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l. 87. (1770)
It is well to lie fallow for a while.

M. F. TUPPER, Of Good in Things Evil. (1844)

Rest, absolute rest, is the panacea.

R. W. EMERSON, Journal, 1860.

Rest in bed will do more for more diseases than any other single procedure.

LOGAN CLENDENNING, Modern Methods of Treatment. Ch. 1. (1924)

1 In every manner of work, sweet is repose. (ἀνάπαυσις ἐν παντί γλυκεία ἐργῶ.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. vii, l. 52. (c. 485 B. C.)

Rest gives relish to labor. (ἀνάπαυσις τῶν πόνων ἐστὶν ἄρτυμα.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Education of Children, 9C. (C. A. D. 95)

The end and the reward of toil is rest.

JAMES BEATTIE, The Minstrel, ii, 136. (1771)

2 Too much rest itself becomes a pain.

POPE, tr., The Odyssey. Bk. xv, l. 429. (1726)

The Germans say, "Ruh kommt aus Unruh, Und wieder Unruh aus Ruh" (Rest comes from unrest, and unrest again from rest).

This hardest penal toil, reluctant rest.

WILLIAM WATSON, To a Friend. (a. 1930)

3 In the bustle of the market there is money; but in seclusion there is rest. (Nao li yu ch'ien, ching ch'u an shên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 820. (1875)

4 God has given us this repose. (Deus nobis haec otia fecit.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. Ecl. i, l. 6. (37 B. C.)

Rest, free from care, and a life without knowledge of deceit. (Secura quies, et nescia fallere vita.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 467. (29 B. C.)

That is a sure place of rest from labour. (Requies ea certa laborum.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iii, l. 393. (19 B. C.)

5 Repose is a good thing, but boredom is its brother. (Le repos est une bonne chose, mais l'ennui est son frère.)

VOLTAIRE, Epigram. (c. 1760) As quoted by

BENHAM, Proverbs, p. 700.

6 "Rest and be Thankful."

WORDSWORTH, Yarrow Revisited. Sonnet xiii, title. Inscription on a stone seat at the head of Glencoe. (1831) REST IN PEACE, see under DEATH

RESULT

See also Consequence, Event

7 The result proves the wisdom of the act. (Exitus acta probat.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. ii, l. 85. (c. 10 B. C.)

Adopted by George Washington as his motto. More briefly rendered, "The result justifies the deed." THE END JUSTIFIES THE MEANS, see under END.

The result itself will show. (δὲλξεν ἀδρό.)

PLATO, Theaetetus. Sec. 200E. (c. 390 B. C.) A proverbial expression. A man who was leading the way through a river was asked if the water was deep. He replied, "The result itself will show," that is, the only way to find out is by trying.

8 Everything has its result. (Eventus rebus omnibus.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 159. (c. 220 B. C.)

RETREAT

See also Flight

9 Thai had blawen the ratret.

JOHN BARBOUR, The Bruce, xvii, 471. (1375)

[He] caused his trompet to blowe a retrete.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, fo. 113B. (a. 1548)

Deception . . . sounds a retreat instead of a charge.

ROBERT SOUTH, Sermons (1727), ii, 353. (1686)

Agesilaus thought it prudent to sound a retreat.

BISHOP CONNOP THIRLWALL, History of Greece. Ch. 38. (1838)

The expedition was obliged to beat a retreat.

MARY KINGSLEY, Travels in West Africa, p. 366. (1897)

10 Then as wise and discreet he withdrew him, saying that more is worth a good retreat than a foolish abiding.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Jason, p. 23. (c. 1477)

A fine retreat is as good as a gallant attack. (Tanto importa una bella retirada como una bizarra acometida.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 38. (1647)

In all the trade of war no feat

Is nobler than a brave retreat.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, i, iii, 607. (1678)

Advance, you engage in a battle; retreat, you take care of yourself.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 279. (1872)

HE WHO FIGHTS AND RUNS AWAY, see FIGHTING.

11 A brave Retreat is a brave Exploit.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 24. (1732)

12 Betre it is to make a beau retret.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. iii, l. 356. (1390)

He was constreynyd . . . to make a bew retret.

LYDGATE, Assembly of Gods, l. 1063. (c. 1420)

13 Like the pace of a crab, backward.

ROBERT GREENE, Orpharion. (1589) Works, xii, 75.

14 [I] at length made good my retreat.

FRANCES A. KEMBLE, Journal of a Residence on a Georgia Plantation, p. 53. (1839)

15 Wisdom's triumph is well-tim'd retreat.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 225. (1735)

16 Let us make an honourable retreat.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 169. (1600)

The Spaniards say, "Who retires does not fly" (No huye el que se retira, or El retirarse no es huir). Both forms are used in Don Quixote.

RETRIBUTION

<sup>1</sup> Those who work evil, suffer evil in no less measure. (τοιγάρ κακῶς δράσαντες οὐκ ἐλάσσονα | πάσχουσι.)

AESCHYLUS, Persians, l. 813. (472 B. C.)

Fated it is that from evil plans
An evil recompense shall mortals reap.
(εἰμαρμένον γὰρ τῶν κακῶν βουλευμάτων κακὰς ἀμοιβὰς ἐστὶ καρποῦσθαι βροτοῖς.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragments, No. 352. (c. 450 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 23E.

Look for thy evil deeds to suffer ill thyself.
(προσδόκα δὲ δρῶν κακῶς | κακόν τι πράξειν.)

EURIPIDES, Hercules Furens, l. 727. (c. 420 B. C.)
Now do thy sinful deeds come home to thee.
(Nunc te facta impia tangunt.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 596. (19 B. C.)
Often upon the teacher have his bad teachings turned. (Saepe in magistrum scelera redierunt sua.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 311. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>2</sup> He suffered ill and made return with ill.
(παθὼν κακῶς κακοῖσιν ἀνταμείβετο.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 1055. (467 B. C.) In The Libation-Bearers, l. 94, Aeschylus speaks of returning good for evil, but ironically, as it was wholly natural for a Greek to return evil for evil.

Righteous? How not? To requite an enemy evil for evil! (πῶς δ' οὐ τὸν ἐχθρὸν ἀνταμείβεσθαι κακοῖς;)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 123. (458 B. C.)
For word of hate let word of hate be said. (ἀντὶ μὲν ἐχθρᾶς γλώσσης ἐχθρὰ | γλώσσα τελεῖσθω.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 309. (458 B. C.)

Quoted as being said by Justice.

For murderous stroke let murderous stroke be paid. (ἀντὶ δὲ πληγῆς φονίας φονίαν | πληγὴν τιρέτω.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 312. (458 B. C.)
To him that doeth, it shall be done by, so saith a precept thrice-aged. (δράσαντι παθεῖν, | τριγέρων μῦθος τάδε φωνεῖ.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 313. (458 B. C.)
The deed comes back upon the doer. (δράσαντι παθεῖν.)

UNKNOWN. A Greek proverb, paraphrased by AESCHYLUS, Suppliant Maidens, l. 435. (c. 485 B. C.)

A calf can find its mother cow

Among a thousand kine:

So good or evil done returns

And whispers, "I am thine."

UNKNOWN, The Mahabharata, xii, 330, 16. (c. 500 B. C.) Ryder, tr.

They which deale rigorously with others, shall bee dealt withal them selves.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 164. (1576)

<sup>3</sup> Look out for the wasps if you stir up their nest. (ἦν μὴ τις ὥσπερ σφηκιὰν βλίττη με κἀρεθίῃ.)

ARISTOPHANES, Lysistrata, l. 475. (412 B. C.)

See also under HORNET.

<sup>4</sup> Since you drank the wine,
You should, in justice, also drink the dregs.
(ὅμως δ' ἐπειδὴ καὶ τὸν οἶνον ἤξλους πίνειν, συνεκποτέ' ἐστὶ σοὶ καὶ τὴν τρύγα.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 1084. (388 B. C.)

Let him drink the dregs, who drinks the wine.
(Fecem bibat, qui vinum bibit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 73.

(1523) Quoting the proverb derived from Aristophanes. Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 60, with the comment, "He that hath had the use and fruition of the swete, let hym be contente to take some parte of the sowre."

"What?" said she. "Ought not he who makes bad wine drink it?"

("Comment?")—fait-elle. "Ne doit boire
Le vin malvais qui tel le brasse?"

MILON D'AMIENS, Du Prestre et du Chevalier,
l. 1257. (c. 1250) MONTAIGLON, *Recueil des
Fables*, ii, 87.

The wine is poured, it must be drunk. (Le vin est versé, il faut le boire.)

ARMAND JOSEPH DE CHAROST, to Louis XIV, when the latter started to retire from the firing line at the siege of Douai in 1667.
See TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs.

<sup>5</sup> Leave the drunkard alone: he will fall by himself.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 32a. (c. 450)
The shepherd is lame and the sheep in flight; at the door of the fold there are [harsh] words, but in the stalls there is the reckoning.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 32a.

<sup>6</sup> The lion waiteth for its prey, so sins for them that work iniquity.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus),
xxvii, 10. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

<sup>7</sup> After your fling, watch for the sting.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 7. (1917)
AFTER PLEASURE COMES PAIN, see under PAIN.

<sup>8</sup> He who eats a hen of the sultan will return her to him a cow.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 675. (1817)
Referring to the heavy fines imposed on those who embezzle public money.

He who covertly eats the sultan's broth, will surely have his lips scalded.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 682.

<sup>9</sup> Ofte tyme swich cursinge wrongfully retorneth agayn to him that curseth, as a brid that retorneth agayn to his owne nest.

CHAUCER, *Canterbury Tales: The Persones
Tale*. Sec. 41. (c. 1389) The proverb is,
"Curses are like chickens; they come home to roost." See under CURSE.

The ill that comes out of our mouth falls into our bosom.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 223. (1640)
Evil that cometh out of thy mouth flieth into thy bosom.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1678)

<sup>1</sup>
In his owene grece I made him frye
For angre, and for verray jalousye.
CHAUCER, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 485.
(c. 1388) See also under GREASE.

<sup>2</sup>
Here I receive dates for my figs. (Riprendo dattero per figo.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxxiii, l. 120. (c. 1300)

<sup>3</sup>
Thine eye shall not pity, but life shall go for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for band, foot for foot. (Animam pro anima, oculum pro oculo, dentem pro dente, manum pro manu, pedem pro pede exiges.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xix, 21. (c. 650
B.C.) "These be the words which Moses spake unto all Israel," Deuteronomy, i, 1; hence the Mosaic law.

Breach for breach, eye for eye, tooth for tooth:
as he hath caused a blemish in a man, so shall it be done to him again. (Fracturam pro fractura, oculum pro oculo, dentem pro dente restituet;
quem inflixerit maculam, talem sustinere cogetur.)

Old Testament: Leviticus, xxiv, 20. (c. 570 B.C.)

Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth: But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. (ὁφθαλμὸν ἀντὶ ὁφθαλμοῦ καὶ ὀδὼντα ἀντὶ ὀδόντος.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 38, 39. (c. A.D.
65) The Sermon on the Mount. The Vulgate is, "Audistis quia dictum est: Oculum pro oculo, et dentem pro dente."

An eye for an eye, a tooth for a tooth, and a baby for a baby.

KAUFMAN AND RYSKIND, Of Thee I Sing. Act
ii, sc. 4. (1931)

<sup>4</sup>
Good and evil will finally have their reward.
(Shan ê tao 'tou chung yu pao.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 190. (1872)

Though you fly high, or wander far, you cannot escape.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 283.

<sup>5</sup>
Whatever any one desires from another, the same returns upon himself.

EMERSON, Uncollected Lectures: Natural Religion. (c. 1860)

<sup>6</sup>
The thrush when he defiles the bough,
Sows for himself the seeds of woe.
(Turdus ipse sibi malum cacat.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 55. (1523)
According to Pliny, the thrush sows, with his excrement, the seeds of the mistletoe on which it feeds, and from the bark of the mistletoe bird-lime is made, which catches the thrush.

The foolish bird limes himself with that which grew from his own excretion.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Contemplations. Bk. ix,
ch. 8. (1615)

The berries . . . voided out again in her excrements, grow into a bush, the bush bringeth forth berries, and of the berries the fowler maketh bird-lime, wherewith after he taketh the thrush: and thus, Turdus sibi cacat malum.

JOHN SWAN, Speculum Mundi (1665) p. 246.
(1635)

<sup>7</sup>
The crow seized on the scorpion. (Cornix scorpionum rapuit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 58. (1523)

A proverb from the Greek fable of the crow which seized the scorpion, thinking he had got hold of a delicate morsel, only to be stung to death. The Latin proverb is, "Sibi parat malum qui alteri parat" (He prepares evil for himself who prepares it for another).

The wolf in the snare. (In laqueos lupus.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. x, No. 16. (1523)

The crafty caught with his own cunning

<sup>8</sup>
Wel mayst thou prolong it, but not escape it.
(Tu la poi slongare, ma non scampare.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

<sup>9</sup>
Who dooth what he ought not
Shall finde what he thought not.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 97. (1591)

He that doth what he should not, shall feel what he would not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 784. (1640)

He that doth not as he ought, must not look to be done to as he would.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2089. (1732)

If you do what you should not, you must hear what you would not.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738

He who doesn't do what he ought will not receive what he expects. (Chi non fa quel che deve, Quel che aspetta non riceve.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 186. (1856) An Italian proverb. HE THAT SPEAKS WHAT HE SHOULD NOT, see under SPEECH.

<sup>10</sup>
Agens agendo repatitur, the smart most lights on the striker.

THOMAS FULLER, *The Holy State: The Good
Servant*. (1642)

<sup>11</sup>
Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap.

New Testament: Galatians, vi, 7. See under SOWING AND REAPING.

<sup>12</sup>
Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed. (Quicumque effuderit humanum sanguinem, fundetur sanguis illius.)

Old Testament: Genesis, ix, 6. (c. 550 B.C.)

BLOOD WILL HAVE BLOOD, see under BLOOD.

<sup>13</sup>
As you have strung the thread, so you must weave it. (Colo quod aptasti, ipsi tibi nendum est.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 58. (1869)

1 Every ill man hath his ill day.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 97. (1640)
Every ill man will have an ill time.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs,
p. 123. (1710)

To every evil man his evil day. (A cada malo, su dia malo.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 260. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

2 He that blows in the dust, fills his eyes with it.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 572. (1640)
He that blows into a heap of dust is in danger of putting out his own eyes.

WILLIAM SECKER, *The Nonsuch Professor in
His Meridian Splendor*, ii, 183. (1660)

He that blows in the dust will make himself blind.

THOMAS D'URFEY, *The Comical History of Don
Quixote*. Pt. i, act iv, sc. 1. (1694)

He that blows in the Dust, fills his own Eyes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2048. (1732)
He who blows in the fire, the sparks leap into his eyes. (Wer in das Feuer blaest, dem fliegen Funcken in die Augen.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 312. (1856) A German proverb.

3 No man does wrong but suffers requital.
(οὐδεὶς ἀνόμιμον ἀδικῶν τίσαν οὐκ ἀποτίσει.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. v, ch. 56. (c. 445 B. C.)
The words of the vision which appeared to Hipparchus in a dream, c. 513 B. C.

4 He does mischief to himself who does mischief to another, and evil planned harms the plotter most. (ὁ γ' αὐτῷ κακὰ τεύχει ἀνὴρ ἄλλω κακὰ τεύχων, ἡ δὲ κακὴ βουλὴ τῷ βουλευσάντι κακίστη.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 265. (c. 800 B. C.)
He that does ill to another does ill to himself.
(ὁ γ' αὐτῷ κακὰ τεύχει ἀνὴρ ἄλλω κακὰ τεύχων.)

DEMOCRITUS OF CHIOS, Satire upon Melanip-pides. (c. 450 B. C.) Quoted by ARISTOTLE,
Rhetoric, iii, 9.

Now the euyll which men wysshe to other cometh to hym whiche wysseth hit.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Aesope, ii, 207. (1484)
So the common prouerbe was verified, as you have done so shall you feel.

RICHARD GRAFTON, Chronicle, i, 482. (1569)
He that hurts another hurts himselfe.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)
Do euill and euill will come of it.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 179. (1633)
Do Evil, and look for the like.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1305. (1732)
Evil must come of evil.

SOUTHEY, Madoc in Wales. Pt. vii, l. 46. (1805)

5 Take fair measure from your neighbor and pay him back fairly with the same measure, or better if you can. (αὐτῷ τῷ μέτρῳ, καὶ λῶιον, αὶ καὶ δύνῃται.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 350. (c. 800 B. C.)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 36, with the Latin, "Eadem mensura."

With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again. (ἐν ᾧ μέτρον μετρεῖτε μετρηθήσεται ὑμῖν.)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 2. (c. A. D. 65)
The Vulgate is, "In qua mensura mensi fueritis, remetietur vobis."

All the judgments of the Holy One, blessed be
He, are on the basis of measure for measure.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 90a. (c. 450)
In the measure in which a man measures is he measured.

Babylonian Talmud: Sotah, fo. 8b.
In the pot in which they cooked shall they be cooked.

Babylonian Talmud: Sotah, fo. 11a.
They that drowned thee shall themselves be drowned.

Babylonian Talmud: Aboth, ii, 7. A saying of Hillel. See also Numbers Rabbah, xviii, 18:
"As thou hast beaten shalt thou be beaten."

Plantagenet doth quit Plantagenet,
Edward for Edward pays a dying debt.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iv, 4, 21. (1592)
Measure for measure must be answered.

UNKNOWN, True Tragedie of Richard Duke of York, p. 151. (1595)

Measure for Measure.

SHAKESPEARE. Title of play. (1604)

6 Full surely were thy evil deeds to fall on thine own head. (λίγν' σέ γ' ἐμελλε κινήσασθαι κακὰ ἔργα.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. ix, l. 477. (c. 850 B. C.)
On his own head, as the saying goes. (Suo capiti, ut aiunt.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. viii, epis. 5. (49 B. C.)
Punishment will fall upon your own head. (Poena reversura est in caput ista tuum.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 340. (c. 1 B. C.)

7 Rarely does Retribution, albeit of halting gait, fail to overtake the guilty, though he gain the start. (Raro antecedentem scelestum deseruit pede Poena claudo.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 2, l. 31. (23 B. C.)

And though the villain 'scape awhile he feels
Slow vengeance, like a bloodhound at his heels.

HORACE, Odes, iii, 2, 31. (Swift, tr.)

Make no mistake, though retribution tarry,
At the appointed time it won't miscarry.
(Pu shih pu pao, jih tzü wei tao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
2409. (1875)

GOD'S WAYS ARE SLOW BUT SURE, see under GOD.
THE MILLS OF THE GODS GRIND SLOWLY, see under MILL.

8 They shall eat the fruit of their doings. (Fructum ad inventionum suarum comedet.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, iii, 10.

As you make your bed, so you lie down.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, 16. (1721)
See under BED.

As we live we are paid for living.

T. H. HUXLEY, Letter to Charles Kingsley, 23
Sept. 1860.

1 The rewards of vice and virtue are like the shadow following the substance.

LAO-TSZE, Kan-ying-p'ien (Book of Rewards and Punishments). (c. 550 B. C.)

The recompense of good and evil follows as the shadow follows the figure.

TAI-SHANG KAN-YING PIEN, Characters, 253.

As a man acts well or ill, so he enjoys or suffers the fruit thereof.

UNKNOWN, The Mahabharata. Sec. 33. (c. 500 B. C.) In sec. 36 is added, "One always reaps the fruit of one's acts."

2 Aristo practised on the Carthaginians a Carthaginian artifice. (Aristo Punico ingenio inter Poenos usus.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxiv, ch. 61, sec. 14. (c. 10 B. C.)

3 Fortune, some years later, made him taste the same sauce. (La fortune, quelques années après, les punit de même pain soupe.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 3. (1580)

4 It must be admitted, and placed to the credit of virtue, that the greatest ills are those into which men fall by reason of their crimes. (Il faut demeurer d'accord, à l'honneur de la vertu, que les plus grands malheurs des hommes sont ceux où ils tombent par les crimes.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 183. (1665)

5 The revenger of blood himself shall slay the murderer. (Propinquus occisi, homicidam interficiet.)

Old Testament: Numbers, xxxv, 19. (c. 550 B. C.)

Thou shalt hereafter atone with blow for blow. (τύμμα τύμῃ τείσῃ.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 1430. (458 B. C.)

Say in plain speech "one who shall take life for life." (ἀπλῶς τι φράζουσα, ὅστις ἀνταποκτενεῖ.)

AESCHYLUS, Libation-Bearers, l. 121. (458 B. C.)

Death must be atoned by death. (Mors morte pianda est.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. viii, l. 483. (A. D. 7)

He that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword. (εἴ τις ἐν μάχῃ ἀποκτενεῖ, δεῖ αὐτὸν ἐν μάχῃ ἀποκτανθῆναι.)

New Testament: Revelation, xiii, 10. (c. A. D.

90) The Vulgate is, "Qui in gladio occiderit, oportet eum gladio occidi."

He that slays shall be slain.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 239. (1678)

He that strikes with the sword shall be beaten with the scabbard.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 135.

6 Everyone should bear patiently the results of his own example. (Sua quisque exempla debet aequo animo pati.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. i, fable 26. (c. 25 B. C.)

7 Yon fellow expects me to wallop his beast's back for him. (Illic homo a me sibi malam rem arcessit iumento suo.)

PLAUTUS, Amphitryon, l. 327. (c. 200 B. C.)

Plautus is paraphrasing a proverb, noted by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 50, "Suo iumento sibi malum accersere" (To bring down mischief upon oneself).

8 The culprit condemns himself on the day of his offence. (Illo nocens se damnat quo peccat die.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 299. (c. 43 B. C.)

9 When thou settest fire to a forest of canes, beware of the tigers.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. viii, Apologue 10. (c. 1257)

Whosoever does no good when he has the ability, in time of inability will himself suffer distress.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 32.

Ill-starred, indeed, is he who injures men: When fortune's adverse, he is friendless then.

SADI, Gulistan, viii, 32. Eastwick, tr.

Whoso shows no compassion to the weak will suffer from the violence of the strong.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 95.

10 Men shall answer mocking with mockery, and fraud with falsehood.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 42. (c. 900)

It is ful fair a man to bere him evene, For al-day meteth men at unset stevene.

CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 665. (c. 1386)

This sentence of Seneca is infallibly true, That which you do to others, be certain others will do to you. (La sentence de Senecque est véritable hors toute exception: Ce qu'à autrui tu auras fait, soys certain qu'autrui te fera.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 9. (1545)

11 As he did, so he be done by, this is justice undefiled. (αἶκε πάθει τὰ τ' ἔρεξε, δίκη κ' ἰθεὶς γένοιτο.)

SENECA (?), Ludus de Morte Claudii. Sec. 14. (c. A. D. 55)

12 You'll hear bad names if you call me bad names. (Audibis male si male dicis mihi.)

CAECILIUS STATIUS, Chryson. Frag. 21. (c. 175 B. C.)

If you give him a bad character, you'll hear bad names. (Si erum insimulabis malitiae, male audies.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 359. (161 B. C.)

13 Biters deserve to be bitten.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 16. (1880) See under BITING.

14 You mixed the mess and you must swallow it. (Tute hoc intriste: tibi ornest exedendum.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 318. (161 B. C.) The Germans say, "Du hast die Suppe eingebrockt, iss sie auch aus" (You have cooked your soup, now eat it), or "Du hast den Brey gekocht, iss ihn aus" (You have made the broth, now swallow it); the French, "Qui a fait le fricassée, peut bien le manger" (He who has made the mess, must eat it).

As he brews so shall he drink.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act ii, sc. 1. See under BREWING.

Who cooks a bad thing must eat of it.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 640. (1817)

As you have ground, so eat. (καὼς ἐτριψες, φάγε.)

NEGRIS, Modern Greek Proverbs, p. 61. (1831)

He that stirs the poison must taste it.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 521. (1938) An Arabic proverb.

1 What proceeds from you will return to you again.

TSANG. Quoted by MENCIVS, Discourses, i, 2, 12. (c. 300 B.C.)

2 Whether we fall by ambition, blood, or lust, Like Diamonds, we are cut with our owne dust.

WEBSTER, Dutchesse of Malfy. Act v, sc. 5. (1614)

3 Wherewithal a man sinneth, by the same also shall he be punished. (Quia per quae peccat quis, per haec et torquetur.)

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, xi, 16. (c. 100 B.C. DAY OF RETRIBUTION, see under DAY.)

II—Retribution: Hoist With His Own Petard

4 Shot with an arrow from one's own plumes. (τοῖς αὐτῶν πτεροῖς ἀλίσκόμεσθα.)

AESCHYLUS, Myrmidones. Frag. 63, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) Another Greek proverb of the same sort is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 66, ἡ αἰξ καὶ αὐτῆς τὰ κέρατα (The goat impaled on his own horns), with the Latin, "Capra contra sese cornua"; and still another, ἐκ τοῦ βουὸς ἡ μάστιξ (From the ox is made the whip), meaning that the lash which is used as a whip for the ox is made from the hide of the ox itself. A variation is αἰξ τὴν μάχαιραν (From the goat the dagger), that is, from the goat's horn. See also under FEATHER.

5 Those who plot against their companions often unwittingly destroy themselves. (οἱ τοῖς κοινωνοῖς ἐπιβουλεύοντες, πολλάκις καὶ αὐτοὺς προσπολοῦντες.)

AESOP, Fables: The Ass and the Fox. (c. 570 B.C.) PHAEDRUS, Fables, vi, 11, puts this into Latin, "Sape intereunt aliis meditantibus necem."

You sacrificed others, you shall be sacrificed yourself. (ἐθυσας· ἀντιθύσῃ.)

PHILOXENUS, The Cyclops. (c. 400 B.C.) Said by the Cyclops to Odysseus.

Slaying, thou wast slain. (σὺ δ' ἐθανες κατακτανών.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 957. (467 B.C.)

I cut his throat with his own sword. (Suo sibi gladio hunc iugulo.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 958. (160 B.C.)

He who kills with the knife, dies by the knife. (El que a cuchillo mata, a cuchillo muere.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 239. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

6 Seeking to catch another, I myself was caught. (θηρεῦσαι βουλόμενος, αὐτὸς ὑφ' ἐτέρου ἡγρέυθη.)

AESOP, Fables: The Bird-catcher and the Viper. (c. 570 B.C.) The bird-catcher, looking upwards while liming some twigs, steps on a viper and is killed.

He who contrives against another, turns the snare against himself. (ὁ καὶ ἐτέρου μηχανώμενος, καὶ αὐτοῦ τὴν πάγην περιτρέπει.)

AESOP, Fables: The Lion and the Wolf. (c. 570 B.C.) The wolf incites the sick lion against the fox, but the fox says that he has been searching out a cure for the lion, and that the cure is the hot hide of a newly-flayed wolf. So the lion kills the wolf and flays it, and the fox laughs, "One should incite the master to benevolence, not to anger."

The captor's caught, and fate

Hath ta'en the fowler in the toils he spread.

(γυνῶθι δ' ὡς ἔχων ἔχει καὶ σ' εἶλε θηρῶνθ' ἡ τύχη.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 1025. (c. 408 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 14, with the Latin, "Scito quod tenens teneris, tecque captantem, inuicem."

The captors are captured. (ἀλίσκεσθαι ἀλίσκόμενος.)

PLATO, Theaetetus. Sec. 179B. (c. 390 B.C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 14, who gives the Latin, "Captantes capti sumus."

The wary man was caught. (Captor captus est.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 256. (c. 200 B.C.)

Let them fall into the snare which they have laid. (In laqueos quos posuere, cadant.)

IVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 646. (c. 1 B.C.)

He sayde, "O fool, now art thou in the snare,

That whilom japedest at loves payne;

Now artow hent, now gnaw thyn owene cheyne."

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. i, l. 507. (c. 1380)

He is caught in his own snare. (Suo ipsius laqueo captus est.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 53. (1523)

You shall bee then taken in your owne net.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i

p. 39. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Your pupill may be so longe delight in deceit, that shee may bee taken in the net which shee layeth to intangle other[s].

GEORGE PETTIE, Pettie Pallace, p. 95. (1576)

He who would catch is caught. (Qui capit, capitur.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 356. (1869)

He who lays a snare for others will fall into it himself.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 440. (1872)

The German is, "Wer Andern eine Grube gräbt, fällt selbst hinein," or "Er hat sich in seiner eigenen Schlinge gefangen" (He has himself fallen into his own snare); the French, "Tel est pris qui croyait prendre" (He is taken who thought to take).

1
Bend not thy bow and shoot not thy arrow at the righteous, lest God come to his help and turn it back upon thee.

AHIKAR, Teachings. Col. ix, l. 126. (c. 550 B.C.)
Don't strike a stone, or you'll bruise your hand.
(Noli verberare lapidem, ne perdas manum.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 197. (c. 200 B.C.)
Whoso casteth a stone on high casteth it on his own head. (Qui in altum mittit lapidem, super caput eius cadet.)

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xxvii, 25. (c. 190
B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 92, as a fore-runner of the proverb, "In coelum iacularis" (You hurl your javelin against the sky). The Italians have the same proverb,
"Chi contra il cielo getta pietra, in capo gli ritorna." They also say, "Chi piscia contra il vento, si bagna la camicia" (He who makes water against the wind, soaks his own shirt);
the Spaniards, "Quien al cielo escupe, en la cara le cae" (He who spits against the heavens, gets his spittle back in his face)

The maker of the arrow will be killed by it.

Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, fo. 28. (c. 450)
Against the castle-wall hurl not a stone,
Lest from the wall a stone descend on thee.

SADI, Gulistan, iii, 28. (c. 1258)
The stone returns sometimes to strike the person who has thrown it. (La pierre revient frapper parfois celui qui l'a lancée.)

UNKNOWN, Ysopet. (1333)
One often cuts the club with which he will be beaten. (Tel cueille souvent le bâton dont il sera battu.)

UNKNOWN, Chastoiment d'un Père à Son Fils.
(c. 1350) Or, as the American proverb goes,
"Cut a club to knock your own brains out."
For it is seyde, "man maketh ofte a yerde
With which the maker is him-self y-beten.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. i, l. 740. (c. 1380)
Often times the arow hitteth the shoter.

HILLS, Common-place Book, p. 129. (a. 1500)
Beaten with his own rod.

HEYWOOD, Proverbs, i, 2. (1546) See ROD.
You tourne the poynt of your owne bodkin into your owne bosome.

JOHN LYL, Euphuus (Arber), p. 242. (1580)
Like arrows shot against Heaven, fall upon their own heads.

RICHARD KINGSTON, Apophthegmata Curiosa,
p. 15. (1709)

Beware of a returning arrow.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 438.
(1938) A time-honored eighth century Japanese proverb, referring to the custom of endeavoring to shoot an enemy with the same arrow which he had used first.

They have simply stepped in their own chewing gum.

PHILIP BARRY, The Philadelphia Story. Act ii,
sc. 2. (1939)

2

A deceitful blow apportions wounds to the deceiver.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxvii, 25. (c. 190 B.C.) Oosterley, tr.

It's a great and laudable exploit to loot the looters. (Ibist ibus pugnae et virtuti de praedoni-bus praedam capere.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 109. (c. 186 B.C.)
Deceive the deceivers; they are mostly an unrighteous sort. (Fallite fallentes: ex magna parte profanum.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 645. (c. 1 B.C.)
Fraud may be repelled by fraud, and the laws permit arms to be taken against an armed foe.
(Fraus est concessa repellere fraudem, | armaque in armatos sumere iura sinunt.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 491.
Bigyled is the gyler than.

(Deceuz est teus decevierres.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 5109
(c. 1270) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 5759. (c. 1365)

But I, that were my simple cloth,
Robbe bothe robbed and robbours,
And gyle gyled and gylours.

(Mais je, qui vest ma simple robe,
Lobant lobez e lobeurs,
Robe robez e robeurs.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 11550.
(c. 1270) Chaucer, tr., l. 6822.

The olde lawe graunteth, That gylors be begiled.

WILLIAM LANGLEND, Piers the Plowman. Text
B, passus xviii, l. 337. (1377)

A gylour shal himself begyled be.

CHAUCER, The Reeve's Tale, l. 401. (c. 1386)
As men saye it is a meryte to begyle the begylers
. . . And therfore he that begyleth other is oityme begyled hym self.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Aesope, ii, 50. (1484)

3
With the Cretans be a Cretan. (Cretensis Cretensem.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 26. (1508)
Erasmus gives another form (No. 29), "Cre-tiza cum Cretensi," and also (No. 27), "Cretensis cum Aeginita." The Cretans had the reputation of being liars and thieves, as witness Saint Paul:

The Cretians are alway liars, evil beasts, slow bellies. (Cretenses semper mendaces, malae bestiae, ventres pigri.)

New Testament: Titus, i, 12. (c. A. D. 62)

With a fox be fox-like. (Vulpinari cum vulpe.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 28.

Practyse craft with the crafty.

RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus, i, ii, 29.
(1550) Taverner adds, "The englyshe prou-erbe sayeth: He had nede to haue a long sponne that shuld eate with the deuyll." See under DEVIL.

To deceive a deceiver is no deceit.

ULPIAN FULWELL, Ars Adulandi, sig. G3. (c.
1580)

Frustratur ipse sibi, he deceives himselfe.

RICHARD BERNARD, tr., Terence, iii. (1598)

It is a double pleasure to deceive the deceiver.
(C'est double plaisir de tromper le trompeur.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Coq et le Renard.
Bk. ii, fab. 15. (1668)

It is not difficult to deceive a deceiver. (Il n'est pas malaisé de tromper un trompeur.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Loup et les Bergers.
Bk. x, fab. 6. (1678)

Deceiving of a Deceiver is no Knavery.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1261. (1732)
He who seeks to deceive rests deceived. (Chi cerca d'ingannar, resta ingannato.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes,
p. 194. (1856) An Italian proverb.

1
They prick themselves with their own stings.
(Ipsi se compungunt suis acuminibus.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. ii, sec. 158. (55 B.C.)

Remember Milo's end,

Wedge in that timber which he strove to rend.

DILLON, On Translated Verse, l. 87. (1684)

2
He that diggeth a pit shall fall into it.

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, x, 8. (c. 250 B.C.)

See under PR.

3
They cut their throtes with their own knife.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Calvin on Deuteronomie, lxxx, 490. (1583)

Princes who make their subjects overgreat, whet a knife for their own throats.

FULLER, The Holy Warre. Bk. ii, ch. 40. (1639)

4
I have brought an ill comb to my own head.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 204. (1721)

5
Take good heed to this matter: a blow struck brings a counter-blow in its train.

KHATI I, KING OF EGYPT, Teaching. No. xxvi.
(c. 2500 B.C.) Budge, tr.

Suche a blowe as the Asse giveth against the wall, suche a one hee receiveth him selfe.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii,
p. 161. (1574) Pettie, tr.

6
There is no juster law than that the artificers
of death should perish by their own art.
(Neque enim lex aequior ulla, quam necis artifices arte perire sua.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 655. (c. 1 B.C.)

Egypt is said to have lacked rain for nine years, when Thrasius approached Busiris, and showed that Jove could be propitiated by the outpoured blood of a stranger. To him said Busiris, "Thou shalt be Jove's first victim, and as a stranger give water unto Egypt." (Fies Iovis hostia primus, inquit, et Aegyptio tu dabis hospes aquam.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 647.

Phalaris roasted in his fierce bull the limbs of Perillus; its maker first made trial of his ill-omened work. (Infelix inbuilt auctor opus.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 654. Perillus designed the brazen bull in which Phalaris, the cruel ruler of Agrigentum, might roast his enemies alive, and was its first victim, as Antoine Louis is said to have been the first victim of the "Louissette," the predecessor of the guillotine. The shrieks of those being roasted inside were supposed to remind the bystanders of the roaring of a bull.

The Sicilian bull, which bellowed first with the lament of him (and that was right) who had tuned it with his file. (Il bue Cicalian, che mug-ghiò prima | col pianto di colui—e ciò fu dritto—
| che l'avea temperato con sua lima.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxvii, l. 7. (c. 1300)

Let the smith who made them wear The shackles which he did prepare. (Compedes, quas ipse fecit, ipsus ut gestet faber.)

AUSONIUS, De Bissula: Praefatio, l. 6. (c. A.D.
370) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 86, in a shorter form, "Faber compedes, quas fecit, ipse gestet." Included by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 49, with the rendering, "The fetters yt the smith hath made let hym wear them him selfe."

When the maker of stocks has to sit in the stocks, he is paid out of his own work.

Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, fo. 28a. (c. 450)

There is another reading. Instead of saddāā besaddēh, as above, and as adopted by Jas-trow, saddānā bisedanēh: "When the smith sits at the anvil, he is paid out of his own work." Pesachim, 28a, also has: "If the arrow-maker is killed by his arrow, he is paid out of his own work. In the same ladle which the carpenter made will the mustard burn [his mouth]."

The best woven scheme can injure its inventor, and often treachery kicks back at its author. (La
ruse la mieux ourdie | Peut nuire à son inventeur,
| Et souvent la perfidie | Retourne sur son auteur.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: La Grenouille et le Rat.
Bk. iv, fab. 11. (1668)

He that first made the gin should handsell it.

JOHN TATHAM, The Scots Figgaries. Act. ii.
(1652) "Handsell," to inaugurate, to be the first to test a thing.

He that invented the Maiden first handselled it.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 140. (1721)
The Regent Morton [James, Earl of Morton, executed in 1581], the inventor of "The Maiden," a sort of guillotine, was himself the first upon whom the proof of it was made. Men felt . . .
that "no law was juster than that the artificers
of death should perish by their own art."

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 2. (1853)

7
My fate drew me on to be clever to my own hurt. (Me mea fata trahebant; | inque meas poenas ingeniosus eram.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. ii, l. 342. (c. A.D. 9)

8 Stretching the measuring-line too tightly, they pierce their own heart with a galling wound.
(στάθμας δὲ τινος ἐλκόμενοι | περισσὰς ἐνέπαζαν ἑλκος ὀδυναρὸν ἐφ' ἑαυτοῦ καρδίᾳ.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. ii, l. 90. (c. 475 B.C.)

The measuring-line has two sharp pegs, one of which the measurer thrusts into the ground, and then pulls the cord tight. If he pulls it too tight, in order to cover more ground than it should, he may pull the peg out and cause it to snap into his own heart.

9
We gave evil, and we received it. (Dedi malum, et accepi.)

PLINY THE YOUNGER, Epistles. Bk. iii, epis. 9.
(A.D. 98) PAID IN OWN COIN, see PAYMENT.

10
They had thought to put others into a sleeve, and they are put in themselves.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 402. (1678)

1
For 'tis the sport to have the enginer
Hoist with his own petard.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 4, 206. (1600) A petard, an iron canister filled with gunpowder, was used for blowing up gates and barricades in time of war. The man who set it off was always in danger of being killed by it. 'Twas he Gave heat unto the injury, which return'd

Like a petard ill lighted, into the bosom
Of him gave fire to 't.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Fair Maid of the Inn. Act ii. (a. 1625)

'Tis sport to have the engineer Hoist with his own petard, as our immortal Shakespeare has it.

WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 33. (1826)

The Chancellor had been caught in his own trap, hoist, so to speak, with his own petard.

CHARLES LOWE, Prince Bismarck, p. 322. (1885)

"The hoist with his own petard touch," said the young man.

DOROTHY SAYERS, A Matter of Taste. (1923)

Hoist by your own perfect petard, eh?

H. S. KEELER, The Man with the Wooden Spectacles, p. 178. (1941)

You want to hoist me with my own petard.

PATRICIA WENTWORTH, The Chinese Shuw, p. 233. (1943)

DOSE OF HIS OWN MEDICINE, see under MEDICINE.

2
Why, as a woodcock to mine own springe,
Osric;

I am justly kill'd with mine own treachery.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 317. (1600)

We but teach

Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
To plague the inventor: this even-handed justice
Commends the ingredients of our poison'd chalice
To our own lips.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 7, 8. (1606)

Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
That it do singe yourself.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, i, 1, 140. (1612)

In seeking tales and informations

Against this man . . . Ye blew the fire that burns ye.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, v, 3, 110. (1612)

3
For your owne tayle ye made a rod.

JOHN SKELTON, Works (Dyce), i, 186. (a. 1529) See under ROD.

He hath ordeyned a staffe for his owne head.

JOHN STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria (E.E.T.S.), p. 23. (c. 1510)

He brings a staff to his own head.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 52. (c. 1595)

He is sairest dung when his awn wand [rod] dings [beats] him.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 44.

Let his own wand ding him. Let him reap the fruits of his own folly.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 233. (1721)
See also under STAFF.

REVELRY

4
Daucen he coude so wel and jolily,
That he was cleped Perkin Revelour.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Cokes Tale, l. 6. (c. 1386)

My fourthe housbonde was a reuelour.

CHAUCER, The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 453.

5
Pomp, and feast, and revelry,
With mask, and antique Pageantry.

JOHN MILTON, L'Allegro, l. 127. (1632)

Midnight shout and revelry,

Tipsie dance, and Jollity.

JOHN MILTON, Comus, l. 103. (1634)

There was a sound of revelry by night.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iii, st. 21. (1818)

6
There is no more mistaken path to happiness than worldliness, revelry, and high life.

ARTHUR SCHOPENHAUER, Essays: Our Relation to Ourselves. Sec. 24. (c. 1830)

REVENGE

See also Vengeance

7
Revenge is a kinde of Wilde Justice; which the more Mans Nature runs to, the more ought Law to weed it out.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Revenge. (1597)

In taking Revenge, a Man is but even with his Enemy; but in passing it over, he is Superiour.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Revenge.

A Man that studieth Revenge, keepes his owne Wounds greene.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Revenge.

Revenge proves its own executioner.

JOHN FORD, Broken Heart. Act v, sc. 2. (1633)

A man need never revenge himself; the body of his enemy will be brought to his own door.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 374. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

8
Revenge is now the cud that I do chew.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Queen of Corinth. Act iv, sc. 1. (c. 1613)

9
Tary for tyme and place to be revenged, for it can never be done wel in hast. (Aspetta luogho e tempo, á far vendetto: che non si face mai ben in fretta.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 27. (1578) An Italian proverb, usually rendered, "Wait time and place for thy revenge, for swift revenge is poor revenge."

Revenge is a luscious fruit which you must leave to ripen.

ÉMILE GABORIAU, File No. 113. Ch. 10. (1867)

10
Revenge in cold Blood is the Devil's own Act and Deed.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4029. (1732)
Eat the dish of revenge cold instead of hot.

CHARLES LOWE, Prince Bismarck, iii, 36. (1885) Quoted.

Vengeance is a dish that can be eaten cold.

JAMES PAYN, In Market Overt. Ch. 17. (1895)

1 Revenge is sharp-sighted. Revenge never repairs an injury. Revenge, the longer it is delayed, the crueller it grows.

FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 4030-32. (1732)

2 Revenge is profitable, gratitude is expensive.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Ch. 11. (1776)

Revenge is a much stronger principle than gratitude.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 98. (1820)

3 He that will venge euery wreth, the longer he leuith, the lesse he hath.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book (E.E. T.S.), p. 140. (c. 1530)

But sit at home and learn the old-said saw,
Had I revenged been of every harm,
My coat had never kept me half so warm.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Posies, p. 147. (1575)

Hee that wreakes himselfe at every wronge,
Shall never singe the ritch mans song.

Berkeley MSS. (1885), iii, 32. (1639)

If I had reveng'd all wrong, I had not worn my skirts so long.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 136. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6462. (1732)

4 It [revenge] is sweeter far than flowing honey. (ὅς τε πολὺ γλυκίων μέλιτος καταλείβοντο.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xviii, l. 109. (c. 850 B.C.)

"Revenge is good, sweeter than life itself." Yes; so say the ignorant. (At vindicta bonum vita iucundius ipsa | nempe hoc indocti.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 180. (c. A.D. 120)

Vengeance is sweete.

PAINTER, The Palace of Pleasure, ii, 35. (1566)

O revenge, how sweet thou art!

BEN JONSON, Silent Woman. Act iv, sc. 5. (1609)

It is a devilish phrase in the mouth of men, That revenge is sweet.

Whole Duty of Man: Sunday, p. 16. (1658)

Revenge is sweet.

THOMAS SOUTHERNE, Sir Antony Love. Act iv,

sc. 3. (1691) SHERIDAN, St. Patrick's Day.

Act ii, sc. 4. (1775) BYRON, Don Juan. Canto

i, st. 124. (1818) HENRY KINGSLEY, Ravens-

hoe. Ch. 36. (1861) MRS. HENRY WOOD,

Trevlyn Hold. Ch. 58. (1864) etc., etc.

'Tis sweet to love; but when with scorn we meet,

Revenge supplies the loss with joys as great.

GEORGE GRANVILLE, The British Enchanters.

Act v, sc. 1. (1706)

Though sweet are our friendships, our hopes, our affections,

Revenge on a tyrant is sweetest of all.

THOMAS MOORE, Avenging and Bright. (a.1852)

5 Revenge is always the delight of a little, weak and petty mind. (Quippe minuti | semper et infirmi est animi exiguique voluptas | ultio.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 189. (c. A.D. 120)

See under WOMAN.

6 They reckon no laws that meditate revenge.

THOMAS KYD, The Spanish Tragedie. Act i, sc. 3. (c. 1589)

7 Revenge, however sweet, is dearly bought
By that one good, which gone, all else is nought.

(Quel que soit le plaisir que cause la vengeance,

C'est l'acheter trop cher que l'acheter d'un bien
Sans qui les autres ne sont rien.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Cheval S'Étant Voulu Venger du Cerf. Bk. iv, fab. 13. (1668)
Wright, tr.

It costs more to revenge injuries than to bear them.

THOMAS WILSON, Maxims. No. 303. (c. 1551)

Revenge is a costly luxury.

PETROLEUM V. NASBY (D. R. LOCKE), The Nasby Papers. (1864)

8 Thinking no revenge more princely, than to spare when she might spill.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 452. (1580)

To revenge is no valour, but to bear.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, iii, 5, 39. (1608)

To forget a wrong is the best revenge.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 324. (1639)

Pardons and pleasantness are great revenges.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 367. (1640)

Living well is the best revenge.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 526.

To pardon is a divine revenge.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 202. (1666)

Forgiveness and a smile is the best revenge.

SAMUEL PALMER, Moral Essays on Proverbs, p. 81. (1710)

'Tis more noble to forgive, and more manly to despise, than to revenge an injury.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1752.

To forget an injury is the best revenge.

TRUSLER, Proverbs in Verse, p. 101. (c. 1800)

Revenge a wrong by forgiving it.

WILLIAM HONE, Year-Book, col. 1417. (1831)

The noblest revenge is to forgive.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 1. (1853)

9 To be revenged on an enemy is to obtain a new lease of life. (Inimicum ulcisci vitam accipere est alteram.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 270. (c. 43 B.C.)

10 Sweet revenge grows harsh.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, v, 2, 115. (1605)

Revenge, that thirsty dropsy of our souls, . . . Is not alone sweet but partakes of tartness.

MASSINGER, Very Woman. Act iv, sc. 2. (1634)

Revenge, at first though sweet,

Bitter ere long back on it self recoils.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. ix, l. 171. (1667)

11 Revenge and Wrong bring forth their kind,
The foul cubs like their parents are.

P. B. SHELLEY, Hellas, l. 729. (1821)

1
Revenge of a hundred years hath still sucking teeth. (Vendetta di cent' anni ha ancora i lat-taiuoli.)

TORRILANO, Piazza Universale, p. 299. (1666)

2
He who cannot revenge himself is weak, he who will not is vile. (Chi non può sua ven-detta è debile, chi non vuole è vile.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 22. (1853) Cited with the comment that it is a "devilish" proverb. Bacon's apothegm that the spirit of a nation is never better displayed than in its proverbs is especially true with reference to Italian proverbs. "I think every tenth proverb in an Italian collection is some cynical or selfish maxim," says Isaac D'Israeli, in his Curiosities of Literature.

3
Arise from my ashes, unknown avenger! (Ex-oriare, aliquis nostris ex ossibus ultor.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 625. The dying imprecation of Dido upon the false Aeneas.

4
What is revenge, but courage to call in Our honour's debts?

YOUNG, The Revenge. Act i, sc. 1. (1721)

REVERENCE

5
Always and in everything let there be rever-ence.

CONFUCIUS, Book of Rites. Ch. 1. (c. 500 B. C.)

6
Reverence, That angel of the world.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iv, 2, 247. (1609)

None so poor to do him reverence.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iii, 2, 125. (1599)

Where reverence is there also is fear. (ὅσα γε αἰδώς, ἐνθα καὶ δέος.)

STASINUS, Cypria. Frag. 20. (c. 700 B. C.)

Quoted by PLATO, Euthyphro, 12B.

True rev'rence is . . . the feare of God.

ROBERT HERRICK, Reverence. (1647)

Reverence. The spiritual attitude of a man to a god and a dog to a man.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

REVOLUTION

See also Rebellion

7
Revolutions are not about trifles, but spring from trifles. (ῥέγονται οὐν αὖ στράσεις οὐ περὶ μικρῶν ἀλλ' ἐκ μικρῶν.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. v, ch. 3, sec. 1. (c. 330 B. C.)

Never will twenty volumes in folio cause a revolution, the little pamphlets at threepence are the things to be feared. (Jamais vingt volumes en folio ne feront de revolution, ce sont les petits livres portatifs à trent sous qui sont à craindre.)

VOLTAIRE, Letter, 5976. (c. 1775) Works, xlii, 520.

Great revolutions, whatever may be their causes, are not lightly commenced.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Speech, House of Com-mons, 5 Feb., 1863.

8
I see that my hopes make you sad: you do not desire a liberty which will cost much gold and blood. Do you demand, then, that revolutions be made with rose-water? (Voulez-vous qu'on vous fasse des révolutions à l'eau rose?)

SEBASTIEN CHAMFORT, Retort, to Marmontel, who deplored the violent methods of the French Revolutionists. (1789) See MAR-MONTEL, Mémoires d'un Père, liv, xiv, in Œuvres (1818), ii, 294.

Revolutions are not to be made with rosewater.

LORD BYRON, Letters, iv, 358. (1819)

Revolutions are not made with rose-water.

LYTTON, The Parisians. Bk. v, ch. 7. (a. 1873)

It is sometimes said that revolutions are not made with rose-water.

LORD AVEBURY, The Use of Life. Ch. 11. (1894)

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4245 (1732) points out that "Spears are not made of Bulrushes."

Revolutions are not made by men in spectacles.

O. W. HOLMES, The Young Practitioner. Lec-ture in New York, 2 March, 1871.

With rose leaves not much can be built. (Auf Rosenblättern ist nicht zu bauen.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbs, p. 344. (1856) A German proverb, for which the French have a jingle: "Avec des feuilles de rose, On ne bâtit pas gran chose."

9
Where there is content there will be no revolution.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xvi, ch. i, sec. 10. (c. 500 B. C.)

10
Every revolution was first a thought in one man's mind.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: History. (1841)

11
Revolutions are the last desperate remedy when all else has failed.

J. A. FROUDE, Julius Caesar. Ch. 13. (1879)

Revolution is simply democracy turning over in bed. It accomplishes nothing.

A. E. WIGGAM, The New Decalogue of Science, p. 123. (1922)

The history of mankind is one long record of giving revolution another trial, and limping back at last to sanity, safety, and work.

E. W. HOWE, Preaching from the Audience. (1926)

12
There is a kind of revolution so general in character that it changes the tastes as well as the fortunes of the world. (Il y a une révolution générale qui change le goût des esprits aussi bien que les fortunes du monde.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 50. (1665)

13
A reform is a correction of abuses; a revolu-tion is a transfer of power.

LORD LYTTON, Speech, House of Commons, on the Reform Bill of 1866.

Revolution. An abrupt change in the form of mis-government.

AMBROSE BIERCE, Devil's Dictionary. (1906)

1 Inciting to revolution is treason, not only against man, but also against God.

POPE LEO XIII, Immortalis Dei, 1 Nov., 1885.

2 Sire, it is not a revolt,—it is a revolution. (Mon sire, ce n'est pas une révolte,—c'est une révolution.)

DUC DE ROCHEFOUCAULD-LIANCOURT, announcing the fall of the Bastille to Louis XVI, King of France, on the evening of 14 July, 1789. The King had exclaimed, "Mais, c'est une révolte!" See CARLYLE, French Revolution. Pt. i, bk. 5, ch. 7.

A revolution is an opinion backed by bayonets. (Une révolution est une opinion qui trouve des baïonnettes.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Epigram. See GUILLON, Napoléon, p. 284.

3 All men recognize the right of revolution.

H. D. THOREAU, Civil Disobedience. (1849)

The right of revolution is indisputable.

J. L. MOTLEY, in Times (London), 23 May, 1861.

The right of revolution is an inherent one.

U. S. GRANT, Personal Memoirs. Ch. 1. (1885)

4 I would not be at the trouble of composing a distiche to achieve a revolution.

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to George Montague, 30 Dec., 1761.

REWARD

See also Prize, Wages

5 The audience is the reward of the speaker; the reward of study is understanding; of fasting, charity.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 6b. (c. 450) Letters be for studentes, riches for the carefull, the world for the presumptuous, paradise for the devoute.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 31. (1578) Learning to the Studious; Riches to the Careful; Power to the Bold; Heaven to the Virtuous

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754

6 Rewards and punishments are the lowest form of education.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11. (c. 400 B. C.)

7 The consciousness of having done a splendid action is itself a sufficient reward. (Satis est in ipsa conscientia pulcherrimi facti fructus.)

CICERO, Philippicae. No. 2, ch. 44, sec. 114. (44 B. C.)

The true profit of virtuous deeds lies in the doing. (Recte factorum verus fructus sit fecisse.)

SENECA, De Clementia. Bk. i, sec. 1. (c. A. D. 55)

The reward of a good deed is to have done it. (Recte facti fecisse merces est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxi, sec. 20. (c. A. D. 64) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 16, who gives the French, "La récompense d'une bonne action, c'est de l'avoir faite." A similar French proverb is "Le fruit d'un service, c'est le service même."

He . . . rewards his deeds with doing them.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, ii, 2, 130. (1607)

Miserable age, where the only reward of doing well is the doing of it!

WEBSTER, Dutchesse of Malfy. Act i, sc. 1. (1614)

A generous action is its own reward.

WILLIAM WALSH, Upon Quilting His Mistress. (1692)

The "wages" of every noble act do yet lie in Heaven or else nowhere.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. iii, Ch. 12. (1843)

The reward of a thing well done is to have done it.

EMERSON, New England Reformers. (1844)

VIRTUE ITS OWN REWARD, see under VIRTUE.

8 The reward of merit. (Virtutis praemium.)

CICERO, Pro Murena. (63 B. C.) Cicero also has the phrase, "Operate pretium est" (There is a reward for what is done).

9 The reward of one duty is the power to fulfil another.

GEORGE ELIOT, Daniel Deronda. Bk. iv, ch. 46. (1876)

10 Promise of fair reward
Makes work a two-fold joy, however hard.

(παντι γὰρ προκελευρον κέρδος πρὸς ἔργῳ τὴν χάριν τίκτει διπλήν.)

EURIPIDES, Rhesus, l. 162. (c. 450 B. C.)

11 Still to our gains our chief respect is had;
Reward it is, that makes us good or bad.

ROBERT HERRICK, Rewards. (1648) The Chinese say, "Shan ē tao 'tou chung yu pao" (Reward comes alike to good and evil).

12 For great responsibilities there is a great reward. (Magna curae magna merces est.)

SALLUST, Ad Caesarem Senem. Ch. 7. (c. 46 B. C.)

13 Desert and rewards go not often together.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1678)

Desert and reward seldom keep company.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Clarissa, iv, 120. (1747)

14 We usually call reward and punishment the two hinges upon which all government turns.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels. Bk. i, ch. 6. (1726)

15 If I were a king, you should have a decoration to suit your qualities. (Se possiderem, ornatus esses ex tuis virtutibus.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 176. (160 B. C.) ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 7, quotes the phrase, "Ornatus ex tuis virtutibus" as a proverb.

Give, I pray, a reward worthy of my genius. (Da, precor, ingenio praemia digna meo.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. iii, eleg. 11, l. 50. (c. A. D. 9)

Never to reward any one equal to his merit, but always to insinuate that the reward was above it.

HENRY FIELDING, Jonathan Wild. Ch. 4. (1743) Wild's maxim for attaining greatness.

16 He was ful wis that first yaf mede. [He was full wise that first gave reward.]

UNKNOWN, Havelok the Dane, l. 1635. (c. 1300)

He was ful wise, y say, that first gaue gift.

UNKNOWN, Sir Tristrem, l. 626. (c. 1320)

Thus men sein, in every nede,

He was wys that ferst made mede.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis, v, 4719. (c. 1390)

RHETORIC

1 All a rhetorician's rules

Teach nothing but to name his tools.

BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 89. (1663)

His speech was a fine sample, on the whole,

Of rhetoric, which the learn'd call rigmarole.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 174. (1818)

2 Sweet, silent rhetoric of persuading eyes.

SAMUEL DANIEL, The Complaint of Rosamond.

St. 19. (1592)

The heavenly rhetoric of thine eye.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 60. (1595)

3 His sober lips then did he softly part,

Whence of pure rhetoric whole streams out-flow.

EDWARD FAIRFAX, tr., Godfrey of Bulloigne. (1600)

For rhetoric, he could not ope

His mouth, but out there flew a trope.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, i, i, 81. (1663)

The perswasive Rhetoric That sleek't his tongue.

MILTON, Paradise Regained. Bk. iv, l. 4. (1671)

4 This threede fyner to spyn.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

Taffeta phrases, silken terms precise,

Three-piled hyperboles, spruce affectation.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, v, 2, 407. (1595)

Ornate rhetoric taught out of the rule of Plato.

JOHN MILTON, Of Education. (1644)

Flowers of rhetoric.

SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

5 Rhetoric is the art of leading souls by persuasion. (ψυχαγωγία οὔσα.)

PLATO, Phaedrus. Sec. 271C. (c. 385 B.C.)

Rhetoric is very good or stark naught. . . . If I am not fully persuaded, I laugh at the orator.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Preaching. (a. 1654)

There is a Truth and Beauty in Rhetorick; but it oftener serves ill Turns than good ones.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. Maxim 137. (1693)

You have to persuade men to action not by reasoning, but by rhetoric.

MAUGHAM, Christmas Holiday, p. 36. (1939)

6 Rhetoric without logic is like a tree with leaves and blossoms, but no root.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Preaching. (a. 1654)

Spare your Rhetoric, and speak Logic.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4241. (1732)

7 Practise rhetoric in your common talk.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 1, 35. (1594)

RHYME

8

Those that write in Rhime still make

The one Verse for the other's sake.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, ii, i, 27. (1663)

The troublesome and modern bondage of Rime-ing.

MILTON, Paradise Lost: The Printer to the Reader. (1667)

Debased the majesty of verse to rhyme.

DRYDEN, To Earl of Roscommon, l. 11. (a.1700)

9

"This may wel be rym dogerel," quod he.

CHAUCER, Prologue to Melibeus, l. 7. (c. 1387)

Thy ryme (quoth he) is muche elder than myne,

But myne beyng newer is truer then thine.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

10

To be rimed to death, as is sayd to be doone in Ireland.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, An Apologie for Poetrie (Arber), p. 72. (c. 1581) Referring to the alleged killing of Irish rats by rhyming.

I was never so be-rhymed since Pythagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 188. (1600)

My poets Shall . . . Rhyme 'em to death, as they do rats in Ireland.

RANDOLPH, Jealous Lovers. Act v, sc. 2. (1632)

An Irish rat-catcher, that is said to rhyme vermin to death.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, i, 377. (a. 1680)

Songs no longer move;

No rat is rhym'd to death, nor maid to love.

POPE, Satires of Donne, ii, 22. (1735)

11

Verse without rhyme is a body without a soul.

SWIFT, Advice to a Young Poet, 1 Dec., 1720.

Neverout: Well, miss, I'll think on this.

Miss: That's rhyme, if you take it in time.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

12

These thinges . . . mowe wel. if men liste, ryme; trewly, they acorde nothing.

THOMAS USK, The Testament of Love. (c. 1387) In SKEAT, Chaucer, vii, 51, with the note, "Things may be brought together, like riming words, but they will not on that account agree."

It may wele ryme, but it accordith nought.

JOHN LYDGATE, Inconsistency. (c. 1430)

It may ryme but it accordth not.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

13

Rhyme often makes mystical nonsense pass with the critics for wit.

WYCHERLEY, The Plain-Dealer. Act ii. (1676)

II—Rhyme and Reason

14

En toy ne Ryme ne Raison.

UNKNOWN, Maitre Pierre Pathelin. (c. 1475)

See Notes and Queries, iii, x, 236.

For reson can I non fynde

Nor good ryme in yower mater.

JOHN SKELTON, Against Garnesche. No. iiii, l. 104. (a. 1529)

Rhyme yet out of reson.

SKELTON, Against Garnesche, iii, 128.
Yea, matry, now it is somewhat, for now it is rhyme; whereas before it was neither rhyme nor reason.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Remark, to a friend who had versified a mediocre book. (a. 1535) See BACON, Apophthegms. No. 287.

Ye shall hear him chafe beyond all reason or rhyme.

UNKNOWN, Jacob and Esau. Act ii, sc. 3. (1568)
In the why and the wherefore is neither rhyme nor reason.

SHAKESPEARE, The Comedy of Errors, ii, 2, 48. (1593)

Rosalind: But are you so much in love as your rhymes speak?

Orlando: Neither rhyme nor reason can express how much.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, iii, 2, 418. (1600)
In despite of the teeth of all rhyme and reason.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, v, 5, 132. (1601) See also The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 1, 149; Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 99; Henry V, v, 2, 164.

Here is rhyme, nor empty of reason.

BEN JONSON, Volpone: Prologue. (1605)

Still may syllables jar with time,
Still may reason war with rhyme.

BEN JONSON, A Fit of Rhyme Against Rhyme. (a. 1637)

Against all rhyme and reason.

HENRY MORE, Mystery of Iniquity, p. 415. (1664)
Heer's nor rhyme, nor reason.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 349. (1678)
Blank verse is neither rhyme nor reason.

J. K. PAULDING, The Bucktails. Act v, sc. 1. (1815)
[You] leave me all the morning, without rhyme or reason!

LORD LYTTON, The Caxtons. Pt. ix, ch. 3. (1849)

RICHES

See also Poverty and Riches

1
An Embarrassment of Riches. (L'Embaras des Richesses.)

ABBÉ LÉONOR D'ALLAINVAL. Title of comedy. (1726) The more alternatives, the more difficult the choice. The English version by John Ozell opened at the Haymarket Theatre, 9 Oct., 1738.

2
Cast not thy heart after riches.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. ix, l. 10. (c. 700 B.C.) Griffith, tr.
Labor not to seek increase.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live, ix, 14.
Labour not to be rich. (Noli laborare ut dieris.)
Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 4. (c. 350 B.C.)

3
If riches be brought to thee by robbery, they will not stay the night with thee; day dawneth and they are not in thy house, . . . they have made themselves wings like geese.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. ix, l. 16. (c. 700 B.C.) Griffith, tr.

Riches certainly make themselves wings; they fly away as an eagle toward heaven. (Quia facient sibi pennas quasi aquilae, et volabunt in caelum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiii, 5. (c. 350 B.C.)
Worldly riches vanish more speedily than they come.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 165. (c. 1050) Quoted as a maxim of Socrates.

Riches have wings.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Riches. (1597)

COWPER, The Task. Bk. iii, l. 263. (1784)

THOREAU, Early Spring in Massachusetts, 3 April, 1842. etc., etc.

Riches, the Wisest Monarch sings,
Make Pinions for themselves to fly,
They fly like Bats, on Parchment Wings,
And Geese their silver Plumes supply.

SWIFT, The Run Upon the Bankers, l. 21. (1720)

Riches, like insects, when conceal'd they lie,
Wait but for wings, and in their season fly.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iii, l. 169. (1732)

It was said of old time, that riches have wings; and, though this be not applicable in a literal strictness to the wealth of our patriarchal brethren of the South, yet it is clear that their possessions have legs.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. i, No. 5. Note. (1848) Referring to the slaves.

4
Better is the praise and love of men than riches in the storehouse.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xvi, l. 11. (c. 700 B.C.) Griffith, tr.

Better is a little with righteousness, than great revenues without right.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvi, 8. (c. 350 B.C.)

5
Rich men without wisdom and learning are called Sheep with golden fleeces.

NATHANIEL AMES, Almanac. (1734)

6
Riches are given to the good that they may not be esteemed an evil, to the bad that they may not be too highly valued. (Dantur quidem bonis, ne quis mala estimet; malis autem, ne quis nimis bona.)

SAINT AUGUSTINE. (c. A.D. 600) The ascription is by BLAND, Proverbs, i, 78.

7
I cannot call Riches better than the Baggage of Virtue. The Roman Word is better, Impedimenta. For as the Baggage is to an Army, so is Riches to Virtue. It cannot be spared, nor left behinde, but it hindreth the March; Yea, and the care of it, sometimes, loseth or disturbeth the Victory.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Riches. (1797)

Riches are but the baggage of fortune.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1670)

8
With the Rich and Mighty, always a little patience.

PHILIP BARRY, The Philadelphia Story. Act ii, sc. 1. (1939) Quoted as a Spanish proverb.

1 Consort not with one richer than thou. What companionship hath the pot with the cauldron? When the one smiteth the other is broken.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiii, 2. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

2 He is wise that is rich.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616) It is even a maxim in common acceptation, "He is wise that is rich."

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 128. (1629)

3 Despise riches if you would have a happy mind. (Despice divitias, si vis animo esse beatus.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 1. (c. 175 B. C.) Dare to despise riches. (Aude contemnere opes.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 364. (19 B. C.) We must spurn riches, the diploma of slavery. (Spernendae opes: auctoramenta sunt servitutum.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. civ, sec. 34. (c. A. D. 64)

4 When you grow rich, take care to treat your body well; the invalid may own money, but not himself. (Cum fueris locuples, corpus curare memento: | aeger dives habet nummos, se non habet ipsum.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 5. (c. 175 B. C.) If thou hast riches, deal well with thyself, because there is no pleasure in the grave.

Babylonian Talmud: Erubin, fo. 54. (c. 450)

5 There is no avenging yourself upon a rich man. (Del hombre arraigado no te verás vengado.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615) Arraigado, lit., one who has money invested.

6 Riches serve wise men, but command a fool; for a covetous man serveth his riches, and not they him.

PIERRE CHARRON. (a. 1600) As quoted by WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. Ch. 13. FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4047. (1732)

7 Men seyn, that "the riche man hath seld good conseil but-if he have it of himself."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 20. (c. 1387) The lawe seith: that "ther maketh no man himselfen riche, if he do harm to another wight."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 51.

8 Morals today are corrupted by our worship of riches. (Corrupti mores depravatique sunt admiratione divitiarum.)

CICERO, De Officiis. Bk. ii, ch. 20, sec. 71. (c. 45 B. C.)

9 If the search for riches were sure to be successful, though I should become a groom with whip in hand to get them, I would do so. As the search may not be successful, I will follow after that which I love.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. vii, ch. 11. (c. 500 B. C.) Quoted by EMERSON, Social Aims

10 Always you are to be rich next Year.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 787. (1732) Riches have made more covetous Men, than Covetousness hath made rich Men.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4044. Riches rather enlarge than satisfy Appetites.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4048.

11 Riches alone make no Man happy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4041. (1732) Riches may not bring happiness, but they enable one to send a carriage for it.

UNKNOWN, Poor Richard Jr., p. 43. (1906)

12 Riches are gotten with travayle, kept with feare, and lost with greife.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 52. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Riches are gotten with labor, holden with feare, and lost with greife and excessive care.

Reliquiae Antiquae (1841), i, 208. (c. 1575) Pains to get, care to keep, fear to lose.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640) Riches are gotten with Pain, kept with Care, and lost with Grief.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4043. (1732)

13 Rich in lands, rich in money put out to usury. (Dives agris, dives positus in fœnore nummis.)

HORACE, Artis Poeticae, l. 421; Satires, i, 2, 13. (35 B. C.)

That rich man at Cures owns more land than a kite can fly over. (Dives arat Curibus quantum non milius errat.)

PERSIUS, Satires. No. iv, l. 26. (c. A. D. 58) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vi, 5, who gives the proverb as "Quantum non milius oberret."

They that hold the greatest farms, pay the least rent.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1098. (1650) Herbert explains that this saying is "applied to rich men that are unthankful to God."

14 Both rank and valour, without riches, are more worthless than seaweed. (Et genus et virtus, nisi cum re, vilior alga est.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 5, l. 8.

Riches excuse folly. (Stultitiam patiuntur opes.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 29. (20 B. C.)

Among us most sacred of all is the majesty of riches. (Inter nos sanctissima divitiarum | maiestas.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 113. (c. A. D. 120)

Let us hold as an Oracle the saying of Horace, Birth and good qualities are nothing worth, if riches from them be shut forth.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 190. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Riches rule the Roast.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4046. (1732)

15 Common sense among rich men is rare. (Rarus enim ferme sensus communis in illa | fortuna.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 73. (c. A. D. 120)

Machiavel says virtue and riches seldom settle on one man.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pr. ii, sec. ii, mem. ii, subs. 1. (1612)

It was very prettily said that we may learn the little value of fortune by the persons on whom Heaven is pleased to bestow it.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 203. (1709)
If heaven had looked upon riches to be a valuable thing, it would not have given them to such a scoundrel.

SWIFT, Letter to Miss Vanhomrigh, 12 Aug., 1720.

I have not observed men's honesty to increase with their riches.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to J. Moore. (1800)

1 He who wants riches, wants them at once. (Dives qui fieri vult, et cito vult fieri.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiv, l. 176. (c. A. D. 120)

2 If you would become rich, move next door to a pauper.

HARRY S. KEELER, The Sharkskin Book, p. 167. (1941) Quoted as a Chinese proverb.

3 By the olde prouerbe, euerie man may not weare a fourde [furred] hood.

THOMAS LUPTON, All for Money, sig. C2. (1578)
Is every man born to be rich?

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1659)

4 To bee rich is the gift of fortune.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 228. (1580)
HOWELL, p. 8. FULLER, No. 4042. (1732)

5 He that desireth riches, must stretch the string that will not reach.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 338. (1580)

6 Infinite riches in a little room.

MARLOWE, Jew of Malta. Act i, l. 60. (c. 1592)

7 It's true what is commonly said, rich men can't be good. (οὐκ εἰσὶν οἱ πᾶμπλοῦστοι ἀγαθοί.)

PLATO, Laws. Bk. v, sec. 743C. (c. 345 B. C.)

A rich man is either a knave, or the heir of a knave. (Dives aut iniquus est, aut iniqui haeres.)

SAINT JEROME, Ad Hedibiam. (c. 400) Jerome quotes this as "a vulgar proverb which seems to me to be very true." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 47, and included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 27, with the rendering, "A ryche man is eyther wycked, or a wycked mans executour heyre."

8 He that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent. (Qui autem festinat ditari, non erit innocens.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxviii, 20. (c. 350 B. C.)
No one gets rich quickly if he is honest. (οὐθεὶς ἐπλοῦτησεν ταχέως δίκαιος ὢν.)

MENANDER, The Toady, l. 42. (c. 300 B. C.)
No good man ever became suddenly rich.

(Repente dives nemo factus est bonus.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 643. (c. 43 B. C.)

Therefore seith Salomon: "he that hasteth him to bisly to wexe riche shal be noon innocent."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 51. (c. 1387)
Slow and sure . . . is good counsel. 'Tis a roguey kind of a saying, that He that will be rich before night, may be hanged before noon.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables, 337. (1692)

For, oh! my son, the wisest has said, "He that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent."

DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. i, ch. 9. (1826)

He who will be rich in a year, at the half-year they hang him. (Quien en un año quiere ser rico, al medio le ahorcan.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 96. (1853) A Spanish proverb. The Florentines say, "Arno swells not without becoming turbid."

9 If riches increase, set not your heart upon them. (Divitiae si affluent, nolite cor apponere.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lxii, 10. (c. 350 B. C.)

If Riches increase, let thy mind hold pace with them; and think it not enough to be Liberal but Munificent.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 5. (1682)

10 Riches come not of themselves.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 10. (c. 3550 B. C.)
Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

When riches are gained, follow the heart; for riches are of no avail if one be weary.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 11.

11 You don't get rich by making a lot of money all at once. You get rich by making a little money every day for a long time.

CRAIG RICE, Sunday Pigeon Murders, p. 77. (1942)

12 If thou wol be riche, suffice the with suche as thou hast, for he that hath not suffisaunce can neuer be riche, what goodes that euer he hath.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 67. (1477) Quoting Aristotle.

13 Why is one man richer than another? Because he is more industrious, more persevering, and more sagacious.

RUSKIN, Political Economy of Art. Ch. 2. (1857)

14 He whose hands are full of dates does not pelt the tree.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 19. (c. 1258)
The rich man, by the possession of what is lawful, is preserved from committing that which is unlawful.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Apologue 19.
Why should a rich man steal?

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 196. (1670)

15 He enjoys riches most who needs them least. (Is maxime divitiis fruitur, qui minime divitiis indiget.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xiv, sec. 17. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>1</sup> The shortest way to riches is by contempt of riches. (Brevissima ad divitias per contemptum divitiarum via est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxii, sec. 3. (A. D. 64) The shortest cut to the richest of the Indies, is by their contempt.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Forren Newes: From Spaine. (1613)

Many speak the truth when they say that they despise riches, but they mean the riches possessed by other men.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 372. (1820)

<sup>2</sup> Call me a scoundrel, only call me rich. (Sine me vocari pessimum, ut dives vocer.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxv, sec. 14. (c. A. D. 64) Quoting a Greek fragment.

All ask how great my riches are, but none whether my soul is good. (An dives, omnes quaerimus, nemo an bonus.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxv, sec. 14. (c. A. D. 64) Quoting a Greek fragment. Cited by BLAND, Proverbs, i, 75, in slightly different form, "Nemo an bonus: an dives omnes quaerimus."

First as to his fortune, for the last question that will be asked will be as to his morals. (Protinus ad cenum, de moribus ultima fiet | quaestio.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 140. (c. A. D. 120)

How rich a man is, all desire to know;

But none enquires if good he be, or no.

HERRICK, Gold, Before Goodnesse. (1648)

Alas poor Swaine; 'tis true what the prouerbe saith, We aske not what he is, but what he hath.

BRAETHWAIT, Natures Embassie, p. 233. (1621)

It is not what is she, but what has she.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 224 (1721)

Spoken of the choice of wives.

Not what is She, but what has She.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3687. (1732)

Never.: They say her father was a baker.

Lady A.: Ay; but it is not, What is she? but, What has she? now-a-days.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Perhaps you will say a man is not young; I answer, he is rich; he is not gentle, handsome, witty, brave, good-humored, but he is rich, rich, rich, rich,—that one word contradicts everything you say against him.

HENRY FIELDING, The Miser. Act iii. (1733)

Virtue is of noble birth, but riches take the wall of her.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 550. (1855)

<sup>3</sup> It is better to be rich, for we see the wise spending their time at the doors of the rich. (τοῖς σοφοῖς γὰρ ἔφη ὄρᾱ ἐπὶ ταῖς τῶν πλουσίων θύραις διατρίβοντας.)

SIMONIDES, when the wife of Hiero asked him whether it was better to be wise or to be rich. (c. 475 B. C.) As quoted by ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric, ii, 16, 2. PLATO, Republic, vi, 489B, says, "The author of that epigram was a liar, because it is not the natural course of things that the wise should go to the doors of the rich."

The learned pate ducks to the golden fool.

SHAKESPEARE, Timon of Athens, iv, 3, 17. (1608)

<sup>4</sup> In an ugly and unhappy world the richest man can purchase nothing but ugliness and unhappiness.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

<sup>5</sup> For riches no bound has been fixed or revealed to men. (πλούτου δ' οὐθέν τέρμα πεφασμένον ἀνδράσι κεῖται.)

SOLON, Fragments. Frag. xiii, l. 71. (c. 575 B. C.)

Quoted by ARISTOTLE, Politics, i, 3, 9.

Do you ask what is the proper limit to wealth? It is, first, to have what is necessary; and, second, to have what is enough. (Primus habere quod necesse est, proximus quod sat est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ii, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>6</sup> Riches get their value from the mind of their possessor; they are blessings to those who know how to use them, curses to those who do not. (Atque haec perinde sunt ut illius animus qui ea possidet; | qui uti scit ei bona: illi qui non utitur recte mala.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 195. (163 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> To be thought rich is as good as to be rich.

THACKERAY, The Virginians. Ch. 2. (1859)

<sup>8</sup> Every one is kin to the rich man.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 235. (1666)

The Italian proverb is, "Ai ricchi non mancano parenti" (The rich never want kindred)

The French say, "Le riche a plus de parents qu'il ne connaît" (The rich has more relations than he knows).

The Rich never want for Kindred.

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4735. (1732) Russians say, "Whoever is rich is my brother."

<sup>9</sup> A rich person ought to have a strong stomach.

WALT WHITMAN, Specimen Days, p. 324. (1882)

<sup>10</sup> Riches got with craft is commonly lost with shame.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, p. 3. (1589)

II—Riches: True Riches

<sup>11</sup> Who is rich? He who enjoys his wealth.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 25b. (c. 450)

Who is rich? He that rejoices in his Portion.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744

<sup>12</sup> For he was riche and cleerly out of dette.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Shipman's Tale, l. 376. (c. 1386) The French say, "Il est assez riche qui ne doit rien" (He is rich enough who owes nothing).

<sup>13</sup> All are rich who can enjoy air and earth. (Omnes esse divites, qui caelo et terra frui possint.)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. vii, epis. xvi, sec. 3. (54 B. C.) Quoted as a Stoic doctrine.

He is rich who has such property that he desires nothing more. (Dives est, cui tanta possessio est, ut nihil optet amplius.)

CICERO, Paradoxa. Bk. vi, sec. 2. Adapted. (c. 45 B. C.)

Is he nat riche that hath suffisaunce?

THOMAS USK, The Testament of Love. (c. 1387)

In SKEAT, Chaucer, vii, 88.

Seneca saith, Dives est, non qui magis habet, sed qui minus cupit. He is riche, not that hath much, but that coueteth least.

JOHN NORTHBROOKE, A Treatise Against Dicing, p. 48. (1577)

It is not riches to have much, but to desire little.

ROBERT GREENE, Farewell to Follie. (1587)

Hee is not rich that hath much, but hee that hath enough.

ARTHUR WARWICK, Spare Minutes, p. 4. (1637)

He is rich enough that wants nothing.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 405. (1640)

The Italians say, "Assai è ricco a chi nulla manca" (He is rich enough to whom nothing is lacking).

Passing rich on forty pounds a year.

GOLDSMITH, The Deserted Village, l.142. (1770)

1 To couet nothing, but geue much, that is a possessing of great riches.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 67. (1578)

Would you grow rich toward God? Then learn to give.

CAYLER, Heart-Thoughts, p. 31. (1872)

For all you can hold in your cold dead hand Is what you have given away.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Peter Cooper. See under GIFT.

2 He is rich enough who does not want bread. (Satis dives est, qui pane non indiget.)

ST. JEROME, Epistles. Ep.cxxv,sec.20.(A. D.411)

He hath ynough that hath bred ynough, though he haue nought elles.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus vii, l. 86. (1377) The Japanese say, "A handful of rice is riches to a starving man."

3 Wealth in the home; comfortable circumstances. (Res ampla domi.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xii, l. 10. (c. A. D. 120)

A litel grounde well tilled,

A litel house well filled,

A litel wife well willed,

Would make him live that weare halfe killed.

Notes and Queries. Ser. iv, vol. iii, p. 10. Quoting a jingle of c. 1575.

A little house well fill'd, a little land well till'd, and a little wife well will'd, are great riches.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 53. (1670)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735;

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 156. (1880)

4 He is rich who is well satisfied. (Chi tsu 'ché fu'.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 33. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

The fruit of riches is plenty; the proof of plenty is contentment. (Divitiarum fructus est in copia; copiam declarat satietas.)

CICERO, Paradoxa. Bk. vi, sec. 2. (c. 45 B. C.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 40, the French being, "Le fruit des richesses est dans l'abondance; et la preuve de l'abondance, c'est le contentement." The French proverb is, "Asssez a qui se contente."

To be content with our own is the greatest and most certain wealth of all. (Contentum vero suis rebus esse, maximae sunt, certissimaeque divitiae.)

CICERO, Paradoxa. Bk. vi, sec. 3.

Rich is he who is contented with his lot.

Babylonian Talmud: Abodah Zarah, iv, 1. (c. 450)

Riches are not from an abundance of worldly goods, but from a contented mind.

MOHAMMED, Sunnah. (c. 630) Sayings of Muhammad, p. 63.

I thinke my self indued with the greatest riches in the world, to wit your person and my own contented minde.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 79. (1576)

He is rich who is satisfied.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1943. (1732)

Who is rich? He that is content. Who is that? Nobody.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.

5 He hath riches sufficient that needeth neither to flatter nor borrow.

LING, comp., Politeuphuia, p. 128. (1669)

He is rich enough, that needeth neither flatter nor borrow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1942. (1732)

6 Wealth consists in talent, not in possessions; greatness, in understanding, not in age.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 5. (c. 1258)

7 A man is rich in proportion to the number of things which he can afford to let alone.

H. D. THOREAU, Walden. Ch. 2. (1854)

III—Riches: Their Advantages

8 Gold and silver make the foot stand sure. (χρυσιον και ἀργύριον ἐπιστήσουσιν πόδα.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xl, 25. (c. 190 B. C.) Quoted in the Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, fo. 119a. The Latin is,

"Aurum et argentum est constitutio pedum."

The next verse is, "Facultates et virtutes exaltant cor" (Riches and strength exalt the heart).

9 Let us guard our riches, for without them all the collected virtues are but a heap of grass.

BHARTIRHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 39. (c. A. D. 100)

10 The silly sayings of the rich pass for saws in the world. (Las necedades del rico por sentencias pasan en el mundo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615)

The jests of the rich are ever successful.

GOLDSMITH, Vicar of Wakefield. Ch. 7. (1766)

Get wealth—wealth makes the dullard's jest
Seem witty when true wit falls flat.

T. B. ALDRICH, Nourmadee. (c. 1880)

A rich man's joke is allis funny.

THOMAS EDWARD BROWN, The Doctor. (a. 1897)

<sup>1</sup> The riche men are loved ay.

CHAUCER (?), The Romant of the Rose, l. 5362. (c. 1365)

By richesses may a man gete him grete freendes.

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 50. (c. 1387)

Riches maie make Freendes many waies.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546)

As long as I am riche reputed,
With solemn voyce I am saluted;
But wealthe away once woorne,
Not one wyll say good morne.

Reliquiae Antiquae (1841), i, 207. (c. 1550) See also FRIENDS AND ADVERSITY.

Rich folk have many friends.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 283. (1721)

<sup>2</sup> He who has plenty of pepper may season his food as he likes. (Cui multum est piperis, etiam oleribus immiscet.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, iii, 37. (1523)

He that hath the spice, may season as he list.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 426.

(1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 25. (1670)

She, that hath Spice enough, may season as she likes.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4140. (1732)

He that is rich need not live sparingly, and he that can live sparingly need not be rich.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

<sup>3</sup> The Rich need not beg a Welcome.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4734. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Riches well bestowed, are a great ornament, and setting forth to a gentleman.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii,
p. 188. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Riches well got, and well used, are a great Blessing.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4049. (1732)

<sup>5</sup> We make allowances [for faults] in the case of a large fortune. (Fortunae veniam damus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xi, l. 176. (c. A. D. 120)

The richer you are the more saintly you are held to be. (Sanctior est ille, qui ditior est.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Letters. No. vii,
sec. 5. (A. D. 374)

Rich Men have no Faults.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4036. (1732)

Rich Men's Spots are cover'd with Money.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4039. (1732)

A rich man can do nothing wrong. (Pecuniosus damnari non potest.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 322. (1869)

"Great men's vices are accounted sacred."

<sup>6</sup> Riches are chiefly good because they give us time.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Bernard Barton, 9
Oct., 1822.

<sup>7</sup> Riches cover a multitude of woes. (πλοῦτος δὲ πολλῶν ἐπικάλυμψ' ἐστὶν κακῶν.)

MENANDER, The Boeotian Girl: Fragment. (c.
300 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> 'Tis a sort of duty to be rich, that it may be in one's power to do good.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letter to Wortley
Montagu, 24 Sept., 1714.

<sup>9</sup> In a rich man's house the cloth is soon laid.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch.
43. (1712)

<sup>10</sup> So he be rich, even a barbarian pleases. (Dum-modo sit dives, barbarus ipse placet.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 276. (c. 1 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> It is the wealthy who are deemed wise, even by their fellow-citizens. (ἢ δ' ἔχοντες σοφοὶ καὶ πολίταις ἔδοξαν ἔμμεν.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes, v, 16. (c. 448 B. C.)

Riches make the ignorant wise and the ugly beautiful. (καὶ γὰρ δυσαιδέες σώμα καὶ δυσάνουν | γλώσση σοφὸν τιθῆσιν εὐμορφὸν τ' ἰδεῖν.)

SOPHOCLES, Alaeddæ. Fr. 85. (c. 450 B. C.) Cited by STOBÆUS, Florilegium, xci, 27; PLUTARCH,
Moralia, 21B.

He who has made his "pile" will be famous.
brave and just. (Quas qui construxerit ille | clarus erit, fortis, iustus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 96. (35 B. C.)

The Germans say, "Wer Geld hat, darf so dumm sein, als er will" (Who has money, can be as stupid as he pleases). The Latin proverb is "Stultitiam patiuntur opes"
(Riches make a fool endurable).

If a man be rich, he is of good family, wise, learned, virtuous, eloquent, handsome. All the virtues attach themselves to gold.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 41. (c. A. D. 100)

Three feet from the ground—if not a god, he is at least a fairy.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 361.

(1938) A Chinese proverb, referring to one who can afford to ride on horseback or in a sedan chair.

<sup>12</sup> Rich men are content because each day they renew their youth and each night embrace a beauty.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 19.

When he washes his face he wets his paws;

When he eats his rice he wets his jaws.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2590.

(1875) All that a rich man needs to do.

<sup>13</sup> Riches are sweet, even though gained by falsity. (τὸ κέρδος ἡδύ, καὶ ἀπὸ ψευδῶν ἔγ.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragment. No. 749. (c. 450 B. C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 21A.

<sup>14</sup> Rich people have the world at will.

UNKNOWN, In Roxburghe Ballads, i, 60. (c. 1630)

Rich men may doe any thing.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 99. (1639)

<sup>1</sup> Your purse makes you well-born. (γενναῖος ἐκ βαλαντίου.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, ii, 92. (c. A. D. 130) ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, viii, 27, gives "Generosus es ex trumena."

And he was competent whose purse was so.
COWPER, The Task. Bk. ii, l. 742. (1784)

IV—Riches: Their Disadvantages

<sup>2</sup> [The rich] are indeed rather possessed by their money than possessors.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. iii, subs. 12. (1621)

<sup>3</sup> A rich man's money hangs him oftentimes.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 98. (1639)

<sup>4</sup> He who craves more than he needs, mars his happiness.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 155. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr.

Riches take away more pleasures than they give.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 374. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>5</sup> The rich knows not who is his friend.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 864. (1640) The French say, "Riche homme ne sait Qui ami lui est."

<sup>6</sup> Not house and land, nor heaps of coine and gold

Rid agues, which their sicke Lord's body hold,
Nor cares from minde.

(Non domus et fundus, non aeris acervus et auri | aegroti domini deduxit corpore febris, | non animo curas.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. ii, l. 47. (20 B. C.)

Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 42. The translation is Florio's.

An expensive shoe does not rid us of the gout, nor an expensive ring of a hangnail, nor a crown of a headache.

PLUTARCH, On Tranquillity. Sec. 465A. (c. A. D. 95)

<sup>7</sup> If gold and jewels fill the hall, no one can protect it. (Chin yuh 'man t'ang, moh tzū neng 'sheu.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-tek-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 9. (c. 550 B. C.) Carus, tr.

<sup>8</sup> How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God! (πὺς δυσκόλως οἱ τὰ χρήματα ἔχοντες εἰς τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ θεοῦ εἰσπορεύονται.)

New Testament: Luke, xviii, 24. (c. A. D. 65)

Also Mark, x, 24. The Vulgate is, "Quam difficile, qui pecunias habent, in regnum Dei intrabunt!"

It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

New Testament: Matthew, xix, 24; Luke, xviii, 25. See under CAMEL.

The lamb which was shorn passed over the flood safely, but the unshorn did not.

Babylonian Talmud: Gittin, fo. 7a. (c. 450)

He was weighed down by his possessions.

Remember that sore saying spoken once
By Him that was the truth, "How hard it is
For the rich man to enter into heaven!"

Let all rich men remember that hard word.

TENNYSON, Queen Mary. Act iv, sc. 3, l. 134. (1875)

<sup>9</sup> It is a common prouerbe, Diuesque miserque, a rich man and a miserable.

THOMAS NASHE, Works (Grosart), vi, 99. (1600)

For one rich Man that is content, there are a hundred that are not.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1595. (1732)

Content and Riches seldom meet together;

Riches take thou, contentment I had rather.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743

<sup>10</sup> The greater your fortune, the greater your cares. (Plus est sollicitus magis beatus.)

PERIANDER, Apothegm. (c. 600 B. C.) See AU-SONIUS, Septem Sapientum Sententiae, l. 23

Salomon seith: that "the gretter richesses that a man hath, the mo dependours he hath."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 53. (c. 1387)

Riches bring oft harme, and euer feare.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 12. (1546)

The plenty of things dooth ingender care.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

As the carle riches he wretches.

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 10. (c. 1595) Cited by Ray, Kelly, and Trench

Riches bring cares and feares.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 180. (1633)

He that hath land, hath quarrels.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1000. (1640)

He who multiplies Riches multiplies Cares.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744.

Big ship, big anxiety. (Gran nave, gran pensiero.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 199. (1856)

An extra incense-burner attracts an extra demon.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 365. (1938) Riches bring trouble. A Chinese proverb.

The elephant is killed because he has tusks.

H. H. HART, Seven Hundred Chinese Proverbs. No. 215. (1938)

<sup>11</sup> The possession of riches means even greater agony than the acquisition of riches. (Maiore tormento pecunia possidetur quam quaeritur.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxv, sec. 16. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>12</sup> The rich man's wealth is most enemy unto his health.

GEORGE WHETSTONE, The English Myrror, p. 14. (1586)

When riches increase, the body decreaseth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1678)

<sup>13</sup> He that much hath, much behoveth.

UNKNOWN, Dives and Pauper, fo. 4. (1493)

He that hath little, is the less dirty.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

V—Riches—Their Use

See also Money: Use It or Lose It

- 1 Riches are for Spending.
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Expence. (1597)
- 2 Employ your gains; avoid a miser's name:
What boots your wealth, if you're a pauper still?
(Utere quaesitis opibus, fuge nomen avari:
quid tibi divitiae, si semper pauper abundes?)
CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. iv, No. 16. (c. 175 B. C.)
It is a greet shame to a man to have a povere herte and a riche purs.
CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 52. (c. 1387) There is an Arabic proverb, "No one is so poor as the rich man who enjoys not his riches."
- 3 He is not fit for Riches who is afraid to use them.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1934. (1732)
Riches abuse them that know not how to use them.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4040.
- 4 A ful gret fool is he, y-wis,
That bothe riche and nigard is.
GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 1171. (c. 1365)
- 5 No luster is there to silver hidden away in the greedy earth. (Nullus argento color est avaris | abdito terris.)
HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 2, l. 1. (23 B. C.)
Corn makes mo' at de mill dan it does in de crib.
J. C. HARRIS, Plantation Proverbs. (1880)
- 6 These riches are possess'd, but not enjoy'd!
POPE, tr., The Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 118. (1725)
A Man that keeps Riches, and enjoys them not, is like an Ass that carries Gold and eats Thistles.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 312. (1732)
- 7 He heapeth up riches, and knoweth not who shall gather them. (Thesaurizat: et ignorat cui congregabit ea.)
Old Testament: Psalms, xxxix, 6. (250 B. C.)
That which a man denies himself often increases the wealth of others.
SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninin (Choice of Pearls). No. 547. (c. 1050)
With toil and trouble one does riches gain:
Another comes and reaps them without pain.
SADI, Gulistan, vii, 19. (c. 1258)
- 8 Two persons die remorseful: He who possessed and enjoyed not, and he who knew but did not practice.
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 106. (c. 1258)
Riches are for the purpose of making life comfortable, not for the purpose of amassing riches. I asked a wise man, "Who is fortunate?" He replied: "He who sowed and reaped." "And who is unfortunate?" "He who died and abandoned."
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 1.

9 If a man has won riches for himself, let him never suffer in need, for he who plans to save for a friend oft saves for a foe.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 39. (c. 900)

10 Possessing a great tree, why be anxious about fuel? (Yu tê ta shu 'ho ch'ou ch'ai shao.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2040. (1875)

11 What enjoyment in riches if they owe their increase to base-brooding care? (ἀλλὰ τῶν πολλῶν καλῶν τίς χάρις, εἰ κακόβουλος φροντὶς ἐκτρέφει τὸν εὐαίωνα πλούτον;)

SOPHOCLES, Tereus (?). Frag. 534. (c. 450 B. C.)
Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 21C.

VI—Riches: You Can't Take Them With You

12 To the dead riches profiteth no jot. (τοῖς θανούσι πλοῦτος οὐδὲν ὠφελεῖ.)

AESCHYLUS, The Persians, l. 842. (472 B. C.)

Thou reckonest up thy money, poor wretch; but of all thy riches thou shalt carry away with thee but one obol. (ψηφίζεις, κακόδαιμον . . . ἐκ πολλῶν ὀβολὸν μόνον ἐνεγκάμενος.)

ANTIPHANES, Epigram. (c. 360 B. C.) See Greek Anthology, xi, 168. It was customary to put an obol in the corpse's mouth.

Those who die are poor.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 439. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

13 Man comes into the world with grasping hands, but leaves it with open hands.

Babylonian Talmud: Horayoth, fo. 80a. (c. 450) Eccles. Rabbah, v, 14, amplifies this:

"When a person enters the world, his hands are clenched as though to say, 'Everything is mine, I will inherit it all'; when he leaves it, his hands are open, as though to say, 'I have acquired nothing.'"

In the hour of man's departure from this world, neither silver nor gold nor precious stones accompany him, but only the Torah [Law] and good works.

Babylonian Talmud: Pirké Aboth, vi, 9c.450

14 This is all that thou shalt have when thou art dead.

EMPEROR CONSTANTINE, to a covetous man, drawing the length and breadth of a man's grave on the ground with his lance. (c. 305)
See CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 253.

15 If your Riches are yours, why don't you take them with you to t'other World?

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1751.

He couldn't take his money with him, for gold melts at a certain temperature.

EDGAR WALLACE, The Mind of Mr. J. G. Reeder. Ch. 2. (c. 1925)

Even he who has the accumulated ten thousand taels of silver cannot take with him at death half a copper cash.

HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 459. (1937)
You Can't Take It With You.

HART AND KAUFMAN. Title of play. (1936)

<sup>1</sup> You may acquire riches, but not days in which to spend them.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim (Choice of Pearls). No. 537. (c. 1050)

<sup>2</sup> A thousand pounds and a bottle of hay, is all one thing at doomsday.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659)
Cited by RAY, p. 26; FULLER, No. 6398

<sup>3</sup> The shade of the rich man will carry nothing to his abode in the other world. (Nil feret ad Manes divitis umbra suos.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 14, l. 12. (c. A. D. 9)
You are rich. And what is the end of it? When you depart, do you trail your riches after you as you are being pulled to your tomb? (πλουτεῖς καὶ τί τὸ λοιπὸν; ἀπερχόμενος μετὰ σου τοῦ | τὸν πλοῦτον σύρεις, εἰς σορὸν ἔλκόμενος;)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 425) Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 60.

When he is dead his riches will not attend him. (Defunctumque leves non comitantur opes.)

BOETHIUS, Philosophiae Consolationis. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (A. D. 524)

Though thou be a hero or a swordsman, thou wilt carry away nothing but the shroud.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. ix, Apologue 5. (c. 1257)

When he is dead, he shall nothing bere with him out of this world.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 52. (c. 1387)

Like an ass whose back with ingots bows,
Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey,
And death unloads thee.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 1, 26. (1604)

There was one that died greatly in debt: when it was reported . . . that he was dead, one began to say, "In good faith, then, he hath carried five hundred ducats of mine with him into the other world": and another said, "And two hundred of mine." . . . Whereupon one that was amongst them said, "Well, I perceive now, that though a man cannot carry any of his own with him into the next world, yet he may carry other men's."

FRANCIS BACON, Apophthegms. No. 152. (1625)

<sup>4</sup> No man can swim ashore and carry his baggage with him. (Nemo cum sarcinis enatat.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxi, sec. 12. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>5</sup> Our last robe is made without pockets. (L' ultimo vestito ce lo fanno senza tasche.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 5. (1853) Citing an Italian proverb.

And when he died he moaned aloud,
"They'll make no pocket in my shroud."

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Dead Millionaire. (a. 1897)

Shrouds have no pockets.

ALEXANDER MACLAREN, Ephesians, 41. (1909)
Your wooden overcoat won't have any pockets.
H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 486. (1940)

VII—Riches: Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>6</sup> Great as an emp'ror should I be,
And richer than a Jew.

JOHN GAY, Poems (Underhill), ii, 280. (1720)
She is as rich as a Jew.

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, The West Indian. Act ii. (1771)

You forget Lady Lilac's as rich as a Jew.

LORD BYRON, The Blues. Ecl. i, l. 77. (1820)

SCOTT, Peveril of the Peak. Ch. 26. (1823)

ELIOT, Middlemarch. Ch. 40. (1871) SHAW,
You Never Can Tell. Act i. (1896) etc., etc.

<sup>7</sup> They say he's as rich as cream.

VAN WYCK MASON, The Sulu Sea Murders, p. 17. (1933)

<sup>8</sup> I am rich beyond the dreams of avarice.

MOORE, The Gamester. Act ii, sc. 2. (1753)
We are not here to sell a parcel of boilers and vats, but the potentiality of growing rich beyond the dreams of avarice.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Remark, at the sale of Thrale's brewery. (1781)

We're wealthy—not beyond the dreams of average.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), The Chair of Philanthromathematics. (1908)

Bertie's father was rich beyond the dreams of actresses.

EDGAR WALLACE, The Mind of Mr. J. G. Reeder Ch. 3. (c. 1925)

<sup>9</sup> He's so rich he doesn't know what to do with gold. (Tantas divitias habet; nescit quid faciat auro.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 333. (190 B. C.)

He is a millionaire of millionaires. (Nummorum nummos.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 37. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>10</sup> Not for me the rich land of Pelops, nor the wealth of Croesus. (μὴ μοι γὰρ Πέλοπος, μὴ μοι Κροῖσεία τέλαιντα.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. viii, l. 53. (c. 270 B. C.)
I am richer than Crassus. (Supero Crassum divitiis.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. i, epis. 4. (66 B. C.)

As riche as Cresus Affric is.

TIMOTHY KENDALL, Epigrammes, p. 57. (1577)

An I get a patent for it, I shall be as rich as Croesus.

THOMAS DILKE, Lover's Luck. Act ii, sc. 1. (1696)
You imagin'd me to be as rich as Croesus.

JOHN STEVENS, tr., Quevedo's Comical Works, p. 310. (1707) F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 51. (1850) etc., etc.

<sup>11</sup> To have greater riches than Midas. (Μίδειω βάθιον πλουτεῖν.)

TYRTAEUS, Elegies. Eleg. iii, l. 6. (c. 650 B. C.)

Richer than Midas and Cinyras. (πλουτοίη δὲ Μίδειο καὶ Κινύρω μάλλον.)

TYRTAEUS, Elegies. Eleg. xii, l. 6. (c. 650 B.C.)

Cinyras was a fabled king of Cyprus, son of Apollo and priest of Aphrodite. Midas, semi-legendary King of Phrygia, whose touch turned everything to gold.

Richer even than Cinyrus and Midas. (ἐὰν δὲ ἄρα πλουτῇ μὲν Κινύρα τε καὶ Μίδα μάλλον.)

PLATO, Laws. Bk. ii, sec. 660E. (c. 345 B.C.)

Richer than Midas. (Μίδου πλουσιώτεροι.)

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. iii, sec. 408B. (c. 375 B.C.) This is the short proverbial phrase.

The riches of Midas (Divitias Midas.)

CATULLUS, Odes. No. xxiv, l. 3. (c. 57 B.C.)

Beyond the wealth of Midas. (ὕπερ τὸν Μίδα πλοῦτον.)

LUCIAN, De Mercede Conductis. Ch. 20. (c. A.D. 170) Another proverb is "The wealth of Pactolus," a river in Lydia, whose sands turned to gold after Midas had bathed in it to rid himself of the curse of his golden touch. LUCIAN, Timon, 48, in an ironical sense, speaks of "The immense riches of Lysistratus" (Λυσιστράτου πλοῦτον πλουτεῖς), who was extremely poor.

1
The next that came was a coryar,
And a cobeler, his brother,

As ryche as a newe shorne shepe.

UNKNOWN, Cock Lorells Bote (Percy Soc.), p.

1. (c. 1520) That is, bare and poverty-stricken.

Ye be as ryche as a new shorne sheepe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

His speculation in time will make him as rich as a new-shorn sheep.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Whimzies, p. 62. (1631)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 725. (1732)

RICHMOND

2
I think there be six Richmonds in the field;
Five have I slain today instead of him.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, v, 4, 11. (1592) The reference is to Henry of Richmond, afterwards Henry VII, at the battle of Bosworth Field.

Another Richmond in the field. Someone else engaged in the same work or in a similar enterprise.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clickés. (1941)

RIDDLE

3
Oedipus am I, who solved the famous riddle.
(Οἰδῖπους ὄδε, ὅς τὰ κλεῖν' αἰνύγματα.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 1758. (c. 420 B.C.)

The riddling Sphinx. (ἡ ποικιλωδὸς Σφίγξ.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 130. (c. 409 B.C.)

He who knew the famed riddle. (ὅς τὰ κλεῖν' αἰνύγματ' ᾔδει.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 1525. (c. 409 B.C.)

I am Davus, not Oedipus. (Davus sum, non Oedipus.)

TERENCE, Andrea, l. 194. (166 B.C.) Davus was a name frequently given to slaves in the comedies of Plautus and Terence, Oedipus solved the riddle of the Sphinx. So the proverb means, "I am a plain man, no wizard or solver of riddles." It is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 36. The riddle of the Sphinx was, "What animal goes on four legs in the morning, two at noon, and three in the evening?" When Oedipus answered that a man crawled on all fours as a child, walked erect in the noon of life, and supported by a stick in old age, the Sphinx dashed her brains out against a rock.

The Sphinx must solve her own riddle.

EMERSON, Essays: History. (1841)

4
Riddle me a riddle.

MARTIN MARPRELATE, Oh Read Over John Bridges, p. 11. (1588)

Riddle me a riddle, what is this?

RICHARD MONTAGU, Diatribae, p. 526. (1621)

Riddle me this.

BARTEN HOLYDAY, tr., Juvenal, p. 38. (1661)

GOLDSMITH, The Stoops to Conquer. Act v, sc. 2. (1773)

5
Can't read my riddle? (μὴν ἤνιξάμην;)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1158. (c. 409 B.C.)

You love to speak in riddles. (ὥς πάντ' ἄγαν αἰνικτὰ λέγεις.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 439. (c. 409 B.C.)

6
All that we caught we left behind, and all that we did not catch we carry home. (ὅσα' ἔλομεν, λιπόμεσθ'· ὅσα δ' οὐχ ἔλομεν, φερόμεσθα.)

UNKNOWN, Epigrams of Homer. No. 17. (c. 400 B.C.)

The answer of the fisherboys to Homer's inquiry, "Hunters of deep sea prey, have you caught anything?" The oracle at Delphi had warned Homer to beware of the riddle of the young children and when Homer heard this answer and could not understand it, he knew that his time had come. The boys meant that the lice they had caught in their clothes they had left behind, but were carrying home those they did not catch.

Hereupon Homer remembered the oracle and, perceiving that the end of his life had come, composed his own epitaph, . . . and died, it is said, the third day after.

ALCIDAMUS (?), The Contest of Homer and Hesiod. Sec. 326. (c. 400 B.C.)

Beware the riddle of the young boys. (ἀλλὰ νέων παίδων αἰνύγμα φύλασαι.)

UNKNOWN. Oracle given to Homer. See Greek Anthology. Bk. xiv, epig. 65.

RIDICULE

See also Mockery, Sneer

7
No raillery is worse than that which is true.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 462. (1855)

8
Jeerers must be content to taste of their own Broth.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3063. (1732)

'Tis easier to ridicule than commend.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5078.

<sup>1</sup> To turn serious matters to sport. (Vertere seria ludo.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 226. (c. 20 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> He will hiss unto them from the end of the earth. (Sibilabit ad eum de finibus terrae.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, v, 26. (c. 725 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> Resort is had to ridicule only when reason is against us.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to James Madison. (1813)

<sup>4</sup> Ridicule is more damaging to our honour than dishonour itself. (Le ridicule déshonore plus que le déshonneur.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 326. (1665)

Ridicule is more deadly than all the arguments in the world.

FREDERICK THE GREAT, Letter to Voltaire, 31 Oct., 1760.

No kind of power is more formidable than the power of making men ridiculous.

T. B. MACAULAY, Essays: Addison. (1843)

There is no character, howsoever good and fine, but it can be destroyed by ridicule, howsoever poor and witless. Observe the ass, for instance: his character is about perfect, he is the choicest spirit among all the humbler animals, yet see what ridicule has brought him to. Instead of feeling complimented when we are called an ass, we are left in doubt.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar.

<sup>5</sup> He would show me his white teeth in a mocking laugh. (Me albis dentibus meus derideret.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 429. (c. 200 B. C.) "To show the white teeth" was a proverbial phrase for deriding one by laughing so loudly as to show the teeth.

You are scoffing and use your turned-up nose too freely. (Rides et nimis uncis | naribus indulges.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 40. (c. A. D. 58)

Pointed his middle nail. (Medium ostenderet unguem.)

JUVENAL, Satires. No. x, l. 53. (c. A. D. 120) The middle finger was considered indecent, and to point it at anyone was a gesture of contempt and derision.

All fools have still an itching to deride,
And fain would be upon the laughing side.

ALEXANDER POPE, An Essay on Criticism. Pt. i, l. 32. (1709)

He who laughs and is himself ridiculous, bears a double share of ridicule.

LORD SHAFTESBURY, Characteristics, i, 83. (1711)

A Man who has the Gift of Ridicule is apt to find Fault with any thing that gives him an Opportunity of exerting his beloved Talent.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 291. (1712)

<sup>6</sup> Truth, 'tis supposed, may bear all lights; and one of those principal lights or natural mediums by which things are to be viewed in order to a thorough recognition is ridicule itself.

LORD SHAFTESBURY, Essay on the Freedom of Wit and Humour. Pt. i, sec. 1. (1709)

It is commonly said, and more particularly by Lord Shaftesbury, that ridicule is the best test of truth; for that it will not stick where it is not just. I deny it.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 6 Feb., 1752.

We have oftener than once endeavoured to attach some meaning to that aphorism, vulgarly imputed to Shaftesbury, which however we can find nowhere in his works, that "ridicule is the test of truth."

CARLYLE, Essays: Voltaire. (a. 1857)

<sup>7</sup> Shall quips and sentences and these paper bullets of the brain awe a man from the career of his humour?

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado about Nothing, ii, 3, 249. (1598)

RIDICULOUS

<sup>8</sup> Those who are serious in ridiculous matters will be ridiculous in serious matters. (τοὺς δὲ σπουδάζοντας ἐν τοῖς γελοίοις, ἐν τοῖς σπουδαίοις ἔσεσθαι καταγελάστους.)

CATO THE ELDER. (c. 175 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 199A.

<sup>9</sup> The sublime and the ridiculous are often so nearly related that it is difficult to class them separately. One step above the sublime makes the ridiculous, and one step above the ridiculous makes the sublime again.

THOMAS PAINE, The Age of Reason. Pt. ii, par. 56. (1795)

The ridiculous usually touches the sublime. (En général, le ridicule touche au sublime.)

MARMONTEL, Œuvres Complètes. Vol. v, p. 188 (c. 1799)

From the sublime to the ridiculous is but a step. (Du sublime au ridicule il n'y a qu'un pas.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, to the Abbé du Pradt, on his return from Russia, referring to the retreat from Moscow. (1812) See DU PRADT, Histoire de l'Ambassade dans la Grande Duché de Varsovie, p. 215.

Aunt Jane observed, the second time

She tumbled off a bus,

The step is short from the Sublime

To the Ridiculous.

HARRY GRAHAM, Equanimity.

From the sublime to the ridiculous is only a step, but there's no road which leads back from the ridiculous to the sublime.

LION FEUCHTWANGER, Paris Gazette, p. 524. (1940)

How little divides the great from the ridiculous.

STEFAN HEYM, Hostages, p. 290. (1942)

<sup>10</sup> Poverty, poetry, and new titles of honour, make men ridiculous.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

RIDING

- 1
He was to be "taken for a ride."
ERIC AMBLER, Journey into Fear, p. 252. (1940)
They may have taken him for a ride.
LEE THAYER, Persons Unknown, p. 17. (1941)
Jennie has been takin' you for a ride.
TAYLOR, Deadly Nightshade, p. 81. (1941)
- 2
To ride the dun-horse. To dun a debtor.
CARR, The Dialect of Craven, p. 123. (1828)
TO RIDE THE HIGH HORSE, see under HORSE.
- 3
Ill for the rider, good for th' abider.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 18. (1639)
A fatt soyl good for the bider, bad for the rider.
JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1659)
Bon pays, mauvais chemin, and "The worse for the rider the better for the bider."
WALTER WHITE, Eastern England, ii, 35. (1865)
- 4
What? no more but up and ride.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 116. (1639)
Nothing but up and ride?
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 198. (1670)
- 5
I see you ride the fore-horse, gentlemen.
SIR GEORGE ETHEREGE, The Comical Revenge.
Act iii, sc. 5. (1664) To be early, or to be foremost in anything.
Well, miss, you ride the fore-horse today.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
"You still love to ride the fore-horse," alluding to his desire of being foremost in all parties of pleasure.
UNKNOWN, The World. No. 68. (1754)
Determined to ride the fore-horse herself, Meg would admit no helpmate.
WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 1. (1823)
- 6
If you ride a horse, sit close and tight;
If you ride a man, sit easy and light.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734
- 7
Where saddles lacke,
Better ride on a pad, than on the horse bare backe.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
Cited by Camden, Ray, and Fuller.
Better riding on a pad than on a horse's bare back.
JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), Works (1795), ii, 403. (1792)
- 8
Ride a horse and a mare towards the shoulders, an ass and mule towards the buttocks.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs: Ital.-Eng., p. 2. (1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 53. (1678)
You ride so near the rumple [rump], you'll let none get on behind you. You will let none get any advantage by you.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 365. (1721)
- 9
There is mickle to do when domines ride.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 315. (1721)
The proverb says "there is much ado when cadgers ride."
JANE WELSH CARLYLE, Letter to Mrs. Welsh, 5 Sept., 1836.

- 10
Lord Ronald said nothing; he flung himself from the room, flung himself upon his horse, and rode madly off in all directions.
STEPHEN LEACOCK, Nonsense Novels: Gertrude the Governess. (1911)
- 11
He rydeth wel that neuer fylle.
SIR THOMAS MALORY, Le Morte Darthur. Bk. ix, ch. 28. (1485)
He rides sicker [firm] that fell never.
DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 38. (c. 1595) Cited by KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 133, with the comment, "A man has gone through the world with a strange even hand, that never committed a blunder."
Better go on foot than ride and fall.
MIDDLETON, Micro-Cynicon. Sat. v. (1599)
He rode sure indeed, that never caught a Fall in his Life.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2011. (1732)
There is a Mexican proverb, "It is not enough for a man to know how to ride, he must know how to fall."
- 12
Plato recommended it [horseback-riding] for the health; and Pliny says that it is good for the stomach and for the joints. (Platon la recommande pour la santé; aussi dict Pline qu'elle est salutaire à l'estomach et aux jointures.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 48. (1580)
A horse gives but a kind of half exercise.
JEFFERSON, Letter to T. M. Randolph, Jr., 1786.
A canter is a cure for every evil.
DISRAELI, The Young Duke. Bk. ii, sc. 11. (1831)
Saddle-leather is in some respects even preferable to sole-leather.
O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 7. (1858)
The Squire will wind up . . . with an apocryphal saying which he attributes to Lord Palmerston—"There's nothing so good for the inside of a man as the outside of a horse."
G. W. E. RUSSELL, Social Silhouettes. Ch. 32. (1906)
- 13
You ride as if you went to fetch the midwife.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 266. (1678)
You shall ride an inch behind the tail.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 266.
- 14
An two men ride of a horse, one must ride behind.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iii, 5, 40. (1598)
An old adage affirms that "when two people ride on a horse, one must ride behind." In this sentence is condensed the whole science of domestic government.
WHYTE-MELVILLE, Uncle John. Ch. 10. (1874)
Peggy behind Marget: inferiors last. When two ride one horse, one must ride behind.
BURNES, Shropshire Folk-Lore, p. 590. (1883)
He who rides behind another does not travel when he pleases.
H.G. BORN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 401. (1855)

1 You may ride 's
With one soft kiss a thousand furlongs ere
With spur we heat an acre.

SHAKESPEARE, The Winter's Tale, i, 2, 94. (1610)
Ride softly, that we may come sooner home.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 204. (1678)

Ride softly, that you may get home the sooner.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4050. (1732)

RIGHT

See also Might and Right

2 All men joy in doing right. (Omnes gaudent facere recte.)

ACCIIUS, Clytaemnestra. Frag. 246, Loeb. (c.
140 B. C.)

3 The right is on my side. (τὸ γὰρ εὖ μετ' ἐμοῦ.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Acharnians, l. 661. (425
B. C.) Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, vi, i; viii, 8. Aristophanes is parodying Euripides.

4 Strive for the right until death.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus),
iv, 28. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

Always do right. This will gratify some people and astonish the rest.

MARK TWAIN, Motto, for a "Mark Twain
Evening," given by the Christian Endeavor Society of the Presbyterian Church, at Green-point, Brooklyn, N.Y., 16 Feb., 1901. Used also in Pudd'nhead Wilson's Calendar. (1893)
Adopted as his motto by Wilbur L. Cross, Governor of Connecticut, 1931-39. See News- week, 22 Nov., 1937, p. 16/1.

Do right and fear no man; don't write and fear no woman.

LUKE McLUKE (J. S. HASTINGS), Epigram.
Newspaper column, Cincinnati Enquirer. (a.
1918)

5 It is not only our duty to make the right known, but to make it prevalent.

EDMUND BURKE (a. 1797), as quoted by EM-
ERSON, Lectures and Biographical Sketches:
The Scholar

6 Ye ben in the right and they in the wronge.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of
Aymon, xxvi, 554. (c. 1489)

He was in the right.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, v, 3, 275. (1592)

She knew all the time she was in the right.

FRANCES BURNLEY, Cecilia. Bk. v, ch. 2. (1782)

When one has a good table, one is always in the right. (Quand on a bonne table on a toujours raison.)

J. F. COLLIN-D'HARLEVILLE, M. de Crac. Sc. 4.
(c. 1782) See also FRIENDS AND ADVERSITY.

7 I had rather be right than be President.

HENRY CLAY, to Senator Preston, of South Carolina, when the latter told him that his support of the Missouri Compromise measure would ruin his candidacy for President. (1850) See SCHURZ, Life of Henry
Clay. However, according to the Dictionary of American Biography, ii, 324, it was the cry of "Bargain and Corruption" which "barred the door of the Presidency to Henry Clay."

Women would rather be right than be reasonable.
OGDEN NASH, Who Understands Who Anyhow?
(1940)

The I'd-rather-be-dressed-right-than-President boy.

DOROTHY HUGHES, Bamboo Blonde, p. 179.
(1941)

Most men, I believe, would rather be Apollo than Hercules or Socrates or right.

ROGER I. LEE, Health and Fitness at Fifty In
Hygeia, Nov., 1942, p. 820.

8 To see the right and not to do it is cowardice.
CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. ii, ch. 24. (c. 500 B. C.)

9 'Twas a maxim he had often tried,
That right was right, and there he would abide.
GEORGE CRABBE, Tales of the Hall. Tale xv, l.
365. (1819)

Because right is right, to follow right
Were wisdom in the scorn of consequence.

TENNYSON, Enone, l. 147. (1842)

For right is right, since God is God,
And right the day must win.

F. W. FABER, The Right Must Win. St. 18. (1862)

10 Be sure you're right, then go ahead.

DAVID CROCKETT, Motto, during War of 1812.
See National Cyclopaedia of Amer. Biog.,
iv, 85.

11 Right Mixture makes good Mortar.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4052. (1732)

12 He who plants rightly never uproots; he who lays hold rightly never relinquishes. (Shān chien 'ché pu pa; shān pao' 'ché pu t'o.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).
Sec. 54. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

13 Stand with anybody that stands right. . . .
Part with him when he goes wrong.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, Peoria, Ill., 16 Oct., 1854.

With malice toward none; with charity for all;
with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right.

LINCOLN, Second Inaugural, 4 Mar., 1865

14 Whatever happens at all, happens as it should.
(ὅτι πᾶν τὸ συμβαῖνον δικαίως συμβαίνει.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec.
10. (c. A. D. 174)

Whatever is, is in its causes just.

JOHN DRYDEN, Oedipus. Act iii, sc. 1. (1678)

And spite of Pride, in erring Reason's spite,
One truth is clear, Whatever is, is right.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. i, l. 293. (1732)

Everything that is, is reasonable. (Alles was ist, ist vernünftig.)

GEORG W. F. HEGEL, Rechtsphilosophie: Pref- ace, p. 17. (c. 1816)

Whatever is—is best.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX, title of poem. (c. 1886)

<sup>1</sup> That which is right is better than law. (τὸ καλὸς ἔχον πον κρείττον ἐστὶ καὶ νόμου.)

MENANDER, The Carthaginian. Frag. 265K. (c. 300 B. C.) A Latin proverb says, "Ubi ius, ibi remedium" (Where there is right, there is remedy).

<sup>2</sup> He's all right!

TONY PASTOR, What's the Matter with Hewitt. (1884) According to ISAAC GOLDBERG, Tin Pan Alley, p. 64, Pastor wrote this song when Abram S. Hewitt was running for mayor of New York City. He would demand from the stage of his music hall, "What's the matter with Hewitt?" and the orchestra and as many of the audience as agreed, would bellow back, "He's all right!" The phrase was taken up as the Prohibition campaign slogan in the same year, referring to John P. St. John, the Prohibition candidate for President. It was also used in the Harrison campaign of 1888.

What's the matter with Gladstone? He's all right. WEEDON GROSSMITH, The Diary of a Nobody. Ch. 17. (a. 1919)

How right you are!

BEEDING, Eleven Were Brave. p. 32. (1941)

<sup>3</sup> Though it may not be right, think it right, if it pays. (Quamvis non rectum quod iuvat rectum putes.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 553. (c. 43 B. C.) Right is only right by a very small majority that has got to be kept up every day.

THOMAS B. REED, Speech, at Philadelphia, 15 Feb., 1884.

<sup>4</sup> Better to do right of your own accord than through fear of another. (Sua sponte recte facere quam alieno metu.)

TERENCE, Adelphoi, l. 75. (160 B. C.) Quoted by VARRO, De Lingua Latina, vi, 69.

<sup>5</sup> The right is more precious than peace.

WOODROW WILSON, War Message to Congress, 2 April, 1917.

<sup>6</sup> Doing right is the breath of the nostrils.

UNKNOWN, Eloquent Peasant, B 1. 146. (c. 2000 B. C.) Gunn, tr. Referred to as a "saying."

II—Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>7</sup> You are right, master, right as a gun.

JOHN FLETCHER, The Prophetess. Act i, sc. 3. (1622) SURE AS A GUN, see under CERTAINTY.

<sup>8</sup> "I'm right," thought Bunce, "as any trivet."

THOMAS HOOD, The Dead Robbery, l. 174. (1835) A trivet is a tripod, and the reference is to the fact that it always stands firm on its three feet.

Right as a trivet.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 16. (1837) Our Mutual Friend. Bk. ii, ch. 14. (1865)

All goes as right as a trivet.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Realmah, ii, 24. (1868)

She'll be as right as a trivet.

WILLIAM DE MORGAN, Alice-for-Short. Ch. 2. (1907)

<sup>9</sup> Tes so right as rain.

WALTER RAYMOND, Love and a Quiet Life, p. 108. (1894)

In about a week she'll be as right as rain.

HUTCHINSON, If Winter Comes. Pt. iii, ch. 5. (1921)

You'll be as right as rain by morning.

THORNE SMITH, The Passionate Witch, p. 198. (1941)

He declared she would be as right as rain by afternoon.

DOROTHY BOWERS, Fear and Miss Belony, p. 194. (1942)

The expression "as right as rain" must have been invented by an Englishman.

W. L. PHELPS, The Country or the City.

<sup>10</sup> Right, Caxon, right as my glove.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 30. (1816)

<sup>11</sup> Right, as snow in harvest.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 4, 248. (1592)

<sup>12</sup> Good! right as my leg again.

JAMES SHIRLEY, The Ball. Act iv. (1639)

All's well, and as right as my leg.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act ii, sc. 4. (1663)

And she as right as is my leg,

Still gave him leave to touze her.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. iii, Act iii, sc. 2. (1696)

As right as my leg.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 225. (1678)

<sup>13</sup> It will all be as right as ninepence.

F. R. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 51. (1850)

The members would all be up and "as right as ninepence" for the noon-day service.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 27. (1894)

<sup>14</sup> As ryt as rams orn. [i. e. crooked].

UNKNOWN. In Reliquiae Antiquae, ii, 19. (c. 1320)

Right as a rammys hornyd.

UNKNOWN, The Tale of Beryn, p. 6. (c. 1400)

Ryght as a rammes horne.

JOHN LYDGATE, Minor Poem (P.S.), p. 171. (c. 1430) SKELTON, Colin Cloute, l. 1201. (a. 1529) Cited by HOWELL, p. 11; RAY, p. 207

III—Right and Wrong

<sup>15</sup> One may go wrong in many different ways, but right only in one. (ἀμαρτάνειν πολλαχῶς ἐστίν . . . τὸ δὲ κατορθοῦν μοναχῶς.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (c. 335 B. C.)

There is but one road that leads to Corinth.

WALTER PATER, Marius the Epicurean. Ch. 24. (1885)

A hundred steps in the right direction will not atone for one step in the wrong direction.

HENRY H. HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 580. (1937)

- <sup>1</sup> In Heav'n's disposing pow'r events unite, Nor aught can happen wrong to him who acts aright.
HENRY BROOKE, Gustavus Vasa. Act iv. (1778)
- <sup>2</sup> Indiscriminate mashing up of right and wrong into a patent treacle.
CARLYLE, Latter-Day Pamphlets. No. 2. (1850)
It's my opinion you're more right than wrong.
ROBERT BUCHANAN, The Last of the Hangmen.
(1874)
- <sup>3</sup> I prefer to do right and get no thanks, rather than to do wrong and get no punishment.
(μάλλον εὖ πράξας ἀποστερηθῆναι χάριν ἢ κακῶς μὴ τυχεῖν κολάσεως.)
MARCUS CATO, Aphorism. (c. 160<sup>b</sup> B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. viii,
sec. 9.
- <sup>4</sup> Two wrongs will not make one right.
CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 120. (1875)
Two wrongs don't make a right.
S. J. WEYMAN, Starvecrow Farm. Ch. 24. (1905)
TWO BLACKS DO NOT MAKE A WHITE, see BLACK.
- <sup>5</sup> Extremity of right is wrong.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 172. (1639)
Extreme right is extreme wrong.
SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, tr., De Officiis, p. 18.
(1680) See also under JUSTICE.
- <sup>6</sup> The only right is what is after my constitution; the only wrong what is against it.
EMERSON, Essays: Self-Reliance. (1841)
- <sup>7</sup> We must believe no more in gods,
If wrong shall triumph over right.
(ἢ χρὴ μηκέθ' ἡγεῖσθαι θεούς, εἰ τὰδίκ' ἔσται τῆς δίκης ὑπέρεργα.)
EURIPIDES, Electra, l. 583. (c. 413 B.C.)
If wrong can e'er be right, it were most right
For a kingdom's sake.
(εἴπερ γὰρ ἀδίκειν χρῆ, τυραννίδος πέρι κάλλιστον ἀδίκειν.)
EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 524. (c. 420 B.C.)
Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 18E.
- <sup>8</sup> You may sometimes be much in the wrong,
in owning your being in the right.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.
We are not satisfied to be right, unless we can prove others to be wrong.
WILLIAM HAZLITT, Note-Books, p. 236. (1830)
- <sup>9</sup> Right wrongs no man.
HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 86. (1832)
- <sup>10</sup> He that hath right, fears; he that hath wrong, hopes.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 431. (1640)
- <sup>11</sup> What is right, what is not; whither virtue, whither error leads. (Quid deceat, quid non; quo virtus, quo ferat error.)
HORACE, De Arte Poetica. l. 308. (c. 20 B.C.)
- Forgetful of what is right, what is not. (Quid deceat, quid non, obliiti.)
HORACE, Epistles, i, 6, 62. (c. 20 B.C.)
Little betwixt right and wrong.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 38. (1659)
- <sup>12</sup> When everyone is wrong, everyone is right.
(Quand tout le monde a tort, tout le monde a raison.)
PIERRE DE LA CHAUSSÉE, La Gouvernante. Act
i, sc. 3. (c. 1740)
- <sup>13</sup> That which is morally wrong can never be politically right.
VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 109. (1904)
- <sup>14</sup> Actions are right in proportion as they tend to promote happiness; wrong as they tend to produce the reverse of happiness.
JOHN STUART MILL, Utilitarianism. Ch. 2.
(1863)
The greatest-happiness principle indirectly serves as a nearly safe standard of right and wrong
CHARLES DARWIN, The Descent of Man. Ch. 21
(1871) See also under HAPPINESS.
Right is the opposite of wrong; and wrong consists in inflicting injuries on other people.
ROBERT BRIFFAULT, Sin and Sex. Ch. 13. (1911)
- <sup>15</sup> There is always a right and a wrong way, and the wrong way always seems the more reasonable.
GEORGE MOORE, The Bending of the Bough. Act
iv. (1900)
- <sup>16</sup> Right is cast outside. Wrong is inside the council-chamber.
ONKHU, Reflections. Par. 3. (c. 1580 B.C.) Writ-ingboard No. 5645, British Museum.
- <sup>17</sup> How you get it, that is the question, by right or wrong. (Quo modo habeas, id refert, iurene anne iniuria.)
PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 1069. (c. 200 B.C.) The Latin proverbial phrase is, "Per fas et nefas"
(By right means and wrong).
- <sup>18</sup> He'll neither do right nor suffer wrong.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 266. (1678)
He'll ne'er do right nor suffer wrong.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2426. (1732)
- <sup>19</sup> Right now is wrong, and wrong that was is right,
As all things else in time are chaunged quight.
EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. v,
Prologue, st. 4. (1596)
- <sup>20</sup> There was but a right and a wrong.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)
Right and wrong are the same for all.
THOMAS REID, The Active Powers. Ch. 5. (1788)
- <sup>21</sup> Nowadays the reward is for those who make right appear wrong. (Eis nunc praemiumst, qui recta prava faciunt.)
TERENCE, Phormio, l. 771. (161 B.C.)

[They] maken wrong to rihte, and riht to wronge.

Trinity College Homilies, 193. (c. 1200)

They put no difference betuix wrang and right.

LINDESAY, Chron. of Scotland, i, 65. (a. 1578)

<sup>1</sup> Wrong never comes right.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 1. (1853)

Bad work cannot be turned into good, any more than wrong can be turned into right.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Christowell. Ch. 22. (1882)

What's wrong can never be right.

MRS. OLIPHANT, The Second Son. Ch. 2. (1888)

The Germans say, "A hundred years of wrong do not make a single year of right."

<sup>2</sup> Better is the wrong with sincerity, than the right with falsehood.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Tolerance. (1839)

<sup>3</sup> The greatest right in the world is the right to be wrong.

HARRY WEINBERGER, The First Casualties in War. New York Evening Post, 10 Apr., 1917.

"The greatest tragedy is not the conflict between right and wrong, but the conflict between right and right."

<sup>4</sup> Right is the father of right and wrong of wrong. (δικη δίκη ἐτικτε καὶ βλάβην βλάβη.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, iii, 28. (c. A. D. 130)

RIGHTEOUSNESS

<sup>5</sup> Righteous men are greater after their death than during their lifetime.

Babylonian Talmud: Chullin, fo. 7. (c. 450)

<sup>6</sup> To advance the common good by private pains. (κοινὰς ὠφελίας ἰδίοις μόχοιςι πορίζειν.)

HOMER, when Hesiod asked him what was the effect of righteousness and courage. ALCIDAMUS (?), Contest of Homer and Hesiod. Sec. 320. (c. 400 B. C.)

What is righteousness? To avoid in secret that for which we should blush in public.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penunim (Choice of Pearls). No. 332. (c. 1050)

<sup>7</sup> The righteous perisheth, and no man layeth it to heart. (Iustus perit, et non est qui recogitet in corde suo.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lvii, 1. (c. 725 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> He was righteous in his own eyes. (Iustus sibi videretur.)

Old Testament: Job, xxxii, 1. (c. 350 B. C.)

Be not righteous over much. (Noli esse iustus multum.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 16. (c. 250 B. C.)

The Rigid Righteous is a fool.

ROBERT BURNS, Address to the Unco Guid: Motto. (1787) A paraphrase of Ecclesiastes.

<sup>9</sup> Righteousness exalteth a nation. (Iustitia elevat gentem.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 34. (c. 350 B. C.)

Better is a little with righteousness than great revenues without right. (Melius est parum cum iusticia, quam multi fructus cum iniquitate.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvi, 8. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> I have been young, and now am old; yet have I not seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread. (Iunior fui, etenim senui: et non vidi iustum derelictum, nec semen eius quaerens panem.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxvii, 25. (c. 350 B. C.)

Verily there is a reward for the righteous. (Sicutque est fructus iusto.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lviii, 11.

The righteous shall flourish like the palm tree. (Iustus ut palma florebit.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xcii, 12.

The righteous fear no thunderbolts. (Hsin chêng pu p'a lei ta.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2431. (1875)

<sup>11</sup> He shall put on righteousness as a breastplate. (Induet pro thorace iustitiam.)

Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, v, 18. (c. 100 B. C.)

RIGHTS

<sup>12</sup> In the new code of laws which I suppose it will be necessary for you to make I desire you would remember the ladies and be more generous and favorable to them than your ancestors.

ABIGAIL ADAMS, Letter to John Adams, 31 March, 1776. The first shot in the battle for "women's rights."

The best right a woman has is the right to a husband.

TROLLOPE, North America. Ch. 1. (1862)

<sup>13</sup> Among the natural rights of the colonists are these: First a right to life, secondly to liberty, thirdly to property.

SAMUEL ADAMS, Statement of the Rights of the Colonists, 20 Nov., 1772. See WELLS, Life of Samuel Adams, i, 496.

[All men] are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable Rights; that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, American Declaration of Independence. (1776) This was one of the "self-evident truths" which the Declaration proclaimed. Adopted by Continental Congress, 4 July, 1776

The end of all political associations is the preservation of the natural and imprescriptible rights of man; and these rights are liberty, property, security, and resistance of oppression.

Declaration of the Rights of Man, French National Assembly. (1789)

They made and recorded a sort of institution and digest of anarchy, called the Rights of Man.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. (1790)

<sup>1</sup> The great right of all . . . is the right of taking part in the making of the laws by which we are governed.

COBBETT, Advice to Young Men. Ch. 6. (1829)
The right to unite freely and separate freely is the first and most important of all political rights.

M. A. BAKUNIN, Proposition Motivée. (1879)
There are a number of legal maxims with regard to rights: "Ex desuetudine amittuntur privilegia" (Rights are lost by disuse); "Dormit aliquando ius, moritur nunquam" (A right sometimes sleeps but never dies); "Qui iure suo utitur neminem laedit" (He who exercises his own right injures no one).

<sup>2</sup> Men are entitled to equal rights, but to equal rights in unequal things.

CHARLES JAMES FOX (?), Remark. (c. 1795)
The ascription has been questioned.

<sup>3</sup> Everybody is bound to assert his rights.

IMMANUEL KANT, Lecture, at Königsberg. (1775)
Men who . . . know their rights, and, knowing, dare maintain.

WILLIAM JONES, An Ode in Imitation of Alcaeus. (1781)

RING

<sup>4</sup> Upon dissecting human bodies it was found that a very fine nerve proceeded from the third finger of the left hand and made its way to the heart, and it therefore seemed reasonable that this finger should be honored with a ring, since it seems to be united in a special way with the heart. (Conexus esse cum principatu cordis.)

APION, Aegyptiacis. (c. A. D. 50) As quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, x, 10. Hence the position of the wedding ring.

A ring on the finger is worth two on the phone.
H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 483. (1940)

<sup>5</sup> They will fit you like a ring on a finger. (Que te vendrán como anillo al dedo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1605)

<sup>6</sup> Weare no streyght rynges. (Arctum anulum ne gestato.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 2. Pythagorae symbola. (1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 66, who adds, "As who shulde saye, cast not thy selfe into bondage."

<sup>7</sup> He made a ring of a rische [rush, a thing of no value] and putte it on his fynger.

REGINALD PECOCK, The Repressor of Over Much Blaming of the Clergy, ii, v, 166. (c. 1449)

I hopping without for a ryng of a rushe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)
Better na ring nor the ring of a rashe.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 22. (c. 1595)
As fit . . . as Tib's rush for Torn's forefinger.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, ii, 2, 24. (1602)

Better no Ring, than a Ring of a Rush.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 918. (1732)

<sup>8</sup> "Whoever beareth this ring," said Dame Liones, "can never lose blood, however wounded."

UNKNOWN, The History of King Arthur, i, 146. (c. 1400)

Take this ring, and put it on thy finger, with the stone inside thy hand, and close thy hand upon it. As long as thou concealest the stone, the stone will conceal thee.

UNKNOWN, The Mabinogion: The Lady of the Fountain. (c. 1450)

To walke vnseene with Giges ring.

JOHN LYLLY, Triumphs of Tropes. (c. 1586)

Gyges [a Lydian] had an enchanted ring . . . making him who wore it visible or invisible, as he turned it to or from his body.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 138. (1710)

Otnit, King of Lombardy, also had a ring of invisibility, with the added property of directing its wearer to the right road to take in travelling.

St. Martins rings be but copper inside.

RICHARD HARVEY, Plaine Percevall, p. 4. (1589)
The Doge of Venice making the Adriatic his bride, and claiming her by a ring of espousal.

J. H. NEWMAN, Historical Sketches, ii, 115. (1853) The ring was cast into the Adriatic to indicate that it was subject to Venice, as a wife is subject to her husband.

Polycrates of Samos, . . . to avoid the punishment of undue prosperity, threw his great signet-ring into the sea; but when he was served a day or two later with a slice of fish at his banquet, there was the ring.

A. C. BENSON, At Large. Ch. 12. (1908) The ring of Amasis has the same story.

RIOT

<sup>9</sup> Our Sovereign Lord the King chargeth and commandeth all persons being assembled immediately to disperse themselves, and peaceably to depart to their habitations.

Act for Preventing Tumults and Riotous Assemblies. (1714) Statutes at Large, xiii, 143.

This act is read aloud preceding the dispersing of a crowd in England. Hence, "Reading the Riot Act."

The Riot Act was read.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 49. (1840)

Mr. Daly . . . read the riot act.

DORA K. RANOUS, Diary of a Daly Débutante, p. 157. (1880)

Alonzo read the riot act.

H. L. WILSON, Somewhere in Red Gap, p. 185. (1916)

<sup>10</sup> Breake thy tenure, and ren ryot at large.

JOHN FITZHERBERT, The Boke of Husbandry, sec. 148. (1523)

Ye suffer your Tongues to run ryot.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Works, p. 122. (1656)

They ran riot, would not be kept within bounds.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, ii, 85. (1748)

RIP

1 Another phrase, which often glides in music from the lip,
Is one of fine significance and beauty, "Let her rip!"

PARK BENJAMIN, Hard Times. (c. 1840)

A common slang expression is "Let her rip!" i. e. let her drive, let her go.

JOHN BARTLETT, Americanisms, p. 367. (1859)
The hands on board [the steamers] . . . are disposed at all times to "let her rip."

J. C. GREGG, Life in the Army, p. 225. (1866)
I . . . say to myself in the expressive language of modern slang, "Let it rip."

W. F. SWASEY, The Early Days and Men of California, p. 47. (1891)

2 You are the veriest old "Rip Van Winkle."
Have you been asleep twenty years?

C. F. HOFFMAN, Night Watch, p. 255. (1856)

3 This rip of a son shall be trained to the church.
DAVID SIMPSON, A Plea for Religion, p. 148. (1797) Perhaps an abbreviation of reprobate. I doubt whether he wouldn't think me too much of a rip to be intimate with.

HUGHES, Tom Brown at Oxford. Ch. 22. (1861)
[He] had been an old rip.

W. E. NORRIS, His Grace, ii, 1. (1892)

Bit of a rip, wasn't she?

GILBERT SWIFT, Somerley, p. 88. (1900)

RIPENESS

4 We olde men, I drede, so fare we;
Til we be roten, can we nat be rype.
CHAUCER, Reeve's Prologue, l. 20. (c. 1386)

5 Recognize when things are ripe and then enjoy them. (Conocer las cosas en su punto, en su sazón y saberlas lograr.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 39. (1647) "It is the especial privilege of good taste," Gracian adds, "to enjoy everything at its ripest."

6 Soon ripe, soon rotten. (Cito maturum, cito putridum.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, citing a proverb of c. 150. Another form is, "Quod cito fit, cito perit" (What is soon done, soon perishes).

That that rathest [quickest] rypeth roteth most saunest.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text C, passus xiii, l. 223. (1393)

In youth she was towarde and without euill.
But soon rype soone rotten.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

HARMAN, Caveat. Ch. 22. (1566) ROGERS, Naaman, x, 228. (1642) etc., etc. The Italians say, "Presto maturo, presto marzo"; the Dutch, "Vroeg gras, vroeg hooi" (Soon grass, soon hay).

Early ripe, early rotten.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1349. (1732)

7 Things fully grown are ready to decay. (Wu chwang Chiang 'lao.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue). Sec. 55. (c. 550 B. C.) Carus, tr.

8 Everything ripe was once green. (Nihil non acerbum prius quam maturum fuit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 441. (c. 43 B. C.) Put one ripe between two green. (Mettout entre deux verdes vne meure.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 11. (1534)

9 When the melon is ripe it will drop of itself. (Kua shu tzu lo.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 755. (1875) THE RIPEST FRUIT FALLS FIRST, see under FRUIT.

10 And so, from hour to hour, we ripe and ripe,
And then, from hour to hour, we rot and rot.
SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 26. (1600)
Ripeness is all.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, v, 2, 11. (1605)

To live as fully, as completely as possible . . . is the true aim and end of life. "Ripeness is all."

LLEWELYN POWYS, Impassioned Clay, p. 94. (1931)

11 As ripe as mulberries. (πεπαλτερος μύρων.)

AESCHYLUS, Fragments. Frag. 264. (c. 475 B. C.)

As soft as a ripe grape. (μαλθακώτερος πέποιος σικύου.)

THEOPOMPUS, Fragments. Frag. 5. (c. 325 B. C.)

As ripe as parsley. (ἀρίοιο πεπαλτερος.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. Idyl vii, l. 120. (c. 270 B. C.)

Ripe as the Pomewater.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 2, 3. (1598)

RISING

12 Rise early and eat, in summer because of the heat, in winter because of the cold. . . . Sixty runners may run, but will not overtake the man who has breakfasted early.

Babylonian Talmud: Baba Kamma, fo. 92b. (c. 450)

13 He who does not rise with the sun, does not enjoy the day. (El que no madruga con el sol no goza del día.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34. (1615)

He whom God helps does better than he who rises early. (Más vale al que Dios ayuda que al que mucho madruga.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34.

God helps those who rise early in the morning. (A quien madruga. Dios le ayouda.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 11. (1814)
A Spanish proverb.

14 As for my rising by another man's fall, God shield me!

CHAPMAN AND MARSTON, Eastward Hoe. Act i, sc. 1. (1605)

The rising of one man is the falling of another.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 7. (1633)

1
Ever sick of the slothful guise,
Loath to bed and loath to rise.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 292. (1639)
God grant your early rising do you no harm.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)
Solomon's wise, loath to go to bed, but ten times loather to rise.
E. L. CHAMBERLAIN, *West Worcestershire
Words*, p. 39. (1882)
I forget who it was that recommended men for their soul's good to do each day two things they disliked: . . . it is a precept that I have followed scrupulously, for every day I have got up and I have gone to bed.
MAUGHAM, Moon and Sixpence. Ch. 2. (1919)
2
Who covets wealth does well to rise at dawn.
(Qui bona sectatur prima bene surgit in hora.)
COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 48. (c.
A. D. 600)
He that will thryue must rise at fyue,
He that hath thryuen may lye till seuen,
He that will neuer thryuen may lye till aleuen.
GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 102. (c. 1590)
See under THRIVING.
Early rising brings prosperity; late rising brings poverty.
KAIBARA EKKEN, *Ten Kun (Ten Precepts):
On Practice*. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr.
Rise early and you will see; wake and you will get wealth.
MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 5. (1846)
Rails split 'fo' bre'kfus 'll season de dinner.
J. C. HARRIS, Plantation Proverbs. (1880)
EARLY BIRD CATCHES WORM, see under BIRD.
3
In vain they rise early that used to rise late.
DAVIES, Scourge of Folly, p. 46. (1611)
4
Last to bed and first to rise. ('Hou shui hsien
'chi lai.)
DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 186. (1872)
Be the first to the field and the last to the couch.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 359. (1938)
A Chinese proverb.
5
He that riseth not in the morning loseth his journey.
THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 142. (1633)
Who riseth late must trot all the day.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 17. (1659)
He that riseth late must trot all day, and shall scarce overtake his business at night.
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742. Repeated in 1758.
6
He rises over early that is hangit ere noon.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 40. (c. 1595)
He's up too soon that's hang'd ere Noon.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6279. (1732)
7
At grammar-scole I lerned a verse, that is this,
Sanat, sanctificat et ditat surgere mane. That is to say, Erly rysyng maketh a man hole in body, holer in soule, and rycher in goodes.
JOHN FITZHERBERT, The Boke of Husbandry
(E.D.S.), p. 101. (1523)

Early to bed and early to rise, makes a man healthy, wealthy, and wise.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 91. (1639)
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 38. (1679)
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735 and 1758. There are many variants, as:
Early to rise and late to bed
Lifts again the debtor's head.
Early to rise has virtues three:
'Tis healthy, wealthy, and Godlie.
"Early rising is the first thing that puts a man to the door," says a Scottish proverb, meaning, not that early rising ruins a man, but that it gets him out of doors and so to work.
Ralph, the raven, composed the following verse, . . .
Early to bed, and early to rise,
Is the way to be healthy, wealthy, and wise.
UNKNOWN, Goody Two-Shoes, ii, 1. (1766)
The French say, "Se coucher de bonne heure et se lever matin c'est amasser santé et sagesse" (To go to bed early and get up early is to amass health and wisdom), or "Se coucher et se lever tôt Rend sage, riche et dispos" (To go to bed and get up early makes one wise, rich, and healthy). The Germans have the same proverb: "Früh zu Bett und früh wieder auf, | Macht gesund und reich in Kauf."
Th' lither [lazy] man's guise
Is niver to bed and niver to rise.
CARR, Dialect of Craven, i, 294. (1828)
Early rising is most healthy. (Diluculo surgere saluberrimum est.)
HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 86. (1869)
"Early to bed" may take the place of riches.
J. C. NEVIN, *Precious Characters. See DOO-
LITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary*, ii, 392. (1872)
Early to bed and early to rise
Will make you miss all the regular guys.
GEORGE ADE, Early to Bed. (c. 1900)
Early to bed, and you'll wish you were dead
Bed before eleven, nuts before seven.
DOROTHY PARKER, The Little Hour. (a. 1936)
Or, as another versifier puts it: "Late to bed and late to rise Keeps a twinkle in the eyes."
Early to rise and early to bed makes a male healthy and wealthy and dead.
JAMES THURBER, Fables: The Shrike and the Chipmunks. (1939)
8
The Day is short, the Work great, the Workman lazy, the Wages high, the Master urgeth;
Up, then, and be doing.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1755.
9
He that riseth first, is first drest.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 204. (1640)
Though you rise early, yet the day comes at his time and not till then.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 335. The Spanish form is, "Por mucho madrugar, no amanece más alna" (Early rising doesn't bring the dawn any sooner).

1
I thanke God (quoth she) I neuer felt payne
To go to bed timely, but risyng againe
To soone in the mornyng bath me displeased.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)
Let Taylor preach, upon a morning breezy,
How well to rise while night and larks are flying—

For my part, getting up seems not so easy
By half as lying.

THOMAS HOOD, Morning Meditations. (a. 1845)
The worm was punished for early rising.

J. G. SAXE, Early Rising. (1860)
O it's nice to get up in the mornin', but it's nicer to lie in bed.

HARRY LAUDER, It's Nice to Get Up in the Morning. (1913)

Oh! how I hate to get up in the morning,

Oh! how I'd love to remain in bed;

For the hardest blow of all

Is to hear the bugler call,

"You've got to get up, you've got to get up,

You've got to get up this morning!"

IRVING BERLIN, Oh! How I Hate to Get Up in the Morning. Written at Camp Upton, 1917.

2
Howe happily rose I on my ryght syde today.

JEHAN PALSGRAVE, Acolastus, sig. M3. (1540)
See under OMEN.

3
They were early vp, and neuer the nere.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546)
Your early up, pray God it be the more neere.

ROBERT GREENE, Frier Bacon. Sc. 6. (1594)

He is early up and never the nearer.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons, i, 505. (1629)

Wherein the poet's fortune is, I fear,

Still to be early up, but ne'er the near.

BEN JONSON, A Tale of a Tub: Epil. (1633)

Early up, and never the nearer.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 88. (1678)

Never-the-near, or Never-the-nigh, adv. none the nearer; no forwarder.

ARTHUR B. EVANS, Leicestershire Words, p. 200.
(1881)

4
He that blesseth his friend with a loud voice, rising early in the morning, it shall be counted a curse to him. (Qui benedixit proximo suo voce grandi, de nocte consurgens maledicenti similis erit.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxvii, 14. (c. 350 B. C.)
It is foolish for you to get up before day. (Vanum est vobis ante lucem surgere.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 21. (1534)
Quoted by Rabelais as "Ce que dict David."

To rise betimes is no good hour,

To drink betimes is better sure.

(Leuer matin n'est point bon heur, Boire matin est le meilleur.)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 21.

5
He rises betimes that lies in a dog's lair.

CHARLES READ, The Cloister and the Hearth.
Ch. 24. (1860)

6
He must rise early who would get the blood or goods of another: the idle wolf wins little meat, nor the sleeping man success.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 59.
(c. 900) "The sleeping fox catches no poultry."

She riseth early, Joan, that beguileth thee of a Glocester.

GEORGE PEELE, Edward I. Sc. 10. (1593)

They must rise early . . . who over-reach the monks.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies (1840), i, 426. (1662)
He must rise early, brother, who makes a fool of Don Pedro.

ROBERT JEPHSON, Two Strings to Your Bow.
Act i, sc. 1. (1791)

You must get up very early in the morning to win against the Dodger.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 25. (1838)

7
Reapers rise with the lark, and with the lark to bed. (ἡγειρομένω κορυθαλλῶ καὶ λήγειν εὐδοκῶτος.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. x, l. 50. (c. 270 B. C.)
Wythe the lark yche day I ryes.

UNKNOWN, Philip and Mary. (c. 1555) In
WRIGHT, Songs, p. 38.

Goe to bed with the Lambe, and rise with the Larke.

JOHN LYLIV, Euphues (Arber), p. 227. (1580)
You keepe the prouerbe for a principle, to bed with the Bee and vp with the Lark.

ROBERT GREENE, Never Too Late. (1590)

Stir with the lark to-morrow, gentle Norfolk.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, v, 3, 56. (1592)

We must be up with the lark.

THOMAS DEKKER, Westward Hoe. (1607)

We rise with the lark and go to bed with the lamb.

BRETON, Court and Country. Sec. 8. (a. 1626)

Madam, if he had couched with the lamb,

He had no doubt been stirring with the lark

JONSON, Tale of a Tub. Act i, sc. 6. (1633)

Rise with the lark, and with the lark to bed.

JAMES HURDIS, The Village Curate. (c. 1800)

Popular Fallacies: That we should rise with the lark. That we should lie down with the lamb.

LAMB, Ella: Popular Fallacies. (a. 1834)

The next mornin I rose with the lark. (N.B.—
I don't sleep with the lark, tho'. A goak.)

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), *Artemus
Ward: His Book*. (1862)

You forget I am to rise with the lark.

DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 15. (1880) The French say, "Se lever au chant de l'alouette."

RIVALRY

See also Competition

8
Emulation layeth up a Grudge.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1363. (1732)
Emulation is lively and generous, Envy base and malicious.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1364. (1732)
"Emulation is a virtue" is another form.

<sup>1</sup> No man keeps such a jealous lookout as a rival.

J. C. AND W. A. HARE, Guesses at Truth. (1827)
A rival worthy of his steel.

O. HENRY, Psyche and the Psyscraper. (1910)

<sup>2</sup> Rivalry is good for mortals. (ἀγαθὸν δ' "Ἐπισ ἡδε βροτοῖσιν.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 24. (c. 800 B.C.)
For humanity rivalry is best. (Humanitatis optima est certatio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 262. (c. 43 B.C.) Another Latin proverb is, "Aemulatio aemulationem parit" (Emulation produces emulation).

<sup>3</sup> Without rivals thou lovest alone thyself and thine. (Sine rivali teque et tua solus amares.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 444. (c. 20 B.C.)
A man who loved himself without having any rivals. (Un homme qui s'aimait sans avoir de rivaux.)

LA FONTAINE, Of La Rochefoucauld. (c. 1665)

<sup>4</sup> "Rivals" in the primary sense of the word, are those who dwell on the banks of the same river. . . . There is no such fruitful source of contention as a water-right.

RICHARD CHENEVIX TRENCH, On the Study of Words. Lecture 7. (1851)

II—Rivalry: Two Suns and Two Kings

<sup>5</sup> The earth cannot tolerate two suns, nor Asia two kings. (μήτε τὴν γῆν ἡλίους δύο μήτε τὴν Ἀσίαν δύο βασιλεῖς ὑπομένειν.)

ALEXANDER THE GREAT, to Darius, when the latter offered him two million talents and to share Asia equally with him. (c. 325 B.C.)
See PLUTARCH, Morulia: Sayings of Kings, 180B.

There are not two suns in the sky, nor two sovereigns over the people.

CONFUCIUS. Quoted by MENCIVS, Discourses, v, i, 4. (c. 300 B.C.)

Ten darweshes may sleep under one blanket, but one country cannot contain two kings.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Apologue 3. (c. 1258)

Two kings in one kingdom do not agree well together.

BARTHOLOMEW YOUNG, tr., Civile Conversation, fo. 205. (1586)

Bear, like the Turk, no brother near the throne.

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 198. (1733)

For monarchs ill can rivals brook,

Even in a word, or smile, or look.

WALTER SCOTT, Marmion. Canto v, st. 13. (1808)
Flagg and Quirt, the tropical twins. There ain't room for both of them in the whole world.

STALLINGS AND ANDERSON, What Price Glory? Act iii. (1924)

<sup>6</sup> One bush, they say, can never hide two thieves. (οὐ γὰρ ἂν ποτε | τρέφειν δύναιτ' ἂν μὴ λάχμη κλέπτα δύο.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 928. (422 B.C.)

<sup>7</sup> A man and a serpent cannot live in one basket.
Babylonian Talmud: Kethuboth, fo. 72a. (c. 450)

<sup>8</sup> One tree won't hold two robins. (Unicum arbustum haud alit duos erithacos.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. ii, No. 22. (1523) Citing Zenodotus.

One bushe, saith the prouerbe, can not harbour two Robin redbreasts.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. L4. (1583)

<sup>9</sup> Two Sir Positives can scarce meet without a Skirmish.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5333. (1732)

The French say, "Deux orgueilleux ne peuvent sur un âne" (Two proud men cannot ride on one ass).

Great things destroy each other. (In se magna ruunt.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 171. (1869)

<sup>10</sup> Two sparrows on one ear of corn make an ill agreement.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1072.

(1640) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5334, has.

"Two Sparrows upon an Ear of Wheat cannot agree." The French say, "Deux moineaux sur même épi ne sont pas longtemps unis."

<sup>11</sup> Two bigs will not go in one bag.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 22. (1659)

<sup>12</sup> In partnership, neither thrones nor love stand sure. (Non bene cum sociis regna Venusque manent.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae, iii, 564. (c. 1 B.C.)

Sovereignty always resents a partner. (Omnis potestas inpatiens consortis est.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili, i, 92. (c. A.D. 58) The Germans say, "Herrschaft duldet keine Gemeinschaft" (Lordship permits no partnership).

Nor throne nor bed can brook a partnership (Nec regna socium ferre nec taedae sciunt.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 259. (c. A.D. 60)

The throne admits not two. (Non capit regnum duos.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 444. (c. A.D. 60) Another form is, "Summa sedes non capit duos" (The highest seat will not hold two). "Love and Lordship like no fellowship." See under LOVE.

<sup>13</sup> Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere; Nor can one England brook a double reign.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, v, 4, 65. (1597)

We could not stall together In the whole world.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, v, 1, 39. (1606)

<sup>14</sup> Two wymen in one howse,

Two cattes and one mowce,

Two dogges and one bone,

Maye never accorde inone.

UNKNOWN. In Reliquiae Antiquae (1841), l. 233. (c. 1417)

Men say, Two cats and a mouse, two wives in one house, two dogs and a bone, never agree in one.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Accorder. (1611) Cited by RAY, p. 151; FULLER, No. 6095.

One house cannot support two dogs. (Una domus non alit duos canes.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, i, 24. (1508)

TWO OF A TRADE NEVER AGREE, see under TRADE.

RIVER

<sup>1</sup> The deepest rivers flow with the smallest noise. (Altissima quaeque flumina minimo sono labuntur.)

QUINTUS CURTIUS RUFUS, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni. (c. A.D. 50) See also STILL WATERS RUN DEEP.

The silent stream. (Taciturnus amnis.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 31, l. 8. (23 B.C.)

<sup>2</sup> All the rivers run into the sea; yet the sea is not full. (Omnia flumina intrans in mare. et mare non redundat.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, i, 7. (c. 250 B.C.)

<sup>3</sup> A river, you compare yourself with the ocean. (Fluvius cum mari certas.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 76. (1523)

<sup>4</sup> Upward to their fountains the sacred rivers run. (ἄνω ποταμῶν ἑρῶν ὑποῦσι παρὰ.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 410. (c. 431 B.C.) Meaning that things are upside down.

Never does the stream flow backwards to its fount. (Nec redit in fontes unda supina suos.)

OVID, De Medicamine Faciei, l. 40. (c. 1 B.C.)

Ye rivers, backwards run! (Redite sursum flumina!)

AUSONIUS, Epistles. Frag. 35. (c. A.D. 370)

The soul aspiring pants its source to mount, As streams meander level with their fount.

ROBERT MONTGOMERY, The Omnipresence of the Deity. Pt. i. (1828) MACAULAY, Edinburgh Review, April, 1830, in a review of Montgomery's poems called this "the worst similitude in the world," and Montgomery suppressed it.

<sup>5</sup> A thousand years hence, the River will run as it did.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 436. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> Rivers need a spring.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 602. (1640)

<sup>7</sup> The mighty emperor in whose dominions the Father of Waters begins his course.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Rasselas. (1759) Referring to the Nile. The Mississippi, whose name is from the Algonquin for Great River, has also been called the Father of Waters.

Ol' man river, dat ol' man river, he keeps on rollin' along.

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN, 2D, Ol' Man River. (1927) Referring to the Mississippi.

<sup>8</sup> Rivers are moving roads, which carry one where one wishes to go. (Les rivières sont des chemins qui marchent, et qui portent où l'on veut aller.)

PASCAL, Pensées. Pt. i, art. x, No. 38. (c. 1660) The great rivers of the world have now become the highways of civilization.

ALISON, History of Europe. Ch. 78. (1842)

<sup>9</sup> Heracleitus likens the universe to the current of a river, saying that you cannot step twice into the same stream. (τὸν αὐτὸν ποταμὸν οὐκ ἄν ἑμβαίης.)

PLATO, Cratylus. Sec. 402A. (c. 375 B.C.)

<sup>10</sup> Show me the river that the sea won't hold. (Quisnam istic fluviust, quem non recipiat mare.)

PLAUTUS, Curculio, l. 86. (c. 200 B.C.)

And thou, Simois, that as an arwe clere Thorough Troye rennest ay downward to the see.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus, Bk. iv, l. 1548. (c. 1380)

All rivers run into the sea.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 180. (1633)

<sup>11</sup> He who knows not the way to the sea should take a river for his guide. (Viam qui nescit, qua deveniat ad mare, | eum oportet amnem quaerere comitem sibi.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 627. (c. 200 B.C.) A proverb cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vii, 81.

Follow the River, and you'll get to the Sea. (Suivez la rivière et vous gagnerez la mer.)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 94. (1678)

<sup>12</sup> Where hills are lofty, rivers are deep. (San kao shui yeh kao.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2508. (1875) See also under COMPENSATION.

<sup>13</sup> There is not any town or city which hath a navigable river at it that is poor.

JOHN TAYLOR, A New Discovery by Sea. (1623)

<sup>14</sup> In one wide ocean all rivers Are salted to one salt taste.

UNKNOWN, Kasyapa Parivarta. (A.D. 713)

This was one of those threats which in Georgia dialect would subject a man to "a rowing up salt river."

FRANCES TROLLOPE, Domestic Manners of the Americans, ii, 117. (1832)

That's the way you feel, my dear, When sailing up Salt River.

G. W. BUNGAY, Bobolink Minstrel, p. 70. (1860)

That imaginary stream called "Salt River," up which defeated candidates are supposed to be rowed, is one of the most felicitous of our political Americanisms, although its authorship is unknown.

Evening Post, N.Y., 1 Oct., 1910. In an article in Social Studies, Dec., 1934, p. 429, Carl Scherf gives a somewhat unconvincing account of the origin of the phrase.

RIVER PAST, GOD FORGOTTEN, see under DANGER.

ROAD

See also Way

<sup>1</sup> Follow the straight road. (εὐθείαν ἔρχε τήνδε.)
AESCXYLUS, Prometheus. Frag. 109, Smyth. (c. 458 B.C.) "You cannot be lost on a straight road."

You're leaving the highway for the byway.
(Sciens de via in semitam degredere.)

PLAUTUS, Casina, l. 675. (c. 200 B.C.)
Be careful that you stick to the road. (Caute ut incedas via.)

Keep the common Road and thou'rt safe.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3118. (1732)
The Latin proverb is, "Via trita, via tuta"
(A beaten track, a safe track).

Side tracks are rough, and they're hard to walk;
Keep in the middle of the road.

UNKNOWN, Keep in the Middle of the Road.
(c. 1870)

<sup>2</sup> Any road will lead you to the end of the World!

THOMAS CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 2. (1834)

Any road leads to the end of the world.
FITZGERALD, Polonius: Choice of a Calling.
(1852)

<sup>3</sup> There is no road so level as to have no rough places. (No hay camino tan llano que no tenga algún tropezón.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 13. (1615)
You must be content sometimes with Rough Roads.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5262. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> When, by what road, whither? (Quando, qua, quo?)

CICERO, Ad Familiares. Bk. ix, epis. vii, sec. 2. (46 B.C.)

<sup>5</sup> The other side of the road always looks cleanest.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius: The Poor: Motto. (1852)

No matter which fork of the road you take, you will wonder, later on, if the scenery on the other route isn't more attractive.

GEORGE ADE, Joy of Single Blessedness. (1922)

<sup>6</sup> If you wish to know the road ahead, inquire of those who have travelled it.

HENRY H. HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 188. (1937)

<sup>7</sup> Some roads lead further than others. (ἐν τῇ γὰρ ἁλλαι | ὁδῶν ὁδοὶ περὶ τρεῖται.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. No. ix, l. 104. (468 B.C.)

<sup>8</sup> Walk not on the main-travelled roads. (ἄνωφρους ὁδοὺς μὴ στέλχειν.)

PYTHAGORAS. Maxim. (c. 525 B.C.) As quoted by ATHENAEUS, bk. x, sec. 452 E, who says its meaning is, "Follow not the opinion of the many." The saying is one of the commonplaces of Greek literature, repeated by Hesiod, Plato, Aristotle, Plutarch, and many others.

<sup>9</sup> It's a maxim of a wise man never to return by the same road he came.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 35. (1818)

<sup>10</sup> You're on altogether the wrong road. (Totā erras via.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 245. (161 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 48, who comments that it is a proverb applied to those who are violently in the wrong.

He that goth owte of his weye, the more he goth, the fether he is behinde.

EARL RIVERS, Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, p. 144. (1477)

Ye maie walke this waie, but sure ye shall fynde The further ye go, the further behynde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)

The further we go the further behind.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1670)

The further you run, the further you are behind.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4552. (1732)
The Germans say, Was hilft laufen, wenn man nicht auf dem rechten Weg ist? (What's the use of running when you're on the wrong road?)

<sup>11</sup> Here is the place where the road divides into two parts. (Hic locus est partis ubi se via findit in ambas.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 540. (19 B.C.)

Every road leads in two directions.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 375. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

ROAR

<sup>12</sup> We roar all like bears. (Rugiemus quasi ursi omnes.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lix, 11. (c. 725 B.C.)

Thye gonne as beres rore,

He bond and pressed hem so sore.

CHAUCER (?), House of Fame, iii, 499. (c. 1383)

Roring lyke a bull, as some lawyers do.

ROGER ASCHAM, Toxophilus (Arber), p. 42 (1545)

Prick me Bullcalf till he roar again.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iii, 2, 189. (1598)

O, that I were

Upon the hill of Basan, to outroar

The horned herd.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iii, 13, 126. (1606)

There was one of our men hanging on the mainstay, and roaring like a bull.

MARRYAT, Poor Jack. Ch. 13. (1840)

<sup>13</sup> I will roar you as gently as any sucking dove;
I will roar you as 't were any nightingale.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, i, 2, 85. (1596)

- <sup>1</sup> I'll rack thee with old cramps,
Fill all thy bones with aches, make thee roar.
SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, i, 2, 371. (1611)
Nature knows best, and she says, roar!
MARIA EDGEWORTH, Ormond. Ch. 5. (1817)
King Corny, in a paroxysm of the gout.

ROBBERY

See also Theft

- <sup>2</sup> To rob even a corpse. (τὸ καὶ ἀπὸ νεκροῦ φέρειν.)
ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. ii, ch. 6, sec. 5. (c. 330 B.C.) Quoted as a proverb. Cited by ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistai. See also under MISER.
To rob the spittle [hospital].
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 6. (1639) RAY,
English Proverbs, p. 191. (1670) SOUTH,
Sermons, iv, 153. (a. 1716)
<sup>3</sup> He that robs a scholar robs twenty men.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 243. (1639)
Who robs a Scholar robs twenty men. For commonly he [the scholar] borrows a cloak of one,
a sword of another, a pair of boots of a third,
a hat of a fourth, etc.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1670) The Spanish form is, "Who robs a scholar robs the public."
Who robs a Cambridge-scholar, robs twenty.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5716. (1732)
<sup>4</sup> Reavers [robbers] should not be ruers.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 88. (c. 1595)
<sup>5</sup> Who steales not makes no robe. (Chi non robba, non fa robba.)
JOHN FLORIO, Firiste Fruites, fo. 29. (1578)
He that does not rob makes not a robe or garment.
Book of Meery Riddles. Proverb 83. (1629)
<sup>6</sup> Rob not for burnt offerings.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.
<sup>7</sup> Robbery is committed by Force or Terror, of which neither is in Theft; for Theft is a secret act.
THOMAS HOBBS, A Dialogue Between a Philosopher and a Student, p. 117. (c. 1670)
There is more spirit and a better heart in a robber than in a thief.
WILLIAM STUBBS, Constitutional History of England. Vol. iii, ch. 18. (1878)
Robbers get plundered by thieves.
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.
1815. (1875)
<sup>8</sup> The robb'd that smiles steals something from the thief.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 208. (1605)
<sup>9</sup> Robbers smell the money of travellers afar off.
TOBIAS SMOLLETT, tr., Gil Blas, iv, 12. (1750)
Quoted as a proverb.
The Robber Barons.
MATTHEW JOSEPHSON. Title of book. (1934)

ROBIN

- <sup>10</sup> I will come when the cuckoo has pecked up the dirt, i. e. in the spring.
ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia,
p. 430. (1830)
Darling, I'll meet you when the robins nest again.
FRANK HOWARD, When the Robins Nest Again.
(1883) The phrase, in the slang of the day, became synonymous with never. So used by LONG, Madame Butterfly, and also in Puccini's opera.
<sup>11</sup> The robin and the wren
Are God Almighty's cock and hen;
The martin and the swallow
Are God Almighty's bow and arrow.
WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book. Vol. i, col.
647. (1825) Quoted as a Warwickshire saying. There are many variants of the last line, such as "Are God's mate and marrow";
"Are the devil's bow and arrow"; "Are the next two birds that follow."
Those who kill a robin or a wren
Will never prosper, boy or man.
HARLAND AND WILKINSON, *Lancashire Folk-
Lore*, p. 142. (1867)
Robins and wrens are God's chickens and hens.
E. M. WRIGHT, Rustic Speech, p. 219. (1913)
<sup>12</sup> The pious bird with the scarlet breast,
Our little English robin.
WORDSWORTH, The Redbreast Chasing the Butterfly. (1802)
Sweet Robin, I have heard them say
That thou wert there upon the day
The Christ was crowned in cruel scorn
And bore away one bleeding thorn.
GEORGE WASHINGTON DOANE Robin Redbreast.
(1824)
ROBIN GOODFELLOW
<sup>13</sup> Robin Goodfellow was a strange man.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia Anglo-Latina,
p. 69. (1639)
<sup>14</sup> When they wer wel waked with cold, they surely thought that Robin goodfellow (according to the old saying) had bene with them that night.
THOMAS HARMAN, *A Caveat for Common
Vagabones* (E.E.T.S.), p. 36. (1567)
<sup>15</sup> They wander as in a mist, or (as we say) led by Robin Goodfellow.
WILLIAM TINDALE, Works (P.S.), p. 139. (1531)
That shrewd and knavish sprite call'd Robin Goodfellow.
SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, ii,
1, 34. (1596)
In the old time when Hobgoblin and Robin good Fellow made country wenches keep their houses clean.
NICHOLAS BRETON, *Strange Newes Out of Divers
Countries*. (1622)

ROBIN HOOD

<sup>1</sup> The devil . . . makes the world beleeeue that he sels Robin-Hood's penyworths.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 201. (1629) "To sell Robin Hood's pennyworths." It is spoken of things sold under half their value [at a robber's price].

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, ii, 569. (1662) This proverb is usually apply'd to such as having gotten any thing dishonestly, sell it at a price much below the value.

BAILEY, English Dictionary: Robin. (1721) When a purchase you reap, that is wondrous Cheap,

They Robin-Hood Bargains are call'd.

The British Apollo. No. 58, p. 3/1. (1709)

<sup>2</sup> Swich maner folk, I gesse, Defamen love, as no-thing of him knowe; They spoken, but they bente never his bowe.

CHAUCER, Troilus. Bk. ii, l. 861. (c. 1380)

Many men speken of Robyn Hood, and shot nevere in his bowe.

UNKNOWN, Reply of Friar Daw Topias. (1401)

See WRIGHT, Political Poems, ii, 59.

Many men speketh . . . Of Robin Hode and of his Bow

Whych never shot therin, I trow.

GEORGE RIPLEY, The Compound of Alchymy. (1471) In ASHMOLE, Theatrum Chemicum, p. 175.

Bachelors bost, how they will teach their wyves good,

But many a man speaketh of Robyn hood.

That neuer shot in his bowe.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)

Many talk of Plato and Homer that never saw them. (Tel allegue Platon et Homere, qui ne les veid oncques.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 12. (1595) The Italians say, "Molti parlan di Orlando Chi non videro mai suo brando" (Many talk of Orlando who have never seen his sword).

Many speak of Robin Hood that never shot in his bow.

THOMAS URQUHART, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1653) This is Urquhart's rendering of Rabelais' "Tell parle de mesnaige, que ne scayt mie que c'est."

Many talk of Robin Hood that never shot in his bow,

And many talk of Little John that never did him know.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 137. (1670) The first line cited by DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 67; BAILEY, Divers Proverbs, p. 37. (1712) and many others.

Virtue we praise, but practice not her good.

(Athenian-like) we act not what we know,

As many men do talk of Robin Hood,

Who never did shoot arrow in his bow.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736.

A Yorkshire proverb runs: Many speak of Robin Hood, etc., i. e. many people talk of doing great things which they never accomplish.

E. M. WRIGHT, Rustic Speech, p. 189. (1913)

A ROBIN HOOD TALE, see under TALE.

<sup>3</sup> They cry out with an open mouth, as if they out shot Robin Hood.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, An Apologie for Poetrie (Arber), p. 51. (a. 1586)

To overshoot Robin Hood.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 425. (1869)

<sup>4</sup> "All round Robin Hood's barn." All about the country, first here and then there.

Notes and Queries, v, ix, 486. (1878)

To go round by Robin Hood's barn is to go a roundabout way, to go the farthest way.

E. M. WRIGHT, Rustic Speech, p. 189. (1913)

ROCK

<sup>5</sup> I am in town without a rock in my pocket.

JOHN BARTLETT, Americanisms, p. 277. (a. 1848)

Old man's piling up the rocks.

KIPLING, Captains Courageous. Ch. 1. (1897)

<sup>6</sup> O Rock of Israel, Rock of Salvation, Rock struck and cleft for me.

DANIEL BREVINT, Works, p. 17. (1679)

Rock of Ages, cleft for me,

Let me hide myself in Thee.

AUGUSTUS MONTAGUE TOPLADY, Rock of Ages. (a. 1778)

It is the material image of the Christian, his heart resting on the Rock of Ages.

O. W. HOLMES, The Poet at the Breakfast Table. Ch. 5. (1872) "Rock of Ages" is a rendering of the Hebrew in Isaiah, xxvi, 4, which is translated "everlasting strength" in the King James version.

<sup>7</sup> He stood firm as a rock. (ὁ δ' ἐστάθη ἥτε πέτρα ἑμπεδον.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 463. (c. 850 B.C.)

Like rock engirdled by the sea,

Like rock immovable is he.

(Ille, velut pelagi rupes immota, resistit.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vii, l. 586. (19 B.C.)

He's a rock, the oak, not to be wind-shaken.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, v, 2, 117. (1607)

Come one, come all! this rock shall fly

From its firm base as soon as I.

WALTER SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto v, st. 10. (1810)

<sup>8</sup> Fork out, for I'm fair on the rocks.

A. G. MURDOCH, Scottish Readings. Ser. iii. p. 101. (1889)

One rock is as good as another to be wrecked on.

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act ii. (1913)

ROD

<sup>9</sup> For it is seyed, man maketh ofte a yerde

With which the maker is himself y-beten.

CHAUCER, Troilus. Bk. i, l. 740. (c. 1380)

I fere me ye haue made a rodde for your self.

SIR THOMAS MALORY, tr., Le Morte Darthur, v, ii, 162. (c. 1480)

Men make often a rodde for them selfe.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of Aymon (E.E.T.S.), p. 97. (c. 1489)

For your owne tayle ye made a rod.

JOHN SKELTON, Works (Dyce), i, 186. (a. 1529)
Then hath he made a rod for his own breech.

JOHN FRITH, A Disputacion of Purgatorye (1829), p. 110. (1533)

When haste proueth a rod made for his own tayle.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 2. (1546)
To lock vp ones wife . . . is to gather a rod to beate his owne breeche.

UNKNOWN, Tell-Trothes New-Yeares Gift, p. 35. (1593)

Oh how the good man smiles to see what a Rod we have made for our own Back!

WILLIAM HUGHES, The Man of Sin, ix, 39 (1677)
He makes a rod for his own breech.

NATHAN BAILEY, Divers Proverbs, p. 57. (1721)
I am not the first man who has carried a rod to whip himself.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738) The French say, "Il donne des verges pour se fouetter" (He provides the switch to be whipped with).

<sup>1</sup> The rod breaks no bones.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 182. (1633)
CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 75. (1639)

<sup>2</sup> They put gold into the hands of youth, when they should put a rod vnder their gyrdle.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 34. (1579) A whipping.

A rodde were better vnder thy girdle than loue in thy mouth.

JOHN LYLY, Endimion. Act ii, sc. 2. (1591)

<sup>3</sup> Thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. (Virga tua, et baculus tuus: ipsa me consolata sunt.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxiii, 4. (c. 250 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> He shall rule them with a rod of iron. (ποικαλει αὐτοὺς ἐν ῥάβδῳ σιδηρᾷ.)

New Testament: Revelation, ii, 27. (c. A. D. 90)

The Vulgate is, "Reget eas in virga ferrea."

In matters domestic she . . . ruled with a rod of iron.

TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 3. (1857)

Picton ruled it [Trinidad] for a while with a rod of iron.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, At Last. Ch. 3. (1871)

He rules me with a rod of red-hot iron.

STEELE MACKAYE, Paul Kauvar. Act. ii. (1888)

<sup>5</sup> The rodde . . . helpeth forward to bryng the boys to some goodnesse.

THOMAS WILSON, Arte of Logike, p. 36. (1551)
It makes a vast difference in opinion about the utility of the rod, which end happens to fall to one's share.

IRVING, Tales of a Traveller, i, 270. (1824)

SPARE ROD AND SPOIL CHILD, see under CHILD

<sup>6</sup> We have rodde in lye for them everye one.

UNKNOWN, Respublica. Act iii, sc. 5. (1553)

I know one, that experimentally proved what a rod in lye could do with the curstest boy in the City.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Pierces Supererogation. (1593)

I feare God hath worse rods in pickell for you.

BENJAMIN SPENSER, Vox Civitatis, p. 26. (1625)
This is a threatening admonition for an idle or truant boy, "There's a rod in pickle for thee, my lad."

Craven Glossary: Pickle. (1828)

To have a rod in pickle; to intend to, be ready to, punish someone. From rods kept in lye, which preserves their chastising virtue.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Rod. (1941)
KISS THE ROD, see under KISS.

ROGUE

See also Knave, Rascal

<sup>7</sup> A wilde Roge is he that hath no abiding place.

JOHN AWDELAY, The Fraternitie of Vaca-bondes (1869), p. 5. (1561)

A wilde Roge is he that is borne of a Roge.

THOMAS HARMAN, A Caveat for Common Vagabones, p. 41. (1567)

The Tame Rogue begets a Wilde-Rogue.

THOMAS DEKKER, the Belman of London. (1608) Works (Grosart), iii, 97.

<sup>8</sup> Nobody calls himself rogue.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 463. (1855)

<sup>9</sup> A rogue's wardrobe is harbour for a louse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 71. (1639)

Cited by RAY, p. 137; FULLER, No. 383.

<sup>10</sup> Not one in a thousand is capable of being a complete rogue.

HENRY FIELDING, Jonathan Wild. Ch. 4. (1743)

<sup>11</sup> Little Rogues easily become great Ones.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

<sup>12</sup> No Rogue like to the godly Rogue.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3624. (1732)

<sup>13</sup> A thread will tie an honest man better than a rape [rope] will do a rogue.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 32. (1832)

<sup>14</sup> The most notorious rogue that ever breathed.

THOMAS KYD (?), Jeronimo, i, vi, 49. (1605)

A more praeternotorious rogue than himself.

FLETCHER, Fair Maid of the Inn. Act iv. (c. 1613)

As big a rogue as ever peeped at a spear.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 10. (1917)

<sup>15</sup> One rogue is usher to another still.

POPE, tr., The Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 251. (1726)

<sup>16</sup> A rich rogue, two shirts and a rag.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 80. (1678)

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>17</sup> Among his crew of rogues in grain.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Works (Scott), xiv, 241. (1728)

A rogue in grain is a rogue amain.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 299. (1855)

Like corndealers, they are rogues in-grain.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 18. (1869) See also under KNAVE.

1 It is a common saying, that you must set a rogue to catch a rogue.

ABRAHAM TUCKER, The Light of Nature Pursued, ii, 53. (1774) See also under THIEF.

2 Very often, say what you will, a rogue is only a fool. (Bien souvent, quoi qu'on dise, un fripon n'est qu'un sot.)

VOLTAIRE, Le Dépositaire. Act ii, sc. 6. (1772)

A rogue is a roundabout fool; a fool in circumbendibus.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table-Talk, 4 Jan., 1823.

He may be a rogue, but he's no fool on the march.
Notes and Queries, iii, vi, 495. (1864)

ROLAND

3 To haue a Rowland for an Oliver.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle (1809), p. 266. (1548)

HOLINSHEAD, Chronicles of England (1808), iii, 205. (1577) A blow for a blow; tit for tat, Roland and Oliver were two of Charlemagne's Paladins, so evenly matched, so legend says, that they fought for five days on an island in the Rhine, without either gaining the slightest advantage.

She will always have a Rowland for your Oliver.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters, ii, 665. (1659)

To give one a Rowland for an Oliver. That is, a quid pro quo, to be even with one.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 191. (1670)
The French say, "Je luy bailleraï Guy contre Robert" (I will engage Guy against Robert)
See also TIT FOR TAT.

'Tis allowable . . . to give a man a Rowland for his Oliver, and to pay him in his own coin.

SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE, Fables, xxxi, 38. (1692)

He gave my termagant kinsman a quid pro quo—a Rowland for his Oliver, as the vulgar say.

WALTER SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 35. (1816)

4 After some years he died of the death Roland. (Après quelques années mourut de la mort Roland.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (1532) That is, he died of thirst.

ROME

5 A thousand roads lead men forever to Rome. (Mille viæ ducunt homines per saecula ad Romam.)

ALAIN DE LILLE, Liber Parabolarum, 591. (1175)

Diverse pathes leden diverse folk the righte way to Rome.

CHAUCER, Astrolabe: Prologue, l. 45. (c. 1391)

All roads lead to Rome. (Tous chemins vont à Rome.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. xii, fab. 27. (1694)

The Italians say, "Tutte le strade conducono à Roma."

All roads take to Rome.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 24. (1860)

Every highroad leads to Peking. (T'iao t'iao ta lu t'ung Pei-ching.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 746.

(1875) The Japanese say, "Every road leads to the Mikado's palace."

All roads seemed to lead to Reno.

STUART CLOETE, Congo Song. Ch. 8. (1943)

6 I found Rome brick and left it marble. (την Ῥώμην γηίνην παραλαβὼν λιθὴν ὑμῖν καταλείπω.)

AUGUSTUS CAESAR, on his death-bed, August, A.D. 14. The Latin of the saying is usually given as "Urberem latericiam invenit, marmoream reliquit" (He found the city brick and left it marble), but this is an adaptation of what SUETONIUS, De Vita Caesarum: Divus Augustus, bk. ii, ch. 28, sec. 3. (c. A.D. 120), really wrote, "Ut iure sit gloriatus marmoream se relinquere, quam latericiam accepisset" (He—Augustus—so beautified the city that he could justly boast that he left built of marble what he had found built of brick). Strictly speaking, latericius means sun-dried brick, so that the saying might literally be rendered, "I found Rome mud and left it marble." DIO CASSIUS, Roman History, bk. lvi, ch. 30, asserts that Augustus "did not refer literally to the appearance of its buildings, but rather to the strength of the empire."

Augustus, who said, I found Rome of stones and bricks, but I have left it of marble.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 185. (1574) Pettie, tr.

It was the boast of Augustus . . . that he found Rome of brick and left it of marble.

LORD BROUGHAM, Speech on Law Reform, House of Commons, Feb., 1828.

7 To Rome for everything. (A Roma por todo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 52. (1615)

The Spanish also say, "A la Corte por todo" (To the Cortes for everything).

8 O happy Fate for the Roman State
Was the date of my great Consulate!

(O fortunatam natam me consule Romam.)

CICERO, De Suo Consulatu. (c. 55 B.C.) As quoted by JUVENAL, Satires, x, 122. A line much ridiculed for its egoism and cacophony.

9 I am a Roman citizen. (Civis Romanus sum.)

CICERO, In Verrem. No. vi, sec. 57. (70 B.C.)

Cicero is telling the story of Publius Gavius, beaten with rods in the forum of Messina, "while in the meantime no groan was heard, no cry amid all this pain and between the sound of the blows, except the words, 'I am a Roman citizen.'" AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae, x, 3 (c. A.D. 150), also tells the story, and QUINTILIAN, Institutiones Oratoriae, xi, i, 40, asks, "What could be braver than the words of the man from whom the scourge could wring but one cry, 'Civis Romanus sum!'" See also LIVY, ii, 12.

By the terror of the Roman name. (Terrorē nominis Romani.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 24. (c. A.D. 116)

1 Let Nero fiddle out Rome's Obsequies.

GEORGE DANIEL, Trinarchodia: To the Reader. (1649) Suetonius, De Vita Caesarum: Nero, bk. vi, ch. 38, tells the story of how Nero set fire to the city, [to see what Troy looked like when it was in flames], and sang the whole of The Sack of Ilium [probably one of his own compositions] as he watched the flames, which raged for six days and seven nights.

It is fiddling while Rome is burning to spend more pages over the sorrows of . . . Rose Salterne, while the destinies of Europe are hanging on the marriage between Elizabeth and Anjou.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Westward Ho! Ch. 10. (1855) To be occupied with trifles in face of a crisis.

While Rome is burning they are satisfied to do nothing but fiddle.

OGDEN NASH, Election Day Is Holiday. (1933)

2 The Roman nature was fierce, almost brutal.

FROUDE, Lives of the Saints. (1852)

The Roman . . . was at heart, more of a farmer than a soldier.

RUSKIN, Crown of Wild Olive. Ch. 3. (1866)

3 All things are for sale at Rome. (Omnia venalia Romae esse.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Ch. 8, sec. 1. (c. 40 B. C.) Repeated in Ch. 20 and elsewhere.

All things at Rome have their price. (Omnia Romae cum pretio.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. iii, l. 183. (c. A. D. 120)

We have the old proverb, Omnia venalia Romae, "All things are sold for money at Rome"; and Rome is come home to our own doors.

HUGH LATIMER, Fifth Sermon Before Edward VI, p. 185. (1549) See also PRICE: ALL MEN HAVE THEIR PRICE.

No right at Rome.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 172. (1639)

4 I had rather be a dog and bay the moon Than such a Roman.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, iv, 3, 27. (1599)

5 The last of the Romans. (Romanorum ultimus.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. iv, sec. 34. (c. A. D. 116) Referring to Caius Cassius.

The last of all the Romans, fare thee well.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, v, 3, 99. (1599) Referring to Brutus.

This was the noblest Roman of them all.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, v, 5, 68.

Thou sleepest, Brutus, and Rome is in chains. (Tu dors, Brutus, et Rome est dans les fers.)

VOLTAIRE, La Mort de César. Act ii, sc. 2. (1735)

6 Not yet had Romulus traced the walls of the Eternal City. (Romulus aeternae nondum formaverat urbis | moenia.)

TIBULLUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 5, l. 23. (19 B. C.)

The walls of lofty Rome. (Altae moenia Romae.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 7. (19 B. C.)

7 So great a labor was it to found the Roman race. (Tantae molis erat Romanam condere gentem.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 33. (19 B. C.)

The Romans, lords of the world, the race wearing the toga. (Romanos, rerum dominos, gentemque togatam.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 282.

The Roman Senate and People. (Senatus Populusque Romanus.)

The motto of Rome, denoted on Roman banners, coins, etc. by the letters S.P.Q.R.

So little as to be nothing. (Si Peu Que Rien.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 32. (1545)

8 Rome became of all things the fairest, and with a single city's wall enclosed her seven hills. (Rerum facta est pulcherrima Roma, | septemque una sibi muro circumdedit arces.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 534. (29 B. C.) Repeated in Aeneid, vi, 783.

First among cities, the home of gods, is golden Rome. (Prima urbes inter, divum domus, aurea Roma.)

AUSONIUS, Ordo Urbium Nobilium, l. 1. (c. A. D. 370) "Caput mundi" (Head of the world) was the proverbial phrase applied to Rome.

A city greater than any upon earth . . . that from one small place extended its power so that upon it the sun never sets. (Parvaque a sede profecta | dispersit cum sole manus.)

CLAUDIAN, De Consulatu Stilichonis. Bk. iii, l. 139. (c. A. D. 400) See also under SPAIN, ENGLAND.

The grandeur that was Rome.

EDGAR ALLAN POE, To Helen. (1836)

9 This agglomeration which was called, and which still calls itself the Holy Roman Empire, is neither holy, nor Roman, nor an empire. (Ce corps qui s'appelait et qui s'appelle encore le saint empire romain n'était en aucune manière ni saint, ni romain, ni empire.)

VOLTAIRE, Essai sur les Mœurs et l'Esprit des Nations. Ch. 71. (1756)

10 Rome was not made all in one day, so say the vulgar. (Rome ne fut pas faite toute en un jour, ce dit li vilains.)

UNKNOWN, Li Proverbe au Vilain (Tobler), p. 43. (c. 1190) The French also say, "Rome n'a été bâti tout en un jour," or "Paris n'a pas été fait en un jour," or "On ne fait pas tout en un jour" (One can't do everything in one day). Variants often substitute the capitals or important cities of other countries for Rome.

One drop doesn't hollow out marble, neither at once in one day is Rome built. (Non stilla una cavat marmor, neque protinus uno est | condita Roma die.)

PALINGENIUS (PIETRO ANGELO MANZOLLI), Zodiacus Vitae. Bk. xii, l. 460. (1537)

Rome was not built in one day.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Prophetess, act i, sc. 3. (1622) SMOLLETT, *Roderick
Random*, ch. 51. (1748) SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel, ch. 21. (1822) BRONTË, Shirley, ch. 6.
(1849) DOYLE, The Stock-Broker's Clerk.
(1893) CHENEY, A Trap for Bellamy, p. 58.
(1941) etc., etc.

Zamora was not won in an hour. (No se gano Zamora en una hora.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 71. (1615)
An allusion to the long siege of Zamora in 1072, at which Sancho II lost his life.

Hercules was not begot in one night.

MILTON, *Declaration for the Election of John
III. Prose works* (1890), iii, 481. (1674)
Quoting a Greek proverb. Jupiter, so Plautus states, made the night he spent with Alcmena last forty-eight hours, for, says Rabelais, "so great a time was needed for the forging of the mighty Hercules."

How was Rome bigged [built]?

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 142. (1721)
The world was not made in a day.

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 48. (1850)
Ice three feet thick is not frozen in a day.

HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 360. (1937)

II—When in Rome Do as the Romans Do

1

When I am here [at Milan] I do not fast on a Saturday; when I am at Rome, I fast on a Saturday. Follow the custom of the church where you are. (Quando hic sum, non ieiuno Sabbato; quando Romae sum, ieiuno Sabbato.)

ST. AMBROSE, Advice to St. Augustine (A.D.
387) See ST. AUGUSTINE, Epistle to Januarius: Epistles, ii, 18; Epistle to Casulanus, xxxvi, 32. St. Augustine explains, "My mother having joined me at Milan, found that the church there did not fast on Saturdays as at Rome, and was at a loss what to do. So I consulted St. Ambrose, of holy memory, who replied" as above.

If you are at Rome, live after the Roman fashion;
if you are elsewhere, live as they do there. (Si fueris Romae, Romano vivito more; si fueris alibi, vivito sicut ibi.)

ST. AMBROSE, Advice to St. Augustine. As quoted by JEREMY TAYLOR, Ductor Dubitantium. Bk. i, ch. 1, sec. 5. The last phrase, in a slightly different form, "Cum fueris alibi, vivito mori loci" (When you are abroad, live according to the customs of the place), was quoted by the Spanish ambassador as warrant for following Henry VIII's religion while in England.

When thou art at Rome, do after the dome;
And when thou art els wher, do as they do ther.

RICHARD HILLS, Common-place Book (E.E.
T.S.), p. 130. (c. 1530)

According to the saying, when one is at Rome, to live as they doe at Rome.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i,
p. 65. (1574) Pettie, tr.

I'll do as company dooth; for when a man doth to Rome come, he must do as there is done.

HENRY PORTER, The Two Angrie Women of Abington (Percy Soc.), p. 50. (1599)

When thou art at Rome do as thou shalt see.
(Quando a Roma fueris haz como vieres.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 54. (1615)
This is paraphrased by ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy, pt. iii, sec. iv, mem.
2, subs. 1 (1621), "When they are at Rome, they do there as they see done." The French say more briefly, "À Rome comme à Rome"
(At Rome as at Rome).

Her fashions, as those of France now, were as laws to the world, at least at Rome: whence it is proverbial, Cum fueris Romae, Romano vivito more. When thou art at Rome, thou must do as Rome does.

WILLIAM PENN, No Cross, No Crown. Ch. 9.
(1669)

You know the proverb, "They who go to Rome must do as they at Rome do."

ISAAC WALTON, The Compleat Angler (Cotton)
Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1676)

And you at Rome would do as Romans do,
According to the proverb.

LORD BYRON, Beppo. Sec. 9. (1817)

I always do in Rome as Rome does, eat (if I can) whatever is set before me.

W. C. BALDWIN, African Hunting. Ch. 7. (1863)

In Rome, so to speak, I do as the Romans do.

BERNARD SHAW, Major Barbara. Act ii. (1905)
Also Getting Married. (1908) In his New York radio address, 11 July, 1932, Shaw said, "'When in Rome do as the Romans do' is the surest road to success." The phrase is frequently quoted.

2

Follow the customs of the city wherein thou comest.

Babylonian Talmud: Bikkurim, fo. 43a. (c.
450) Other Talmudic proverbs to the same effect are: "Man should never depart from established custom" (Baba Metzia, 86b);
"A man should never exclude himself from the general body" (Berachoth, 49b); "The law of the state is law" (Gittin, 10b).

If you have entered a city, conform to its laws.

Midrash: Genesis Rabbah, xlviii, 14. (c. 550)

Isocrates adviseth Demonicus, "when he came to a strange city, to worship by all means the gods of the place."

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy.
Pt. iii, sec. iv, mem. 1, subs. 5. (1621)

Every man of sense imitates and conforms to that local good-breeding of the place which he is at.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 2 Oct., 1747.

If you see a town worshipping a calf, mow grass and feed him.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 518.
(1938) An Egyptian proverb.

3

When you enter a country, inquire as to what is forbidden; when you cross a boundary, ask about the customs.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B.C.) See HART,
700 Chinese Proverbs. No 187.

A stranger must conform to the city's customs.
(χρή δε ζῆνον μὲν κάρτα προσχωρεῖν πᾶλαι.)

EURIPIDES, Medea, l. 222. (c. 431 B.C.)

We must obey and do as here they do. (δοτοῖς ἴσα χρή μελετᾶν, | εἰκοντας ἃ δεῖ κάκουντας.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus at Colonus, l. 171. (c. 408 B.C.)

It is the rule of rules, the general law of laws, for every man to observe those of the place wherein he lives. (C'est la regle des regles, et generale loy des loix, que chascun observe celle du lieu où il est.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 22. (1580)

1
Obtayne ye mynde of ye fysh called polypus. (Polypi mentem obtine.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 93. (1508)

Taverner, tr. Folio xlix. (1550) Erasmus takes a page and a half, and Taverner, paraphrasing him, takes four pages to explain this proverb, on the basis of the supposed ability of the polypus to change its color to match its environment.

The Chameleon chaungeth him selfe into ye colour and hew of every thing hee doth viewe.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Tereus and Progne, p. 40. (1576)

2
You must howl with the wolves if you wish to run with the pack. (Consonus esto lupis, cum quibus esse cupis.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 61. (1859)

You must rave with the insane, unless you would be left alone. (Necesse est cum insanientibus furere, nisi solus relinquereris.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 250.

If you are with a wolf you must howl like the wolves.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 383. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

3
Thou must at Rome, reuerence Romulus, in Boetia Hercules, in England those that dwell there, els shalt thou not lyue there.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 316. (1580)

4
Wherever you go, talk as the people of the place talk. (Tao na li shuo na li 'hua.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1969. (1875)

5
Act as a Milesian at Miletus. (οἰκοῖ τὰ Μιλήσια.)

ZENOBIUS, Adagia, v, 67. (c. A.D. 130) Quoting an old Greek proverb, noted by ERASMUS, Adagia.

We'll do as they do at Quern,
What we do not to-day,
We must do i' the morn.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 80. (1678)

You must do as they do at Hoo,
What you can't do in one day,
You must do in two.

ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 427. (1830)

ROOM

6
For such a scoffing prelate, hys rowme had bene better then his company.

RICHARD STANYHURST, A Description of Ireland, p. 7/2. (1577)

I had rather haue your roome as your companie.
UNKNOWN, The Marriage of Wit and Wisdom. Sc. 3. (1579)

I had as lief he haue their roome as their companie.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart) ix, 329. (1591)
His roome is better than his company.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart) xi, 255. (1592)
Preferring his room, and declining his company.

THOMAS FULLER, The Cause and Cure of a Wounded Conscience (1841), p. 283. (1646)

I'd rather have your room than your company.

MENNES AND SMITH, Witts Recreations. Epig. 268. (1664) DIBDIN, Jew and Doctor. Act ii, sc. 1. (1798) SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 26. (1822) DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend Bk. i, ch. 6. (1865) etc., etc.

A barely concealed desire for his room rather than his company.

IRINA KARLOVA, Dreadful Hollow, p. 78. (1942)

ROOT

7
For which ful oft a by-word here I seye,
That, "rotelees, troi grene sone deye."

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. iv, l. 769. (c. 1380)
No roote no fruite.

JEREMIAH DYKE, A Worthy Communicant, p. 176. (1640)

8
[They] were beginning now to "root" for him vigorously.

C. M. FLANDRAU, Harvard Episodes, p. 164. (1897)

He had been a Rooter from the days of Underhand Pitching.

GEORGE ADE, Fables in Slang, p. 27. (1899)

He was turned loose to root for himself.

G. H. LORIMER, Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son, p. 110. (1902)

ROOT, HOG, OR DIE, see under HOG.

9
The root of the matter. (Radice[m] verbi.)

Old Testament: Job, xix, 28. (c. 350 B.C.)
The French say, "Couper le mal à sa racine"
(To strike at the root of the evil).

10
A bitter roote is amended with a sweete graft.
JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 237. (1580)

11
The day that cometh shall burn them up, . . . it shall leave them neither root nor branch
(Non derelinquet eis radicem, et germen.)

Old Testament: Malachi, iv, 1. (c. 550 B.C.)
Perished from the root. (Ab stirpe interiit.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 10. (c. 41 B.C.)

12
Thou didst cause it to take deep root. (Plantasti radices eius.)

Old Testament: Psalms, lxxx, 9 (c. 350 B.C.)

The floure, the lefe, ys rent vp by the root.
CHAUCER, The Legend of Good Women, l. 2613.
(c. 1385)

<sup>1</sup>
Rivers have sources, trees have roots. (Shui yu yüan t'ou, mu yu kên.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1. (1875)

ROPE

<sup>2</sup>
To weave a rope of sand. (τὸ ἐκ τῆς ψάμμου σχοινίον πλέκειν.)

ARISTIDES, Apothegm. (c. 475 B.C.) As quoted by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 78, who gives the Latin, "Ex harena funiculum nectis."

They seek to coil ropes of sand.

SAEMUND (?), The Poetic Edda: Hovämol. St. 18. (c. 900)

To knytt a rope of sand.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 778. (c. 1594)

Make a rope of sand; to what end?

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 4, subs. 7. (1621)

Like ropes of sand (as wee are wont to say) doe these things hang together.

THOMAS GATAKER, A Discussion of Transubstantiation, p. 152. (1624)

One shall sooner knit a rope of sand then unite their affections.

THOMAS FORDE, Lusus Fortunae, p. 31. (1649)

For he a rope of sand could twist

As tough as learned Sorbonist.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. i, canto i, l. 157. (1663)

I leave to my children a great chest full of broken promises and cracked oaths; likewise a vast cargo of ropes of sand.

LORD JOHN SOMERS, Somers Tracts, xiii, 144. (1748)

<sup>3</sup>
Loosen every rope. (πάντα δεῖ κάλων ἐξέναι.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Knights, l. 756. (424 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 31, who gives the Latin, "Omnem rudentem movere," and explains that it means doing anything thoroughly. The reference is to the ropes composing the rigging of a boat.

<sup>4</sup>
He used to say, that they were fools, who did not always manage to keep the rope below their shoulders.

GEORGE BORROW, Romany Rye. Ch. 41. (1857)
I feel . . . as if the rope was already round my neck.

BESANT, The Orange Girl. Bk. ii, ch. 9. (1898)

<sup>5</sup>
Let us keep our holiday in peace, and not throw the rope after the bucket. (Tengamos la fiesta en paz, y no arrojemós la sogá tras el caldero.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1615)
The Italians say, "Trar la cavezza dietro all' asino" (To throw the halter after the ass).

According to the Spanish proverb, where goes the bucket, there goes the rope.

FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. ii, ch. 14. (1642)

Throw the Rope in after the Bucket.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5042. (1732)
The Scots say, "Let the tow [rope] gang wi' the packet." To THROW THE HELVE AFTER THE HATCHET, see under HELVE.

<sup>6</sup>
Being run to the end of his Rope, as one that had no more Excuses to make.

SIR JOHN CHARDIN, The Coronation of Solyman the Third, p. 106. (1686)

They have come to the end of their rope: their time is up.

BESANT, The Orange Girl. Bk. ii, ch. 12. (1898)

We have reached the end of our rope.

OGDEN NASH, The Strange Case of Mr. Donnybrook's Boredom. (1940)

I've come, I think, to the end of my rope.

MARGARET CARPENTER, Experiment Perilous, p. 214. (1943)

<sup>7</sup>
The captain, who . . . "knew the ropes," took the steering oar.

R. H. DANA, Two Years Before the Mast. Ch. 9. (1840) The nautical origin of the phrase is evident.

To handle a ship, you must know all the ropes.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 3. (1843)

Anywhere from Tonga to the Admiralty Isles, he knew the ropes.

R. L. STEVENSON, The Wrecker. Ch. 22. (1892)

He knows the ropes: he knows his way about.

SHAW, Fanny's First Play: Induction. (1911)

Jim grinned and withdrew. He knew the ropes.

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 150. (1920)

Knowing the ropes—an expression used by our bell-ringers.

P. W. WILSON, Bride's Castle, p. 76. (1944)
Another explanation of the phrase.

<sup>8</sup>
Upon the High-ropes, Cock-a-hoop.

B.E., A New Dictionary of the Canting Crew: High. (a. 1700)

Hei! day! What in the High-Rope!

THOMAS HEARNE, Remarks and Collections, 24 Feb., 1707.

He was upon the High-Rope, and began to rail at him like mad.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. v, ch. 18. (1708)

All upon the high rope! His uncle is a colonel!

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, She Stoops to Conquer. Act ii. (1773)

She was quite on the high ropes about something.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 31. (1838)

<sup>9</sup>
He is twisting Ocnus' rope. (συνάγει τοῦ "Οκνου τὴν θώμυγα.)

PAUSANIUS, Description of Hellas. Bk. x, ch. 29. sec. 2. (c. A.D. 160) Ocnus was the name of a picture by Polygnotus, in which he depicted a man twisting a rope which a she ass gnaws as fast as he weaves; its proverbial use refers either to wasted labor, or to a wife who spends money as fast as her husband acquires it.

<sup>1</sup>
Go hang yourselves; you shall never want rope enough. (Allez vous pendre, . . . la hart ne vous faudra mie.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, Prologue. (1552) They were suffered to have rope enough, till they had haltered themselves.

FULLER, The Holy War. Bk. v, ch. 7. (1639) Give them line enough, and they will quickly hang themselves

JEREMIAH BURROUGHS, An Exposition of Hosea, iv, 517. (1652)

Let them have rope enough, and do their worst.

ROBERT WILD, Poetica Licentia, p. 28. (1672) Give him rope enough, and he'll hang himself.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 236. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1657. (1732)

BRONTË, Shirley. Ch. 3. (1849) ADAMS, The Private Eye, p. 175. (1942) etc., etc.

Give a thief rope enough, and he'll hang himself.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 136. (1678)

There are many variants.

Let him alone with the saint's bell, and give him rope enough.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 80. (1678)

I thought I had given her rope enough, said Pedley, when he hanged his mare.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 191. (1670)

Give you women but rope enough, you'll do your own business.

RICHARDSON, Sir Charles Grandison, i, 29. (1753)

It is only giving them rope to hang themselves.

LORD LONSDALE, in Croker Papers. Vol. iii, ch. 29, p. 323. (1855)

Only give him a rope and he'll know well how to put it about his neck. (Donnez-le seulement une corde, et il saura bien se la passer au cou.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 382. (1856)

If you give a man enough rope he hangs himself.

GEORGE BAGBY, Red Is for Killing, p. 251. (1941)

Given enough hemp, she might lead them to the men.

HUGHES, The Blackbirder, p. 167. (1943)

<sup>2</sup>
Name not a rope in his house that hang'd himself.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 138. (1670) See under HALTER.

<sup>3</sup>
A rope and butter, if one slip the other may hold.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 267. (1678)

A Rope and Butter; if one slip, t'other will hold.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 384. (1732)

<sup>4</sup>
[They] rightly concluded it was an effort to "rope in."

Unknown, New Orleans Picayune, 18 Sept., 1840, p. 2/2.

"What are you going to do with yourself to-night?" is carelessly asked by the roper-in.

M. H. SMITH, Sunshine and Shadow, p. 406. (1868)

It was a funny story how young Michael Carnarvon got married. . . . [He] was really what you might call roped in.

BURROSS, Find the Woman, p. 76. (1911)

ROSE

<sup>5</sup>
Why anoint my grave with unguents? Why vain anointment give? Better while I live to anoint my forehead. (τί σε δεῖ λίθον, μυρίξιν; | τι δέ γῆ χέειν μάτια; | ἐμὲ μάλλον ὥς ἐτι ζῶ μύρισον.)

ANACREON (?), Odes. Ode xxxii, l. 11. (c. 550 B. C.)

Then wherefore waste the rose's bloom

Upon the cold, insensate tomb? . . .

But now, while every pulse is glowing,

Now let me breathe the balsam flowing.

THOMAS MOORE, Odes of Anacreon. Ode 32. (1806)

Keep not your roses for my dead, cold brow:

The way is lonely, let me feel them now.

ARABELLA EUGENIA SMITH, If I Should Die Tonight. (c. 1890)

Don't strew me with roses after I'm dead.

You may give me my roses now!

T. F. HEALEY, Give Me My Roses Now. (c. 1925)

A rose to the living is more

Than sumptuous wreaths to the dead.

NIXON WATERMAN, A Rose to the Living. (1930)

If it's all the same to you, just give to me, instead The bouquets while I'm living and the knocking when I'm dead.

LOUIS EDWIN THAYER, Of Post-Mortem Praises. (1935)

<sup>6</sup>
The sayde questyons were asked with lysence. and that yt should remayn under the rosse [sub rosa], that is to say, to remayn under the bourde, and no more to be rehersyd.

SIR ROBERT DYMOKE, Letter to Stephen Vaughan. (1546) See State Papers: Henry VIII, ii, 200.

The Rose is the flower of Venus, and in order that his deeds may be hidden, Love dedicated this gift of his mother to Harpocrates, the God of Silence. Hence the host hangs the Rose over his friendly tables, in order that his guests may know that what is said beneath it will be regarded as secret.

(Est Rosa flos Veneris, cuius quo facta laterent Harpocrati matris, dona dicavit Amor; Inde Rosam mensis hospes suspendit Amicis, Convivae ut sub ea dicta tacenda sciant.)

UNKNOWN, Rosa Flos Veneris. (a. 1600) As quoted by SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epidemica. Bk. v, ch. 22, sec. 7.

When we desire to confine our words, we commonly say they are spoken under the rose.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Pseudodoxia Epidemica Bk. v, ch. 22, sec. 7. (1646)

What ever thou and the foul pusse did doe (syt Rosa as they say).

EDMUND GAYTON, Don Quixot, iii, v. (1654)

But when we with caution a secret Disclose, We cry "Be it spoken (Sir) under the Rose."

The British Apollo. No. 112, p. 3. (1708)

<sup>7</sup>
Each Morn a thousand Roses brings, you say; Yes, but where blows the Rose of Yesterday?

EDWARD FITZGERALD, tr., The Rubáiyát. St. 9 (1859)

<sup>1</sup> The desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose. (Exultabit solitudo, et florebit quasi lilium.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxxv, 1. (c. 725 B.C.)

<sup>2</sup> A Rose is sweeter in the budde, then full blowne.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 314. (1580)

<sup>3</sup> I am the rose of Sharon, and the lily of the valleys. (Ego flos campi, et lilium convallium.)

Old Testament: Song of Solomon, ii, 1. (c. 900 B.C.)

<sup>4</sup> The rose is fair, but Time withers it. (καὶ τὸ ῥόδον καλὸν ἔστι, καὶ ὁ χρόνος αὐτὸ μαρμαίρει.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. xxiii, l. 29. (c. 270 B.C.)
One day causes it to open, one day ends its life. (Una dies aperit, conficit una dies.)

AUSONIUS, Epigram. (c. A.D. 370)

The fairest and the sweetest rose
In time must fade and beauty lose.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 105. (1591)

The fairest rose in three days is withered.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 333. (1605)

The fairest rose at last is withered.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 138. (1670)

'Tis the last rose of summer Left blooming alone.

THOMAS MOORE, The Last Rose of Summer. (a. 1852)

Today red, tomorrow dead. (Heden rood, morgen dood.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 297. (1856)

This is the joy of the rose:

That it blows, and goes.

WILLA SIBERT CAHIER, In Rose-Time. (1903)

Gone with last year's rose.

THURBER AND NUGENT, The Male Animal. Act ii. (1940) GATHER YE ROSEBUDS, see TIME.

<sup>5</sup> If you desire to be kept lyke the Roses when they haue lost their coulour, smel sweete as the Rose doth in budde.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 55. (1579)
He's mighty lak' a rose.

F. L. STANTON, Mighty Lak' a Rose. (c. 1900)

A rose is a rose is a rose is a rose.

GERTRUDE STEIN, Geography and Plays: Sacred Emily. (1922) See also The Autobiography of Alice B. Toklas, p. 169. (1933)

Like the rose, Mighty like the rose, A rose is a rose is an onion.

ERNEST HEMINGWAY, For Whom the Bell Tolls, p. 289. (1940)

II—Rose and Thorn

See also Compensation

<sup>6</sup> There is no gathering the rose without being pricked by the thorns.

BIDPAI, Fables: The Two Travellers. (c. 300 B.C.)
He that plants thorns must never expect to gather roses.

BIDPAI, Fables: Ignorant Physician. (c. 300 B.C.)

The thorns which I have reap'd are of the tree I planted.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto iv, st. 10. (1812)

<sup>7</sup> If folks will let the roses alone, the thorns will let them be.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 17. (1843)

The rose has thorns only for those who would pluck it.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 375. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>8</sup> I toke hir for a rose, but she breedth a burre.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
The rose proveth the thorn.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 41. (1633)

She may prove a wolf in lambs skinn, instead of a rose you will have a burr.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, ii, 665. (1659)

For the rose the thorn is often plucked.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 155. (1813)

<sup>9</sup> I can better take a blister of a Nettle, then a prick of a Rose.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 323. (1580)

Better be stung by a Nettle, than prick'd by a Rose.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 878. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> Flowers of all hue, and without Thorn the Rose.

MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. iv, l. 256. (1667)

<sup>11</sup> When the rose perishes, the hard thorn is left behind. (Riget amissa spina relicta rosa.)

OVID, Artis Amatoria. Bk. ii, l. 116. (c. 1 B.C.)

Would that the thorns did not outlive the rose

J. P. RICHTER, Titan. Zykel 105. (1800)

<sup>12</sup> Often is the nettle nearest to the rose. (Urticae proxima saepe rosa est.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 46. (c. 1 B.C.)

As from most sharpe thornes, to wit the Rose tree, spring most sweete flowers, so from bitter annoy would come pleasaunt joy.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 91. (1576)

Among the thorns the rose is born. (Inter vepres rosa nascitur.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 161. (1778)

A rose issues from thorns.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 763. (1817)

A good son from worthless parents.

<sup>13</sup> Pleasant even the thorn by which one sees a rose. (Spina etiam grata est ex qua spectatur rosa.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 668. (c. 43 B.C.)

You git a thorn with every rose,

But ain't the roses sweet!

FRANK L. STANTON, This World. (c. 1900)

<sup>14</sup> He repents in thorns, that sleeps in beds of roses.

QUARLES, Emblemes. Bk. i, emb. 7. (1635)

<sup>1</sup>
If you lie upon Roses, when young, you'll lie upon Thorns, when old.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2764. (1732)
It were pleasant to dwell with the rose, were it not for the thorn.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. v, Apologue 9. (c. 1258)

<sup>2</sup>
Wherever there is a rose there is a thorn.
SADI, Gulistan. Ch. vii, Apologue 19. (c. 1258)
Ther is no rose . . . but ther be some thorn.

LYDGATE, Fall of Princes, i, 57. (c. 1430)
God hath given us Roses beset with thornes, the sweete with the sower.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i,
l. 29. (1574) Pettie, tr.

The sweetest rose hath a prickle.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 33. (1579)

No good without pains; no roses without prickles.

JOHN FLORIO, tr., Montaigne. Bk. iii, ch. 3.
(1603) COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Rose. (1611)
Ne'er the rose without the thorn.

ROBERT HERRICK, The Rose. (1647)

No rose without a thorn.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 138. (1670) A proverb in many languages. The French say,
"Il n'y a pas de rose sans épine"; the Germans, "Keine Rosen ohne Dornen"; the Italians, "Non v'è rosa senza spina."

We have no rose without its thorn; no pleasure without alloy.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Mrs. Cosway.
(1786)

The rose has its thorn, the peach its worm.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws.
Ch. 26. (1843)

<sup>3</sup>
To gather life's roses, unscathed by the briar.
WALTER SCOTT, Ivanhoe. Ch. 18. (1819)

<sup>4</sup>
Roses grow not on the squill. (οὔτε γὰρ ἐκ σκίλλης ῥόδα φύεται.)

THEOGNIS, Elegies, l. 537. (c. 600 B. C.)

ROUGH

<sup>5</sup>
If you don't like me rough, as I run, fare you well, madam.

THOMAS BROWN. In DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM,
Works (1705), ii, 129. (1687)

Take me just as I am, good, or bad, or indifferent; or (as Sir Francis Dashwood said of the Cyder Bill) rough as I run.

JAMES BOSWELL, Letter to Lord Hailes, 16
July, 1763.

Rough as it runs, as the boy said when his ass kicked him.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 231. (1813)

<sup>6</sup>
I von't pay and cut up rough.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 43. (1837)

Don't cut up rough about it.

WILLIAM BLACK, A Princess of Thule. Ch. 7.
(1873)

<sup>7</sup>
A rustic roughness, awkward and loutish. (Asperitas agrestis, et inconcinna gravisque.)

MORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 6. (20 B. C.)

But bye and rade the Black Douglas,
And wow but he was rough!

UNKNOWN, Douglas Tragedy. St. 20. (c. 1400)

This is some fellow . . . doth affect

A saucy roughness.

SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, ii, 2, 101. (1605)

Rough! a porcupine's a featherbed to him.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 10. (1839)

<sup>8</sup>
A more rough and ready state of things . . .
than we had before been accustomed to.

F. J. JACKSON, in JACKSON, Diaries and Letters, i, 120. (1810)

Old Rough and Ready.

UNKNOWN. Nickname of General Zachary
Taylor. (c. 1846)

A sober rough-and-ready "Totty."

E. E. NAPIER, Excursions in South Africa, i, 163.
(1849)

You, for example, clever to a fault,
The rough and ready man, who write apace.

BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology. (1855)

The rough and ready style of . . . sailors.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Power. (1860)

Glory was the girl for him, rough and ready.

BARING-GOULD, Mehalah. Vol. i, ch. 5. (1880)

<sup>9</sup>
Rough-and-tumble fights in which they were often engaged.

J. P. KENNEDY, Swallow Barn. Ch. 15. (1832)
The victories of rough-and-tumble gentlemen.

B. D. WALSH, tr., Aristophanes, p. 157. (1848)
A rough and tumble fight is said to be one in which all the laws of the ring are discarded.

JOHN BARTLETT, Americanisms, p. 371. (1859)
That circle of rough-and-tumble political life where the fine-fibred men are at a discount.

O. W. HOLMES, *The Poet at the Breakfast-
Table*. Ch. 10. (1872)

Then up steps Pete McCracken and said that he would fight

Stand up or rough and tumble if McCloskey didn't bite.

J. W. KELLY, Throw Him Down McCloskey.
(1890)

<sup>10</sup>
The rough ways shall be made smooth. (αἱ τραπεῖαι εἰς ὁδοὺς λείας.)

New Testament: Luke, iii, 5. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Aspera in vias planas."

<sup>11</sup>
As rugh [rough] as a brere [briar].

UNKNOWN. Towneley Plays, p. 119. (c. 1410)

Rowhe as beeres [rough as bears].

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Myrrour of the World, ii, viii, 83. (1481)

Rough as the bark of a tree.

JOAQUIN MILLER, The Danites. Act ii. (1877)

As rough as gorse.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 19. (1917)

<sup>12</sup>
Take your part as it comyth, of roughe and eke of smooth.

UNKNOWN, Tale of Beryn, p. 37. (c. 1400)

To take the rough and smooth together is a test of magnanimity.

R. D. BLACKMORE, Christowell. Ch. 16. (1882)

She has to take the rough with the smooth.

SHAW, Mrs. Warren's Profession. Act ii. (1893)
One must take a little rough with one's smooth.

JEROME, Three Men on Bummel, p. 190. (1900)
You have to take the rough with the smooth.

SOMERSET MAUGHAM, Theatre. Ch. 4. (1937)
The French say, "Il faut prendre le bénéfice avec les charges."

ROW

1
I never opposed Andrew Jackson for the sake of popularity. I knew it was a hard row to hoe; but I stood up to the rack.

DAVID CROCKETT, Tour to the North and Down East, p. 69. (1835)

I have a new row to hoe, a long and a rough one.

DAVID CROCKETT, Exploits and Adventures in Texas, p. 28. (1836)

Always remember, wherever you go,
The wisdom of practicing, "Hoe your own row."

ALICE CARY, Old Maxims. (1849)

I can't hoe my row at all with you.

J. G. HOLLAND, Miss Gilbert's Career, p. 455. (1860)

We've gut an awful row to hoe

In this 'ere job o' reconstruction.

LOWELL, Biglow Papers, ii, xi, 244. (1866)

Step-mothers have a pretty hard row to hoe.

MARIETTA HOLLEY, My Opinions and Betsy Bobbet's, p. 21. (1873)

I've had a pretty tough row to hoe.

HAMBLÉN, Tom Benton's Luck, p. 104. (1898)

2
It's my opinion he's at the end o' his row.

W. N. HARBEN, The Georgians, p. 2. (1904)

RUB

3
When it comes to rubbin' it in, I always . . . r'ars up.

T. A. BURKE, Polly Peaseblossom's Wedding, p. 146. (1851)

Wasn't that rubbing it in?

GELETT BURGESS, Find the Woman, p. 63. (1911)

4
Some small rubs . . . have been cast in my way.

THOMAS NASHE, Pasquil's Apology. (1590) A difficulty, an obstacle. In bowls, a "rub" is an accidental interference with the course of the ball.

Every rub is smoothed on our way.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 2, 188. (1599)

To sleep: perchance to dream: ay, there's the rub.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iii, 1, 65. (1600)

Her Relations are not Intimates with mine. Ah! there's the Rub.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 533. (1712)

Here lies the rub.

WALTER SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 34. (1821)

Expense! . . . Ay! there's the rub.

LORD LYTTON, Paul Clifford. Ch. 20. (1830)

5
[He] got rubbed out by the Spaniards.

G. F. RUXTON, Life in the Far West. Ch. 1. (1848)

If they discover you first they will rub you all out.

J. P. BECKWOURTH, Life and Adventures, p. 62. (1856)

RUBICON

6
When he came to the river which separates Cisalpine Gaul from the rest of Italy (it is called the Rubicon), and began to reflect, . . . he [Caesar] communed with himself for a long time in silence. . . . But finally, with a sort of passion, . . . uttering the phrase with which men usually prelude their plunge into desperate and daring fortunes, "Let the die be cast," he hastened to cross the river.

PLUTARCH, Lives: Julius Caesar. Ch. 32, sec. 4.

(c. A. D. 110) The Rubicon has been identified as a brook now called the Fluminico (Little River), and in 1934 Mussolini caused a monument to be erected on its bank, near the village of Savignano, to mark the supposed spot where Caesar crossed it. LET THE DIE BE CAST, see under DIE.

Now he is past the Rubicon.

JOSEPH MEAD, in BIRCH, Court and Times of Charles I, i, 180. (1626)

The die being cast and Rubicon crossed.

JOHN OWEN, Salus Electorum. (1643)

We are already past the Rubicon.

DRYDEN, Conquest of Granada. Act i, sc. 3. (1672)

I answered that . . . I had passed the Rubicon.

JOHN ADAMS, Conversation, with Jonathan Sewall. (1774) Works, iv, 8.

[Bonaparte] would . . . like Caesar, have crossed the Rubicon at the head of the popular party.

WALTER SCOTT, Napoleon, iv, 21. (1827)

I began to feel that the Rubicon was passed.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Jane Eyre. Ch. 7. (1847)

To cross the Rubicon. To take an irrevocable step, make an irrevocable decision and act on it.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

RUDDER

7
Still let me hold the rudder true. (Dum clavum rectum teneam.)

ENNIUS, Annales. Frag. 538, Loeb. (c. 180 B. C.)

Quoted by QUINTILIAN, ii, xvii, 25.

The pilot who has been able to say, "Neptune, you shall never sink this ship except on an even keel," has fulfilled the requirements of his art. (Neptune, numquam hanc navem nisi rectam.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxxv, sec. 33. (c. A. D. 64)

O God, you will save me if you wish; if you wish, you will lose me; yet will I always keep my rudder true. (O dieu, tu me sauveras, si tu veux; si tu veux, tu me perdras: mais si tiendray je tousjours droit mon timon.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 16. (1580) Quoting Seneca's pilot.

So long as the helm of state is entrusted to his hands we are sure that, should the storm come, he will say with Seneca's Pilot, "O Neptune! you may save me if you will; you may sink me if you will; but whatever happens I shall keep my rudder true."

JAMES RUSSELL LOWELL, Address, at celebration of 250th anniversary of Harvard College, 1886.

<sup>1</sup> That ship which will not have a rudder, must have a rock.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 286. (1666)
He who will not be ruled by the rudder, must be ruled by the rock.

ISAAC D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: The Philosophy of Proverbs. (1823) TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 3. (1853) WILBERFORCE, The Secret of a Quiet Mind, p. 79. (1911) A Cornish proverb, of which there is a variant, "The vessel that will not obey her rudder will have to obey the rocks."

RUDENESS

<sup>2</sup> Though I be rude in speech. (et δὲ καὶ ἰδιώτης τῷ λόγῳ.)

New Testament: II Corinthians, xi, 6. (A. D. 57)
Vulgate: "Nam etsi imperitus sermone."

Rude am I in my speech.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 81. (1605)

Rude and scant of courtesy.

WALTER SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto v, st. 28. (1805)

<sup>3</sup> This rudeness is a sauce to his good wit,
Which gives men stomach to digest his words
With better appetite.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, i, 2, 304. (1599)
Rudeness is better than any argument; it totally eclipses intellect.

ARTHUR SCHOPENHAUER, Position. (1851)

RUE

<sup>4</sup> Rue and thyme grow both in a garden. A persuasion to repent, alluding to the sound of the two herbs.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 283. (1721)
I wish it may last; but "rue and thyme grow baith in ae garden."

SUSAN FERRIER, The Inheritance. Vol. iii, ch. 6. (1824)

<sup>5</sup> Rue in Thyme should be a Maiden's Posie.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 284. (1721)

<sup>6</sup> Rue, sour herb of grace: Rue, even for ruth.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard II, iii, 4, 105. (1595)

You must wear your rue with a difference.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 5, 183. (1600)

He'll have to wear his rue with a difference.

A. R. HILLIARD, Justice Be Damned, p. 3. (1941)

<sup>7</sup> I've ta'en the rue, My mind is fairly alter'd.

UNKNOWN, The Shepherd's Wedding. (1789)
I've repented.

[He] took the rue, and tauld me a' about it.

SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 28. (1816)

RUIN

<sup>8</sup> The oyster-net of ruin. (γάγγαμον ἄτης.)

ÆSCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 361. (458 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> No man is demolished but by himself.

THOMAS BENTLEY, Letter to Mr. Pope, 1735.

All men that are ruined are ruined on the side of their natural propensities.

EDMUND BURKE, Letters on a Regicide Peace.

Let. 1. (1797) There is a Gaelic proverb, "Going to ruin is silent work," and still another, "The road to ruin is in good repair; the travellers pay the expense of it."

<sup>10</sup> Rejoicing that he has made his way by ruin. (Gaudensque viam fecisse ruina.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 150. (c. A. D. 60)

Referring to Julius Caesar.

<sup>11</sup> Everything has gone to ruin. All is over. (πάντα πράγματα ἀνατέρανται, τέλος ἔχει.)

MENANDER, Girl from Samos, l. 346. (c. 300 B. C.)

Within and without the walls of Troy all goes wrong. (Iliacos intra muros peccatur et extra.)

HORACE, Epistles, i, ii, 16. (20 B. C.)

<sup>12</sup> Not quickly will ruin overwhelm him who fears a crack. (Non cito ruina obteritur qui rimam timet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 425. (c. 43 B. C.)

<sup>13</sup> It's all up, all over, you're done for. (Actumst, ilicet, peristi.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 54. (161 B. C.)

But the following year struck her smiling career
With a dull and a sickening thud!

GUY WETMORE CARRYL, Red Riding Hood. (1902)

<sup>14</sup> We should have been ruined but for our ruin. (ἀπωλόμεθα ἂν, εἰ μὴ ἀπωλόμεθα.)

THEMISTOCLES, to his children, when, after having been exiled, he was entertained splendidly by Artaxerxes. (464 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Themistocles. Ch. 29, sec. 7.

RULE

I—Rule: Govern

<sup>15</sup> Men are marked out from the moment of birth to rule or be ruled. (ἐπὶ τὸ ἀρχεσθαι τὰ δ' ἐπὶ τὸ ἀρχειν.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. i, ch. 2, sec. 8. (c. 330 B. C.)

One who wields the reins and one who is mounted. (καὶ ἡνιοχὸν καὶ ἀναβάτην.)

PHILO, De Agricultura. Sec. 74. (c. A. D. 40)

Jupiter has set two tables in the world: the skilful, the vigilant and the strong are seated at the first; the humble eat their leavings at the second. (Jupin pour chaque état mit deux tables au monde: L'adroit, le vigilant, et le fort, sont assis à la première; et les petits Mange leur reste à la seconde.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. x, fab. 7. (1678)

I never could believe that Providence had sent a few men into the world, ready booted and spurred to ride, and millions ready saddled and bridled to be ridden.

RICHARD RUMBOLD, on the scaffold. (1685) See MACAULAY, Hist. of England. Vol. i, ch. 5. The mass of mankind has not been born with saddles on their backs, nor a favored few booted and spurred, ready to ride them legitimately, by the grace of God.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to R. C. Weightman. (1826)

Some are born to be bullied and chidden, Born to be bridled, born to be ridden, Born to be harried or whipped or hidden, Others born booted and spurred to ride.

VACHEL LINDSAY, Old Old Old Andrew Jackson. (1917)

1 No man has any right to rule who is not better than the people over whom he rules. (ἀρχεῖν δὲ μὴδὲν προσήκειν, ὅς οὐ κρείττων ἐστὶ τῶν ἀρχομένων.)

CYRUS, THE ELDER, founder of the Persian empire. (c. 529 B.C.) PLUTARCH, Moralia; Sayings of Kings, Sec. 172E. See also XENOPHON, Cyropaedia, I, 6, 8, and vii, 5, 83.

2 Resolv'd to ruine or to Rule the State.

JOHN DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 174. (1681)

3 I desire neither to rule nor to be ruled. (οὔτε γὰρ ἀρχεῖν οὔτε ἀρχεσθαι ἐθέλω.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. iii, ch. 83. (c. 445 B.C.) Better to rule, than be ruled by the rout.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 5. (1546) CAMDEN, Remains, p. 320. (1605) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1670)

4 He lacked nothing to rule but the kingdom. (Nihil illi deerat ad regnandum praeter regnum.)

MACHIAVELLI, Il Principe. Ch. 6. (1513) Quoting a Latin saying referring to Hiero of Syracuse.

5 A cruel rule is always more bitter than lasting. (Imperia crudelia magis acerba quam diuturna.)

SALLUST, Ad Caesarem Senem. Ch.3. (c. 46 B.C.) Unjust rule never endures perpetually. (Iniqua numquam regna perpetuo manent.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 196. (c. A.D. 60) No one has long maintained violent government; temperate rule endures. (Violenta nemo imperia continuit diu; | moderata durant.)

SENECA, Troades, l. 259. (c. A.D. 60)

TO RULE WITH A ROD OF IRON, see under ROD. He who fears hatred overmuch, knows not how to rule. (Odia qui nimium timet | regnare nescit.)

SENECA, Oedipus, l. 703. (c. A.D. 60) He who doesn't know how to be patient, doesn't know how to rule. (Quien no sabe sufrir, no sabe regir.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 281. (1856)

6 Who rules his household worthily, will prove worthy also in affairs of state. (οἰκείουσιν ὅστις ἐστ' ἀνὴρ | χρηστός, φανείται καὶ πόλει δίκαιος ὢν.)

SOPHOCLES, Antigone, l. 661. (c. 441 B.C.)

How can one rule the State if unable to rule one's family. (Chih chia pu neng yen neng chih ku.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 190. (1872) It is easier to rule a kingdom than a family.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, 387. (1875)

7 Ill can he rule the great that cannot reach the small.

SPENSER, The Faerie Queene, v, ii, 43. (1596)

8 The desire to rule is more vehement than all the passions. (Cupido dominandi cunctis adfectibus flagrantior est.)

TACITUS, Annals. Bk. xv, sec. 53. (c. A.D. 116)

9 What so euer ye brage ore boste, My mayster yet shall reule the roste.

UNKNOWN, The Debate of the Carpenter's Tools, l. 175. (c. 1400) In HAZLITT, Early Popular Poetry of England, iv, 85.

In fayth, I rule moche of the rost.

JOHN SKELTON, Magnyfycence, l. 803. (1526)

He ruleth all the roste

With bragging and with boste.

SKELTON, Why Come Ye Not to Court, l. 200.

She doth rule the roast, she wears the keys.

WILLIAM BULLEIN, A Dialogue Against the Fever Pestilence. (1564)

Suffolk, the new-made duke that rules the roast

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, i, 1, 110. (1590)

I am my ladies cooke, and king of the kitchen, where I rule the roast.

THOMAS NABBES, Microcosmus. Act iii. (1637)

Rule the Rump, you rule the Roast.

SWIFT, Answer to Delany, l. 32. (1730)

The ladies always rule the roast in this part of the world.

SAMUEL FOOTE, Trip to Calais. Act ii. (1778) She rules the roast.

ELIZABETH DALY, Deadly Nightshade, p. 49. (1940) The modern perversion.

10 From east to west and from north to south there is no one who does not submit to rule.

UNKNOWN, Shiking (Book of Songs) (c. 600 B.C.) CH'EN, Book of Filial Duty, p. 30

HE WHO IS UNABLE TO RULE HIMSELF IS UNFIT TO RULE OTHERS, see under SELF-CONTROL.

II—Rule: Principle of Conduct

11 A critter who is a slave to his own rules is his own nigger.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 21. (1843)

12 It's a bad bargain that can't run both ways. O. HENRY, The Whirligig of Life. (1910) "It's a poor rule that won't work both ways."

1
A general concourse of wise men! . . . if the general rule have no exceptions, thou wilt have an empty consistory.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Rape of Lucrece. Act i, sc. 2. (1608)

There is no rule without an exception.

THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 18. (1620) STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. ix, ch. 13. (1760)

No rule is so general, which admits not some exception.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. 11, subs. 3. (1621)

The exception proves the rule.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats: To the Reader. (1664)

You will recollect that "exceptions only prove the rule."

LORD BYRON, Letters, i, 204. (1808)

The exception proves the rule . . . has often been greatly abused. . . . The exception in most cases merely proves the rule to be a bad one.

HARE, Guesses at Truth, ii, 510. (1848)
Exceptio probat regulum . . . means, "The exception tests the rule."

W. W. SKEAT, A Student's Pastime, p. 78. (1896) Students of the Bible are familiar with the use of "proof" in the sense of "test," and it is preserved in another proverb, "The proof of the pudding is in the eating." So this proverb does not mean, as it is now generally used, that the exception supports or demonstrates the rule, but that it tests it.

An exception disproves the rule.

CONAN DOYLE, The Sign of the Four. Ch. 2. (1890)

2
What he doth, he doth by rule of Thumb, and not by art.

SIR WILLIAM HOPE, The Compleat Fencing-Master, p. 157. (1692)

No rule so good as rule of thumb, if it hit.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 257. (1721)

3
Rules and precepts are of no value without natural capacity. (Nihil praecepta atque artes valere nisi adiuvante natura.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae: Praefatio. Sec. 26. (c. A. D. 80)

4
My road shall be straight by the rule. (εἰς παρά σάμην ὁρθὴν ἔδω.)

THEOGNIS, Elegies, l. 945. (c. 550 B. C.)

I have not kept my square; but that to come Shall all be done by the rule.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 3, 6. (1606)

5
When I read some of the rules for speaking and writing the English language correctly . . . I think

Any fool can make a rule,

And every fool will mind it.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 3 Feb., 1860.

By line and rule works many a fool.

G. F. NORTHALL, Folk Rhymes, p. 547. (1892)

6
Folu the reul of right.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 17454. (a. 1300)

The king shall gouern after ye rule of righteousness.

MILES COVERDALE, tr., Old Testament: Isayah, xxxii, 1. (1535)

No rule of reason, . . . Did enter in his minde.

SPENSER, Mother Hubberds Tale, l. 1131. (1591)

Against the strict Rules of Decency.

SWIFT, Gulliver's Travels, i, 1. (1726)

A scrupulous observance of certain rules of decorum.

UNKNOWN, The Mirror. No. 79. (1780)

I had no rule of morality.

CHARLES KINGSLEY, Letters, i, 49. (1840)

[She] was strict in adherence to her own rules of propriety.

GEORGE ELIOT, Adam Bede. Ch. 20. (1859)

III—The Golden Rule

7
Steer that we may carry the bad man over, for we will not do as he has done.

AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. v, l. 1. (c. 700 B. C.) Griffith, tr.

According as I did to you, so also to me.

ΑΗΙΚΑΡ, Teachings. Col. iv, l. 52. (c. 550 B. C.)

We should behave to friends as we would wish them to behave to us. (ὡς ἂν εὖζαίμεθα αὐτοὺς ἡμῖν προσφέρεσθαι.)

ARISTOTLE, Maxim. (c. 340 B. C.) See DIOGENES

LAERTIUS, Aristotle. Bk. v, sec. 21.

As ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise. (καθὼς θέλετε ἵνα ποιῶσιν ὑμῖν οἱ ἄνθρωποι, ποιεῖτε αὐτοῖς ὁμοίως.)

New Testament: Luke, vi, 31. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Prout vultis ut faciant vobis homines, et vos facite illis similiter."

Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 12. (c. A. D. 65)

The "law" (Torah), that is the Pentateuch, the first five books of the Bible; the prophets, the eight prophetic books, beginning with Joshua.

As you wish to be treated, see that you treat another. What you do not like yourself, do not do to another. (Quod tibi vis fieri, hoc alii praestare memento. Quod tibi non optes, alii ne feceris ulli.)

COLUMBANUS, Carmen Monostichon, l. 24. (c. A. D. 600)

Treat others as thou wouldst be treated; dispense not to others what thou likest not for thyself.

ABDULLAH ANSARI, The Knower and the Known. (c. 1075)

Do to other as thou woldest they shuld do to the, and do to noon other but as thou woldest de doon to.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 52. (1477) Quoting Socrates.

Do to others as thou wouldst have them do to thee.

WILLIAM PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 241. (1693)

Be you to others kind and true,
As you'd have others be to you;
And neither do nor say to men
Whate'er you would not take again.

ISAAC WATTS, Divine Songs for Children: Our Saviour's Golden Rule. (1715)

You know, my child, the Bible says
That you must always do
To other people, as you wish
To have them do to you.

UNKNOWN, The Child's Inquiry. In McGuffey's Third Reader, p. 70. (1837)

1
Men are used as they use others.

ΒΙΔΠΑΙ, Fables: The King Who Became Just. (c. 300 B.C.)

Expect to be treated by others as you treat others.
(Ab alio expectes alteri quod feceris.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 2. (c. 43 B.C.)
Do good unto others, as God has done good unto thee.

MOHAMMED, The Koran. Ch. 28, p. 296. (c. 622) Quoted by SADI, Gulistan, viii, 2.

Accept for thyself what thou wouldst accept for others.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. iv, Apologue 10. (c. 1257)

Bear with them that beare with you.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1546)
As the saying is, Hee that doeth not as hee oughte, muste not looke to bee done to as hee woulde.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, iii, 26. (1574)

What I do not wish others to do unto me, that also I wish not to do unto them. (Gno put yok yun chee ka chee gno, oong yek yok moo ka chee yun.)

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. v, ch. 11. (c. 500 B.C.)
Legge, tr. This is noted as having been said by Tzū-Kung, one of Confucius's disciples, and the Master retorts: "Tzū, you have not attained to that" (Tzū, fee gnee so kyup).

Do not to others what you would not like done to yourself.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xii, ch. 2. (c. 500 B.C.)
Legge, tr. This is perhaps the earliest formulation of the Golden Rule, and it will be noted that in both cases it is stated negatively. Giles translates it, "What you would not wish done to yourself, do not unto others." Tse-tzū quotes it in The Doctrine of the Mean, xiii, 3. (c. 450 B.C.)

"Is there any one word" asked Tzū-Kung, "which could be adopted as a lifelong rule of conduct?"
The Master replied, "Is not kindness the word?
Do not to others what you do not want done to yourself."

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xv, ch. 23. (c. 500
B.C.) Legge translates shu "reciprocity"; Giles translates it "charity," saying that it is almost equivalent to jên, goodness of heart, but with the idea of altruism more explicitly brought out.

2
This is the sum of all true righteousness: deal with others as thou wouldst thyself be dealt by. Do nought to others which, if done to thee, would cause thee pain.

Mahabharata, v, 39, 72. (c. 200 B.C.) The Golden Rule of Hinduism. Jainism, a heterodox Hindu religion, puts it, "A man should treat all living creatures as he himself would be treated." See Sutra-Kritanga Sutra, i, xi, 33.

Do that to no man which thou hatest. (Quod ab alio oderis fieri tibi, vide ne tu aliquando alteri facias.)

APOCRYPHA: Tobit, iv, 15. (c. 200 B.C.) Here the statement is also in the negative.

Whatsoever is hateful unto thee, do it not unto thy neighbor. This is the whole of the Torah, the rest is but commentary.

RABBI HILLEL. (c. 90 B.C.) The first Rabbinic enunciation of the Golden Rule, derived from Tobit, and also in the negative. The attribution to Hillel has never been verified, but the story is that one day a would-be proselyte demanded that he be taught the whole of the law while he stood on one foot, and that Hillel formulated it as given above.
It has also been attributed to Rabbi Akiba.
See Jewish Encyclopedia, iii, 399.

There are two ways, one of life and one of death, and wide is the difference between. The way of life is this: First, thou shalt love thy Maker [after Deut., vi, 5]; second, thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself [after Lev., xix, 18] Now the teaching of these two words is this: "Whatsoever thou wouldst not have done unto thee, neither do thou to another."

UNKNOWN, The Didache, or Teaching of the Twelve Apostles, i, 1-2. (c. 200)

What is hateful to thyself, do not to thy fellow man.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 31a. (c.
450) The Talmudic formulation, derived from Tillel.

What you do not wish done to yourself, do not to another. (Quod tibi fieri non vis, alteri ne facias.)

LAMPRIIDIUS, Augusta Historia: Alexander Severus. (C. A. D. 310) An early Latin formulation in the negative.

Let me not do unto any that which at the same time I would not have done to me. (Non faciam cuiquam, quae tempore eodem | nolim facta mihi.)

AUSONIUS, Ephemeris. Pt. iii, l. 61. (C. A. D. 370)
Do not to others what would be disagreeable to yourself.

UNKNOWN, Hitopadesa. (c. 1250) Dubois, tr.
Christ left in his preceptes, Do not to others,
that thou wilt not haue done to thee selfe.

JOHN FLORIO, Firle Fruites, fo. 28. (1578)
This is the law of the universe: If you wish that others should spare you, spare others. (Telle est la loi de l'univers: Si tu veux qu'on t'épargne, épargne aussi les autres.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 15. (1658)
The Japanese say, "Pinch yourself and know how others feel."

No man doth think others will be better to him than he is to them.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Moral Aphorisms.
(1753)

Bear and you shall be borne with. (Ferto fereris.)
HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 124. (1869)

<sup>1</sup> 'Do other men, for they would do you.' That's the true business precept. All others are counterfeits.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 11. (1843)
Jonas speaking.

Do unto the other feller the way he'd like to do unto you, an' do it fust.

EDWARD N. WESTCOTT, David Harum. (1898)
Fais aux autres ce que t'u ne veux pas qu'ils te fassent! [Do to others that which you do not wish them to do to you.]

JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 142. (1920)

<sup>2</sup> Say not, I will do so to him as he hath done to me. (Ne dicas, Quomodo fecit mihi, sic faciam ei.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxiv, 29. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> The rule of proportion which, for excellency, is called the Golden Rule.

ROBERT RECORDE, The Grounde of Artes, p. 240. (1540) The earliest known use of the words, "Golden Rule," referring, however, to mathematics, not to the verses from Luke and Matthew.

The rule of three, or golden rule, as it is called in sacred algebray.

DANIEL FEATLEY, Clavis Mystica, p. 279. (1636)
The Golden Law, "do as ye would be done by."

ROBERT GODFREY, Various Injuries and Abuses in Chymical Physick. (1674)

Thence arises the Golden Rule of dealing with others as we would have others deal with us

ISAAC WATTS, Logick. (1725)

Such is that golden principle of morality which our blessed Lord has given us.

ISAAC WATTS, Improvement of the Mind. (1741)

In our dealings with each other we should be guided by the Golden Rule.

HOWELLS, Rise of Silas Lapham. Vol. ii, p. 26. (1885)

The golden rule is that there are no golden rules.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

I believe that the true Golden Rule is minding your own business in all circumstances.

HELEN MCCLOY, Do Not Disturb, p. 174. (1943)

<sup>4</sup> Treat your inferiors as you would be treated by your betters. (Sic cum inferiore vivas, quemadmodum tecum superiorem velis vivere.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xlvii, sec. 11. (c. A. D. 64)

In your dealings with others, harm not that you be not harmed. (Alterum intueri, ne laedaris, alterum ne laedas.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. ciii, sec. 3.

<sup>5</sup> Do not do unto others as you would they should do unto you. Their tastes may not be the same.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

<sup>6</sup> Let's do as we may be done by.

UNKNOWN, Sir Thomas More. Act ii, sc. 4. (c. 1590)

Do as you would be done by is the surest method that I know of pleasing.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 16 Oct., 1747.

To do as you would be done by, is the plain, sure, and undisputed rule of morality and justice.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 Sept., 1748.

Be a good boy, and do as you would be done by.

KINGSLEY, The Water-Babies. Ch. 5. (1863)

To do as one would be done by, and to love one's neighbor as one's self, constitute the ideal perfection of utilitarian morality.

J. S. MILL, Utilitarianism. Pt. ii. (1863)

RULER

<sup>7</sup> Rulers are men before God and gods before men.

NATHANIEL AMES, Almanack. (1734)

<sup>8</sup> He who is to be a good ruler must have first been ruled, as the saying is. (τόν τε μέλλοντα καλῶς ἀρχειν ἀρχθῆναι φασὶ δεῖν πρῶτον.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. vii, ch. 13, sec. 4. (c. 330 B. C.)

We praise the ability to rule and to be ruled, and it is doubtless held that the goodness of a citizen consists in his ability both to rule and to be ruled. (ἀρχειν καὶ ἀρχεσθαι.)

ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. iii, ch. 2, sec. 7. (c. 300 B. C.)

No one can rule except one that can be ruled. (Nemo autem regere potest, nisi qui et regi.)

SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, sec. 15. (c. A. D. 55)

No man can be a good ruler, onles he hath bene fyrste ruled. (Nemo bene imperat, nisi qui paruerit imperio.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. i, No. 3. (1508)

Taverner, tr. See also COMMAND: COMMAND AND OBEDIENCE.

<sup>9</sup> 'Tis a very fine thing to be father-in-law To a very magnificent three-tailed bashaw.

GEORGE COLMAN THE YOUNGER, Blue Beard. Act iii, sc. 4. (1798)

The Royal Nonesuch.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 22. (1884)

A Pooh-Bah paid for his services!

W. S. GILBERT, The Mikado. Act i. (1885)

Lord high muck-a-muck rampant.

BAILEY, Nobody's Vineyard, p. 64. (1942)

<sup>10</sup> One needs must bear the follies of his rulers. (τὰς τῶν κρατούντων ἀμαθίας φέρειν χρῶν.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissai, l. 393. (c. 420 B. C.)

Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, ii, 25.

<sup>11</sup> No good thing is a multitude of rulers; let there be one ruler, one king. (οὐκ ἀγαθὸν πολυκοιρανίη· εἰς κοίρανος ἔστω, | εἰς βασιλεὺς.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ii, l. 204. (c. 850 B. C.)

The multitude of rulers destroyed Caria. (Multitudo imperatorum Cariam perdidit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. vii, No. 7.

(1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 43. (1550) Taverner explains that Caria was ruined because every citizen wanted to be a lord.

He that hath a fellow-ruler hath an over-ruler.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Avoir. (1611)

Ray, p. 9. (1670) See also under RIVALRY.

1 Evil herdsmen ruin the flock. (αὐτὰρ μῆλα κακοὶ φθείρουσι νομῆες.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 246. (c. 850 B.C.)

If the ruler is good his people will be good.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xii, ch. 19. (c. 500 B.C.)

As is the ruler, so are the ruled. (Talis sit rector, quales illi qui reguntur.)

St. JEROME, Letters. No. vii, sec. 5. (A.D. 374)

As is the Son of Heaven, so will be his court.

HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 1. (1937)

2 Let the ruler be slow to punish, swift to reward. (Sed piger ad poenas princeps, ad praemia velox.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 2, l. 121. (A.D. 13)

3 Who shall rule the ruler? (τίς οὖν ἀρξεῖ τοῦ ἀρχοντος;)

PLUTARCH, MORALIA: To an Uneducated Ruler. Sec. 780C. (c. A.D. 95)

WHO WILL GUARD THE GUARDERS, see under WIFE.

4 A ruler should look at both sides of chance. (Utrumque casum adspicere debet qui imperat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 719. (c. 43 B.C.)

5 If you are a ruler, command. (Si regnas, iube.)

SENECA, Medea, l. 194. (c. A.D. 60)

6 A ruler should make his subjects fear, not him, but for him. (τοὺς ὑπηκόους ὁ ἀρχὼν παρὰ σκευάσειε φοβεῖσθαι μὴ αὐτὸν ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ.)

PITTACUS, Apothegm. (c. 675 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia, sec. 152B.

The rulers of old set off all success to the credit of their people, attributing all failure to themselves.

CHUANG-TSZE, Philosophy. Ch. 11. (c. 400 B.C.)

RUM

7 A slave to the Demon Rum.

TIMOTHY SHAY ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room. Night ii, p. 43. (1854)

Rum, the demon rum.

O. HENRY, Elsie in New York. (1907)

8 Rum and ruin, you know, sir. They go together like twin brothers.

TIMOTHY SHAY ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room. Night vii, p. 143. (1854)

9 There's nought . . . so much the spirit calms As rum and true religion.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ii, st. 34. (1818)

10 He led the "rummies" and radicals.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life. (1860) A rummy was a man who frequented rum shops, a sot.

I was makin' it mighty warm for the rummies. MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 19. (1884)

Rummies, a local name for the opponents of the temperance party in Maine.

NORTON, Political Americanisms, p. 96. (1890)

11 He that spills the Rum loses that only; He that drinks it, often loses both that and himself.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750

12 Rum I take to be the name which unwashed moralists apply alike to the product distilled from molasses and the noblest juices of the vineyard.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 8. (1858)

13 Fifteen young ladies . . . signed the pledge against 'King Alchy.'

Knickerbocker. Vol. xxviii, p. 40. (1846)

A glorious victory we'll obtain

When Alchy is no more.

LEONARD AND YOUNG, Temperance Song. (1854)

14 Rum is the bane of morals, and the parent of idleness.

GEORGE WASHINGTON, Letter to Comte de Moustier, 15 Dec., 1788.

RUMOR

See also Report, Scandal

15 Quick to perish is rumor by a woman voiced. (ἀλλὰ ταχύμορον | γυναικογῆρυτον δλλυται κλέος.)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 486. (458 B.C.)

16 The swiftest Fame, which false things Equal reporteth lyk the things trewe.

(La fama vclocissima, la quale Il falso e 'l vero ugualmente rapporta.)

BOCCACCIO, Il Filostrato. Canto iv, st. 78. (c. 1350)

CHAUCEER, tr., Troilus and Criseyde.

Bk. iv, l. 659. (c. 1380)

He reads nothing but the sentences of torments and the book of thunderbolts.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 595. (1817)

Always frightening others with news of disaster.

17 No rumor is ever utterly destroyed which many people have uttered. (φήμη δ' οὔτις πάμπαν ἀπόλλυται, ἦν τινα πολλοὶ | λαοὶ θημίζωσι.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 764. (c. 800 B.C.)

Erasmus gives the Latin, "Rumor publicus non omnino frustra est."

That which is in every man's mouth, is not spoken without cause. (Non omnino temere est, quod vulgo dictitant.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 25.

(1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 57. (1550) Taverner adds: "The Englyshe proverbe sayeth thus:

It is lyke to be true that every man sayeth."

The modern forms are, "That is true which all men say," and "Common fame is seldom to blame."

1 To despise the popular talk. (Populi contemnere voces.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 1, l. 65. (35 B.C.)

2 Men have a natural passion for spreading rumors. (Insita hominibus libidine alendi de industria rumores.)

LIVY, Ab Urbe Condita. Bk. xxviii, ch. 24. (c. 25 B.C.) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 11.

Idle rumors were added to reasonable apprehensions. (Vana quoque ad veros accessit fama timores.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 469. (c. A.D. 60) Rumour doth double, like the voice and echo, The numbers of the fear'd.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, iii, 1, 97. (1598)

3 No fleeter thing is known to man than the voice of rumor. (Nullam rem citorem apud homines esse quam famam.)

PLAUTUS, Fragments. Frag. 21. (c. 200 B.C.) Rumor o'erleaps the bounds of land and sea. (Terram rumor transilit et maris.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies, ii, xviii, 38. (c. 24 B.C.) Rumours travel fast in all directions. (φθάρουσι γὰρ αἱ φήμαι πανταχόσε.)

PHILO, De Iosepho. Sec. 245. (c. A.D. 40) The English proverbial form is, "Rumor is a great traveller."

The flying rumours gather'd as they roll'd.

POPE, The Temple of Fame, l. 468. (1711)

The mysterious power of rumour which seems to travel faster than any post.

FREEMAN, Norman Conquest, iii, 160. (1869)

4 A trivial and empty thing is rumor. (Levis atque vana fama.)

SENECA, Octavia, l. 584. (c. A.D. 60)

Rumour is a pipe

Blown by surmises, jealousies, conjectures.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV: Ind., l. 15. (1598)

5 This from Rumour's tongue I idly heard.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, iv, 2, 123. (1595)

Merely a drop of acid from rumor's unclean tongue.

REX STOUT, The Broken Vase, p. 39. (1941)

6 Rumor does not always err; it sometimes even chooses the winner. (Haud semper errat fama; aliquando et elegit.)

TACITUS, Agricola. Sec. 9. (c. A.D. 98)

False rumours often beget truths.

LYTTON, Eugene Aram. Bk. i, ch. 9. (1832)

7 It's in everybody's mouth. (In orest omni populo.)

TERENCE, Adelphoe, l. 93. (160 B.C.)

The miller's boy said so.

ROBERT FORBY, Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 431. (1830) A matter of common rumor.

So Rumor says. (Who will, believe.)

THOMAS GRAY, A Long Story, l. 73. (1750)

8 To have heard say is half a lye.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 30. (1666)

They say so, is half a Lie.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4970. (1732) Hearsay is half lies.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch.

6. (1869) The French say, "On dit est souvent un grand menteur" (They say is often a great liar). Also, "On dir va partout" (They say goes everywhere).

9 To scatter dark rumors amongst the crowd. (Spargere voces | in vulgum ambiguas.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 98. (19 B.C.)

Rumor, of all evils the most swift. Speed lends her strength, and she gains vigor as she goes. (Fama, malum qua non aliud velocius ullum. | mobilitate viget virisque adquerit eundo.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 174.

These rumors the foul goddess spreads here and there upon the lips of men. (Haec passim dea foeda virum diffundit in ora.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iv, l. 195.

The rumor forthwith flies abroad throughout the little town. (Fama volat parvum subito volgata per urbem.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. viii, l. 554.

10 A hundred tongues, a hundred mouths, a voice of iron. (Linguae centum sint, oraque centum, | ferrea vox.)

VERGIL, Georgics. Bk. ii, l. 44. (29 B.C.) The French is, "La déesse aux cent bouches."

RUN

11 In the common run of Mankind.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 287. (1712) The ordinary run of Readers.

THOMAS GRAY, Letters (Bohn), i, 165. (1747) The general run of laws.

BLACKSTONE, Commentaries, i, 101. (1765)

The ordinary run of human beings.

HELPS, Social Pressure. Ch. 7. (1875)

12 An ill run at dice.

JOHN VANBRUGH, Aesop. Act iv, sc. 2. (1697)

He had . . . an uncommon run of luck.

FRANCES BURNEY, Cecilia. Bk. iv, ch. 3. (1782)

There has been a run on the red.

DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. Bk. v, ch. 6. (1826)

A confounded run on the red.

THACKERAY, Pendennis. Ch. 38. (1850)

They had had a run of ill luck.

JOHN RUSKIN, Works (1908), xxxiv, 654. (1884)

13 To have a run for one's money.

UNKNOWN, Slang Dictionary, p. 274. (1874)

[They] have had what is called in some circles a good run for their money.

Pall Mall Gazette, 19 Jan., 1889, p. 1/1.

RUNNING

14 They ran as swift as a pudding would creepe.

ROBERT ARNIM, Nest of Ninnies, p. 23. (1608)

15 My son, if thou runnest thou wilt not attain.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xi, 10. (c. 190 B.C.) See also under HASTE.

- 1
He that runs fastest gets most ground.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 319. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 138. (1670)
He that runs fast will not run long.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 392. (1855)
- 2
He that runs, may rally.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2272. (1732)
- 3
Running for one's all. (περί τοῦ παντός δρόμου θέοντες.)
HERODOTUS, History. Bk. viii, sec. 74. (c. 445 B. C.)
To run for one's life. (τὸν περί ψυχῆς δρόμον δραπεῖν.)
ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 375. (422 B. C.)
ERASMUS quotes as proverbial another phrase by Aristophanes, ἐκ δυοῖν ποδοῖν καταφεύγειν (To run away on both feet).
- 4
He may yll renne, that can not go.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
Though I can scarcely go, I needs must run.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Knight of the Burning Pestle. Act ii, sc. 5. (c. 1610)
They hardly can run, that cannot go.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 334. (1605)
He may ill run that can not go.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 138. (1670)
The Scots say, "He can run ill that canna gang."
- 5
He runnth far that neuer turnth againe.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
He runneth farre, that neuer commeth agayne.
RICHARD TAVERNER, Proverbs, p. 28. (1550)
He runneth far that neuer returneth.
JOHN LVLV, Euphues (Arber), p. 197. (1579)
It is a long run that never turns.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 117. (1670) A Latin proverb says, "Satiùs est recurrere quam currere male" (It is better to run back than to run wrong).
- 6
You look like a runner, quoth the Dee'l to the lobster. Spoken to those who are very unlikely to do what they pretend to.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 389. (1721)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5934. (1732)
"You're a racer, to be sure,"
Cried the Devil to the crab.
JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), The Middlesex Election. (1802)
- 7
Like a raging Indian . . . he runs a mucke (as they cal it there) stabbing every man he meets.
ANDREW MARVELL, The Rehearsal Transposed, i, 59. (1672)
I'm too discreet
To run amuck, and tilt at all I meet.
POPE, tr., Horace: Satires, ii, 1, 70. (1735)
- 8
[They] nede neither rounne at rouver, nor liue in ley mens houses.
SIR THOMAS MORE, Works (1557), p. 228/2. (1528) To run at rovers, to follow wild courses.

- His hart or mynde, whiche low runneth at rouver.
NICOLAS UDALL, Terence, fo. 191. (1533)
You run at random, shoot at rovers.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 228. (1639)
Running at rovers, having too much liberty.
J. O. HALLIWELL, Dictionary: Rovers. (1847)
- 9
He that runs in the night stumbles.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1670)
He that runs in the dark, may well stumble.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2271. (1732)
  - 10
But yet I run before my horse to market.
SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 1, 160. (1592) To run before one's horse to market is to count one's chickens before they are hatched.
Resolution without Deliberation . . . is like running before one's mare to market.
RICHARD KINGSTON, Apophthegmata Curiosa, p. 79. (1709)
  - 11
He runs like a deer.
THOMAS SHELTON, tr., Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 19. (1620)
The black lad . . . running like a deer.
HENRY KINGSLEY, Geoffrey Hamlyn. Ch. 40. (1859)
  - 12
We fancy we've been making the running, and suddenly we find ourselves nowhere.
THACKERAY, The Newcomes, ii, 50. (1855)
Silence was not dear to the heart of the Honourable John, so he took up the running.
ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Dr. Thorne. Ch. 5. (1858)
Which quite put her out of the running.
KINGSLEY, Water-Babies, p. 31. (1863)
He doesn't count, does he? He is . . . out of the running.
W. E. NORRIS, Adrian Vidal. Ch. 21. (1885)

RUSSIA

- 13
Scratch the Russian and you'll find the Tartar. (Grattez le russe et vous trouverez le tartare.)
NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Sayings at St. Helena. (c. 1816) See HUGO, Le Rhin: Conclusion, vii.
Grattez le Russe et vous trouverez le Tartare. . . . It requires but little rubbing to disclose the Tartar blood so freely circulated through the Muscovite veins.
FREDERICK G. BURNABY, A Ride to Khiva. Ch. 9. (1876)
I don't put any faith in Russians. . . . "Scratch a Russian and you'll come to a Tartar."
MRS. OLIPHANT, The Second Son. Ch. 4. (1888)
- 14
Russia has two generals in whom she can confide—Generals Janvier and Février.
NICHOLAS I, Remark. Quoted with cartoon in Punch, 10 March, 1853. Two years later, 2 March, 1855, Nicholas died, and Punch printed another cartoon, showing Death standing at the Czar's head, and the caption, "General Février turns traitor."
- 15
Russia is always defeated but never beaten.
UNKNOWN, The Spectator, 26 April, 1913, p. 687. Quoted as a saying.

RUST

<sup>1</sup> Human life is very like iron. If you use it, it wears out; if you do not, it is consumed by rust. (Vita humana prope uti ferrum est. Si exerceas, conteritur; si non exerceas, tamen robigo interficit.)

CATO, Carmen de Moribus, p. 83. (c. 170 B. C.)

As quoted by AULUS GELLIUS, xi, 2.

Iron if not used becomes covered with rust. (Ferrum si non utaris, obducitur rubigine.)

ERASMUS, Similia. (c. 1520)

No yron so harde but rust will fret it.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 188. (1576)

Doth not the rust fret the heardest yron, if it be not used?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 111. (1579)

<sup>2</sup> To keep worth bright, keep leisure free from rust. (Ut niteat virtus, absit rubigo quietus.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 72. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 628.

<sup>3</sup> Better to die in action than sitting still. (δρῶντας γὰρ ἢ μὴ δρῶντας ἥδιον θανεῖν.)

EURIPIDES, Helen, l. 814. (c. 412 B. C.)

Rather shrink in the wetting than wast in the wearing.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 106. (1579)

It is better to wear out than to rust out.

RICHARD CUMBERLAND, Bishop of Peterborough, when a friend told him he would wear himself out by his incessant labors. (c. 1700) See BOSWELL, Tour to the Hebrides, p. 18; HORNE, Sermon on the Duty of Contending for the Truth; BOYD, Critical Essays of a Country Parson, p. 40. Frequently quoted.

SABBATH

See also Sunday

<sup>9</sup> Divers Sorcerers . . . have confessed that in their Sabbath's . . . they feed on such fare.

FRANCIS BROOKE, tr., Le Blanc's Travels, p. 112. (a. 1660)

It might have been a veritable witches' Sabbath. W. H. BISHOP, San Francisco. In Harper's Magazine, May, 1883, p. 831/2. A midnight meeting of witches presided over by the devil

<sup>10</sup> Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy. Six days shalt thou labour and do all thy work: but the seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God. (Memento ut diem sabbati sanctifices. Sex diebus operaberis, et facies omnia opera tua. Septimo autem die sabbatum Domini Dei tui est.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xx, 8-10. (c. 700 B. C.)

See also Deuteronomy, v, 12.

I had rather wear out than rust out.

GEORGE WHITEFIELD, Remark. (c. 1770) See SOUTHEY, Life of Wesley, ii, 170.

It is better to wear out with work, than with rust. ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia, p. 434. (1830)

A man may as well wear out as rust out.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Body in the Library, p. 170. (1942)

<sup>4</sup> I may no praise unto a knife bequeath, With rust yfret, though paynted be the sheath. GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Poems, i, 98. (1576)

<sup>5</sup> The rust of the mind is the destruction of genius. (Aerugo animi rubigo ingenii.)

ALFRED HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 10. (1869) Quoting Seneca.

<sup>6</sup> If I rest, I rust. (Rast' ich, so rost' ich.)

MARTIN LUTHER, Maxims. (c. 1540) Adopted by William II of Germany as a motto, c. 1872, when he was a schoolboy. The Germans also say, "Rast macht Rost" (Rest makes rust), and "Rast' ich, so rost' ich, sagt der Schlüssel" (If I rest, then I rust, says the key). The French say, "La rouille use plus que le travail" (Rust wastes more than use).

<sup>7</sup> Their worth extinguished by idleness as iron is destroyed by rust.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Old Men in Public Affairs Sec. 784A. (c. A. D. 95)

<sup>8</sup> I were better to be eaten to death with a rust than to be scoured to nothing with perpetual motion.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry IV, i, 2, 245. (1598)

S

God blessed the seventh day and sanctified it: because that in it he had rested from all his work. (Et benedixit diei septimo; et sanctificavit illum: quia in ipso cessaverat ab omni opere suo quod creavit Deus ut faceret.)

Old Testament: Genesis, ii, 3. (c. 700 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> Ye shall kindle no fire throughout your habitations upon the sabbath day. (Non succendetis ignem in omnibus habitaculis vestris per diem sabbati.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xxxv, 3. (c. 700 B. C.)

Rabbi Meir says that a one-legged man may wear his wooden leg on the Sabbath, but Rabbi Jossi prohibits it.

The Talmud: Shabbath, vi. (c. A. D. 200)

Resolved, Never to utter anything that is sportive, or matter of laughter, on a Lord's day

JONATHAN EDWARDS, Resolutions. (1722)

If you go nutting on Sundays, the devil will come to help, and hold down the boughs for you.

A. J. C. HARE, Sussex, p. 43. (1894) A Sussex proverb.

<sup>1</sup> It is a common proverb of the people, that when we cross the Mississippi, we "travel beyond the Sabbath."

TIMOTHY FLINT, Recollections, p. 178. (1826)

<sup>2</sup> And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath. (τὸ σάββατον διὰ τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἐγένετο καὶ οὐχ ὁ ἄνθρωπος διὰ τὸ σάββατον.)

New Testament: Mark, ii, 27. (c. A. D. 70) The Vulgate is, "Sabbatum propter hominem factum est, et non homo propter sabbatum."

SACK

See also Bag

<sup>3</sup> He has given the sack a turn: he has turned the tables.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 66. (1917)

<sup>4</sup> She has not cast it into a torn sack. (No lo ha echado en saco roto.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 51. (1615) The African proverb has it "into a basket without a bottom."

A broken sack will hold no corn.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 133. (1639) The French say, "Un sac percé ne peut tenir le grain," the Italians, "Sacco rotto non tien miglio."

<sup>5</sup> Hee hath his passport given him. (On luy a donné son sac.) Said of a seruant whom his master hath put away.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Sac. (1611) The phrase was already in use in Dutch, "Iemand den zak geven" (to give one the sack), and "Den zak krijgen" (to get the sack).

I shall get the sack for telling on ye.

CHARLES M. WESTMACOTT, The English Spy, i, 178. (1825)

I wonder what old Fogg 'ud say, if he knew it. I should get the sack, I s'pose.

DICKENS, Pickwick Papers. Ch. 20. (1837)

<sup>6</sup> When the sacke is opened, it is knowne what is therein contained.

LEWIS EVANS, Withals' Dictionary Revised, sig. G1. (1586)

There comes nought out of the sack, but what was there.

JOHN WODROEPHE, Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 489. (1623) HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Nothing comes out of a sack but what was in it. C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Talk. Ch. 2. (1869)

<sup>7</sup> An old seck [sack] is aye skailing [spilling].

DAVID FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 10. (c. 1595)

<sup>8</sup> An olde sacke axeth much patchyng.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

When I was a boye it was an olde saying, That an olde sacke would lacke much clouting and patching.

THOMAS LUPTON, All for Money, sig. E1. (1578)

Old Sacks want much patching.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3726. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> It is a bad sacke that will abide no cloutyng.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

It is a bad Sack, that will bear no Clouting.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2843. (1732)

The Italians say, "Cattivo è quel sacco che non si può rappezzare" (It's a bad sack that cannot be patched).

<sup>10</sup> Let every sack stand upon its own bottom.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 4. (1659) See also under INDEPENDENCE.

<sup>11</sup> A short sack hath a wide mouth.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. g2. (1583)

<sup>12</sup> To the next, to the next, more sacks to the myll.

THOMAS NASHE, Pasquil's Apology. (1590) To bring more sacks to the mill is to add argument to argument, or weight to weight.

More sacks to the mill! O heavens! I have my wish.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 81. (1595) DEKKER AND WEBSTER, Westward Hoe, iv, 1. (1607) MIDDLETON, Spanish Gypsy, iv, 1. (1623) RICHARDSON, Clarissa, vii, 31. (1748) etc., etc.

<sup>13</sup> Many a sack is tied up before it is full.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, Diogines Lanthorne, p. 7. (1607)

Many a sack is knit up before it is full.

WILLIAM PARKES, The Curtaine-Drawer of the World (Grosart), p. 60. (1612)

It is good tying the sack before it is full.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

When we fell short at meals . . . he would put us off with an old proverb, that many a sack is tied up before it is full.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, The English Rogue. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1671)

Bind the sack ere it be fu'.

JOHN RAY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 232. (1678)

<sup>14</sup> An empty sack cannot stand upright.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 345. (1666) FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 598. (1732)

They say an empty bag can't stand straight.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws. Ch. 11. (1843)

You have found it more difficult, I fear, than you imagined, to make the empty sack stand upright.

LYTTON, The Caxtons. Pt. viii, ch. 3. (1849)

It is hard for an empty sack to stand upright.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 93. (1855) LOCKER-LAMPSON, My Confidences, p. 395. (1896) The Italians say, "Sacco vuoto non sta ritto"; the Germans, "Ein leerer Sack steht nicht aufrecht."

SACRIFICE, see Self-Sacrifice*SADDLE

<sup>1</sup> By this means have they . . . set the other beggarly fellow besides the saddle.

THOMAS BECON, Early Works (P.S.), p. 368. (1543) Out of the running.

The French king fearing . . . King Henry would put him besyde hys sadell.

RICHARD GRAFTON, Chronicle, ii, 873. (1568)

He was fully bent to set Caius beside the saddle.

SIR THOMAS NORTH, tr., Plutarch's Lives: Tiberius and Caius. (1579)

<sup>2</sup> How say you, wenches, haue I set the sadle on the right horse?

DEKKER AND WEBSTER, Westward Hoe. Act v. (1607) Have I laid the blame on the right person?

The right saddle must bee set on the right horse.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 105. (1616)

You have laid the saddle upon the wrong horse.

JOHN COLLINGES, Responsoria ad Erratica Piscatoris, ii, C1. (1652)

Set the saddle on the right horse. This Proverb may be variously applied; either thus, Let them bear the blame that deserve it: or thus, Let them bear the burden that are best able.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 138. (1670)

He laid about him like a man, putting . . . everywhere the saddle on the right horse.

CARLYLE, Past and Present. Bk. ii, ch. 1. (1843)

<sup>3</sup> He sadleth to day, and goes to morrow.

HOWELL, Proverbs: Span.-Eng., p. 4. (1659)

You saddle To-day, and ride out To-morrow.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5984. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> He told me he feared there was new design hatching, as if Monk had a mind to get into the saddle.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 3 March, 1660.

Such as by the favour of fortune . . . have got into the saddle.

MACHIAVELLI, The Prince, tr., Ch. 7. (1675)

The Presbyterians being now again in the saddle.

DANIEL NEAL, The Puritans, iv, 225. (1738)

The phrase "in the saddle," as an expression of readiness for work, is a peculiarly English phrase.

R. G. WHITE, England Without and Within. Ch. 14. (1881) However, "in the saddle" usually means in a position of authority, in a position to rule.

<sup>5</sup> He has a saddle to fit every horse. (Ha sella ad ogni cavallo.) He has a salve for every sore.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Italian, p. 214. (1813)

SADNESS, see Grief, Melancholy, Sorrow

SAFETY

See also Security

<sup>6</sup> It is safe sleeping in a whole skin.

APHRA BEHN, The Lucky Mistake. (c. 1679)

ON THE SAFE SIDE, see under SIDE.

<sup>7</sup> May I be safe and sound.

Book of the Dead. Ch. 72, l. 8. (c. 4000 B.C.)

The safe and sound life of a man is his heart.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 38. (c. 3550 B.C.)

Prisse papyrus. Gunn, tr.

Sauf and sond ai mot thou be

To all the folk es under the.

UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 7867. (a. 1300)

Thei mihten sauf and sone The water passe.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis, i, 233. (1390)

And soo he gede sonde and saf hys way.

JOHN MIREKUS, Mirk's Festial, 17. (c. 1450)

I leave Don Juan for the present, safe—

Not sound, poor fellow, but severely wounded.

BYRON, Don Juan. Canto iv, st. 54. (1824)

<sup>8</sup> You have it in dry cocke.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 234. (1639) In a place of safety; a haying simile.

It is got into dry cock; out of harm's way.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 13. (1672)

It is got in a dry cock; Rem est iam in vado salutis.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 678. (1681)

<sup>9</sup> It's better to be safe than sorry.

LESLIE FORD, Murder with Southern Hospitality, p. 15. (1942)

<sup>10</sup> He lives unsafely that looks too near on things.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 46. (1640)

<sup>11</sup> Number is their defence. (Defendit numerus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 46. (c. A. D. 120)

Defendit numerus [there is safety in numbers] is the maxim of the foolish; Deperdit numerus [there is ruin in numbers] of the wise.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 34. (1820)

The old adage, there's safety in numbers, may well apply here.

HOWIE, Murder for Christmas, p. 135. (1941)

<sup>12</sup> Safe is the word. Taken from the watch-word given among soldiers, spoken when we have gotten over some great difficulty.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 291. (1721)

If still you be disposed to rhyme,

Go try your hand a second time.

Again you fail: yet Safe's the word;

Take courage, and attempt a third.

JONATHAN SWIFT, On Poetry. (1733)

<sup>13</sup> Safety lies in the middle course. (Medio tutissimus ibis.)

OVID, Metamorphoses. Bk. ii, l. 137. (A. D. 7)

See also under MODERATION.

What is safe is distasteful; in rashness there is hope. (Ingrata quae tuta; ex temeritate spes.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. iii, sec. 26. (c. A. D. 109)

There is always safety in valor.

EMERSON, English Traits: The Times. (1856)

The problem is how to avoid safety. The very word has a mean sound.

CONSTANCE WAGNER, The Major Has Seven Guests, p. 140. (1940)

<sup>1</sup> To be safe in the shallows. (Esse in vado salutis.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia. Act iv, sc. 10, l. 73. (c. 210 B. C.) A proverb cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 45. SAFE IN PORT, see under PORT.

<sup>2</sup> He is safe from danger who is on guard even when safe. (Caret periculo qui etiam cum est tutus cavet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 130. (c. 43 B. C.)

Be wary, then; best safety lies in fear.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 3, 43. (1600)

HE THAT'S SECURE IS NOT SAFE, see SECURITY

<sup>3</sup> All are safe when one is defended. (Tuti sunt omnes unus ubi defenditur.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 696. (c. 43 B. C.)

Always bethink yourself of means of safety. (Per quae sis tutus illa semper cogites.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 520.

<sup>4</sup> The less careful they were of themselves in battle, the safer they were (Quanto sibi in proelio minus pepercissent, tanto tutiores fore.)

SALLUST, Bellum Iugurthinum. Sec. 107. (c. 40 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> Better ride safe in the dark, says the proverb, than in daylight with a cut-throat at your elbow.

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. viii. (1821)

<sup>6</sup> Often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded beetle in a safer hold
Than is the full-wing'd eagle.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, iii, 3, 19. (1609)

He who goes the lowest builds the safest.

P. J. BAILEY, Festus: Home. (1839)

<sup>7</sup> Out of this nettle, danger, we pluck this flower, safety.

SHAKESPEARE, 1 Henry IV, ii, 3, 11. (1597)

<sup>8</sup> I preserve my safety better by innocence than by eloquence. (Securitatem melius innocentia tueor, quam eloquentia.)

TACITUS, Dialogus de Oratoribus, sec. 11. (c. A. D. 81)

<sup>9</sup> The only safety for the conquered is to expect no safety. (Una salus victis nullam sperare salutem.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 354. (19 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> It is man's perdition to be safe when he ought to die for the truth.

RICHARD VINES, Sermon, preached at St. Margaret's, Westminster, before the House of Commons, 30 Nov., 1642.

Though love repine, and reason chafe,
There came a voice without reply,—
"Tis man's perdition to be safe,
When for the truth he ought to die."

EMERSON, Quatrains: Sacrifice. (1867)

<sup>11</sup> Safety first.

UNKNOWN, Motto, of the Industrial Council for Industrial Safety. (1915)

"Safety First" originated in railway practise, where one of the first rules laid down for the railway servant was that "the safety of the public is to be the first consideration of the staff."

SIR WILLIAM JOYNSON-HICKS, Foreword, to the official journal of the National Safety First Association. (1925)

Safety first is a well hackneyed saying.

EDGAR WALLACE, The Door With Seven Locks, p. 112. (1926)

The moment you begin . . . adopting as your motto "Safety first," you might as well be dead.

AGATHA CHRISTIE, Cards on the Table. Ch. 13. (1936)

SAFETY OF THE PEOPLE, see under PEOPLE.

II—Proverbial Comparisons

<sup>12</sup> The thief is safe as in a mill.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Maid in the Mill. Act ii, sc. 1. (1623)

As safe in the constable's house, as a thief in a mill.

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act i, sc. 1. (1663)

You are as safe as so many thieves in a mill.

UNKNOWN, Vinegar and Mustard. (1673) In HINDLEY, The Old Book Collector's Miscellany, iii.

You'll be as safe as a thief in a mill.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

As safe as a thief in a mill. Very secure. Still in common use.

J. O. HALLIWELL, Dictionary: Thief. (1847)

<sup>13</sup> As safe as a mouse in a malt-heap.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 47. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 207. (1670)

<sup>14</sup> As safe as a mouse in a cheese.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 97. (1639)

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 207. (1670) has, "As safe as a crow in a gutter," perhaps a misprint for "sowe."

<sup>15</sup> As safe as a bank.

CHARLES DICKENS, Letters, ii, 183. (1862) J. S. FLETCHER, The Diamonds, ch. 28. (1923) has, "Safe as the Bank of England."

<sup>16</sup> The plain ones be as safe as churches.

THOMAS HARDY, Tess of the D'Urbervilles. Ch. 14. (1891)

<sup>17</sup> He'll win it, as safe as safe.

G. J. WHYTE MELVILLE, Market Harborough, p. 107. (1860)

As safe as a mouse in a cheese.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 288. (1678)

<sup>18</sup> The colonel is as safe as houses to come round.

JOHN STRANGE WINTER (MRS. ARTHUR STAN-NARD), Red Coats, p. 50. (1894)

As safe as a mouse in a mill.

UNKNOWN, The Weakest Goeth to the Wall, l. 345. (1600)

She's safe as mouse in mill.

ROBERT DAVENPORT, A New Tricke to Cheat the Divell. Act iii, sc. 1. (1639)

SAILING

See also Sea, Ship

<sup>2</sup> Yonder comyth a shyppe with full saile.

LORD BERNERS, Huon of Burdeux, lx, 208. (a. 1533)

Sathan . . . shall make towardes us plenis velis.

JOHN DAUS, tr., Sleidane's Commentaries, fo. 134b. (1560)

The proud full sail of his great verse.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet lxxxvi. (1609)

In the full saile of fortune.

EDMUND BOLTON, tr., Florus: Dedication. (1618)

Sailed away con Viento en Popa, with full Sail.

THOMAS GAGE, A New Survey of the West Indies, xxi, 201. (1648)

Her father . . . often took an opportunity of going full-sail into controversial subjects.

SIR WALTER SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 9. (1818)

<sup>3</sup> Sailing gaily before the breeze. (Venti valde sunt secundi.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ii, epis. 1. (60 B.C.)

My words, at least, are more sincere and hearty than if I sought to sail before the wind.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto ix, st. 26. (1823)

<sup>4</sup> He that will sail without danger must never come upon the main sea.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 250. (1639)

He that will not sail till all Dangers are over, must never put to Sea.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2353. (1732)

He that will not sail till he have a full fair Wind, will lose many a Voyage.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2354.

<sup>5</sup> The nurse is not a very discreet guardianship for a beauty. . . . Her language sails a little too near the wind.

HARTLEY COLERIDGE, Massinger and Ford: Introduction. (1840) "To sail near the wind" is to come near transgressing a law or moral principle. Coleridge is here referring to the nurse in Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet. [He] has sailed too close to the wind at home, and comes to the colony to be whitewashed.

HENRY KINGSLEY, The Hillyars and the Burtons. Ch. 4. (1865)

With regard to Turf transactions again, he may sail very near the wind indeed, and be pardoned.

W. E. NORRIS, Thirlby Hall. Ch. 8. (1883)

<sup>6</sup> Who saileth not, knoweth not what the feare of God is. (Chi non nauiga, non sache sia il timor di Dio.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Frutes, fo. 29. (1578)

Wisdom sailes with winde and tide.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 97. (1591)

Sayle with the wind and the tide.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 15. (1639)

Set sail, and see where the winds and waves will carry you.

WILLIAM WINDHAM, in BOSWELL, Johnson (Hill), iv, 201 note. (1783)

<sup>8</sup> Both whanne he berth lowest the Seil, Thanne is he swiftest to beguile The womman.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. i, l. 65. (a. 1300) When he is humblest.

Whiche maie by pinchyng and bearyng a lowe saile, Waxe riche.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, p. 140. (a. 1548)

Then waies I saught, by wisdom taught,

To beare low saile, least stock should quaile.

THOMAS TUSSER, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: The Author's Life. St. 23. (1573)

<sup>9</sup> [Let] not your sail be bigger than your boat.

BEN JONSON, Every Man in His Humour. Act i, sc. 1. (1601)

Make not thy Sail too big for the Ballast.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3322. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> You be all of one Church, saile all in one ship.

RICHARD HARVEY, Plaine Perceual, p. 7. (1589)

TO BE IN THE SAME BOAT, see under BOAT.

<sup>11</sup> It is easy to spread the sails to propitious winds. (Facile est ventis dare vela secundis.)

MANILIUS, Astronomica. Bk. iii. (c. 25 B.C.)

<sup>12</sup> Yt is well, therefore, . . . when winde is at will to hoysse up saile.

BRIAN MELBANCKE, Philotimus, p. 24. (1583)

Hoist your Sail, when the Wind is fair.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2518. (1732)

A man should hoist sail while the wind is fair.

SCOTT, Fortunes of Nigel: Intro. Epis. (1822)

<sup>13</sup> Stately dames de la cour would sail into the room and sail out again.

J. L. MOTLEY, Correspondence. Vol. i, ch. 4. (1841)

All the great people sailed in state from the room.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Jane Eyre. Ch. 7. (1847)

Lady B. sailed in . . . arrayed in ribbons of scarlet.

THACKERAY, Lovel the Widower. Ch. 3. (1860)

A man must just sail in and make an unmitigated fool of himself.

Harper's Magazine, March, 1889, p. 561/1.

"Sail right in, Colonel," cried the company.

STEPHEN FISKE, Holiday Stories, p. 164. (1894)

There is a difference in the meaning of these phrases. One is to move in a stately or dignified manner, the other to proceed boldly to action.

<sup>14</sup> Like a steersman, set free thy sail to catch the breeze. (ὡς ἄνθρωπος κυβερνῶν ἀνὰ τὸ πτόλον ἀνέμους.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. 1, l. 91. (470 B.C.)

To use every sail. (ἀκροῖσι χρῆσθαι τοῖς ἱστίοις.)
ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs. (405 B. C.) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iii, 24, with the Latin, "Summis uti velis."

Fleeing, as the saying is, with sails and oars.
(Vellis, ut ita dicam, remisque fugienda.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. iii, ch. xi, sec. 26. (45 B. C.) "With sails and oars," or "With wind and oars," a proverbial expression for "With all one's might," or "With all speed," was used by many Latin writers.
Up with your sails, shake out every stitch of canvas. (Utere velis, totos pande sinus.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 149. (c. A. D. 120)

1 From whatever direction the wind is, the sail is shifted accordingly. (Utquomque est ventus, exim velum vortitur.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 754. (c. 194 B. C.) A proverb of which there are many medieval and modern variants, usually with "cloak" or "mantle" instead of "sail," as in the German, "Man soll den Mantel kehren, als das wetter geht" (One should turn his coat according to the weather). See also under COAT.

I turne sayle that way as the wind bloweth

JOHN BARET, An Alvearie, B829. (1574)

All men set their sails with the favourable wind.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia, ii, 199. (1580)

He that would use all winds must shift his sail.

FLETCHER, Faithful Shepherdess. Act i. (1610)

He would sail with any wind.

BEAUMONT and FLETCHER, The Bloody Brother.

Act iv, sc. 2. (c. 1613)

To set up a sail to every wind.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 192. (1670)

As the Wind blows, you must set your sail.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 738. (1732)

He knows to sail with every wind.

JONATHAN SWIFT, The Storm. (c. 1733)

One must sail according to the wind. (Bisogna navigar secondo il vento.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbs, p. 215.

(1856) Quoting an Italian proverb. The French say, "Selon le vent, il faut tourner sa voile."

2 To come sailing in a sow's ear.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 192. (1670)

3 In troubled waters 'tis best to shorten sail.
(ἐν κακοῖς μοι πλεῖν ὑφαιμένη δοκεῖ.)

SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 335. (c. 409 B. C.)

Wisely reef thy sails when they are swollen by too fair a breeze. (Sapienter idem | contrahes
vento nimium secundo | turgida vela.)

HORACE, Odes, ii, x, 22. (23 B. C.)

He that striketh sayle in a storme, hoyseth them higher in a calm.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Ar-ber), p. 333. (1580)

Set thy sails warily, Tempests will come.

CAROLINE SOUTHEY, Mariner's Hymn. (a. 1854)

4 I had so much wisdom as to sail under false colours in this foolish jaunt of mine.

R. L. STEVENSON, St. Ives. Ch. 28. (1897)

5 They will alwaies saile by the Carde and Compasse of their own mind.

DANIEL TUVIL, Essays Politicke and Morall, p.
123. (1608)

SAILOR

See also under Jack

6 Six days shalt thou labor and do all thou art
able,

And on the seventh—holystone the decks and scrape the cable.

R. H. DANA, Two Years Before the Mast. Ch. 3.
(1840) Referred to as "the Philadelphia Catechism."

7 We were excellent sailors, and bore the voyage without inconvenience.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Contarini Fleming. Bk.
iii, ch. 16. (1833) The French say, "Être bon marin," to be a good sailor.

He wished people who were bad sailors would not travel.

MARY BRIDGEMAN, Robert Lynne. Bk. ii, ch. 6.
(1870)

He pleaded that he was a wretched sailor.

BERNARD ROMANS, A Concise Natural History of East and West Florida. App. 62. (1775)

8 A coasting man, either he is a theefe, or a murderer.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

The wonder is always new that any sane man can be a sailor.

R. W. EMERSON, English Traits. Ch. 2. (1856)

Now landsmen all, whoever you may be, . . .
Stick close to your desks and never go to sea,

And you all may be Rulers of the Queen's Navee!

W. S. GILBERT, H. M. S. Pinafore. Act i. (1878)

9 A good Sailor may mistake, in a dark Night.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 173. (1732)

Seamen are the nearest to Death, and the farthest from God.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4083.

10 They'll tell thee sailors, when away,
In every port a mistress find.

JOHN GAY, Sweet William's Farewell. (a. 1732)

A seafaring man may have a sweetheart in every port; but he should steer clear of a wife.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, *The Adventures of Sir
Launcelot Greaves*. Ch. 21. (1762)

In every mess I find a friend,

In every port a wife.

CHARLES DIBDIN, Jack in His Element. (a.
1814)

11 A seaman is never broken till his neck be broken.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, The English Rogue, ii,
194. (1671) Cited as a proverb.

12 The hungry sea is fatal to sailors. (Exitio est avidum mare nautis.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 28, l. 18. (23 B. C.)

On land there is length of days, but on the sea it is difficult to find a man with gray hair.
(ἡπειρῶ γὰρ ἔνεστι μακρὸς βίος· εἰν δὲ οὐ πῶς | εὐμαρὲς εἰς πολλὴν ἀνδρὸς ἰδεῖν κεφαλὴν.)

PHALAEUS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 200) Greek Anthology. Bk. vii. epig. 650.

1 Sailors, they say, go round the world without going into it.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, Frank Mildmay. Ch. 27. (1829)

TO PUT A GIRDLE ROUND THE EARTH, see under GIRDLE.

2 White is a shameful color in a sailor; swarthy should he be, both from the sea's waves and heaven's beams. (Candidus in nauta turpis color, aequoris unda | debet et a radiis sideris esse niger.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 723. (c. 1 B. C.)

3 There is no pleasure sailors have greater than sighting from the deep the distant land. (Voluptas nullast navitis . . . quam quom ex alto procul terram conspiciunt.)

PLAUTUS, Menaechmi, l. 226. (c. 200 B. C.)

4 They that go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters; these see the works of the Lord, and his wonders in the deep. (Qui descendunt mare in navibus, facientes operationem in aquis multis. Ipsi viderunt opera Domini, et mirabilia eius in profundo.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cvii, 23, 24. (c. 400 B. C.)

5 Bowser . . . had come in through the hawse-pipe, by which is signified he had begun his career in the fore-castle.

W. C. RUSSELL, Romance of a Midshipman. Ch. 11. (1898)

The mate . . . came through the hawsehole, and has seen some very hard times.

A. B. LUBBOCK, Round the Horn. Ch. 6. (1902)

6 Who builds his hopes in air of your good looks, Lives like a drunken sailor on a mast; Ready, with every nod, to tumble down Into the fatal bowels of the deep.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, iii, 4, 100. (1592)

Every drunken skipper trusts to Providence.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act iii. (1913)

7 We sailors get money like horses, and spend it like asses.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Ch. 2. (1751) Cited as "the old saying."

'Tis said that, with grog and our lasses,

Because jolly sailors are free,

Our money we squander like asses,

Which like horses we earn'd when at sea.

CHARLES DIBDIN, At Sea. (a. 1814)

Strike up the band, here comes a sailor,
Cash in his hand, just off a whaler.

A. B. STERLING, Strike Up the Band. (1900)

SAINT

8 A single saint can put to flight
Ten thousand blustering sons of night.

TIMOTHY SHAY ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room. Night iii, p. 59. (1854) Quoted.

9 There is no sinner like a young saint.

APHRA BEHN, The Rover. Pt. i, act i, sc. 2.
YOUNG SAINT, OLD DEVIL, see under AGE AND YOUTH.

The greater the sinner the greater the saint

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws. Ch. 8. (1843)

The greatest saint may be a sinner that never got down to "hard pan."

OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES, The Guardian Angel. Ch. 30. (1867)

10 Saints will aid if men will call,
For the blue sky bends over all.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Christabel. (1816)

11 The sight of hell-torments will exalt the happiness of the saints for ever.

JONATHAN EDWARDS, The Eternity of Hell-Torments. (1739)

12 Every saint, as every man, comes one day to be superfluous.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1864.

13 They be not all saints, of this be you sure,
That goe in and out at the church door.

LEWIS EVANS, Withals Dictionary Revised, sig. K6. (1586)

There are many (questionless) canonised on earth, that shall never be Saints in Heaven.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. i, sec. 26. (1643)

All are not saints that go to church.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack, 1687.

They are not all Saints that use holy Water.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4956. (1732)

Some reputed saints that have been canonized ought to have been cannonaded.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 272. (1820)

SAINT ABROAD, DEVIL AT HOME, see under HYPOCRISY.

14 Saints are born to suffer, and must take it patiently.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Moderation. (1642)

15 Such a Saint, such an offering.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1106. (1650) See also under LIKENESS.

16 The teares of Saints more sweet by farre,
Then all the songs of sinners are.

ROBERT HERRICK, Noble Numbers: Tears (1647)

Those Saints, whom God loves best,
The Devill tempts not least.

ROBERT HERRICK, Temptation.

<sup>1</sup> Nemo repente fuit turpissimus, the murderer ripens more slowly than the saint.

H. F. HEARD, A Taste for Honey, p. 225. (1941)

<sup>2</sup> The way of this world is to praise dead saints and persecute living ones.

NATHANIEL HOWE, Sermon. (c. 1810)

<sup>3</sup> No Sainte but hath hir shrine, and he that can-not wyne with a Pater noster, must offer a penny.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 313. (1580) The French say, "A chaque saint son cierge" (To every saint his candle), or "Il n'y a si petit saint qui ne veuille aussi sa chandelle" (There is no saint so small but requires his candle).

<sup>4</sup> We are men, not saints, sweet lady.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Unnaturall Combat. Act i, sc. 1. (c. 1619)

Single men in barracks don't grow into plaster saints.

RUDYARD KIPLING, Tommy. (1898) Tommy, or Tommy Atkins, as a name for the British soldier, derives from the imaginary name, "Thomas Atkins," which appeared in the sample forms sent out 31 August, 1815, by the British War Office in connection with the Soldier's Account Book, put into use at that time.

<sup>5</sup> Scratch a sluggard and find a saint.

OGDEN NASH, A Plea for a League of Sleep. (1940)

<sup>6</sup> The Lord . . . forsaketh not his saints. (Dominus . . . non derelinquet sanctos suos.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxxvii, 28. (c. 350 B. C.) Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints. (Pretiosa in conspectu Domini mors Sanctorum eius.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxvi, 15. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>7</sup> When it pleaseth not God, the saint can do little.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1670)

<sup>8</sup> O cunning enemy, that, to catch a saint, With saints dost bait thy hook!

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, ii, 2, 180. (1604)

<sup>9</sup> Such an injury would vex a very saint.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, iii, 2, 28. (1594)

'Twould a saint provoke.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. i, l. 246. (1732)

It's enough to provoke a saint.

PAULDING, Bucktails. Act ii, sc. 2. (1815)

<sup>10</sup> The only difference between a saint and a sinner is that every saint has a past, and every sinner has a future.

OSCAR WILDE, A Woman of No Importance. Act iii. (1893)

A saint may be defined as a person of heroic virtue whose private judgment is privileged.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW, Saint Joan: Preface. (1924)

<sup>11</sup> The saint's day over, good bye to the saint. (La fête passée, adieu le saint.)

UNKNOWN, A French proverb. There are scores of proverbs about Saints' days, from St. Andrew to St. Vitus. Most of them are weather proverbs of British origin, and so of merely local interest. For a fairly complete list, see INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 17, and APPERSON, English Proverbs, p. 544. The French say, "Saint qui ne guérit rien, n'a guère de pèlerins" (The saint who cures no diseases has few pilgrims); the Italians, "Non si crede al santo se non fa miracoli" (There is no belief in the saint unless he works miracles). THE DANGER PAST, THE SAINT FORGOTTEN, see under DANGER.

SALAD

<sup>12</sup> A good Salad may be the Prologue to a bad Supper.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 174. (1732) The Italians say, "The better the salad, the worse the dinner."

He that sups upon Salad, goes not to Bed fasting.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2322.

<sup>13</sup> In a good salad there should be more oil than vinegar or salt.

ST. FRANCIS DE SALES. (c. 1600) See CAMUS, L'Esprit de Saint François de Sales.

According to the Spanish proverb, four persons are wanted to make a good salad: a spendthrift for oil, a miser for vinegar, a counsellor for salt, and a madman to stir all up.

ABRAHAM HAYWARD, The Art of Dining. (1852) "To dress a salad," says the learned Petrus Petronius, "you must have a prodigal to furnish the oil, a counselor to dispense the salt, a miser to dole out the vinegar, and a madman to stir it."

F. S. COZZENS, Sayings, p. 41. (1870)

<sup>14</sup> My salad days; When I was green in judgement.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 5, 73. (1606)

<sup>15</sup> He that laboreth nothyng holy, but catcheth a patche of euery thyng, is mete to pycke a salet.

ROBERT WHITINTON, Vulgaria, p. 2. (1520) To be engaged in some trivial occupation.

Angisus . . . made the kyng to go pyke a salett.

JOHN BALE, BISHOP OF OSSORY, The Actes of the Englysh Votaryes, ii, 5b. (1550)

'Twas a good lady: we may pick a thousand salads ere we light on such another herb.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, iv, 5, 15. (1602)

I haue turnd the queane out of doors to picke a Sallet.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Batchelars Banquet. (1603) Works (Grosart), i, 176.

SALT

<sup>1</sup> There is not in all her tall body a grain of salt. (Nulla in tam magnost corpore mica salis.)

CATULLUS, Odes. Ode lxxvi, l. 4. (c. 57 B. C.)

Quoted by QUINTILIAN, Inst. Orat., vi, iii, 18. Catullus is evidently using salt as a synonym for grace, but Quintilian is talking about the salt of wit, Attic salt. The Greek proverbial phrase is ἄλμη οὐκ ἔρεστιν αὐτῷ (There is no salt in him).

They are such as have neither salt nor sause in them.

LAURENCE TOMSON, tr., Calvin's Sermons on the Epistles to Timothie and Titus, 688/1. (1579) "That which gives liveliness, freshness, or piquancy to a person's character."—O.E.D.

We have some salt of our youth in us.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 3, 50. (1601) See under YOUTH.

Manhood, learning, gentleness, virtue, youth, liberality, and such like, the spice and salt that season a man.

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus and Cressida, i, 2, 276 (1601)

A man . . . with still much of the salt of youth about him.

TROLLOPE, The Belton Estate. Ch. 14. (1865)

<sup>2</sup> Sprinkled with the salt of refinement. (Cum humanitatis sparsae sale.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. i, epis. 13. (61 B. C.)

Whatever is salty and wholesome in speech is peculiar to the Attic people. (Quicquid est salsum aut salubre in oratione id proprium Atticorum est.)

CICERO, Orator. Ch. 26, sec. 90. (46 B. C.)

He had more of salt than of profusion (Plus salis quam sumptus habebat.)

CORNELIUS NEPOS, De Viris Illustribus: Atticus. (c. 40 B. C.) More taste than wealth. Quoted by MONTAIGNE, Essays, bk. iii, ch. 9. "Non ampliter, sed munditer convivium; plus salis quam sumptus" (A feast not profuse but elegant; more of salt than of expense).

Let your speech be always with grace, seasoned with salt. (ὁ λόγος ὅρων πάροτε ἐν χάριτι. ἁλατὶ ἡρτυμένος.)

New Testament: Colossians, iv, 6. (c. A. D. 59)

The Vulgate is, "Sermo vester semper in gratia sale sit conditus."

Attic salt. (Sal Atticum.)

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. xxxi, sec. 87 (c. A. D. 77) A proverbial phrase for refined wit.

Just as salt, if sprinkled freely over food, gives a special relish of its own, so in the case of those who have the salt of wit, there is something about their language which arouses in us a thirst to hear. (Ita hi quoque in dicendo habent quiddam. quod nobis faciat audiendi sitim.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. vi. ch. iii, sec. 19. (c. A. D. 80)

What neat repast shall feast us, light and choise Of Attick tast?

MILTON, Sonnet: To Mr. Lawrence. (a. 1674)

Triumph swam in my father's eyes, at the repartee: the Attic salt brought water into them.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. v, ch. 3. (1760)

A turn for punning, call it Attic salt.

BYRON, English Bards and Scotch Reviewers, l. 68. (1809) The French say, "C'est un attique."

<sup>3</sup> Table without salt, mouth without saliva. (Table sans sel, bouche san salive.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Sel. (1611)

There is a Hebrew proverb, "Meat without salt is fit only for dogs."

<sup>4</sup> Ouer salt there is no sauour. (Sopra sal non è sapore.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578) See also under BEST.

Salt sauoureth, and seasoneth all things.

JOHN FLORIO, Second Frutes, p. 53. (1591)

Of all smells, bread; of all tastes, salt.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Above salt there's no savour.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 70. (1666)

There is a Latin proverb, "Nil sole et sale utilius" (Nothing more useful than the sun and salt), and a Sanskrit one, "There are six flavors, and of them all salt is the chief"

<sup>5</sup> I never got salt to my porridge till I mounted at the Royal Exchange.

SAMUEL FOOTE, The Patron Act i. (1764) Never made any money.

<sup>6</sup> Salt spilt, is seldom taken clean up.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4065. (1732) From the Spanish, "Sal vertida, nunca bien cogida."

<sup>7</sup> His [Lot's] wife looked back from behind him, and she became a pillar of salt. (Respiciensque uxor eius post se, versa est in statuam salis.)

Old Testament: Genesis, xix, 26. (c. 550 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> Help me to salt, help me to sorrow.

JOHN GLYDE, Norfolk Garland, p. 44. (1872)

That "to help one to salt is to help one to sorrow" is as firmly credited as the belief that good luck attaches to the picking up of pins or cast horse-shoes.

W. A. DUTT, Norfolk Broads, p. 338. (1903) "If you ask for salt you ask for sorrow" is another proverbial expression of this superstition.

<sup>9</sup> Seruice without salt, by the rite of England, is a Cuckholds fee, if he claime it.

RICHARD HARVEY, Plaine Percevall, p. 9. (1590) Here's no salt; cuckolds will run away with the meat.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

<sup>10</sup> Salt is pure and white—there is something holy in salt.

NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE, American Note-Books, 4 Oct., 1840.

1 Can that which is unsavoury be eaten without salt? (Aut poterit comedi insulsum, quod non est sale conditum?)

Old Testament: Job, vi, 6. (c. 350 B.C.)
The poor sheep would eat him without salt (as they say).

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, The Metamorphoses of Ajax (1814), p. 3. (1596)
She could eat me without salt.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

2 That he do, on no default,
Euer presume to sit aboue the salt.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, *Satyr*s. Bk. ii, sat. 6. (1597) In former times, a large salt-cellar in the middle of the dining-table marked off the less honored guests from those more honored.
Hee neuer drinks below the salt.

BEN JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act ii, sc. 2. (1599)

The best company makes the upper end of the table, and not the salt-cellar.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, News from the Lower End of the Table. (1613)

Hee . . . humbly sate
Below the Salt, and munch'd his Sprat.
UNKNOWN, Wit Restor'd, l. 43. (1658)

3 You never brought salt to the cat. You know not what it is to provide for a family.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 388. (1721)

4 Give an Egyptian [a sixpence], . . . he will salt it down.

CHARLES G. LELAND, The Egyptian Sketch-Book, p. 57. (1873)

No one to hinder you from salting away as many millions as you can carry off!

R. W. CHAMBERS, Maids of Paradise. Ch. 7. (1902)

5 It is . . . a foolish bird that staieth the laying salt on her taile.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 327. (1580) An allusion to the jocular advice given children that the way to catch birds is to put salt on their tails.

You catch birds by laying salt on their tayles.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 155. (1639)
To catch regall birds, by laying salt upon their tailles.

EDMUND GAYTON, Don Quixot, p. 203. (1654)
Such great achievements cannot fail
To cast salt on a woman's tail.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. ii, canto i, l. 278. (1664)

Men catch knowledge by throwing their wit on the posteriors of a book, as boys do sparrows by flinging salt upon their tails.

SWIFT, A Tale of a Tub. Sec. 7. (1704)
My name is Finch—Betty Finch. . . . You can't catch me by throwing salt on my tail.

CHARLES LAMB, Mr. H—, Act ii. (1806)
Plenty of subjects going about, for them that know how to put salt upon their tails.

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 4. (1858)

6 Salt is good: but if the salt have lost his salt-ness, wherewith will ye season it? Have salt in yourselves. (καλὸν τὸ ἅλας· ἐὰν δὲ τὸ ἅλας ἀναλὸν γένηται, ἐν τίνι αὐτὸ ἀρτύσετε; ἔχετε ἐν ἑαυτοῖς ἅλας.)

New Testament: Mark, ix, 50. (c. A.D. 55)
Also Luke xiv, 34; Matthew, v, 13. The Vulgate is, "Bonum est sal: quod si sal insulsum fuerit: in quo illud condietis? Habete in vobis sal."

It is long before salt come to his saltnesse, but being once seasoned, it neuer looseth his savour.

JOHN LYLX, Euphues (Arber), p. 70. (1579)

7 As much out of order, as if the Salt had been thrown down, or an Hare had crossed his way.

ANDREW MARVELL, The Growth of Popery, p. 23. (c. 1678) To spill salt is considered unlucky, and when done at the table is supposed to forebode a quarrel between the two between whom the salt is spilt. To avert this, it is necessary for the person spilling the salt to throw a pinch of it over his left shoulder. Henry Holt, so he once told the compiler, did this at dinner one evening, and the very décolleté lady at his left, on whose back a few grains fell, turned to him with a smile and said, "You can't catch me that way,"—a clever blending of two proverbs.

Some account the falling of salt upon the table ominous.

JOHN FLAVEL, Method of Grace, iii, 50. (1681)
The salt is spilt, to me it fell.

JOHN GAY, Fables. Pt. i, fab. 37. (a. 1732)
You have overturned the salt, and that's a sign of anger.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)
If the salt thou chance to spill,
Token sure of coming ill.

SEBASTIAN EVANS, Brother Fabian's MSS. (1865)
They threw the salt over their shoulders . . . in propitiation of the evil powers, when they spilled it at table.

HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD, Three Quiet Ladies of the Name of Luce. Harper's, Nov.. 1884, p. 889/1.

8 Ye are the salt of the earth. (ὁμεῖς ἐστέ τὸ ἅλας τῆς γῆς.)

New Testament: Matthew, v, 13. (c. A.D. 65)
The Vulgate is, "Vos estis sal terrae." Christ is addressing those who have been persecuted and reviled for loyalty to Him.

Ye been the salt of the erthe and the savour
CHAUCER, The Somnour's Tale, l. 488. (c. 1388)
Of erthe ye ben cleped salt.

UNKNOWN, Political Poems. No. 21. (c. 1420)
They are the truly excellent of the earth—its salt.

HENRY VENN, in CARUS, Simeon, p. 84. (1790)
You will see Hunt—one of those happy souls
Which are the salt of the earth.

SHELLEY, Letter to Maria Gisborne, l. 209. (1820)

Retired sea-captains, . . . some of the salt of the earth, who had formerly been the salt of the sea.

H. D. THOREAU, Cape Cod. Ch. 2. (1855) See also TWAIN, Life on the Mississippi, ch. 8. (1874) BOUCHER, The Case of the Baker Street Irregulars, p. 98. (1940) WALLING, A Corpse by Any Other Name, p. 231. (1943) The salt of the earth, the hearts of gold.

PHYLLIS MCGINLEY, Charlie's in Town. (1940) In my estimation he is the cream of the earth.

MAYOR FRANK HAGUE, of Jersey City, speaking of Jimmy Walker, ex-mayor of New York City. See American Mercury, Feb., 1941.

They're the stuff to build the world with. Salt of the earth.

STEFAN HEYM, Hostages, p. 286. (1942) Not a work of art, . . . just the salt of the earth, that was all.

HELEN MACINNES, Assignment in Brittany, p. 184. (1942) O.E.D. says the phrase has been "in recent trivial use, the powerful, the aristocratic, the wealthy," but undoubtedly its prevailing sense now is the essentially good, true, humane and kindly.

<sup>1</sup> A grain of salt being added. (Addito salis grano.)

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. xxiii, sec. 8. (c. A. D. 77) Pliny is telling the story of Pompey, who, when he captured the palace of Mithridates, discovered there an antidote against poison which was "to be taken fasting, a grain of salt being added." Hence, the proverbial "cum grano salis," with a grain of salt, to accept a statement with a certain amount of reserve.

This is to be taken with a grain of salt.

JOHN TRAPP, Commentary on Revelation, vi. 11. (1647)

<sup>2</sup> Wee thanne mynde hauende of the salt that in the paleis wee eaten.

WYCLIF, tr., Old Testament: Ezra, iv, 14. (1332) You who haue eaten much salt out of your owne house.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, i, 11b. (1581) Pettie, tr.

The real fact is . . . I have eaten the King's salt.

DUKE OF WELLINGTON, in GLEIG, Life. App. 702. (1809)

One does not eat a man's salt, as it were, at these dinners. There is nothing sacred in this kind of London hospitality.

THACKERAY, The Newcomes. Ch. 5. (1854)

One has no business to eat a man's salt and then say nasty things about him.

W. E. NORRIS, Miss Sholto. Ch. 1. (1889)

NOT WORTH HIS SALT, see under WORTH.

II—Salt: Eating Salt Together

<sup>3</sup> Thou hast turned thy back on a great oath made by salt and board. (ἔρκον δ' ἀνοσφιλῆς μέγαν | ἄλας τε καὶ τράπεζαν.)

ARCHILOCHUS, Iambics. Frag. 96. Loeb. (c. 650 B. C.)

Where's the salt? and where the board? (ποῦ δ' ἄλας; ποῦ τράπεζα;)

DEMOSTHENES, On the Embassy. Sec. 190. (c. 340 B. C.) The salt of friendship.

Untrue to the salt. (ἄλας παρῆβαινον.)

DEMOSTHENES, On the Embassy. Sec. 191.

And the Lord spake unto Aaron, . . . it is a covenant of salt for ever before the Lord unto thee and to thy seed with thee. (Dixitque Dominus ad Aaron, . . . Pactum salis est sempiternum coram Domino, tibi ac filiis tuis.)

Old Testament: Numbers, xviii, 19. (c. 550 B. C.)

Salt among the eastern nations was the type of hospitality, . . . which is the reason, probably, why it is named here in preference to bread, or other articles also in daily use at our tables.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 249. (1814)

It may be added that, while the St. James version of the New Testament: Acts, i, 4, reads, "Being assembled together," the Greek word συναλιζόμενος means literally "taking salt together," from ἄλας. or ἄλας, salt.

<sup>4</sup> As the saying goes, you cannot get to know a man until you have consumed the proverbial amount of salt in his company. (κατὰ τὴν παροιμίαν γὰρ οὐκ ἔστιν εἰδῆσαι ἀλλήλους πρὶν τοὺς λεγομένους ἄλας συναναλώσαι.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. viii, ch. 3, sec. 8. (c. 330 B. C.) See also Eudemian Ethics, vii, 2.

You have to hoe a row of corn with a man to know him.

H. W. THOMPSON, Body, Boots and Britches, p. 485. (1940)

<sup>5</sup> The well-known saying is true, men must eat many a peck of salt together before the claims of friendship are fulfilled. (Verumque illud est, quod dicitur, multos modios salis simul edendos esse, ut amicitiae munus expletum sit.)

CICERO, De Amicitia. Ch. xix, sec. 67. (44 B. C.)

A friend who has consumed with us in the course of time the proverbial bushel of salt. (τὸν θρυλούμενον ἐκείνου χρόνῳ τῶν ἁλῶν συγκατεθδοκῶς μέδιμνον.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Having Many Friends, 94A. (c. A. D. 95) Repeated in 482B.

One should eat a bushel of salt with him whom he meaneth to make his friend.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 48. (1579)

As Plutarch adviseth, one must eat modium salis, a bushel of salt with him, before he choose his friend.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. iii, mem. 4, subs. 2. (1621)

Before you make a friend, eat a bushel of salt with him.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 626. (1640)

Before one can know a friend really well,

One must eat with him all the salt possible.

(Devant que bien l'on cognoisse un amy, Manger convient muy se sel avec lui.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français. Vol. ii, p. 217. (1859) Citing an old French proverb.

A more modern form is, "Pour bien connoître un homme, il faut avoir mangé un muid de sel avec lui" (To know a man well, it is necessary to have eaten a peck of salt with him). This is quoted by CERVANTES,

Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 1. The French also say of two persons whose friendship is not likely to last long, "Elles ne mangeront pas un minot de sel ensemble" (They won't eat a bushel of salt together).

<sup>1</sup> Trust nobody before you have eaten a peck of salt with him. (Nemini fidas, nisi cum quo prius modium salis absumpseris.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. i, No. 14. (1508)

Erasmus devotes nearly a page to this proverb. Included by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 30, with the rendering, "Trust no man onles thou hast fyrst eaten a bushel of salte wyth hym."

You should eat a bushel of salt with a man before you trust him.

EDWARD WARD, Female Policy, p. 83. (1716)

<sup>2</sup> He that hath many friends eateth too much salt with his meat.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 19/1. (1659)

<sup>3</sup> Had it not beene better for thee to haue eaten salt with the Philosophers in Greece, then sugar with the courtiers of Italy?

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 99. (1579)

Thou hadst better eat salt with the philosophers of Greece, than sugar with the courtiers of Italy.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740

<sup>4</sup> Don't wait for the proverbial bushel of salt. (οὐδ' ἀναμένει τὸν θρυλούμενον τῶν ἀλῶν.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Brotherly Love. Sec. 482B. (C. A. D. 95)

The salt of his friendship opened the wounds of my gratitude, for I had eaten salt from his hand.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. v, Apologue 2. (c. 1257)

<sup>5</sup> They two did ever eat together at a common board. (οἱ μίαν ἀμφω ἑταῖροι ἀεὶ δαίνυντο τράπεζαν.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls: Hylas. No. xiii, l. 38 (c. 270 B. C.)

Drawn by comradeship to eat of the same salt. (συσσίτια καθ' ἑταιρείαν συνελθούτων ἐπὶ τοὺς αὐτοὺς ἄλας.)

PHILO, De Specialibus Legibus. Bk. iii, sec. 96.

(C. A. D. 40) Philo refers to the eating of salt as a symbol of peace in De Iosepho, 210

Those at the salt and beans. (οἱ περὶ ἄλα καὶ κύαμον.)

PLUTARCH, Symposium. Bk. v, sec. 684E. (C. A. D. 95) Trespass not against the salt and the board. (ἄλα καὶ τράπεζαν μὴ παραβαίνειν.)

ZENOBIOUS, Adagia, i, 62. (C. A. D. 130)

Passe not over salt and the table. (Salem et mensam ne praetereas.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vi, No. 10. (1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 57. (1550) Taverner adds, "As who shulde saye, neglecte not the company of frendes." Sometimes rendered,

"Salt and the table never wear off,"—one must never forget those whom one has entertained at table, or with whom one has eaten salt.

Salt, from its power of preserving bodies from putrefaction, was thought to have something in it of a divine nature, and was thence adopted as a symbol of perpetuity, and made use of as a means to conciliate friendship. The dread which many women feel on overturning a salt-cellar is doubtless a relict of the veneration in which this substance was anciently held.

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 135. (1814)

SALVATION

<sup>6</sup> What must I do to be saved? (τί με δεῖ ποιεῖν ἵνα σωθῶ;)

New Testament: Acts, xvi, 30. (C. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Quid me oportet facere, ut salvus niam?"

I am the door: by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved. (ἐγὼ εἰμι ἡ θύρα· δι' ἐμοῦ ἐάν τις εἰσέλθῃ σωθήσεται.)

New Testament: John, x, 9. (C. A. D. 110) The Vulgate is, "Ego sum ostium. Per me si quis introierit, salvabitur." Bâbism was founded upon this passage by Mirza Ali Mohammed, who told the people that he was the bâb or door through which all must pass to enter Paradise.

Salvation by the cross. (In cruce salus.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi Bk. ii, ch. 2. (c. 1420) There are two other related medieval proverbial phrases, "Salus per Christum redemptorem" (Salvation through Christ the Redeemer), and "In solo Deo salus" (Salvation comes from God alone) "Extra ecclesiam nulla salus" (Outside the church there is no salvation) is a maxim of the Roman Catholic Church, based upon the first article of the Athanasian creed. St. AUGUSTINE, De Bapt., iv, c., xvii, 24, gives it in slightly different form, "Salus extra ecclesiam non est," referring back to St. Cyprian's dictum (De Cath. Eccl. Unitate, vi), "Habere non potest Deum patrem qui ecclesiam non habet matrem" (He cannot have God for his father who has not the church for his mother).

Despair of being saved "except thou be born again."

RICHARD BAXTER, The Saint's Everlasting Rest Ch. 6. (1650)

All that is necessary to salvation is contained in two virtues: faith in Christ, and obedience to laws.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Ch. 43. (1651)

There may be salvation for a virtuous infidel

ADDISON, The Spectator, 16 Aug., 1712.

<sup>7</sup> Ye were as a firebrand plucked out of the burning. (Quasi torris raptus ab incendio.)

Old Testament: Amos, iv, 11. (c. 500 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> Behold, now is the accepted time; behold, now is the day of salvation. (ἰδοὺ νῦν καιρὸς εὐπρόσληκτος, ἰδοὺ νῦν ἡμέρα σωτηρίας.)

New Testament: II Corinthians, vi, 2. (A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Tempore accepto exaudivi te, et in die salutis adiuvi te."

- 1
My salvation must its doom receive,
Not from what others, but what I believe.
JOHN DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 303. (1682)
No man has the right to abandon the care of his salvation to another.
THOMAS JEFFERSON, Notes on Religion. (1776)
No one can be redeemed by another.
SUBHADRA BHIKSHU, A Buddhist Catechism.
(1888)
- 2
Souls are not saved in bundles.
EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Worship. (1860)
- 3
The knowledge of sin is the beginning of salvation. (Initium est salutis notitia peccati.)
EPICURUS, Fragments. Frag. 522. (c. 290 B.C.)
See SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epist. xxviii, sec. 9.
- 4
What's better for a man than Salvation? (An quid est homini Salute melius?)
PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 717. (c. 200 B.C.)
I'm saved because I'm lost, yet if I'm not lost, I'm lost lots worse. (Salvos sum, quia pereo; si non peream, plane perierim.)
PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 706. (c. 186 B.C.)
- 5
He that will not be saved needs no preacher.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1670)
He that will not be saved, needs no Sermon.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2351. (1732)

SALVE

See also Plaster

- 6
Seik your sauce where you got your ail.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 90. (c. 1595)
Seek your salve where you got your sore.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 292. (1721)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4090. (1732)
Seek your sa' where you got your ail, and beg your barm where you buy your ale.
HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 257. (1862)
- 7
Al which sores I haue salued vp with apt plasters.
ABRAHAM FLEMING, A Panoplie of Epistles, p.
52. (1576)
I salved over that feeling.
KINGSLEY, Allon Locke. Ch. 14. (1850)
We hear that they have been salving over Pye.
MRS. HENRY WOOD, The Channings, i, xi, 157.
(1862)
Endeavour to salve their wounded pride.
BOSWORTH SMITH, Carthage, p. 373. (1878)
- 8
Ley to this olde sor a newe salve.
JOHN GOWER, In Praise of Peace, l. 122. (1399)
Where there is no sore, there needes no salue.
EDWIN SANDYS, Sermons, xxi, 363. (c. 1580)
Different sores must have different salves.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1283. (1732)
- 9
This however was no Salve for the tender
Consciences of the Quakers.
UNKNOWN. Gentleman's Magazine, vi, 669/1.
(1736)

You Unitarians could salve your consciences with the equivoque.

- CHARLES LAMB, Unitarian Protests. (1825)
Jack salved his conscience over with the old plea of duty.
R. S. SURTEES, Mr. Sponge's Sporting Tour. Ch.
25. (1852)
Ranald has this salve for his conscience.
KINGSLEY, Hereward the Wake. Ch. 4. (1865)
- 10
A salue there is for euery sore.
UNKNOWN, Scholehouse of Women, l. 401.
(1542)
There's a salve for every sore.
GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Supposes. Act ii, sc. 1.
(1566) Cited by Clarke, Ray, and many others.
Seek a salve for my sore.
GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 159. (1576)
Would you haue . . . one salue for all sores?
one sauce for all meates?
JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 43. (1579)
O ye Gods, haue ye ordeyned, . . . for euery sore a salue, for euery paine a plaster, leaving only loue remediless?
JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 61.
But let us hence, my sovereign, to provide
A salve for any sore that may betide.
SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iv, 6, 88. (1591)

SAMSON

- 11
Sampson with his strong Body, had a weak
Head, or he would not have laid it in a Harlot's lap.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.
There is more of Sampson than of Solomon in him. i. e. great bodily strength but little sense
ROBERT FORBY, The Vocabulary of East Anglia,
p. 430. (a. 1825)
- 12
He was somewhat given to women, . . . so hard it is to find a Sampson without a Dalila.
THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iv, ch.
20. (1642) Of Edward the Black Prince

SAND

- 13
Do you remember how small grains of sand are? yet if enough are placed in a ship, they sink it. (Numquid minutissima sunt grana arenarum? sed si arena amplius in navem mittatur, mergit illam.)
ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. (A.D. 397)
As Austin said, many grains and small sands sink a ship.
ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy,
Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. iv, subs. 7. (1621)
Many little sands gather'd to an heape, falle not to swallow a greet vessel.
THOMAS ADAMS, Works, p. 708. (1630)
Many sands will sink a ship.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 11. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 118. (1670)
Many Drops of Water will sink a Ship.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3345. (1732)
MANY LEAKS WILL SINK A SHIP, see LEAK.

<sup>1</sup> You seem to be putting sand in the bearings instead of oiling them.

J. J. CONNINGTON, No Past Is Dead, p. 140. (1942)

<sup>2</sup> [He] pays himself, and leaves Pitreichy to the long sands.

SIR J. L. FOUNTAINHALL, in BROWN, Supplementary Decisions, ii, 539. (1671) In the lurch.

How quickly were they put again to the long sands (as we say).

JOHN BROWN, The Life of Faith. Bk. i, ch. 2. (1678) In difficulties.

<sup>3</sup> The dangerous bar in the harbour's mouth is only grains of sand.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Trifles. (1838)

<sup>4</sup> When I got to camp I warn't feeling very brash, there warn't much sand in my craw.

MARK TWAIN, Huckleberry Finn. Ch. 8. (1884)

In ch. 28 is the sentence, "She had more sand in her than any girl I ever see." "Sand," of course, is courage.

These girls haven't any sand.

CLYDE FITCH, The Climbers. Act i. (1901)

TO BUILD UPON SAND, see BUILDING.

OUR SANDS ALMOST RUN, see under DEATH.

THE SAND OUTRAN NUMBER, see under NUMBER.

SANITY

<sup>5</sup> Sanity consists in not being subdued by your means.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Considerations by the Way. (1860)

Sanity is a madness put to good uses.

GEORGE SATAYANA, Little Essays, p. 146 (c. 1925)

<sup>6</sup> Who then is sane? He who is not a fool. (Quisnam igitur sanus? Qui non stultus.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. ii, sat. 3, l. 153 (35 B.C.)

He who can simulate sanity will be sane. (Qui poterit sanum fingere, sanus erit.)

OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 504. (c. 1 B.C.)

Every man has a sane spot somewhere.

R. L. STEVENSON AND LLOYD OSBOURNE, The Wrecker. (1892)

SANTA CLAUS

<sup>7</sup> Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies. . . . Thank God! he lives and he lives forever.

FRANK (FRANCIS PHARCELLUS) CHURCH, Is There a Santa Claus? An editorial in the New York Sun, 21 Sept., 1897, written in response to a letter from eight-year-old Virginia O'Hanlon asking, "Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?"

<sup>8</sup> No sane local official who has hung up an empty stocking over the municipal fireplace is going to shoot Santa Claus just before a hard Christmas.

ALFRED E. SMITH, Newspaper Interview, New York City, 30 Nov., 1933. Referring to New Deal handouts. The first known mention of shooting Santa Claus.

Nobody kills Santa Claus.

KENT, Jason Burr's First Case, p. 80. (1941)

SARCASM

<sup>9</sup> Sarcasm I now see to be, in general, the language of the devil.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 4. (1836) Sarcasm is the questionable weapon of questionable intellects.

ROBERT G. DEAN, Layoff, p. 125. (1942)

<sup>10</sup> Keep a store of sarcasms, and know how to use them.

BALTASAR GRACIAN, The Art of Worldly Wisdom, xxxvii. (1647)

<sup>11</sup> This is rote sarcastikül.

ARTEMUS WARD (C. F. BROWNE), A Visit to Brigham Young. (1866)

SATAN, see Devil

SATIETY

<sup>12</sup> There is satiety of all things, of sleep and love, of sweet song and the goodly dance. (πάντων μὲν κόπος ἐστίν.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xiii, l. 636. (c. 850 B.C.)

Even honey may cloy, and the gladsome flowers of Aphrodite's garden. (κόρον δ' ἔχει | καὶ μέλι καὶ τὰ τέρπν' ἀνθε' Ἀφροδίσεια.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. vii, l. 52. (c. 485 B.C.) Hast thou found honey? eat so much as is sufficient for thee, lest thou be filled therewith and vomit it. (Mel invenisti, comede quod sufficit tibi, ne forte satiatu evomas illud.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xxv, 16. (c. 350 B.C.) Like the priest's runaway slave, I loathe the sweet wafers; it's bread I want, and now prefer to honeyed cakes. (Utque sacerdotis fugitivus liba recuso; | pane egeo iam mellitis potiore placentis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. x, l. 10. (20 B.C.)

The slave in the priest's household had been fed so constantly on sacrificial cakes that he ran away to get some plain fare.

The full stomach turns from the honey of Hybla. (Hyblaeum refugit satur liquorem.)

PETRONIUS, Fragment. No. 120. (c. A.D. 60)

Salomon . . . seith, sicut qui mel comedit multum, non est ei bonum: . . . To Engliche-men this is to mene . . . The man that moche hony eteth, . . . his mawe it englemeth [cloys].

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, Passus xv, l. 54. (1377)

And Salomon seith, "If thou hast founden hony, ete of it that suffeeth; for if thou ete of it out of measure, thou shalt spewe."

CHAUCER, The Tale of Melibeus, 2606. (c. 1386) Hony it selfe, if one have to mutch of it, seemeth nothing sweet.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 269. (1576)

Honnie taken excessiueley cloyeth the stomacke though it be honnie.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 434. (1580)

The sweetest honey

Is loathsome in his own deliciousness
And in the taste confounds the appetite.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 6, 11. (1595)

A surfeit of the sweetest things

The deepest loathing to the stomach brings.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, ii, 2, 137. (1596)

They surfeited with honey and began
To loathe the taste of sweetness, whereof a little More than a little is by much too much.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iii, 2, 71. (1597)

Too much Cordial will destroy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5262. (1732)

1
Doest thou not know that the weak stom-acke if it be cloyed with one dyet doth soone surfet?

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 93. (1579)

There is nothing so satiating, so sickening, as plenty. (Il n'est rien si empeschant, si degousté, que l'abondance.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 42. (1580)

They are as sick that surfeit with too much, as they that starve with nothing.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 2, 6.

Abundance generates satiety. (Abondanza genera fastidio.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 175.
(1856) The French say, "De la quantité, naît la satiété."

2
Dull satiety blunts all eagerness of expectation. (ἀπὸ γὰρ κόρος ἀμβλύνει | ἀλάνης ταχείας ἐπιθίας.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. No. i, l. 82. (470 B.C.)

"Satiety begets insolence," as the ancients have said. ("τίκει γὰρ κόρος ὕβριν," ὡς ὁ τῶν παλαιῶν λόγος.)

PHILO, De Virtutibus. Sec. 162. (c. A. D. 40) A proverbial phrase used by Solon, Theognis and frequently used by Philo.

Satiety begets distaste. (La satiété engendre le degoust.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 15. (1580)

3
Full pigeons find cherries bitter.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 509. (1623) The French say, "À colombe sôul sont cerises amères" (To a surfeited bird cherries are bitter).

SATIRE

4
How terrible a weapon is satire in the hand of a great genius!

COLLEY CIBBER, Apology for His Life. Ch. 2.
(1740)

5
Strange! that a Man who has wit enough to write a Satire should have folly enough to publish it.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1742

6
The satire should be like the porcupine,
That shoots sharp quills out in every angry line.

BISHOP JOSEPH HALL, Virgidemiae, v. (1598)

Satires . . . must lance wide

The wounds of men's corruption; ope the side
Of vice; search deep for dead flesh and rank sores.

JOHN DAY, The Parliament of Bees, v. (1641)

Satire should, like a polished razor keen,
Wound with a touch that's scarcely felt or seen.

MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, To the Imitator of the First Satire of Horace. (a. 1762)

7
Satirists gain the applause of others through fear, not through love.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 72. (1823)

8
He who satire loves to sing
On himself will satire bring.

GRUFFYDD HIRAETHOG, Couplet. (c. 1550)

George Borrow, tr.

Men ought to finde the difference between Saltnesse and Bitternesse. Certainly, he that hath a Satyricall vaine, as he maketh others afraid of his Wit, so he had need be afraid of others Memory.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Discourse. (1612)

When there's more Malice shown than Matter,
On the Writer falls the Satyr.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

9
It is difficult not to write satire. (Difficile est saturam non scribere.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. i, l. 29. (c. A. D. 120)

10
Satire or sense, alas! can Sporus feel?
Who breaks a butterfly upon a wheel?

POPE, Epistle to Dr. Arbuthnot, l. 307. (1732)

"Sporus," Lord John Hervey.

Satire's my weapon, but I'm too discreet
To run amuck, and tilt at all I meet.

POPE, Horace: Satires. Bk. ii, sat. i, l. 69. (1733)

11
Satire will be always unpleasant to those that deserve it.

THOMAS SHADWELL, A True Widow: Preface.
(1679)

12
Satire is a sort of glass wherein beholders do generally discover everybody's face but their own.

SWIFT, The Battle of the Books: Preface. (1704)

Satire is always as sterile as it is shameful and as impotent as it is insolent.

OSCAR WILDE, The English Renaissance of Art.
Lecture in New York, 9 Jan., 1882.

SAUCE

13
If the flemynges had achyued the prise ouer them, they had bene serued of the same sauce.

LORD BERNERS, tr., Froissart, i, 726. (1523)

They serue them with like sause, requitinge deathe for deathe.

RICHARD EDEN, tr., *The Decades of the Newe
Worlde* (Arber), p. 70. (1555)

Hee thought to giue them a soppe of the same sauce.

ROBERT GREENE, Euphues His Censure. (1587)
In Works (Grosart), vi, 223.

<sup>1</sup> Fire is the best of sauce. (τῶν ἡδυσμάτων τὸ πῦρ εἶναι κρᾶτιστον.)

EVENUS. (c. 450 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 50A, 126D, 697D, 1010C.

Mustard is a good Sauce, but Mirth is better.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3494. (1732)

HUNGER IS THE BEST SAUCE, see under HUNGER.

<sup>2</sup> Tho' the Sauce be good, yet you need not forsake the Meat for it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5012. (1732)

<sup>3</sup> Whan she sawe sweete sauce began to waxe soure,

She waxt as sowre as he, and as well could lowre.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 1. (1546)

SWEET MEAT WILL HAVE SOUR SAUCE, see under SWEET AND SOUR.

A crabb of the wood is sawce very good

For the crabb of the sea;

The wood of a crabb is good for a drabb
That will not her husband obey.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 6. (1659)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 210. (1670)

<sup>4</sup> The same for Attius as for Tettius. (Attio idem, quod Tettio.)

MARCUS VARRO, Testamentum. Frag. 543, Bücheler. (c. 50 B. C.) Varro is saying that children born in ten months or eleven months after his death are to have equal rights under his will, but Attius and Tettius stand for any names, like Smith and Jones in English, and the phrase soon became proverbial.

As well for the coowe calf as for the bull.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

That that's good sawce for a goose, is good for a gander.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 98. (1670) The French say, "Sauce bonne pour l'oie, est bonne pour le jars."

I could not justly complain, seeing that what was sause for a goose was sause for a gander.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, The English Rogue, ii, 129. (1671)

What's sauce for a goose is sauce for a gander.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

A proverb of large equity . . . declares that "sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander."

R. D. BLACKMORE, Perlycross. Ch. 35. (1894)

In frequent use, recently by PHOEBE A. TAYLOR, Going, Going, Gone, p. 103. (1943)

<sup>5</sup> More sauce than pig.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's Almanack, sig. C7. (1671) SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738) The French say, "La sauce vaut mieux que le poisson" (The sauce is better than the fish).

SAVAGE

<sup>6</sup> A savage is a man of one story, and that one story a cellar. When a man begins to be civilized, he raises another story. . . . The savage is a man one story deep; the civilized man is thirty stories high.

H. W. BEECHER, Address, Liverpool, Eng., 16 Oct., 1863. A German epigram, "Der civilisierte Wilde ist der schlimmste aller Wilden" (The civilized savage is the worst of all savages), is attributed to C. J. Weber.

<sup>7</sup> Ere the base laws of servitude began,
When wild in woods the noble savage ran.

DRYDEN, The Conquest of Granada. Pt. i, act i, sc. 1. (1670)

<sup>8</sup> No one is so savage that he cannot be tamed. (Nemo adeo ferus est, ut non mitescere possit.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. i, l. 39. (20 B. C.)

<sup>9</sup> The savage is to ages what the child is to years.
SHELLEY, The Defence of Poetry. (1821)

<sup>10</sup> Savageness begets savageness.

HERBERT SPENCER, Education. Ch. 3. (1861)

SAVING

See also Economy, Sparing, Thrift

<sup>11</sup> All I've saved to buy a coffin must go to pay the fine. (οὐ μ' ἐχρῆν σορὸν πρίασθαι, τοῦτ' ὀφλῶν ἀπέρχομαι.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Acharnians, l. 691. (425 B. C.)

<sup>12</sup> Saving in season, spending with reason, make the good household. (Amasser en saison, dépenser par raison, font la bonne maison.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, i, 268. (1814)

<sup>13</sup> The groat is ill-saved that shames its master.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870), p. 332. (1605) Cited by Ray, Fuller, and Trench.

<sup>14</sup> Save up your gains lest you go short some day. (Ne tibi quid desit, quod quaesisti, utere parce.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 24. (c. 175 B. C.) Keep some till more come.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Saving. (1941)

PREPARE FOR A RAINY DAY, see under DAY.

<sup>15</sup> 'Tis not all saved that's put i' the purse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 45. (1639)

All is not won, that is put in the Purse.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 531. (1732)

All is not gain that is got into the purse.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. iii, ch. 30. (1767)

<sup>16</sup> Save something for the man that rides on the white horse. For old age, when the head grows white.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 129. (1639)
RAY, p. 139; FULLER, No. 4068.

Keep something for the sore feet. Save something for age, distress, and necessity.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 226. (1721)
Jack would feel a little consarn for not being able to lay past anything for the sore foot.

WILLIAM CARLETON, The Three Tasks. (1830)

1 He that saveth his dinner will have the more for supper.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 241. (1639)

RAY, p. 79; FULLER, No. 2288. From the French, "Qui garde son disne il a mieux à souper." Ray interprets it to mean, "He that spares when he is young, may the better spend when he is old."

2 All things are cheap to the saving, dear to the wasteful.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

The thrifty maxime of the wary Dutch, is to save all the money they can touch.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

'Tis less discredit to abridge petty charges, than to stoop to petty gettings.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

If you'd be wealthy, think of saving more than of getting: The Indies have not made Spain rich, because her Outgoes equal her Incomes.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

The Germans say, "Sparen ist grössere Kunst als erwerben" (There is more art in saving than in getting).

For Age and Want save while you may;

No morning Sun lasts a whole Day.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754.

3 Lay Things by; they may come to use.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3154. (1732)

Who nothing save, shall nothing have.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6338.

4 No Alchymy to saving.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 119. (1640)

No alchymy like to thrift.

SAMUEL PALMER, Proverbs, p. 162. (1710)

5 Too late is saving at the bottom. (Sera in fundo parsimonia.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 192.

(1778) Quoting Seneca. It's too late to save when the purse is empty. TOO LATE TO SPARE WHEN ALL IS SPENT, see under SPARING

6 It is stupid to save when you know not for whom you are saving. (Quod nescias cui serves stultum est parcere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 583. (c. 43 B. C.)

What are you saving for? You can't take it with you.

VIRGINIA PERDUE, The Singing Clock. Ch. 2. (1941) See under RICHES.

7 A good sayer is a good server.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 350. (1678)

Some savers in a house do well.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 198. (1678)

8 Hang saving; bring us up a half-p'orth of cheese.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

9 Laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come. (ἀποθησαυρίζοντας ἑαυτοῖς θεμέλιον καλὸν εἰς τὸ μέλλον.)

New Testament: I Timothy, vi, 19. (c. A. D. 60)

The Vulgate is, "Thesaurizare sibi fundamentum bonum in futurum." FOR A RAINY DAY, see under DAY.

10 Saving is the first getting.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 265. (1666)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4069. (1732)

A little saving is no sin.

JOHN WOLCOT, Works, ii, 313. (1792) Cited as a proverb "that economic souls revere."

11 Kype [scrape] and save, and thou schalle have;

Frest [lend] and leve, and thou schalle crave; Walow and wast, and thou schalle want.

UNKNOWN, Reliquiae Antiquae, i, 316. (c. 1450)

Of saving cometh having.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 196. (1633)

RAY, p. 139; FULLER, No. 6106.

It is saving, not getting that is the mother of riches.

WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 20 April, 1829.

12 To save a snuff he throws away whole candles.

UNKNOWN, Cornish Proverbs, in Notes and Queries. Ser. iii, vol. vi, p. 495. (1864)

TO SAVE AT THE SPIGOT, see under SPARING.

A PENNY SAVED IS A PENNY GOT, see under PENNY.

SAVING

"They say" see under Speech

I—Saying and Doing

See also Preaching and Practice; Word and Deed

13 They say one thing, but do another. (ἀλλὰ μὲν λέγουσιν, ἀλλὰ δὲ πράττουσιν.)

AESOP, Fables: The Wolf and the Old Woman.

(c. 570 B. C.) A wolf, passing a house, heard an old woman say to a crying child that if it didn't stop crying she would throw it to the wolf, and so the wolf waited a long time. But finally he heard the woman saying, "If the wolf comes here, we will kill him," and went on his way disgusted.

14 Do as we say, and not as we do. (Faisons ce que nous disons, et ne faites pas ce que nous faisons.)

BOCCACCIO, Decameron. Day iii, tale 7. (c.

1350) The French by Sabatier de Castres.

Take ye no heade to that which I do, but marke that which I say.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 139. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Do you that good which I say, not that ill which I do. (Haz lo que bien digo, y no lo que mal hago.)

FERNANDO DE ROJAS (?), Celestina, p. 27. (a. 1499) Mabbe, tr.

Do as the friar saith, not as he doth.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1670)

Preachers say, Do as I say, not as I do.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Preaching. (1689)
The common saying of "Do as I say, not as I do," is usually reversed in the actual experience of life.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help. Ch. 2. (1859)

They speken, but they bente never his bowe.

CHAUCEUR (?), Troilus and Cressida, ii, 861. (c. 1380) See under ROBIN HOOD.

Who can say bet than he, who can do werse?

CHAUCEUR, The Squieres Tale, l. 592. (c. 1388)

The more there's said the less there's done.

GEORGE COLMAN, SR., Polly Honeycombe. Sc. 1. (1760) Quoted as "an old and true saying."

He who speaks without modesty will perform with difficulty.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xiv, ch. 21. (c. 500 B.C.) Legge, tr.

Doing is better than saying.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 41. (1633)

Talking big signifies little. Doing is all.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 124. (1709)

Nothing happens from saying so.

Meditations in Wall Street, p. 135. (1940)

No sooner said than done, so acts your man of worth. (Dictum factumque facit frux.)

ENNIUS, Annals. Bk. ix, frag. 315, Loeb. (c. 180 B.C.)

No sooner said than done. (ἄμ' ἔπος ἄμ' ἔργον.)

DIOGENIANUS, Adagia, i, 36. (c. A. D. 125)

At the same time said and done. (Simul et dictum et factum.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ix, 72. (1508)

So said, so done.

SHAKESPEARE, The Taming of the Shrew, i, 2, 186. (1594)

No sooner said than done.

HEAD AND KIRKMAN, The English Rogue. Pt. ii, ch. 8. (1671) MOIR, Mansie Waugh. Ch. 17. (1824) BOLDREWOOD, Robbery Under Arms. Ch. 40. (1888)

From the said vnto the deed there is a great throw. (Dal detto al fatto ci è un grande tratto.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 18. (1578) Repeated on fo. 29.

It's a long step from saying to doing. (Del dicho al hecho hay gran trecho.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 34. (1615)

The French say, "De parole à l'action, le chemin est long."

He can talk, but he can't do. (Nēng shuo pu nēng hsing.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 193. (1872)

I'm always talking and never doing.

ST. JOHN ERVINE, John Ferguson. Act i. (1919)

Well done is better than well said.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

Many talk like Philosophers, and live like Fools.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3358. (1732)

Saiyng and dooyng are two thingis.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

To saye and doe are twoe thynges.

THOMAS WILSON, Upon Usury, p. 249. (1572)

Saying is a different thing from doing. (Le dire est aultre chose que le faire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 31. (1580) The Italians say, "Il dire è una cosa, il fare è un'altra."

I see that saying and doing are two things.

BUNYAN, Pilgrim's Progress, i, 82. (1678)

Saying and Doing have quarrel'd and parted.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1756.

Saying is one thing and doing's another.

H. AND J. SMITH, Drury Lane Hustings. (1812)

It is as folk dooe, and not as folk saie.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

Trust on the deed and not in gay speeches.

JOHN LYLY, Secreta Secretorum. (c. 1606)

Acta exteriora indicant interiora secreta. Look at what is done and not at what is said.

SIR JAMES MARTIN, Caine v. Coulson. (c. 1880) 1 H.&C., 764.

What pity 'tis, one that can speak so well, Should, in his actions, be so ill.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Parliament of Love. Act iii, sc. 3. (1624)

That you can speak so well, and do so ill!

MASSINGER, Fatal Dowry. Act iv, sc. 4. (1632)

It is a beautiful harmony when doing and saying go together. (C'est une belle harmonie, quand le faire et le dire vont ensemble.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 31. (1580)

By all means let us do as we say. (πάνυ μὲν οὖν ποιῶμεν ἥπερ καὶ λέγομεν.)

PLATO, Laws. Bk. vi, sec. 752A. (c. 345 B.C.)

Such things are easier said than done. (Magis istuc percipimus lingua dici, quam factis fore.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 162. (c. 200 B.C.)

It is more unpleasant for me to say it than to do it. (μοι δυσκολώτερον ἢν εἰπεῖν ἢ πράξειν.)

JULIUS CAESAR, to Metellus, after threatening to kill him for his interference. (49 B.C.)

See PLUTARCH, Lives: Caesar. Ch. 35.

Easier said than done. (Id dictu quam re, ut pleraque, facilius erat.)

LIVY, History. Bk. xxxi, sec. 38. (c. 10 B.C.)

That is . . . sooner said than done.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

'Tis better said than done.

SHAKESPEARE, III Henry VI, iii, 2, 90. (1591)

Shakespeare used the phrase in his second play and never afterwards.

That's easier said than done.

DAVID GARRICK, Neck or Nothing. Act i, sc. 1. (1766) MOIR, Mansie Waugh, ch. 9. (1824) SMEDLEY, Frank Fairlegh, ch. 51. (1850) etc., etc. The French say, "Aisé à dire et difficile à faire."

<sup>1</sup> Energetic talkers, lazy doers. (Lingua factiosi, inertes opera.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 542. (190 B. C.)

Talkers are no good doers.

SHAKESPEARE, Richard III, i, 3, 352. (1592)

Great talkers are never great doers.

THOMAS MIDDLETON, Blurt. Act i, sc. 1. (1602)

Great talkers, little doers.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1733.

<sup>2</sup> The greatest talkers are always the least doers.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 147. (1670)

The boldest talkers are not always the greatest doers.

L'ESTRANGE, tr., Aesop's Fables, p. 360. (1692)

Much talkers, little walkers.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Letter, 28 March, 1711.

Large of mouth and short of hand. (Largo di bocca, stretto di mano.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 199. (1858) The French say, "Les grands diseurs ne sont pas grands faiseurs"; or, "Les gens qui ont peu d'affaires sont de très grands parleurs."

Tall talk is seldom followed by true action. (Kao t'an hûo lun, mu yu yi tien shih hsing.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. (1875)

See also WORD AND DEED

<sup>3</sup> It is not a question of talking, but of steering the ship. (Non est loquendum, sed gubernandum.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cviii, sec. 37. (C. A. D. 64) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 24.

The French rendering is, "Il ne s'agit pas de parler, mais de conduire le vaisseau."

<sup>4</sup> Good thy acts, though ill thy speech. (δρῶν γὰρ εὖ κακῶς λέγεις.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragments. Frag. 771, Nauck, p. 312. (c. 425 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 810C.

Some men never spake a wise word, yet do wisely.

SIR THOMAS OVERBURY, Crumms Fal'n from King James's Table. (c. 1614)

Speaking in deeds and deedless in his tongue

SHAKESPEARE, Troilus, iv, 5, 98. (1601)

<sup>5</sup> Said, done. (Dictum factum.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 382. (166 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, vi, 85, together with a Greek proverb, ῥεχθὲν καὶ πράχθελν (Said and done), stemming, perhaps, from HOMER, Iliad, i, 108, "Neither a good word nor deed have you brought to pass."

Done and said. (Factis et dictis.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 941. (161 B. C.)

I will forward your wishes by what I do and say. (Faciamque et dicam.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 1051. (161 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> Men say wel that do wel.

UNKNOWN, British Bibliography, iv, 283. (1536) We wil do wel and say wel, but il goes the boat without an ore. (Ben faremo, ben diremo.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 28. (1578) Not to say well, but to do well. (Non à bien dire, mais à bien faire.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 39. (1580) Yoke together . . . my doing well With my well saying.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 2, 150. (1612)

Say well and do well end with one letter;

Say well is good, but do well is better.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 194. (1639)

FULLER, No. 6447; FITZGERALD, Polonius.

II—Saying and Thinking

<sup>7</sup> The Holy One, blessed be He, hates a person who says one thing with his mouth and another in his heart.

Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, fo. 113b. (c. 450) There be many Wise Men, that have Secret Hearts, and Transparent Countenances.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Cunning. (1597) Peace on the forehead and war in the mind. (Pace in fronte, e guerra in mente.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 201. (1856) An Italian proverb. Another is, "Il volto sciolto, i pensieri stretti" (The face open, and the mind closed). See CAHIER, p. 216.

<sup>8</sup> He that speaks me fair and loves me not, I'll speak him fair and trust him not.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 19. (1678)

<sup>9</sup> To have one thought locked in the breast, another ready on the tongue. (Aliud clausum in pectore aliud in lingua promptum habere.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 10. (c. 41 B. C.) The carl spak oo thing, but he thoghte another.

CHAUCER, The Freres Tale, l. 270. (c. 1386)

I can't tell what is in your heart; I merely hear what your mouth says.

ARTHUR E. MOULE, Proverbs from Ningpo. (DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 327. 1872)

<sup>10</sup> When fairest we speak, falsest we think.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 91. (c. 900)

Many a one says well, and thinks ill.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Face-flatterer and back-biter are the same.

TENNYSON, Merlin and Vivian, l. 822. (1870)

SCANDAL

See also Calumny, Gossip, Slander

<sup>11</sup> You know the old proverb—"Everything in turn, except scandal, whose turn is always."

R. D. BLACKMORE, Springhaven. Ch. 18. (1887)

<sup>12</sup> Dead scandals form good subjects for dissection.

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto i, st. 31. (1818)

That abominable tittle-tattle
Which is the cud eschew'd by human cattle.
LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto xii, st. 43. (1820)

1
As smoke from fire, so ill fame rises from scandal. (Ex igne ut fumus, sic fama ex crimine surgit.)

CATO (?), Collectio Monostichorum, l. 14. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 624.

On eagles' wings immortal scandals fly,
While virtuous actions are but born and die.
STEPHEN HARVEY, tr., Juvenal, ix, 104. (1693)
A Lye has no Leg, but a Scandal has Wings.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 263. (1732)
A word of scandal spreads like a spot of oil.

MARCEL PROUST, Du Côté de Chez Swann. Pt. iii, p. 313. (1913) Quoting an old proverb

2
O, rolled shal I been on many a tonge!
Through-out the world my belle shal be ronge.
CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. v, l. 1061. (c. 1380)

3
To converse with Scandal is to play at Losing Loadum; you must lose a good name to him. before you can win it for yourself.

WILLIAM CONGREVE, Love for Love. Act i, sc. 11. (1695) In "Losing Loadum" the game is to lose tricks.

In the case of scandal, as in that of robbery, the receiver is always thought as bad as the thief.
LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 19 Oct., 1748. Repeated 15 Jan., 1753.

4
Love and scandal are the best sweeteners of tea.

HENRY FIELDING, Love in Several Masques. Act iv, sc. 2. (1728)

Scandal's the sweetener of a female feast.

YOUNG, Love of Fame. Sat. vi, l. 353. (1728)
Her tea she sweetens, as she sips, with scandal.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Written to Be Spoken by Mrs. Siddons. (a. 1855) The Dutch say, "The shyest woman has courage enough to talk scandal."

5
Scandal will rub out like dirt when it is dry.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4076. (1732)

No mud can soil us but the mud we throw.

J. R. LOWELL, To G. W. Curtis. (1874)

6
It must be that scandals come, but woe to him by whom the scandal cometh.

JAMES CARDINAL GIBBONS, The Faith of Our Fathers. Ch. 3. (1876) Quoted from an unknown source.

7
The art of correcting scandal is to ignore it; to combat it prejudices your own case. (Arte de reformer la murmuracion, no hacer caso; impugnaria causa perjuicio.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 205. (1647)

8
We are always ready to believe a scandal. (Nos in vitium credula turba sumus.)

OVID, Fasti. Bk. iv, l. 312. (c. A. D. 8)

9
Full oft hath little gain fallen to the lot of scandal-mongers. (ἀκέρδεια λέλογχεν θαιμινά κακαγόρος.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. No. i, l. 53. (476 B. C.)

10
Greatest scandal waits on greatest state.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 1006. (1594)

No scandal about Queen Elizabeth, I hope?

SHERIDAN, The Critic. Act ii, sc. 1. (1779)

Never yet

Was noble man but made ignoble talk.

TENNYSON, Lancelot and Elaine, l. 1080. (1870)

11
For my part, I believe there never was a scandalous tale without some foundation.

SHERIDAN, The School for Scandal. Act ii, sc. 2. (1777) See also under True.

12
Scandal is but amusing ourselves with the faults, foibles, follies, and reputations of our friends.

ROYALL TYLER, The Contrast. Act ii. (1787)

Scandal is merely the compassionate allowance which the gay make to the humdrum. Think how many blameless lives are brightened by the blaz-ing indiscretions of other people.

H. H. MUNRO (SAKI), Reginald at the Carlton. (1904)

THEY SAY, see under SPEECH.

SCAPEGOAT

13
And Aaron shall cast lots upon the two goats; one lot for the Lord, and the other lot for the scapegoat. . . . The goat, on which the lot fell to be the scapegoat, shall . . . go for a scapegoat into the wilderness. (Cuius autem in caprum emissarium . . . emittat eum in solitudinem.)

Old Testament: Leviticus, xvi, 8–10. (c. 570 B. C.) The word "scapegoat" was, according to O.E.D., apparently invented by William Tindale in his translation of 1530 to express what he believed to be the literal meaning of the Hebrew text. The same interpretation is expressed by the Vulgate, caper emissarius, whence the French bouc émissaire.

Our Saviour . . . was both the sacrificed Goat and the Scape Goat.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Ch. 41. (1651)

That scape-goose, Lord Halifax.

WALPOLE, Letter to Hertford, 12 May, 1765.

He was noted for a scape-rat.

SOUTHEY, in Quarterly Review, xlv, 286. (1831)

14
Beating with twigs and squills like unto a scapegoat. (βαπίζοντες | . . . κράδῃσι καὶ σκίλλῃσιν ὥστε φάρμακον.)

HIPPONAX, Fragments. Frag. 48. (c. 550 B. C.)

Frgs. 48–52 are concerned with scapegoats. Lycophron states that, when famine or plague or other mischief visited a city, the citizens led out to sacrifice the ugliest of them all, beat him with rods of wild fir, and then finally burnt him.

SCAR, see Wound

SCENES

<sup>1</sup> His Nuns are good, which on the Stage are shown,
And, sure, behind our Scenes you'll look for none.

JOHN DRYDEN, The Assigination: Epilogue, l. 21. (1672)

Murders and executions are always transacted behind the scenes in the French theatre.

JOSEPH ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 44. (1711)
I, who have been behind the scenes, both of pleasure and business.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 18 Feb., 1748.
[She] was behind the scenes in many fashionable families.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, The Absentee. Ch. 5. (1812)
Behind the scenes. In private; behind what the public sees, esp. in relation to important events.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clickés: Behind. (1941)

SCHEME

<sup>2</sup> The best-laid schemes o' mice an' men
Gang aft agley.

ROBERT BURNS, To a Mouse. (1785) Often misquoted "plans," a recent example being FREEMAN, Mr. Preston Explains, ch. 6. (1940) The French say, "Brebis comptées, le loup les mange" (After you've counted your sheep, the wolf eats them).

<sup>3</sup> This deep-laid scheme.

WILLIAM ROBERTSON, History of Scotland. Ch. 3. (1759)

Men come and go, lay schemes, and alter them.
WALTER SCOTT, Woodstock. Ch. 32. (1826)

SCHOLAR

<sup>4</sup> O scholar, if your scholarship affords no gain to men, you merit not admiration but contempt.

ABU'L ALA, Sakl al Zand (The Falling Spark of Tinder). No. 16. (c. 1000)

<sup>5</sup> A scholar on whose clothes vermin is found is worthy of death.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo.114a.(c.450)

<sup>6</sup> A meer scholar, a meer ass.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. I, sec. II, mem. 3, subs. 15. (1621) CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 151. (1639) HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)

<sup>7</sup> The scholar teacheth his master.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 4. (1639)

The scholar may waur [be better than] the teacher by a time.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 310. (1721)

<sup>8</sup> A scholar at court is an ass among apes.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 145. (1639)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 322. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> The scholar who cherishes his comfort is unworthy to be called a scholar.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. xiv, ch. 3. (c.500 B. C.)

<sup>10</sup> A scholar is the favorite of Heaven and earth, the excellency of his country, the happiest of men.

EMERSON, Essays: Literary Ethics. (1838)

Every scholar is surrounded by wiser men than he.

EMERSON, Essays: Clubs. (1877)

<sup>11</sup> Every good Scholar is not a good School-master.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1417. (1732)

<sup>12</sup> A mere scholar, who knows nothing but books, must be ignorant even of them.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, The Ignorance of the Learned. (1821)

A scholar is like a book written in a dead language: it is not every one that can read it.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Commonplaces. No. 13. (1823)

<sup>13</sup> A diligent Scholar, and the Master's paid.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 185. (1640)

<sup>14</sup> A scholar may be gulled thrice, a soldier but once.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs. p. 11. (1659)

<sup>15</sup> The history of scholarship is a record of disagreements.

CHARLES E. HUGHES, Speech, in Washington, 7 May, 1936.

<sup>16</sup> To this day is every Scholar poor.

CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE. (a. 1593) As quoted by BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, i, ii, iii, 15.

Mark what ills the scholar's life assail,
Toil, envy, want, the patron, and the jail.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Vanity of Human Wishes, l. 159. (1748)

Poverty is the common fate of scholars.

HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 474. (1937)

<sup>17</sup> The ink of the scholar is more holy than the blood of the martyr.

MOHAMMED, Sunnah. (c. 630) Sayings of Muhammad, p. 94.

<sup>18</sup> He is yet a scholar, than which kind of man there is nothing so simple, so sincere.

PLINY, of Isaeus, the Greek sophist. (c. A. D. 75) As quoted by BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, i, ii, 3, 15.

He is a scholar and a student. (φιλόλογος δὲ καὶ φιλομαθὴς ἐστι.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Oracles at Delphi. Sec. 394F. (c. A. D. 95)

A scholar and a soldier.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, i, 2, 124. (1597)

He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iv, 2, 51. (1612)

Gentleman and scholar.

ROBERT BURNS, The Two Dogs. (1786) See also under GENTLEMAN.

1 A poor scholar accepts no pity.
WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 498. (1875)

2 Scholars are wont to sell their birthright for a mess of learning.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers. (1849)

3 An excellent scholler, (one that hath a head filled with calves' brains without any sage in them).

JOHN WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1608)

As good a scholar as my horse Ball.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 145. (1639)

SCHOOLMASTER

See also Teacher

4 Look out, gentlemen, the schoolmaster is abroad!

LORD BROUGHAM, Address, at the opening of the London Mechanics' Institute. (1825) Referring to the secretary, John Reynolds, a schoolmaster.

The schoolmaster is abroad, and I trust more to him, armed with his primer, than to the soldier in full military array, for upholding and extending the liberties of his country.

LORD BROUGHAM, Speech, House of Commons, 29 June, 1828. Brougham was opposing the succession of the Duke of Wellington to the premiership, and meant that popular education was spreading, but the phrase was afterwards usually applied derisively.

The schoolmaster's abroad, you see;
And, when the people hear him speak,
They all insist on being free,
And reading Homer in the Greek.

W. M. PRAED, Wherefore. (1831) In Political and Occasional Poems, p. 138.

They've got a cant phrase here, "the schoolmaster is abroad," and every feller tells you that fifty times a day.

T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), The Clock-maker. Ser. i, ch. 15. (1836)

In those dark days, before the schoolmaster was abroad.

LORD LYTTON, My Novel. Bk. i, ch. 10. (1853)

"I believe it's quite a new thing," said Marie Tudor. "The schoolmaster must be abroad with a vengeance."

ANTHONY TROLLOPE, The Three Clerks. Ch. 2. (1857)

The schoolmaster's abroad . . . Sometimes the schoolmaster and the pupil are both abroad.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. iii, ch. 10. (1865)

5 A pure pedantic schoolmaster, sweeping his living from the posteriors of little children.

BEN JONSON, to William Drummond of Hawthornden. (1618)

6 The victory of the Prussians over the Austrians was a victory of the Prussian over the Austrian schoolmaster.

OSKAR PESCHEL, Die Lehren der Jüngsten Kriegsgeschichte. (1866) See Ausland, 17 July, 1866.

The Prussian schoolmaster won the battle of Sadowa. (Der preussische Schulmeister hat die Schlacht bei Sadowa gewonnen.)

VON MOLTKE, Speech, Reichstag, 16 Feb., 1874.

Quoting a proverb derived from Peschel's essay.

7 The whining school-boy, with his satchel
And shining morning face, creeping like snail
Unwillingly to school.

SHAKESPEARE, As You Like It, ii, 7, 145. (1600) Schoolboys are the reasonablest people in the world; they care not how little they have for their money.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1678)

And School-Boys lag with Satchels in their Hands.

SWIFT, Description of Morning, l. 18. (1709)

EVERY SCHOOLBOY KNOWS IT, see KNOWLEDGE.

SCIENCE

I—Science: Definitions

8 Science is the knowledge of consequences, and dependence of one fact upon another.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Ch. 5. (1651)

Science is nothing but good sense and sound reason.

STANISLAUS LESZYNSKI, Maxims. No. 43. (1763)

Science is nothing but trained and organized common sense.

T. H. HUXLEY, On the Educational Value of the Natural History Sciences. (1854) CONNINGTON, Twenty-One Clues, p. 239, quotes as Huxley's definition, "Science: a beautiful theory killed by an ugly fact."

Science is organized knowledge.

HERBERT SPENCER, Education. Ch. 2. (1861)

Science is the effort to find out what to do with the universe and what to do in the universe.

A. E. WIGGAM, The New Decalogue of Science, p. 115. (1922)

9 Science is nothing but perception. (αἰσθησις γὰρ ἐπιστήμη.)

PLATO, Theaetetus. Sec. 182E. (c. 390 B.C.)

All human science is but the increment of the power of the eye.

JOHN FISKE, The Destiny of Man. Ch. 6. (1884)

10 Human science is uncertain guess.

MATTHEW PRIOR, Solomon. Bk. i, l. 740. (a. 1721)

Science is the topography of ignorance.

O. W. HOLMES, Medical Essays, p. 211. (1883)

11 Economics, the science of managing one's own household. (οἰκονομική, administrandae familiaris rei scientiam.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. 89, sec. 10. (c. A.D.

64) Elsewhere Seneca speaks of "Scientia popinae" (The science of the cook-shop).

The science of sciences. (Scientia scientiarum.)

S. T. COLERIDGE, Biographia Literaria. Ch. 12. (1817) Referring to philosophy.

The science of fools with long memories.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Pursuivant of Arms: Preliminary Observations. (c. 1876) Speaking of heraldry.

What we might call . . . the dismal science.

THOMAS CARLYLE, The Nigger Question. (a. 1881) Referring to political economy.

<sup>1</sup> Scientific management.

FREDERICK W. TAYLOR. Name given the "Taylor system" about 1910. See SULLIVAN, Our Times, iv, 77.

Scientific reorganization of national energy and resources.

WILLIAM H. SMYTH, Definition of Technocracy, a term first used by Smyth in Industrial Management, March, 1919.

<sup>2</sup> All science is a makeshift, a means to an end which is never attained.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 13 Oct., 1860.

What is called science today consists of a haphazard heap of information, united by nothing.

LYOF TOLSTOY, What Is Religion? (1902)

<sup>3</sup> Science is the record of dead religions.

OSCAR WILDE, Phrases and Philosophies for the Use of the Young. (1894)

Science is a cemetery of dead ideas.

UNAMUNO, Tragic Sense of Life, p. 90. (1921)

II—Science: Apothegms

<sup>4</sup> Geology, ethnology, what not?

(Greek endings, each the little passing-bell That signifies some faith's about to die.)

BROWNING, Bishop Blougram's Apology. (1855)

My kingdom is as wide as the world. I go forward always, freeing spirits and weighing worlds, without fear, without compassion, without love, and without God. Men call me Science. (Mon royaume est de la dimension de l'univers. . . . On m'appelle la Science.)

GUSTAVE FLAUBERT, La Tentation de Saint-Antoine. Ch. 5. (1874)

True science teaches, above all, to doubt and to be ignorant.

UNAMUNO, Tragic Sense of Life, p. 93. (1921)

<sup>5</sup> Much science, much sorrow.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 101. (1639)

<sup>6</sup> No tempest can consume Science. (Ne anche tempesta puo consumare scientia.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 62. (1578)

<sup>7</sup> The church saves sinners, but science seeks to stop their manufacture.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Book of Epigrams. (a. 1918)

<sup>8</sup> Go on, fair Science; soon to thee
Shall Nature yield her idle boast;
Her vulgar fingers formed a tree,

But thou hast trained it to a post.

O. W. HOLMES, Meeting of the Dryads. (1830)

Science, the new nobility! Progress. The world moves on! (La science, la nouvelle noblesse! Le progrès. Le monde marche!)

ARTHUR RIMBAUD, Une Saison en Enfer. Ch. 2. (1873)

<sup>9</sup> O Timothy, keep that which is committed to thy trust, avoiding profane and vain babblings, and oppositions of science falsely so called. (ἀντιθέσεις τῆς ψευδωνύμου γνώσεως.)

New Testament: I Timothy, vi, 20. (c. A. D. 62)

The Vulgate is, "Falsi nominis scientiae."

The humble knowledge of thyself is a surer way to God than the deepest search after science. (Humilis tui cognitio certior via est ad Deum, quam profunda scientiae inquisitio.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 3, sec. 3. (c. 1420)

Physician art thou? one, all eyes,
Philosopher! a fingering slave,
One that would peep and botanize
Upon his mother's grave?

WORDSWORTH, A Poet's Epitaph, l. 17. (1799)

SCOLDING

<sup>10</sup> She will scold the Devil out of a haunted House.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4149. (1732)

A common scold, communis rixatrix, (for our law-latin confines itself to the feminine gender), is a public nuisance to her neighbourhood.

SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries on the Laws of England, iv, xiii, 169. (1769)

<sup>11</sup> Chatting to chiding is not woorth a chuct. [Scolding is not worth replying to.]

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

<sup>12</sup> Who hath a scold hath sorrow to his sops.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 15. (1659)
Cited by RAY, p. 23; FULLER, No. 5705.

<sup>13</sup> To scold like a cutpurse, like a wych-waller.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 288. (1678)

That is, like a boiler of salt; wych houses are salt houses, and walling is boiling.

To scold like a wych-waller. Women were formerly exclusively employed in this operation, hence the scolding.

J. C. BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 142. (1917)

<sup>14</sup> A scold is a devil of the feminine gender; a serpent perpetually hissing, and spitting of venom.

UNKNOWN, Poor Robin's True Character of a Scold. (1678)

He fasts enough whose wife scolds all dinner-time.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 371. (1855)

SCORN

<sup>15</sup> The book seith: "with scorneres make no companye, but flee hir wordes as venim."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibæus, Sec. 31. (c. 1387)

Scorners are an Abomination to a sober man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4080. (1732)

1
Never was a scornful Person well receiv'd.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3531. (1732)
Scornful dogs will eat dirty puddings.

2
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
It was said sithen go ful yore,
He that reioiseth to scorne folk in veyn,
When he wer lothest shal scorned been ageyn.
JOHN LYDGATE, tr., The Fall of Princes. Bk. iii.
l. 601. (c. 1440)
Scorning is catching.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 140. (1670)
"He that scorns any condition or employment," Ray explains, "may come to be driven upon it himself! Some word it thus: Hanging's stretching; mocking's catching."
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4081. (1732)

3
Skorne cummis commonlie with skaith.
ALEXANDER MONTGOMERIE, The Cherrie and the Slae, xvi, 11. (a. 1585) Cited by Ray and Kelly.

4
Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. (In cathedra pestilentiae non sedit.)
Old Testament: Psalms, i, 1. (c. 350 B.C.)
He sets himselfe downe in the Scorners Chayre.
THOMAS NASHE, Pasquil's Return. (1589)
I . . . sitting carelesse on the scorners stoole,
Did laugh at those that did lament and plaine.
EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto viii, st. 21. (1596)

5
To scorn a thing as a dog scorns a tripe.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 207. (1670)

6
When one is marching toward the goal of honor, one should scorn scorn itself. (Ad honesta vadenti contemnendus est ipse contemptus.)
SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. lxxvi, sec. 4. (C.A. D. 64)

7
A fixed figure for the time of scorn
To point his slow unmoving finger at.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iv, 2, 54. (1605) It has been conjectured that "time of scorn" is perhaps a misprint for "hand of scorn."
A nameless orphan, at whom even the meanest could point the finger of scorn.
DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 5. (1838)

8
Scorn at first makes after-love the more.
SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iii, 1, 95. (1594)

O, what a deal of scorn looks beautiful
In the contempt and anger of his lip!
SHAKESPEARE, Twelfth Night, iii, 1, 157. (1599)

9
We scorn many things in order not to scorn ourselves. (Nous méprisons beaucoup de choses, pour ne pas nous mépriser nous-mêmes.)
VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 196. (1746)

TO LAUGH TO SCORN, see under LAUGHTER.

SCORPION

10
Look for a scorpion under every stone. (ὅπὸ παντὶ λίθῳ σκορπίον φυλάσσει.)

PRAXILLA, Lyrics. Frag. 4. (c. 450 B.C.)
Under every stone watches a scorpion. (ἐν παντὶ γὰρ τε σκορπίος φρουρεῖ λίθῳ.)

SOPHOCLES, The Prisoners. Frag. 35. (c. 410 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 34, with the Latin, "Sub omni lapide scorpius dormit," and the comment, "This proverb should admonish us to act in every business with deliberation and caution."

Under every stone a poisonous sophist lurks. (ὅπὸ λίθῳ παντὶ που χρή μὴ δάκῃ ῥήτωρ ἀθρεῖν.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Thesmophoriazusae, l. 528. (c. 410 B.C.) A play upon the old proverb.

11
Well fore-warning wind
Did seem to say, 'Seek not a scorpion's nest.'
SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, iii, 2, 86. (1590)

SCOTLAND

12
Expecting all the welcome of a lover
(A "Highland welcome" all the wide world over).

LORD BYRON, Don Juan. Canto vi, st. 13. (1820)
A medieval proverb speaks of "Perfervidium ingenium Scotorum" (The very ardent disposition of the Scots).

13
We care not for a Scottish mist, though it wet us to the skin.

JOHN LYLY (?), Pappe with a Hatchet: Dedication. (1589)
A Scottish mist may wet an Englishman to the skin.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 11. (1639)
Beware of Scottish mists, which, she had heard, would wet an Englishman through and through

WALTER SCOTT, Waverley. Ch. 25. (1814)
Judas might have repented before he could have found a tree to have hanged himself upon, had he betrayed Christ in Scotland.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 21. (1659)
14
Come out of the land of cakes before New Year's day.

SIR R. MORAY, in Lauderdale Papers, ii, cxiv, 171. (1669) Referring to the oatcakes of Scotland.

An' fill ye up and toast the cup,
The land o' cakes for ever.

J. IMLAH, Song: The Land o' Cakes. (a. 1846)
That land of Calvin, oat-cakes, and sulphur.

SYDNEY SMITH, referring to Scotland. See LADY HOLLAND, Memoir. Ch. 2.

15
Those who have never been to Scotland cannot form a notion of what it is to be serious. (Ceux qui n'ont pas été en Écosse ne savent pas ce que c'est que d'être sérieux.)

MAX O'RELL, John Bull et Son Ile, p. 37. (1890)

16
The Scotch ordinary, i. e. the house of office.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1678)

A Scotsman is aye wise a-hent the hand.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 230.

Bitin' and scratchin' is Scotch fowks' wooing.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 232.

Itchland, Scratchland, Scotland.

FRANCIS GROSE, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue. (1785)

<sup>1</sup> A Scotch warming-pan, i. e. a wench.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 83. (1678) The phrase derives from the story of the traveller who asked to have his bed warmed, whereupon the maid-servant immediately undressed and lay down in it.

"'Twould better heat a man

Than two Bath faggots or Scotch warming-pan.

SAMUEL WESLEY, Maggots, p. 36. (1685)

<sup>2</sup> There grows a bonnie brier bush in our kail-yard.

UNKNOWN. From a Scottish Jacobite song (c. 1700). Used by Ian Maclaren as a motto for his story, Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush, 1894. Hence, "kailyard school." A kailyard is a small cabbage garden or kitchen garden.

II—Scotland: The Scots

<sup>3</sup> Trust yow no Skott.

ANDREW BOORD, Letter to Thomas Cromwell, 1 April, 1536.

The cunning Scotchman never speaks truth without a fraudulent design.

JUNIUS, Letters. No. 59, 5 Oct., 1771.

AS FALSE AS A SCOT, see under FALSENESS.

<sup>4</sup> Glasgow people, Greenock folk, and Paisley bodies. These words imply gradations of dignity, the Paisley bodies being . . . at the bottom of the scale.

ROBERT CHAMBERS, Popular Rhymes of Scotland, p. 20. (1845)

We are bits o' Glasgow bodies, if it please your honour.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 28. (1818)

Peebles Body (to townsman supposed to be in London): E-eh Mac! you're sune hume again.

Mac: E-eh, it's just a ruinous place that! Mun, a had na' been there abune two hoours when Bang went saxeption.

BIRKET FOSTER, Legend, under a drawing by Charles Keene, published in Punch, 5 Dec., 1868.

<sup>5</sup> Three failures and a fire make a Scotsman's fortune.

A. CHEVIOT, Scottish Proverbs, p. 369. (1896)

<sup>6</sup> Scots are like witches: do but whet your pen, Scratch till the blood come, they'll not hurt you then.

JOHN CLEVELAND, The Rebel Scot. (1647)

The Scot will not fight till he see his own blood.

SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 1. (1822)

<sup>7</sup> A Scottish man and a Newcastle grindstone, travel all the world over. The Scots . . .

travel into foreign parts, mostly for maintenance. . . . No grindstone so good as those of Newcastle.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, ii, 543. (1662)

A Scot, a rat, and a Newcastle grindstone, travel all the world over.

FRANCIS GROSE, Provincial Glossary: Northumberland. (1790)

The old saying,—in every corner of the world you will find a Scot, a rat, and a Newcastle grindstone.

A. CUNNINGHAM, in LOCKHART, Life of Scott, v, 99. (1821)

You come of a race of men the very wind of whose name has swept the ultimate seas.

J. M. BARRIE, Rectorial Address, University of St. Andrews, 3 May, 1922.

<sup>8</sup> We will not lose a Scot.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies of England. Vol. ii, p. 542. (1662) Meaning nothing of importance.

We will not lose a Scot. That is anything, however inconsiderable, that we can possibly save or recover.

MICHAEL DENHAM, Denham Tracts, i, 248.

<sup>9</sup> The noblest prospect which a Scotchman ever sees is the highroad that leads him to England.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, to the Rev. John Ogilvie, who had remarked that "Scotland had a great many noble wild prospects." BOSWELL. Life, 6 July, 1763.

Much may be made of a Scotchman if he be caught young.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 19 April, 1772.

<sup>10</sup> Scottish men take their mark from a mischief. A Scottish man solicited the Prince of Orange to be made an Ensign, for he had been a sergeant ever since his Highness run away from Groll.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 292. (1721) Scotsmen aye reckon frae an ill hour.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 87. (1832)

Every Scotsman has a pedigree; it is a national prerogative as unalienable as his pride and his poverty.

J. G. LOCKHART, Life of Scott. Ch. 1. (1837)

<sup>11</sup> These are Clan-Alpine's warriors true.

WALTER SCOTT, The Lady of the Lake. Canto v, st. 9. (1810)

The plaided warriors of the North.

SCOTT, Lady of the Lake, vi, 19.

The warpiques are pealing, "The Campbells are coming."

ALEX MACLAGAN, Jennie's Dream. (c. 1850)

<sup>12</sup> It will be nonsense fining me, . . . that hasna a grey groat to pay a fine wi'—it's ill taking the breeks aff a Hielandman.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 27. (1818)

What . . . was . . . poor Dr. Wolf to do? Could he sub-embzzle a Highlander's breeks?

CHARLES READE, Hard Cash. Ch. 41. (1863)

<sup>1</sup> Baillie Jarvie suggested, in his proverbial expression, that "Forth bridles the wild Highlandman."

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 28. (1818) The river Forth was a restraint upon Highland raids.

Forth is our trouble; ye ken the saying, "Forth bridles the wild Highlandman."

R. L. STEVENSON, Kidnapped. Ch. 26. (1886)

SCRATCH

<sup>2</sup> Scratch was the name I had for the evil one.

THOMAS AMORY, John Bunce, i, 303. (1756)

As forred and sassy as old Scratch himself.

T. C. HALIBURTON, Wise Saws, p. 63. (c. 1840)

He'd have pitched me to Old Scratch.

TROLLOPE, The Three Clerks. Ch. 20. (1858)

Do you mind the melon-patch,

How you gobbled the whole batch, . . .

Just to raise the scratch?

WILL CARLETON, Farm Ballads, p. 43. (1873)

<sup>3</sup> There are a good many Joneses in Georgia, and I know some myself that ain't no great scratches.

UNKNOWN, Major Jones's Courtship, p. 136.

(c. 1850) See BARTLETT, Americanisms, p. 559.

"No great scratch," of little worth.

J. C. HOTTEN, A Dictionary of Modern Slang: Scratch. (1859)

<sup>4</sup> He . . . came up to the scratch at the moment appointed.

UNKNOWN, In John Bull, 7 Jan., 1821, p. 29/3.

A line drawn across the boxing-ring, to which the boxers are brought to start an encounter.

Up to the scratch.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Essays: The Fight. (c. 1822)

A determined resolution to come up to the scratch.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 12. (1824)

SCRATCHING

See also Itching

<sup>5</sup> I scratch where it itches not.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 299. (1605)

It would make a man scratch where it doth not itch,

To see a man live poor to die rich.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 296. (1678)

'Twould make one scratch where't does not itch,

To see fools live poor to die rich.

THOMAS SHADWELL, The Woman-Captain. Act i. (1680) See also under CLAW.

<sup>6</sup> Scratching is bad, because it begins with Pleasure, and ends with Pain.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4082. (1732)

<sup>7</sup> You'll scratch a Beggar, before you die.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6035. (1732)

I think the countess is very sickly.—She'll never scratch a gray head.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. iii. (1738)

<sup>8</sup> Who so ever hath the itch, let him scratch.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 127. (1574) Young, tr. The French say, "Il faut gratter les gens où il leur démange"

(One must scratch people where they itch).

Scratching is one of the pleasantest gratifications of nature, especially with the hand. (Si est la gratterie des gratifications de nature les plus douces, et autant à main.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1595)

After all, perhaps, we have no greater enjoyments among us than those of eating when we are hungry, . . . lying down when sleepy, or, as the second Solomon has pronounced, than scratching where it itches.

ABRAHAM TUCKER, The Light of Nature Pursued, ii, 558. (1768)

Socrates dilates on the pleasure of itching and scratching.

JOWETT, Dialogues of Plato, iv, 17. (1875)

One bliss for which there is no match

Is when you itch to up and scratch. . . .

'Neath tile or thatch that man is rich

Who has a scratch for every itch.

OGDEN NASH, Taboo to Boot. (1938) The proverbial jingle is, of course, the familiar, "Tis better than riches to scratch when it itches."

<sup>9</sup> You'd better scratch gravel for home.

MARY J. HOLMES, Tempest and Sunshine, p. 103. (1854) To depart in haste.

I'm a-gwine ter scratch gravel.

J. C. HARRIS, On the Plantation, p. 130. (1892)

<sup>10</sup> God bless the Duke of Argyle! A Scottish insinuation made when one shrugs his shoulders . . . Said to have been the thankful exclamation of the Glasgow folk, at finding . . . iron posts, erected by his grave in that city . . . very convenient to rub against.

J. C. HOTTEN, Slang Dictionary, p. 178. (1859)

Another story is that the Duke of Argyle set up posts on his estate for his cattle to rub themselves against, and his herdsmen uttered this blessing as they rubbed their own backs against the posts.

A Scotchman has good reason occasionally to cry out, "God bless the Duke of Argyle," for reasons best known north of the Tweed.

EDWARD WALFORD, Tales of Great Families, p. 36. (1877)

<sup>11</sup> Scratching and eating wants but a beginning.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 91. (1904)

<sup>12</sup> Scratch me and I'll scratch you. (τὸν ξύρρα ἀντιξέειν.)

SOPHRON, Mime, 149. (c. 500 B.C.)

Mules scratch each other. (Mutuum muli scabunt.)

VARRO. (c. 50 B.C.) As cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vii, 95. Erasmus also cites, "Senes mutuum fricant" (Old men rub one another), and "Fricantem refrica" (Rub one who rubs you).

If I say more in your praise, I shall seem to be "scratching your back." (Videbor mutuum scabere.)

AUSONIUS, Epistles. Epis. i. (c. A. D. 380)
Mules may ease each other's itch. (Mutuum muli scalpant.)

AUSONIUS, Technopaegnon. Pt. iv, l. 12.
What is more friendly than when two mules scratch one another? (Mutuum muli scabunt.)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 70. (1511)
One of you might claw and rub another's back well enough.

THOMAS COGAN, Haven of Health, p. 6. (1584)
Quoting the Emperor Augustus.
Kae me and lle kae thee.

JOHN FLORIO, tr., Motaigne. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1605)
Florio's rendering of "en compensation." See also under CLAW.

To scratch the back of One who hath already clawed his elbow.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Controlouer. (1611)
The proverb of Muli mutuo scabient, One horse rubs another.

OVERBURY, Characters: An Ostler. (1613)
Mulus mulum scabit; by which the Ancients signified, the courtesies done unto friends, ought to be requited with reciprocal offices of friendship.

THOMAS CORYAT, English Wits, p. 37. (1616)
Scratch my breech, and I'll claw your elbow.
Mutuum muli scabunt. Ka me and I'll ka thee. When undeserving persons commend one another.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 140. (1670)
Scratch my back and I'll claw your elbow.

THOMAS d'URFEY, The Comical History of Don Quixote. Pt. ii, act ii, sc. 2. (1694)

Scratch me, says one, and I'll scratch thee
EDWARD WARD, Works, iii, 145. (1706)

You scratch my back & lle scratch your back.

ARTEMUS WARD, A Ward: His Book. (1862)
Provided you can scratch me when I scratch you, what do I care whether you are a Dustman or a Duke?

WILKIE COLLINS, Moonstone. Ch. 8. (1868)
Asinus asinum fricat; one good turn deserves another.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Heads Off at Midnight. Ch. 15. (1938) See also under TURN.

If you throw cakes at a man he will throw cakes at you.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 439. (1938)
A Japanese proverb. Molière has, "Passez moi la rhubarbe, et je vous passerai le séné (senna)."

1
Each one has to scratch for himself.

H. C. WATSON, Camp-Fires of the Revolution, p. 30. (1850)

She told him to scratch for himself.

ALICE CARY, Married, Not Mated, p. 304. (1856)

SCREW

2
Little screws of steel were made use of, that screwed the thumbs.

BISHOP GILBERT BURNET, History of His Own Time. Ch. 16. (a. 1715)

We didn't put on the screws half hard enough.

SYLVESTER JUDD, Margaret. Bk. ii, ch. 7. (1845)

Love strains the heart-strings of the human race, and not infrequently puts the screws on so hard as to snap them asunder.

ELBRIDGE GERRY PAGE, Dow's Patent Sermons, i, 302. (1852)

If I had not put the screws to him, . . . I never should have got the money.

F. W. THOMAS, Randolph of Roanoke, p. 286. (1853)

To put the screws on: to press, and figuratively to extort, to enforce payment in money transactions.

JOHN BARTLETT, Americanisms: Screw. (1859)
3
Screw, salary or wages.

HOTTEN, Dictionary of Slang: Screw. (1859)
It was in payment of my screw—my salary.

HUNTER AND WHYTE, My Ducats and My Daughter. Ch. 28. (1884)

The screw was a pound a week.

A. CONAN DOYLE, The Memoirs of Sherlock Holmes, p. 58. (1894)

4
It was evident that there was a screw loose in the programme.

ALBERT R. SMITH, The Struggles and Adventures of Christopher Tadpole. Ch. 41. (1848)

A genius with a screw loose, as we used to say.
EDWARD FITZGERALD, Letters, i, 21. (1833)

There is a screw of some magnitude loose somewhere.

DICKENS, Martin Chuzzlewit. Ch. 7. (1844) In Ch. 13, "I see well enough there's a screw loose in your affairs."

5
Let me screw thee up a peg.

TENNYSON, Vision of Sin. Pt. iv, st. 7. (1840)
My love of life screwed to the topmost peg.

R. L. STEVENSON, Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde. Ch. 10. (1886)

SCREW YOUR COURAGE TO THE STICKING PLACE, see under COURAGE.

6
Another turn of the screw would be better.

GEORGE WALPOLE, in EDWARDS, Proc. Maroon Negroes, p. 19. (1796)

The Turn of the Screw.

HENRY JAMES. Title of ghost story. (1898)

SCYLLA AND CHARYBDIS

7
On one side lay Scylla and on the other divine Charybdis terribly sucked down the salt water of the sea. (ὄθεν μὲν Σκύλλα, ἐτέρωθι δὲ δια Χάρυβδις | δεινὸν ἀνεροβόδησε θαλάσσης ἀλμυρὸν ὕδωρ.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xii, l. 235. (c. 850 B. C.)
Beginning with l. 73 of the same book, Circe gives Ulysses a long description of Scylla and Charybdis. The Greek proverb, based upon this passage from the Odyssey, is, τὴν Χάρυβδις ἐκφυγὼν τῇ Σκύλλῃ περιέπασον (In escaping Charybdis, I encountered Scylla). According to the Homeric fable, Scylla was a monster on a rock, and Charybdis a whirlpool, on opposite sides of the Straits of Messina.

Scylla guards the right side; Charybdis, insatiate, the left. (Dextrum Scylla latus, laevum implacata Charybdis.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iii, l. 420. (19 B.C.)
Where, O king, destined to perish, are you directing your unavailing flight? . . . You are running upon enemies, whilst you flee from your foe. You fall into Scylla seeking to escape Charybdis. (Incidiis in Scyllam cupiens vitare Charybdim.)

GAULTIER DE LILLE, Alexandreis. Bk. v, l. 298. (c. 1180) Gaultier is writing of the conquests of Alexander the Great, and the lines are addressed to Darius, who, fleeing from Alexander, falls into the hands of Bassus, one of his generals. LA FONTAINE, Fables, bk. v, fab. 6, renders the last line, "Tomber par là de Charybde en Scylle."

To escape Charybdis and fall into Scylla. (Evitata Charybdi in Scyllam incidi.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 5. (1523)
We go from Scylla to Charybdis. (Nous allons de Scylle en Carybde.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 20. (1548)
In escaping Scylla, fall into Charybdis. (Euitans Charybde, tombez en Scylle.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 17.
Running from Charibdis, hee rusht uppon Scilla: flying from one rocke, hee fell upon another.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 213. (1576)
When I shun Scylla, your father, I fall in Charybdis, your mother.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, iii, 5, 17. (1597)

If we scape Scylla, we fall foul on Charybdis, and so in perpetual fear, labour, anguish, we run from one plague, one mischief, one burden to another.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. i, sec. ii, mem. iii, subs. 10. (1621)

That pilot is to be pitied, who, to shun Scylla, doth run on Charybdis.

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 527. (1662)
[He] fell upon Scylla as he sought to avoid Charybdis.

SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 28. (1824)
The smiles of woman is the whirlpool of Squills and Chalybeates.

O. HENRY, Telemachus, Friend. (1907)
It's a choice between the Skilly of the workhouse and the Char Bydis of the middle class.

SHAW, Pygmalion. Act v. (1912)
1
He steers you from still water onto a rock. (Ad scopulum e tranquillo auferat.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 689. (161 B.C.)
Fleeing from a foe, I rush into the hands of an enemy. (Profugiens hostem inimici invadam in manus.)

ACCUS, Athamas. Frag. 159. Loeb. (c. 140 B.C.)
I escaped the Thunder, and fell into the Lightning.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1082. (1640)
To 'scape Clude, and be drowned in Conway

THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, iii, 527. (1662) Two Welsh rivers.

If the Bermudas let you pass,
You must beware of Hatteras.

R. H. DANA, Two Years Before the Mast. Ch. 35. (1840) Referred to as an "old couplet."

SCYTHE

2
Where the scythe cuts and the plough rives,
No more fairies and bee-bikes [nests].

MICHAEL DENHAM, Proverbs, p. 17. (1846)
3
The scythe feeds the meadows. (La faux paie les prez.)

LE ROUX DE LINCY, Proverbes Français, i, 83.
Citing a proverb of c. 1250. Another form is, "C'est la faux qui paye les prez."

4
Nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defence.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet xii. (1609)
Time devours Things; his Sithe our Legs will hit.
THOMAS PECKE, Parnassi Puerperium, 112. (1659)

Out with his Scythe the Tyrant [Death] goes,
Great multitudes at once he mows.

BISHOP THOMAS KEN, Hymnotheo. (a. 1700)
Old Time his dusty scythe may whet.

O. W. HOLMES, Loving-Cup Song. (1883)

SEA

See also Ocean, Sailing, Ship

5
There is the sea—and who shall drain it dry?
(ἔστιν θάλασσα, τίς δέ νιν καταβέσει;)

AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 958. (458 B.C.)
It [the well] ne may in winter dye,
No more than may the see be drye.

GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose. (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 1565.

6
The multitudinous laughter of the sea. (ποντίων τε κυμάτων ἀνθρήμον γέλασμα.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 89. (470 B.C.) De Quincey, tr.

The many-twinkling smile of ocean.
JOHN KEBLE, The Christian Year: Second Sunday after Trinity. (1827)

7
From a stubborn wind comes a stormy sea. (ἐκ πνέματος εἰσι χειμών.)

AESCHYLUS, The Suppliant Maidens, l. 167. Repeated in l. 181. (c. 485 B.C.)

8
Every sea is sea. (πᾶσα θάλασσα θάλασσα.)
ANTIPATER, Elegies. (c. 100 B.C.) See Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 639.

9
If a court of equity were still at sea.
SIR WILLIAM BLACKSTONE, Commentaries upon the Laws of England, iii, xxvii, 440. (1768)

If there were not the same rules of property in all courts, all things would be as it were at sea.

WM. CRUISE, Laws of England, i, 486. (1818)
Mrs. Tickit . . . was plainly at sea.

DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Bk. ii, ch. 9. (1855)
He seemed all at sea.

F. C. SELOUS, Travel and Adventure in South-East Africa, p. 219. (1893)

10
The sea complains it wanteth water.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 6. (1639) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 192. (1670)

The Sea complains for want of Water.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4740. (1732)

I never saw the use of the sea. Many a sad heart it has caused, and many a sick stomach has it occasioned.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Vivian Grey. (1837)

I find the sea-life an acquired taste, like that for tomatoes and olives.

R. W. EMERSON, English Traits. Ch. 2. (1856)

The sea is ferae naturae. . . . It is feline. . . . The sea drowns out humanity and time: it has no sympathy with either, for it belongs to eternity.

O. W. HOLMES, The Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 11. (1858)

The thing that I hate most

Is a thing they call the sea.

LEWIS CARROLL, A Sea Dirge. (1869)

The Sea is as deep in a calme, as in a storme.

JOHN DONNE, Sermons: Mundus Mare (c. 1629)

The sea doth wash away all human ills. (θάλασσα κλύζει πάντα τῶνθρώπων κακά.)

EURIPIDES, Iphigenia in Tauris, l. 1193. (c. 414 B.C.)

Quoted by Plato when cured of an illness in Egypt by the use of sea-water. See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Plato. Sec. 6.

God willing, you may go to sea on a mat. (θεοῦ θέλοντος, κἂν ἐπὶ ῥιπῶς πλέοις.)

EURIPIDES, Thyestes. Frag. 397, Nauck. (c. 420 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia: The Oracles at Delphi. Sec. 405B, who attributes the line to Pindar. Lucian has "To sail right across the Aegean on a raft, as the proverb says." ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, i, 56, gives the Latin as "Virgultea scaphula Aegaeum transmittit."

Wherries must not put out to Sea.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5686. (1732)

As the Seven Seas should heed a Pebble cast.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Rubáiyát. St. 47. (1872)

The Seven Seas.

RUDYARD KIPLING. Title of book of poems. (1896)

The seven seas are the Arctic, Antarctic, North and South Atlantic, North and South Pacific, and the Indian Ocean. The "four seas" are the seas bounding Great Britain. "The roaring forties" is another familiar phrase—the rough part of the Atlantic between 40 and 50 north latitude. "Mare nostrum" (Our sea) is of course the Mediterranean, so-called by the Romans and long coveted by Mussolini.

He goes a great Voyage, that goes to the Bottom of the Sea.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1850. (1732)

Towarde shipwracke, many men can pray.

GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Steele Glas (Arber). p. 79. (1576)

He that will learn to pray, let him go to sea.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Mer. (1611)

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 89. (1640)

The proverb indeed is, "He that would learn to pray, let him go to sea."

WILLIAM GURNALL, Christian in Compleat Armour (1865), i, 577. (1655) Cited by Ray and Fuller.

The common saying is, that he who cannot pray, must go to church at sea.

JAMES HOWELL, Parly of Beasts, p. 9. (1660)

As carnal seamen in a storm,

Turn pious converts and reform.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras. Pt. iii, canto ii, l. 537. (1678)

If you wish to learn to pray, embark on the sea. (Si quieres saber orar, entra en la mar.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 267.

(1856) A Spanish proverb. The French say, "Qui veut apprendre à prier, aille souvent sur le mer."

The loud-resounding sea. (πολυφλοισβοῖο θαλάσσης.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 182. (c. 850 B.C.)

The always wind-obeying deep.

SHAKESPEARE, Comedy of Errors, i, 1,64. (1593)

Perilous seas, in faery lands forlorn.

JOHN KEATS, To a Nightingale. (1819)

The sea is not to be measured by a bushel.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 281. (1872)

The old man of the sea. (γέρον ἄλιος.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. iv, l. 349. (c. 850 B.C.)

Of Proteus.

[He] reminds me of Sindbad's Old Man of the Sea, and will certainly throttle me if I can't somehow dismount him.

WALTER SCOTT, Letter, 7 Aug., 1809. The reference is to the Old Man of the Sea in the story of Sindbad the Sailor in the Arabian Nights, who, once seated on Sindbad's shoulders, refused to dismount.

It is an old adage that there is nothing worse than the sea to confound a man, be he never so strong. (οὐ γὰρ ἐγὼ γέ τι φημι κακώτερον ἄλλο θαλάσσης | ἀνδρα γε συγχεῖναι, εἰ καὶ μάλα καρπερὸς εἴη.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. viii, l. 138. (c. 850 B.C.)

The burden of the desert of the sea. (Onus deserti maris.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xxi, 1. (c. 725 B.C.)

Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further: and here shall thy proud waves be stayed. (Usque huc venies, et non procedes amplius, et hic confringes tumentes fluctus tuos.)

Old Testament: Job, xxxviii, 11. (c. 350 B.C.)

He maketh the deep to boil like a pot. (Ferverescere faciet quasi ollam profundum mare.)

Old Testament: Job, xli, 31. (c. 350 B.C.)

Deep calleth unto deep. (Abyssus abyssum invocat.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xlii, 7. (c. 350 B.C.)

A few swimming in the vast deep. (Rari nantes in gurgite vasto.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. i, l. 118. (19 B.C.)

<sup>1</sup> I deliver to you a fleet that is mistress of the seas. (θαλασσοκρατοῦν τὸ ναυτικὸν παραδίδωσιν.)

LYSANDER, to Callicrates, when he handed over command of the Athenian fleet. (407 B.C.)

See PLUTARCH, Lives: Lysander. Ch. 6, sec. 2. He who holds the sea must be master of the empire. (Qui mare teneat, eum necesse esse rerum potiri.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. x, epis. 8. (49 B.C.)

Hee that Commands the Sea, is at great liberty, and may take as much, and as little of the Warre, as he will.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of the True Greatness of Kingdoms and Estates. (1597)

The trident of Neptune is the sceptre of the world. (Le trident de Neptune est le sceptre du monde.)

ANTOINE LEMIERRE, Epigram (c. 1780)

<sup>2</sup> When the sea is calm the careless sailor takes his ease. (Cum mare compositum est, securus navita cessat.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 259. (c. 1 B.C.)

There is no dashing of billows when the sea is calm. (In tranquillo non tumultuatur.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. 98, sec. 7. (a. A. D. 64)

<sup>3</sup> The sea hath fish for every man.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace: Sinorix and Camma, p. 27. (1576) See also under FISH

<sup>4</sup> In vain, oh sea, have I escaped thy tempests. (Nequiquam, mare, subterfugi a tuis tempestatibus.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 195. (c. 200 B.C.)

A man who is not afraid of the sea will soon be drowned.

J. M. SYNGE, The Aran Islands, p. 127. (1907)

<sup>5</sup> The sea is naturally common to all. (Mare quidem commune certo est omnibus.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 975. (c. 200 B.C.)

The use of the sea and air is common to all; neither can a title to the ocean belong to any people.

ELIZABETH, QUEEN OF ENGLAND, to the Spanish ambassador. (1580)

Seas but join the regions they divide.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 400. (1704)

Comrades! now that we have established our peace on land, let us conquer the freedom of the seas.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Manifesto, to the French army. (c. 1812) See LUDWIG, Napoleon, p. 105.

Absolute freedom of navigation upon the seas, outside territorial waters, alike in peace and in war.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, to Congress, 8 Jan., 1918. One of the fourteen points. Two proverbial Latin phrases are "Mare apertum" (A sea open to commerce), and "Mare clausum" (A sea closed to commerce).

<sup>6</sup> The sea is his, and he made it. (Ipsius est mare, et ipse fecit illud.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xcvi, 5. (c. 350 B.C.)

<sup>7</sup> And the sea gave up the dead which were in it. (καὶ ἔδωκεν ἡ θάλασσα τοὺς νεκροὺς τοὺς ἐν αὐτῇ.)

New Testament: Revelation, xx, 13. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Et dedit mare mortuos, qui in eo erant."

Perhaps I shall meet thee and know thee again When the sea gives up her dead.

JEAN INGELow, Supper at the Mill: Mother Sings. (1863)

<sup>8</sup> And I saw a new heaven and a new earth: for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away; and there was no more sea. (καὶ ἡ θάλασσα οὐκ ἔστιν ἔτι.)

New Testament: Revelation, xxi, 1. (c. A. D. 60) The Vulgate is, "Et mare iam non est."

<sup>9</sup> Worse things happen at sea.

SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 5. (1869)

When you travel by boat, be prepared for a ducking.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs; 1949. (1875)

<sup>10</sup> The sea appears today just as it did on the first day of creation. (La mer reparait telle qu'elle fut au premier jour de la création.)

MADAME DE STAËL, Corinne. Bk. i, ch. 4. (1807)

The sea is not worn by ships.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 376. (1938) See also under OCEAN

<sup>11</sup> You don't know what evil you've escaped by never going to sea. (Nescis quid mali praeterieris, qui numquam es ingressus mare.)

TERENCE, Hecyra, l. 419. (165 B.C.)

He who travellet not by sea, knows not what the fear of God is.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 230. (1623)

<sup>12</sup> All the seas she [Venus] mingled with the sky. (Maria omnia caelo miscuit.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 790. (19 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 81, who gives the proverbial form "Mare caelo miscere"—proverbial for raising a storm or making a great bluster about something.

You confound sea and sky with your bellowing. (Clames licet et mare caelo confundas.)

JUVENAL, Satires, Sat. vi, l. 283. (c. A. D. 120)

<sup>13</sup> On every side the sky, on every side the sea. (Caelum undique et undique pontus.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. iii, l. 193. (19 B.C.) Quoted by ST. JEROME, Letters, i, 2.

Wherever I look there is naught but sea and air. (Quocumque aspicio, nihil est, nisi pontus et aër.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, eleg. 2, l. 23. (c. A. D. 9)

The world of waters wild.

JAMES THOMSON, Britannia, l. 27. (a. 1748)

Water, water every where.

COLERIDGE, Ancient Mariner, l. 119. (1798)

<sup>14</sup> He is one that will borrow of any man.—Why, so doth the sea: it borrowes of all the small currents in the world, to encrease himselfe.

UNKNOWN, London Prodigal. Act i, sc. 1. (1605)
A man on Board cannot but be thoughtful on two Destinies, vis. Hanging and Drowning. . . . It often put me in mind of the old Proverb, The Sea and the Gallows refuses none.

EDWARD WARD, A Trip to New England. (1703)
Works, ii, 141.

The Sea refuses no River.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4741. (1732)
There is an old adage, that "The Kirk-garth, like the gallows and the sea, receives all without asking questions."

J. ELLETT BROGDEN, Provincial Words Current in Lincolnshire, p. 79. (1866)

1 Only the sea knows the depth of the sea.

UNKNOWN, Niti Sastras. (c. 1250)

II—Sea and Land

2 It is moost pleasaunte rowynge nere the lande, and walkynge nere the sea. (Iucundissima nauigatio iuxta terram, ambulatio iuxta mare.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. ii, No. 91. (1508)
Taverner, tr. Paraphrasing PLUTARCH, Symposium, bk. i.

The doctrine of the good philosophers, who tell us, that to walk by the sea and to navigate by the shore are very safe and pleasant things. (La doctrine des bons Philosophes, qui disent soy pourmener pres la mer & nauiger pres la terre, estre chose moult sceure & delectable.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 23. (1548)

3 When men come to like a sea life they are not fit to live on land.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 18 March, 1776.

They scorn the strand who sail upon the sea.

H. D. THOREAU, The Fisher's Boy. (a. 1862)

4 What have you to do with the sea? You should have been content with land. (Quid tibi cum pelago? Terra contenta fuisses.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 8, l. 49. (c. 13 B. C.)

5 There is more to dread upon the land than the hostile sea. (Plus habet infesta terra timoris aqua.)

OVID, Tristia. Bk. i, epis. xi, l. 26. (c. A. D. 9)

A strong nor'wester's blowing, Bill;

Hark! don't ye hear it roar, now?

Lord help 'em, how I pities them!

Unhappy folks on shore now!

CHARLES DIBDIN, Sailor's Consolation. (c. 1790)

The shore has perils unknown to the deep.

GEORGE ILES, Jottings. (c. 1920)

6 Death lies in wait for us alike on sea and land. (ὡς δὲ καὶ γὰρ ἐνὶ θάλασσᾳ καὶ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς.)

PLATO. (c. 375 B. C.) As quoted in Greek Anthology. Bk. vii, epig. 265. Epig. 269, also by Plato, begins, "Mariners, may ye be safe on sea and land" (καὶ ἐν θάλασσᾳ καὶ ἐπὶ τῇ γῇ.)

By sea and by land. (Per mare, per terras.)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. vii, l. 88; epis. xiv, l. 101. (c. 10 B. C.)

At his wille to be, bi se & bi land.

ROBERT MANNING OF BRUNNE, Chronicle (1810), p. 281. (1338)

God that schope both se and sand.

LAURENCE MINOT, Poems, iii, l. (a. 1352)

Ye seken lond and see.

CHAUCE, Man of Law's Prologue, l. 127. (c. 1386)

The light that never was, on sea or land.

WORDSWORTH, Peele Castle. (1805)

7 Marcus Cato said that he had never repented but three times in his whole life, once was when he paid a ship's fare to a place instead of walking thither. (ἐτέραν δὲ πλείους δρου δυνάτον ἦν περὶ εἶσαι.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Marcus Cato. Ch. 9, sec. 6. (c. A. D. 110) See under REPENTANCE.

There are many advantages in sea-voyaging, but security is not one of them.

SADI, Gulistan. (c. 1275) As quoted by EMERSON, English Traits: The Voyage.

Whenever you can make your journey by land, do not make it by sea. (Quando terra iter facere possis, ne mari facias.)

MICHAEL APOSTOLIUS, Adagia. Cent. ii, sec. 54. (a. 1480)

If you can get there by land, do not go by water. (Yu lu mo têng chou.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, 2541. (1875)

8 Hug the shore, let others keep to the deep. (Litus ama, . . . altum alii teneant.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 163. (19 B. C.)

'Tis true that on the sea is boundless gain.

But to be safe, upon the shore remain.

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. i, Maxim 16. (c. 1258)

Being on sea, sail; being on land, settle.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 420. (1640)

Praise the sea, but keep on land.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 485.

SEASICKNESS

9 What of the poor man? He hires a boat and gets just as sick as the rich man who sails in his yacht. (Quid pauper? . . . conducto navigo aequae | nauseat ac locuples quem ducit priva triremis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 1, l. 91. (20 B. C.)

Philatus not accustomed to these narrow Seas, was more redy to tell what wood the ship was made of, then to answer to Euphues discourse.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues and His England (Arber), p. 248. (1580) "To tell what wood the ship was made of" is an old proverbial expression for seasickness.

It was no boote to bid him tell what the ship was made of, for he did it deuoutly.

ROBERT ARMIN, Nest of Ninnies, sig. C1. (1608)

10 Panurge with the contents of his stomach fed the fish. (Panurge ayant du contenu en son estomach bien repeu les poissons.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 18. (1548)

SEASON

<sup>1</sup> To every thing there is a season, and a time to every purpose under the heaven. (Omnia tempus habent, et suis spatiis transeunt universa sub caelo.)

Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, iii, 1. (c. 200 B. C.) All things have their season. (Toutes choses ont leur saison.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 28. (1580)

Every thing is good in its season.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 184. (1633)

RAY, p. 23. (1670) FULLER, No. 1467. (1732)

Nothing is good but in its season.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3665. (1732)

Everything in its season and turnips in Advent. (Cada cosa en su tiempo, y nabos en Adviento.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs. Vol. i, p. 169. (1814)

A Spanish proverb.

He had no objection to tea; but he used to say, "Every thing in its season."

GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro. Ch. 3. (1851)

<sup>2</sup> Be instant in season, out of season. (ἐν ὥρῃ καὶ ἐκ αὐτῆς.)

New Testament: II Timothy, iv, 2. (c. 63 A. D.)

The Vulgate is, "Insta opportune, importune."

Repeating his folly in season, and out of season.

SIR ARTHUR HELPS, Essays, p. 93. (1841)

<sup>3</sup> The present time of the year has been named the silly season.

UNKNOWN, Punch, 9 Sept., 1871, p. 102/2. August and September, when newspapers, for lack of real news, used to discuss trivial topics.

SECRET

<sup>4</sup> A good vessel hides a thing within itself, but one that is broken lets it escape.

ARIKAR, Teachings. Col. vii, l. 109. (c. 550 B. C.)

I am full of leaks, and I let secrets out hither and yon. (Plenus rimarum sum, hac atque illac perfluo.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 105. (161 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> Thou shalt have no business with secret things.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iii, 22. (c. 190 B. C.) The usual version is, "It is not needful for thee to see with thine eyes the things that are in secret," the Vulgate, "Non est enim tibi necessarium ea, quae abscondita sunt, videre oculis tuis." A warning against the Cabbala.

<sup>6</sup> Reveal thy secret to one of a thousand. (Consiliarius sit tibi unus de mille.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), vi, 6. (c. 190 B. C.) Repeated in Babylonian Talmud: Jebamoth, fo. 63b.

Whoso discovereth secrets loseth his credit.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xvii, 16.

Hast thou heard anything? Let it die with thee; Be of good courage, it will not burst thee.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xix, 10.

A wound may be bound up, and for slander there is reconciliation, but he that revealeth secrets hath no hope.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xxvii, 21.

<sup>7</sup> From your doctor, your confessor, and your lawyer don't have any secrets. (Al medico, confesor, y letrado, | No le hayas engañado.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbs, p. 237. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

<sup>8</sup> What you'd keep quiet, don't tell a babbler. (Quod tacitum esse velis verbosis dicere noli.)

CATO (?), Dicta Catonis: Codium Turicensis. No. 8. (c. 175 B. C.) See Minor Latin Poets (Loeb). p. 622.

<sup>9</sup> None are so fond of secrets as those who do not mean to keep them.

C. C. COLTON, Lacon. Vol. i, No. 40. (1820)

<sup>10</sup> The secret things belong unto the Lord our God. (Abscondita, Domino Deo nostro.)

Old Testament: Deuteronomy, xxix, 29. (c. 650 B. C.)

<sup>11</sup> There are secrets in all families.

FARQUHAR, Beaux' Stratagem. Act iii, sc. 3. (1706)

SKELETON IN CUPBOARD, see under SKELETON.

<sup>12</sup> A secret ought to be hydden. (Il secreto si deue celare.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

Secrecie is praysewoorthy. (Il secreto è laudabile.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31.

<sup>13</sup> It is wise not to seek a Secret and Honest not to reveal it.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1747.

<sup>14</sup> Disclose not that to thy friend which thou wouldst conceal from thine enemy.

IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 315. (c. 1050) Lokman adds (Ethics, ii, 12): "For he may sometime become an enemy."

If you would keep your secret from an enemy, tell it not to a friend.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741.

<sup>15</sup> The sage was asked the surest means of keeping a secret. He answered: Make your heart its tomb.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 317. (c. 1050)

Enclose thy secrets within the city walls of thy mind, and beware that none may find the gates of thy city open.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. vii, Maxim 17. (c. 1257)

<sup>16</sup> Keep your secret to yourself and it is your captive; disclose it and it is your captor.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 321. (c. 1050)

Thy secret is thy prisoner; if thou let it go thou art a prisoner to it.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 408. (1678)
The Arabs have a similar proverb, "A secret is your slave if you keep it, your master if you lose it." They also say, "A secret is your blood; let it out too often and you die."

<sup>1</sup> Impart thy secret in a plain, and thy advice on the summit of a mountain.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 306. (c. 1050)

Do not speak of secret matters in a field that is full of little hills.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 396. (1678)

<sup>2</sup> According to the saying, He bringeth him selfe in subjection to another, which telleth his secret to him who knewe it not.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 71. (1574) Pettie, tr.

He that tells his secret to another makes himself that other's slave. (El que comunicó sus secretos á otro hizose esclavo de él.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 237. (1647)

He that tells a secret is another's servant.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 514. (1640)

He who discovers his secrets to another sells him his liberty and becomes his slave.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, 14 Feb., 1647.

Tell your secret to your servant, and you make him your master.

NATHAN BAILEY, Dictionary: Tell. (1736) From the French proverb, "Dis ton secret à ton serviteur, et tu en auras fait ton maître."

To whom thy secret thou dost tell,

To him thy freedom thou dost sell.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

Who shows his secret sells his liberty.

FRANCIS BEEDING, Heads off at Midnight. Ch. 17. (1940) Quoted as a Spanish proverb

<sup>3</sup> If you would know secrets, look [for] them in grief or pleasure.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 369. (1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1670)

<sup>4</sup> Never inquire into another man's secret. (Arcanum neque tu scrutaberis illius umquam.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 18, l. 37. (20 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> The vanity of being known to be trusted with a secret is generally one of the chief motives to disclose it.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 13. (1750)

<sup>6</sup> Wherever there is a secret there must be something wrong.

J. G. LOCKHART, Life of Scott, ii, 42. (1837)
Cited as "an old saying."

<sup>7</sup> Not in the habit of telling secrets. (Indocilis privata loqui.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. v, l. 539. (c. A. D. 60)

<sup>8</sup> To be perfectly secret, one must be so by nature, not by obligation. (Pour estre bien secret, il le fault estre par nature, non par obligation.)

MONTAIGNE, Essais: Sur des Vers de Virgile. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595)

<sup>9</sup> Secrecy is one Thing, false Lights is another.

WILLIAM PENN, More Fruits of Solitude. No. 16. (1718)

<sup>10</sup> Sooner will men hold fire in their mouths than keep a secret. (Citius flammās mortales ore tenebunt | quam secreta tegant.)

PETRONIUS, Fragmentis. Frag. 13. Loeb. (c. A. D. 60)

A certain wise man used to say, that it was more easie to hold a burning coale, then a secret word in ones mouth.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. i, p. 70. (1574) Pettie, tr.

<sup>11</sup> Nothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest. (οὐ γὰρ ἔστιν κρυπτόν ὃ οὐ φανερόν γενήσεται.)

New Testament: Luke, viii, 17. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Non est enim occultum, quod non manifestetur."

Nothing is secret which shall not be revealed. (Nil occultum esse, quod non reveletur.)

PHIADRUS (?), Fables. No. 22. (c. 25 B. C.)

Nought so secreete but at length is spied.

UNKNOWN, Myrroure for Magistrates, p. 5. (1559)

MURDER WILL OUT, see under MURDER.

<sup>12</sup> Anything you like, Sire, except your secrets. (οὐ βούλει, βασιλεῦ, πλὴν τῶν ἀπορρήτων.)

PHILIPPIDES, the comic poet (c. 330 B. C.), when King Lysimachus asked him, "What is there of mine that I may share with you?" See PLUTARCH, Moralia: Concerning Talkativeness, 508C, 517B.

At his peril does an inferior seek for what a superior hides. (Cum periculo inferior quaerit quod superior occultit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 140. (c. 43 B. C.)

Never share secrets with your superiors. (Nunca partir secretos con mayores.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 237. (1647)

Bestow on me what you will, so it be none of your Secrets.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 972. (1732)

<sup>13</sup> Both a secret and no secret. (Immo et celas et non celas.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 1014. (c. 200 B. C.)

The open secret. (Il pubblico secreto.)

CARLO GOZZI, tr., of the title of Calderon's Spanish play, El Secreto á Voces (1769)

I will tell you a secret, which is not yet Pulchinello's secret.

BENJAMIN DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 64. (1880)
After the French. "C'est le secret de la comédie, de Polichinelle."

1 I'll bury your secret in safer silence than what's told to a tongueless woman. (Tacitas tibi res sistam quam quod dictum est mutae mulieri.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 876. (c. 194 B.C.)
For greater security I'll put a flagstone over it. (Y aun le echaré una losa encima, para más seguridad.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote, Pt. ii, ch. 62. (1615)
I'll be as secret as a Scotch wizard, who don't even let his shadow be seen.

PAULDING, Bucktails. Act iv, sc. 1. (1815)
This secret is sacred as the secrets of the grave
JOAQUIN MILLER, Danites. Act ii. (1877)
As secret as an oyster.

FREEMAN, Unconscious Witness, p. 217. (1942)

2 It is wretched to be forced to conceal what you long to reveal. (Miserum est tacere cogi quod cupias loqui.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 355. (c. 43 B.C.)
Whatsoever secret you hide becomes a terror to yourself. (Quodcumque celes ipse tibi fias timor.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 564.

3 Tell thy secret to one, but beware of two: what is known to three is known to every one.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 63. (c. 900)

Twoyn in nombre is bet than three

In every counsel and secree.

CHAUCER (?), tr., Romaunt of the Rose, l. 5257. (c. 1365)

Three maie kepe a counsaile if two be away

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
Two may keepe counsaile if one be away.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 67. (1579)
Two might best keep counsel where one was away.

GREENE, Manillia. (1583) Works, ii, 30.

Two may keep counsel when the third's away.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iv, 2, 144. (1593)

Is your man secret? Did you ne'er hear say,

Two may keep counsel, putting one away?

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, ii, 4, 208. (1595)

One may keepe counsell, but two cannot.

BRATHWAIT, English Gentleman, p. 158. (1630)

Three can hold their peace if two be away.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 716. (1640)
Three may keep counsel, if two be away. The French say, Secret de deux secret de Dieu, secret de trois secret de tous (Secret of two secret of God, secret of three secret of everybody). The Italians, in the same words, Trè taceranno, se due vi non sono.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 148. (1670)
The Italians also say, "Tre lo sanno, tutti lo sanno" (Three know it, all know it); the Spaniards "Lo que saben tres, sabe toda res" (What three persons know, everybody knows).

Three are too many to keep a secret, and too few to be merry.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5037. (1732)

Three may keep a secret, if two of them are dead.

FRANKLIN. Poor Richard's Almanack. 1735.

4 If you would have another keep a secret, keep it first yourself. (Alium silere quod voles, primus sile.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 876. (c. A.D. 60) Another form is ascribed to Seneca, and also to St. Martin, Archbishop of Braga (c. A.D. 560), "Quod tacitum esse velis nemini dixeris" (What you wish to be kept quiet you should tell to no one). Still another form is, "Nemini dixeris quae nolis efferri" (Tell no one what you do not wish to be repeated).

If you have let the secret slip from yourself and yet seek to confine it to another, you have taken refuge in another's good faith when you have already abandoned your own.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Garrulity. Sec. 506F. (c. A.D. 95)

If thy secret oppress thine own heart, how canst thou expect the heart of another to endure it?

RABBI JEDUDAH HALEVI, Apothehm. (c. A.D. 450)
Never condemn the betrayer of your secret; chide your own heart, which was too narrow to retain it.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninin (Choice of Pearls). No. 319. (c. 1050)

No one will be so careful of thy secret as thyself

SADI, Gulistan. Ch. viii, Maxim 10. (c. 1258)

Seneca seith: "If so be that thou ne mayst nat thyn owene conseil hyde, how darstow prayen any other wight thy conseil secreely to kepe?"

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 20. (c. 1387)
I have play'd the fool, the gross fool, to believe
The bosom of a friend will hold a secret
Mine own could not contain.

PHILIP MASSINGER, The Unnatural Combat.

Act v, sc. 2, l. 1. (c. 1619)

How can we expect another to guard our secret if we have not been able to guard it ourselves? (Comment prétendons-nous qu'un autre garde notre secret, si nous n'avons pas pu le garder nous-mêmes?)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 584. (1665)
When a secret is revealed, it is the fault of the man who confided it. (Toute révélation d'un secret est la faute de celui qui l'a confié.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. v. (1688)

He who wishes another to guard his secret, should guard it first himself. (Quel che vuoi che gli altri taciato, tacilo il primo.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 212. (1856) An Italian proverb.

You can take better care of your secret than another.

R. W. EMERSON, Journals, 1863.

5 Leave in concealment what has long been concealed. (Latere semper patere, quod latuit diu.)

SENECA, Oedipus, l. 826. (c. A.D. 60)

6 Seal up your lips, and give no words but mum.

SHAKESPEARE, II Henry VI, i, 2, 89. (1590) See also MUM.

Whatsoever else shall hap to-night,
Give it an understanding, but no tongue.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 249. (1600)

I will make a Star-chamber matter of it.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, i, i, 1. (1601) The Star-chamber was the apartment at Westminster Palace where the king's council sat.

<sup>1</sup> To seel her father's eyes up close as oak.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 210. (1605)

I am as close as oak, an absolute freemason for secrecy.

GEORGE COLMAN THE ELDER, The Deuce Is in Him. Act ii. (1763)

I never repeat a word; I am as close as an oak.

ARTHUR MURPHY, The Choice. Act i. (1764)

<sup>2</sup> There are no secrets better kept than the secrets that everybody guesses.

SHAW, Mrs. Warren's Profession. Act iii. (1893)

<sup>3</sup> If you wish to preserve your secret, wrap it up in frankness.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp: On the Writing of Essays. (1863)

<sup>4</sup> Secrecy is the seal of speech, and occasion the seal of secrecy. (ἑφασκέ τε σφραγίζεσθαι τὸν μὲν λόγον σιγῇ, τὴν δὲ σιγὴν κατῷ.)

SOLON, Maxim. (c. 575 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Solon. Sec. 53.

Jesus Syrak seith: "neither to thy foo ne to thy freend discovere nat thy secree ne thy folie."

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of Melibeus, Sec. 20. (c. 1387)

<sup>5</sup> There are some secrets which it is a misery to know, and some which the tongue itches to communicate.

SOUTHEY, The Doctor. Interch. 12. (1812)

A secret is a weapon and a friend. Man is God's secret, Power is man's secret, Sex is woman's secret.

JAMES STEPHENS, The Crock of Gold. (1913)

II—Secrets and Women

<sup>6</sup> It is comyn prouerbe that women can kepe no counceyl.

CAXTON, Game of the Chesse, p. 16. (1474)

How hard it is for women to keep counsell

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, ii, 4, 9. (1599)

<sup>7</sup> A man can keep another person's secret better than his own: a woman, on the contrary, keeps her own secret, but betrays those of others.

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères. Pt. v. (1688)

<sup>8</sup> Thus through a woman was the secret known; Tell us, and in effect you tell the town.

DRYDEN, The Wife of Bath, l. 201. (1700)

Oil and water—woman and a secret—Are hostile properties.

LORD LYTTON, Richelieu. Act i, sc. 1. (1838)

A secret revealed to a woman is as a bubble that is blown.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 383. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>9</sup> Every secret a man tells to a woman is a sticking-plaster that attaches him to her.

JEAN PAUL RICHTER, Hesperus. Ch. 16. (1792)

<sup>10</sup> The talkativeness of women can conceal only that which it does not know. (Garrulitas mulierum id solum novit celare, quod nescit.)

SENECA THE ELDER, Controversiae. Bk. ii, ch. 13, sec. 12. (c. A. D. 25)

Ye seyn that "the janglerie of wommen hath hid things that they woot not" as who seith, that "a woman can nat hyde that she woot."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus, l. 2274. (c. 1387)

Women and children keep that in counsel whereof they are ignorant.

ABRAHAM FLEMING, A Panoplie of Epistles, p. 217. (1576)

Thou wilt not utter what thou dost not know, And so far will I trust thee, gentle Kate.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 3, 114. (1597)

A woman conceals what she knows not.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1029. (1640)

Women conceal all that they know not.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 50. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5806. (1732) The Arabs say, "The only secret a woman can keep is the one she doesn't know"; the French, "The only secret a woman can keep is that of her age."

SECT

<sup>11</sup> Bifarious anythingarians, that always make their interest the standard of their religion.

THOMAS BROWN, Works, iii, 97. (a. 1704)

He appears to be of all Parties, but the Right: That is, an Any-Thing-Arian.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 287. (1709)

What religion is he of? Why, he is an Anything-arian.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

They made puir Robbie Burns an anythingarian with their blethers.

KINGSLEY, Alton Locke. Ch. 22. (1850)

<sup>12</sup> Presbyterianism is no religion for a gentleman.

CHARLES II, to Lauderdale. (1660) See CARLYLE, Cromwell. Bk. vi, ch. 124.

For his religion, it was fit

To match his learning and his wit:

'Twas Presbyterian true blue.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Hudibras, i, i, 189. (1663)

<sup>13</sup> Spiritual influenza.

GEORGE CRABBE, The Borough, iv, Introduction. (1810) Referring to Methodism.

A lean strait-locked, whey-faced Methodist.

CHARLES LAMB, Letter to Bernard Barton, Dec., 1827.

<sup>14</sup> I knew a witty physician who . . . used to affirm that if there was a disease in the liver, the man became a Calvinist, and if that organ was sound, he became a Unitarian.

EMERSON, Essays: Experience. (1844)

I have noticed all my life that many people think they have religion when they are troubled with dyspepsia.

R. G. INGERSOLL, Liberty of Man, Woman and Child. (1877)

I would not do for a Methodist preacher, for I am a poor horseman. I would not suit the Baptists, for I dislike water. I would fail as an Episcopalian, for I am no ladies' man.

JOHN HAY, Letter. (a. 1905) See THAYER, Life and Letters of John Hay, i, 59.

I am of a sect by myself, as far as I know.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Letter to Ezra Stiles, 1819.

Divide not yourselves into sects.

MOHAMMED, The Koran, xlii, 13. (c. 622)

A thousand daily sects rise up and die;

A thousand more the perished race supply.

JOHN DRYDEN, Religio Laici, l. 421. (1682)

Different Sects like different clocks, may all be near the matter, 'tho they don't quite agree.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

Every sect has its truth and every truth its sect.

HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 118. (1937)

A spleeny Lutheran.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 2, 99. (1612)

One is of Martin's Religion, another of Luther's.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3763. (1732)

Put down enthusiasm. . . . The Church of England in a nutshell.

MRS. HUMPHRY WARD, Robert Elsmere. Bk. ii, ch. 16. (1888)

SECURITY

Nothing secure unless suspected.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1063. (1650)

No opportunity for security should be let slip. (Cavendi nulla est dimittenda occasio.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 102. (c. 43 B. C.)

When the Devil brings thee Oyle, bring thou Vinegar. The way to bee safe, is never to bee secure.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Enchyridion, iv, lxiii, T1. (1641) The last phrase cited by FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4820. (1732) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1757. See also SAFETY.

O how unsafe it is to be secure!

SIR SAMUEL TUKER, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act ii. (1663)

He that is too secure is not safe.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2195. (1732)

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748.

The security of nations is like happiness in love: a happy miracle which it is necessary to create anew every day. (La sécurité des nations est comme le bonheur dans l'amour: miracle heureux qu'il faut créer à nouveau chaque jour.)

COUNT SPORZA, Epigram. (c. 1925) As quoted by L'Éclaircissement de Nice.

Security | Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iii, 5, 32. (1606)

Desire for security keeps littleness little and threatens the great with smallness.

ANONYMOUS, Meditations in Wall Street, p. 39, (1940)

Secure from worldly chances and mishaps.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, i, 1, 152. (1593)

Secure of thunder's crack or lightning flash.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, ii, 1, 3.

Secure of steel, and fated from the Fire.

DRYDEN, tr., Aeneid, vii, 956. (1697)

From the contagion of the world's slow stain.

He is secure.

SHELLEY, Adonais. St. 40. (1821)

Thou art secure from every thing that is not predestined.

E. W. LANE, tr., Arabian Nights, i, 128. (1839)

Because he is blind, he is also secure.

JOHN WESLEY, Works (1872), v, 99. (1771)

SEEING, see Sight

SEEKING

It was none of our seeking.

WILLIAM CARTWRIGHT, The Siege. Act ii, sc. 3. (a. 1643)

The misfortune is entirely of my own seeking.

THEODORE HOOK, Sayings. Ser. ii. (1825)

You are like the man who sought his mare, and he riding on her.

KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 363. (1721)

Bee no seeker out of other mens matters.

THOMAS PALFREYMAN, Baldwin's Morall Philosophie, vii, vii, 129. (1567)

He searched for them everywhere by sea and land. (Mari terraque usquequaque quaeritat.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus: Prologus, l. 105. (c. 194 B. C.)

To gratify their palates they scoured land and sea. (Vescendi causa terra marique omnia exquirere.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. xiii. (c. 40 B. C.) "To scour sea and land," a proverbial phrase, is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 25.

Search me. (Proba me.)

Old Testament: Psalms, cxxxix, 23. (c. 250 B. C.)

II—Seeking and Finding

If the seeker is worthy, attainment is easy.

ABDULLAH ANSARI, Invocations. (c. 1075)

Seek that which may be found.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 7. (1621)

As good seeke nought as seeke and finde nought.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

1 But whan she seemed to be fixed in mynde,
To seeke for that she was lothe to fynde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
It is no wisdome to search for that a man would not find.

SIR JOHN HARINGTON, tr., Orlando Furioso. Bk.
xliii, notes. (1591)

I seek for a thing that I would not find.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 7. (1659)

2 Search not too curiously lest you find trouble.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1659)

3 Seek till you find, and you'll not lose your labour.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 200. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4089. (1732)

Miss: I have lost the finest needle.

Lady A.: Why, seek till you find it, and then you won't lose your labour.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

4 Who seeks shall find. (τὸ δὲ ζητούμενον ἀλωτόν.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus Tyrannus, l. 110. (c. 409
B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia. 98A.

What can be found I seek, but I ask God to answer prayer. (τὰ δ' εὐπερὰ ζητῶ, τὰ δ' εὐκτὰ παρὰ θεῶν ῥησάμην.)

SOPHOCLES, Fragments. No. 759. (c. 410 B.C.)

Quoted by Plutarch as above.

Seek and you will find.

MENCIUS, Discourses. vi, i, 6, 7. (c. 300 B.C.)

Quoting an ancient Chinese proverb. DOO-LITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 493, renders it, "Seek and you will obtain it."

Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. (αἰτεῖτε, καὶ δοθήσεται ὑμῖν· ζητεῖτε, καὶ εὕρεσθε· κρούετε, καὶ ἀνοίγησεται ὑμῖν.)

New Testament: Matthew, vii, 7-8. (c. A.D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Petite, et dabitur vobis:
quaerite, et invenietis: pulsate, et aperietur vobis."

As the saying is, Who searches well, finds well.
(L'en dit: Qui bien chace, bien treuve.)

UNKNOWN, Du Vilain au Buffet, l. 267. (c.
1250) MONTAIGLON, Fabliaux, iii, 208.

He fyndth that seekes.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Who seeketh, fyndeth. (Chi cerca, troua.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 34. (1578)

As the proverbe is (he that seeks shall finde)

BARNABY RICH, His Farewell to Militarie Profession (Sh. Soc.), p. 128. (1581)

He that seeketh findeth.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 185. (1633)

Who knocks at the door will hear the answer.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 604. (1817)

5 Nothing is so difficult but that it may be found out by seeking. (Nil tam difficile est quin quaerendo investigari possiet.)

TERENCE, Heauton Timorumenos, l. 675. (163
B.C.)

Attempt the end, and never stand to doubt;
Nothing's so hard but search will find it out.

ROBERT HERRICK, Seeke and Finde. (1648)

6 Who seeks what he should not, finds what he would not.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 44. (1666)

SEEMING

See also Appearance

7 His wish is not to seem, but be, the best.
(οὐ γὰρ δοκεῖν ἀριστος, ἀλλ' εἶναι θέλει.)

AESCHYLUS, Seven Against Thebes, l. 592. (467
B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 32E, 88B, 186B, and in the Life of Aristides, 320B.

He preferred to be rather than to seem virtuous.
(Esse quam videri bonus malebat.)

SALLUST, Bellum Catilinae. Ch. 54, sec. 6. (c.
41 B.C.) Of Cato, paraphrasing Aeschylus.

The usual form of the proverb is simply "Esse quam videri." Another is, "Sint ut sint aut non sint" (Let them be as they are, or not be at all).

Take care to be what people call you. (Cura esse quod audis.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16, l. 17. (20 B.C.)
Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, 1, 92.

Be content to seem what you really are. (Ut tandem videaris unus esse.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. x, epig. 83. (c. A.D. 93)
Don't act like a Syrian unless you are a Syrian (μὴ ὡν Σύρος μὴ σίριζε.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. iii, No. 73.
(1523) The Latin is, "Syrus cum non sis, ne syrissa."

Love rather to bee then to seem to bee.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 163. (1574)

The right Corall needeth no colouring.

JOHN LYL, Euphues and His England: Epistle Dedicatory (1580) FULLER, Gnomologia,
No. 4051 (1732), refined this to "Right Coral calls for no Colouring."

Labour to be what you are thought to be.

HARINGTON, Nugae Antiquae, i, 210. (a. 1612)

Be what thou wouldst seem to be.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 726. (1640)

Be what you seem, and seem what you are.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 68. (1721)

What you seem to be, be really.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1744

Kythe [appear] in your ain colours.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 129. (1832)

The moral of that is, "Be what you would seem to be."

LEWIS CARROLL (C. L. DODGSON), Alice's Adventures in Wonderland. Ch. 9. (1865)

Be what you appear to be. (Esto quod esse videris.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 105. (1869)

Be what thou seemest! live thy creed.

HORATIUS BONAR, *He Liveth Long Who Liveth
Well*. (c. 1870)

I want to see you shoot the way you shout.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Speech, Madison Square
Garden, New York, Oct., 1917.

Be a bush if you can't be a tree.

DOUGLAS MALLOCH, Be the Best of Whatever You Are. (c. 1930)

1

Seem not greater than thou art.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 7. (1621) Quoted as from a "humane author."

2

To seem, and not to be, is throwing the Shuttle without weaving.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5226. (1732)

3

Things do not pass for what they are, but for what they seem. (Las cosas no pasan por lo que son, sino por lo que parecen.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 99. (1647) Repeated in Maxim 130. The Italian form is, "Le cose non sono come sono, ma come si vedono."

Men are valued not for what they are, but for what they seem to be.

LORD LYTTON, Money. Act i, sc. 1. (1840)

4

Things are not always what they seem. (Non semper ea sunt, quae videntur.)

PHAEDRUS, Fables. Bk. iv, fable 2, l. 5. (c. 25 B.C.)

It is not al sooth thing that semeth.

(Dire vous os tout en apert)

Qu'il n'est pas veirs quanqu'il apert.) (c. 1270)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 12217. Chaucer (?), tr., l. 7546.

And things are not what they seem.

LONGFELLOW, A Psalm of Life. (1838)

Things are not always what they seem.

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. ii, ch. 5. (1865)

Things are seldom what they seem.

Skim milk masquerades as cream.

W. S. GILBERT, H.M.S. Pinafore. Act ii. (1878)

5

I'm what I look. (Sic sum ut vides.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 323. (c. 210 B.C.)

Seems, madam! nay, it is; I know not "seems."

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, i, 2, 76. (1600)

6

All things are less dreadful than they seem.

WORDSWORTH, Ecclesiastical Sonnets. Pt. i, No. 7. (1821)

Good and bad men are each less so than they seem.

S. T. COLERIDGE, Table Talk, 19 April, 1830

Man should be ever better than he seems.

AUBREY DE VERE, The Song of Faith. (1842)

SELF

7

The knee is nearer than the shin. (γόνυ κνήμης ἔγγιον.)

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. ix, ch. 8, sec. 2. (c. 335 B.C.) Quoted by SENECA (?). Ludus de Mortē Claudii, sec. 10, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 90, with the Latin, "Genu sura propius," and additional citations from other sources.

My tunic is closer than my mantle. (Tunica propior pallio est.)

PLAUTUS, Trinummus, l. 1154. (c. 194 B.C.)

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 89, and by TAVERNER, Translations from Erasmus, fo. 15, with the comment, "The englyshe prouerbe sayethe thus: Nere is my cote, but nerer is my shyrt."

Nere is my kyrtyl, but nerer is my smok.

UNKNOWN, Paston Letters, i, 542. (1461)

Though ny be my kyrtell, yet here is my smocke.

I haue one of mine owne whom I must looke to

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)

Euery man is neerest to himself, and the skinne neerer then the shyrt.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, ii, 311. (1593)

Neir is the kirtle, but neirer is the sark.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 82. (c. 1595)

My shirt is neare me, but my skin is nearest.

LODGE, Margarete of America, 103. (1596)

Close sitteth my shirt, but closer my skin.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 305. (1605)

Though to fortune near be her petticoat,

Yet nearer is her smock, the queen doth note.

BEN JONSON, Alchemist. Act iii, sc. 2. (1612)

His shirt was nearer to him than his doublet

JAMES HOWELL, Letters, 1 May, 1622.

His charity begins at home and there it ends; neare in his coat, but neerer is his skin.

HENSHAW, Horae Succisivae, p. 72. (1636)

Close sits my shirt, but closer my skin.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 79. (1678)

My shirt is near to me but my skin is nearer. . . . Nobody can blame me to apply a little balsam to my own sores.

JOHN ARBUTHNOT, The Law is a Bottomless Pit. Pt. iv, ch. 5. (1712)

The Shirt is nearer than the Coat.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4745. (1732)

The French say, "La chemise est plus proche que le pourpoint," or "Plus près est la chair que la chemise"; the Italians, "Tocca piu la camicia ch' il gippono."

Near is my purse, but nearer is my soul.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth. Ch. 76. (1860)

8

If I am not for myself, who will be for me?

Babylonian Talmud: Pirkē Aboth, i, 14. (c. 450)

A saying of Rabbi Hillel.

A wise man ought never to do anything but for himself. (Le sage ne devoir rien faire que pour soy.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 50. (1580)

9

At the narrow passage there is no brother and no friend.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 419. (1817)

In danger, everyone for himself.

When everyone takes care of himself, care is taken of all.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 558. (1855)

Self first, then your next best friend.

Oxfordshire Proverbs. Folk-Lore, xxiv, 76. (1913)

10

I have herd seyde, eek tymes twyes twelve.

"He is a fool that wol for-yete himselve."

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. v, l. 97. (c. 1380)

As for the largest-hearted of us, what is the word we write most often in our chequebooks?—"Self."

EDEN PHILLPOTTS, A Shadow Passes. (c. 1930)

<sup>1</sup> He is a Slave of the greatest Slave, who serveth nothing but himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1909. (1732)

He is unworthy to live, who lives only for himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1952.

Deny self for self's sake.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1735.

<sup>2</sup> Never talk of yourself. You must either praise yourself, which is vain, or blame yourself, which is small-minded. (Nunca hablar de sí.)

BALTASAR GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 117. (1647)

We would rather speak ill of ourselves than not speak of ourselves at all. (On aime mieux dire du mal de soi-même que de n'en point parler.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 138. (1665)

If you your ears would keep from jeers,

These things keep meekly hid:

Myself and me, or my and mine,

Or how I do or did.

NORRIS, Thirlby Hall, i, 315. (1883) Quoted.

<sup>3</sup> He looks not well to himself that looks not ever.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 834. (1640)

He that is ill to himself will be good to nobody.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 125. (1721)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2284. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Sel, sel, has half-filled hell.

HISLOP, Proverbs of Scotland, p. 257. (1862)

<sup>5</sup> Good folks are scarce, you'll take care of one.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 124. (1721)

I'm only talking of number one, you know. I must take care of that first.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Parent's Assistant, p. 322. (1796) "Number one," see under ONE.

<sup>6</sup> Why don't you speak for yourself, John?

H. W. LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish. Pt. iii. (1857)

Speak for yourself.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 99. (1904)

<sup>7</sup> Each man flees from himself, but the self whom he cannot escape cleaves to him all the more against his will. (Hoc se quisque modo fugit, at quem scilicet, ut fit, effugere haut potis est, ingratus haeret.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura, iii, 1068. (c. 45 B. C.)

What exile from his country ever escaped himself as well? (Patriae quis exsul | se quoque fugit?)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 16, l. 19. (23 B. C.)

<sup>8</sup> Defend me, God, from myself. (Defienda me Dios de my.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1595) Quoting a Spanish proverb.

Lord deliver me from myself.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Religio Medici. Pt. ii, sec. 10. (1643)

Beware of no Man more than thy self.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 977. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> Who lives unto himself, he lives to none.

FRANCIS QUARLES, Hadassa. Sec. 1, med. 1. (1621)

The wretch, concentred all in self,

Living, shall forfeit his renown,

And, doubly dying, shall go down

To the vile dust from which he sprung,

Unwept, unhonoured, and unsung.

SCOTT, The Lay of the Last Minstrel. Canto vi, st. 1. (1805) See also under OBSCURITY.

He that liveth to himself is dead.

MORTON LUCE, Thysia. Sonnet 36. (c. 1880)

<sup>10</sup> How true the saw, Each labors for himself. (ἡ πᾶσι ὅμοια πᾶς ἀνὴρ αὐτῷ ποιεῖ.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 1366. (c. 409 B. C.)

Each one for himself.

MENCIUS, Discourses, iii, ii, 9. (c. 300 B. C.)

Do himself a good turn. (Sibi faciat bene.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 945. (c. 200 B. C.) See under TURN.

I'll be good to myself. (Servibo mihi.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 546. (c. 200 B. C.)

Live for thyself. (Vive tibi.)

OVID, Tristia, iii, iii, 5. (c. A. D. 9)

Be a maker of shoes or of shafts for thyself only; if the shoe pinches or the shaft prove false, men think evil of thee.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 126 (c. 900)

And therefore, at the kinges court, my brother,

Ech man for him-self, ther is non other.

CHAUCER, The Knightes Tale, l. 323. (c. 1386)

Praie and shifte eche one for him selfe, as he can, Euery man for himselfe, and God for us all.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

A proverb, with minor variations, in many languages. The French say, "Chacun pour soi, et Dieu pour tous"; the Germans, "Jeder für sich, Gott für alle"; the Italians, "Ognun per se, e Dio per tutti"; the Spaniards, "Cada uno por sí, y Dios por todos"; the Dutch, "Elk voor zichzelf, God voor ons allen."

Where euerye man is for him selfe,

And no manne for all.

ROBERT CROWLEY, Works (E.E.T.S.), ii. (1550)

Euery man for him selfe, and the Deuill for all.

JAMES SANFORD, tr., Houres of Recreation, p.

219. (1574) Cited by FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33 (1578), with the Italian, "Ogni uno per se, & il diavolo par tutti." See under DEVIL.

Th' old prouerbe's in request, each man for one.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, A Strappado for the Diuill, p. 206. (1615)

Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care of himself.

SHAKESPEARE, The Tempest, v, 256. (1611)

Every man for himself, his own ends, the Devil for all.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. iii, sec. i. memb. 3. (1621)

That byword, "Every man for himself, and God for us ail," is uncharitable, ungodly.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), ii, 90. (1629)

See also COWLEY, The Guardian. Act iii, sc. 6. (1641) SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 32. (1818)

Every man for his self, quo' the Merteine.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish, p. 234. (1678)

Merteine, an imaginary author of proverbs.

In the old English and French collections of proverbs, the proverbs were often put in the mouths of imaginary persons.

Every man for his own hand as John Jelly fought.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 94. (1721)

Every one for his home, every one for himself.

(Chacun chez soi, chacun pour soi.)

ANDRÉ DUPIN, Procès de Tendance. (a. 1810)

Every man for himself, and each from the gallows.

DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 25. (1838)

Each for himself, and de'il tak the hindmost.

MULOCK, A Woman's Thoughts, p. 39. (1858)

Every man for himself in the struggle for pelf.

(Ko shih ko, ni ku ni, wo ku wo.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1764. (1875)

Yourself first, others afterward. (Hsien yu tzü chi, 'hou yu t'a jên.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1782.

"Each man for himself" seems to have been the first form, to which is later added, "and God for us all," or "and the Devil for all. . . ." It is obvious that one produced the other by contrast.

ARCHER TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 26. (1931)

1 Everyone sets his own good before his neighbor's. (Omnis sibi malle melius esse quam alteri.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 427. (166 B. C.) Quoted as "a true saying which is heard everywhere"

Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iii, 91.

Every man is sorry for himself. (Nestri nosmet paenitet.)

TERENCE, Phormio, l. 172. (161 B. C.)

Nothing whatever is dearer or of more importance to us than ourselves. (Nihil quicquam esset carius pensiusque nobis quam nosmet ipsi.)

TAURUS, Apothegm. (c. A. D. 150) As reported by AULUS GELLIUS, xii, 5.

By whatever name we call

The ruling tyrant, self is all in all.

CHURCHILL, The Conference, l. 177. (a. 1764)

Pleasure is the aim, and Self the spring of all.

ROBERT SOUTHEY, The Poet's Pilgrimage to Waterloo. Pt. ii, canto i, st. 22. (1816)

Self's the man. (Zelf is de Man.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p. 93. (1853) A Dutch proverb.

All sensible people are selfish.

EMERSON, Considerations by the Way. (1860)

2 The man who is dissatisfied with himself, what can he not do?

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 23 Nov., 1850.

Great God, I ask thee for no meaner pelf Than that I may not disappoint myself.

H. D. THOREAU, My Prayer. (a. 1862)

3 Let every man's hope be in himself. (Spes sibi quisque.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. xi, l. 309. (19 B. C.)

Look to no one outside yourself. (Nec te quaesiveris extra.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. i, l. 7. (c. A. D. 58) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 16.

Depend upon no one but yourself: it's a common proverb. (Ne t'attends qu'a toi seul.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 22. (1678)

There is no dependence that can be sure but a dependence upon one's self.

JOHN GAY, Letter to Stella, 9 Nov., 1729.

He lean'd not on his fathers but himself.

TENNYSON, Aylmer's Field, l. 56. (1864)

The only leaning which does not weaken us is on ourself.

Meditations in Wall Street, p. 136. (1940)

4 One's own self is both his friend and enemy.

UNKNOWN, Mahabharata. Sec. 27. (c. 200 B. C.)

No one is second to himself. (Nemo sibi secundus.)

RABELAIS, Letter, 15 Feb., 1536. Quoting a proverb.

There is no better friend nor relative than yourself. (Il n'est meilleur ami ni parent que soi-même.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. iv, fab. 22. (1668)

SELF-ACCUSATION

5 He who blames himself takes a by-road to praise; and, like the rower, turns his back to the place whither he desires to go.

ST. FRANCIS DE SALES, Epigram. (c. 1610) See CAMUS, L'Esprit de St. François de Sales.

Too liberal self-accusations are generally but so many traps for acquittal with applause.

SAMUEL RICHARDSON, Pamela. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1740)

All censure of a man's self is oblique praise.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 25 April, 1778.

There is a luxury in self-dispraise.

WORDSWORTH, The Excursion. Pt. iv. (1814)

There is luxury in self-reproach.

OSCAR WILDE, Picture of Dorian Gray. (1891)

6 The self-accusing of some is as little to be credited as the self-praising of others.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy and Profane State. Bk. v, ch. 3. (1642)

7 No person . . . shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself.

Constitution of the United States: Amendment v. (15 Dec., 1791) The legal maxim is, "Nemo tenetur se ipsum accusare" (No one is obliged to accuse himself).

SELF-BETRAYAL

8 To take refuge with an inferior is self-betrayal. (Perfugere ad inferiorem se ipsum est tradere.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 521. (c. 43 B. C.)

9 I've betrayed myself to destruction, like a rat, by my own squeaking. (Egomet meo indicio miser quasi sorex hodie perii.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 1024. (161 B. C.)

By its own noise the rat betrays itself. (Suo ipsius indicio periit sorax.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iii, No. 65. (1523) Included by TAVERNER, in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 54, with the explanation that the rat gets killed because of its gnawing.

SELF-CONFIDENCE

<sup>1</sup> Self-Confidence and Self-Conceit render men Fools.

JOHN HARTCLIFFE, A Treatise on the Moral and Intellectual Virtues, p. 405. (1691) SELF-CONCEIT, see CONCEIT.

<sup>2</sup> Self-confidence is the first requisite to great undertakings.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Lives of the Poets: Pope (1868), p. 375. (1779)

Self-confidence, or, in plainer language, impudence, was the great secret of his success.

ARCHIBALD ALLISON, History of Europe. Vol. ii, ch. 7, p. 135. (1849)

<sup>3</sup> The confidence which we have in ourselves engenders the greatest part of that we have in others. (La confiance que l'on a en soi fait naître la plus grande partie de celle que l'on a aux autres.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 624. (1665)

<sup>4</sup> Thrise happie she that is so well assured . . . Such selfe assurance need not feare the spight Of grudging foes, ne favour seek of friends.

EDMUND SPENSER, Amoretti. Sonnet lix. (1594) Flattering self-assurance.

JOHN FOSTER, Essays. Vol. iii, ch. 2. (1805)

Well bred self-assurance.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 12. (1818)

SELF-CONTROL

<sup>5</sup> The worst ruler is one who cannot rule himself. (κάκιστον δὲ ἀρχοντα εἶναι τὸν ἀρχειν ἑαυτοῦ μὴ δυνάμενον.)

CATO THE ELDER. (c. 175 B.C.) As quoted by PLATO, Moralia, 198F, 210F.

He is a fool to [seek to] command others who cannot command himself. (Stultus imperare reliquis, qui nescit sibi.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 692. (c. 43 B.C.) He who is unable to rule over himself is surely unfit to rule over others.

SALOMON IBN GABRIEL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 194. (c. 1050)

It was axed of him [Plato] what man is moost conuenable to gouerne a towne, and he ansuerd he that can wele gouerne him self.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophers, fo. 58. (1477) On fo. 61, Rivers quotes Plato again, "He that can not gouerne him self is not able to gouerne any other." And on fo. 67, he quotes Aristotle, "Not goodely ne wele may any man directe another, but if he dyrecte hym self first."

It becometh hym euil to be a mayster upon seruauantes that cannot ordre hym selfe.

JOHN STANBRIDGE, Vulgaria, p. 56. (c. 1510) How shall I be able to rule over others, that have not full power and command of myself? (Comment pourroy ie gouverner aultruy, qui moy-mesmes gouverner ne scaurois?)

RABELAIS, Gargantua. Bk. i, ch. 52. (1534) Solon sayeth, that they are only fit to governe others who can well guide them selves.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 264. (1576)

The attribution to Solon is probably based upon PAINTER, Croesus and Solon, i, 7. The Latin proverb is, "Absurdum est ut alios regat, qui seipsum regere nescit" (It is absurd that he should govern others who does not know how to govern himself).

Truly it is no small matter to govern others, when to govern ourselves presents so many difficulties. (Certes, ce n'est pas peu de chose que d'avoir à regler aultruy, puisqu'a regler nous mesmes il se presente tant de difficultez.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 42. (1580)

In vaine he seeketh others to suppress, Who hath not learnd him selfe first to subdew.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. vi, canto i, st. 41. (1590)

He that would govern others, first should be The master of himself.

MASSINGER, The Bondman. Act i, sc. 3. (1623) Be master over yourself if you would be master over others. (Sea uno primero señor de sí, y lo será despues de los otros.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 55. (1647) Cato would say, "No man is fit to command another, that cannot command himself."

PENN, No Cross, No Crown. Ch. 19. (1669) Those who can command themselves command others.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 407. (1823) Who can achieve mastery over others unless he first achieves mastery over himself?

MAUGHAM, Christmas Holiday, p. 35. (1939)

No one can expect to lead others until he has learned to boss himself.

C. E. WILSON, Six Highways to Happiness. See American Magazine, May, 1941, p. 11.

<sup>6</sup> The great thing is to be master of yourself. (Totum igitur in eo est, ut tibi imperes.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. ii, ch. xxii, sec. 53. (45 B.C.)

We should steer with the rudder of self-control. (μετὰ σωφροσύνας ὁλακί νευθούς.)

CERCIDAS, Meliambis. No. iii, l. 15. (c. A. D. 350) Mind other men, but most yourself.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 217. (1639)

<sup>7</sup> Few are those who err on the side of self-restraint.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. iv, ch. 23. (c. 500 B.C.) Giles, tr. Legge has it: "The cautious seldom err." Wade says: "It seldom happens that a man errs through excess of moderation." Jennings says: "Those who keep within restraints are seldom losers." Ku Hung-ming says: "He who wants little seldom goes wrong." A good example of the difficulty of making an adequate English rendering of the epigrammatic original.

One act of self-restraint is better than a hundred successful battles.

J. C. NEVIN, Precious Characters. See DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 390. (1872)

1 He that is Master of himself, will soon be Master of others.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2182. (1732)
He that can compose himself, is wiser than he that composes books.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.
Caesar did not merit the triumphal car more than he that conquers himself.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

2 Thou shalt rule a broader realm by subduing a greedy heart than shouldst thou join Libya to distant Gades. (Latius regnes avidum domando | spiritum, quam si Libyam remotis | Gadibus iungas.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. ii, ode 2, l. 9. (23 B. C.)
He is a valiant victor, a famous Conquerour, and a mighty prince, that can vanquish himselfe.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 65. (1578)
Thrice noble is the man who of himself is king.

PHINEAS FLETCHER, Apollyonists, iii, 10. (1627)
The whole World is little enough for so great a Man, that can conquer himself.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 126. (1709)

3 Than self-restraint there is nothing better.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).
Sec. 5. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr.

4 He is strong who conquers others, but he who conquers himself is mighty.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).
Sec. 33. (c. 550 B. C.) Old, tr. The Chinese also say, "If you can command yourself, you can command the world."

The victory over self is of all victories the first and best. (τὸ νικᾶν αὐτὸν αὐτὸν πασῶν νικῶν πρώτη τε καὶ ἀρίστη.)

PLATO, Laws. Bk. i, sec. 626E. (c. 345 B. C.)
I count him braver who overcomes his desires than him who conquers his enemies, for the hardest victory is the victory over self.

ARISTOTLE, Apothegm. (c. 340 B. C.) As quoted by STOBÆUS, Florilegium, 223.
He conquers twice who in victory conquers himself. (Bis vincit qui se vincit in victoria.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 77. (c. 43 B. C.) Quoted by BACON, Ornamenta Rationalia. No. 3. Often shortened to "Vincit qui se vincit" (He conquers who conquers himself).
If one man conquer in battle a thousand times a thousand men, and if another conquers himself, he is the greatest of conquerors.

DHAMMAPALA, Commentaries. Verse 103. (c. A. D. 475)

No man is such a conqueror as the man who has defeated himself.

HENRY WARD BEECHER, Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit, p. 24. (1887)

5 Subdue your own angry spirit, you will subdue all else! (Vince animos iramque tuam, qui cetera vincis!)

OVID, Heroides. Epis. iii, l. 85. (c. 10 B. C.)
She is mistress of herself. (δ'αυτῆς ἐστ' ἐκελύνη κυρία.)

MENANDER, The Girl Who Gets Her Hair Cut, l. 374. (c. 300 B. C.)

Mistress of herself, tho' china fall.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. ii, l. 268. (1735)

6 I am myself my own commander. (Egomet sum mihi imperator.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 853. (Act v, sc. 2.)

I AM THE CAPTAIN OF MY SOUL, see under SOUL.

7 Power belongs to the self-possessed. (L'empire est au phlégmatisque.)

ANTOINE SAINT-JUST, to Robespierre, when the latter lost his self-control and burst into a fit of rage at a meeting of the Committee of Public Safety. (1791)

"Keep cool, and you command everybody," said Saint-Just; and the wily old Talleyrand would still say, Surtout, messieurs, pas de zèle,—"Above all, gentlemen, no heat."

R. W. EMERSON, Social Aims. (1875)

8 He is most powerful who has himself in control. (Potentissimus est, qui se habet in potestate.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xc, sec. 34. (c. A. D. 64) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, iii, 12.

To master one's self is the greatest mastery. (Imperare sibi maximum imperium est.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. cxiii, sec. 31. (c. A. D. 64)

9 The Perfection of Virtue is from . . . long Art and Management. Self-Controul.

EARL OF SHAFTESBURY, Characteristics of Men and Manners, iii, 260, note. (1711)

Cautious self-control is wisdom's root.

ROBERT BURNS, A Bard's Epitaph. (c. 1785)

Self-reverence, self-knowledge, self-control, These three alone lead life to sovereign power.

TENNYSON, Ænone, l. 142. (1833)

10 Hast thou command? by him that gave it thee,

From a pure heart command thy rebel will.

SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 624. (1594)

Brave conquerors,—for so you are,
That war against your own affections.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, i, 1, 8. (1595)

Keep yourself within yourself.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, ii, 3, 75. (1606)

I pray you, school yourself.

SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iv, 2, 15. (1606)

11 Who has a harder fight than he who is striving to overcome himself? (Quis habet fortius certamen quam qui nititur vincere seipsum?)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. I, ch. 3, sec. 2. (c. 1420)

Since you cannot make yourself as you would wish yourself to be, how can you make another to please you? (Si non potes te talem facere, qualem vis, quomodo poteris alium ad tuum habere beneplacitum?)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 16, sec. 2.

SELF-DECEPTION, see under Deceit

SELF-DEFENCE

<sup>1</sup> And the Law says, if a man approaches intending to slay thee, thou mayst slay him.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 58a; Sanhedrin, fo. 72b. (c. 450)

<sup>2</sup> I learnt to read and sew, to fear God, and to take my own part.

GEORGE BORROW, Lavengro. Ch. 86. (1851)

Fear God and Take Your Own Part.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT, Heading, ch. 1, of book of the same name. (1916) See also under PREPAREDNESS.

<sup>3</sup> The sum of the Right of Nature, which is, By all means we can to defend our selves.

HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 14. (1651)

Self-defence is Nature's eldest law.

DRYDEN, Absalom and Achitophel. Pt. i, l. 458. (1681)

No man was ever yet so void of sense

As to debate the right of self-defence.

DEFOE, The True-Born Englishman, ii. (1701)
The legal phrase is "Se defendendo."

<sup>4</sup> A Vindication of the True Art of Self-Defence.

SIR WILLIAM HOPE. Title of book on fencing. (1724)

The noble art of self-defence.

RICHARD COBDEN, Speeches, p. 76. (1849) Referring satirically to boxing.

The manly art of self-defence.

W. P. FRITH, Autobiography. Vol. i, ch. 1. (1887)

SELF-DENIAL

<sup>5</sup> The more a man denies himself, so much the more will he receive from the gods. (Quanto quisque sibi plura negaverit, ad dis plura feret.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 16, l. 21. (23 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me. (εἰ τις θέλει ὀπίσω μου ἰθύνειν, ἀπαρνησάσθω ἑαυτὸν καὶ ἀράτω τὸν σταυρὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀκολουθεῖτω μοι.)

New Testament: Matthew, xvi, 24. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Si quis vult post me venire, abneget semetipsum, et tollat crucem suam, et sequatur me."

<sup>7</sup> The notion of Selfe and her opposite Self-denial.

DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman the Syrian: To the Reader. (1642)

<sup>8</sup> The great Foundation of civil Virtue is Self-denial.

RICHARD STEELE, The Spectator. No. 248. (1711)
The worst education which teaches self-denial is better than the best which teaches everything else and not that.

JOHN STERLING, Essays and Tales. (1840)

SELF-ESTEEM, see Self-Love

SELF-FORGETFULNESS

<sup>9</sup> He is a fool that wol for-yete himselfe.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde. Bk. v, l. 98. (c. 1380) The French have the same saying, "Fol est qui s'oublie."

Men often mistake themselves, seldom forget themselves.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758.

<sup>10</sup> In order that you may please you ought to be forgetful of self. (Ut placeas, debes inmemor esse tui.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. i, eleg. 14, l. 38. (c. 13 B. C.)

SELF-GOVERNMENT

<sup>11</sup> The larger the society, the more duly capable it will be of self-government.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON, The Federalist. (1788)
Self-government is the natural government of man.

HENRY CLAY, Speech, House of Representatives, 24 March, 1818.

<sup>12</sup> There are very few so foolish, that they had not rather governe themselves, than be governed by others.

THOMAS HOBBS, Leviathan. Pt. i, ch. 15. (1651)
Civilization consists in teaching men to govern themselves.

BENJAMIN TUCKER, Instead of a Book. (1893)

<sup>13</sup> When the white man governs himself, that is self-government; but when he governs himself and also governs another man, that is despotism. . . . No man is good enough to govern another man without that other's consent.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Speech, Peoria, Ill., 16 Oct., 1854. Lincoln-Douglas Debates.

I have done with this mighty argument of self-government. Go, sacred thing! Go in peace.

LINCOLN, Speech, Peoria, Ill. (1854)

<sup>14</sup> It does not seem that nature has made men for self-government. (Il ne paraît pas que la nature ait fait les hommes pour l'indépendence.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 183. (1746)

Mankind, when left to themselves, are unfit for their own government.

WASHINGTON, Letter to Lee, 31 Oct., 1786.

Only Anglo-Saxons can govern themselves.

W. A. WHITE, Editorial, Emporia (Kansas) Gazette, 20 March, 1899.

<sup>1</sup> Every people has a right to choose the sovereignty under which they shall live.

WOODROW WILSON, Address, in Washington, 27 May, 1916.

Self-determination is not a mere phrase. It is an imperative principle of action, which statesmen will henceforth ignore at their peril.

WILSON, Address, to Congress, 11 Feb., 1918.

<sup>2</sup> He that has no government of himself has no enjoyment of himself.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Moral and Religious Aphorisms. (1753) See also GOVERNMENT.

HE WHO CANNOT GOVERN HIMSELF IS UNFIT TO GOVERN OTHERS, see under SELF-CONTROL.

SELF-HELP

See also Independence

<sup>3</sup> I'll look to my own bath. (ἐμαυτῷ βαλανεύσω.)

ARISTOPHANES, Peace, l. 1103. (421 B.C.) ERASMUS, Adagia, i, x, 37, has the Latin, "Mihi ipsi balneum ministrabo." A similar proverb is "Playing for oneself" (ἐαυτῷ ψάλλειν), or, as ERASMUS puts it, Adagia, iii, v, 80, "Sibi canere" (To sing for oneself).

Every man shall bear his own burden. (Unusquisque enim onus suum portabit.)

New Testament: Galatians, vi, 5. (c. A.D. 60)

See under BURDEN.

Let every pedlar carry his own burden.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 16. (1678) The French and Germans say, "Let every man carry his own sack to mill."

Every herring must hang by his own gill.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 102. (1678)

My rule is to let everyone skin his own foxes.
T. C. HALIBURTON (SAM SLICK), Wise Saws: Introduction. (1843) "Every man must skin his own skunk" is an American variant.

Every one makes the fire under his own pot.
Let every fox take care of his own tail.

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 151. (1869)

Shoot your own crows.

FRANK GRUBER, The Hungry Dog, p. 126. (1941) There are countless variants. The Arabs say, "You must scratch your head with your own nails."

<sup>4</sup> The highest of all possessions, Self-help.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 3. (1831)

<sup>5</sup> That whych thou cannest do conueniently thy selfe commytte it not to another.

MILES COVERDALE, Matrymonye, sig. I3. (1541)

If thou canst thy selfe do it, rely not on another.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Faire. (1611)

If thou thyself canst do it, attend no other's hand or help.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

For what you can do yourself don't depend on another.

SAMUEL PALMER, Proverbs, p. 152. (1710)

In Things of moment, on thy self depend,

Nor trust too far thy Servant or thy Friend.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1749.

Never trouble another for what you can do yourself.

WILLIAM HONE, Year-Book, col. 1612. (1831) That which you can do yourself, don't expect another to do. (A lo que puedes solo, no esperes a otro.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 247.

(1856) A Spanish proverb. On p. 280, Cahier cites another, "Si quieres ser bien servido, sirvete a tú mismo" (If you wish to be well-served, serve yourself).

If you want a thing well done, do it yourself.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman's Pictures, p. 33. (1880) The Germans say, "Sich auf sich selbst verlassen" (Yourself on yourself depend).

<sup>6</sup> He dooth little, that helpeth not hym selfe.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

He helps little that helpeth not himself.

Book of Meery Riddles. Prov. 16. (1629)

Help thyself, and God will help thee.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 539. (1640) See also GOD HELPS THEM, etc.

Help yourself, and your friends will love you the better.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

Aid thyself, and thou wilt need no other aid.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 101. (1853)

<sup>7</sup> He that hath a mouth of his own, must not say to another, Blow.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 355. (1640) From the Spanish, "Quien tiene boca, no diga a otro, Sopla." Cited by Fuller and Trench.

<sup>8</sup> I did it my selfe: and selfe do, selfe have.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546) GOSSEN, Schoole of Abuse, p. 46. (1579) CHAPMAN and MARSTON, Eastward Hoe. Act v, sc. 1. (1605) RICHARDSON, Clarissa, i, 222. (1748) etc., etc.

<sup>9</sup> You swim without corks. (Nabis sine cortice.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. 4, l. 120. (35 B.C.) "To swim without corks" or "without bladders" became a proverbial expression for those who could make their own way without assistance. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, viii, 42.

One's own hand is the surest and promptest help. (La main est le plus sûr et le plus prompt secours.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. x, fab. 16. (1678)

Robinson had a servant even better than Friday: his name was Crusoe.

F. W. NIETZSCHE, Human All too Human. Ch. 2. (1878)

<sup>10</sup> Have but little to do, and do it thyself.

PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 241. (1693)

<sup>11</sup> Do not say go, but gae, i.e. go thyself.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 9. (1678)

If you'd have it done, Go: if not, Send.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1743.

To "Poor Richard's" homely old proverb attend,
"If you want matters well-managed, Go!—if not, Send."

BARHAM, The Ingoldsby Penance. (1842)

If you want a thing done, go yourself; if not, send.

MISS MULOCK, Woman's Thoughts. Ch. 2. (1858)

If you want your business done, says the proverb, go and do it; if you don't want it done, send some one else.

SAMUEL SMILES, Self-Help, p. 272. (1859)

Better to go than to send. (Shih k'ou pu ju tsü tsou.)

WILLIAM SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No.

1988. (1875) No. 2694 is, "Get up by yourself if you happen to fall."

If you want a thing well done, do it yourself.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea. Vol. iv, p. 3. (1902)

A proverb in many languages. The French say, "On n'est jamais si bien servi que par soi-même"; the Italians, "Chi vuol presto e ben, faccia da se" (Who wants a thing done quickly and well, let him do it himself), or "Chi va, vuole; chi manda, non se ne cura" (Who goes himself, wishes it; who sends some one else, does not care), or, as an English proverb has it, "Who goes, is in earnest; who sends, is indifferent." The Danes say,
"Gak med, og 'see til' ere to gode Tyende i Bodens Gaard" ("I'll go myself," and "I'll see to it," are two good servants on a coun-tryman's farm); the Portuguese say, "Manda
e descuida, não se fará cousa nenhuma; Manda e faze-o, tirar-te-ha cuidado" (Give orders and leave it, and no more will be done;
Give orders and do it, and you will be free of anxiety).

SELF-INTEREST

<sup>1</sup>
An enlightened self-interest.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. (1790) Works, v, 271.

An enlightened sense of self-interest.

UNKNOWN, Farmer's Magazine, Aug., 1801, p. 332.

<sup>2</sup>
Our English proverb is, Interest will not lie; interest will make a man do that which otherwise he would not do.

JOHN BUNYAN, Work of Jesus Christ. (1688)

'Tis a common proverb, that interest will not lie.

RICHARD KINGSTON, Apophthegmata Curiosa,
p. 80. (1709)

<sup>3</sup>
He who works for his own interests will arouse much animosity. (Fong eü lee gnee hung to in.)

CONFUCIUS, Analects. Bk. iv, ch. 12. (c. 500 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup>
'To know no distinction of men from affection; but to sacrifice all with equal readiness to his interest.

HENRY FIELDING, Jonathan Wild. Ch. 4. (1743)

Wild's maxim for attaining greatness.

<sup>5</sup>
Few Men will be better than their Interest bids them.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1527. (1732)

SELF-INTEREST

Interest blinds some People, enlightens others.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1745

<sup>6</sup>
'Tis not contrary to reason to prefer the destruction of the whole world to the scratching of my finger.

DAVID HUME, Human Nature. Ch. 1. (1739)

The least pain in our little finger gives us more concern and uneasiness, than the destruction of millions of our fellow-beings.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Works, x, 324. (a. 1825)

Man seeks his own good at the whole world's cost.

ROBERT BROWNING, Luria. Act i. (1846)

I prefer a grape for myself to two figs for you.
(J'aime mieux un raisin pour moi que deux figues pour toi.)

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, p.

93. (1853) A French proverb.

Both feet and hands bend towards the bosom.
(Chiao wan shou wan wang 'huai li wan.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1769. (1875)

<sup>7</sup>
Whom blood has joined together, self-interest jerks asunder. (Le sang les avoit joints; l'intérêt les sépare.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Veillard et Ses Enfants. Bk. iv, fab. 18. (1668)

<sup>8</sup>
The name of virtue serves self-interest just as usefully as the vices. (Le nom de la vertu sert à l'intérêt aussi utilement que les vices.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 187. (1665)

Self-interest, though made responsible for all our crimes, often deserves the credit of our good actions. (L'intérêt, que l'on accuse de tous nos crimes, mérite souvent d'être loué de nos bonnes actions.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 305.

<sup>9</sup>
Is it not by neglecting self-interest that one will be able to achieve it?

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue).

Sec. 7. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

<sup>10</sup>
As far as the stars from the earth, and as different as fire is from water, so much do self-interest and integrity differ. (Sidera terra | ut distant et flamma mari, sic utile recto.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili, viii, 487. (c. A. D. 60)

The worst poison of an honest heart, self-interest (Pessimum veri adfectus venenum, sua cuique utilitas.)

TACITUS, Histories. Bk. i, ch. 15. (c. A. D. 109)

<sup>11</sup>
To self-interest even wisdom yields. (ἀλλὰ κέρδει καὶ σοφία δέδεται.)

PINDAR, Pythian Odes. Ode iii, l. 54. (474 B. C.)

Self-interest is the motive of everything.

UNKNOWN, Niti Sastras. (c. 1250)

The world is moved by self-interest alone. (Denn nur vom Nutzen wird die Welt regiert.)

SCHILLER, Wallenstein's Tod. Act i, sc. 6, l. 37.
(1799)

<sup>12</sup>
Every man looks well after his own interests.
(Suam quisque homo rem meminit.)

PLAUTUS, Mercator, l. 1010. (c. 200 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, i, 42, and by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, who adds, "Every cock scratches towards himself." A similar Latin proverb is "Omnia appetunt bonum" (All things seek after their own good).

<sup>1</sup> Self-interest makes few fortunes. (L'intérêt fait peu de fortunes.)

VAUVENARGUES, Réflexions. No. 56. (1746)

SELF-JUDGMENT

<sup>2</sup> When someone praises you, be judge alone: Trust not men's judgment of you, but your own.

(Cum te aliquis laudat, iudex tuus esse memento:

plus aliis de te quam tu tibi credere noli.)

CATO (?), Disticha, Bk. i, No. 14. (c. 175 B. C.) When you judge yourself, don't spare yourself. (Cumque reus tibi sis, ipsum te iudice damna.)

CATO (?), Disticha, iii, 17. What you think of yourself is much more important than what others think of you. (Multo autem ad rem magis pertinet, qualis tibi videaris quam qualis aliis.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxix, sec. 11. (a. A. D. 64)

<sup>3</sup> Nemesis is self-judgment by the inward law. GLADSTONE, Juventus Mundi. Ch. 10. (1868)

<sup>4</sup> We judge ourselves by what we feel capable of doing, while others judge us by what we have already done.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Kavanagh. Ch. 1. (1849)

<sup>5</sup> They must first judge themselves, that presume to censure others.

PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 542. (1693)

SELF-KNOWLEDGE

<sup>6</sup> Many men are wise about many things, and ignorant about themselves. (Multi multa sapiunt, et seipsos nesciunt.)

St. BERNARD, Cogit. Cong. Hum. Cond. (a. 1153) O, wad some Pow'r the giftie gie us

To see ourselfs as ithers see us!

ROBERT BURNS, To a Louse. (c. 1785)

<sup>7</sup> Every man is best known to himself.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 27. (1633) Cited by Clarke, Ray, and Fuller.

The only thing a man knows is himself. The World outside he can know only by hearsay.

ALEXANDER SMITH, Dreamthorp. Ch. 9. (1863)

<sup>8</sup> Self-knowledge is an everlasting taske.

CHRISTOPHER HARVEY, Schola Cordis: Conclusion. (1647)

Self-Knowledge is that Acquaintance with ourselves, which shews us what we are and ought to be.

JOHN MASON, Self-Knowledge. Bk. i, ch. 1. (1745) If self-knowledge is the road to virtue, so is virtue still more the road to self-knowledge.

JOHANN PAUL RICHTER, Hesperus. Ch. 12. (1795)

<sup>9</sup> Who must account for himself and others, must know both.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 211. (1640) He that measures not himself is measured.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 434.

<sup>10</sup> He who knows others is clever, but he who knows himself is enlightened.

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king. Sec. 33. (c. 550 B. C.) It is splendid for the wise man to know everything, but the next best thing is not to be ignorant of himself. (μη λανθάνειν αὐτὸν αὐτόν.)

PLATO, Philibus. Sec. 19C. (c. 350 B. C.)

Ful wys is he that can him-selven knowe.

CHAUCER, The Monkes Tale, l. 149. (c. 1387)

Men who know themselves are no longer fools.

HAVELOCK ELLIS, Impressions and Comments. Ser. iii, p. 66. (1924)

<sup>11</sup> I observe myself, and so I come to know others. ('I shen kwan shen.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king. Sec. 54. (c. 550 B. C.) Who knows himself knows others. (Chih chi chi pi.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 1525. (1875) Observe all men; thyself most.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

<sup>12</sup> He who knoweth his own self, knoweth God.

MOHAMMED, Sunnah. (c. 630) Sayings, p. 94

<sup>13</sup> Live within thyself, and thou wilt discover how small a stock is there. (Tecum habita: noris quam sit tibi curta supellex.)

PERSIUS, Satires. Sat. iv, l. 52. (c. A. D. 58) The first phrase, "Tecum habita," is cited as a proverb by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vi, 87, and included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 60, with the rendering, "Dwell with thy selfe," and the comment, "That is to saye, measure thy selfe by thyne owne substaunce."

Who that knoweth hym self lytel he preyseth hym self.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Aesop. Fab. 17. (1484) He that knoweth himself best, esteemeth himself least.

UNKNOWN, The Country-mans New Commonwealth, p. 26. (1647)

As light increases, we see ourselves to be worse than we thought.

FÉNELON, Letters to Women. Let. 8. (a. 1715) No Man is the worse for knowing the Worst of himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3601. (1732) Acquaint thee with thyself, O man! so shalt thou be humble.

M. F. TUPPER, Of Self-Acquaintance. (1839)

<sup>14</sup> I know myself. (Egomet me.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 972. (c. 195 B. C.) And the other speaker retorts, "Then you claim knowledge which few persons possess."

I know myself better than any doctor can. (Sed sum quam medico notior ipse mihi.)

OVID, Ex Ponto. Bk. i, epis. 3, l. 92. (A. D. 13)

All our knowledge is ourselves to know.

POPE, An Essay on Man. Epis. iv, l. 398. (1734)
Not if I know myself at all.

CHARLES LAMB, Essays of Elia: The Old and New Schoolmaster. (1823)

<sup>1</sup> Known to others all too well, he dies to himself unknown. (Notus nimis omnibus, | ignotus moritur sibi.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 402. (c. A. D. 60)

He dies known by all, and yet unknown to himself. (Il muert connu de tous et ne se connaît pas.)

UNKNOWN, Addition à la Vie de Vauquelin des Yvetaux, p. 12. (c. 1350)

I know all save myself alone. (Je congnois tout, fors que moy mesmes.)

FRANÇOIS VILLON, Ballade des Menus Propos. (c. 1460)

He knoweth the universe, and himself he knoweth not. (Il connaît l'univers, et ne se connaît pas.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 26. (1678)

<sup>2</sup> We know what we are, but know not what we may be.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, iv, 5, 42. (1600)

<sup>3</sup> What is most difficult to man? To know oneself. (τὸ ταυτὸν γινῶναι.)

THALES, Apothegm. (c. 600 B. C.) See DIOGENES

LAERTIUS, Thales. Bk. i, sec. 36.

It is very difficult for a man to know himself. (Difficillime de se quisque sentit.)

CICERO, De Oratore. Bk. iii, sec. 9. (55 B. C.)

What thing more difficult? A man to know himself. (Qual cosa piu difficile? A cognoscer se stesso.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruits, fo. 37. (1578)

Strive to know thyself, the most difficult thing to know that can be imagined. (Procurando cono-certe a ti mismo, que es el más difícil conocimiento que puede imaginarse.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 42. (1615)

To know others is hard, but to know yourself is still harder.

KAIBARA EKKEN, Ten Kun (Ten Precepts): On Practice. (1710) Ken Hoshino, tr. "Sich selbst hat niemand ausgelernt" (No man has ever yet thoroughly mastered the knowledge of himself), is a German proverb, quoted by Goethe.

There are three Things extremely hard, Steel, a Diamond, and to know one's self.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1750

II—Know Thyself

<sup>4</sup> Know thyself. (γινῶθι σεαυτὸν.)

THALES OF MILETUS, Maxim. (c. 600 B. C.)

Thales was one of the Seven Wise Men of Greece, and this was his maxim. (For the maxims of the others see under PROVERBS.) It was inscribed in gold on the temple of Apollo at Delphi, together with that of Pittacus (μηδὲν ἄγαν, Nothing in excess), and that of Chilon (ἐγγύτην φεύγειν, Shun suretyship). It has been attributed to various others of the wise men—Ausonius attributes it to Chilon, others to Solon—but DIOGENES LAERTIUS, in his Life of Thales, sec. 40, asserts that it belongs to Thales, and this is the attribution generally accepted. It should be noted that σεαυτὸν is a contraction of σεαυτόν, and that sometimes one is used and sometimes the other. Originally the word was separated, as in Homer, who always writes σ' αὐτόν. It is cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vi, 95, with the familiar Latin, "Nosce teipsum."

The purpose of that inscription on the temple, as it seems to me, is to serve as the god's salutation to those who enter it, instead of "Hail!" (χαίρε).

PLATO, Charmides. Sec. 164D. (c. 380 B. C.)

Plato goes on to say that the dedicators of the later inscriptions supposed this to be a piece of advice, instead of a greeting, and so added "Nothing overmuch" and "Shun suretyship," as equally useful.

When Apollo says, "Know thyself," he says "Know thy soul." (Nosce te, dicit, hoc dicit: Nosce animum tuum.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 22, sec. 52. (45 B. C.) It was Plato who ascribed the saying to Apollo.

There is a saying famous over all the world, which bids each to be known by himself. (Est ubi diversum fama celebrata per orbem | littera, cognosci quae sibi quemque iubet.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 499. (c. 1 B. C.)

Two of the inscriptions at Delphi are indispensable to living: "Know thyself" and "Avoid extremes," for on these two hang all the rest.

PLUTARCH, To Apollonius, 116C. (c. A. D. 95)

See also EPICTETUS, Discourses, bk. i, ch. 18;

PLUTARCH, Lives: Demosthenes, ch. 3, sec. 2.

"Know thyself" descended from heaven. (A caelo descendit γινῶθι σεαυτὸν.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xi, l. 27. (c. A. D. 120)

I commend my "know thyself," which is still preserved on a column at Delphi. (Commendo nostrum γινῶθι σεαυτὸν, nosce te, Quod in columna iam tenetur Delphica.)

AUSONIUS, Ludus Septem Sapientum, l. 138.

(c. A. D. 370) Ausonius puts these words into the mouth of Chilon.

The words be these in latine, Nosce te ipsum, whiche is in englysshe, know thy selfe.

ELYOT, The Governour. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1531)

That wise prouerbe of Apollo, Knowe thy selfe: that is to saye, learn to know what thou art able, fitte, and apt vnto, and folowe that.

ASCHAM, Toxophilus (Arber), p. 155. (1545)

The first precept of philosophy, which is, Know thy self. (Le premier traict de philosophie, qui est, Congnois toy.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 25. (1545).

At Delphos, before the portal of Apollo's temple, this sentence, Know Thyself, was found written with a divine hand. (γινῶθι σεαυτὸν.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 49. (1548)

Follow thy business, and know thyself. (Fay ton faict, et te cognoy.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 3. (1580) Attributed to Plato, as a "grand precepte."

With all thy knowledge know thyself.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)
The heathen tell us that "know thyself" was an oracle that came down from heaven. Sure I am it is this oracle that will lead us to the God of Heaven.

WILLIAM SECKER, The Nonsuch Professor in His Meridian Splendor, ii, 186. (1660)

Know thyself may very well have been a proverb long before it was attributed to any of the seven wise men or was inscribed on the walls of the temple of Delphic Apollo.

ARCHER TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 4. (1931)

1 Learn to know thyself and adapt to thyself new ways. (γίγνωσκε σαυτόν καὶ μεθάρμοσαι τρόπους | νέους.)

AESCHYLUS, Prometheus Bound, l. 311. (c. 470 B. C.)

Know yourself—in talents and capacity, in judgment and inclination. (Comprehension de sí.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 89. (1647)
To know one's self is the first of duties. (Apprendre à se connoître est le premier des soins.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: Le Juge Arbitre. Bk. xii, fab. 27. (1694)

2 By thinking you will come to know yourself. (Nien nien tzū chien.)

JUSTUS DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 227. (1872)

Just stand aside and watch yourself go by.

STRICKLAND GILLILAN, Watch Yourself Go By. (c. 1930)

3 In many ways the saying "Know thyself" is not well said. It were more practical to say. "Know other folks." (γνώθι τοὺς ἄλλους.)

MENANDER, Thrasyleon. Frag. 240K. (c. 300 B. C.) Elsewhere (Fr. 307K) Menander says, "This 'Know Thyself' means that you should investigate your own circumstances, and what should be your line of action."

4 Self-knowledge is temperance. (σωφροσύνην, τὸ γιγνώσκειν ἑαυτόν.)

PLATO, Charmides. Sec. 164D. (c. 380 B. C.)

5 Upon nobody does the divine power seem so to enjoin the precept "Know thyself" (γνώθι σαυτόν) as upon him who purposes to censure another.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: How to Profit by One's Enemies, 89A. (c. A. D. 95)

One must, obeying the Pythian inscription, "know one's self," and then use one's self for that one thing for which Nature has fitted one.

PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Tranquillity. Sec. 472C. (c. A. D. 95)

6 Ken yerself, and your neighbours winna misken you.

ALLAN RAMSAY, Scottish Proverbs. (1737)

Know yourself and your neighbours will not mistake you.

WILLIAM DICKINSON, Cumberland Glossary, p. 184. (1899)

SELF-LOVE

7 Why should I be angry with a Man, for loving himself better than mee?

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Revenge. (1597)

It is the Nature of Extreme Selfe-lovers, as they will set an House on Fire, and it were but to roast their Egges.

BACON, Essays: Of Wisdome for a Man's Selfe. Most of all reverence thyself. (Maxime omnium teipsum reverere.)

BACON, Table of the Colours. (c. 1600) Quoted.

8 I will give anybody their choice of these two truths, which amount to the same thing: He who loves himself best is the honestest man; or, The honestest man loves himself best.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 5 Sept., 1748.

People's self-love is very apt to make them think themselves more necessary than they are.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 26 Oct., 1757

9 A lover of himself, without any rival. (Se ipse amans sine rivali.)

CICERO, Ad Quintum Fratrem. Bk. iii, epis. 8. (c. 60 B. C.) Cicero is paraphrasing the proverb, "Sui amans sine rivali."

Love yourself and your affairs without any rival (Sine rivali teque et tua solus amares.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 444. (c. 1 B. C.)

He is a faithful lover of himself Without a rival.
SIR SAMUEL Tuke, The Adventures of Five Hours. Act i. (1663)

He that falls in love with himself will have no rivals.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739.

Who loves himself need fear no rival.

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 424. (1869)

10 Many shall hate thee, yf thou loue thye selfe. (Multi te oderint, si teipsum amas.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. x, No. 26. (1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 48.

What matters it if the people hiss at thee, so thou applaud thyself? (Si populus te sibilet, at tibi plaudas?)

ERASMUS, Moriae Encomium. Sec. 34. (1511)

A Man's little better for liking himself, if no body else like him.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 309. (1732)

11 Generally we love our selves more than we hate others.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1646. (1732)

He that loves himself too much, loves an ill Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2229.

He's so full of himself, that he is quite empty

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2472. The Japanese say, "The pebble in the brook secretly thinks itself a precious stone"; the Spaniards, "Hizonos Dios, y maravillámonos nos" (God made us, and we admire ourselves).

12 Narcissus, who, so soone as hee sawe himselfe in a fountaine, fel in love with himself.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, ii, 228. (1574)

Every man is naturally a Narcissus, and each passion in us no other but self-love sweetened by milder epithets.

JOSEPH GLANVILLE, The Vanity of Dogmatising. Ch. 13. (1661)

<sup>1</sup> We love others wel, but we love our selves better.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 38. (1574) Pettie, tr.

There's lang-tocher'd Nancy maist fetters his fancy;

But the laddie's dear sel' he lo'es dearest of a'.

BURNS, There's a Youth in This City. (c. 1787)

I love my friends well, but myself better.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 411. (1855)

<sup>2</sup> The blind love of one's self. (Caecus amor sui.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. i, ode 18, l. 14. (23 B.C.)

Self-love is often rather arrogant than blind

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 155 (1750)

<sup>3</sup> Self-love is the greatest of all flatterers. (L'amour-propre est le plus grand de tous les flatteurs.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 2. (1665)

Pride would fain not owe, and self-love would fain not pay. (L'orgueil ne veut pas devoir. et l'amour-propre ne veut pas payer.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 228.

Amour-propre sees to it that he who flatters us is never our greatest flatterer. (L'amour-propre empêche bien que celui qui nous flatte ne soit jamais celui qui nous flatte le plus.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 600.

Innate ferocity is less cruel than self-love. (La férocité naturelle fait moins de cruels que l'amour-propre.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 604

<sup>4</sup> All men love themselves. (Sese omnes amant.)

PLAUTUS, Captivi, l. 477. (c. 200 B.C.)

Every living creature loves itself. (Omne animal se ipsum diligere.)

CICERO, De Finibus. Bk. v, ch. 10, sec. 27 (c. 45 B.C.)

Euery man loueth hym selfe better than he loueth an other. (Omnes sibi melius esse malunt. quam alteri.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. iii, No. 91. (1508) Taverner, tr., fo. 15.

Look at the fine rendezvous he gives me! That man never did love anyone but himself! (Voyez le beau rendezvous qu'il me donne! Cet homme là n'a jamais aimé que lui-même!)

MADAME DE MAINTENON, when Louix XIV, on his deathbed (1715), said, "Nous nous reverrons bientôt" (We shall meet again soon)

<sup>5</sup> Self-love makes more libertines than love. (L'amour-propre fait plus de libertins que l'amour.)

J. J. ROUSSEAU, Émile. Bk. iv. (1762)

<sup>6</sup> Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye.

SHAKESPEARE, Sonnets. Sonnet lxii. (1609)

Self-love is a mote in every man's eye.

JOHN WITHALS, Dictionary: Adagia. (1634)

Cited by Ray and Fuller. A variant is, "Self-love makes the eyes blind," after the German, "Eigenliebe macht die Augen trübe."

<sup>7</sup> She cannot love, . . . She is so self-endear'd.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, iii, 1, 54. (1598)

Self-love, my liege, is not so vile a sin

As self-neglecting.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, ii, 4, 74. (1599)

Self-love, which is the most inhibited sin in the canon.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, 1, 158. (1602)

I never found man that knew how to love himself.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, i, 3, 315. (1605)

<sup>8</sup> I am myself my own nearest of kin; I am dearest to myself. (Proximus sum egomet mihi.)

TERENCE, Andria, l. 635. (166 B.C.)

I to myself am dearer than a friend.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, ii, 6, 23. (1594)

<sup>9</sup> Self-love, in nature rooted fast, Attends us first, and leaves us last.

JONATHAN SWIFT, Cadenus and Vanessa. (1713)

Self-love never dies. (L'amour-propre ne meurt jamais.)

VOLTAIRE, Stances. After Pibrac. (c. 1778)

<sup>10</sup> Offended self-love never forgives. (L'amour-propre offensé ne pardonne jamais.)

JEAN DE VIZÉ, Les Aveux Difficiles. Act vii. (c. 1700)

<sup>11</sup> None loves himself too little.

BENJAMIN WHICHCOTE, Moral Aphorisms (1753)

<sup>12</sup> To love oneself is the beginning of a life-long romance.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act iii. (1895)

<sup>13</sup> Self-love is no more than the soothing of a man's self, which, done to another, is flattery

JOHN WILSON, tr., Praise of Folly. Sec. 70. (1668)

SELF-PRAISE, see Praise of Self

SELF-PRESERVATION

<sup>14</sup> Nature has endowed every species of living creature with the instinct of self-preservation. (Generi animantium omni est a natura tributum.)

CICERO, De Officiis Bk. i, ch. 4, sec. 11. (c. 45 B.C.)

<sup>15</sup> It is onely upon this reason, that selfe-preservation is of Naturall Law.

JOHN DONNE, Biathanatos, sig. AA. (a. 1614)

Self-preservation, Nature's first great law.

ANDREW MARVELL. Hodge's Vision. (1675)

Self-preservation is the first law of nature.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains (1759), ii, 27. (a. 1680) SMOLLETT, Peregrine Pickle. Ch. 57. (1751) SCOTT, The Pirate. Ch. 5. (1821) DICKENS, Oliver Twist. Ch. 10. (1838) EUGENE WALTER, The Easiest Way. Act ii. (1908)

Self-preservation is the first of laws.

DRYDEN, Spanish Friar. Act iv, sc. 2. (1681)
Self-preservation should exert itself, 'tis then indeed the first principle of nature.

CHARLES SHADWELL, Irish Hospitality. Act v, sc. 1. (1720)

Self-Preservation is Nature's first law.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4094. (1732)
That "first law of nature," Self-preservation, is—doubtless for wise purposes—imprinted pretty strongly on the mind of the male sex.

D. M. M. CRAIK, A Woman's Thoughts, p. 71. (1858)

Self-preservation is the first law of politics.

CORDELL HULL, Newspaper Interview. (1941)

Self-preservation is nature's worst law.

THEODORA DUBOIS, The Body Goes Round and Round, p. 35. (1942)

Food preservation is the first law of nature.

E. S. GARDNER, The Case of the Drowsy Mosquito, p. 58. (1943)

1
An animal's first impulse is self-preservation. (τὴν δὲ πρῶτην ὁρμὴν φασὶ τὸ ζῶον ἰσχεῖν ἐπὶ τὸ τηρεῖν ἑαυτό.)

DIODEGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, sec. 85. (c. A. D. 230) Explaining a Stoic doctrine.

2
If the punishment
Thou canst avoid, self-preservation bids.

JOHN MILTON, Samson Agonistes, l. 505. (1671)

3
Do you know the first law of human nature?
Self-propagation.

THURBER AND NUGENT, The Male Animal. Act ii. (1940)

SELF-RESPECT

4
Never esteem anything of advantage to thee that shall make thee lose thy self-respect. (τὴν αἰδῶ ἐγκαταλιπεῖν.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iii, sec. 7. (c. A. D. 174)

5
Oft times nothing profits more
Then self-esteem, grounded on just and right.
MILTON, Paradise Lost. Bk. viii, l. 572. (1667)
A Man may have a just Esteem of himself, without being proud.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 297. (1732)
The French say, "Autant vaut l'homme comme il s'estime" (A man's worth is as he esteems himself); the Italians, "Chi non se stima vien stimato" (Who does not esteem himself will gain esteem).

6
Respect gods before demi-gods, heroes before men, and first among men your parents; but respect yourself most of all. (πάντων δὲ μάλιστα ἑαυτοῦ.)

PYTHAGORAS, Golden Maxims. (c. 525 B. C.) See

DIODEGENES LAERTIUS, Pythagoras. Bk. viii, sec. 23. The Latin is, "Maxime omnium teipsum revere." "

Respect yourself and others will respect you.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B. C.) Giles, tr., p. 69. A variant is, "Respect yourself or no one else will."

Respect yourself. (γέμειπε σαυτόν.)

SUIDAS, Lexicon, iv, 29, quoting an old Greek proverb cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, ii, 10, "Decora teipsum," or "Honesta teipsum."

SELF-SACRIFICE

7
He never errs who sacrifices self.

LORD LYTTON, New Timon. Pt. iv, sec. 3. (1846)

8
It is the self-sacrificing women that sacrifice others most recklessly.

SHAW, Man and Superman. Act i. (1903)

Self-sacrifice enables us to sacrifice other people without blushing.

SHAW, Maxims for Revolutionists. (1903)

9
Self-sacrifice is a thing which should be put down by law. It is so demoralizing to the people for whom one sacrifices oneself.

OSCAR WILDE, An Ideal Husband. Act iii. (1895)

SELFISHNESS, see Self

SELLING

See also Buying and Selling

10
And ther-fore every man this tale I telle,
Winne who-so may, for al is for to selle.

CHAUCER, Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 413. (c. 1388) EVERY MAN HAS HIS PRICE, see under PRICE.

11
They may sit in the chair that have malt to sell.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 99. (1639)
Cited by RAY, p. 68; FULLER, No. 4967.

While the dust is on your feet, sell what you have bought. The meaning is that we should sell quickly (though with light gains) that we may trade for more.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 401. (1678)

12
Rate thy commodities at home, but sell them abroad.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Priser. (1611)
Fix thy rates at home, and in the market sell.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 218. (1666)

13
Weigh iust, and sel deere. (Pesa giusto, e vendi caro.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 33. (1578)

Weigh justly, and sell dearly.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 502. (1640)
Weigh right, and sell dear.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5467. (1732)

14
Make thy market while the chaffer is set to sale.

ROBERT GREENE, Works. iii. 224. (1584)

A man must sell his ware after the rates of ye market.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1670)

You must sell, as Markets go.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5969. (1732)

1 He that will sell lawne before he can folde it,
He shall repent him before he haue solde it.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 8. (1546)

BACON, Promus. No. 474. (c. 1594) After the Italian proverb, "Chi fa mercantia e no la cognosce, se trova le mane piene de mosche."

He that will sell lawne must learne to folde it

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 290. (1580)

He that buys lawn before he can fold it,

Shall repent him before he have sold it.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 112. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6443. (1732)

2 He praises his wares unduly who wants to sell them. (Laudat venalis qui volt extrudere merces.)

HORACE, Epistles, ii, ii, 11. (c. 15 B. C.)

To things of sale a seller's praise belongs.

SHAKESPEARE, Love's Labour's Lost, iv, 3, 240 (1595)

Who will sell the cow, must say the word.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 792. (1640)

Did you ever hear a fishwife cry stinking mackerel?

JOHN WILSON, The Cheats. Act iv. (1664)

Ask mine host whether he has good wine.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 73. (1666)

Ask the Seller, if his Ware be bad.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 819. (1732)

Ask the vintner if the wine be good.

DIBDIN, The Quaker. Act ii, sc. 3. (1774)

A dealer in rubbish sounds the praises of rubbish. (Scruta laudat scrutarius.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 401. (1869)

The melon-seller declares his melons sweet. (Mai kua ti shuo kua t'ien.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, 181. (1875)

That which you sell, deck with flowers.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 445.

(1938) A Japanese proverb. The Germans say, "A man trying to sell a blind horse always praises its feet."

3 It is no sin to sell dear, but a sin to give ill measure. When you sell the buyers are on their guard, but measures and weights are left to your conscience.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 189. (1721)

Never open your pack and sell no wares.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 262.

4 Your friend has been turned into silver. (Amicam tuam esse factam argenteam.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus. l. 347. (c. 195 B. C.) "To turn into silver" is to sell. A proverbial phrase.

5 Rather sell than be poor.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 400. (1678)

Better sell, than live poorly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 941. (1732)

6 The haberdasher gets the golfer's trade
By talking, not of buttons, but of Braid.

DOROTHY L. SAYERS, In the Teeth of the Evidence, p. 45. (1940) Mr. Egg quoting from The Salesman's Handbook.

Attend to details and you'll make your sale--

A little weight will often turn the scale.

DOROTHY L. SAYERS, In the Teeth of the Evidence, p. 107. Mr. Egg again.

7 Everyone lives by selling something.

R. L. STEVENSON, Beggars. (1888)

8 He told me . . . he would sell me down river.

HARRIET B. STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 3. (1852) The phrase is spoken by George Harris, but in George L. Aiken's dramatization of the book (1853), it is put in the mouth of Uncle Tom, "Ever'-body git sold down de ribber if dey don't sell me." (Act i, sc. 2.)

If you belonged to me I'd sell you down the river.

MARK TWAIN, Pudd'head Wilson, p. 22. (1893) Frequently repeated. To sell a slave "down the [Mississippi] river," was to send him to almost certain death in the cotton fields

Sold. And down the river too.

CLAYTON RAWSON, No Coffin for the Corpse, p. 89. (1942)

9 Revolvers and patent fire-arms are selling like hot cakes.

O. J. VICTOR, Southern Rebellion, i, 46. (1860)

Pleasing a good deal and selling like hot cakes.

FREDERIC, Damnation of Theron Ware, p. 94. (1896)

SENSE

10 There are times when sense may be unseasonable, as well as truth.

CONGREVE, The Double-Dealer. Act i, sc. 3. (1694)

11 Through Sense and Non-sense.

DRYDEN, Achitophel. Pt. ii, l. 415. (1681)

Preferring sense, from chin that's bare,

To nonsense throned in whiskered hair.

MATTHEW GREEN, The Spleen, l. 760. (1737)

12 Where Sense is wanting, everything is wanting.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1754

Believe me, sweet, what men call sense

Is often narrow-mindedness and pretence.

(O Beste! glaube, was man so verständig nennt, Ist oft mehr Eitelkeit und Kurzsinn.)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 12: Garten. (1806) MacIntyre, tr.

13 He is quite devoid of common sense. (Communi sensu plane caret.)

HORACE, Satires. Bk. i, sat. iii, l. 66. (35 B. C.)

"Communis sensus" does not mean exactly what is meant nowadays by "common sense."

It is rather what the French call "savoir faire,"—social sense, or propriety.

Common sense cannot be taught. (Sensus, qui non docetur.)

QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. vi, ch. 5, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 80)

Common sense (which, in truth, is very uncommon) is the best sense I know of.

LORD CHESTERFIELD, Letters, 27 Sept., 1748.

Common sense is not so common. (Le sens commun n'est pas si commun.)

VOLTAIRE, Philosophical Dictionary: Amour-Propre. (1764)

Nothing astonishes men so much as common sense and plain dealing.

EMERSON, Essays, First Series: Art. (1841)

You've no more commonsense than a gander.

SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act i. (1904)

1 He has no more sense than a stone. (Neque habet plus sapientia quam lapis.)

PLAUTUS, Miles Gloriosus, l. 236. (c. 200 B. C.)

Fool! 'tis in vain from wit to wit to roam:

Know, Sense, like Charity, "begins at home."

POPE, Umbra, l. 15. (a. 1741)

2 Good Sense, if there be such a goddess, to thy shrine I dedicate myself. (Mens Bona, si qua dea es, tua me in sacraria dono!)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. xxiv, l. 19. (c. 22 B. C.)

A bit of good sense is what makes men; the rest is all rubbish. (Corcillum est quod homines facit, cetera quisquilia omnia.)

PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 75. (c. A. D. 60)

There be some that will grant you precedence in good luck or good temper, but none in good sense. (Bien se hallará quien quiera ceder en la dicha y en el genio; pero en el ingenio ninguno.)

GRACIAN, Oráculo Manual. Maxim 7. (1647)

Between good sense and good taste there is the same difference as between cause and effect. (Entre le bon sens et le bon goût il y a la différence de la cause à son effet.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: Des Jugements. (1688)

Good Sense, which only is the gift of Heav'n, And tho' no science, fairly worth the sev'n.

POPE, Moral Essays. Epis. iv, l. 43. (1731)

Good-sense is something very distinct from knowledge.

WILLIAM MELMOTH, Letters on Several Subjects, p. 240. (1739)

Good sense is a thing all need, few have, and none think they want.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746.

I keep my place at the top of the angelic ladder of good sense. (Je retiens ma place au sommet de cette échelle de bon sens.)

ARTHUR RIMBAUD, Saison en Enfer. Ch. 2. (1873)

3 God send you mair sense and me mair siller.

JOHN RAY, Proverbs: Scottish. (1678) "Better be short of pence than short of sense" says another proverb.

4 He speaks sense.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, II, 1, 129. (1601) The modern form is usually, "Now you are talking sense."

5 It is a dangerous thing for a man to have more sense than his fellow-citizens.

C. M. WIELAND, Die Abderiten. Ch. 1. (1773)

6 Plain sense but rarely leads us far astray.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Nt. vi, l. 278. (1745)

Sense is our helmet, wit is but the plume;

The plume exposes, 'tis our helmet saves.

YOUNG, Night Thoughts. Night viii, l. 1259.

7 The new phrase—born in the West, we believe—of "horse-sense," which is applied to the intellectual ability of men who exceed others in practical wisdom.

UNKNOWN, The Nation (N.Y.), 18 Aug., 1870, p. 105.

He had what is roughly known as "horse-sense."

C. D. WARNER, Backlog Studies, p. 124. (1884)

He knew that this was horse sense.

CROFTS, Circumstantial Evidence, p. 209. (1941)

I don't think I ever knew a horse more lacking in—well, horse sense.

MICHAEL INNES, Daffodil Affair, p. 48. (1942)

SENSSES

8 They received the use of the five operations of the Lord and in the sixth place he imparted them understanding, and in the seventh speech, an interpreter of the cogitations thereof.

Apocrypha: Ecclesiasticus, xvii, 5. (c. 190 B. C.)

These are the five senses of Nature, that is to saye, To See, to Heare, to Feele, to Taste, to Smell, but looke howe, when, which, what, and where.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 74. (1578)

9 The senses have that advantage over conscience which things necessary must always have over things chosen.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler, 10 April, 1750.

10 What can give us truer knowledge than our senses? (Quid nobis certius ipsis | sensibus esse potest?)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. i, l. 699. (c. 45 B. C.)

The knowledge we have comes from our senses.

JOSEPH GLANVILL, The Vanity of Dogmatizing. Ch. 22. (1661)

From the senses come all trustworthiness, all good conscience, all evidence of truth.

NIETSCHE, Beyond Good and Evil. (1886)

11 Unless the senses are true, all reasoning is false. (Qui nisi sunt veri, ratio quoque falsa fit omnis.)

LUCRETIUS, De Rerum Natura. Bk. iv, l. 485. (c. B. C. 45) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 40

12 They know hardly any Pleasure but that of the sixth Sense.

HENRY MAUNDRELL, A Journey from Aleppo to Jerusalem, sig. T 2b. (a. 1701) Sexual intercourse.

In Germany it has of late been attempted to be shown that every man is possessed of a sixth sense.

J. M. GOOD, The Study of Medicine, iv, 23. (1829) A sensibility to external objects that are not seen, heard, touched, smelt or tasted.

<sup>1</sup> [She] was scared out of her seven Senses.

PETER MOTTEUX, tr., Rabelais. Bk. iv, ch. 13. (1694) Rabelais' phrase is "toute effrayée."

Huzzaed out of my seven senses.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 616. (1711)

You frighten me out of my seven senses.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial i. (1738)

SENTIMENTALISM

<sup>2</sup> That rosepink vapour of Sentimentalism.

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. i, bk. ii, ch. 3. (1837) In his Frederick the Great, xxi, 3, Carlyle speaks of "vaporous sentimentalisms."

Gushing sentimentalisms.

JUSTIN MCCARTHY, A History of Our Own Times. Vol. iii, ch. 41. (1880)

<sup>3</sup> Barren sentimentalists who love to refine upon sorrows without relieving them.

WILLIAM ROBERTS, Looker-on. No. 63. (1793)

They were not dreamy sentimentalists.

JOHN HENRY NEWMAN, Historical Sketches. Vol. iii, pt. iv, ch. 8. (1858)

<sup>4</sup> She [Lady Coventry] said in a very vulgar accent, if she drank any more, she should be muckibus.—"Lord!" said Lady Mary Coke, "what is that!"—"Oh! it is Irish for sentimental."

HORACE WALPOLE, Letter to George Montagu, 20 April, 1756

<sup>5</sup> A sentimentalist is a man who sees an absurd value in everything and doesn't know the market price of a single thing.

WILDE, Lady Windermere's Fan. Act ii. (1892)

The sentimentalist is one whose heart is so full there's no blood for his brain.

J. H. RHOADES, Jonathan's Apothegms. Vol. ii, No. 34. (1942)

SERIOUSNESS

<sup>6</sup> Seriousness and Merriment are near Neighbours.

THOMAS BROWN, tr., Fresny's Amusements Serious and Comical, p. 3. (1700)

Seriousness is only a small man's affectation of bigness.

BERNARD SHAW. (c. 1889) See PEARSON, G.B.S., p. 106.

<sup>7</sup> I find we are growing serious, and then we are in great danger of being dull.

CONGREVE, Old Batchelour. Act ii, sc. 2. (1693)

We are growing serious, and, let me tell you, that's the next step to being dull.

ADDISON, The Drummer. Act iv, sc. 6. (1715)

The French say, "Être sérieux comme un âne qu'on étrille" (To be as serious as an ass one curries).

<sup>8</sup> I have now taken the matter into my serious Consideration.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 222. (1710)

You take me too seriously.

FANNY BURNEY, Cecilia. Bk. iv, ch. 9. (1782)

<sup>9</sup> Rule No. Six: Don't take yourself so damn seriously.

UNKNOWN. (c. 1917) See Raleigh, N.C., News and Observer, 25 May, 1933, which states the saying originated in the Allied Maritime Transport Council.

SERMON

<sup>10</sup> The best sermon is a good life. (Bien predica quien bien vive.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 274. (1856) A Spanish proverb.

GOOD EXAMPLE THE BEST SERMON, see EXAMPLE.

<sup>11</sup> Sermons are not the only preaching which doth saue soules.

RICHARD HOOKER, Ecclesiasticall Politie Bk. v, ch. 21. (1597)

Resort to sermons, but to prayers most:

Praying's the end of preaching.

HERBERT, The Church-Porch. St. 69. (1633)

Great sermons lead the people to praise the preacher. Good preaching leads the people to praise the Saviour.

CHARLES G. FINNEY, Memoirs, p. 72. (1876)

<sup>12</sup> He that has but one word of God before him, and out of that word cannot make a sermon, can never be a preacher.

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk. Ch. 10. (1569)

A mere mustard-seed of a text grows into a many-branched discourse.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Ch. 4. (1866)

<sup>13</sup> He went up into the mountain . . . and taught them.

New Testament: Matthew, v, 7. (c. A. D. 65)

The introduction to the Sermon on the Mount.

<sup>14</sup> Salmon and sermon have their season in Lent. (Saumon comme le sermon En quaresme ont leur saison.)

GABRIEL MEURIER, Trésor des Sentences. (c. 1575) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1678)

<sup>15</sup> The sermon is one thing, the preacher another. (C'est aultre chose le presche, que le prescheur.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 10. (1580)

One must consider the sermon apart and the preacher apart. (Il faut considerer le presche à part, et le prescheur à part.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 31. See also PREACHING AND PRACTICE.

- <sup>1</sup>
A good, honest, and painful sermon.
SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 17 March, 1661.
A sermon without Augustine is as a stew without bacon.
R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs, Ch. 3. (1853) From the Spanish proverb, "No hay olla sin tocino, ni sermon sin Agostino" (No stew without bacon, no sermon without Augustine). Olla is a dish composed of various meats.
- <sup>2</sup>
Which is worse, to stay from a sermon, or sleep at a sermon?
THOMAS WATSON, A Body of Practical Divinity, p. 342. (1692)
A man must have very little to do at-church that can give an account of the sermon.
JOHN VANBRUGH, The Relapse. Act i. (1696)
- <sup>3</sup>
Once in seven years I burn all my sermons, for it is a shame if I cannot write better sermons now than I did seven years ago.
JOHN WESLEY, Journal, 1 Sept., 1778. Quoting an unnamed fellow clergyman.
- <sup>4</sup>
Quat sal i sai yow lang sermun?
UNKNOWN, Cursor Mundi, l. 13494. (a. 1300)
What sholde I langer sermoun of hit make?
CHAUCER, Legend of Good Women, l. 2025. (c. 1385)
The Belly hates a long Sermon.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4407. (1732)

SERPENT

See also Snake

- <sup>5</sup>
The snake that would be a dragon and have wings, must eat.
BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Honest Man's Fortune. Act iii, sc. 1. (1613)
A serpent, unless it has devoured a serpent, does not become a dragon. (Serpens nisi Serpentem comederit non fit Draco.)
FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of Fortune. (1612)
- <sup>6</sup>
There is no poison above the poison of a serpent.
BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxv, 15. (c. 190 B. C.) See also VENOM.
- <sup>7</sup>
If the serpent love thee, wear him as a necklace.
BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 16. (1817)
Make use even of dangerous people.
- <sup>8</sup>
Serpents engender in still waters.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4100. (1732)
- <sup>9</sup>
Now the serpent was more subtil than any beast of the field. (Sed et serpens erat callidior cunctis animantibus terrae.)
Old Testament: Genesis, iii, 1. (c. 550 B. C.)
Some flow'rets of Eden ye still inherit,
But the trail of the Serpent is over them all!
THOMAS MOORE, Lalla Rookh: Paradise and the Peri, l. 206. (1817)

- <sup>10</sup>
In the fayrest flowers and grasse, the serpent most doth lurke.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 137. (1574) Pettie, tr.
Look like the innocent flower,
But be the serpent under 't.
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, i, 5, 65. (1606)
SNAKE IN THE GRASS, see under SNAKE.
- <sup>11</sup>
Be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves. (γίνεσθε ὡν φρόνιμοι ὡς οἱ ὄφεις καὶ ἀκέραιοι ὡς αἱ περιστέραι.)
New Testament: Matthew, x, 16. (c. A. D. 65)
The Vulgate is, "Estote ergo prudentes sicut serpentes, et simplices sicut columbae." See also under WISDOM.
Now will I shew my selfe to haue more of the Serpent
Then the Doue; that is, more knaue than foole.
MARLOWE, Jew of Malta. Act ii, l. 797. (c. 1592)
Many professors . . . put more of the Serpent, then the Dove into the confection.
DANIEL ROGERS, Naaman, p. 210. (1642)
- <sup>12</sup>
He holds the serpent by the tail.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1813) See also under BEAR.
- <sup>13</sup>
The hole of a serpent a serpent knows. (Shē tsan ti tung shē hsiao tē.)
SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, 2035. (1875)
- <sup>14</sup>
Where's my serpent of old Nile?
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, i, 5, 25. (1606)
Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus there,
That kills and pains not?
SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, v, 2, 243

SERVANT

- <sup>15</sup>
A blow for a slave, rebuke for a maid, and for all thy servants discipline.
AHIKAR, Teachings. Col. vi, l. 83. (c. 550 B. C.)
Fodder, and a stick, and burdens for an ass; bread, and discipline, and work for a servant.
BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxiii, 24. (c. 190 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.
- <sup>16</sup>
We are served worse by many servants than by a few. (ἐν ταῖς οἰκετικαῖς διακοναῖς οἱ πολλοὶ θεράποντες ἐνόητε χεῖρον ὑπηρετοῦσι τῶν ἐλαττόνων.)
ARISTOTLE, Politics. Bk. ii, sec. 1261b. (c. 330 B. C.)
I'm never better treated than when I'm without a man. Faith, Old Plautus was in the right when he said, The more servants, the more crosses. (Le nombre de nos croix estre selon le nombre de nos valets.)
RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. v, ch. 17. (1552)
The Italian proverb is, "Chi vuol esser mal servito, tenga assai famiglia" (Who wishes to be ill-served, let him keep plenty of servants.)

1 Love that servante as thy childe that soone is ashamed. (Se tu as ung serviteur humble et pasible et honteux de son meffait tu le dois aimer et tenir chier comme ton filz.)

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regisme de Mesnaige. (c. 1130)

Put from thee a proude servante, as him that sholde be thine enmye. (Se tu as ung servant de fier courage qui se donne louenge en ses fais tu le dois fuir et chasser hors de ta maison comme ton ennemy mortel.)

SAINT BERNARD, Le Regisme de Mesnaige.

Don't take a servant off a midden [dung-heap]

BRIDGE, Cheshire Proverbs, p. 51. (1917)

2 How sad a road it is to go up and down another's stairs. (E com' è duro calle | lo scendere e il salir per l' altrui scale.)

DANTE, Paradiso. Canto xvii, l. 59. (c. 1300)

How salt another's bread is, and how toilsome The going up and down another's stairs.

SAMUEL ROGERS, Italy. (1822)

3 No silver, no servant.

THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 179 (1633)

No Silver, no Service.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3629. (1732)

4 Th' more ye ought to be a servant y'rsilf th' more difficult 'tis f'r ye to get along with servants.

F. P. DUNNE, The Servant Problem (1901)

5 A Servant and a Cock should be kept but a Year.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 389. (1732)

He that would be well served must know when to change his servants.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 396. (1855)

6 A Servant never yet miscarried thro' Excess of Respect.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 391. (1732)

Grandfather's servants are never good.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1745.

If you pay not a Servant his Wages, he will pay himself.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2778.

Many humble servants, but not one true Friend.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3350.

Servants should put on Patience, when they put on a Livery.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4101.

7 When a Lackey comes to hell's door, the Devils lock the gates.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 982. (1640)

A pampered menial drove me from the door.

THOMAS MOSS, The Beggar's Petition. (c. 1761)

"Pampered menial" is Oliver Goldsmith's.

He substituted it for Moss's more commonplace "liveried servant," when Moss submitted the poem to him before publication.

A great man's overfed great man, what the Scotch call Flunkey.

CARLYLE, Essays: Samuel Johnson. (c. 1850)

8 Choose none for thy servant who have served thy betters.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1012. (1640)

A proverb bids us beware of taking for servant one who has waited on our betters.

EDWARD FITZGERALD, Polonius, p. 76. (1852)

9 A kinsman, a friend, or whom you entreat, take not to serve you, if you will be served neatly.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 795. (1640)

If you would have a good servant, take neither a kinsman nor a friend.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 422. (1855)

Never intreat a servant to dwell with thee.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738

10 Bad is a bad servant, but worse being without him.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 3. (1659)

11 Every great house is full of saucy servants. (Maxima quaeque domus servis est plena superbis.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. v, l. 66. (c. A. D. 120)

Of surly servantes, every court is full.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk iii, p. 101. (1574) Pettie, tr.

12 The tongue of a bad servant is his worst part. (Lingua mali pars pessima servi.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ix, l. 121. (c. A. D. 120)

According to the saying of the Poet: Of sory servantes, the worst part is the tongue.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation Bk iii, p. 101. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Servants should see all and say nothing.

TOBIAS SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker. (1771) Works (1817), vi, 3.

Like good servants, let us hear and see, and say nothing.

WALTER SCOTT, Ivanhoe. Ch. 2. (1819) The Abbot. Ch. 6. (1820)

13 Is thy servant a dog, that he should do this great thing? (Quid enim sum servus tuus canis, ut faciam rem istam magnam?)

Old Testament: II Kings, viii, 13. (c. 700 B. C.)

14 Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace. (ὅτι ἀπολύεις τὸν δούλόν σου, δεσποτα.)

New Testament: Luke, ii, 29. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Nunc dimittis servum tuum, Domine."

We are unprofitable servants. (δοῦλοι ἀχρεῖοι ἐσμεν.)

New Testament: Luke, xvii, 10. (c. A. D. 65) The Vulgate is, "Servi inutiles sumus."

15 Whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant. (ὅς ἂν θέλῃ ἐν ὑμῖν εἶναι πρῶτος ἔσται ὑμῶν δούλος.)

New Testament: Matthew, xx, 27. (c. A. D. 65)

Also Mark x, 44. The Vulgate is, "Qui voluerit inter vos primus esse, erit vester servus."

He that is greatest among you shall be your servant. (ὁ δὲ μέγας ὑμῶν ἔσται ὑμῶν διάκονος.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxiii, 11. The Vulgate is, "Qui maior est vestrum, erit minister vester."

1
It is not becoming for a servant to be arrogant. (Non decet superbum esse hominem servom.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 470. (c. 200 B.C.)

A servant had better know too much than say too much. (Plus scire satiust quam loqui servom hominem.)

PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 60. (c. 200 B.C.)

2
The servant of a King is a king.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 402. (1678)

Great folks' servants are aye mair saucy than themselves.

WALTER SCOTT, The Heart of Midlothian. Ch. 27. (1818) The Germans say, "Grosser Herren Leute lassen sich was bedünken" (Great men's servants think themselves great).

You gentlemen's gentlemen are so hasty.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act ii, sc. 2. (1775) Referring to a valet.

In the servants' hall three gentlemen's gentlemen stood or sat round the fire.

CHARLOTTE BRONTË, Jane Eyre. Ch. 17. (1847)

3
If you distrust a man don't employ him; if you employ him don't distrust him.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, 440. (1875)

4
As many enemies as you have servants. (Totidem hostes esse quot servos.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium Epis. xlvii, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 64)

As many servants as we have, that many enemies we have. (Quot servos habemus, totidem habemus hostes.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. iii, No. 31. (1508) This is the full form of the proverb, often condensed to "Quot servi, tot hostes," as it was by Cato.

According to the saying, we have so many enemies as we have servants.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 101. (1574) Pettie, tr. On p. 104 Guazzo adds, "The authour of that saying ment perchance thereby to accuse the mayster and not the servantes."

So many servants, so many enemies. (Autant des valets, autant d'ennemis.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 8. (1580) The Spanish form is, "Quien ha criados, ha enemigos no escusados" (He who has servants, has unavoidable enemies).

5
Servants be not so diligent as they were wont to be.

JANE STONER, Letter to her husband. (c. 1470)

The old proverb, there is a difference in servants.

NATHAN BAILEY, tr., Erasmus' Colloquies, p. 507. (1725)

A proverb on the laziness and lodgings of the servants: The worse their sty, the longer they lie.

SWIFT, The Blunders of Quilca. (a. 1745)

The sooty yoke of kitchen-vassalage.

TENNYSON, Gareth and Lynette, l. 469. (1872)

6
A young serving-man, an old beggar.

UNKNOWN, Servingsmans Comfort. (1598) In HAZLITT, Inedited Tracts, p. 117.

II—The Good Servant

7
A good servant should never be in the way and never out of the way.

CHARLES II OF ENGLAND, referring to Sidney Godolphin. (c. 1678) See MACAULAY, History of England, i, 265; LEAN, Collectanea, iii, 389. [She] was a good servant (never in and never out of the way).

LOCKER-LAMPSON, My Confidences, p. 403. (1896)

8
He should be faithful, ugly, and fierce. (Ut sit fidelis, ut sit deformis, ut sit ferox.)

ERASMUS, Convivium Poeticum. (c. 1520) Giving the three qualifications of a good servant. The face of a pig, the ears of an ass, the feet of a stag, a padlock on his mouth, and a sword at his side.

CHRISTOPHER JOHNSON, The Trusty Servant. (c. 1560)

It is required in a good servant, to haue the backe of ann Asse, to beare all things patiently; the tongue of a sheepe, to keepe silence gently; and the snout of a swyne, to feed on all things heartily.

LEONARD WRIGHT, Display of Dutie, p. 37. (1589)

9
A servant that is diligent, honest, and good Must sing at his worke like a bird in the wood.

ROBERT GREENE, Works (Grosart), vii, 311. (1590) Referred to as "an olde Englishe disticke."

It is an old prouerbe. They proue seruants kind and good,

That sing at their businesse like birds in the wood. THOMAS DELONEY, The Gentle Craft. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1597)

10
Let the servaunte also conforme all his thoughtes and doinges to the will and pleasure of his Mayster, and to tye the Asse (as they say) where his maister will have him tyed.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 110. (1574) Pettie, tr.

A good servant hears, but doesn't hear. He is nothing but eyes and feet.

J. C. F. SCHILLER, The Piccolomini, ii. (1799)

11
He [a footman] will come when you call him, go when you bid him, and shut the door after him.

JAMES HOWELL, Familiar Letters. Bk. i, sec. 5. No. 13. (1645)

A good servant must always come when he's called, do what he's bid, and shut the door after him.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

Come when you're called, Do what you're bid,
Close the door after you, Never be chid.

MARIA EDGEWORTH, Early Lessons. (1801)

1 Well done, thou good and faithful servant:
thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things. (εὖ. δοῦλε ἀγαθὲ καὶ πιστῷ.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 21. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Euge serve bone, et fidelis."
A faithful and good servant is a real godsend, but truly 'tis a rare bird in the land.

LUTHER, Table Talk. Sec. clvi. (a. 1546) Paraphrasing JUVENAL, vi, 165, "Rara avis," etc.
See under SWAN.

It is a great gift of God to have a good servant.
HUGH LATIMER, Sermons on the Lord's Prayer.
No. 6. (1552)

2 Every good servant does not all commands:
No bond but to do just ones.

SHAKESPEARE, Cymbeline, v, 1, 6. (1609)

3 A good servaunte hopes for to be well re-wardyde.

UNKNOWN, Philip and Mary. (c. 1555) In

WRIGHT, Political Songs of England, p. 173.
Good service of itself demands reward.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Servir. (1611)

A good Servant must have good Wages.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 176. (1732)

III—Maidservants

4 A wife's complaints against the slaves mistrust:

Her husband's favorite wakens her disgust.
(Nil temere uxori de servis crede querenti:
semper enim mulier quem coniunx diligit odit.)

CATO, Disticha. Bk. i, No. 8. (c. 175 B. C.)

5 Look out a servant girl with no children, for a servant with a child to nurse is troublesome.
(θῆρά τ' ἄκοιρον ποιεῖσθαι καὶ ἀρετὸν ἐπιθῶν.)

HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 602. (c. 800 B. C.)

6 The more maidservants the more lewdness.

RABBI HILLEL, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, ii, 8. (c.
50 B. C.) Oesterley, tr.

7 Blush not to win over handmaidens. (Nec pudor ancillas . . . demeruisse.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 251. (c. 1 B. C.)

THACKERAY, Fitz-Boodles' Confessions, quotes a paraphrase of this as from "a notorious poet," "Nec sit ancillae amor pudori" (Neither let the love of a servant-maid be regarded as a disgrace).

Nor let too pretty a maid-servant wait upon you
(Nec nimium vobis formosa ancilla ministret.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. iii, l. 665. (c. 1 B. C.)

Let thy maidservant be faithful, strong and homely.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1736

Fair maids and lovely concubines endanger family happiness.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 382.

(1875) Another one (No. 409) says, "Do not employ handsome servants" (Nu pu wu yung chun hsiu). And again (No. 410),
"Where no handsome servant is kept, the master must be virtuous" (T'ang chung wu chün pu, pi shih 'hao jên chia).

IV—Servant and Master

8 If you would have good servants, see that you be good masters.

RICHARD BAXTER, Works, iv, 290. (a. 1691)

Good masters make good servants.

A. T. QUILLER-COUCH, Troy Town. Ch. 19.

(1888) SOMERSET MAUGHAM, The Mixture as Before, p. 73. (1940)

9 The truest report comes from a man's servants. (Verior fama e domesticis emanat.)

CICERO, De Petitione Consulatus. Sec. 6. (c. 56
B. C.) Quoted in this form by Bacon.

The highest panegyric that private virtue can receive is the praise of servants.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, The Rambler. No. 68. (1750)

10 One must be a servant before that he can be a master.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 18. (1633)

He can ill be master that never was scholar.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 284. (1639)

He that is a master must serve [another].

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 989. (1640)

Every one is a master and servant.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1024. (1640)

See also COMMAND AND OBEDIENCE.

11 He who rides in the chair is a man; he who carries the chair is also a man.

HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 269. (1937)

12 Let no man who can be his own master be the servant of another. (Alterius non sit, qui suus esse potest.)

HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 18. (1869)

13 A master of straw eats a servant of steel.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1027. (1640)

The eye-servant is never good for his master.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 10. (1659)

14 A servant is known in the absence of his master.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 12. (1659)

A Servant is known by his Master's Absence.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 390. (1732)

15 An ill servant will never be a good master.

GEORGE MERITON, The Praise of Yorkshire Ale,
83. (1683)

Servants make the worst masters.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 93. (1904)

16 Few men have been admired by their servants.
(Peu d'hommes ont esté admiré par leurs domestiques.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1595) See also HERO AND VALET.

<sup>1</sup> Take care that you do not let your servant excel you in doing right. (Cave sis te superare servom siris faciundo bene.)

PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 402. (c. 190 B. C.)
What his servants wish him to be, that's what the master is. (Ut servi volunt esse erum, ita solet.)

PLAUTUS, Mostellaria, l. 872. (c. 220 B. C.)

<sup>2</sup> The master is servant when he fears those he rules. (Famulatur dominus ubi timet quibus imperat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 224. (c. 43 B. C.)
A master who fears his slaves is lower than a slave. (Minus est quam servus dominus qui servos timet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 363.

<sup>3</sup> Servants talk about their master behind his back when they may not talk in his presence. (Isti domino loquantur, quibus coram domino loqui non licet.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. 47, sec. 4. (c. A. D. 64)

<sup>4</sup> There never was a better servant, nor a worse master. (Nec servum meliorem ullum, nec deteriorem dominum fuisse.)

SUETONIUS, Caligula. Ch. 10, sec. 2. (120 A. D.)

<sup>5</sup> If the master say the crow is white, the servant must not say 'tis black.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 10. (1672)

<sup>6</sup> An easy master makes a lazy servant. (Mitis praelatus facit ignavos famulatus.)

WRIGHT, Political Songs, p. 165. (c. 1290)

A sleepy master makes his servant a Lout.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 768. (1640) The Spaniards say, "Al amo imprudente, el mozo negligente" (The master imprudent, the servant negligent).

An ill master makes an ill servant.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 258. (1666)

Servants will not be diligent, where the Master's negligent.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4102. (1732)
Master easy, servant slack.

HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs, No. 48. (1937)

LIKE MASTER LIKE SERVANT, see under MASTER.

<sup>7</sup> To erly mayster, the sonner knave.

UNKNOWN, Proverbs of Wysdom, l. 33. (c. 1450)
Early maister, lang knave.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 30. (c. 1595)
Early master, soon knave. When a youth is too soon his own master, he will squander his patrimony, and sq must turn servant.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 95. (1721)

SERVICE

<sup>8</sup> Neither beg of him who has been a beggar, nor serve him who has been a servant.

H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 458. (1855) A Spanish proverb. Another cited by Bohn, p. 483, is, "Serve a great man, and you will know what sorrow is."

<sup>9</sup> Ne seruyse lyke to the kyng souerayn.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Chartier's Curial [E.E.T.S.], p. 19. (1484)

No fissing to ye Sea, nor service to a King.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 142. (c. 1580)

No service to the King, nor no fishing to the sea.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Courtier and Countryman. (1618) In Works (Grosart), ii, 10.

No service to the King's.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 98. (1639)

HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 14. (1659)

<sup>10</sup> For good service a bad return. (A buen servicio mal galardón.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 66. (1615)

<sup>11</sup> He that serves a commualtie is controlled by every one, rewarded by none.

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Abbayer. (1611)

He that serves every Body, is paid by no Body.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2295. (1732)

The Italians say, "Chi serve al commune, serve nessuno."

<sup>12</sup> If you'd have a servant that you like, serve yourself.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1737.

If you would be well served, serve yourself.

J. E. AUSTEN-LEIGH, Jane Austen, p. 35. (1869)

Quoted as "a homely proverb."

<sup>13</sup> All service is ill bestowed, which is not well accepted.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii. p. 110. (1574) Pettie, tr.

Lette him perswade with himselfe eyther (as the proverbe is) To serve like a hinde, or runne away like a hart.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 111.

Doe you not know the common Proverbe, who-soever serves well and holdeth his peace, doth demande enough.

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iv, p. 194

<sup>14</sup> He that serves well, need not ask his wages.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 799. (1640)

He that serves well need not be afraid to ask his wages.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1670)

<sup>15</sup> Good service is a great enchantment.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 293 (1640) The French say, "Beau service fait amis" (Good service makes friends).

He that will be served, must be patient.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 356.

He that serves, must serve.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 787.

Service without reward is punishment.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1013.

<sup>16</sup> Seruyse, I wot well, is non heritage.

THOMAS HOCCEVE, De Regimine Principum, l. 840. (1412)

Worldly seruyce is no sure heritage.

ALEXANDER BARCLAY, The Skyp of Folys, i, 106. (1509)

Service is no heritage.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, I Edward IV. (1600)
SHAKESPEARE, All's Well, i, 3, 25. (1602)

Service is no inheritance.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, Whimsies (1859), p. 98.
(1631) Cited by Herbert and Kelly, and frequently quoted.

She was but a servant, and knowed that servitude was no inheritance.

DICKENS, Barnaby Rudge. Ch. 80. (1841) The French say, "Service de seigneur n'est pas héritage"; the Italians, "Servizio de' grandi non è eredità." These proverbs are supposed to refer to the old manorial right of claiming service before the successor to property was admitted to his inheritance.

1
I do service that I may have a horse to ride and be fed by a prince. (Equus ut me portet, alat rex, | officium facio.)

HORACE, Epistles, i, xvii, 20. (20 B. C.)

A king feeds me and a horse carries me. (Ἰππος μὲ φέρει, βασιλεὺς μὲ τρέφει.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. vii, No. 20. Citing a Greek proverb, of which he gives the Latin, "Equus me portat, alit rex."

2
His you are whom you serve.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 99. (1902) The Spaniards say, "Quien sirve no est libre" (He who serves is not free).

3
Proffered ware stinks. (Merx ultronea putet.)

ST. JEROME (HIERONYMUS), Apothegm. (c. A D 400) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ix, 53.

Ful sooth it is, that swich proferd servyse Stinketh. as witnessen thise olde wyse.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l. 513. (c. 1389)

Proferd seruyce stynkth.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 4. (1546)

She offers up herself; now may the proverb Of proffer'd service light upon her.

RICHARD BROME, The New Academy. Act ii. (1658)

Proffer'd service (and so ware) stinks.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 134. (1670)

When I go to market to sell, my commodity stinks; but when I want to buy the commonest thing, . . . it can't be had for love or money.

SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, 26 Apr., 1771

It is vulgarly said that proffered service is of an evil savour.

SIR WALTER SCOTT, Familiar Letters, i, 139 (1809)

4
They also serve who only stand and waite.

JOHN MILTON, On His Blindness. (c. 1650)

Small service is true service while it lasts.

WORDSWORTH, To a Child. (1834)

5
My policy has been fair give and take—services for cash. (Par pari datum hostimentumst, opera pro pecunia.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 172. (c. 200 B. C.)

Service is a return for money. (Hostimentum est opera pro pecunia.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, iv, 14. (1508)

6
How wretched to serve when trained to rule! (Heu quam miserum est discere servire ubi sis doctus dominari!)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 250. (c. 43 B. C.) He serves honorably who yields to circumstances. (Honeste servit qui succumbit temporis.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 256.

He who waits to be asked lessens his service. (Qui expectat ut rogetur officium levat.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 591.

How sorry the service that has no success! (Quam miserum officium est quod successum non habet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 569.

He who serves skillfully holds part of the command. (Qui docte servit partem dominatus tenet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 596.

7
To prop the head and help the feet. (Ch ou t ou fu chiao.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 407. (1875) To serve in a very attentive manner.

8
It did me yeoman's service.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 36. (1600)

9
The science of business is the science of service and he profits most who serves best.

ARTHUR F. SHELDON, The Science of Business.

(1915) Adopted as the motto of International Rotary

10
This is man's highest end,
To others' service all his powers to bend.

(ἄνδρα δ' ὠφελεῖν ἀφ' ὧν ἔχει τε καὶ δύναται, κάλλιστος πόνων.)

SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 314. (c. 409 B. C.) Storr, tr.

11
God curse Moawiyah. If I had served God as well as I have served him, He would never have damned me to all eternity.

SWAMWRA, to the Governor of Basra, when deposed by the Caliph in 675. See OCKLEY, History of Saracens. Hegira 54, A. D. 673.

Had I but written as many odes in praise of Muhammad as I have composed for King Mahmud, they would have showered a hundred blessings on me.

ABUL KASIM MANSUR FIRDAUSI, Shah Namah (c. 1000)

Had I but served God as diligently as I have served my king, he would not have given me over in my grey hairs.

CARDINAL WOLSEY, to Sir William Kingston, Constable of the Tower, at Leicester Abbey, 5 Nov., 1530. Wolsey, accused of high treason, was being conducted to London, but was overtaken by illness on the road, stopped at Leicester, and died there. See HUME, History of England. Ch. 30.

Had I but served my God with half the zeal I served my king, he would not in mine age Have left me naked to mine enemies.

SHAKESPEARE, Henry VIII, iii, 2, 455. (1612)

12
We are well set if we be but as well served.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. ii. (1738)

SERVILITY

- <sup>1</sup> Tail wagging. (κέρκω σαλῶν.)
ARISTOPIANES, The Knights, l. 1031. (424 B.C.)
ATHENAEUS (sec. 256D) had another word for the servile: "Stepladders" (κλιμακίδες).
Servility with supple knees
Whose trade it is to smile, to crouch, to please.
WILLIAM COWPER, Table-Talk, l. 127. (1781)
- <sup>2</sup> Cringing is a gainful Accomplishment.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1206. (1732)
- <sup>3</sup> More servile than apes. (κολακικώτεροι δὲ τῶν πίθηκων.)
LUCIAN, Piscator. Sec. 34. (c. A. D. 180)
- <sup>4</sup> Everything servilely for the sake of power.
(Omnia serviliter pro dominatione.)
TACITUS, Histories. Bk. i, sec. 36. (c. A. D. 109)
- <sup>5</sup> A king shall kneele and kisse his shoe.
UNKNOWN, The Plowman's Tale. St. 52. (c.
1395) In Political Poems (Rolls), i, 317.
The king's a bawcock. . . . I kiss his dirty shoe.
SHAKESPEARE, Henry V, iv, 1, 47. (1599)
A bow of sleek devotion; . . . each motion
Seemed a Lord's shoe to kiss.
SHELLEY, Peter Bell the Third. Pt. vii, st. 7.
(1819) BOOTLICKER, see under BOOT.

SESAME

- <sup>6</sup> Honey-balls of phrases, every word and act besprinkled with poppy-seed and sesame.
(Mellitos verborum globulos, et omnia dicta factaque quasi papavere et sesamo sparsa.)
PETRONIUS, Satyricon. Sec. 2. (c. A. D. 60) Sesame is a widely-cultivated East Indian plant, from whose seeds oil is expressed. The word is directly from the Greek, σισάμη.
Their captain . . . pronounced these words distinctly: "Sesame" (which is a sort of corn),
"Open." . . . Then Ali Baba heard him bid the door shut, by pronouncing these words—"Shut, Sesame." . . . Ali Baba . . . perceiving the door, said—"Open, Sesame."
UNKNOWN, The Arabian Nights Entertainments: Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves. (c.
1375) Lane, tr. Burton, who starts the tale at the 625th night, uses "Open, O Simsim!" for the invocation, and adds a note stating that the word indicates the "grain Sesamum
Orientalis, hence the French Sesame, œuvre toil"
Your notoriety becomes a talisman—an "Open
Sesame" before which everything gives way.
SCOTT, Letter to Lord Dalkeith, 11 Feb., 1806.
No Tory, however wise, . . . could have obtained the sesame to those apartments.
LORD LYTTON, Godolphin. Ch. 22. (1831)
You will find gold . . . an open sesame throughout the Russian empire.
BURNABY, A Ride to Khiva. Ch. 2. (1876)
"Open, open, green hill!"—you needed no more recondite sesame than that.
KENNETH GRAHAME, Pagan Papers, p.89. (1894)

SEX

- <sup>7</sup> "What," said Miss Marple, "is S.A.?" "Sex Appeal," said Jane. "Ah! yes," said Miss Marple. "What in my day they used to call 'having the come hither in your eye.'"
AGATHA CHRISTIE, The Tuesday Club Murders
Ch. 11. (1933) See also IT.
Fairly dripping with sex attraction.
J. J. CONNINGTON, No Past Is Dead, p.12. (1942)
- <sup>8</sup> Sex is the salt of life.
JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 72. (1920)
- <sup>9</sup> This world consists of men, women and Herveys.
LADY MARY WORTLEY MONTAGU, Letters. Vol.
i, p. 67. Referring to John Hervey, ridiculed by Pope in The Dunciad as "Lord Fanny."
As the French say, there are three sexes,—men, women, and clergymen.
SYDNEY SMITH. (c. 1855) See LADY HOLLAND.
Memoir, vol. i, Ch. 9, p. 262.
- <sup>10</sup> The frayle feminyne sex.
SIR THOMAS MORE, Confutacyon of Tyndale,
ii, 152. (1532)
- The gentle sex
PHILIP STUBBES, The Anatomie of Abuses, E, vii, 6. (1583)
- Strong men are slaine by the weaker sex.
SAMUEL PURCHAS, Pilgrimage, p. 38. (1613)
- The weaker sex, to piety more prone.
WILLIAM ALEXANDER, Doomsday: Fifth Hour.
St. 55. (1614) WEAKER VESSEL, see WIFE.
- The devout sex.
JOHN EVELYN, Diary, 12 Nov., 1644.
- The softer sex.
JOSEPH BEAUMONT, Psyche, xiv, 1. (1648)
- Persons of the fairer sex.
ROBERT BOYLE, Occasional Reflections, v, ix,
176. (1665)
- <sup>11</sup> His book would be . . . nothing but a farrago of . . . the nonsense of the old women (of both sexes) throughout the kingdom.
LAURENCE STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. v, ch
16. (1760)
In company with several other old ladies of both sexes.
CHARLES DICKENS, Little Dorrit. Pt. i, ch. 17.
(1857)

SHADOW

- <sup>12</sup> The shadow for the substance. (σκιὰ ἀπὸ τοῦ σώματος.)
AESOP, Fables: The Dog and His Shadow. (c.
570 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ii,
98, with the Latin, "Umbra pro corpore."
This is the fable of the dog who was carrying a bone in his mouth when he happened to see his reflection in the water as he crossed a brook, and in grabbing for the shadow lost the substance. See also under BIRD: A BIRD
IN HAND.

I am not so infatuate as to grasp
The shadow when I hold the substance fast.
(οὐπω τοσοῦτον ἠπατημένος κυρῶ ὥστ' ἄλλα χρήζειν ἢ τὰ σὺν κέρδει καλὰ.)
SOPHOCLES, Oedipus the King, l. 594. (c. 409 B. C.)
In arguing of the shadow, we forgoe the substance.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 52. (1579)
He takes false shadows for true substances.
SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iii, 2.80. (1593)
One sees chasing after shadows more fools than one can count. (On voit courir après l'ombre Tant de fous qu'on n'en sait pas.)
LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. vi, fab. 17. (1668) A rendering of Aesop's fable.
[He] was determined to seize the substance as well as catch at the shadow.
BENJAMIN H. MALKIN, tr., Gül Blas. Bk. xi, ch. 6. (1809)
Catch not at the shadow and lose the substance.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 335. (1855)
1
If you should measure your own shadow, you would find it no greater than before your victory. (εἰ μετρήσεις τὴν σαντοῦ σκιά, οὐκ ἂν εὖροις αὐτὴν μείζονα γεγεννημένην ἢ πρὶν νικᾶν.)
ARCHIDAMUS III, KING OF SPARTA, Letter to Philip of Macedon, when the latter wrote him a haughty letter after the battle of Chaeroneia. (338 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia: Sayings of Spartans. Sec. 218F.
Think not thy own shadow longer than that of others.
SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. i, sec. 14. (1682)
2
The shadow moves as the sun directs.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 376. (1938)
A Chinese proverb.
Shadows are not the sun's fault.
Meditations in Wall Street, p. 137. (1940)
3
Our days on the earth are as a shadow. (Dies nostri quasi umbra super terram.)
Old Testament: I Chronicles, xxix, 15. (c. 300 B. C.) Also Job viii, 9. See also LIFE: ITS BREVITY.
All those things are passed away like a shadow. (Transierunt omnia illa tamquam umbra.)
Apocrypha: Wisdom of Solomon, v, 9. (c. 100 B. C.)
Alle ben yiftes of fortune,
That passen as a shadwe upon a wal.
CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 70. (c. 1388)
Repeated in The Persones Tale, sec. 101, and The Shipman's Tale, l. 8.
Come like shadows, so depart!
SHAKESPEARE, Macbeth, iv, 1, 111. (1606)
4
Fame calls up calumny and spite.
Thus shadow owes its birth to light.
JOHN GAY, Fables. Ser. i, fab. 28, l. 10. (1727)
Where there is the most light the shadows are heaviest.
GOETHE, Goetz von Berlichingen. Act i. (1771)
Every light has its shadow.
H. G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 349. (1855) See also under LIGHT.

6
It is in vaine to goe about to make the shadowe straite, if the bodie whiche giveth the shadowe bee crooked.
STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 231. (1574) Pettie, tr.
If the staff be crooked, the shadow cannot be straight.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 585. (1640)
A crooked Stick will have a crooked Shadow.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 61. (1732)
6
I marked huge Orion driving together over the field of asphodel wild beasts which himself had slain on the lonely hills.
HOMER, The Odyssey. Bk. xi, l. 572. (c. 850 B. C.) Freely rendered, "A hunter of shadows, himself a shade."
A shadow of a shade. (εἰδωλον σκιάς.)
AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 839. (458 B. C.)
What shadows we are, and what shadows we pursue.
EDMUND BURKE, Speech, Bristol, Sept., 1780
By midnight moons, o'er moistening dew,
In habit for the chase arrayed,
The hunter still the deer pursues,
The hunter and the deer—a shade!
PHILIP FRENEAU, The Indian Burying-Ground. (1787)
Now o'er the hills in chase he flits,
The hunter and the deer a shade!
THOMAS CAMPBELL, O'Connor's Child. St. 4. (1809) Appropriated without credit to Freneau.
7
As the shadow of a great rock in a weary land. (Sicut umbra petrae prominentis in terra deserta.)
Old Testament: Isaiah, xxxii, 2. (c. 725 B. C.)
And Isaiah said, This sign shalt thou have of the Lord, that the Lord will do the thing that he hath spoken: shall the shadow go forward ten degrees, or go back ten degrees? And Hezekiah answered, It is a light thing for the shadow to go down ten degrees: nay, but let the shadow return backward ten degrees. (Facile est, umbram crescere decem lineis: nec hoc volo ut fiat, sed ut revertatur retrorsum decem gradibus.)
Old Testament: II Kings, xx, 9-10. (c. 600 B. C.)
Like Hezekiah's, backward runs
The shadow of my days.
TENNYSON, Will Waterproof's Lyrical Monologue. St. 5. (1842) In the 1853 edition, Tennyson altered this to, "Against its fountain upward runs | The current of my days."
8
The picture of a shadow is a positive thing.
JOHN LOCKE, An Essay Concerning Human Understanding. Bk. ii, ch. 8, sec. 5. (1690)
Strange to relate, but wonderfully true,
That even shadows have their shadows too!
CHARLES CHURCHILL, Rosciad, l. 411. (1761)
And shadow, like a dappled fawn,
Steps delicately forth to try
The pool of silver on the lawn.
SARA HENDERSON HAY, Cool of the Evening.

<sup>1</sup> "May his shadow never be less," said another.

MORIER, Hajji Baba of Ispahan. Ch. 28. (1824)
The little fleet—may its shadow never be less!

RICHARD BURTON, Wanderings in West Africa, i, 9. (1863)

May your shadda never be less.

SHAW, John Bull's Other Island. Act i. (1904)

<sup>2</sup> You would be afraid, as the saying goes, of your own shadow. (τὴν σεαυτοῦ σκιάν φοβεῖσθαι.)

PLATO, Phaedo. Sec. 101D. (c. 385 B.C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, v, 65, with the Latin, "Suam ipsius umbram metuere."

He trembles at shadows. (Umbras timet.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xv, epis. 20. (44 B.C.)

I am jealous of my own shadow, a thing of naught, fool that I am to tremble with causeless fear. (Ipse meas solus, quod nil est, aemulor umbras, | stultus, quod nullo saepe timore tremo.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 34, 19. (c. 26 B.C.)

A coward flying from his own shadow.

RICHARD STEELE, The Tatler. No. 125. (1709)

A considerable part of Concord are in the condition of Virginia today, afraid of their own shadows.

H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 30 Nov., 1859. This is Thoreau's comment on the action of the selectmen of Concord in refusing to permit the parish bell to be tolled when John Brown was hanged.

<sup>3</sup> Picture human beings living in a sort of underground cave, . . . a fire burning behind them. . . . They see only their own shadows, or the shadows of one another, which the fire throws on the opposite wall of the cave.

PLATO, The Republic. Bk. vii, sec. 514. (c. 375 B.C.) This is the famous "Plato's cave" about which so much has been written, with very little agreement as to its meaning. See WRIGHT, The Origin of Plato's Cave, Harvard Studies in Class. Phil., xvii, 130. Quoted by ARISTOTLE, De Philosophia, i, 33, and by CICERO, De Natura Deorum, ii, 95.

We yet discourse in Plato's den and are but Embryon Philosophers.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Urn Burial. Ch. 4. (1658)
What difference between those in Plato's imaginary Cave, that stand gaping at the shadows and figures of things, so they please themselves, . . . and that Wise Man, who, being got loose from them, sees things truly as they are?

JOHN WILSON, tr., Praise of Folly. Sec. 72. (1668)

<sup>4</sup> Fighting with shadows. (σκιαμαχεῖν.)

PLATO, Republic. Bk. vii, sec. 520D. (c. 375 B.C.) Plato is saying that most cities are ruled darkly as in a dream by men who fight one another for shadows.

He will fence with his own shadow.

SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, i, 2. 66 (1597)

To fight with a shadow (whether one's own or another's) passeth for the proverbial expression of a vain and useless act.

FULLER, Appeal of Injured Innocence. (1659)

To fight with one's own shadow. . . . To be afraid of his own fancies, imagining danger where there is none.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 175. (1670)

Alas! must it be ever so?

Do we stand in our own light, wherever we go, And fight our own shadows forever?

OWEN MEREDITH (E. R. BULWER-LYTTON), Lucile. Pt. ii, canto ii, sec. 5. (1860)

<sup>5</sup> Like your shadow I'll follow you. (Quasi umbra te semper sequi.)

PLAUTUS, Casina, l. 92. (c. 200 B.C.)

Following like a shadow. (ὥσπερ σκιά ἐπείσθαι.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iii, cent. vii, No. 51. (1523) Citing an old Greek proverb, of which he gives the proverbial Latin form, "Velut umbra sequi."

My care is like my shadow in the sun—

Follows me flying, flies when I pursue it.

ELIZABETH, QUEEN OF ENGLAND, On the Departure of Alençon. (1582)

Having their shadow for their sole attendant. (Ayant pour tout laquais leur ombre seulement.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables: L'Avantage de la Science. Bk. viii, fab. 19. (1678)

Vain truly is the hope of your swiftest Runner to escape "from his own Shadow!"

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 6. (1834)

Always there is a black spot in our sunshine—it is the shadow of ourselves.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. ii, ch. 9.

Bad luck has followed me like my shadow.

O. HENRY (W. S. PORTER), Phoebe. (1909)

<sup>6</sup> The shadow of death. (σκιά θανάτου.)

Old Testament: Psalms, xxiii, 4. (c. 350 B.C.)

The Vulgate is "Umbra mortis." See under DEATH.

Thou [Death] art the shadow of life.

TENNYSON, Love and Death. (1830)

<sup>7</sup> We are all but phantoms, unsubstantial shadows. (οὐδὲν ὄντας ἄλλο πλὴν | εἰδῶλ' ὅσοι περ ζῶμεν ἢ κοίφην σκιάν.)

SOPHOCLES, Ajax, l. 125. (c. 409 B.C.)

We are but dust and shadow. (Pulvis et umbra sumus.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iv, ode 7, l. 16. (23 B.C.)

The best in this kind are but shadows.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, v, l. 213. (1596)

We are no other than a moving row

Of Magic Shadow-shapes that come and go.

FITZGERALD, tr., The Rubāiyāt. St. 68. (1859)

<sup>8</sup> The longer shadows fall from the lofty mountains. (Maioresque cadunt altis de montibus umbrae.)

VERGIL, Eclogues. Ecl. i, l. 84. (37 B.C.)

Every man casts a shadow; not his body only, but his imperfectly mingled spirit. . . . It is widest at its base, which is no greater than his own capacity.

H. D. THOREAU, A Week on the Concord and Merrimack Rivers: Friday. (1849)

1 The setting sun doubles the lengthening shadows. (Sol crescentis decedens duplicat umbras.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. Ecl. iii, l. 67. (37 B.C.)

When the sun sets, shadows, that showed at noon
But small, appear most long and terrible.

NATHANIEL LEE, Oedipus. (a. 1692)

His shadow lengthen'd by the setting sun.

POPE, Windsor Forest, l. 194. (1704)

SHAME

2 Shame is an ornament to the young, a disgrace to the old, since an old man ought not to do anything of which he need be ashamed.

ARISTOTLE, Nicomachean Ethics. Bk. iv, ch. 9, sec. 3. (c. 335 B.C.) A free rendering of the text. "Shame is the mark of a base man," Aristotle adds.

It is a shame not to be shameless. (Pudet non esse impudentem.)

ST. AUGUSTINE, Confessions. Bk. ii, ch. 9, last line. (A.D. 397.)

Nothing is so damned

And shameful as to be ashamed.

SAMUEL BUTLER, On a Hypocritical Nonconformist. St. 5. (a. 1680) "Be not ashamed of anything but to be ashamed" is another form. The French say, "Il n'y a que les honteux qui perdent" (None but the shame-faced lose).

3 There is a shame that bringeth sin; and there is a shame which is glory and grace.

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), iv, 21. (c. 190 B.C.)

4 When a woman once begins to be ashamed of what she ought not to be ashamed of, she will not be ashamed of what she ought.

CATO THE CENSOR, Oppian Law. (c. 215 B.C.)

They who are ashamed of that they ought not to be ashamed of, and are not ashamed of what they ought to be ashamed of, such men enter the downward path.

DHAMMAPALA, Commentaries. Verse 316. (c. 475)

5 He was hit, and wex al reed for shame.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. i, l. 866. (c. 1380)
Bk. ii, l. 645 has, "He wex a litel reed for shame."

6 Shame, which makes a servant brave in presence of a worthy master. (Vergogna, che innanzi a buon signor fa servo forte.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xvii, l. 89. (c. 1300)

Less shame a greater fault would wash away. (Maggior difetto men vergogna lava.)

DANTE, Inferno. Canto xxx, l. 142.

7 Where fear is, shame is. (Ubi timor, ibi pudor.)

ERASMUS, Adagia, i, ii, 64. (1508)

Where shame is, there is fear.

MILTON, Church-Government. Ch. 3. (1641)

Pallid Fear, and Shame, that skulks behind.

THOMAS GRAY, Eton College, l. 64. (1742)

That divine fear, which we call shame.

BENJAMIN JOWETT, tr., Plato, v, 45. (1875)

8 What's shameful if its doer think not so? (τί δ' αἰσχρὸν εἰ μὴ τοῖσι χρωμένοις δοκεῖ;)

EURIPIDES, Aeolus. Frag. 17. (c. 440 B.C.)

Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 33C, who takes exception to the sentiment and approves another, cited by STOBÆUS, Florilegium, v, 82, αἰσχρὸν τὸ γ' αἰσχρὸν, καὶν δοκῇ καὶ μὴ δοκῇ (A shame's a shame, whether one think so or not).

Why shameful, if the spectators do not think so? (τί δ' αἰσχρὸν, ἢν μὴ τοῖς θεωμένοις δοκῇ;)

ARISTOPHANES, The Frogs, l. 1475. (405 B.C.)

Shame is as it is taken.

SIR THOMAS MORE, Works (1557), p. 1253. (1534) HEYWOOD, Proverbs, i, 9. (1546)

9 On shameful things shame everywhere attends. (κάκει τὰ γ' αἰσχρὰ κἀνθάδ' αἰσχύνην ἔχει.)

EURIPIDES, Andromache, l. 244. (c. 430 B.C.)

10 Shame is born in the eyes. (αἰδῶς ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖσι γίγνεται.)

EURIPIDES, Cresphontes. Frag. 457. (c. 430 B.C.)

The eyes are the abode of shame. (τὸ ἐν ὀφθαλμοῖς εἶναι αἰδῶ.)

ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. ii, ch. 6, sec. 18. (c. 330 B.C.) Referred to as a proverb.

11 He that shames shall be shent [shamed].

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 42. (c. 1595)

12 Shame and the Dry-belly-ach were diseases of the last Age, this seems to be cured of them

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1757.

He has swallowed shame and drank after it, i.e. he has no shame left.

FORBY, Vocabulary of E. Anglia, p. 433. (1830)

13 Which were a shame.

JOHN GOWER, Confessio Amantis, ii, 28. (1390)

'Tis a foul shame.

UNKNOWN, Hunting of the Fox, 36. (1648)

A most horrid shame.

SAMUEL PEPYS, Diary, 19 Jan., 1663.

A burning Shame, a crying Sin.

SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 426. (1733)

What a shame!

HARRIET LEE, Frenchman's Tale, i, 199. (1796)

"It's a d— shame," jerked out Mr. Spenser

SHIRLEY BROOKS, Gordian Knot Ch. 16. (1858)

It's a sin and a shame.

GEORGE ELIOT, Felix Holt. Ch. 22. (1866)

14 The sense of shame

Makes me contemne my self-dishonour'd name.

CHRISTOPHER HARVEY, Schola Cordis, xv, 29. (1647)

Frequent sin had left no sense of shame.

DRYDEN, Cinyras and Myrrha, l. 307. (1700)

Under a keen sense of shame, there is a strong desire for concealment.

CHARLES DARWIN, The Expression of the Emotions in Man and Animals. Ch. 13. (1872)

- 1 Shame take him that shame thinketh.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546)
CAMDEN, p. 330; HOWELL, p. 9.
Shame shall fall them that shame thinks.
FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 90. (c. 1595)
Shame to them that shame think.
SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, The Metamorphoses of Ajax, 104. (1596)
Shame be his meede that meaneth shame.
EDMUND SPENSER, The Faerie Queene. Bk. iv, canto vi, st. 61. (1596)
EVIL TO HIM WHO THINKS EVIL, see under EVIL.
- 2 Shame is no fit companion for a needy man.
(αἰδῶς δ' οὐκ ἀγαθὴ κεχρημένῳ ἀνδρὶ παρῖναι.)
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 347. (c. 850 B.C.)
Repeated in l. 352. Quoted by PLATO, Laches, 201B; Charmides, 161A. Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, vii, 2, with the Latin, "Verecundia inutilis viro egenti."
'Tis ill for a beggar to feel shame. (κακὸς δ' αἰδοῖος δάηρης.)
HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. xvii, l. 578.
Shame is the needy man's companion. (αἰδῶς δ' οὐκ ἀγαθὴ κεχρημένῳ ἀνδρὶ κομίζει.)
HESIOD, Works and Days, l. 317. (c. 800 B.C.)
Hesiod's saying nicely complements Homer's, for while Homer says that no poor man can afford to feel shame, Hesiod points out that nevertheless shame is always with him.
For a needy man, shame is a silly virtue. (Qu'à un indigent c'est une sottise vertu que la honte.)
MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1595) Quoting Homer.
- 3 It is the false shame of fools which tries to cover unhealed sores. (Stultorum incurata pudor malus ulcera celat.)
HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 16, l. 24. (20 B.C.)
The worst kind of shame is being ashamed of frugality or poverty. (Pessimus quidem pudor est vel parsimoniae vel paupertatis.)
LIVY, Histories. Bk. xxxiv, ch. 4, sec. 13. (c. 10 B.C.)
- 4 I count him lost who is lost to shame. (Nam ego illum perisse dico quoi quidem periit pudor.)
PLAUTUS, Bacchides, l. 485. (c. 190 B.C.)
- 5 Most men who feel ashamed when there's no need, lose the feeling when they should have it. (Plerique homines, quos cum nil refert pudet, ubi pudendum est ibi eos deserit pudor.)
PLAUTUS, Epidicus, l. 166. (c. 200 B.C.)
Shame leaves us by degrees.
SAMUEL DANIEL, The Complaynt of Rosamond. St. 64. (1592)
- 6 Shame, which works mischief for men. (τὴν μέγα συνόμενην ἀνδράσιν αἰδῶ.)
PLUTARCH, Moralia, 124B. (c. A. D. 80)
- 7 To stand high with the unworthy is tantamount to shame. (Loco ignominiae est apud indignum dignitas.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 332. (c. 43 B.C.)

Nothing is more wretched than to be ashamed for what you've done. (Nihil est miserius quam ubi pudet quod feceris.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 477.
To feel shame is a sort of slavery. (Pudorem habere servitus quodammodo est.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 538.
If one is not moved by shame, fear cannot weaken. (Pudor si quem non flectit, non frangit timor.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 542.

8 There is hope of salvation where shame rebukes a man. (Spes est salutis ubi hominem obiurgat pudor.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 644. (c. 43 B.C.)
Where there is yet shame, there may in time be virtue.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Works, x, 319. (c. 1777)
Whilst shame keeps its watch, virtue is not wholly extinguished in the heart.

EDMUND BURKE, Reflections on the Revolution in France. (1790) The Germans say, "So long as there is shame, there is hope for virtue."

9 As the sayeng is, and daylye seene—Past Shame once, and past all amendment.

JOHN REDFORD, The Moral Play of Wit and Science, l. 840. (c. 1530)

Doth not the Scripture condemn a whore's forehead? Is it not a true Proverb, Past Shame, past Grace?

JOHN RAY, Miscellaneous Discourses Concerning the Changes of the World, p. 214. (1692)
He that is shameless is graceless.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2192. (1732)

10 Shame, when once 'tis gone, knows no return (Et qui redire cum perit nescit pudor.)

SENECA, Agamemnon, l. 113. (c. A. D. 60) Miller (Loeb) renders the line, "Modesty, when once 'tis gone," etc.

11 Where there is no shame, the kingdom is insecure. (Ubi non est pudor, . . . instabile regnum est.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 215. (c. A. D. 60)
He that has no Shame, has no Conscience.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2148. (1732)
A variant is, "Where there is no shame there is no honor."

12 Must I hold a candle to my shames?
SHAKESPEARE, The Merchant of Venice, ii, 6. 41. (1597)

13 In shame there is no comfort but to be beyond all bounds of shame.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia. Bk. ii. (1590)
14 A life of shame is shame for noble souls. (ἡ αἰσχρὸν αἰσχρῶς τοῖς καλῶς πεφυκόσιν.)
SOPHOCLES, Electra, l. 989. (c. 409 B.C.)

15 I never wonder to see men wicked, but I often wonder to see them not ashamed.
SWIFT, Thoughts on Various Subjects. (1714)

<sup>1</sup> Shame, the helpmate of warring Valor. (αἰδῶ re συνεργὸν ἀπὲρ ἀσ δομιάχου.)

TIMOTHEUS, Persians. Frag. 14, Wilamowitz.
(c. 400 B.C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 323E.

<sup>2</sup> Deep in his heart boils overwhelming shame.
(Aestuat ingens | imo in corde pudor.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. x, l. 870. (19 B.C.)

I have known all evils; virtue can surmount them, but what generous heart can endure shame?
(J'ai connu tous les maux, la vertu les surmonte;
Mais quel cœur généreux peut supporter la honte?)

VOLTAIRE, Zulime. Act i, sc. 5. (c. 1750)

<sup>3</sup> Life is easy to a man who has no shame.

UNKNOWN, The Dhammapada. Sec. 18. (c. A.D.
100)

He who is not ashamed does whatever he likes.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 643. (1817)

He who is without shame, all the world is his (Chi non ha vergogna, tutto il mondo è suo.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 715.
(1856) An Italian proverb. The French say, "L'audace mène à tout" (Audacity leads to everything).

<sup>4</sup> You that wear shamelessness as a garment.
(ἀναιδέην ἐνείμνε.)

UNKNOWN, Homeric Hymns: To Hermes, l.
156. (c. 600 B.C.)

Shame in a kindred cannot be avoyded.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 330. (1605)

Shame is Pride's cloak.

WILLIAM BLAKE, Proverbs of Hell. (1808)

PRIDE GOES BEFORE AND SHAME FOLLOWS AFTER, see PRIDE: PRIDE GOES BEFORE A FALL.

SHARP

<sup>5</sup> They found that the Don had been too sharp for them.

WILLIAM DAMPIER, Voyages, i, 228. (1697)

The sharp practice of the world.

HELPS, Friends in Council. Bk. i, ch. 8. (1847)

<sup>6</sup> Sharper'n a preacher's appetite.

JAKE FALSTAFF, Jacoby's Corners, p. 111. (1938)

My wodknyfe is as sharpe as a rasur.

WILLIAM HORMAN, Vulgaria, fo. 277. (1519)

Her glance is as the razor keen.

JOHN GAY, Poems (Underhill), ii, 279. (1720)

Your razor's polish'd, But, as the proverb goes,
'tis cruel sharp.

SCOTT, The Doom of Devorgoil, iii, 2. (1830)

Epigrams that were as sharp as razors.

THACKERAY, Vanity Fair. Ch. 63. (1848)

<sup>8</sup> Sharpe lyke a nedle.

RICHARD HULOET, Abcedartum, sig. E1. (1552)

Sharp thorns, as sharp as needles.

ADLINGTON, tr., Apuleius. Bk. vii. (1566)

With a stomach as sharp as a needle.

THOMAS HEYWOOD, The Fayre Mayde of the Exchange. (1607) Works (1874), ii, 25.

Sharp as a needle are her words.

JOHN GAY, New Song of Similes. l. 51. (c. 1732)

A man as sharp as a needle.

THOMAS HARDY, Under the Greenwood Tree.

Pt. iv, ch. 2. (1872)

As sharp as a needle and as slippery as an eel.

FREEMAN, Unconscious Witness, p. 32. (1942)

<sup>9</sup> Poure forth words as sharpe as vinegar.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Celestina (T.T.), p. 110. (1631)

As sharp as vinegar. Aceto acrius.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 191. (1678)

She's as sharp as vinegar this morning.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Richmond Heiress Act
ii, sc. 1. (1693)

Thou art as sharp as vinegar this afternoon!

WALTER SCOTT, Kenilworth. Ch. 27. (1821)

<sup>10</sup> Sharp as a sickle.

GEORGE MEREDITH, Love in the Valley. St. 15.
(1851)

Sharp enough to cut yourself.

WENTWORTH, Pursuit of a Parcel, p. 20 (1942)

<sup>11</sup> Excessive sharpness is perfect bluntness.

P. PERCIVAL, Tamil Proverbs. No. 471 (1842)

<sup>12</sup> Are you thereabouts, i' faith? Then sharp's the word.

SIR JOHN VANBRUGH, The Mistake. Act iii, sc.
1. (1706)

Sharp's the word! we'll have half ours too.

COLLEY CIBBER, The Rival Fools. Act i. (1709)

Sharp's the word. Now or never, boy.

ADDISON, The Spectator. No. 403. (1712)

Sharp's the word and quick's the motion with him; said of any one very attentive to his own interest, and apt to take all advantages.

FRANCIS GROSE, *A Dictionary of the Vulgar
Tongue: Sharp*. (1788)

Be alive, my fine fellow! . . . Sharp's the word and quick's the motion, ch?

THEODORE HOOK, Jack Brag. Ch. 2. (1837)

<sup>13</sup> Als scharpe as a thorn.

UNKNOWN, Early English Metrical Romances
(Camden Soc.), p. 15. (c. 1450)

He's sharp as thorn.

ROBERT HERRICK, Hesperides. No. 444. (1648)

As sharp as a thorn.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 207. (1670)

SHAVING

<sup>14</sup> It is shaven against the wool.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 326. (1605)

It's ill shaving against the wool.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 141. (1670)

See under WOOL.

<sup>15</sup> By shaving a foole one learnes to shave. (A barbe de fol aprent-on à raire.)

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Fol. (1611) The Italian form is, "A la barba de' pazzi il barbier imparà a radere."

The fools beard teacheth the young barber his trade.

JOHN WHITLOCK, Zootomia, p. 46. (1654)

A barber learns to shave by shaving of fools.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 141. (1670)
 "He is a fool," Ray adds, "that will suffer a young beginner to practise first upon him."

Accept a proverb out of Wisdom's schools—

"Barbers first learn to shave by shaving fools."

JOHN WOLCOT, Works, ii, 446. (1792)

1 He learns cupping on the necks of orphans.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 752. (1817)

D'ISRAELI, Philosophy of Proverbs, has it,
 "The barber learns his art on the orphan's head." "When a village Lyceum Committee asks me to give a lecture," wrote Emerson in his Journal, "and I tell them I will read one that I am just writing, they are pleased.
 Poor men, they little know how different that lecture will be when it is given in New York or is printed. I 'try it on' on them.
 'The barber learns his trade on the orphan's chin.'" This was one of Emerson's favorite proverbs.

2 To be shaven down to the lice. (πρὸς φθεῖρα κείρασθαι.)

EUBULUS, Fragment. (c. 375 B.C.) The Latin proverb is, "Radit usque ad cutem" (He shaves to the very skin).

3 I could never discover more than two reasons for shaving: the one is to get a beard, the other is to get rid of one.

FIELDING, Tom Jones. Bk. viii, ch. 4. (1749)

4 Well lather'd is half shaven.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5472. (1732)
 "A good lather is half the shave," is a very old remark among the trade [barbers].

WILLIAM HONE, Every-Day Book, i, 1269.
 (1826) The Italians say, "Barba bagnata è mezza rasa" (A beard well lathered is half shaved).

5 No barber shaves so close but another finds work.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 669. (1640)
 One Barber shaves not so close, but another finds
 Work.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3737. (1732)

6 Of a thousand shavers, two do not shave so much alike as not to be distinguished.

SAMUEL JOHNSON-BOSWELL, Life, 19 Sept., 1777.

7 The first man to be shaved every day was Scipio Africanus.

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. vii, sec. 77. (A. D.

77) The reference is probably to Scipio
 Africanus Minor, c. 185–129 B. C.

The practise of shaving the chin was commenced in the days of Alexander the Great.

JOHN YEATS, History of Commerce, p. 72. (1872)

8 If the daily shavings of one year . . . could be put into one shave, the operation . . . would be more than flesh and blood could bear.

ROBERT SOUTHY, The Doctor. Ch. 153. (1838)

9 I'll shave her, like a punished soldier, dry.

JOHN WOLCOT (PETER PINDAR), The Lousiad
 Canto ii. (1787)

The fellow will get a dry shave.

JOHN WOLCOT, Great Cry and Little Wool.
 (1804)

SHEEP

10 One butcher does not fear many sheep.

ALEXANDER THE GREAT, when his officers reported to him in dismay the innumerable multitudes of the Persian hosts which were advancing against him at Arbela. (331 B. C.)
 One of the few proverbs whose origin is explained by a convincing story. It was here, too, that Alexander, when his officers urged him to attack Darius under cover of darkness, answered, "I will not steal my victory"
 (οὐ κλέπτω τὴν νίκην). See also under ALEX-ANDER.

11 A fleece of a year is more profitable than one which is shorn twice or thrice a year.

J. D'ARRAS, tr., Melusine. (c. 1500) The French also say, "Il faut tondre les brebis, non les écorcher" (The sheep should be shorn and not flayed). See under TAXES.

Shear your sheep in May, And shear them all away.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 41. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia, No. 6195, has, "Shear your Sheep in May, And clear them all away."

Shear sheep that have them.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 201. (1678)

You have no more sheep to shear.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 344. (1678)

You may shear your sheep When the elder blossoms peep.

RICHARD INWARDS, Weather Lore, p. 153. (1893)

12 Never lose a hog for a halfp'north of tar.

JOHN DAY, The Blind-Beggar of Bednal-Green.
 Act v. (1600)

A man will not lose a hog, for a halfpennyworth of tarre.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 317. (1605)

Hee that will loose a Sheepe (or a Hogge) for a pennyworth of Tarre, cannot deserve the name of a good husband.

J. CRAWSEY, *The Countryman's Instructor:
 Epistle Dedicatory*. (1636) The reference is to the use of tar to protect sores or wounds on sheep from flies, and the meaning is, of course, that one should not risk losing an object or spoiling an enterprise by trying to make a small saving. In many parts of England, "sheep" is pronounced "ship," and hence the proverb is sometimes given, "Don't lose the ship for a ha'porth of tar." Tar was also sometimes used on swine.

Like the saving of a half-peny worth of tarre by the losse of a hogge, jeered in an English proverb.

GEORGE WITHER, Se Defendendo, p. 5. (1643)

Ne'er lose a hog for a half-penny-worth of tarre. Some have it, lose not a sheep, &c. Indeed tarre is more used about sheep than swine.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 154. (1678)

Never tyne [lose] the ship for want of a bit of tar.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth.

Ch. 1. (1861)

People are often saving at the wrong place, and spoil the ship for a halfpenny worth of tar.

E. J. HARDY, How to Be Happy Though Married. Ch. 13. (1886)

1 Outside his own domain, . . . he was a very sheep for the shearers.

DICKENS, David Copperfield. Ch. 16. (1850)

2 It is better to geue the fleece, then the sheepe. (Meglio è dar la lana, che la pecora.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 32. (1578)

It is better to give the wool than the sheep.

WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 326. (1605)

Better give the Wool than the whole Sheep.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 896. (1732)

3 You owed me a Sheep, but paid me a Lamb.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5976. (1732)

4 The sheep was feeble, and complain'd
His sides a load of wool sustain'd.

JOHN GAY, Fables: The Hare with Many Friends, l. 49. (1727)

A lazy Sheep thinks its Wool heavy.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 237. (1732)

Like lazy sheep, it is too much trouble for them to carry their own wool.

SURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 1. (1869)

5 He loueth well sheeps flesh, that wets his bred in the wul.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

6 My people hath been lost sheep: their shepherds have caused them to go astray. (Grex perditus factus est populus meus: pastores eorum seduxerunt eos.)

Old Testament: Jeremiah, 50, 6. (c. 700 B.C.)

A Lost Sheep Returned Home.

THOMAS VANE. Title of book. (1648)

I was a wandering sheep, I did not love the fold.

HORATIUS BONAR, Hymn. (1843)

Many are lost sheep at times.

JOHN RUSKIN, Sheepfolds, p. 12. (1851)

7 The entire flock dies in the fields of the disease introduced by one. (Grex totus in agris | unius scabie cadit.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. ii, l. 79. (c. A. D. 120)

Oon scabbyd shepe makyth a fowle flock.

UNKNOWN, Douce MS., 52 (Förster, ed). (c. 1350)

A wicke shep may spille al the flock.

AETHELWOLD, Rule of St. Benedict, p. 23. (c. 1400) A modernization of the Anglo-Saxon rule of c. 960.

Leste one skabbed schepe infecte al the flokke.

G. J. AUNGIER, Antiquities of Syon, p. 262. (c. 1450)

One scabbed shepe (as they say) marreth a hole flokke.

ROBERT WHITTINGTON, Vulgaria, p. 116. (1520)

One skabbid shepe infectith all the folde.

RICHARD HILLS, Commonplace-Book, p. 129. (c. 1530)

One scabbed sheepe, wyl marre a whole flokke. (Una pecora rognosa, guasta tutto vn gregge.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578) The French say, "Il ne faut q'une brebis galeuse pour gâter tout le troupeau." The proverb is common to all modern languages.

One scabbed sheep infects a whole flock.

LEWIS EVANS, Withals' Dictionary Revised, sig. C1. (1586) NASHE, Works, iv, 159. (1593)

One rotten sheep will mar a whole flock.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)

They report, that once one scabbed sheep from Spain rotted all the sheep of England. In this manner is this poison of adultery spread from a harlot.

THOMAS ADAMS, Sermons (1861), i, 76. (1629)

One tainted sheep mars a whole flock.

THOMAS RAWLINS, Rebellion. Act iv. (1640)

From one rude Boy that's us'd to mock,

Ten learn the wicked Jest;

One sickly Sheep infects the Flock,

And poysons all the rest.

ISAAC WATTS, Against Evil Company. (1715)

One scabby Sheep is enough to infect the whole Flock.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3792. (1732)

The tainted wether doth infect the whole flock.

JAMES WHITE, Falstaff's Letters, p. 16 (1796)

Reminiscent of SHAKESPEARE'S "I am the tainted wether of the flock." The Merchant of Venice, iv, 1, 114.

8 It were better to be in for the whole sheep than the shoulder.

J. R. LOWELL, The Biglow Papers. Ser. ii, No. 2. Introduction. (1862) See under PENNY

9 And before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats. (ὡς ποιμὴν ἀπορίξει τὰ πρόβατα ἀπὸ τῶν ἐπὶ φων.)

New Testament: Matthew, xxv, 32. (c. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Sicut pastor segregat oves ab hoedis."

Schepe that schal be savid schal be on hys rgt honde.

JOHN WYCLIF, Select Works, iii, 169. (c. 1380)

10 The mountain sheep are sweeter,
But the valley sheep are fatter.

T. L. PEACOCK, The Misfortunes of Elphin. Ch. 2. (1829) The proverb is, "Good pastures make fat sheep."

11 Unze Sakes & Sys cloves le meliour
Leyn de Coteswold a l'oeps dit Seignour.

PETRI, in Rolls of Parliament, ii, 182/1. (c. 1327) "Cotswold lion" is a humorous name for a sheep; perhaps a pun on leyn (wool). for which the Cotswold Hills are noted

Com rennyng on him fersly as lyons of Cotteswold.

UNKNOWN, Satirical Rhymes on the Siege of Calais. (c. 1440) In Archaeologia, xxxiii, 130. She is as fierce as a lyon of Cotsolde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546) See under FIERCENESS.

You look like a Lammermoor lion.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 380. (1721) Lammermoor is a large sheep walk in the east of Scotland.

1 It is the nature of sheep always to follow the first, wheresoever it goes. (Vous sçauvez estre du mouton le naturel, tousiours suyre le premier, quelque part qu'il aille.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 8. (1548)

One sheep follows another.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 405. (1678) A proverb in many languages, beginning with the Latin, "Una ove praeunte omnes sequuntur" (One sheep goes first, all follow). The German form is, "Ein Schaf geht vorans und Alle folgen ihm." "Sheep follow sheep" is the usual rendering from the Talmud, sec. 62.

It is not the shepherd, but the sheep with the bell, which the flock follows.

JONATHAN SWIFT, in The Tatler. No. 66. (1709)

Where the Dam leaps over, the Kid follows

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5662. (1732) The Spanish form is, "Por do salta la cabra, salta la que la mama" (Where the goat leaps, there leaps the kid which sucks her).

One sheep will leap the ditch when another goes first.

WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 36. (1816) When one sheep leaps, the rest follow. (Yi yang ch'ien hsing chung yang 'hou chi.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 36. (1875)

2 It's possible for a ram to kill a butcher.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 22. (1670)

It is possible for a Sheep to kill a Butcher.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3010. (1732) Don't think of fighting the man; he is a tradesman. . . Remember that "a ram may kill a butcher."

LORD LYTTON, Pelham. Ch. 13. (1828)

3 As sheepish as a sheep. (προβάτου προβατότερον.)

SOPHRON, Mimes. No. 96. (c. 450 B.C.)

A number, just sheep. (ἀριθμὸς πρόβατ', ἅλλως.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Clouds, l. 1203. (423 B.C.)

That's a sheep's life. (προβατίου βίον.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Plutus, l. 922. (388 B.C.)

4 The yewe that doth bleate doth loose the most of her meate.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spered Houres of a Souldier, p. 476. (1623)

The sheep for offering to bleat, loseth her bit.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 28. (1666)

Every time the Sheep bleats, it loses a Mouthful

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1471. (1732)

He said something about a bleating sheep losing a bite.

HUGHES, Tom Brown at Oxford. Ch. 23. (1861)

II—Black Sheep

5 Of every ordre some shrewe is, parde.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Chanouns Yemannes Tale, l. 442. (c. 1386) In every company there is some evil person. Sheep and Shrew are often contrasted proverbially as types of wives of opposite character. See under SHREW.

The curates . . . know best the black sheep of the flock.

WALTER SCOTT, Old Mortality. Ch. 35. (1818)

There's a scabby sheep in every flock.

JOHN GLYDE, JR., A Norfolk Garland, p. 150.

(1872) More usually, "a black sheep."

Everybody has a black pig.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. 1811. (1875)

Black sheep dwell in every fold.

W. S. GILBERT, H.M.S. Pinafore. Act ii. (1878)

6 Let the black sheep keep the white.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 69. (1639)

7 You are a black sheep; and I'll mark you.

CHARLES MACKLIN, The Man of the World. Act v, sc. 1. (1792)

Kate, the "black sheep" of the family.

WHYTE-MELVILLE, Kate Coventry. Ch. 13. (1856)

She has heard of the family black sheep and she doesn't approve of black sheep.

VIRGINIA RATH, Posted for Murder, p. 54. (1942)

8 The blacke shepe is a perylous beast.

UNKNOWN, Six Ballads (P.S.), p. 4. (c. 1550)

Indeed a black sheep is a perilous beast.

JOHN LYLIV, Endimion. Act ii, sc. 2. (1591)

Till now I thought the prouerbe did but iest, Which said a blacke sheepe was a biting beast

THOMAS BASTARD, Chrestoleros. Bk. iv, ep. 20 (1598)

Baa, baa, black sheep, Have you any wool?

HALLIWELL, ed., Nursery Rhymes, p. 109. (1842)

III—Sheep and Wolf

9 What companionship is there between a wolf and a lamb?

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xiii, 17. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

He loves him as the wolf loves the sheep. (Ut lupus ovem amat.)

ROBERT BLAND, Proverbs, ii, 163. (1814)

What does the wolf care if the sheepfold be destroyed?

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 100. (1817)

10 The new-born lamb does not fear a tiger, but before he becomes a sheep he will flee from a wolf.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 366. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

11 O noble custodian of the sheep, as they say, the wolf! (O praeclarum custodem ovium, quod alunt, lupum!)

CICERO, Philippics. No. iii, sec. 2. (44 B.C.)

By little and little the wolf eateth the sheep.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 13. (1633)

The lone sheep's in danger of the wolf.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 117. (1639)

The wolf eats sheep, but now and then,

Ten thousands are devour'd by men.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1740.

<sup>1</sup> The death of the wolfe, is the health of the sheepe. (La morte de Lupi, è sanita de la pecore.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 31. (1578)

The life of the wolf is the death of the lamb.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia. (1639)

The death of wolves is the safety of the sheep.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1084. (1640)

The Ouseleys have a very curious motto, Mors lupi agnis vita, "The death of the wolf is life to the lambs."

A. C. BENSON, Along the Road, p. 270. (1913)

<sup>2</sup> The Dust, raised by the Sheep, does not choak the Wolf.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4491. (1732)

There is no ointment for the wolf's sore eyes,

Like clouds of dust which from the sheep arise.

R. C. TRENCH, Proverbs, xii, 303. (1865)

<sup>3</sup> While you trust to the Dog, the Wolf slips into the Sheep-Fold.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5690. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> Left behind as a sheep among wolves. (καταλείψει διν ἐν λύκοις.)

HERODOTUS, History. Bk. iv, sec. 149. (c. 445 B. C.)

I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves.

(ἀποστέλλω ὑμᾶς ὡς πρόβατα ἐν μέσῳ λύκων.)

New Testament: Matthew, x, 16. (C. A. D. 65)

The Vulgate is, "Ecce ego mitto vos sicut oves in medio luporum."

<sup>5</sup> The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb. (Habitabit lupus cum agno.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, xi, 6. (c. 725 B. C.)

Till wolf and lamb be united. (πρὶν κεν λύκος οἶν ὕμεναῖοι.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Peace, l. 1076. (421 B. C.)

It is probable that in Noahs Ark the wolf agreed with the lamb, and that all creatures drowned their antipathy, whilst all were in danger of drowning.

THOMAS FULLER, The Profane State. Bk. v, ch. 19. (1642)

<sup>6</sup> The sheep are happier of themselves, than under care of the wolves.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Notes on Virginia. (1787)

<sup>7</sup> The wolfe weareth a faire face to deuour the Lambe.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 78. (1579)

The Wolf never wants for a Pretence against the Lamb.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4839. (1732)

The French say, "A petite occasion prend le loup le mouton" (On slight pretext the wolf takes the lamb), or "The wolf finds a reason for taking the lamb." All these refer to Aesop's fable of the wolf and the lamb drinking out of the same stream, and the wolf pretending that the lamb was muddying the water the wolf was drinking, although the lamb was drinking downstream from the wolf.

The Kid, that keeps above, is in no danger of the Wolf.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4612.

<sup>8</sup> He that will needes be a sheepe, cannot greatly grudge to be bitten with a fox.

MELBANCKE, Philotimus, sig. Bb4. (1583)

It was wont to be said by way of a proverbe: Hee that will be made a sheepe, shall find wolues inough.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, ii, 38. (1593)

If men become sheepe, the wolfe will deuoure them.

DAVIES, Scourge of Folly. Proverb 55. (1611)

He that will make himselfe a sheepe, it is no matter though the wolues doe eat him.

BARNABY RICH, The Irish Hubbub, p. 4. (1619)

He that makes himself a sheep, shall be eat by the wolf.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1087. (1651)

He that makes himself a sheep, shall be eaten by the wolf. Chi pecora si fa il lupo la mangia.—Ital. Qui se fait brebis le loup le mange.—Fr. He that is gentle, and puts up with affronts and injuries, shall be sure to be loaden. The Spaniards say, Hazélos miel, y comerós han moscas.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 141. (1670)

There is much truth in the Italian saying, Make yourselves sheep, and the wolves will eat you.

FRANKLIN, Works (Bigelow), v, 86. (1773)

He that makes himself a sheep will find that the wolves are not all dead.

SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 4. (1869)

<sup>9</sup> They expect to tear a lamb from a wolf. (Lupo agnum eripere postulant.)

PLAUTUS, Poenulus, l. 776. (c. 194 B. C.) Proverbial for a difficult undertaking.

<sup>10</sup> To leave wolves in charge of sheep. (Lupus apud ovis linquere.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 140. (c. 195 B. C.)

You have entrusted the sheep to the wolf. (Lupo ovem commisit.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 832. (161 B. C.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, iv, 10, who had good reason to remember it, since he himself had been left in the hands of guardians who fleeced him of his property. The Spanish form is the same, "Entregar las ovejas al lobo."

Do you trust doves to a hawk, madman, or a full sheepfold to a mountain wolf? (Accipitri timidus credis, furiose, columbas? | plenum montano credis ovile lupo?)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 363. (c. 1 B. C.)

Alas, poor Proteus! thou hast entertain'd

A fox to be the shepherd of thy lambs.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, iv, 4, 96. (1594)

Give never the wolf the wedder to keep.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 36. (c. 1595)

You have given the wolf the wether to keep.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 95. (1639)

You give the wolf the wether to keep. Ha dato lu pecora in guardia al lupo.—Ital. Dare in guardia la lattuga a paperi.—Ital. To give the lettuce in charge to the geese.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 200. (1670)

The Germans say, "Den Bock zum Gärtner machen" (Of a goat make a gardener).

Such protection as vultures give to lambs.

R. B. SHERIDAN, Pizzaro. Act ii, sc. 2. (1779)

1 Woe to the sheep whose judge is a wolf. (Vae miseris ovibus, iudex lupus est.)

PONTANUS, Collectio Proverbiorum, p. 214. (1778)

It is a foolish sheep that makes the wolf his confessor.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 23. (1670)

From the German, "Es ist ein albern Schaf, das dem Wolf beichtet."

Pheasants are Fools, if they invite the Hawk to Dinner.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3871. (1732)

2 Baneful to the folds is the wolf. (Triste lupus stabulis.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. Ecl. iii, l. 80. (37 B.C.)

3 We care as much for the chill blasts of Boreas as the wolf for the number of the sheep. (Tantum Boreae curamus frigora, quantum [aut numerum] [ovium] lupus.)

VERGIL, Eclagues. Ecl. vii, l. 51. (37 B.C.)

As Vergil saith, It neuer troubles a Wolfe, how many the sheep be.

FRANCIS BACON, Essays: Of the True Greatnesse of Kingdomes and Estates. (1597)

Your Eminence knows the proverb relating to counted sheep.

MATEO ALEMAN, Guzman, i, 435. (1599)

The wolfe eats counted [and uncounted] sheep.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Loup. (1611)

The wolfe eateth often the sheepe that have bene told [counted].

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 271. (1639)

The wolf eats oft of the sheep that have been warned.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 1132. (1640)

The wolf worries sheep, for all that they are told.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 132. (1660)

4 For the least choice the wolfe tooke the sheepe.

JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 500. (1623)

THE WOLF IN SHEEP'S CLOTHING, see under WOLF.

SHEPHERD

5 Under a shepherde softe and necligent
The wolf hath many a sheep and lamb to-rent.
(Sub molli pastore capit lanam lupus, et grex Incustoditus dilaceratur.)

ALANUS DE INSULIS, Liber Parabolarum, i, 31.

(a. 1200) CHAUCER, tr., The Physician's Tale, l. 101.

The shepherd should not sleep when the wolf is among the sheep.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. i, Apologue 2. (c. 1257)

The wolf cannot the shepherd be.

SADI, Gulistan, i, 6. (c. 1258)

The shepherd who praises the wolf hates the sheep. (Il pastor che loda il lupo, ha in odio la pecora.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 196. (1856)

6 The good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. (ὁ ποιμὴν ὁ καλὸς τὴν ψυχὴν αὐτοῦ τίθησιν ὑπὲρ τῶν προβάτων.)

New Testament: John, x, 11. (c. A. D. 110) The Vulgate is, "Bonus pastor animam suam dat pro ovibus suis."

The good sheppard exposeth his lyf for his sheep.

WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Fayttes of Armes and of Chyualrye, i, i, 5. (1489)

THE GOOD SHEPHERD SHOULD SHEAR HIS FLOCK, NOT FLAY IT, see under TAXES.

7 As sheep that have not a shepherd. (Quasi oves non habentes pastorem.)

Old Testament: I Kings, xxii, 17. (c. 700 B. C.)

8 Alas! What boots it with incessant care
To tend the homely slighted Shepherds trade,
And strictly meditate the thankles Muse,
Were it not better don as others use,
To sport with Amaryllis in the shade,
Or with the tangles of Neæra's hair?

JOHN MILTON, Lycidas, l. 64. (1637)

9 When the shepherd is angry with the sheep, he sends them a blind guide.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 403. (1678)

10 Sike [such] as the shepheards, sike bene her sheepe.

EDMUND SPENSER, The Shepheardes Calender: September, l. 141. (1579) See also under LIKENESS.

11 If you cannot tell [count], beauty, I take the adage for my reply: You are naught to keep sheep.

GEORGE WILKINS, The Miseries of Inforst Marriage. (1607) In HAZLITT, Old Plays, ix, 477.

If you can't tell you are nought to keep sheep.

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 172. (1666)

12 Woe to the idol shepherd that leaveth the flock! (O Pastor, et idolum, derelinquens gregem.)

Old Testament: Zechariah, xi, 17. (c. 520 B. C.)

SHIELD

13 A Spartan woman, as she handed her son his shield, exhorted him, saying, "Either with this or upon this." (ἢ τὰν ἢ ἐπὶ τὰς.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: Sayings of Spartan Women. Sec. 241F. (c. A. D. 95) STOBÆUS, Florilegium, vii, 31, quotes this as from ARISTOTLE, Aphorisms, giving Gorgo as the author. It is often spoken of as a regular Spartan custom. AUSONIUS, Epigrams. No. 44, gives a translation of Plutarch, with the Latin, "Cum hoc, aut in hoc redi" (Return with this, or upon it).

There are few to bee seene at this daye, whiche, by the example of the Spartane women, have the heartes to saye to their children in delivering them a Tergate, Come no more in my sighte, but eyther with this retourning victoryous from the field, or upon this.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. iii, p. 58. (1574) Pettie, tr.

1
Now put your shields before your hearts, and fight

With hearts more proof than shields.

SHAKESPEARE, Coriolanus, i, 4, 24. (1607)
Cover yourself with your shield and care not for cries.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 167. (1640)

SHIFT

2
Got with shifts are spent with shame.

A. BOUCHIER, in EDWARDS, Paradise of Dainty Devices, sig. 4b. (a. 1566)

Those goods that are gotten by shift, are for the most part lost with shame.

SIR RICHARD BARCKLEY, The Felicitie of Man (1631), p. 111. (1598)

As yee liu'd by shifts, [yee] shall die with shame.

ANTHONY MUNDAY, The Downfall of Robert Earle of Huntington Afterwards Called Robin Hood, ii, D 3 b. (1601)

3
He was driuen to so narrowe shifte, that to furnishe hym selfe of money, he became a Pyrat.

JOHN BRENDE, tr., Quintus Curtius Rufus' Historie, i, B iv b. (1553)

You draue him to his shiftes.

WILLIAM STAFFORD (?), A Briefe Examination of Certayne Complaints, p. 15. (1581)

The dear delicious shifts I used to be put to, to gain half a minute's conversation.

SHERIDAN, The Rivals. Act v, sc. 1. (1775)

He was put to strange shifts to make out a living.

MRS. ALEXANDER, At Bay. Ch. 1. (1885)

4
Hang him that has no shifts.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 42. (1639)

Hang him that hath no shift, and him that hath one too many.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 141. (1670)

5
Strange, that he who lives by shifts, can seldom shift himself.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734.

6
A good shift may serve long, but it will not serve ever.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 131. (1678)
FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 177. (1732)

7
A bad shift is better than none.

NICOLAS UDALL, Roister Doister. Act v, sc. 2. (a. 1553) PORTER, Two Angry Women. (1599)

SHILLING

8
When I die, I'll leave him the Fee-Simple of a Rope and a Shilling.

FARQUHAR, Constant Couple. Act iv, sc.3. (1700)
I'll cut him off with a shilling.

GEO. COLMAN, SR., Musical Lady. Act ii. (1762)

9
He did take a shilling, but not with any intent of listing.

THOMAS HEARNE, Remarks and Collections, 27 March, 1707. "To take the King's (or Queen's) shilling" was to enlist as a soldier by accepting a shilling from a recruiting officer, a practice now discontinued.

One fellow was jilted by his mistress, and took the shilling in despair.

THACKERAY, Esmond. Bk. iii, ch. 5. (1852)

I took the Queen's shilling and became a soldier.

FARJEON, Three Times Tried. Ch. 1. (1886)

10
He maketh his marts with marchantis likely, To bryng a shillyng to .ix. pens quickly.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)
Your cunning was such that you brought a shilling to nine pence.

WILSON, The Arte of Rhetorique, p. 185. (1560)

11
He will come back again, like the ill shilling.

WALTER SCOTT, Redgauntlet. Ch. 10. (1824)

SHIP

See also Boat

12
Tossed about like a ship in a storm. (Illidetur quasi in procella navis.)

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xxxiii, 2. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.

13
What is a ship but a prison?

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. iii, mem. 4. (1621)

Being in a ship is being in a jail with the chance of being drowned.

SAMUEL JOHNSON. BOSWELL, Life, 1759.

14
Every wind is ill to a broken ship.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 171. (1633)

To a crazy ship all winds are contrary.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 397. (1640)

RAY, p. 6. (1670) FULLER, No. 5126. (1732)

To a disabled ship, every wind is contrary. (A nave rotta, ogni vento è contrario.)

CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 199. (1856)

Every wind is foul for a crazy ship.

SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 7. (1869)

15
A dear ship stands long in the haven.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 4. (1641)

A dear ship stays long in the harbour. Apply'd often to nice maids.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 50. (1721)

16
As broken a ship has come to land.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 14. (c. 1595)

As broken a Ship as this has come to Land.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 668. (1732)

Far more unlikelier ships have com'd into harbour than this.

GEORGE COLMAN, JR., The Review. Act i, sc. 2. (1800)

My sister will never marry.—That's easily said. . . . but as broken a ship's come to land.

WALTER SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 9. (1824)

1 Great ships, great thoughtes. (Gran nauí, gran pensieri.)

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 30. (1578)

A great ship asks deep waters.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 451. (1640) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 24. (1670)

A great Ship must have deep Water.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 203. (1732)

2 Ships fear fire more than water.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 908. (1640) RAY, p. 24; FULLER, No. 4153.

3 Go trust yourself to a hewn plank which parts you from death by four finger-breadths, or seven if it be extra thick! (Confisus ligno, digitis a morte remotus | quattuor aut septem, si sit latissima, taedae.)

JUVENAL, Satires, xii, 58. (c. A. D. 120)

Of what thickness are the boards of this ship?—They are fully two inches thick, replied the pilot.—Merciful God, said Panurge, we are then continually within two inches of death. (Nous sommes donc continuellement à deux doigts près de la mort.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 23. (1548)

Ships are but boards.

SHAKESPEARE, Merchant of Venice, i, 3, 22. (1597)

4 Not the courage that throws away the scabbard, much less that which burns its ships.

A. T. MAHAN, The War in South Africa. Ch. 5. (1900) "Seine Schiffe hinter sich brennen" (To burn his ships behind him), is a German proverb, which is said to refer to Cortez in Mexico in 1519, but similar incidents have occurred in history at least as far back as 310 B. C. See also under BRIDGE.

5 One [customer] always says he'll give me a ton of tatics when his ship comes home.

HENRY MAYHEW, London Labour, i, 175. (1851) Perhaps we may manage it some time. When our ship comes in.

MISS MULOCK, John Halifax. Ch. 22. (1857)

When one's ship comes home. When one succeeds; when one's projects bear fruit. Perhaps with a reminiscence of The Merchant of Venice.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés. (1941)

6 Don't give up the ship! You will beat them off!

CAPTAIN JAMES MUGFORD, of the schooner Franklin, 19 May, 1776. Said to have been his dying words during a British attack in Boston harbor.

Keep the guns going! Fight her till she strikes or sinks! Don't give up the ship!

Attributed to CAPTAIN JAMES LAWRENCE, commander of the American frigate Chesapeake, as he lay fatally wounded while fighting the British ship, Shannon, 1 June, 1813. However, Benjamin Russell, editor at the time of The Boston Centinel, is said to have coined the phrase in his account of Lawrence's death. See BOMBAUGH, Facts and Fancies for the Curious, p. 388.

Don't give up the ship!

OLIVER HAZARD PERRY, Signal, floated at the masthead of his flagship, the Lawrence, during the battle of Lake Erie, 10 Sept., 1813. This is the only use of the phrase which is fully authenticated.

My exhortation would rather be "not to give up the ship."

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, x, 4. (1816)

Don't give up the ship, matey.

A. R. BOSWORTH, Full Crash Dive, p. 135. (1942)

7 Brought by wooden steed across the azure main. (Nempe equo ligneo per vias caeruleas.)

PLAUTUS, Rudens, l. 268. (c. 200 B. C.) WOODEN WALLS, see under WALL.

The ship is the horse of the sea.

SHAW, Heartbreak House. Act iii. (1913)

8 We twain have met like ships upon the sea.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sec. 4. (1852)

As vessels starting from ports thousands of miles apart pass close to each other in the naked breadth of the ocean, nay, sometimes even touch in the dark.

O. W. HOLMES, The Professor at the Breakfast-Table. Ch. 3. (1860)

Our lives, like ships at sea, an instant meet, Then part forever.

STEDMAN, Blameless Prince. St. 51. (1869)

Ships that pass in the night, and speak each other in passing.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Tales of a Wayside Inn: The Theologian's Tale: Elizabeth. Pt. 4. (1873)

Ships that Pass in the Night.

BEATRICE HARRADEN. Title of novel. (1893)

9 Those who are conversant in the same danger, are said to be in the same Ship.

WILLIAM PRYNNE, Sovereign Power of Parliaments. App., 209. (1643) See also under BOAT.

10 Stretching our fair canvas to the breeze, all shipshape and Bristol fashion.

WALTER SCOTT, Chronicles of the Canongate: Introduction. (1826)

Her decks were wide and roomy. . . . There was no foolish gilding and gingerbread work, . . . but everything was "ship-shape and Bristol fashion."

R. H. DANA, Two Years Before the Mast. Ch. 22. (1840)

When a seaman wished to speak well of his vessel, he declared that with her things were "ship-shape and Bristol fashion."

Notes and Queries, xi, ix, 446. (1914)

I laid it out shipshape and Bristol fashion.

YOUNG, A Man About the House, p. 156. (1942)

- <sup>1</sup> My ship's in port. (In portu navigo.)
TERENCE, Andria, l. 480. (166 B.C.) Cited by
ERASMUS, Adagia, i, i, 46.
The ships rest upon the beach. (Stant littore pup-pes.)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. vi, l. 901. (19 B.C.)
Thow mak my schip in blissit port to arryif.
WILLIAM DUNBAR, Poems, ix, 165. (c. 1510)
I find the answer of Anacharsis very proper; being asked what ship he reckoned safest, he replied, that which is in the harbor. (Celle qui seroit en port.)
RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iv, ch. 24. (1548)
Rough windes in time bring the ship to safe Road.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 250. (1580)

SHIPWRECK

- <sup>2</sup> To break the pitcher at the door. (τὴν θύρας τὴν ὑδρίαν.)
ARISTOTLE, Rhetoric. Bk. i, ch. 6, sec. 22. (c.
330 B.C.) Quoted as a proverb, for failure with success in sight, shipwreck in port.
He who runs his ship ashore while leaving port is certainly the least efficient of pilots. (Pessimus certe gubernator qui navem, dum portu egreditur, impegit.)
QUINTILIAN, Institutionis Oratoriae. Bk. iv, ch.
1, sec. 61. (c. A.D. 80)
To be shipwrecked in port. (In portu impingere.)
ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. i, cent. v, No. 76. (1523)
The French say, "Faire naufrage au port"
'Tis double death to drown in ken of shore
SHAKESPEARE, Rape of Lucrece, l. 1114. (1594)
- <sup>3</sup> He perhaps reads of a shipwreck on the coast of Bohemia.
EDMUND BURKE, On the Sublime and the Beautiful: Pt. i, Introduction. (1756)
- <sup>4</sup> My only desire is to watch their shipwreck from the dry land. (Cupio istorum naufragia ex terra intueri.)
CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. ii, epis. 7. (59 B.C.)
I myself saw the shipwreck, and I said, Never was wave more just. (Vidi ego naufragium, . . . et, "Nunquam" dixi "iustior unda fuit.")
OVID, Tristia. Bk. v, eleg. 8, l. 11. (c. A.D. 9)
- <sup>5</sup> A common shipwreck is a consolation to all.
(Commune naufragium, omnibus solatium.)
ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. iv, cent. iii, No. 9.
(1523) See also MISERY LOVES COMPANY
- <sup>6</sup> He goes a great Voyage, that goes to the Bottom of the Sea.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1850. (1732)
"It is a great way to the bottom of the sea"
[They] would have met a watery grave; or, to use a seaman's phrase, gone to Davy Jones's locker.
UNKNOWN, Naval Chronicle, x, 510. (1803)
The boat was capsized, and . . . all hands are snug enough in Davy Jones's locker.
CHAMIER, Saucy Arethusa. Ch. 14. (1837)

- <sup>7</sup> The shipwrecks of some are sea-marks to others.
THOMAS FULLER, Worthies, i, 372. (1662)
I am your sea-mark; and, though wrecked and lost,
My ruin stands to warn you from the coast.
DRYDEN, The Conquest of Granada. Pt. i, act
iii, sc. 1. (1670)
Let another's shipwreck be your sea-mark.
H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 440. (1855)
The Dutch say, "A wreck on shore is a beacon at sea."
- <sup>8</sup> You leaue all anker holde, on seas or lands,
And so set vp shop vpon Goodwins sands.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)
Sandbanks off the coast of Kent, where many ships go aground.
Let him set up shop on Goodwins sands.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 215. (1670)
May Sell-cheap kept shop on Goodwin Sands, and yet had Store of custom.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1748
- <sup>9</sup> Each man makes his own shipwreck. (Naufragium sibi quisque facit.)
LUCAN, De Bello Civili. Bk. i, l. 503. (c. A.D. 60)
Of sailors leaping from a wreck into the sea.
- <sup>10</sup> I made a prosperous voyage when I suffered shipwreck. (νὺν εὐπλόηκα, ὅτε νευανάγηκα.)
ZENO, referring to the fact that the loss of a ship with its cargo had caused him to turn to philosophy. (c. 300 B.C.) See DIOGENES LAERTIUS, Zeno. Bk. vii, sec. 4.
- <sup>11</sup> It's stupid to trip on the same stone twice.
(ὁὶς πρὸς τὸν αὐτὸν ἀσκήρον εἰσκούσιν λίθον.)
ZENOBIOUS, Adagia, iii, 29. (c. A.D. 130)
He wrongly accuses Neptune who makes shipwreck a second time. (Improbe Neptunum accusat qui iterum naufragium facit.)
PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 331. (c. 43 B.C.)
He complains wrongfully on the sea, that twice suffers shipwreck.
HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 708. (1640)

SHIRT

- <sup>12</sup> To put one's shirt on a horse.
BARRÈRE AND LELAND, *A Dictionary of Slang:
Shirt*. (1897) To bet everything one has.
Similarly, "To lose one's shirt" to lose everything. The French say, "Jouer jusqu'à sa dernière chemise."
- <sup>13</sup> A dandy of the "boiled shirt" and "stove-pipe"
pattern.
J. ROSE BROWNE, A Peep at Washoe. In Harper's Magazine, Jan., 1861.
In order to attend the Governor's reception, I borrowed a boiled shirt.
MCCLURE, Rocky Mountains, p. 412. (1869)
He wore a "stove-pipe" hat and a "boiled shirt."
JOAQUIN MILLER, Amongst the Modocs, p. 130.
(1873)

<sup>1</sup> I holde him riche, al hadde he nat a sherte.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Tale of the Wyf of Bath, l. 330. (c. 1386)

The loss of wealth is loss of dirt,
As sages at all times assert;
The happy man's without a shirt.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Be Merry, Friends. (c. 1562)
Admit he be not worth a Shirt to his back, he has Wealth enough who holds himself content.

RICHARD BRATHWAIT, A Comment Upon the Two Tales of Chaucer, p. 91. (1665)

Augustus had neither glass to his windows, nor a shirt to his back.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire. Vol. iii, ch. 31. (1781)

<sup>2</sup> The Frenchman invented the ruffe, the Englishman added the shirt.

EMERSON, English Traits, p. 89. (1856) LEAN, Collectanea, i, 22, quotes this, "A Frenchman invented the dickey, the Englishman added the shirt."

<sup>3</sup> When one person makes another in an ill humour he is said to have "got his shirt out."

J. C. HOTTEN, A Dictionary of Modern Slang: Shirty. (1859)

Don't get your shirt tied in a knot.

FITZSIMMONS AND ADAMS, This—Is Murder, p. 78. (1941)

<sup>4</sup> He cleaves to me like Alcides' shirt.

BEN JONSON, The Poetaster. Act iii, sc. 1. (1601)
The garment dipped in the blood of the centaur Nessus, which Deianeira sent to Alcides, or Hercules, whose flesh it consumed.

The shirt of Nessus is upon me.

SHAKESPEARE, Antony and Cleopatra, iv, 12, 43. (1606)

Remorse is the very shirt of Nessus.

S. J. WEYMAN, Starvecrow Farm. Ch.32. (1905)

<sup>5</sup> They would throw their shirt into the fire, if it was privy to their real intentions. (Ils jecteroient leur chemise au feu, si elle estoit participante de leurs vraies intentions.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. ii, ch. 17. (1580) Quoting a saying of Metellus Macedonius relative to princes.

My cassock shall not know it; If I thought it did, I'd burn it.

JONSON, Tale of a Tub. Act i, sc. 1. (1633)

The designe is secrett, knowne to the designer onely, whose saith if hee thought his shirt knew it hee would burne it.

WILLIAM CLARKE, Clarke Papers, iii, 12. (1654)
He know my secrets? No; as my Lord Mayor said, "If I thought my shirt knew it, I'd burn it"

SWIFT, Journal to Stella, 30 Nov., 1710.

If my Shirt knew my Design, I'd burn it.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2695. (1732)

<sup>6</sup> He that hath more smocks than shirts at a bucking [washing] had need be a man of good forelooking.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 353. (1678)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6427. (1732) Ray credits the saying to Chaucer, but it has not been found in his works.

<sup>7</sup> Think of the terrible shirt smeared and interwoven with inflammable materials. (Illam tunicam alimentis ignium et inlitam et textam.)

SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xiv, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 64)
Daring deeds that deserved the shirt of torture. (Ausi quod liceat tunica punire molesta.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. viii, l. 235. (c. A. D. 120)
A shirt lined with pitch in which the victims were burnt to death.

Of one, whose naked soul stood clad in love
Like a pale martyr in his shirt of fire.

ALEXANDER SMITH, A Life Drama. Sc. ii, l. 225. (1852) Smith's printer later declared, "We utterly ruined one poet through a ridiculous misprint of 'shirt' for 'sheet.'" But it was not a misprint. Smith had been reading Seneca or Juvenal. See PYCROFT, Ways and Means of Men of Letters.

<sup>8</sup> He is no less than a stuffed man.

SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado About Nothing, i. 1, 58. (1598)

M. Prudhomme est né avec le Christ.

ARTHUR RIMBAUD, Une Saison en Enfer. Ch. 6. (1873) M. Prudhomme is the incarnation of the canting man. "Mr. Stuffed Shirt" is the way Delmore Schwartz renders it. The phrase, however, is later than Rimbaud. It has been attributed to Fay Templeton, who is said to have applied it to a plunger named John W. Gates about 1899.

I have been accused of many things in my time, but never of being a stuffed shirt.

J. D. CARR, Death Turns the Tables, p. 20. (1941)
[He] is a shirt that I'd love to see unstuffed.

DAVID KENT, Jason Burr's First Case, p. 82 (1941)

<sup>9</sup> People . . . hauing no banners, but bloudie shirtes hanged vpon long stauces.

SIR PHILIP SIDNEY, Arcadia, i, vi. (a. 1586)

The bloody shirt of the martyr was exposed in the mosch of Damascus.

EDWARD GIBBON, Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, v, 266. (1788)

[Foucher adds] It is by spreading out the miseries of the workmen, the bloody shirt of some victim, . . . that the people are excited to take arms.

LEWIS CASS, France, Its King, Court and Government, p. 44. (1840) The reference is to Léon Foucher's review of Guizot's translation of SPARKS, Life of Washington.

A diligent attempt is now being made to hide with the "bloody shirt" the appalling wrongs committed by the Republican party.

J. S. REYNOLDS, Reconstruction in South Carolina, p. 304. (1875)

To parade acts of violence and murder perpetrated within the jurisdiction of a carpet-bag government was called, in the flash language of the politicians, waving the bloody shirt, and considered a most effective means of electioneering.

A. S. BLACK, The Electoral Conspiracy. In The North American Review, July, 1877, p. 11. The phrase as applied to American politics, has been attributed to Oliver P. Morton, U.S. Senator 1867-1879. See FARMER, Americanisms, p. 9.

He who chanced to refer to so old and exploded a joke was greeted with the laughter-provoking cry of the "bloody shirt."

ALBION W. TOURGEE, A Fool's Errand. Ch. 38. (1879)

It is a relief to remember that this phrase [waving the bloody shirt] is no invention of our politics. It dates back to Scotland three centuries ago. After a massacre in Glenfruin, not so savage as has stained our annals, two hundred and twenty widows rode on white palfreys to Stirling Tower, bearing each on a spear her husband's bloody shirt.

ROSCOE CONKLING, Speech, in New York, 17 Sept., 1880.

1 He would give away the shirt off his back.

SMOLLETT, Humphry Clinker, 28 Apr., 1771.

2 Tell E. Stanton to keep his under-garmints on. ARTEMUS WARD, in Washington. (1863) Keep your shirt on.

JOHN O'HARA, Appointment in Samarra, p. 291. (1934) In frequent use.

Keep your shirt on, and don't get ahead of yourself.

JAKE FALSTAFF, Jacoby's Corners, p. 142. (1938)

Oh, keep your pants on, honey.

DYSON CARTER, Night of Flame, p. 88. (1943)

3 Sister Susie's sewing shirts for soldiers.

R. P. WESTON. Title of popular song. (1914)

SHIRT NEARER THAN COAT see under SELF.

SHOE

4 It was you who stitched this shoe, and Aristagoras who put it on. (τοῦτο τὸ ὑπόδημα ἔραψας μὲν σύ, ὑπέδησας δὲ Ἀρισταγόρης.)

ARTAPHERNES, to Histiaeus, after the Ionian revolt, in 497 B. C.

It is not for him that fashioneth the shoe, to make the graine of the leather.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 224. (1580)

He that makes the Shoe, can't tan the Leather.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2235. (1732)

5 I should put more to risk if I were in his shoes.

JOHN ADAMS, Familiar Letters, p. 304. (1777)

I wouldn't be in his shoes for his coat.

TIMOTHY SHAY ARTHUR, Ten Nights in a Bar-room. Night iv, p. 74. (1854)

I wish I was in your shoes.

PAYN, Confidential Agent, iii, 130. (1880)

Lots of men would like to be in your shoes.

KAUFMAN AND RYSKIND, Of Thee I Sing. Act i, sc. 3. (1931)

6 As easy as an old shoe.

J. T. BROCKETT, North Country Glossary: Old

Shoe. (1825) See under EASINESS. The usual form of the proverb is, "Old shoes are easiest." See under AGE: OLD THINGS ARE BEST. In contrast to old shoes is the proverb, "Creaking shoes are not paid for."

7 Of shoon and botes, newe and faire,
Loke at the leest thou have a paire.

CHAUCER (?), tr., The Romaunt of the Rose, l. 2265. (c. 1365)

8 My minde could never rest at hoem,
My shoes wear maed of running leather.

THOMAS CHURCHYARD, Chippes, p. 130. (1575) Straying, ranging, . . . wandring up and downe, whose shooes are made of running leather.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Divague. (1611) His shoes be made of running leather.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 159. (1639) This child's shoes are made of running leather.

WILLIAM HONE, Year-Book, col. 1544. (1831)

9 The finest shooe fits not every foot.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 82. (1639)

RAY, English Proverbs, p. 90. (1670)

The fairest looking Shoe may pinch the Foot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4514. (1732)

10 That's another pair of sleeves. (C'est une autre paire de manches.)

COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Manches. (1611)

We'll show 'em another pair of shoes than that.

DICKENS, Great Expectations. Ch. 40. (1861)

"That, sir," replied Mr. Wegg, "is quite another pair of shoes."

DICKENS, Our Mutual Friend. Bk. i, ch. 15 (1865)

You'll find a tiger quite another pair of shoes.

MRS. B. M. CROKER, Village Tales, p. 10. (1895)

That's a different pair of shoes altogether.

J. J. CONNINGTON, No Past is Dead, p. 153

(1942) The English proverb is supposed to be a corruption of the French, "Tout à fait une autre chose" (That's quite another matter).

11 All the reaste mighte blow their nayles, or go to shough the dawe.

THOMAS DRANT, tr., Horace's Satires. Bk. i, sat.

9. (1566) TO SHOE THE GOOSE, see under GOOSE.

12 A great shoe fits not a little foot.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 3. (1633)

CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 138. (1639)

13 'Tis the same to him who wears a shoe, as if the whole earth were covered with leather.

EMERSON, The Conduct of Life: Wealth. (1860)

Quoted as a Persian proverb.

14 If you would have your shoes last, put no nails in 'em.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738.

15 A Mare's Shoe and a Horse's Shoe are both alike.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 318. (1732)

Better cut the Shoe, than pinch the Foot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 887.

If your Shoe pinch you, give it to your Man.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2807.

You take more Care of your Shoe, than Foot.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6004. From the Latin, "De calceo sollicitus, et pedem nihil curans" (Concerned about the shoe, and caring nothing about the foot).

<sup>1</sup> He ought to stop his eares . . . and to walke amongst them (as the saying is) shood amongst the thornes.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, i, 20. (1581) Pettie, tr.

While thy shoe is on thy foot, tread upon the thorns.

JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 275. (1678)

<sup>2</sup> Nowe for good lucke, cast an olde shoe after mee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 9. (1546) One should haue throwne an old shoo after thee. BRATHWAIT, Natures Embassie, p. 204. (1621) I shall need nothing now but an old shoe cast after me.

HOWARD, The Surprisal. Act iii, sc. 7. (1665) And, wheresoe'er thou move, good luck Shall fling her old shoe after.

TENNYSON, Will Waterproof's Lyrical Monologue. (1842)

Rice for gude luck, and bauchles [old shoes] for bonnie bairns. Refers to the custom of throwing rice and old shoes after a newly married couple.

CHEVIOT, Scottish Proverbs, p. 285. (1896) See also under LUCK.

<sup>3</sup> Folke say of olde, the shoe will holde with the sole.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

CAMDEN, Remains, p. 333; RAY, p. 142.

I will stick as close to thee, as the soale doth to the shoe.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 308. (1580) Who should hold with the sole but the shoe?

UNKNOWN, Pedlers Prophecie, l. 730. (1595) The sole holdeth with the upper Leather.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4759. (1732)

<sup>4</sup> While the fote warmith, the sho harmith.

HILLS, Common-Place Book, p. 128. (c. 1530) Long liying warme in bed is holsome (quoth shee). While the leg warmeth, the boote harmeth (quoth hee).

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546) While the leg warmeth, the boot harmeth.

FRANCIS BACON, Promus. No. 385. (c. 1594) RAY, p. 113; FULLER, No. 6309.

<sup>5</sup> No woman . . . But swich oon as hath trode his shoo amis.

HOCCEVE, Minor Poems, xxiv, 66. (c. 1422) Where the king had married her for a mayde, he founde that she had troden her showe awrye.

JOHN DAUS, tr., Sleidanus Commentaries, p. 187. (1560)

My wife doth euer tread his shooe a wry.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Cent. vi, No. 21. (1562)

She hath neuer trode her foot awry.

SHARPHAM, Cupid's Whirligig. Act iv. (1616)

A foolish female nice and shy, That never yet trod shooe awry.

D'URFEY, Richmond Heiress. Act ii, sc. 2. (1639)

To tread a shoe awry: to make a lapse from virtue.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1678)

"To tread one's shoes straight," to behave with propriety, to be circumspect in our conduct.

CARR, Dialect of Craven: Shoe. (1828)

<sup>6</sup> For still when all is said the rule stands fast That each man's shoe be made on his own last. (Metiri se quemque suo modulo ac pede verum est.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. 7, l. 98. (20 B. C.) Conington, tr. The usual form of the Latin proverb, as given by HENDERSON, Latin Proverbs, p. 280, is, "Non omnis calceus convenit cuilibet pedi" (The same shoe does not fit every foot).

To each foot its own shoe. (À chaque pied son soulier.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. iii, ch. 13. (1595) Another French form is, "On ne chausse pas tout pied avec un même soulier" (One doesn't shoe every foot with the same shoe.) Euery shooe is not fit for euery foote.

BARNABY RICH, Ladies Looking Glasse, p. 21. (1616)

All feet tread not in one shoe.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. (1640)

Every shoe fits not every foot.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 142. (1670) KELLY, p. 96; FULLER, No. 1460.

To make one shoe serve for all feet.

WILLIAM WALKER, Paroemiologia, p. 47. (1672) All shoes fit not all feet.

THOMAS D'URFEY, Don Quixote. Pt. iii, act v, sc. 2. (1696)

<sup>7</sup> A black shoe makes a merry heart.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 18. (1659) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 216. (1670)

<sup>8</sup> The boot will be on the other foot.

MICHAEL INNES, Appleby on Ararat, p. 148. (1941)

The shoe is on the other foot.

LENORE OFFORD, Clues to Burn, p. 9. (1942)

<sup>9</sup> Better wear shoon than sheets. Sick men wear sheets and sound men shoes.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 67. (1721) Better wear out Shoes than Sheets.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 940. (1732)

<sup>10</sup> Do not let the shoe be too large for the foot. (μὴδὲ ὑπὲρ τὸν πόδα ἔστω τὸ ὑπόδημα.)

LUCIAN, Essays in Portraiture Defended. Sec. 10. (c. A. D. 170) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, v, 46, with the Latin, "Ne ultra pedem calceus."

And when too short the modish shoes are worn, You'll judge the seasons by your shooting corn.

JOHN GAY, Trivia. Bk. i, l. 33. (1726)

When you buy shoes, measure your feet.

H. H. HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 575. (1937)

<sup>1</sup>
As arrant a villaine, as euer trode vpon a shooe of leather.

JAMES MABBE, tr., Guzman de Alfarache, ii, 163. (1622) See under VILLAIN.

As fine Babes as ever trod in Shoe of Leather.

SAMUEL FOOTE, Taste, i, 9. (1752)

<sup>2</sup>
Thou lookest after deed mens shoes.

JEHAN PALSCRAVE, Lesclarissement de la Langue Françoise, p. 644. (1530)

Who waitth for dead men shoen, shall go long barefoote.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

Cited by Ray and Trench. From the French, "Qui attend les souliers d'un mort risque d'aller pieds nus."

He should have iron shoon who byds his neighbors dead.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 44. (c. 1595)

It were no hoping after dead mens shooes, for both vpper-leather and soles would bee worn out to nothing.

UNKNOWN, Meg of Herefordshire, p. 12. (1609)

The teeth have time to grow long while we wait for the death of someone. (L'on a le temps d'avoir les dents longues, lorsqu'on attend, pour vivre, le trépas de quelqu'un.)

MOLIÈRE, Le Médecin Malgré Lui. Act ii, sc. 1, l. 61. (1666)

He goes long barefoot that wears dead mens shoon.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 148. (1721)

It's ill waiting for dead folk's shoon.

WALTER SCOTT, Guy Mannering. Ch. 37. (1815)

It is ill standing in dead men's shoes.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 5. (1850)

It's ill waiting for dead men's shoes.

E. V. LUCAS, London Lavender Ch. iv (1912)

<sup>3</sup>
No one of you can tell me where my shoe pinches me. (ἀλλ' οὐκ ἂν εἰδελή τις ὑμῶν καθ' ὃ τὴ θλίβεται μέρος οὐδὲς ποῦς.)

PLUTARCH, Lives: Aemilius Paulus. Ch. v, sec. 2. (c. A. D. 110) Relating the anecdote of the Roman who, when his friends protested against his divorcing his wife, asking him if she was not beautiful, discreet and fruitful, took off his shoe and held it out to them asking, "Is it not handsome? Is it not new? But none of you can tell where it pinches me." Referred to also in Moralia, 14:A: D'ISRAELI, Curiosities of Literature: Philosophy of Proverbs. One of the few proverbs whose origin is convincingly explained.

Nobody knows better than I where my shoe pinches me. (Nemo scit praeter me ubi me soccus premat.)

ST. JEROME (Hieronymus), Adversus Jovinian, i, 48. (A. D. 393)

I wot best wher wringeth me my sho.

CHAUCER, The Marchantes Tale, l. 309. (c. 1388)

Thow knawis best quhair bindis the thi scho.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, Works, p 356. (c. 1510)

That is not where the shoe pinches. (Ce n'est là où me deult.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 28. (1545)

What cloke for the rayne so euer ye bryng mee, My selfe can tell best, where my shooe doth wryng mee.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

I wot where my awn shoe bindes me.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 66. (c. 1595)

Each knows best where the shoe pinches him. (Cada uno sabe donde la aprieta el zapato.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. i, ch. 32. (1605)

A proverb in many languages. The French say, "Chacun sent où le soulier le blesse"; the Germans, "Keiner weiss wo dem Andern der Schuh drückt"; the Italians, "Nessun sente da che parte preme la scarpa, se non chi se la calza."

Ah little do you know where my shoo wrings.

SAMUEL ROWLANDS, A Whole Crew of Kind Gossips (Hunt Cl.), p. 4. (1609)

No man can tell where his shoee wrings him, but hee that weares it.

JOHN TAYLOR, Crabtree Lectures, p. 96. (1639)

The wearer knows where the shoe wrings.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 493. (1640)

Those who wear the shoe know best where it pinches.

SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 16. (1869)

There is nothing in the outward appearance of a shoe to show where it pinches.

Meditations in Wall Street, p. 45. (1940)

<sup>4</sup>
It maye easily be perceaued where the shoe wryngeth them.

MILES COVERDALE, tr., The Christen State of Matrymonye, sig. B5. (1541)

Others may guess where the shoee wringes, besides him that weares it.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 415. (1580)

I know where it is that your shoe wrings you.

DRYDEN, Martin-Mar-All. Act iv, sc. 1. (1668)

<sup>5</sup>
In the shoemakers stocks. In shoes too small.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 347. (1678)

Shoemakers-stocks, pincht with strait Shoes.

B.E., Dictionary of Canting Crew. (c. 1700)

<sup>6</sup>
Pro.: For he was more than over shoes in love.

Val.: 'Tis true; for you are over boots in love.

SHAKESPEARE, The Two Gentlemen of Verona, i, 1, 24. (1594)

Over shoes, over boots.

NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)

Ouer-shooes, ouer-bootes, now goe deeper euen.

SHARPHAM, Cupid's Whirligig. Act ii. (1616)

The faction was engaged, over shoes, over boots.

ROGER NORTH, Examen, p. 218. (1740)

I hae taen sae muckle concern wi' your affairs already, that it maun e'en be ower shoon ower boots wi' me now.

WALTER SCOTT, Rob Roy. Ch. 26. (1818)

Considering how far he had gone and how he would be laughed at if he backed out, he determined to let it be "over shoes over boots."

R. S. SURTEES, Handley Cross. Ch. 14. (1854)

OVER HEAD AND EARS, see under HEAD.

<sup>1</sup> If the shoe fits anyone here, he can wear it.
JULIAN SHORE, Rattle His Bones, p. 9. (1941)
See also under CAP.

<sup>2</sup> The shoe knows whether the stocking has holes.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 4. (1853) Cited as from "a Creole source."

<sup>3</sup> One shoe oft and one shoe on. (Un pied chaussé et l'autre non.)

DE TRÉVOUX, Dictionnaire Universel: Pied. (1771) Of a man who has departed in great haste.

Tip at the toe, live to see woe;
Wear at the side, live to be a bride; ~
Wear at the ball, live to spend all;
Wear at the heel, live to save a deal.

J. T. VARDEN, East Anglian Handbook, p. 115. (1885) An old rhyme "teaching the significance of the wear of shoes."

<sup>4</sup> He could draw to a shoe-string, as the saying went, and obtain a tan-yard!

HENRY WATTERSON, Oddities of Southern Life. See Century Magazine, Apr., 1882, p. 884/2.

He speculated "on a shoe-string."

A. P. VALDES, The Origin of Thought, Ch. 11. (1904)

How do we begin? On a shoe-string.

PERCIVAL WILDE, Inquest, p. 30. (1940)

They had started on a shoestring.

DAVID DODGE, Death and Taxes, p. 7. (1941)
With little or no money.

<sup>5</sup> Jack soon put on his coat of darkness, and his shoes of swiftness.

UNKNOWN, Jack and the Giants. (1787)

Punishment this day hitches . . . after Crime, with frightful shoes-of-swiftness!

CARLYLE, The French Revolution. Vol. i, bk. v, ch. 5. (1837)

<sup>6</sup> "Too big for one's shoon," used of a person whose notions are too high for his station, a conceited person.

UNKNOWN, South Chester Glossary: Shoe. (1887)

TO DIE IN ONE'S SHOES, see under HANGING.

TO KISS ONE'S SHOE, see under SERVILITY.

SHOEMAKER

<sup>7</sup> A shoemaker is not a good craftsman who puts big shoes on a small foot. (οὐδὲ σκυτοτόμον εἶναι σπουδαῖον, δὲ μικρῷ ποδὶ ὑποδήματα μεγάλα περιτίθαι.)

AGESILAUS THE GREAT, when some one praised an orator for his ability in making much of small matters. (c. 250 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia. Sec. 208C.

<sup>8</sup> An hale cobbler is a better man than a sick king.

BICKERSTAFFE, Love in a Village, i, 5. (1763)

<sup>9</sup> A shoemaker's son is a Prince born.

DELONEY, The Gentle Craft. Ch. 9. (c. 1597)

Shoemakers sonnes were princes borne.

PRICE, Pepysian Garland, p. 445. (1637)

<sup>10</sup> Mock not a cobbler for his black thumbs.

THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State. Bk. iii, ch.

2. (1642) "Never flout any for his profession, if honest, though poor and painful," Fuller warns.

The higher the tree, the sweeter the plumb;

The better the shooe, the blacker the thumb.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 17. (1659)

The higher the plum-tree, the riper the plum;

The richer the cobler, the blacker the thumb.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 210. (1670)

FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 6420. (1732)

<sup>11</sup> Marry, because you have drunk with the King, And the King hath so graciously pledg'd you, You shall no more be call'd Shoemakers.

But you and yours to the worlds ende,

Shall be call'd the Trade of the Gentle Craft

ROBERT GREENE, George-a-Greene, F 4 b. (a 1592) Edward IV of England (1442-1483) is the king referred to. Legend has it that he fell in one day with a party of shoemakers, drank with them, and renamed them "Followers of the gentle craft." But the term probably originated in the much older legend that St. Crispin, after he left Rome for Soissons (A.D. 303) to preach Christianity, supported himself wholly by making and mending shoes. He is therefore the patron saint of shoemakers, and his day is October 25, the day of the battle of Agincourt. "This day is call'd the feast of Crispian," etc.—Henry V, iv, 3, 40—perhaps the most stirring lines that Shakespeare ever wrote.

Ile . . . fall to my old trade of the gentle craft the cobler.

ROBERT WILSON, Coblers Prophecie, l. 1677 (1594)

Yonder's a brother of the gentle craft; if he bear not

Saint Hugh's bones [his tools], I'll forfeit my bones.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Shomaker's Holiday Act iii, sc. 3. (1600) In the following act, Dekker has, "Shoomaker, have you . . . good Saint-Hughs bones to smooth up your work?" Saint Hugh of Avalon and Lincoln.

When young, of Crispin's gentle craft by trade

EDWARD WARD, Grand Rebellion, iii, 464. (1711)

Hans Sachs, the cobbler-poet, laureate of the gentle craft.

H. W. LONGFELLOW, Nuremberg. (1844)

<sup>12</sup> Who is wurs shod than the shoemakers wyfe. With shops full of newe shoes all hir lyfe?

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

WILSON, Arte of Rhetorique, p. 119. (1560)

When we see a man ill-shod, we say it is no wonder, if he happens to be a shoemaker. (Quand nous voyons un homme mal chaussé, nous di-sons que ce n'est pas merveille, s'il est chaussetier.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 24. (1580) The French proverbial form is, "Les cordonniers sont toujours les plus mal chaussés."

The Sowter's wife is worst shod.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 94. (c. 1595) Him that makes shoes goes barefoot himself.

ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy: Democritus to the Reader. (1621)

Who goes more bare than the shoemaker's wife and the smith's mare?

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 202. (1678) No man goes worse shod than the shoemaker.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Remains, ii, 165. (a. 1680)

The shoemaker's wife often goes in ragged shoes.

RICHARD GRAVES, The Spiritual Quixote. Bk. iii, ch. 2. (1772)

The smith's mare and the shoemaker's bairns are aye the worst shod.

SAMUEL SMILES, Life of a Scotch Naturalist, Thomas Edward, p. 380. (1876)

She went to sleep hungry, although her husband is a baker.

BURCKHARDT, Arabic Proverbs. No. 148. (1817) The woman who sells fans often shades her eyes with her hands.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 359. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

1 Like a lame cobbler, he sits around the house all day. (Quasi claudus sutor domi sedet totos dies.)

PLAUTUS, Aulularia, l. 73. (c. 210 B. C.)

2 They that cobble and clout shall have work when others go without.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 72. (1670)

3 I am but . . . a cobbler . . . All that I live by is with the awl.

SHAKESPEARE, Julius Caesar, i, 1, 11. (1598)

The cobbler deals with all [awl].

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 32. (1639) On p. 71, "Without all the cobbler's nobody"

Six awls make a shoemaker.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 216. (1670)

II—Shoemaker, Stick to your Last

4 You have undertaken to speak of matters which you have never learned. (ὁ μεμάθηκας ἀρξαμένου λαλεῖν.)

APELLES, when Megabyzus began to talk of line and chiaroscuro. (c. 325 B. C.) See PLUTARCH, Moralia. Secs. 58E, 472A Zeuxis, according to AELIAN, Varia Historia, ii, 2. The most famous anecdote about Apelles is that of his encounter with the shoemaker. The great painter was in the habit of hanging his pictures where they could be seen by the passers-by and listening to their comments, without their suspecting his identity. One day a shoemaker pointed out that one of the shoes in a certain picture lacked a latchet, and Apelles, recognizing the fault, painted a latchet in. Next day the cobbler passed again, and when he perceived that the shoe had been repainted, he became so proud of his success as a critic that he began to find fault with the painting of the thigh, whereupon Apelles, who was concealed behind the painting, called out, "Shoemaker, don't go above your last!" Lucian attributes the saying to Phidias.

The shoemaker should not go beyond his last. (Ne supra crepidam sutor iudicaret.)

PLINY, Naturalis Historia. Bk. xxxv, sec. 85.

(A. D. 77) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, i, vi, 16, in a shorter form, "Ne sutor ultra crepidam," and with the comment, "Men should not attempt what they are not qualified by education or natural aptitude to perform, nor should they discourse on matters they do not understand." Included by TAVERNER in his Translations from Erasmus, fo. 17, with the rendering, "Let not the shoemaker go beyond his shoe."

The shoemaker must not go above his latchet, nor the hedger meddle with any thing but his bil.

JOHN LYLY, The Anatomy of Wit: The Epistle Dedicatorie, p. 203. (1580)

The Shoemaker ought not to presume about the Pantople.

ARTHUR GOLDING, tr., Mornay's Christian Religion, p. 155. (1587)

It is written that the shoemaker should meddle with his yard, and the tailor with his bil.

SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, i, 2, 40. (1595)

Shoemaker, you goe a little beyond your last

THOMAS HEYWOOD, If You Know Not Me (1605)

A Shoe-maker must not go beyond his Last.

OSWALD DYKES, English Proverbs, p. 153. (1709)

Let not the Cobler go beyond his last.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 242. (1721)

The French say, "Cordonnier, soigne tes souliers."

5 Let each man exercise the art he knows. (ἑρδοι τις ἢν ἑκαστος εἰδελὴ τέχνην.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Wasps, l. 1431. (422 B. C.)

"Art" in the sense of skill or training in a craft or trade. Aristophanes is telling the story of a man of Sybaris who was thrown from his carriage and cracked his skull because he did not know how to drive, and the line given above was the comment of a bystander.

It is a true saying, "Do that which you know how to do." (O illud verum, ἑρδοι τις.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. v, epis. 10. (51 B. C.)

The art which each man knows, in that let him employ himself. (Quam quisque norit artem, in hac se exerceat.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum. Bk. i, ch. 18, sec. 41. (45 B. C.) Quoted as "the well-known Greek saying." Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 82.

Let each man pass his days in that wherein his skill is greatest. (Qua pote quisque, in ea conterat arte diem.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. ii, eleg. 1, l. 46. (c. 24 B. C.)

Every one ought to stick to his trade. (Chacun à son métier doit toujours s'attacher.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. v, fab. 8. (1668) The Spanish form is, "Cada qual hablé en loque dabe" (Let every one talk of what he understands).

1 Do you not perceive that you are speaking beyond your hammer? (Non sentis, te ultra malleum loqui?)

ATHENAEUS, Deipnosophistai. (c. A.D. 200) To a blacksmith criticising music.

2 Remember to keep yourself, cobbler, in your own little skin. (Memento in pellicula, cerdo, tenere tua.)

MARTIAL, Epigrams. Bk. iii, epig. 16, l. 6. (c. A.D. 85) Another way of saying, "Cobbler, stick to your last," with an allusion to the ass in the lion's skin. The proverbial form is, "Infra tuam pelliculam te contine." It is sometimes rendered, "Cobbler, stick to your leather," or "Live according to your means."

It was a law among the Persians, that the Musitian should not judge of the Painter, nor any one meddle in that handy craft, where-in hee was not expert.

JOHN LILLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 421. (1580)

3 The horse to the chariot, the ox to the plow. (ἵπ' ἀρμασιν ἵππος, ὕν δ' ἀρότρῳ βοῦς.)

PINDAR, Olympian Odes. (c. 460 B.C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, ii, 82, who gives the Latin, "Equus in quadrigis, in aratro bos."

The gunner to his linstock, and the steersman to the helm.

SMOLLETT, Roderick Random. Ch. 42. (1748)

There is sound sense in the adage, "The cobbler to his last and the gunner to his linstock."

MAXWELL, Life of W. H. Smith, p. 262. (1894) Fritterman, to thy fritters.

F. E. HULM, Proverb Lore, p. 106. (1902) Another variant is, "Let every tailor stick to his goose."

SHOOTING

4 He shootes lyke a gentle man fayre and far off.

ROGER ASCHAM, Toxophilus, p. 150. (1545)

That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper. SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iv, 6, 87. (1605)

"To shoot like a crow-keeper" became a proverb. BARRINGTON, Archery in England. (1785)

5 Who, if he shoots at a mark all day long, will not occasionally hit it? (Quis est enim, qui totum diem iaculans non aliquando colliniet?)

CICERO, De Divinatione. Bk. ii, ch. 59, sec. 121. (44 B.C.) Cicero is explaining why prophets sometimes prophesy aright.

He made the proverbe true, which saieth; he that shoteth oft, at the last shal hit the mark.

RALPH ROBINSON, tr., More's Utopia (Arber), p. 52. (1551)

He that's always shooting, must sometimes hit. THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2276. (1732)

6 To shoot at a pigeon and kill a crow.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 2. (1639)

But of all the shots, he's worst in the art

Who shoots at a pigeon and kills a crow.

GEORGE COLMAN, JR., Inkle and Yarico. Act iii, sc. 1. (1787)

A law is a gun, which if it misses a pigeon always kills a crow.

LORD LYTTON, Paul Clifford, p. 445. (1830)

Perhaps they are shooting at a pigeon in order to hit the crow.

BLACKMORE, Cradock Nowell. Ch. 27. (1866)

7 Shooting with a silver gun is a saying among game-eaters. That is to say, purchasing the game.

WILLIAM COBBETT, Rural Rides, 1 Aug., 1823.

8 By the rude bridge that arched the flood,
Their flag to April's breeze unfurled,

Here once the embattled farmers stood,

And fired the shot heard round the world.

EMERSON, Hymn: Sung at the Completion of the Concord Monument (July 4, 1837).

9 Every Man will shoot at the Enemy, but few will gather the Shafts.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1436. (1732)

10 Far shooting never killed bird.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 407. (1640)

He was going too fast by a long shot.

J. R. BARTLETT, Americanisms, p. 215. (1848)

I hain't dead yit, not by a long shot.

J. C. HARRIS, A Conscript's Christmas. Century Mag., Dec., 1890, p. 290/1.

A long shot, Watson, a very long shot.

CONAN DOYLE, Silver Blaze. (1894)

Willing to try a long shot if necessary.

CHRISTIE, Cards on the Table. Ch. 8. (1936)

11 And whom ye see out of the waie, or shoote wyde,

Ouer shoote not your selfe any syde to hyde

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 3. (1546)

He shooteth wyde.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Epigrams. No. 184. (1562)

You are merry, sir, and shoot wide o' the mark.

THOMAS D'URFEY, The Virtuous Wife. Act i. (1680) See also under MARK.

12 Short shootyng leeseth your game.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 9. (1546)

Lett not short shooting loose yor game. aime straight, draw home. risoluto per tutto.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Marginalia, p. 147. (c. 1580)

Short shooting loseth the game.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 142. (1670)

13 He shooteth well that hits the mark.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 20. (1659)

TO HIT THE MARK, see under MARK.

He that always shoots aright forfeits his arrow
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 34.

<sup>1</sup> A parting shot. An effective remark that one makes as one is departing. A folk-etymologizing of Parthian shot; Parthian horsemen used to "discharge their missiles backward while in real or pretended flight." O.E.D.

ERIC PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: Parting. (1941) A literary explanation.

<sup>2</sup> Don't shoot until you can see the whites of their eyes.

GENERAL ISRAEL PUTNAM, to the American troops at the Battle of Bunker Hill, 17 June, 1775. Sometimes attributed to Gen. Joseph Warren, but see FROTHINGHAM, History of the Siege of Boston, p. 140, footnote.

Don't fire until you see the slant of their eyes. LIEUT. MORTIMER K. SMITH, Command, to his men of the 405th Squadron, 38th Bomber Group, July, 1943.

<sup>3</sup> Shoot, if you must, this old gray head.

J. G. WHITTIER, Barbara Frietchie. (1864)

Please do not shoot the pianist. He is doing his best.

OSCAR WILDE, telling of a notice seen by him in a Western bar-room during his American tour, in a lecture delivered in 1883

<sup>4</sup> Then he sheete a-nothir bolt.

UNKNOWN, Merlin, xi, 167. (c. 1450)

Patience till time you see me shoot my bolt.

RICHARD STANYHURST, Description of Ireland Bk. i, ch. 2. (1536)

He hath shot his trie, . . . done the most he can.

RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Pouvoir. (1611)

"He has shot his wad," he has lost his money, a figure from the game of dice.

You have shot your bolt.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

You have done all you can, you are finished.

The implement shot from the cross-bow is called . . . by the English a bolt. Hence the saying, "I have shot my bolt."

BRADY, Varieties of Literature, p. 21. (1826)

A FOOL'S BOLT IS SOON SHOT, see under FOOL.

SHOP

<sup>5</sup> Keep thy shoppe, and thy shoppe will keepe thee.

CHAPMAN AND MARSTON, Eastward Hoe. Act i, sc. 1. (1605) FRANKLIN, Poor Richard, 1735.

Sir William Turner, that valuable citizen, has left behind him a most excellent rule, . . . "Keep your shop, and your shop will keep you."

"HEZEKIAH THRIPT," Spectator. No. 509. (1712)

I would earnestly recommend this adage to every mechanic in London, "Keep your shop, and your shop will keep you."

OLIVER GOLDSMITH, The Bee. No. 7. (1759)

Richardson, like a man of sense, kept his shop; and his shop kept him.

MACAULAY, Essays: Boswell's Johnson. (1841)

"Shop!" said Kipps. "That's right. Keep a shop and the shop'll keep you."

H. G. WELLS, Kipps. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1905)

I keep my shop but my shop doth not keep me.

STEPHEN VINCENT BENÉT, Western Star. Bk. i, l. 107. (1943)

<sup>6</sup> What does he want? . . . money? meat? drink? He's come to the wrong shop for that.

DICKENS, Sketches by Boz: The Drunkard's Death. (1837)

They have come to the right shop.

DICKENS, Nicholas Nickleby. Ch. 4. (1838)

<sup>7</sup> To open a shop is easy, to keep it open is difficult. (Kai tien yung yi shou tien nan.)

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 192. (1872)

Swift water is a good place to catch fish.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 180. Set up your shop in a busy street.

<sup>8</sup> A small Shop may have a good Trade.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 411. (1732)

<sup>9</sup> He that hath not the craft, let him shut up shop.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 859. (1640)

A man without a smiling face must not open a shop.

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, 179. (1875)

<sup>10</sup> To go sailing all over the shop.

KIPLING, Many Inventions, p. 109. (1893)

<sup>11</sup> Provided such double dealings did not smell too much of the shop.

MARY MARTHA SHERWOOD, Henry Milner. Bk. iii, ch. 17. (1831)

To use a vulgar image, it smells of the shop.

PAYN, Confidential Agent, ii, 207. (1880)

<sup>12</sup> Now the wares are gone, we may shut up shop.

WEBSTER, The White Devil. Act v, sc. 4. (1612)

When the wares be gone, shut up the shop windows.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 119. (1639)

RAY, p. 153; FULLER, No. 5609.

<sup>13</sup> I cannot sit still, James, and hear you abuse the shopocracy.

JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae. No. 39. (1828)

To TALK SHOP, see under TALK.

SHORE

<sup>14</sup> Ye leane to the wrong shore.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)

<sup>15</sup> Hug the shore; let others keep to the deep. (Litus ama; . . . altum alii teneant.)

VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. v, l. 163. (19 B.C.) "Iucundissima navigatio iuxta terram" (The pleasantest sailing is near the shore) is a Latin proverb. The Germans say, "Neben einem Schiffe ist gut schwimmen" (Near your ship it is wise to swim).

Little boats must keep near shore.

Larger ships may venture more.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 112. (1678)

Cited by FULLER, No. 3251; FRANKLIN, 1751.

SHORT

- <sup>1</sup> Hie thee, and make it shorte.
WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Eneydos, xx, 73. (1490)
- <sup>2</sup> This is the short and pleyn.
CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Knights Tale, l. 233. (c. 1386)
The Englysh prouerbe is thus pronounced,
Short and swete.
RICHARD TAVERNER, tr., Erasmus' Adagia, fo. 68. (1539)
Shorte and sweete if I were judge.
THOMAS LODGE, Defence of Plays, p. 28. (1580)
Dear Sir, be short and sweet.
JOHN FLETCHER, The Scornful Lady. Act. ii, sc. 1. (c. 1612)
Both short and sweet some say is best.
THOMAS MIDDLETON, The Spanish Gipsie. Act iv, sc. 3. (1623)
Better short and sweet than long and lax.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 59. (1721)
Short and sweet, like a donkey's gallop.
G. F. NORTALL, Folk-Phrases of Four Counties, p. 22. (1894)
Short and sweet.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4154. (1732)
Short and sweet like an ass's gallop, as the saying is.
F. K. PURDON, The Folk of Furry Farm. Ch. 8. (1914)
- <sup>3</sup> Good things are twice as good when they are short.
BALTASAR GRACIAN, Art of Worldly Wisdom, cv. (1647)
- <sup>4</sup> All things that is sharpe is short.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 2. (1546)
See also under PAIN.
Short but sharp.
THOMAS FULLER, The Church-History of Britain. Bk. ix, sec. 5. (1655)
I see a way—short and sharp.
PHILLPOTTS, Yellow Sands. Act iii. (1926)
- <sup>5</sup> Always take the short cut, for that is the way of nature. (ἐπὶ τὴν σύντομον δὲ τρέχει σύντομος δὲ ἡ κατὰ φύσιν.)
MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 51. (c. A. D. 174)
Outstripping the enemy by shortest cuts.
EDMUND BOLTON, tr., Florus, p. 169. (1618)
If there was a short cut, they should not part company.
MADAME D'ARBLAY, Camilla, i, 309. (1796)
He "knew the city," as we say of yore,
And for short cuts and turns, was nobody knew more.
KEATS, Cap and Bells. St. 23. (1820)
A sure shortcut to everything you want.
KIPLING, Light that Failed. Ch. 7. (1891) See also under CUT.
- <sup>6</sup> This is the short and the long of it.
SHAKESPEARE, The Merry Wives of Windsor, ii, 2, 60. (1601) See under LONG.

SHOULDER

- <sup>7</sup> Like him in Aesop . . . he whipt his horses withal, and put his shoulder to the wheel.
BURTON, Anatomy of Melancholy, ii, i, 2. (1621)
Lay your shoulder to the wheel and prick your oxen.
L'ESTRANGE, Fables, ccxvi, 213. (1692)
We must all put our shoulders to the work.
MADAME D'ARBLAY, Diary, June, 1792.
Where you might have been, if I hadn't put my shoulder to the wheel.
H. J. SMITH, Mrs. Bumpstead-Leigh. Act i. (1911) If I hadn't gone vigorously to work.
- <sup>8</sup> Par dessus l'espaule, ouer the shoulder, or the wrong way; hence, Riche, ou vertueux, par dessus l'espaule, signifies a verie beggar, or an arrant knave.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Espaul. (1611)
I have gott it ore the left shoulder.
JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 17. (1659)
To get over the shoulders.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 177. (1670)
He gains over the left shoulder; i. e. his gain is mischief.
ROBERTSON, Phraseologia, p. 655. (1681)
- <sup>9</sup> I have good broad shoulders. I can bear all the calumnies that you can load me with.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 196. (1721)
- <sup>10</sup> Give me a chap that hits out straight from the shoulder.
READE, Never Too Late to Mend. Ch. 15. (1856)
- <sup>11</sup> The Countess's dislike dinna gang farther at first than just showing o' the cauld shouter.
SCOTT, The Antiquary. Ch. 33. (1816)
I must tip him the cold shoulder, or he will be pestering me eternally.
SCOTT, St. Ronan's Well. Ch. 30. (1824)
He gives me the cold shoulder on this very matter.
DICKENS, Old Curiosity Shop. Ch. 66. (1840)
[She] got to dislike me at last and show me the cold shoulder.
THACKERAY, Lovel the Widower. Ch. 1. (1860)
A proverb derived from the medieval custom of serving honored guests with hot-meat dishes, and with a cold shoulder of beef or mutton when they had outstayed their welcome.
- <sup>12</sup> Both the horses & men met shoulder to shoulder.
SIDNEY, Arcadia, iii, 293. (a. 1586)
We are labouring shoulder to shoulder.
AUGUSTUS JESSOP, The Coming of the Friars, iii, 118. (1889)
- <sup>13</sup> The peddler had somewhat "overleaped his shoulders," as they phrase it.
W. G. SIMMS, Guy Rivers, ii, 102. (1834) Out-smarted himself.
- <sup>14</sup> She had rubbed shoulders with the great.
THACKERAY, Book of Snobs. Ch. 25. (1848)

SHOUTING

- <sup>1</sup>
It's all over but the shouting.
C. J. APPERLEY, The Life of a Sportsman. Ch. 16. (1842)
The Englishman would say the back of a job was broken, or "All is over but the shouting."
J. L. KIPLING, Man and Beast, p. 226. (1891)
It's all over except the shouting.
H. C. BAILEY, Meet Mr. Fortune, p. 352. (1942)
- <sup>2</sup>
Avoid shouting in conversation or in play.
(Absit clamor in colloquio, aut lusu.)
ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, ix, 37. (1523)
- <sup>3</sup>
Thrice shouted he a shout as big as his head could hold. (τρίς μὲν ἔπειτ' ἤρυσεν ὅσον κεφαλῇ χάδε φωτός.)
HOMER, Iliad. Bk. xi, l. 462. (c. 850 B.C.) Precursor of the French, "crier à pleine tête."
They sent their shout to the stars. (Clamorem ad sidera mittunt.)
STATIUS, Thebaid. Bk. xii, l. 521. (c. A.D. 92)
- <sup>4</sup>
Now you're shouting.
W. D. HOWELLS, The Quality of Mercy, p. 420. (1892) Now you're speaking to the purpose.

SHREW

- <sup>5</sup>
A shrew profitable may serve a man reasonable.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains, p. 317. (1605)
A shrew profitable is good for a man reasonable.
BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)
A profitable shrew may well content a reasonable man.
THOMAS FULLER, Worthies (1840), iii, 54. (1662)
- <sup>6</sup>
This is the shrew Shakespeare drew. Every woman is a potential shrew.
JAMES HUNEKER, Painted Veils, p. 246. (1920)
- <sup>7</sup>
And when all shrews have dind,
Chaunge from foule weather to faire is oft enclind.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 13. (1546)
It will be fair weather when the shrews have dined.
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 243. (1678)
- <sup>8</sup>
Every man can rule a shrewe, saue he that hath her.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 6. (1546)
Every man, as the saying is, can tame a shrew, but he that hath her.
ROBERT BURTON, The Anatomy of Melancholy. Pt. ii, sec. ii, mem. vi, subs. 1. (1621)
Every man can guide an ill wife, but he that has her.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 92. (1721)
Every man can tame a Shrew, but he that has her.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1444. (1732)
- <sup>9</sup>
There is but one shrewde wyfe in the worlde, but . . . euery man weneth he hath her.
SIR THOMAS MORE, Works, p. 233/1. (1528)

Howbeit (as I haue heard say) there is but one shrew in all the world, but euery man thinketh he hath yt one.

COGAN, Hauen of Health, p. 252. (1588)
A shrew in the kitchen, a saint in the Church.
GEORGE PUTTENHAM, Arte of English Poesie, iii, 15. (1589) Also attributed to Lord Lumley.

<sup>10</sup>
This proverbe looke in mind ye keepe,
As good a shrew is as a sheepe,
For you to take to wive.
THOMAS TUSSEY, Five Hundreth Pointes of Good Husbandrie: Dialogue Betweene Two Bachelers. (1573) Sheep and shrew were often contrasted proverbially as types of wives of opposite characters.

It is an olde saying, one shrew is worth two sheep.
GEORGE GASCOIGNE, The Glasse of Government. Act iii, sc. 1. (1575)

Although the virgin was somewhat shrewishe at the first, yet in time she myght become a sheepe.
JOHN LVLV, Euphues (Arber), p. 472. (1580)

'Tis better to be a shrew, sir, than a sheep.
UNKNOWN, Grim the Collier. Act ii. (c. 1600)
It is better to marry a Shrew than a Sheep.

JAMES HOWELL, Letters (1650), i, 10. (1645)
Better be a Shrew than a Sheep.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 873. (1732)
A shrew is better than a slut.

C. H. SPURGEON, John Ploughman, p. 89. (1880)

SHRUG

<sup>11</sup>
Ile giue him the Neapolitan shrug.
THOMAS NASHE, The Unfortunate Traveller, p. 69. (1594) "A common prouerbe," says Nashe, "when one intends to play the villainne."

He answered with a Spanish shrug.
FYNES MORYSON, An Itinerary, ii, 167. (1617)
No more of your French shrugs, I advise you.

FLETCHER, Monsieur Thomas. Act i, sc. 2. (c. 1613)
The Misers shrugge, the winter shrugge, the drowsie shrugge, the lousie shrugge.

WILLIAM HAWKINS, Apollo Shroving, p. 72. (1626)

SICKLE

<sup>12</sup>
Be it your care to reserve a sickle for your own harvest.

SIR HENRY SLINGSBY, Diary, p. 208. (1658)

<sup>13</sup>
Thou hast no leue to sette thyn hook in other men ripe.

JOHN DE TREVISA, tr., Polychronicon, viii, 183. (1387) A later translation (c. 1440) has, "Hit is not lawefull to the to put a sythe into the corne of other men."

Least I be blamed for thrusting my sicke into another mans harvest.

LAMBARDE, Perambulation of Kent, p. 455. (1576)
I have thrust my sickle overfar into another's harvest.

CAREW, A Survey of Cornwall, p. 211. (1602)
Put not your sickle into your neighbours corn.

ROBERTSON, Phraseologia Generalis, p. 291. (1681)

To put our Sickle into another Man's Corn.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5218. (1732)

<sup>1</sup> Between the sickle and the schythe,
What is born will never thrive.
UNKNOWN, Folk-Lore Journal, II, 279. (1884)

SICKNESS

See also Disease

<sup>2</sup> With the day's progress the illness increases.
Babylonian Talmud: Baba Bathra, fo. 16b. (c. 450) A patient feels worse in the evening than in the morning.

<sup>3</sup> Sickness soakes the purse.
NICHOLAS BRETON, Crossing of Proverbs. (1616)
A family that has no sickness for ten years must be rich.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 445. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

<sup>4</sup> I had lever deye than be longe syke.
WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., The Foure Sonnes of Aymon, xii, 294. (c. 1489)

<sup>5</sup> Allow the sick man to furnish his own sweat.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 376. (1938) A Chinese proverb.

The chamber of sickness is the chapel of devotion.
THOMAS DRAKE, Bibliotheca, p. 190. (1633)
RAY, p. 24; FULLER, No. 4444.

<sup>6</sup> You may talk on all subjects save one, namely, your maladies.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior. (1860)
There is one topic peremptorily forbidden to all rational mortals, namely, their distempers.

EMERSON, Conduct of Life: Behavior.
Never name sickness.

EMERSON, Table Talk. (c. 1875)

<sup>7</sup> Better be sick than tend the sick. (κρείσσον δὲ νοσεῖν ἢ θεραπεύειν.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, I. 186. (c. 428 B.C.)
Euripides adds, "The first is but a single ill, the last adds manual toil to mental grief."
In sickness, wrestle bravely with thy sickness. (νοσοῦσα δ' εὖ πως τὴν νόσον καταστρέφου.)

EURIPIDES, Hippolytus, I. 477. (c. 428 B.C.)

<sup>8</sup> Be not sick too late, nor well too soon.
FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1734

<sup>9</sup> He is in great Danger, who being sick, thinks himself well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1921. (1732)
There is no curing a sick man who thinks himself in health. (On ne guérit pas un malade qui se croit en parfaite santé.)

HENRI AMIEL, Journal Intime, 6 Feb., 1877.

<sup>10</sup> He who was never Sick, dies the first Fit.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2409. (1732)

Sickness is better than Sadness.

Sickness is felt, but Health not at all.

Sickness will spoil the Happiness of an Emperor, as well as mine.

Study Sickness, while you are well.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. Nos. 4159-4162, 4269.

<sup>11</sup> Sickness tells us what we are.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4161. (1732)
Sickness, as Lucretius says of impending death, shows us things as they are: the mask is torn off, the facts remain.

S. PAGET, Confessio Medici, p. 19. (1908)

<sup>12</sup> The prayer of faith shall save the sick. (ἡ εὐχὴ τῆς πίστεως σώσει τὸν κάμνοντα.)

New Testament: James, v, 15. (A.D. 44) The Vulgate is, "Oratio fidei salvabit infirmum." Wyth fastynge is sawid the Skenys of body, and wyth Preyere the Skenesse of Sowle.

UNKNOWN, Secreta Secretorum, 202. (1422)
Prayer heals sickness and must destroy sin and death.

MARY BAKER EDDY, Science and Health, p. 16. (1875)

When serious illness comes, petition the gods for health. (Huan ping pu hao, ch iu shêng shang piao.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs, 2347. (1875)
Time spent on the knees in prayer will do more to remedy heart strain and worry than anything else.

GEORGE D. STEWART, Lecture, to his students at New York University. (1930)

<sup>13</sup> A sick man wishes to be where he is not.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, Letter to William Windham, 2 Oct., 1784.

Sickness makes a man a scoundrel.

SAMUEL JOHNSON, as quoted by TWINING, Letter, to Fanny Burney, Jan., 1788. Miscellanies, I, 267, gives it, "It is so very difficult for a sick man not to be a scoundrel."

<sup>14</sup> Who can help sickness, quoth the drunken wife, when she fell in the gutter? Apply'd when men make a false pretence for what they do.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 355. (1721)

<sup>15</sup> She was solitary by walking, with hir frown-ing cloth, as sick lately of the solens.

JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 285. (1580)
Rather die sick of the sullens than tell his grie-fe.

THOMAS LODGE, Wits Miserie (Hunt), p. 101. (1596)

Fallen sick . . . o' th' sullens.

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, The Woman's Prize. Act iv, sc. 4. (c. 1613)

Whose dog lies sick of the mulligrubs?

BEAUMONT AND FLETCHER, Monsieur Thomas. Act ii, sc. 3. (c. 1615) Ill-tempered and grumbling.

The divell lyes sick of the mulligrubs.

SAMUEL ROWLEY, The Noble Souldier. Act iv. sc. 2. (1634)

Sick o' the mulligrubs with eating chop't hay
JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 77. (1678)

What! you are sick of the mulligrubs with eating chopped hay?

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Sick of the silver dropsie.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 40. (1639)
Sick of the idles.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 144. (1639)
Sick of the Lombard fever.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 11. (1659)
Sick o' th' Lombard feaver, or of the idles.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 75. (1678)
Sick o' the idle crick, and the belly-wark i' th' heel.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 254. (1678)
"Used when people complain of sickness for a pretence to be idle."

Sick of the simples.

BERTHELSON, Dictionary: Sick. (1754)

<sup>1</sup> Skenesse is the prison of the body and saluation of the saule.

EARL RIVERS, tr., Dictes and Sayenges of the Philosophirs, fo. 87. (1477) Quoting Ptolemy.
The sickness of the body may prove the health of the soul.

H.G. BOHN, Handbook of Proverbs, p. 514. (1855)

<sup>2</sup> I was nowther seak nor sair when I said it.
F. K. ROBINSON, Whitby Glossary: Seak. (1855)
Neither sick nor sorry.

G. H. NORTALL, English Folk-Phrases, p. 20. (1894)
"Said of one who has caused annoyance or trouble and takes the matter lightly." Probably a variation of "Neither sick nor sore."

<sup>3</sup> How has he the leisure to be sick?

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, iv, 1, 17. (1597)

It is dainty to be sick, if you have leisure for it.
EMERSON, Journal, v, 162. (c. 1875)

<sup>4</sup> Sickness is catching.

SHAKESPEARE, A Midsummer-Night's Dream, i, 1, 186. (1596)

Sickness is civil war.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 19 Jan., 1841.

II—Comparisons

<sup>5</sup> Now sicke as a dog.

GABRIEL HARVEY, Works, i, 161. (1592) L'ESTRANGE, tr., Quevedo's Visions, p. 262. (1667)

I am sick as a dog of being a valet.

GARRICK, Neck or Nothing. Act i, sc. 1. (1766)
Folks have never called him the Squire, though he's as sick as a dog for it.

MRS. WOOD, Trevlyn Hold. Ch. 20. (1864)

<sup>6</sup> It macks me as seeke as a horse.

GEORGE MERITON, York-shire Ale, p. 71. (1685)

I am as sick as a horse.

STERNE, Tristram Shandy. Bk. vii, ch. 2. (1767)
"Sick as a horse," a common vulgar simile, used when a person is exceedingly sick without vomiting.

ANNE E. BAKER, Glossary of Northamptonshire Words: Sick. (1854)

<sup>7</sup> As sick as a cushion.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 288. (1678)
Poor miss, she's as sick as a cushion, she wants nothing but stuffing.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

<sup>8</sup> These great talkers . . . make me as sick as a cat.

SPURGEON, John Ploughman. Ch. 20. (1869)

SIDE

<sup>9</sup> Hear the other side. (Audi alteram partem.)
ST. AUGUSTINE, De Duabus Animabus. Ch. xiv, sec. 22. (c. A. D. 390) See under JUDGMENT.

<sup>10</sup> The reverse side has its reverse side.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 444. (1938) A Chinese proverb. Two SIDES TO EVERY QUESTION, see under QUESTION.

<sup>11</sup> How it settis him so syde.

WILLIAM DUNBAR, The Two Mariit Wemen and the Wedo, l. 197. (1508)

A side woman.

BISHOP WHITE KENNETT, Parochial Antiquities: Sideling. (1695)

I met Mrs. — in the town, and she was very side.

S. O. ADDY, Sheffield Glossary: Side. (1888)
The modern form is usually "To put on side," that is to be haughty and snobbish

<sup>12</sup> Hys grace had enclined your assent to the surer side.

SIR THOMAS MORE, A Dyaloge of Comferte Against Tribulation, i. (1528)

He is your brother by the surer side.

SHAKESPEARE, Titus Andronicus, iv, 2, 126. (1593)

I'm resolv'd to be on the sure side.

DRYDEN AND NEWCASTLE, Sir Martin Mar-All. Act v, sc. 1. (1667)

Careful always to take the safe side.

JOHN KEBLE, Sermons (1848), ii, 38. (1823)

Be on the safe side, do not trust him too far.

FREDERICK MARRYAT, The Children of the New Forest. Ch. 11. (1847)

There is nothing like being on the safe side.

VINCENT LEAN, Collectanea, iv, 152. (1904)

SIEVE

<sup>13</sup> As a Sive kepeth Ale,
Riht so can Chestre kepe a tale.

GOWER, Confessio Amantis. Bk. i, l. 294. (1390)
The sieve of a patron let it out.

LORD BYRON, Hints from Horace, l. 734. (1811)

<sup>14</sup> That which is said in the proverb, where one doth milke a goate, another holds vnder a siue.

SAMUEL HIERON, Works, i, 586. (1616)

That was been milkin' his cow in a sieve.

DAVID PICKEN, Poems and Songs, ii, 135. (1813)

<sup>15</sup> You pour rain into a sieve. (Imbrem in cribrum geras.)

PLAUTUS, Pseudolus, l. 102. (c. 195 B. C.)

You pour water into a sieve.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 155. (1639)
RAY, p. 190; FULLER, No. 5979.

Putting money into her hands is like pouring water through a sieve.

SAMUEL SMILES, Thrift, p. 169. (1875)

1 She leaks like a sieve.

CHARLES READE, The Cloister and the Hearth.
Ch. 57. (1861) Of a ship.

The kettle . . . began to leak like a sieve.

A. T. QUILLER-COUCH, Hetty Wesley. Bk. ii,
ch. 1. (1903)

2 Siues which hold water no longer than they are in the Riuier.

HENRY SMITH, Sermons, p. 665. (a. 1591)

Yet in this captious and intenible sieve

I still pour in the waters of my love.

SHAKESPEARE, All's Well that Ends Well, i, 3,
208. (1602)

TO CARRY WATER IN A SIEVE, see under WATER

SIGH

3 Sigh'd, and wept, and said no more.

ALANUS DE INSULIS, De Planctu Naturae. (a. 1200) This is l. 931 in the poem called Chaucer's Dream, sometimes attributed to Chaucer, but probably of later date.

Sigh'd and look'd, and sigh'd again.

DRYDEN, Alexander's Feast, l. 120. (a. 1700)

Sighed and looked unutterable things.

THOMSON, Seasons: Summer, l. 1188. (1727)

Sighed to many, though he loved but one.

BYRON, Childe Harold. Canto i, st. 5. (1812)

4 A sigh breaks the body of a man.

Babylonian Talmud: Berachoth, fo. 58b. (c. 450) Sometimes rendered, "Sighing impairs a man's health." The Italians say, "Sighing is no medicine."

5 Nought swiche sorwful sykes as men make
For wo, or elles whan that folk ben syke.
But esy sykes, swiche as ben to lyke.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. iii, l. 1361. (c. 1380)

Easy sighs, such as folk drawe in love.

HENRY HOWARD, Prisoner in Windsor. (a. 1547)

6 The passing tribute of a sigh.

THOMAS GRAY, Elegy Written in a Country Church-yard, l. 80. (1750)

7 He heaved that sigh from away down in his belly. (Traxit ex intimo ventre suspirium.)

PLAUTUS, Truculentus, l. 600. (c. 186 B.C.)

A thousand sykes, hottere than the glede,

Out of his brest ech after other wente.

CHAUCER (?), Troilus. Bk. iv, l. 337. (c. 1380)

He draweth a depe sighe fro the herte rote.

G. DE GUILLEVILLE, The Pylgremage of the Soule, iv, xxxi, 80. (c. 1400)

What mountaines of smooke did scaldinge sighes send forth of his mouth.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 106. (1576)

A sigh uttered from the fulness of the heart.

HAZLITT, Table-Talk Vol. ii, ch. 2 (1822)

8

Sigh not, but send, he'll come if he be unhang'd.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 81. (1678)

Do not sigh for him, but send for him; if he be unhang'd he'll come. Spoken when a young maid sighs.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 89. (1721)

Come, miss, never sigh, but send for him.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

9

A plague of sighing and grief! it blows a man up like a bladder.

SHAKESPEARE, I Henry IV, ii, 4, 364. (1597)

10

To hear her after, Sigh in Welsh,

(Which ill-bred Clowns will call a Belch).

UNKNOWN, British Apollo. No. 83, p. 3. (1708)

SIGHT

See also EYE

11

Don't be afraid of a thing you hear until you have seen it. (μὴ δεῖν, προ τῆς ὕψεως, δι ἀκοῆς μόνης ταράττεσθαι.)

AESOP, Fables: The Lion and the Frog. (c. 570 B.C.) The lion, hearing the frog croaking, thinks it is some tremendous animal, but tramps it down in contempt when it comes out of the lake.

12

I saw it and believed. (δὲλ' ἰδὼν ἐπειθόμην.)

ARISTOPHANES, The Ecclesiazusae, l. 772. (c. 393 B.C.)

They believe what they see. (Credunt quod vident.)

PLAUTUS, Asinaria, l. 202. (c. 200 B.C.)

Believe it only when you see it. (Tum crederes, cum ipse cognosces.)

CICERO, Ad Atticum. Bk. xvi, epis. 1. (44 B.C.)

Seeing is believing.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 90. (1639) In frequent use; cited in all collections. A proverb in many languages. The French say, "Quand on voit la chose, on y croit" (When one sees a thing, one believes it); the Italians, "Chi con l'occhio vede, di cuor crede" (Who sees with the eye believes with the heart)

Seeing is believing all the world over.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 298. (1721)

Seeing is believing, says the proverb. . . . Though, of all our senses, the eyes are the most easily deceived.

HARE, Guesses at Truth, ii, 497. (a. 1848)

Did you never hear that seeing is believing?

F. E. SMEDLEY, Frank Fairleigh. Ch. 38. (1850)

Seein's believin', but feelin's God's truth.

F. E. TAYLOR, Lancs Sayings, p. 9. (1901)

Seeing is believing, says the most fallacious of all proverbs. It should be reversed. Believing is seeing. The eye does not control the mind. The mind controls the eye.

WAILING, Murder at Midnight. Ch. 1. (1932)

Humanity had become too dependent on the old phrase "seeing is believing."

KENDRICK, Odor of Violets, p. 122. (1941)

1 Keener-sighted than Lynceus. (ὀξύτερον τοῦ Λυγκέου.)

ARISTOPHANES, Plutus, l. 210. (388 B. C.) Lynceus was the keen-eyed Argonaut who could see into the bowels of the earth. (APOLLONIUS RHODIUS, l. 153.) Quoted by Plato. (SUIDAS, ix, 57.) Cited by ERASMUS, Adagia, ii, i, 54, who gives the Latin, "Lynceo perspicacior." In English, "Keener sighted than a lynx."

Youre fader is in sleighte as Argus yed.

CHAUCER, Troilus and Criseyde, iv, 1459. (c. 1374) Argus, in fable, has a hundred eyes. See also under EYE.

Doe you not knowe, that (as the Prouerbe is) we see better a farre of, than hard by vs, & that at home we see no more than Moles, but abroad as much as Argus?

GUAZZO, Civile Conversation, p. 74. (1586)

Argus at Home, but a Mole abroad.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 582. (1732)

2 What I can see with my eyes I point out with my finger. (Lo que veo por los ojos, con el dedo lo señalo.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 62. (1615) Better, "con el dedo lo adevino."

3 See for your love, buy for your money.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 79. (1639)

RAY, p. 184; KELLY, p. 299.

4 If what we see is doubtful, how can we believe what is spoken behind the back?

CONFUCIUS, Inscription in the Celestial Influence Temple. (c. 500 B. C.)

5 Now we see through a glass darkly. (βλέπομεν γὰρ ὅτι δι' ἐσόπτρου ἐν αἰνίγματι.)

New Testament: I Corinthians, xiii, 12. (A. D. 57) The Vulgate is, "Videmus nunc per speculum in aenigmate."

6 One man does not see everything. (εἰς δ' ἀνὴρ οὐ πάνθ' ὁρᾷ.)

EURIPIDES, Phoenissae, l. 745. (c. 420 B. C.)

Bernard the monk ne saugh nat al, parde.

CHAUCER, Legend of Good Women: Prologue, l. 16. (c. 1385) Probably Bernard of Clairvaux.

Bernardus non vidit omnia. I could not come to the knowledge of every particular.

THOMAS FULLER, Appeal of Injured Innocence. (1659) See History of Cambridge Univ., p. 332.

7 He sees an inch before his nose.

FERGUSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 46. (c. 1595)

The stupid painters fancied, I suppose, That I might see an inch beyond my nose.

J. R. PLANCHÉ, Extravaganzas, iv, 272. (1853)

8 Foure thinges hurt the sight of al menne, that is, Teares, smoke, wynde, and the woorst of al, to see his friend vnluckie, and his enimies happy.

JOHN FLORIO, Firste Fruites, fo. 23. (1578)

9 One is not bound to see more than he can.

THOMAS FULLER, Infants Advocate. Sec. 21. (1653) Referred to as "our English proverb."

10 He saw through him, both within and without.

EDWARD HALL, Chronicle, fo. 187b. (a. 1548)

He is a mere peece of glasse, I see through him.

JONSON, Cynthia's Revels. Act v, sc. 4. (1599)

And then their failings, flaws, an' wants, Are a' seen thro'.

BURNS, Epistle to John Rankine. St. 2. (1784)

11 The sight of a man hath the force of a Lion.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 619. (1640)

12 I see muche, but I say little, and doo lesse.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)

The best waie is in all waies sent,

Se all, saie nought, holde thee content.

RICHARD EDWARDS, The Paradyse of Dainty Deuices, 134. (a. 1566)

13 If he plaie falsehed in felowship, plaie yee See me, and see me not.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1516)

14 Out of sight, out of remembrance. (ἄστος ἀπυστος.)

HOMER, Odyssey. Bk. i, l. 242. (c. 850 B. C.)

Far as I journey from thy sight, so far

Shall love too journey from my mind.

(Quantum oculis, animo tam procul ibit amor.)

PROPERTIUS, Elegies. Bk. iii, eleg. 21, l. 10. (c. 26 B. C.)

As soon as the breath is out of their bodies, it is "Out of sight, out of mind." (ἄστοι, ἀπυστοι.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. iv, sec. 33. (c. A. D. 174) The phrase is quoted, indicating that it had been proverbial since Homer's day, and probably even before.

Whan man is out of sight, sone he passeth oute of mynde. (Cum autem sublatus fuerit ab oculis, etiam cito transit a mente.)

THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 23. (c. 1420) This is the earliest English translation (1503) by Atkinson. Dr. Chalonier renders it, "A man is here to-day and to-morrow he is vanished. And when he is taken away from the sight he is quickly also out of mind."

Out of sight, out of mind.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 3. (1546)

TAVERNER, Proverbs, fo. 30. (1550) GOOGE,

Eclogs: Title. (1563) Frequent thereafter

Out of mind as soon as out of sight.

FULKE GREVILLE, Sonnets. No. 56. (c. 1600)

Clean out of sight?—And out of mind too, or else you have not the mind of a true woman.

JOHN DAY, Humour Out of Breath. Act iii, sc. 1. (1608)

I do perceive that the old proverb be not always true, for I do find that the absence of my Nath doth breed in me the more continual remembrance of him.

ANNE, LADY BACON, Letter to Jane, Lady Cornwallis. (1613) Bacon himself had quoted the proverb. See Private Correspondence of Lady Cornwallis, p. 19.

Though they are out of sight they are not out of mind.

MATTHEW HENRY, Friendly Visits, 16. (1704)
Out of Mind, when out of View.

SWIFT (?), To the Quidnuncs, l. 45. (1724)
Yes, out of sight is out of mind. (Ja, aus den Augen aus dem Sinn!)

GOETHE, Faust. Pt. i, sc. 12. (1806)
Out of sight, out of mind, seems to be a proverb which applies to enemies as well as friends.

SYDNEY SMITH, Plymley Letters. No. 3. (1807)
That out of sight is out of mind
Is true of most we leave behind.

A. H. CLOUGH, Songs in Absence. No. 9. (1849)
Things out of sight do straight forgotten die.

WM. ALEXANDER, Aurora. Sonnet lxiij. (1850)

1
Who sees thee by day will not seek thee by night.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 2. (1659)
They that see you in daylight winna break the house for you at night. Spoken to ugly women.

HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 93 (1832)
2
Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice together shall they sing: for they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion. (Oculo ad oculum videbunt.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, lii, 8. (c. 725 B.C.)
See eye to eye; esp., not to see eye to eye (with a person), to differ in opinion, not to think alike. A misapprehension of Isaiah, lii, 8.

PARTRIDGE, Dictionary of Clichés: See. (1941)
We shall be seeing eye to eye.

HILEA BAILEY, Smiling Corpse, p. 248. (1841)

3
One asked if such an one was not a "smart fellow." "He! he can't see through a ladder."
HARRIET MARTINEAU, Society in America, i, 337. (1837)

Can't ye see through a ladder, ye black nigger?
H. B. STOWE, Uncle Tom's Cabin. Ch. 6. (1852)
I can see through a ladder when the rungs aren't too close together.

EVA W. BRODHEAD, Bound in Shallows, p. 86. (1897)

4
What went ye out into the wilderness to see? A reed shaken with the wind? But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? (ἀλλὰ τί ἐξήλαρε ἰδεῖν;)

New Testament: Matthew, xi, 7-8. (c. A. D. 65)
Also Luke, vii, 24. The Vulgate is, "Sed quis existis videre?"

5
They [the women] come to see, they come to be seen. (Spectatum veniunt, veniunt spectentur ut ipsae.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 99. (c. 1 B.C.)
The Latin proverbial form is "Spectas et tu spectaberis" (See, and you will be seen), or, more compactly, "Visum visu" (To see and to be seen).

I hadde the bettre leyser for to pleye,
And for to see, and eek for to be seye.

CHAUCER, Canterbury Tales: The Wife of Bath's Prologue, l. 551. (c. 1388)

Come chiefly but to see, and to be seen.

SIR JOHN HARRINGTON, Of Going to Bathe. (c. 1612) Epigrams. Bk. i, epig. 58.

She who desires to see, desires also to be seen. (La que es deseosa de ver, también tiene deseo de ser vista.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 49. (1615)
We are persons of quality, I assure you, and women of fashion, and come to see and to be seen.

BEN JONSON, The Staple of Newes: Ind. (1626)
Her ladyship went to see and to be seen.

SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)

6
[He] wolde seeme to see farther in a myll stone, than excellent auctours haue done before vs.

JEHAN PALSgrave, Acolastus, sig. B3. (1540)
She thought she had scene far in a millstone
When she got a husbände.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
They . . . seeme to see verrie farre in a myllstone.
GEORGE GASCOIGNE, Posies. (1575)

He would see further in a millstone than others.
RICHARD STANYHURST, A Description of Ireland. (1577) In HOLINSHED (1808), vi, 18.
I can see as far into a millstone as another.

SHADWELL, The Sullen Lovers. Act iv, sc. 1. (1668)
I can see as far into a mill-stone as the best of you.

JOHN DRYDEN, Amphytrion. Act v. (1690)

7
We shall see what we shall see.

JAMES PAYN, In Market Overt. Ch. 14. (1895)

8
We must not pretend to see all that we see, if we would be easie.

PENN, Some Fruits of Solitude. No. 183. (1693)
The art of the police is not to see what it is useless to see. (L'art de la police est de ne pas voir ce qu'il est inutile qu'elle voie.)

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, Letter to General Savary, Minister of Police, 23 Oct., 1813.
What you don't see you won't get hung for.

CHARLES SAXBY, Death in the Sun, p. 75. (1940)

9
The Lord save those who see, and do not hear. (Dieu guard de mal qui void bien n'oyt goutte.)

RABELAIS, Pantagruel. Bk. iii, ch. 15. (1545)
Hearing is Paradise, seeing is Hell.

S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 441. (1938) A Japanese proverb.

10
Methought I saw the grave where Laura lay.
SIR WALTER RALEGH, Verses to Edmund Spenser. (c. 1618)

Methought I saw my late espoused saint.

JOHN MILTON, Sonnets. Sonnet xxiii. (1654)

Methought I saw the footsteps of a throne.

WILLIAM WORDSWORTH, Sonnet. (1806)

11
The greatest thing a human soul ever does in this world is to see something.

JOHN RUSKIN, Modern Painters. Vol. iii, pt. iv, ch. 16, sec. 28. (1850)

Better see rightly on a pound a week than squint on a million.

BERNARD SHAW, Plays Pleasant and Unpleasant: Preface. (1898)

- <sup>1</sup> The sight of you is good for sore eyes.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
A sight for sair een.
JOHN WILSON, Noctes Ambrosianae, 3 Oct., 1825. Frequently repeated.
A sight of you, Mr. Harding, is good for sore eyes.
ANTHONY TROLLOPE, Barchester Towers. Ch. 12. (1857) WALLACE, Door With Seven Locks, p. 23. (1925) FAIR, Spill the Jackpot, p. 5. (1941) etc., etc.
A sight for tired eyes.
PETER CHENEY, Dark Duet, p. 211. (1943)
- <sup>2</sup> Did you ever see the like?
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i. (1738)
Would I could see it, quoth blind Hugh.
SWIFT, Polite Conversation. Dial. i.
- <sup>3</sup> A man has not seen a thing who has not felt it.
H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 23 Feb., 1860.
- <sup>4</sup> The sights most piteous, all of which I saw, much of which I was. (Quaeque ipse miserrima vidi [et quorum pars magna fui].)
VERGIL, Aeneid. Bk. ii, l. 5. (19 B. C.)
- <sup>5</sup> That selden i-seize is sone foryete.
Vernon MS (Furnivall), p. 715. (c. 1375)
She sayth that she hath seen hit wreten,
That seldyn seen is soon for-yeten.
Reliquiae Antiquae (1841), i, 25. (c. 1450)
Selde y-seyne, sone forgete. Res raro visa procul est a corde recisca.
Harleian MS, 3362. (c. 1470) Förster, ed
I haue seene this gentleman, if I wist where.
Howe be it lo, seldome seene, soone forgotten.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 11. (1546)
Seldom seen is soon forgotten.
WILLIAM CAMDEN, Remains (1870) p. 333.
(1605) RAY, English Proverbs, p. 140. (1670)
- <sup>6</sup> What things we see when we don't have a gun!
UNKNOWN. Troy (N.Y.) Times, 26 Dec., 1883.
Just tell them that you saw me.
PAUL DRESSER. Title of song. (1895)

SIGN

- <sup>7</sup> The sign brings customers. (L'enseigne fait la chalandise.)
LA FONTAINE, Fables: Les Devineresses. Bk. vii, fab. 15. (1668)
The Sign invites you in; but your Money must redeem you out.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4746. (1732)
- <sup>8</sup> Can ye not discern the signs of the times? (τὰ δὲ σημεῖα τῶν καιρῶν οὐ δύνασθε.)
New Testament: Matthew, xvi, 3. (c. A. D. 65)
The Vulgate is, "Signa autem temporum non potestis scire?"
- <sup>9</sup> It's a bad sign when a man in a sweat shivers. (Pro monstro extemplo est, quando qui sudat tremat.)
PLAUTUS, Asturlia, l. 289. (c. 200 B. C.)

It's a bad sign; a Roman would have turned back.

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, when his horse stumbled and threw him as he was about to cross the Niemen invading Russia, 24 June, 1812.

You don't believe in signs, Hey?

FRANK GRUBER, The Hungry Dog, p. 137. (1941)
BY THIS SIGN YE CONQUER, see under CROSS.

SILENCE

See also Mum; Muteness; Tongue: Holding the Tongue; Woman: Her Tongue

I—Silence: Definitions

- <sup>10</sup> I have found long since that silence is an antidote to harm. (πάλαι τὸ σιγᾶν φάρμακον βλάβης ἔχω.)
AESCHYLUS, Agamemnon, l. 548. (458 B. C.)
Silence is gain to many of mankind. (πολλοῖς γὰρ ἐστὶ κέρδος ἡ σιγὴ βροτῶν.)
AESCHYLUS, Prometheus. Frag. 103, Smvth. (c. 458 B. C.)
In silence many virtues lie. (πᾶλλ' ἔχει σιγῇ καλὰ.)
SOPHOCLES, Aleadae. Frag. 78, Nauck. (c. 425 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 502E
Silence not only prevents thirst, but also never causes sorrow and suffering. (σιγῇ δ' οὐ μόνον ἀδιψον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἄλυπον καὶ ἀνώδυνον.)
HIPPOCRATES. (c. 400 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 515A.
Silence is a healing for all ailments.
Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, fo. 18a. (c. 450)
Silence is but a rich pause in the music of life.
SAROJINI NAIDU, Solitude. (Bird of Time, p. 90.)
- <sup>11</sup> Silence is the virtue of fools.
BACON, De Augmentis Scientiarum. Pt. i, bk. i, ch. 31. (1605)
Silence is the wit of fools. (Le silence est l'esprit des sots.)
LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: de la Conversation. (1688) To which Bernard Bonnard (c. 1775) adds, "Et une des vertus du sage" (And one of the virtues of the wise).
- <sup>12</sup> Silence is the reply adapted to folly.
SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penanim (Choice of Pearls). No. 80, No. 91. (c. 1050)
- <sup>13</sup> Silence is strength. (Qui silet, est firmus.)
OVID, Remediorum Amoris, l. 697. (c. 1 B. C.)
Silence is man's chief learning. (ἡ μεγάλη παιδευσὶς ἐν ἀνθρώποισι σωπῇ.)
PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 425) See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 46.
Silence is the perfectest herald of joy.
SHAKESPEARE, Much Ado, ii, 1, 317. (1598)
Silence is the communion of a conscious soul with itself.
H. D. THOREAU, Autumn, 15 Dec., 1838.
Silence is of the gods.
S. G. CHAMPION, Racial Proverbs, p. 376. (1938) A Chinese proverb.
- <sup>14</sup> Silence is a still noise.
JOSEPH BILLINGS (H. W. SHAW), Encyclopedia of Wit and Wisdom. (1874)

II—Silence: Apothegms

<sup>1</sup> I am a silent man before a raging man and before a fool.

ANTEF, Philosophy. No. i. From his stele in British Museum. (c. 2200 B.C.) Budge, tr.

<sup>2</sup> Hail to the man who hears and is silent, for he will escape a hundred misfortunes.

Babylonian Talmud: Sanhedrin, fo. 7a. (c. 450) Thought works in silence, so does virtue. One might erect statues to silence.

THOMAS CARLYLE, Diary, Sept., 1830.

<sup>3</sup> He is nearest to God who knows how to be silent. (Proximus ille Deo est qui scit ratione tacere.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. i, No. 3. (c. 170 B.C.) To keep silence well is called Sancho. (Al buen callar llaman Sancho.)

CERVANTES, Don Quixote. Pt. ii, ch. 43. (1615) The real proverb has santo, holy. Sancho misquotes to his purpose.

Cautious silence is the holy of holies of worldly wisdom.

GRACIAN, Art of Worldly Wisdom, iii. (1647)

<sup>4</sup> By their silence they cry aloud, i.e. their silence is eloquent. (Cum tacent, clamant.)

CICERO, In Catilinam. No. i, ch. 8, sec. 21. (63 B.C.) Silence also has a language; it knows how to pray and how to make itself heard. (E' l silenzio ancor suole | Aver prieghi e parole.)

TASSO, Aminta. Act ii, sc. 5. (1573) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 12.

There is an eloquent silence, which serves sometimes to approve, sometimes to condemn. (Il y a un silence éloquent qui sert à approuver et à condamner.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Réflexions Diverses. Pt. v, de la Conversation. (c. 1665)

Even silence may be eloquent in love.

CONGREVE, Old Batchelour. Act ii, sc. 9. (1693)

Silence that spoke and eloquence of eyes.

POPE, tr., The Iliad. Bk. xiv, l. 252. (1720)

Well-timed silence hath more eloquence than speech.

M. F. TUPPER, Proverbial Philosophy: Of Discretion. (1838)

Silence is more eloquent than words.

CARLYLE, On Heroes and Hero-Worship. Lect. ii. (1840)

There are moments when silence, prolong'd and unbroken,

More expressive may be than all words ever spoken.

OWEN MEREDITH (BULWER-LYTON), Lucile. Pt. ii, canto i, sec. 20. (1860)

She didn't say a word, but her silence spoke with a voice of Thunder.

MARK TWAIN, In Eruption, p. 199. (1906)

<sup>5</sup> Whist, and catch a mouse.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 302. (1639)

Silence catches a mouse.

JOHN KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 289. (1721)

<sup>6</sup> Silence is a friend that will never betray.

CONFUCIUS, Analects. (c. 500 B.C.) The Hindus say, "Silence never makes mistakes"; The Arabs, "Silence is wisdom, but the man who practices it is seldom seen"; the Italians, "Il-tacer non fu mai scritto" (Silence was never written down).

Silence . . . may do good, and can do little harm.

BATHWAIT, English Gentleman, p. 51. (1630)

Silence seldom doth harm.

JOHN RAY, English Proverbs, p. 24. (1670)

Silence seldom hurts.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4170. (1732)

The Germans say, "Schweigen und denken Kann Niemand kränken" (Silence and thinking can no man offend).

<sup>7</sup> Silence breedeth many friendshipss. (Multas amicitias silentium diremit.)

ERASMUS, Adagia. Chil. ii, cent. i, No. 26. (1508)

TAVERNER, tr., fo. 30.

<sup>8</sup> 'Twere base to be silent. (ἀσχερόν σιωπᾶν βαρβάρους δ' εἶν λέγειν.)

EURIPIDES, Fragments. Frag. (c. 425 B.C.)

Quoted by CICERO, Ad Atticum, vi, 8. The Latin proverb is "Turpe silere."

Sometimes silence itself is criminal. (Interim scelus est fides.)

SENECA, Hercules Oetaeus, l. 481. (c. A.D. 60)

<sup>9</sup> Silence is become his mother-tongue.

GOLDSMITH, Good-Natured Man. Act ii. (1768)

Bekker is silent in seven languages. (Bekker schweigt in sieben Sprachen.)

SCHLEIERMACHER. See ZELTER, Letter to Goethe, 15 March, 1830.

Silent in all the tongues of Europe.

JOAQUIN MILLER, Ina. Act v. (1871)

<sup>10</sup> The most silent people are generally those who think most highly of themselves.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 38. (1823)

We may give more offence by our silence than even by impertinence.

WILLIAM HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 173

<sup>11</sup> It is good to have a hatch before the durre.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 11. (1546)

Cited by Fuller and by Bland, who adds, "That you may be stopped for a minute or two before you get out, giving time to reconsider where you are going and what you are going to do."

I wish that every rebuker should place a hatch before the door.

GOSSON, Schoole of Abuse, p. 53. (1579)

<sup>12</sup> Silent upon a peak in Darien.

JOHN KEATS, On First Looking into Chapman's Homer. (1819)

<sup>13</sup> The innermost chamber openeth unto the man of silence.

KE'GEMNI, Instruction. No. 1. (c. 4000 B.C.)
Prisse Papyrus. Gunn, tr.

Refrain thy mouth.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 42. (c. 2550 B. C.)
Keep a calm sough, as the Scots say.

WALTER SCOTT, The Abbot. Ch. 17. (1820)
I'll keep a calm sough—I'll haud my tongue.

JOHN GALT, The Entail. Ch. 20. (1823)

And silence, like a poultice, comes
To heal the waves of sound.

O. W. HOLMES, The Music-Grinders. (1836)

<sup>1</sup>
Silent people are dangerous. (Les gens sans bruit sont dangereux.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 23. (1678)
Silent Men, like still Waters, are deep and dangerous.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4163. (1732)
Deep vengeance is the daughter of deep silence.
(Alta vendetta D'alto silenzio è figlia.)

ALFIERI, La Congiura de' Pazzi. Act i, sc. 1.
(c. 1780)

O have a care of natures that are mute!

MEREDITH, Modern Love. St. 35. (1862)

<sup>2</sup>
A good be stille is weel wourth a groote.

JOHN LYDGATE, Advice to Tittle-Tattlers. (c.
1430)

A good bestyll is woorth a grote.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

<sup>3</sup>
In silence God brings all to pass. (ἄπαντα σιγῶν ὁ θεὸς ἐξεργάζεται.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 818K. (c. 300 B. C.)

All things save silence only bring repentance.
(μόνη σιωπὴ μεταμέλειαν οὐ θέρει.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 1105K.

<sup>4</sup>
Silence and modesty are very valuable qualities in the art of conversation. (Le silence et la modestie sont qualités très commodes à la conversation.)

MONTAIGNE, Essays. Bk. i, ch. 25. (1580)

That silence is one of the great arts of conversation is allowed by Cicero himself, who says that there is not only an art, but even an eloquence in it.

HANNAH MORE, Essays: Conversation. (c. 1800)

Silence is one great art of conversation.

HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 59. (1823)

He has occasional flashes of silence, that make his conversation perfectly delightful.

SYDNEY SMITH, speaking of Macaulay. See
LADY HOLLAND, Memoir, i, 363.

<sup>5</sup>
Full oft is silence the wisest thing for a man to heed. (τὸ σιγᾶν πολλάκις ἐστὶ σοφώτατον ἀνθρώπῳ νοῆσαι.)

PINDAR, Nemean Odes. No. v, l. 18. (c. 485 B. C.)

Silence is a defence to wisdom.

RABBI AKIBA, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, iii, 20. (c.
A. D. 125) Oesterley, tr.

All my days have I grown up among the wise, and I have not found aught good for man but silence.

SIMEON, Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, i, 18.

Be wise enough to be silent.

Babylonian Talmud: Joma, fo. 7a: (c. 450)

Silence is good for the wise; how much more so for the foolish.

Babylonian Talmud: Pesachim, fo. 99a.

To the silent and wise does ill come seldom.

SAEMUND (?), Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 6.
(c. 900) Bellows, tr.

Grete wisdom is, litil to speke.

GEORGE ASHBY, Poems, p. 85. (c. 1470) The Latin proverb is, "Indictum sit" (Let it be unsaid).

Silence, lady, is the best part of wisdom.

Two Merry Milkmaids. Act ii, sc. 2. (1620)

Wise men say nothing in dangerous times.

JOHN SELDEN, Table-Talk: Wisdom. (a. 1654)
No wisdom to silence.

JAMES HOWELL, English Proverbs, p. 27. (1659)

Think not Silence the Wisdom of Fools, but, if rightly timed, the honour of wise Men.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. iii,
sec. 18. (1682)

No wisdom like silence.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 296. (1869)

<sup>6</sup>
The mind is nourished by silence and darkness.
(Silentio et tenebris animus alitur.)

PLINY, Epistles. Bk. ix, epis. 36. (A. D. 98)

<sup>7</sup>
Hermes has come in. (Ἑρμῆς ἐπεισῆλθε.)

PLUTARCH, On Garrulity. Ch. 2, sec. 502F. (c.

A. D. 95) ERASMUS, Adagia, iv, v, 91, gives the Latin, "Mercurius supervenit." Of a sudden lull in the conversation; one fell silent in the presence of the messenger and herald of the gods.

<sup>8</sup>
Meet an accusation with silence and you make it sharper. (Iactum tacendo crimen facias acrius.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 291. (c. 43 B. C.)

The best apology against false accusers is silence.

MILTON, Smectymnuus: Intro. (1642)

Silence never shows itself to so great an advantage, as when it is made the reply to calumny and defamation.

ADDISON, The Tatler. No. 133. (1709)

<sup>9</sup>
To silence another, first be silent yourself
(Alium silere quod voles, primus sile.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 876. (c. A. D. 60)

If you cannot yourself keep silent, how can you expect silence from another? (Si tibi ipsi non imperasti, ut taceres, quomodo ab alio silentium quaeris?)

MARTINUS DUMIENSIS, De Moribus. Sec. 16 (c.
1250) Chaucer translates this in his Tale of Melibeus, sec. 20, from Albertano of Brescia, who attributes it to Seneca.

<sup>10</sup>
The art of silence is taught by life's many ills.
(Tacere multis discitur vitae malis.)

SENECA, Thyestes, l. 319. (c. A. D. 60) The Germans say, "Durch viele traurige Erfahrungen lernt man schweigen" (Through many sad experiences one learns to be silent).

<sup>11</sup>
The rest is silence.

SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, v, 2, 369. (1600) RUS-
KIN, Crown of Wild Olive: Traffic (1866)

<sup>1</sup> The safe gift of silence. (σιγάς δαίνυτον γέρας.)

SIMONIDES, Satire on Women, l. 66. (c. 475 B. C.) Quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia, 207D, and by ERASMUS, Adagia, iii, v, 3, with the Latin, "Silentii tutum praemium."

There is a sure reward for trusty silence. (Est et fideli tuta silentio merces.)

HORACE, Odes. Bk. iii, ode 2, l. 25. (23 B. C.)

Silence is safest and best.

SAEMUND, Poetic Edda: Hovamol. St. 79. (c. 900)

Be silent, and thou art safe.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Penimim (Choice of Pearls). No. 19. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr.

On the safety that is in silence, I know none happier than . . . one most truly characteristic of Italian caution: "Il tacer non fu mai scritto"—Silence was never written down.

R. C. TRENCH, On the Lessons in Proverbs. Ch. 4. (1853) The Danes say, "The words of a silent man are never brought to court."

Be silent and safe—silence never betrays you.

O'REILLY, Rules of the Road. St. 2. (c. 1880)

<sup>2</sup> If you're a fool, you're wise in what you do; if you're wise, you're a fool. (εἰ μὲν ἡλίθιος εἰ, σοφὸν πρᾶγμα ποιεῖς, εἰ δὲ σοφός, ἡλίθιος.)

SIMONIDES, when he saw a guest sitting absolutely silent at dinner. (c. 475 B. C.) As related by PLUTARCH, Dinner-Table Problems, sec. 3.

Even a fool, when he holdeth his peace, is counted wise.

Old Testament: Proverbs, xvii, 28. (c. 350 B. C.)

See under FOOL.

Every ignorant man is wisest if he remains silent. (πᾶς τις ἀπαιδευτος φρονιμώτατος ἐστὶ σιωπῶν.)

PALLADAS, Epigram. (c. A. D. 425) See Greek Anthology. Bk. x, epig. 98.

"Dost thou at length think me a philosopher?" To which he bitingly replied, "I would have thought thee one if thou hadst held thy peace." (Intellexeram si tacuisses.)

BOETHIUS, Consolatio Philosophiae. Bk. ii, prosa 7. (c. A. D. 500) Hence the phrase, "Si tacuisses, philosophus mansisses" (If you had been silent, you would have remained a philosopher).

Silence, the special ornament of the ignorant in the assembly of the wise.

BHARTRIHARI, Niti Sataka. No. 7. (c. A. D. 625)

Another rendering is, "God hath given to man a cloak whereby he can conceal his ignorance; that cloak is silence," or, more briefly, "Silence is the cloak of the ignorant."

See Ali's Sentences, sec. 139.

Silence is the concealer of blemishes.

SADI, Bustan. Ch. vii, Apologue 4. (c. 1257)

Silence is the safest role for the man who distrusts himself. (Le silence est le parti le plus sûr de celui qui se défie de soi-même.)

LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 79. (1665) The dunce, when he is silent, gets the reputation of being wise. (El bobo, si es callado, Por sesudo es reputado.)

CHARLES CAHIER, Six Mille Proverbes, p. 230. (1836) A Spanish proverb. The French say "Tous sont sages quand ils se taisent."

Better to remain silent and be thought a fool than to speak out and remove all doubt.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN, Epigram. (c. 1862) As quoted in Golden Book, Nov., 1931.

<sup>3</sup> Knowest thou not that silence is eloquent of guilt? (οὐ κάτοισθ' ὁδοῦνεκα | ξυρηγοπεῖς σιγῶσα τῷ κατηγορῶ;) )

SOPHOCLES, Trachiniae, l. 813. (c. 409 B. C.)

<sup>4</sup> Put up or shut up. From metaphor we can safely conclude that it is not many generations old.

ARCHER TAYLOR, The Proverb, p. 11. (1931)

<sup>5</sup> Their silence is sufficient praise. (Tacent, satis laudant.)

TERENCE, Eunuchus, l. 476. (161 B. C.)

<sup>6</sup> It takes a man to make a room silent.

H. D. THOREAU, Journal, 9 Feb., 1839.

I have been breaking silence these twenty-three years, and have hardly made a rent in it. Silence has no end. Speech is but the beginning of it.

H. D. THOREAU, Winter, 9 Feb., 1841.

<sup>7</sup> Silence is golden.

WALTER WHITE, Eastern England from the Thames to the Humber, ii, 129. (1865)

"Silence is golden" is the motto here whilst the viands are being discussed.

GIBBS, A Cotswold Village. Ch. 4. (1878)

Silence is not always tact, and it is tact that is golden—not silence.

SAMUEL BUTLER, Note-Books. (a. 1902)

Silence is golden, but sometimes invisibility is goldier.

OGDEN NASH, I Never Even Suggested It. (1938)

<sup>8</sup> Is it a party in a parlour? . . . All silent and all damn'd!

WORDSWORTH, Peter Bell, l. 516, in the original edition of 1819, but omitted from later editions.

<sup>9</sup> He who says nothing is worth nothing. (Qui toz jorz se tait rien ne valt.)

UNKNOWN, Le Meunier, l. 302. (c. 1250) See MONTAIGLON, Recueil des Fabliaux. Vol. v, p. 92.

SILENCE THE BEST ORNAMENT FOR WOMAN, see WOMAN: HER TONGUE.

III—Silence: Comparisons

<sup>10</sup> As dumble as deth.

WILLIAM LANGLAND, Piers the Plowman. Text B, passus x, l. 136. (1377)

All the houses silent as Death.

UNKNOWN, Counterfeits. Act i, sc. 1. (1679)

There was silence deep as death.

CAMPBELL, The Battle of the Baltic. (1804)

<sup>11</sup> Ha! no more moving? Still as the grave.

SHAKESPEARE, Othello, v, 2, 93. (1605)

I will be silent as the grave.

HENRY BROOKE, The Marriage Contract. Act i, sc. 2. (1778)

- The house . . . became silent as the grave.
WALTER SCOTT, Journal, 1 July, 1829. STEVENSON, Ebb-Tide. Ch. 8. (1893) SHAW, Augustus Does His Bit. (1917)
- <sup>1</sup>
Be silent as a Politician.
For talking may beget Suspicion.
SWIFT, On Poetry, l. 123. (1733)
- <sup>2</sup>
I must be silent as a mouse.
Roxburghe Ballads (B.S.), iii, 377. (1670)
I'm mute as a mouse in a cheese.
COLLEY CIBBER, The Rival Fools. Act ii. (1709)

IV—Silence Gives Consent

- <sup>3</sup>
I kept silence because I approved the plan.
(εὖν δ' ἡσυχίαν . . . ἀλλὰ τὴν γνώμην ἐπαινῶν.)
ARISTIDES, when Cleocritus accused him of being opposed to a plan of Themistocles because he remained silent. (c. 480 B.C.) See PLUTARCH, Lives: Aristides. Ch. 8, sec. 6.
His silence answers yes. (φησὶν σιωπῶν.)
EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 1592. (c. 410 B.C.)
Silence implies acquiescence.
Babylonian Talmud: Baba Metsia, fo. 37b. (c. 450)
He who is silent is understood to consent. (Qui tacet, consentire videtur.)
POPE BONIFACE VIII, Book of Decretals. Bk. v, ch. 12, sec. 43. (c. 1300) His favorite maxim.
On manner of consent is, whanne a man is stille & tellith not.
WYCLIF, English Works, iii, 349. (c. 1380)
Lo eke an olde proverbe amonges many other: He that is stille semeth as he graunted.
THOMAS USK, The Testament of Love. (c. 1387) In SKEAT, Chaucer, vii, 36.
And for he nught ne seith, he his assent geveth therto.
THOMAS HOCCELEVE, De Regimine Principum, l. 3093. (1411)
This proverbe was seide full longe a-go. Who so holdeth hym still doth assent.
UNKNOWN, Parlonope of Blois, p. 467. (c. 1490)
They that are silent seeme to consent.
JOHN LYL, Euphues (Arber), p. 334. (1580)
Silence, madam, consents.
JOHN LYL, Endimion. Act v, sc. 3. (1591)
Assez consent qui ne dit mot. [He consents enough who doesn't say a word.] Many, who know not more Latine, can say, Qui tacet consentire videtur.
RANDLE COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Consentir. (1611) The French also say, "Qui ne dit mot, consent," the Italians, "Chi tace, acconsente."
Modest silence gives consent.
THOMAS RANDOLPH, Works, ii, 616. (1633)
She half consents who silently denies.
JOHN DRYDEN, tr., Helen to Paris. (1693)
Silence gives consent.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 299. (1721)
GOLDSMITH, The Good-Natured Man. Act iv. (1768) CLYDE FITCH, The Climbers. Act iv. (1901) etc., etc.
I shall take your silence for consent.
FIELDING, The Fathers. Act ii, sc. 2. (a. 1754)

- <sup>4</sup>
He that sayes nothing yields enough.
COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Octroyer. (1611)
He grants enough that says nothing.
JOHN WODROEPHE, The Spared Houres of a Souldier, p. 476. (1623)
- <sup>5</sup>
Your very silence is confession. (αὐτὸ δὲ τὸ σιγᾶν ὁμολογούντος ἐστὶ σου.)
EURIPIDES, Iphigeneia at Aulis, l. 1142. (c. 410 B.C.) The Italians say, "Qui tace, confessa" (He who is silent, confesses).
- <sup>6</sup>
Silence is the sister of complaisance.
SALOMON IBN GABRIOL, Mibhar ha-Peninim (Choice of Pearls). No. 252. (c. 1050) Ascher, tr. The maxim ought really to be reversed: "Complaisance is the sister of silence."
- <sup>7</sup>
No one speaking to the contrary. (Nemine contradicente.)
Encyclopedia of the Laws of England, ix, 59.
"Nem con."; "nem dis." Of these expressions, the former—an abbreviation of nemine contradicente—signifies the unanimous consent of the House of Commons to a vote or resolution; the latter, which is an abbreviation of nemine dissentiente, signifies a similar assent of the House of Lords. There are two similar legal maxims, "Longa patientia trahitur ad consensum" (Long sufferance is equal to consent), and "Volenti non fit iniuria" (Consent makes injury impossible).
- V—Silence and Speech
- <sup>8</sup>
Keeping silent when proper, and speaking what is fit. (σιγῶν θ' ὅπου δεῖ καὶ λέγων τὰ καλῖα.)
AESCHYLUS, Prometheus. Frag. 208, Nauck. (c. 475 B.C.) Repeated with slight variation by EURIPIDES, Iphigeneia, frag. 413.
Ther is a tyme of speakyng and a tyme of being stille.
WILLIAM CAXTON, tr., Charles the Grete, p. 56. (1485)
- <sup>9</sup>
It speech is worth one selah, silence is worth two.
Babylonian Talmud: Megillah, fo. 18a. (c. 450)
It a word be worth one shekel, silence is worth two.
JOHN RAY, Adagia Hebraica, p. 405. (1678)
A pennorth of silence is worth two of gab.
WENTWORTH, Pursuit of a Parcel, p. 33. (1942)
- <sup>10</sup>
One keepeth silence and is accounted wise, and another is despised for his much talking.
BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom (Ecclesiasticus), xx, 5. (c. 190 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.
- <sup>11</sup>
He speaks badly who doesn't know how to be silent. (Mal sa parler chi tacer non sa.)
CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 202. (1856) An Italian proverb.

1 Speech is of Time, Silence is of Eternity.

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1831)
Silence is deep as Eternity; Speech is shallow as Time.

CARLYLE, Essays: Life of Scott. (c. 1850)
Speech is great, but Silence is greater.

CARLYLE, Characteristics of Shakespeare.

2 Talking comes by nature, Silence by understanding.

A. B. CHEALES, Proverbial Folk-Lore, p. 86.
(1875) From the German, "Reden kommt von Natur, Schweigen vom Verstande."

3 Speak to the purpose or hold your peace.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 11. (1639)

Speak fitly, or be silent wisely.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 627. (1640)

4 There are some silent people who are more interesting than the best talkers.

DISRAELI, Endymion. Ch. 35. (1880)

5 Not able to speak, but unable to be silent. (οὐ λέγειν τὴν ἐπὶ δεινός, ἀλλὰ σιγᾶν ἀδύνατος.)

EPICHRMUS, Fragments. Frag. 272. (c. 550 B. C.)
Though he could not speak, he could not be silent.
(Qui cum loqui non posset, tacere non potuit.)

AULUS GELLIUS, Noctes Atticae. Bk. i, ch. 15, sec. 16. (c. A. D. 150) Paraphrasing Epicharmus. St. Jerome quotes this in slightly different form, "Cum loqui nesciant, tacere non possunt" (Though they do not know how to talk, they cannot be silent), and refers to it as "vetus proverbium," an old proverb.

6 Silence is sometimes better than speech, and speech sometimes than silence. (ἔστι δ' οὐ σιγῇ λόγου | κρείσσων γένου' ἄν, ἔστι δ' οὐ σιγῆς λόγος.)

EURIPIDES, Orestes, l. 638. (c. 410 B. C.)
There is wisdom in timely silence which is better than all speech. (σοφὸν γὰρ εὐκαιρὸς σιγῇ καὶ παντὸς λόγου κρείττον.)

PLUTARCH, Moralia: De Liberis Educandis. Ch. 14, sec. 10F. (c. A. D. 95) The Latin proverb is, "Prudentis est nonnunquam silere" (It is the part of a wise man sometimes to be silent). The French say, "We must have reasons for speech, but we need none for silence."

Thereupon it is saide, That to use silence in time and place, passeth all well speaking.

STEFANO GUAZZO, Civile Conversation. Bk. ii, p. 151. (1574) Pettie, tr.

7 Just as bad is too much silence as too much talk. (Tam malum est tacere multum quam malum est multum loqui.)

FLORUS, Epigrams. No. 8, l. 3. (c. A. D. 124)

Silence is Wisdom, when Speaking is Folly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4169. (1732)

8 As we must account for every idle word, so we must for every idle silence.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1738

Silence is not always a sign of Wisdom, but Babbling is ever a Folly.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1758

9 He that speaks sows, and he that holds his peace gathers.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 437.

(1640) From the Italian, "Chi parla, semina; chi tace, raccoglie."

10 It is better stille be

Than for to speken harm, pardee!

(Qu'adès vient il meauz qu'en se taise Que dire parole mauvaise.)

JEAN DE MEUNG, Roman de la Rose, l. 12185.

(c. 1270) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 7513. (c. 1365)

If he chide, kepe your byll vnder wyng muet.

Chatting to chiding is not woorth a chuet.

JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. ii, ch. 5. (1546)

11 Rare is their speech and great their passion for silence. (Rarus sermo illis, et magna libido tacendi.)

JUVENAL, Satires, ii, 14. (c. A. D. 120)

12 It is good to speak, but better to keep still.

(Il est bon de parler, et meilleur de se taire.)

LA FONTAINE, Fables. Bk. viii, fab. 10. (1678)

13 Those who know do not speak; those who speak do not know. (Chi 'ché pu yen, yen ché pu chi.)

LAO-TSZE, Tao-teh-king (The Way of Virtue)

Sec. 56. (c. 550 B. C.) Giles, tr.

Who knows most, speaks least. (Chi più sa, meno parla.)

TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 189. (1666)

The French say, "Qui plus sait, plus se tait,"

The Spaniards, "Quien mas sabe, mas calla."

14 If speech is silvern, then silence is golden.

Midrash: Leviticus Rabbah, 16. (c. 600) A variation of the form given under Babylonian Talmud, ante.

As the Swiss Inscription says: Sprechen ist silbern, Schweigen ist golden (Speech is silvern, Silence is golden).

CARLYLE, Sartor Resartus. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1831)

Another German form is, "Reden ist Silber und Schweigen ist Gold."

Speech is silver; silence is golden.

J. R. LOWELL, Biglow Papers: Introduction (1848) In frequent use.

15 Silence is a very small virtue, but to speak what should not be uttered is a heinous crime. (Exigua est virtus praestare silentia rebus; at contra gravis est culpa tacenda loqui.)

OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. ii, l. 603. (c. 1 B. C.)

16 Silence is more profitable than abundance of speech.

PTAH-HOTEP, Instruction. No. 24. (c. 3550 B. C.)

It is safer to keep silence than to speak. (ἀσφαλέστερον γὰρ τοῦ λέγειν τὸ σιγᾶν.)

EPICETUS [?], Encheiridion. Frag. 29. Loeb.

(c. A. D. 100)

To be silent never did harm; it is speech that is harmful. (Nulli tacuisse nocet, nocet esse locutum.)

CATO (?) Disticha. Bk. i, No. 12. (c. 175 B. C.) Speech may occasion regret, but silence will avoid it.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninin (Choice of Pearls). No. 337. (c. 1050)

Silence is Wisdom, when Speaking is Folly.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4169. (1732)

Calvin Coolidge is credited with another variation, "I notice 't what I don't say don't hurt me."

<sup>1</sup> Those who do not know how to speak are equally ignorant when to be silent. (Tacere nescit idem, qui nescit loqui.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. (c. 43 B. C.)

He who knows when to speak will also know when to be silent.

SALOMON IBN GABIROL, Mibhar ha-Peninin (Choice of Pearls). No. 359. (c. 1050)

Not to know and yet to speak is imprudent; to know and not to speak is unfaithful.

DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 281. (1872)

<sup>2</sup> I have often repented of speaking, but never of keeping silent. (λαλήσας μὲν πολλάκις μετενόησε σιωπήσας δ' οὐδέποτε.)

SIMONIDES, Apothegm. (c. 650 B. C.) As quoted by PLUTARCH, Moralia: On Garrulity. Sec. 515A. Also quoted in Sec. 10F and 125D. VALERIUS MAXIMUS, Annals, bk. vii, ch. 2, sec. 7, attributes the saying to Xenocrates (c. 550 B. C.), and gives it in Latin. "Dixisse me aliquando poenituit, tacuisse nunquam."

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae, No. 692, gives the proverb in slightly different form, "Saepius locutum, nunquam me tacuisse poenitet."

More have repented speech than silence.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 684. (1640)

One seldom repents of speaking little, very often of speaking too much: a much used and hackneyed maxim, which everybody knows and nobody practices. (L'on se repent rarement de parler peu; très souvent, de trop parler: maxime usée et triviale, que tout le monde sait, et que tout le monde ne pratique pas.)

LA BRUYÈRE, Les Caractères: De l'Homme. (1688)

We often repent of what we have said, but never, never, of that which we have not.

JEFFERSON, Writings, xiv, 117. (c. 1800)

Seldom need any man repent for not having said more than he did.

RICHARD D. BLACKMORE, The Maid of Sker. Ch. 34. (1872)

<sup>3</sup> The world would be happier if men had the same capacity to be silent that they have to speak.

SPINOZA, Ethica. Sec. 2. (1677)

<sup>4</sup> Speech is fractional, silence is integral.

H. D. THORAU, Autumn, 16 Dec., 1840.

<sup>5</sup> He speaks best that hath the skill when for to hold his peace.

THOMAS VAUX, Content. (c. 1550)

<sup>6</sup> We must distinguish between speaking to deceive and being silent to be impenetrable. (Il faut distinguer entre parler pour tromper et se taire pour être impénétrable.)

VOLTAIRE, Essai sur les Mœurs. Sec. 163. (1756)

SILK

<sup>7</sup> We are all Adam's Children; but Silk makes the Difference.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 5425. (1732)

In silk and scarlet walks many a harlot.

W. C. HAZLITT, English Proverbs, p. 234. (1869)

<sup>8</sup> Silks and satins put out the fire in the chimney.

GEORGE HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum, No. 911. (1640) In the 2nd edition, Herbert added, "Silk doth quench the fire in the kitchen." From the German, "Sammt und Seide löschen das Feuer in der Küche aus."

Silks and satins put out the kitchen fire.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1746. In 1757, Franklin elaborated this to, "Scarlet, Silk and Velvet have put out the Kitchen Fire," and in 1758 to "Silks and satins, scarlet and velvets put out the kitchen fire"

'Broidery and bullion buttons make bare pouches.

SIR WALTER SCOTT, The Fortunes of Nigel. Ch. 14. (1822)

Velvet and silk are a fine recipe for putting out the fire in the kitchen.

CHARLES CAHIER, Quelques Six Mille Proverbes, p. 291. (1856) Citing a Flemish proverb

<sup>9</sup> I trust [they] will find their levees crowded with silk stocking gentry.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, Writings, xiii, 163. (1812)

You may be called a drunken dog by some of the clean shirt and silk stocking gentry.

DAVID CROCKETT, Exploits and Adventures in Texas, p. 58. (1836)

Silk stockings were formerly regarded as extravagant and reprehensible; . . . hence, the silk-stocking gentry or element, the luxurious or wealthy class.

Century Dictionary, p. 5630/1. (1891)

[He] was elected by the silk stockings on the one hand and the shorthairs on the other.

W. T. STEAD, If Christ Came to Chicago, p. 36. (1894)

<sup>10</sup> The fairest silke is soonest soyled.

JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 39. (1579)

The purest lawne is apt for euery staine.

JOHN BODENHAM, ed., Belvedere, p. 44. (1600)

The fairest silke will soonest be soiled.

THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 63. (1633)

The fairest silk is soonest stained.

JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 83. (1639)

RAY, p. 88; FULLER, No. 4516.

SILVER

- <sup>1</sup> Whyte siluer, drawes a blacke lyne.
GOSSON, Schoole of Abuse, p. 23. (1579)
Silver although it be white, yet it draweth black lines.
FRANCIS MERES, Palladis Tamia, fo. 151. (1598)
White silver draws black lines.
JOHN CLARKE, Paroemiologia, p. 170. (1639)
RAY, English Proverbs, p. 142. (1670)
- <sup>2</sup> He that has not silver in his purse, should have silk on his tongue.
JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 143. (1721)
He that has no Silver in his Purse, should have Silver on his Tongue.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 2149. (1732)
See also under MONEY.
- <sup>3</sup> Although yron the more it is vsed the brighter it is, yet siluer with much wearing doth wast to nothing.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues (Arber), p. 46. (1579)
- <sup>4</sup> Silver hath a sweet sound.
SHAKESPEARE, Romeo and Juliet, iv, 5, 134. (1595)
Silver will haue a siluer sound.
THOMAS DRAXE, Bibliotheca, p. 241. (1616)
- <sup>5</sup> We schollers fish for a liuing . . . without a silver hooke.
UNKNOWN, The Returne from Parnassus. Pt. ii, ii, v, 764. (1602)
To fish for honour with a siluer hooke.
NICHOLAS BRETON, Honour Valour, viii. (1605)
Those that with silver weapons fight are sure to overcome.
COTGRAVE, Dictionary: Combattre. (1611)
A silver Key can open an iron Lock.
THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 400. (1732)
They may be bribed, as we proved . . . when our cavalcade passed the barriers with a silver key.
SIR GEORGE W. LE FEVRE, The Life of a Traveling Physician, ii, i, 13. (1843)
BRIDGE OF SILVER, see under ENEMY.
SICK OF THE SILVER DROPSY, see under BRIBERY.

SIMPLICITY

- <sup>6</sup> The seal of truth is simplicity. (Das Siegel der Wahrheit ist Einfachkeit.)
HERMAN BOERHAAVE, Aphorismi. (1709)
The essence of all good strategy is simplicity.
ERIC AMBLER, Journey into Fear, p. 170. (1940)
- <sup>7</sup> Hail! divine lady Simplicity, beloved by good men. (χαίρει θεὰ δέσποιν', ἀνδρῶν ἀγαθῶν ἀγάπημα | Εὐρελή.)
CRATES, Hymn to Simplicity. (c. 325 B.C.) See Greek Anthology, x, 104.
O holy simplicity! (O sancta simplicitas!)
JOHN HUSS, Last Words, at the stake. (1415)
Blessed simplicity. (Beata simplicitas.)
THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. iv, ch. 18 (c. 1420)

- That excellent country Lady, Innocent Simplicity.
THOMAS DEKKER, The Guls Horne-Booke. (1609) Works (Grosart), ii, 204.
Hail, artless Simplicity, beautiful maid.
HANNAH MORE, A Search After Happiness, ii, 144. (1773)
Oh! what a power has white simplicity!
JOHN KEATS, Written at the End of Chaucer's "Flower and Leaf."
- <sup>8</sup> The artful are loquacious, the simple are silent; the artful are miserable, the simple are happy.
DOOLITTLE, Chinese Vocabulary, ii, 277. (1872)
- <sup>9</sup> Generally Nature hangs out a signe of simplicity in the face of a Fool.
THOMAS FULLER, The Holy State: Of Naturall Fools. Maxim 1. (1642)
Simple Simon met a pieman Going to the fair.
J. O. HALLIWELL, Nursery Rhymes. Rhymed version of story from 18th century chapbook.
- <sup>10</sup> She was simple as dowve on tree.
GUILLAUME DE LORRIS, Roman de la Rose, (c. 1240) Chaucer (?), tr., l. 1219. (c. 1365)
About as complex as an apple dumpling.
IRINA KARLOVA, Dreadful Hollow, p. 35. (1942)
- <sup>11</sup> The simple man is the beggar's brother.
HENDERSON, Scottish Proverbs, p. 90. (1832)
- <sup>12</sup> Affected simplicity is a subtle form of imposture. (La simplicité affectée est une imposture délicate.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 289. (1665)
There are simple people who know their limitations and make a skilful use of their simplicity. (Il y a des gens niais qui se connaissent et qui emploient habilement leur niaiserie.)
LA ROCHEFOUCAULD, Maximes. No. 208.
- <sup>13</sup> Simplicity, most rare in our age. (Aevo rarissima nostro, Simplicitas.)
OVID, Artis Amatoriae. Bk. i, l. 241. (c. 1 B.C.)
Simplicity alone is rare.
SWIFT, An Apology, l. 106. (1725)
- <sup>14</sup> There is a certain majesty in simplicity which is far above all the quaintness of wit.
POPE, Letter to George Walsh. (1706)
Simplicity of character is the natural result of profound thought.
HAZLITT, Characteristics. No. 125. (1823)
Nothing is more simple than greatness; indeed, to be simple is to be great.
EMERSON, Essays: Literary Ethics. (1840)
- <sup>15</sup> Blessed are the simple, for they shall have much peace. (Beati simplices: quoniam multam pacem habebunt.)
THOMAS À KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 11. (c. 1420)
Simplicity is a state of mind.
CHARLES WAGNER, The Simple Life. Ch.2 (1902)
See also LIFE: THE SIMPLE LIFE.

SIN

See also Evil, Vice, Wickedness

- 1 Say not, "I have no sin."
AMEN-EM-APT, Teaching How to Live. Col. xix, l. 18. (c. 700 B.C.) Oesterley, tr.
Who can say, I am pure from my sin? (Quis potest dicere . . . purus sum a peccato?)
Old Testament: Proverbs, xx, 9. (c. 350 B.C.)
- 2 We're not one bit more sinned against than sinning. (οὐδὲν παθεῖναι μείζον ἢ δεδράκαμεν.)
ARISTOPHANES, The Thesmophoriazusae, l. 519. (410 B.C.) Rogers, tr.
I am a man More sinn'd against than sinning
SHAKESPEARE, King Lear, iii, 2, 59. (1605)
More sinned against than sinning.
SHAW, Captain Brassbound's Conversion. Act i. (1899) Fanny's First Play. Act i. (1911)
ADDIS, Night Over the Wood, p. 201. (1943) etc., etc.
- 3 To abstain from sin when a man cannot sin is to be forsaken by sin, not to forsake it.
ST. AUGUSTINE, Sermons: De Poenitentibus. (c. 395) JEREMY TAYLOR, tr., Works, vii, 206.
Therefore I rede yow this conseil take,
Forsaketh sinne, er sinne yow forsake.
CHAUCER, Phisiciens Tale, l. 285. (c. 1387)
To reproue sinne is the signe of true honour, to renounce it the part of honesty.
JOHN LYLY, Euphues to Linia (Arber), p. 195. (1579)
- 4 The sins of him who has turned from sin to righteousness will be accounted as righteous deeds.
Babylonian Talmud: Joma, fo. 26. (c. 450)
There is no suffering save through sin.
Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 55
- 5 A sin that's hidden is half forgiven. (Peccato celato, mezzo perdonato.)
BOCCACCIO, Decamerone. Day i, tale 4. (c. 1350) The Italians also say, "È mala cosa esser cattivo, ma è peggiore esser conosciuto" (It is bad to be a villain, but it is worse to be found out).
He thinkes a falte don in secrett is halfe pardoned.
GEOFFREY FENTON, Bandello, ii, 149. (1567)
Their best conscience
Is not to leave 't undone, but keep 't unknown.
SHAKESPEARE, Othello, iii, 3, 203. (1605)
The sin is in itself excusable; to be taken
Is a crime.
FLETCHER AND MASSINGER, The Lover's Progress. Act iv, sc. 1. (1623)
The sin is merely in the noise that one makes; It's only the scandal which makes the offence. (Le mal n'est jamais que dans l'éclat qu'on fait; Le scandale du monde est ce qui fait l'offense.)
MOLIÈRE, Le Tartuffe. Act iv, sc. 5, l. 118. (1664)
Sin conceal'd, half pardoned.
TORRIANO, Piazza Universale, p. 197. (1666)
Scandal is the greatest part of the offence.
DRYDEN, The Kind Keeper. Act i, sc. 1. (1678)

Verily the sin lieth in the scandal.

- APHRA BEHN, Roundheads. Act iii, sc. 2. (1681)
'Tis the talk and not the intrigue that's the crime.
GRANVILLE, She-Gallants. Act iii, sc. 1. (1695)
Over here the hidden sin is absolutely forgiven. (Ici péché caché est tout-à-fait pardonné.)
MAX O'RELL, John Bull et Son Île, p. 33. (1890)
It is not the offence, but the being found out that matters.
F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 128. (1902)
THOU SHALT NOT BE FOUND OUT, see COMMANDMENT: ELEVENTH.
- 6 To act as other mortals do is no sin. (E come gli altri far non è peccato.)
BOCCACCIO, Il Filostrato. Canto ii, st. 70. (c. 1350)
- 7 They drew near to a very miry Slough, that was in the midst of the plain . . . it is the descent whither the scum and filth that attends conviction for sin doth continually run, and therefore it is called the Slough of Despond.
JOHN BUNYAN, The Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. i, p. 8. (1676)
He that lies in sin and looks for happiness hereafter, is like him that soweth cockle, and thinks to fill his barn with wheat or barley.
BUNYAN, Pilgrim's Progress. Pt. ii. (1684)
- 8 Sin not in the hour when you may safely sin. (Non pecces tunc cum peccare impune licebit.)
CATO (?), Dicta Catonis. (c. 175 B.C.) See Minor Latin Poets, Loeb, p. 628.
- 9 Sin is a coward.
CHAPMAN, Bussy d'Amboise. Act iii. (1604)
- 10 Sinnes been the weyes that leden folk to helle.
CHAUCER, Persones Tale. Sec. 8. (c. 1389)
Sin pulls angels out of Heaven, pulls men down to Hell.
JOHN BUNYAN, Mr Badman (1680)
- 11 There is no man which sinneth not. (Neque enim est homo, qui non peccet.)
Old Testament: II Chronicles, vi, 36. (c. 300 B.C.)
There is not a just man upon earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not. (Non est enim homo iustus in terra, qui faciat bonum, et non peccet.)
Old Testament: Ecclesiastes, vii, 20. (c. 250 B.C.)
None of us is without sin. (Neminem nostrum esse sine culpa.)
SENECA, De Ira. Bk. ii, ch. 28. (c. A.D. 55)
- 12 Sins that are easiest to amend bring the greatest punishment.
ST. CHRYSOSTOM, Homilies, x. (c. 388)
The cheapest sinnes most dearly punisht are.
HERBERT, The Church Porch. St. 12. (1633)
- 13 To sin is human, but to persevere in sin is devilish. (Humanum enim est peccare, diabolicum uero perseverare.)
ST. CHRYSOSTOM, Adhortatio ad Theodorum Lapsum, i, 14. (c. 397)

The proverbe seith: that "for to do sinne is man-nish, but certes for to persevere longe in sinne is werk of the devel."

CHAUCER, Tale of Melibeus. Sec. 29. (c. 1387)
He that falls into the dirt, the longer he stays there the fouler he is.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 411. (1640)
He that falls into sin is a man; that grieves at it, is a saint; that boasteth of it, is a devil.

FULLER, Holy State. Bk. iii, ch. 3. (1642)
God pardons those, who do through frailty sin;
But never those that persevere therein.

ROBERT HERRICK, Pardon. (1647)
It is bad enough to fall into error, but worse to persist. The first shows thee a weak man, . . . but the other makes thee too like the devil, who is to this day of the same mind he was at his first fall.

WILLIAM GURNALL, The Christian in Compleat Armour, i, 298. (1655)

Man-like is it to fall into sin,
Fiend-like is it to dwell therein.

FRIEDRICH VON LOGAU, Sinngedichte: Sin. (a. 1655) Longfellow, tr.

1
It is lawful for no one to sin. (Peccare nemini licet.)

CICERO, Tusculanarum Disputationum Bk. v, ch. 19, sec. 55. (45 B. C.)

He said he was against it.
CALVIN COOLIDGE, when his wife asked him what had been said by the clergyman who preached against sin. (c. 1924)

2
The deeper the sin the sweeter.

CONGREVE, Old Batchelour. Act i, sc. 1. (1693)

3
That which we call sin in others is experiment for us.

EMERSON, Essays: Experience. (1844)
We claim a certain indulgence for that apparent necessity of nature which we call our besetting sin.

HENRY DRUMMOND, Natural Law in the Spiritual World, p. 185. (1883)

4
The knowledge of sin is the beginning of salvation. (Initium est salutis notitia peccati.)

EPICURUS, Fragments. Frag. 522. (c. 290 B. C.)
As quoted by SENECA, Ad Lucilium. Epis. xxviii, sec. 9.

5
I the Lord thy God am a jealous God, visiting the iniquity of the fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generation of them that hate me. (Visitans iniquitatem patrum in filios, in tertiam et quartam generationem eorum qui oderunt me.)

Old Testament: Exodus, xx, 5. (c. 550 B. C.)
Thy sins are visited in this poor child.

SHAKESPEARE, King John, ii, 1, 179. (1596)
They enslave their children's children who make compromise with sin.

LOWELL, The Present Crisis. St. 9. (1844)
Bad descendants involve ancestors in disgrace. ('Hou jên pu 'hao lien lei shang jên.)

SCARBOROUGH, Chinese Proverbs. No. 2128.

(1875) If a man sins it is because his ancestors have sinned. Another Chinese proverb says, "Fu 'chien chai tzü 'huan 'chien" (The son pays his father's debts).

6
Every man carries the bundle of his sins
Upon his own back.

JOHN FLETCHER, Rule a Wife and Have a Wife. Act iv. (1624)

Each man shall bear his own sin without doubt.
WILLIAM MORRIS, The Life and Death of Jason. Bk. xvii, l. 122. (1867)

7
Sin is not hurtful because it is forbidden, but it is forbidden because it is hurtful.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1739

E'er you remark another's sin,
Bid your own conscience look within.

FRANKLIN, Poor Richard's Almanack, 1741. See also under FAULT: FAULTS OF OTHERS.

8
Dissembled Sin is double Wickedness.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 1299. (1732)
It is Sin not to be angry with Sin.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 3015.
Sin is Sin, whether it be seen or no.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4178.

9
Young Timothy Learnt sin to fly.

BENJAMIN HARRIS (?), The New England Primer. (c. 1687)

10
Fear nothing but sin.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 301. (1640)
Sins are not known till they be acted.

HERBERT, Jacula Prudentum. No. 941.
When once the sin has fully acted been,

Then is the horror of the trespasser seen.

ROBERT HERRICK, Sin Seen. (1647)

Three fatall Sisters wait upon each sin;
First, Fear and Shame without, then Guilt within.

HERRICK, Three Fatall Sisters. (1647)

11
Thou shalte sure sinke in thine own syn for vs.
JOHN HEYWOOD, Proverbs. Pt. i, ch. 10. (1546)
Amyd the Seas of syn,

The place wher late he swetty swam, now lyes he drowned in.

BARNABY GOOGE, Eglogs, viii, 67. (1563)

He shall sink in his own sin.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 15. (1659)

He that swims in sin will sink in sorrow.

Goody Two-Shoes: A Moral Lesson. (1766)

Sin and sorrow cannot long be separated.

F. E. HULME, Proverb Lore, p. 137. (1902)
Similarly, "He that sins against his conscience sins with a witness," and "Trifling with sin is no trifling sin."

Sin is the root of sorrow.

HART, 700 Chinese Proverbs. No. 300. (1937)

12
Sin is strong and fleet of foot, outrunning everything. ("Ατὴ σθεναρὰ τε καὶ ἀπρίως. οὐνεκα πάσας | πολλὸν ὑπεκρυσθεῖ.)

HOMER, Iliad. Bk. ix, l. 505. (c. 850 B. C.)

1 Shunning a sin may draw us farther in. (In vitium ducit culpae fuga.)

HORACE, De Arte Poetica, l. 31. (c. B. C. 20)
Quoted by MONTAIGNE, ii, 6, and translated by Boileau, "Souvent le peur d'un mal nous conduit dans un pire."

Shroud my sins in night, my lies in clouds. (Noc-tem peccatis et fraudibus obice nubem.)

HORACE, Epistles. Bk. i, epis. xvi, l. 62. (c. B. C. 20) Quoted by MONTAIGNE, i, 56.

2 Our sinnes and our debts are alwayes more than we take them to be.

JAMES HOWELL, Proverbs, p. 1. (1659)

Our sins and our debts are often more than we think.

JAMES KELLY, Scottish Proverbs, p. 273. (1721)
Sins and Debts are always more than we think them to be.

THOMAS FULLER, Gnomologia. No. 4179. (1732)
Of four things every man has more than he knows: sins, debts, years, and foes.

TRENCH, Lessons in Proverbs, p. 70. (1853)

3 Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool. (Si fuerint peccata vestra ut coccinum, quasi nix dealbabuntur: et si fuerint rubra quasi vermiculus, velut lana alba erunt.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, i, 18. (c. 725 B. C.)

Woe unto them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin as it were with a cart rope. (Vae qui trahitis iniquitatem in funiculis vanitatis, et quasi vinculum plaustrum peccatum.)

Old Testament: Isaiah, v, 18.

4 He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone. (Qui sine peccato est vestrum, primus in illam lapidem mittat.)

New Testament: John, viii, 7. (c. A. D. 110)

I just didn't feel that I should be the one to throw the first stone.

ERLE STANLEY GARDNER, The Case of the Turning Tide, p. 220. (1941)

Let him—or her—who was without sin, come and chuck a brick through Madame's salon window.

P. C. WREN, Uniform of Glory, p. 171. (1940)

I am not the first to cast a stone.

W. T. BALLARD, Say Yes to Murder, p. 73. (1942)

5 Naught that delights is sin.

BEN JONSON, Explorata. (1636)

Through sin do men reach the light.

ELBERT HUBBARD, Epigrams. (1911)

6 The very inclination to sin entails penalties. (Patitur poenas peccandi sola voluntas.)

JUVENAL, Satires. Sat. xiii, l. 208. (c. A. D. 120)

See also under ADULTERY.

Sin is not in the act, but in the choice.

RUSKIN, The Stones of Venice. Ch. 2. (1853)

7 The sins committed by many pass unpunished. (Quidquid multis peccatur inultum est.)

LUCAN, De Bello Civili, v, 260. (c. A. D. 60)

8 Original sin, after regeneration, is like a wound that begins to heal. (Peccatum originale.)

MARTIN LUTHER, Table-Talk, cclvi. (1569)

The World was early bad, and the first sin the most deplorable of any.

SIR THOMAS BROWNE, Christian Morals. Pt. iii, sec. 1. (1682)

In Adam's Fall | We sinned all.

BENJAMIN HARRIS (?), New England Primer. (c. 1687)

I fear I have nothing original in me—
Excepting Original Sin.

THOMAS CAMPBELL, To a Young Lady. (a. 1844)

9 There is often a sin of omission as well as of commission. (ἀδίκηι πολλάκις ὁ μὴ ποιῶν τι, οὐ μόνον ὁ ποιῶν τι.)

MARCUS AURELIUS, Meditations. Bk. ix, sec. 5. (c. A. D. 174)

It is the sin of omission, the second kind of sin, That lays eggs under your skin.

OGDEN NASH, Portrait of the Artist. (1935)

10 All that defiles comes from within. (πάν τὸ λυμαινόμενον ἐστὶν ἐνδοθεν.)

MENANDER, Fragments. Frag. 540 K. (c. 300 B. C.)

Say not, "From God is my transgression."

BEN SIRA, Book of Wisdom, xv, 11. (c. 190 B. C.)

Our outward act is prompted from within,
And from the sinner's mind proceeds the sin.

PRIOR, Henry and Emma, l. 481. (a. 1721)

Sin is a state of mind, not an outward act.

WILLIAM SEWELL, Wilful Sin. (c. 1850)

11 Lecherie . . . is on of the zeuen dyadliches zennes.

DAN MICHEL, Ayenbite of Inwyt, p. 9. (1340)

Now is it behoveyly thing to telle whiche been the deedly sinnes, this is to seyn, chieftaines of sinnes. . . . Of the roote of thise seveñ sinnes thanne is Pryde, the general rote of alle harmes; for of this rote springen . . . Ire, Envy, Accidie or Slewthe Avarice or Coveitise, Glotony and Lecherie.

CHAUCER, The Persones Tale. Sec. 23. (c. 1386)

Of the deadly seven it is the least.

SHAKESPEARE, Measure for Measure, iii, 1, 109. (1604) Referring to lechery.

The Seven curs'd deadly Sins. . . . Pride, Envy, Sloth, Intemperance, Avarice, Ire, and Lust.

BISHOP THOMAS KEN, Hymnotheo. (a. 1700)
Works (1721), iii, 269.

Pride, covetousness, lust, anger, gluttony, envy and sloth, are the seven capital sins.

JOHN MCCAFFREY, A Catechism of Christian Doctrine for General Use. (1866)

The seven deadly sins . . . Food, clothing, firing, rent, taxes, respectability and children.

SHAW, Major Barbara. Act iii. (1905)

I feel like the seven deadlies.

PHILIP BARRY, You and I. Act i. (1923)

12 One sin draws another in its train.

Mishnah: Pirké Aboth, iv, 2. (c. 200)

Little sins make room for great.

THOMAS EDWARDS, Gangraena. (1646)

'Twas but one little drop of sin
We saw this morning enter in,
And lo! at eventide the world is drown'd.

KEBLE, Christian Year: Sexagesima. (1827)

<sup>1</sup> Be sure your sin will find you out. (Scitote quoniam peccatum vestrum apprehendet vos.)

Old Testament: Numbers, xxxii, 23. (c. 550 B. C.)
There is no darkness, nor shadow of death, where the workers of iniquity may hide themselves. (Non sunt tenebrae, et non est umbra mortis, ut abscondantur ibi qui operantur iniquitatem.)

Old Testament: Job, xxiv, 22. (c. 350 B. C.)
God always finds the sinner. (εὖρε θεὸς τὸν ἀλιτρώ.)

THEOCRITUS, Idyls. No. x, l. 17. (c. 270 B. C.) A similar proverb is, ὁ Ζεὺς κατεῖδε χρόνιος εἰς τὰς διφθέρας. (Zeus in the end consults his records).

For a time sins lie hidden, but in time they appear. (Temporibus peccata latent, et tempore parent.)

CATO (?), Disticha. Bk. ii, No. 8. (c. 175 B. C.)
Sin never prospers in the long run; it is ever scheming to remain hid but is detected in the end. (ἀλλ' οὐκ εἰς ἄπαν εὐδοεῖ κακία, λανθάνειν δ' αἰετὲς τεχνάζουσα καταφωρᾶται.)

PHILO, De Iosepho. Sec. 213. (c. A. D. 40).
Her sin has been found out. (Deprensa culpa est.)

SENECA, Hippolytus, l. 719. (c. A. D. 60)
Sooner or later a man's sins will catch up with him.

EDITH HOWIE, Murder for Christmas, p. 47. (1941)

They were too cunning. Now their sin has found them out.

H. C. BAILEY, Nobody's Vineyard, p. 295. (1942)
It looked as if our sins would find us out.

PHILIP WYLIE, Corpses at Indian Stones, p. 147. (1943)

<sup>2</sup> One who is free to sin, sins less. (Cui peccare licet, peccat minus.)

OVID, Amores. Bk. iii, eleg. 4, l. 9. (c. 13 B. C.)

<sup>3</sup> Sinnes oft assailed, are thought to be no sinne: So sinne doth soyle the Soul it sinketh in.

GEORGE PETTIE, Petite Pallace, p. 124. (1576)
Custom in sin gives sin a lovely dye;
Blackness in Moors is no deformity.

THOMAS DEKKER, The Honest Whore. Pt. ii, act ii, sc. 1. (1604)

<sup>4</sup> Sin maketh nations miserable. (Miseros autem facit populos peccatum.)

Old Testament: Proverbs, xiv, 34. (c. 350 B. C.)

<sup>5</sup> You sin doubly when you indulge a sinner. (Bis peccas cum peccanti obsequium commodas.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 65. (c. 43 B. C.)
He doubles his sin who is not ashamed of it. (Geminat peccatum quem delicti non pudet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 239.
He sins imprudently who regrets his sin. (Imprudens peccat quem peccati paenitet.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 309.

All who sin secretly sin more quickly. (Omnes cum occulte peccant, peccant ocius.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 495.

Few are unwilling to sin, none but know the way. (Peccare pauci nolunt, nulli nesciunt.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 532.

He reduces sin who corrects it quickly. (Peccatum extenuat qui celeriter corrigit.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 537.

The later the sin in coming, the more disgraceful its start. (Quanto serius peccatur tanto incipitur turpius.)

PUBLILIUS SYRUS, Sententiae. No. 613. (c. 43 B. C.) Another Latin proverb says, "Quae peccamus iuvenes ea luimus senes" (The sins we commit as young men we pay the penalty for as old men).

<sup>6</sup> The wages of sin is death. (τὰ γὰρ ὀφώνια τῆς ἁμαρτίας θάνατος.)

New Testament: Romans, vi, 23. (c. A. D. 57)

The Vulgate is, "Stipendia enim peccati, mors."

There is no death without sin.

Babylonian Talmud: Shabbath, fo. 55a. (c. A. D. 350)

Better to eschew sin than to flee from death. (Melius esset peccata cavere quam mortem fugere.)

THOMAS A KEMPIS, De Imitatione Christi. Bk. i, ch. 23. (c. 1420)

